EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

The purpose of this Bill is to revise, modernise and strengthen the law on Town Planning.

Parts II and III largely re-enact the provisions of the Town Planning Act 1999 with some minor amendments.

Most of the changes are contained in Part IV which modifies and strengthens the controls over development. Under this Part, planning permission is divided into two types of permission:

- outline planning permission which is defined as an in-principle decision to grant permission; and
- full planning permission which gives permission to develop the land in accordance with the terms of the permission and the provisions in the Bill.

Publicity of applications has also been amended to provide a clear step by step procedure to applicants intending to apply for planning permission. This was absent in the present Town Planning Act 1999.

Part V deals with enforcement and creates the offences of carrying out development without full planning permission, failing to comply with any condition subject to which planning permission has been granted and carrying out development in contravention of any regulations made under the Bill.

Enforcement provisions are contained in clauses 43 and 47 whereby the Commission may issue an Enforcement Notice or a Stoppage Order. Failure to comply with an Enforcement Notice or a Stoppage Order may result in the Commission taking steps required by the notice or order and any costs incurred shall be recovered from the person on whom the notice or order was served.

Part VI deals with Government Projects which are subject to planning process under the provisions laid out therein.

Part VII pertains to Special Controls and deals with the preservation of amenities, control of painting of buildings and advertisements, and notification of dangerous substances.

Part VIII deals with miscellaneous provisions.
