Order of the Day

Clerk: Meeting of Parliament, Thursday, 19th January 2012:

Item 1: Oath of Allegiance

Item 2: Confirmation of minutes: the minutes of the last meeting of Parliament, which commenced on 23rd June 2011.

Mr Speaker: May I sign the minutes as correct? (It was agreed.)

Clerk: Item 3: Communications from the Chair

Item 4: Petitions

Item 5: Announcements.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Announcements

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is my pleasure to inform the House that there is now a wifi service available for Members. They will be receiving the name of the network and the password so that they may have access to this network in a few moments. This network will also be available to journalists who might want to have access to information whilst they are here reporting the proceedings of the House, and that will be circulated to Members and to the press in a few moments.

It is also my pleasure, Mr Speaker, to inform the House that they will have seen that there is now an attempt to have a parliamentary timetable which sets out when we expect that certain questions will be... or certain Ministers will be answering questions, and I hope will be able to assist all those who have business in this House – the Ministers, the officials and Members opposite – to know when it is that it is expected that the House will adjourn to. That will, I hope, facilitate people being able to plan their lives around the monthly sittings of this Parliament.

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, Government has this week announced the introduction of a new procedure for publishing Bills in draft in the form of Command Papers. This is in keeping with the Government's manifesto commitment.

All Command Papers will be presented to Parliament and will be laid on the table by the relevant Minister at the next meeting following publication. Draft Bills will be published on the Government's Gibraltar laws website via a link on the home page entitled 'Command Papers'. Comments on the draft Bill can be made also via a link on the website to command.papers@gibraltar.gov.gi. The public will be able to comment on the draft Bills over a period of two weeks. Those comments will be passed on to the relevant Minister and will be considered by the Government before the Bill itself is published. This gives the public the ability to participate at an early stage in the Government's legislative programme by being able to provide comments, which will be taken into account.

Two Command Papers have already been published. These will be laid on the table during the course of today's meeting.

Clerk: Item 6: Papers to be laid.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Papers laid

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table:

The Consolidated Fund (Pay Settlements) Statement (No 1) 2010-11;

The Consolidated Fund (Supplementary Funding) Statement (No 2) 2010-11;

The Consolidated Fund (Reallocations) Statement (No 3) 2010-11; and

The Improvement and Development Fund (Reallocations) Statement (No 1) 2010-11.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

The Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table a Command Paper on a law to amend the Civil Aviation Act 2009 and the Aviation Security (EU Common Rules) Act 2011 and related secondary legislation.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Development. I beg your pardon – and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Development as well, if you want me to!

I have the honour to lay on the table a Command Paper on the law to provide a right to dignity at work for employees.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Clerk: Item 7: Reports of Committees.

Item 8: Answers to Oral questions.

Televising Parliament

Leader of the Opposition (Hon. P R Caruana): Mr Speaker, on a point of order, has the television of Parliament now begun?

Mr Speaker: No, it has not begun. As has often happened in the past, the GBC asked for permission to film a certain amount of library footage and that is all they are doing right now. They will be leaving in the next five minutes or so. The television has not begun.

Hon. P R Caruana: The Opposition is greatly in favour of the television of Parliament, but I think that the way to introduce it – not that this counts as television of the Parliament in a proper fashion – is through a decision of this House, which is, I am sure, what the hon. Member intends to do in due course.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in answer to the hon. Gentleman's point of order, that is absolutely right. I do not think that we are going to allow the cameras in by stealth. We are going to allow the cameras in by agreement, when we are satisfied, across the floor of the House, that we have the necessary infrastructure to do so in a way that will ensure that those watching will see more than just the tops of our heads.

Mr Speaker: At least one cameraman has been shooed away!

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Gibraltar Port Authority
Entry procedures into the North Mole for Anglers

Clerk: Answers to Oral Questions.
Question 1 of 2012, Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the entry procedures into North Mole, which the Government announced on 11th January 2012 had been changed after consultation with the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is dealt with by the Gibraltar Port Authority Procedure No 4 that is set out in the schedule that I hand to him now.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Minister, who presumably has had an opportunity of reading this certainly more diligently and with more time than I have available at the moment... Can he confirm, perhaps, that it is the Gibraltar Port Authority which remains the issuing authority for these licences for entry into the North Mole?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, can I assure the hon. Gentleman, obviously, that I have done more than just read the schedule.

I was in full consultation with the Port Authority, who advised me on the procedure and, of course, the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers. He will know, as well as I, that given that we issued the press release not that long ago, the issuing authority... The persons who will authorise people to come into the Port ultimately will be the Gibraltar Port Authority.

I received advice from the Port Authority as to the security and safety requirements and as to a way to control fishing at the Port, and in order to be able to marry the safety and security concerns of the Port, what we decided was to revert to a system that was, in fact, as I understand it, in place during the GSD's administration, where the Gibraltar Federation and the registered fishing clubs' persons who wished to fish at the Port may apply through the Gibraltar Federation or a fishing club. Once they become members then they will have to pass that information to the Port Authority, who will be compiling a database with the relevant information, and then, when a person is a member, they would have to submit that membership card to the security point. The security guard will retain the membership card, they will be allowed to fish, and when leaving the Port they will be handed the membership card back.

Hon. D J Bossino: Maybe if he could clarify, for my purposes – I think he may not have answered my question – is the issuing authority, then, the Gibraltar Port Authority or the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Port Authority procedure and the schedule that I have handed to him is very clear.

For a person to be able to fish at the Port he must be a member of either the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers or a registered fishing club. A person who is not a member of either the GFSA or a registered fishing club will not be able to access the Port for fishing.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, but that may be a condition which the Gibraltar Port Authority itself may impose (The Minister: Yes.) and I may have a follow-up question in relation to membership, the requirements of membership, as the Minister has pointed out – but who is the issuing authority? Can he just confirm that?

Is the ability to enter into the North Mole... I presume it is by way of licence or by way of some sort of document allowing you to enter so you can show the security guard. Is that document entitled with the Gibraltar Port Authority letterhead or is it by the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers and any other fishing club in Gibraltar? Who is the issuing authority? With respect, I do not think the Minister has answered that specific question.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, I have answered the question, Mr Speaker.

I will repeat the procedure again. A person who wishes to fish at the Port – and we are talking, of course, specifically about fishing at the North Mole. It does not relate to fishing in the rest of Gibraltar. A person who wishes to fish at the Port needs to be a member of either the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers or a registered fishing club. That person, on applying for membership and who becomes a member, will be issued with a Gibraltar... with a membership card before being able to enter into the Port. The Port will not allow a person to fish at the Port unless they are a member of the GFSA or a registered fishing club.

If the hon. Member goes through the conditions, you will see that the Port... A person who becomes a member of a fishing club to fish at the North Mole needs to sign a consent form. It is annex C. I refer the hon. Gentleman to it. It says, 'Access to Gibraltar Port estate for the purposes of undertaking leisure activities.' That form must be signed by every member of a registered fishing club who wishes to fish at the Port.

Because the main concerns of fishing at the Port are security and safety, that allows the Port to be able to carry out any check on the person who wishes to enter the Port to fish that they deem reasonable. This marries, as I said, the competing interests of the leisure activity – fishing – and security.

Hon. D J Bossino: As far as I understand the Minister, then, this form is signed...

May I ask this question, then? Can the Minister answer this question: where does an individual who wishes to fish at North Mole obtain a copy of this form?

Hon. N F Costa: The form is issued by the Port Authority and we will... I imagine the Port will make those forms available to fishing clubs that request it, because, as I say, you cannot enter the Port to fish without signing one of these forms. How the fishing clubs liaise with the Port as to whether they will sign the form at the offices of the Port outside the security barrier or in a coffee shop, that is entirely a matter for them.

Hon. D J Bossino: Sorry, I did not quite catch that last comment. That is entirely...?

Hon. N F Costa: Where they sign the form is a matter between the Port and the relevant registered fishing club.

Hon. D J Bossino: That points, then, to the Minister cannot clarify whether that issue as to where you sign the form has not been settled yet.

Hon. N F Costa: It is entirely irrelevant for the Minister, and I hope that the hon. Gentleman is not asking me to tell the fishing clubs and the Port where it is that they sign a form. I am not going to get into that.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, sir. Please allow me, looking at it from a sporting type of angle: on point number 1, it says here:

'Any angler must be a full member of the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers...'

So we are imposing upon sports lovers now to have to necessarily belong to an actual federation, or whatever. But then the second part says:

'... or any Gibraltar registered Fishing Club.'

I do not believe there exists a register of any sporting clubs as such.

245 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, well, yes, for the hon. Gentleman, I can clarify the point that there is no problem...

250 There is, in fact, a law that sets out the requirement to set up a register. There has to be a registration of clubs and, in fact, the register has to be kept in a format that is approved by the Minister for Culture. In fact, if I recall correctly, the hon. Gentleman was the Minister for Culture before and he would have had to have designed or approved the format of the register himself.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but the advice given to us by the Attorney General's Chambers is that that registration of clubs was in respect (Interjection) of clubs which – 255 Hon. Chief Minister: On a point of order, I would like to know when, since 8th December, the Attorney General's Chambers has given the hon. Gentleman any advice on anything.

260 Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps I was not clear, Mr Speaker, the advice given to me before 8th December from the Attorney General's Chambers was that the registration of clubs referred to clubs which were going to have premises of their own that then entitled them to be able to run a bar and... [Inaudible] moneys that had to be paid based on the wholesale basis of drinks ordered and sold, not just for the purpose of holding a club under a club's name, for example, to participate in relation to a sport.

265 I take it, Mr Speaker, that perhaps that needs further investigation for my part. But we go back here now to that it is a question of someone wishing to practice a particular sport now necessarily has to become a member of an entity (Interjections), whereas it is normal for all sports, a person can go to public facilities as an individual and just enjoy the use of the facilities without necessarily having to join a particular club.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did say so in my prefacing remarks, but now that the hon. Gentleman is asking me I will be more specific.

270 I have said already that this relates to fishing specifically in the Port of Gibraltar, in the North Mole. Let us not forget that in other parts of the world fishing in ports is not allowed. In fact, part of my advice was that fishing should not be allowed for security and for safety concerns. We, as a Government, do not feel that that leisure activity should be curtailed to the point that no-one is allowed to fish. Therefore, as a responsible Government, we had to look at what were the security concerns, what were the safety concerns, and also taking into account the fact that Gibraltarians have always enjoyed the leisure activity of fishing.

275 Any Gibraltarian can apply to become a member of a fishing club. As a result, the fishing in North Mole will be allowed, subject to that one qualification, which is to become a member of a club.

Mr Speaker: Hon. D J Bossino.

280 Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Minister know what the criteria is which is imposed by the fishing clubs and the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers in order to become a member? Is the Minister aware of what the criteria is?

285 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am not here to speak for the Gibraltar Federation or any fishing club. How they regulate their affairs is a matter entirely for them. However, as Government, we were concerned to ensure that Gibraltarians are allowed to fish in the North Mole, and the criteria is that a Gibraltar resident, irrespective of nationality, is eligible to become a member of a fishing club.

290 Mr Speaker: Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker. Certainly on this side of the House we concur that, in other parts of the world, as the Hon. Minister has said, of course for security reasons access to Port areas is excluded, it is not permitted, bearing in mind security concerns.

295 Bearing in mind those security concerns, can the Hon. Minister enlighten this House as to what is the vetting process for individuals to be allowed effectively, by the Port office... for individuals signing this form and then being allowed into the Port area?

Hon. N F Costa: I have already partly answered that question. Point number 2 of the schedule that I have 300 handed to the hon. Gentleman says that:

‘All members must submit a consent form to the Gibraltar Port Authority Security Officer (annex C attached to this procedure) in order to be considered for access to the Port.’

305 If the hon. Gentleman considers annex C and considers what is says there, it says that the person signing gives consent to the Port Authority to carry out a criminal background check in circumstances they deem reasonable. This is a condition that did not exist under the previous regime but which we thought was important, given that the issue here was that of security and of safe access to the Port.

310 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but can the Hon. Minister confirm that this form is actually signed and presented on access, or it is signed and presented some time before so that those checks can actually be undertaken.

Hon. N F Costa: No, of course it would have to be signed and handed to the Port. Yes, before.

315 Hon. D A Feetham: It has to be signed and provided to the Port; of course it has. What I am asking is –

Hon. N F Costa: The question related to venues where it was signed.

320 Hon. D A Feetham: What I am asking is, is it –

Hon. N F Costa: Perhaps he could be clearer as to what he is asking.

325 Hon. D A Feetham: Is it presented at the point of entry? In other words, when somebody goes with his rod, wanting to fish and he says, ‘Here’s my consent form – now let me into the Port area’... Or is it signed and presented weeks before in order to allow the Port Authority to undertake proper checks?

330 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have already said, you cannot fish at the Port unless you are a member of a fishing club. At the point that the person applies to become a member of a fishing club, they must necessarily, by following the procedure herein, sign the form. So that form will be immediately passed by the fishing club to the Port so that they will have it before the person comes to fish.

335 Hon. D J Bossino: Could I just tax the Minister slightly, on a question I asked earlier, slightly further? Going back to the point at which you become a member of a club, does an individual have to pay a subscription fee?

Hon. N F Costa: I have already said, Mr Speaker, that is entirely a matter for the club.

340 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister saying that, having imposed, as a condition of public use and access of a public facility, membership of a private club, he has not bothered to find out whether there is a fee payable on joining that club and perhaps also an annual membership fee, the effect of which would be that he has created a regime whereby access to a public facility is available only upon payment of a sum of money to a private non-governmental organisation? As if that were not bad enough, he has not even found out whether that is the position. Is that the case?

345 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have already said, I am not answerable for the fishing clubs and, in our view, as a Government, it is much better to have this regime which gives the Port ultimate control of who comes in and out. There is a database compiled. They can carry out security checks, the numbers are controlled, safety is taken into account, which is much better than the free-for-all that existed under the Government, when anybody could come in without any concern at all for security.

350 A Member: Hear, hear.

Both Worlds
Interim arrangements governing new bus route

Clerk: Question 2, Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the interim arrangements that govern the new route to Both Worlds as announced in the Gibraltar Chronicle on 28th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as well, this is already available in the public domain; however, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the schedule that I hand to him now.

Whilst the schedule is being handed over to him I can say that the route operates between 7.45 in the morning and nine o'clock at night on Saturdays and from 8.15 in the morning to nine o'clock at night on Sundays and public holidays. As the hon. Gentleman will know, it is an interim arrangement that is in place until the necessary works are finalised to allow larger buses to access the area of Both Worlds.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Minister.

Can he perhaps provide the House with greater particularity as to what he means by 'the necessary works'?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am sure that the hon. Gentleman does not need me to remind him that, for the longest time under the previous administration, residents of Both Worlds were abandoned by them and we saw it as a necessary thing to have to immediately reinstitute a route to be able to help those people who live round that area to have access to their place of residence.

As a result of this interim arrangement, I have asked the Gibraltar Bus Company to look at the works that require to be done. I have already been given full particulars of the different options that can be undertaken. In fact, we have three, one of which, for instance, is widening a waste ground opposite the comms centre building for a turning circle, and other options. We are studying those options and it is a matter of importance and priority for this Government, so we should be able to announce exactly the option that we choose very shortly.

Hon. D J Bossino: I take it from that reply, Mr Speaker, that works have not commenced.

Hon. N F Costa: He can take from that reply, Mr Speaker, that we actually care about the people of Both Worlds and that we have actually done something about it, and that, no, we are studying the option.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Minister how many people live there, which warranted the extension of route 4?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I wish that I had brought in the correspondence with the very people, the many people, affected, but I have no idea how many actual people live there – certainly enough to compile a file for this Government to act on it.

Hon. D J Bossino: As I understand it, Mr Speaker, this is called route 4A, which is an extension of route 4.

Hon. N F Costa: Well, yes, it is an addition to route 4.

Hon. D J Bossino: What I was going to say is that route 4A covers many of the bus stops and many of the stops which route 4 currently covers and it is a smaller bus. Can the Minister perhaps provide me with information as to what the cost of the provision of 4A amounts to?

410 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will certainly obtain that information for the hon. Gentleman. I do not have it here with me. But certainly whatever the losses are, the bus company was already losing around £2 million when we came into government, so I do not particularly think that adding that route for people who needed it is really much of a cost.

415 Hon. D J Bossino: So can the Minister confirm that there is a cost, even if he does not have the information available?

Hon. N F Costa: That is the most... Yes, that is one of the most ridiculous questions I have heard. Of course there is a cost.

420 Hon. D J Bossino: Precisely. If the state of Government finances, according to the Hon. Chief Minister's message of last night, are as parlous as he suggests, then the Minister ought to have reconsidered implementing this route.

425 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I just might deal with the issue that this raises on the statement I made last night, I made very clear last night that the problems that Gibraltar is suffering result from the decisions made by the previous administration, the leader of which sits opposite, to prioritise spending on the wrong things. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

430 We do not think that bringing access to the town centre by adding a route for those who have previously been abandoned is something that should now not be proceeded with simply because of the folly in spending of some of the previous decisions made by the administration that was here until 8th December. The people at Both Worlds needed this route. The hon. Member made sure that one of the first things he did when he was elected was ensure that they were back in the franchise of those who had access to bus routes, and we will respond to as many questions the hon. Member wants to put on the issue, very proud of the fact that one of the first things we were able to do after 9th December was to provide this route for these people. (Banging on desks)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition will, of course, respond to the Chief Minister's extraordinary broadcast of last night in due course.

440 Can I ask the Hon. the Minister answering questions at present how many yards, or metres if he prefers, are there between the last bus stop nearest Both Worlds on route 4 and the new terminal to route 4A, in other words Both Worlds? How far did residents of Both Worlds have to walk to and from their bus stop? Does he know that, even if he does not know the cost of what he has decided?

445 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no I do not know the exact yards or metres, but I do know this: I do know that, under their watch, senior people had to carry shopping bags, senior people had to walk to their home (Interjections) because they were abandoned –

Mr Speaker: Order!

450 Hon. N F Costa: – by his Government.

The Hon. Mr Netto is laughing at the fact that senior people had to walk with heavy bags from Morrisons to their place of residence. We, as a Government, Mr Speaker, will not make any excuses or apologies for the fact that one of the first things that we did when going into Government was looking at the fact that senior people living at Both Worlds needed this bus route.

455 We saw to it that it was implemented as an interim measure immediately. We are, in fact, studying the options to have the works carried out to be able to have larger buses being able to turn around at the area. We will make no excuses for that, Mr Speaker, and we are proud to have done so so quickly once we were elected into government.

460 Hon. P R Caruana: Having established that the hon. Member does not know the cost or the value, in turn, to the residents in terms of the distance walked that has been saved... but given that the hon. Member wants to set up bus routes to save people a 200-metre walk, or thereabouts, is he going to do that for everybody whose house in Gibraltar is further than 200 metres from the nearest bus stop? Because if he is not 465 going to do that for everybody in Gibraltar, what is there about residents of Both Worlds that entitles them to a bus from their doorstep, but other people in Gibraltar have to walk further to their bus stop than the residents of Both Worlds presently have to walk to their nearest bus stop?

So, will the hon. Member now extend the same proud satisfaction and commitment of what he has done for the handful of residents of Both Worlds to the other 29,900 residents of Gibraltar?

470 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, let me just say in reply to the extraordinary statements made implicit in the question by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, that we would rather spend money in facilitating and helping senior citizens who require closer access to their house than £88,000 on cleaning the terminal of the airport. (Banging on desks)

475 Now let me tell the hon. Gentleman opposite that we prioritise and care a great deal more about the people of Gibraltar than the previous administration that put money in fancy extravagant buildings, rather than looking into the very things for which they are criticising us now.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition can rest assured that I am, in fact, looking at appropriate advice and also, funnily enough, listening to the people that are affected, because the previous administration never heard anyone and did whatever they wanted on their own motions, rather than listening to the people who were affected in any area of responsibility of the Government. We will be setting up – in fact, we are already setting up – meetings with exactly that, people who live all over Gibraltar so they can tell us what their input and feedback is on the current route. They found it extraordinary that a Minister should, in fact, call them because before all we hear is we have been ignored for the past 15 years.’

480 We will listen to them, we will meet with them and we will come up with a much better devised route than just one that is considered by a Minister with absolutely talking with no-one at all. (Banging on desks)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must be aware that he has just misled this House. He must know that the bus route (Interjections) –

490 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, a point of order.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

The point of order being raised? Point of order.

495 Hon. N F Costa: On a point of order, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has not been out of this Parliament that long to know that in order to accuse me of misleading the Parliament he must do so by way of motion. He must either withdraw the remark or rephrase his statement.

500 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Members obviously think the House is a department of the Government and they can issue instructions through Mr Speaker.

Look, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has said (Interjections) –

A Member: Point of order!

505 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: And he must listen to me on the point of order, Mr Speaker. (Interjections)

510 Hon. N F Costa: On a point of order, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister, the gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, is replying to the point made by the Hon. Minister.

Let us hear the Leader of the Opposition.

515 Hon. P R Caruana: I know that the hon. Member is nervous and does not want to... He just wants a monologue with himself, but that is not possible in a parliament. You will learn that very soon.

Look, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has said twice in his last answer that it is better to do what they have done than to establish routes by the Minister without asking or consulting anybody at all. He knows that that is not true, because he knows that there was an extensive public consultation process in which hundreds of replies were received and which were applied to the design of the new bus route. Therefore, to his certain knowledge, the statement that bus routes have been established without consultation with anybody is untrue.

Mr Speaker, the question that I asked him has not been answered. The question is not whether he is going to consult people; the question is whether he will do for everybody else in Gibraltar who lives as far away as the residents of Both Worlds do from their nearest bus stop, will he do the same? Or, alternatively, Mr Speaker, is this the first – at taxpayers' expense – payment for votes which the hon. Members did at the election (Banging on desks) to the residents of Both Worlds? 'Vote for me and I will give you a bus stop within 30 days of being in office.' Is it that? Why should the taxpayer pay for a discriminatory service simply to Both Worlds? Why?

Hon. N F Costa: That is not a reply to the point of order. That is a speech.

And the hon. Gentleman was going to reply to the point of order, the simple aspect of which was he said that the hon. Member had misled the House. Those issues have to be put by motion and he has to rephrase his question. Instead, he has decided to go on a soliloquy as if he was still the person imperiously ruling over Gibraltar. (Banging on desks)

A Member: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! Order! Order!

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition did, in his earlier remark, accuse the Minister of misleading the House.

The position in the rules is very clear: when any Member wishes to accuse any other Member of misleading the House, that must be done on a motion. No matter how justified, no matter what the argument at the moment, any accusation of misleading the House must be phrased in a motion.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has not brought a motion. Instead, in his last remark he has sought to justify the earlier accusation of misleading. That is out of order.

Hon. N F Costa: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, whilst strictly correct, this is not the way it has happened (Laughter) in this Parliament in the last 16 years, as the hon. Member...

Mr Speaker, I will be happy to move a motion. I will be very happy to move a motion. The fact of the matter is that what the hon. Member has said to this House is, to his certain knowledge, not true.

Hon. N F Costa: Just a repeat of the allegations, Mr Speaker.

A Member: Not to accept a ruling...

Mr Speaker: I must again, if I may, just emphasise now that we have a new Parliament, a new scenario, where we all sit. Any accusation by anyone of any other Member misleading the House must be made in a motion and in no other manner.

The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: It is remarkable, if I may say so, that the Minister does not seem to be in charge of his brief, at least as far as this issue is concerned. It is a rather innocuous question.

Can the Minister perhaps also... Can he confirm... If he said so, I did not catch it. I will ask him to confirm... If not, maybe he can advise the House if he has not said so, whether the provision... whether 4A is, in fact, a new bus or whether it is being taken from another bus route. Is it a new bus which has been purchased?

Yes, it is a new route, but is the bus a new bus, or is it a bus which is used for another route and is being used for 4A?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, I will clarify that, sir.

Mr Speaker, the bus is, in fact, an old bus that was not being currently used. It is one of the small buses. It is a small bus.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I know.

Hon. N F Costa: It was not being currently used and it was put for this route, sir.

Chief Executive and Captain of the Port
Terms of appointment

Clerk: Question 3, Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the terms under which the Chief Executive and Captain of the Port, Captain Stanbrook, has been appointed?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. Captain Roy Stanbrook, age 54, has been appointed as the new Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Port Authority and Captain of the Port following a selection process which was completed on 11th November of last year.

The terms and conditions of Captain Roy Stanbrook's appointment as CEO and COP are as follows: three-year contract; salary of £76,192; rent allowance of £7,455 per annum; 25% tax-free gratuity of his basic pay at the end of each year; relocation costs for him and his wife as per GoG guidelines; 25 days' leave a year; and he takes up his appointment on Monday, 27th February of this year.

600

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister confirm whether these are the same terms under which his predecessor was employed?

Hon. N F Costa: Could he ask again, please?

605 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister confirm whether these are the same terms under pursuant to which Captain Stanbrook's predecessor was employed?

610 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I wish he had given me notice of that question, but certainly he could ask one of his team who were on the previous administration. This was already a process which had been completed and approved before we were elected into Government.

Hon. D J Bossino: Perhaps I did not catch it myself in his initial reply, but can the Minister... Is this contract an open-ended contract or for a term?

615 Hon. N F Costa: The first term that I stipulated to the hon. Gentleman was a three-year contract.

Gibraltar Port Authority Employment of Marine Officer

620 Clerk: Question 4, Hon. D J Bossino.

625 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Ports inform the House whether anybody has been employed as the Marine Officer at the Gibraltar Port Authority?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

630 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): No, sir, not yet. Perhaps I could elaborate further by saying that we are currently reviewing the terms and conditions of this post, with a view to appointing a suitably qualified individual.

The post of Marine Officer, so that the hon. Gentleman is aware, became vacant on the death of Captain Tom Norton, which happened in May of last year.

635 Hon. D J Bossino: Is it the intention to keep the post? The Minister has said that the terms and conditions are being reviewed, but is it the intention to keep the post?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the current intention but, as I say, we are currently reviewing the terms and conditions of the post.

Aviation policy Increasing flight passenger arrivals

645 Clerk: Question 5, Hon. D J Bossino.

650 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the Government's aviation policy with regard, in particular, to maintaining or increasing the number of flight passenger arrivals to Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

655 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government continues to engage with stakeholders in the industry to continue to maintain, first of all, the current number of flight passenger arrivals and we will strive to increase the number of arrivals. Negotiations will start in earnest with current and prospective airlines to attract more flights, to bring more tourists to Gibraltar.

660 In fact, Mr Speaker, one of the very first things that I did was precisely to find out the state of play as to the current operators and what negotiations were in train as to prospective air carriers coming to Gibraltar. So it will not come as a surprise to Members opposite that there has been little for us to progress with prospective air carriers. Our work with that will have to start virtually from scratch in this respect. I, for one, am certainly looking forward to doing just that.

665 Hon. D J Bossino: There was nothing much in what the Minister has said, other than, perhaps, the last bit, which leads me to believe that there has been a heavy departure from what was the policy of the previous administration. Can I ask him to confirm to this House, and perhaps give us some comfort, that he will continue the policy that was carried out by his predecessor in order to see the continuing healthy figures which we saw in terms of passenger arrivals whilst we were in office.

670 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, first of all, I am not here to answer to the policy of the previous administration. We are here to implement the policies of this Government, but as I have already explained to the hon. Gentleman, there will certainly be a change of policy of their administration because we will, in fact, actively, diligently, implacably, pursue the negotiations of bringing new air carriers into Gibraltar.

675 Hon. D J Bossino: And could these new air carriers... could he consequently advise the House whether these new air carriers fly from a particular destination?

680 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, as I said, one of the first things that I did was, in fact, to find out that negotiations were in train with any airlines.

Given that what I found was I would have to start from scratch, I already got officials in my Department to do exactly that and start setting up meetings, not just with the current operators to see how we can facilitate and assist them and make sure that they are happy to remain in Gibraltar, but also to set up meetings with air operators from the existing air routes and also from different parts of Europe.

685 We have already set up some meetings and we are inviting people to come to Gibraltar and, where necessary, I will go to meet them. The hon. Gentleman can, in fact rest, not just assured, but to his full satisfaction I can tell him that I will personally ensure that we will do what we can – and more – to get more air carriers to come into Gibraltar.

690 Hon. D J Bossino: Any destinations other than the UK?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, as I have just said, Mr Speaker, I have said in my reply to a supplementary, that we will be working not just with existing air carriers, but that I would also be targeting different European destinations.

695 Mr Speaker: A question from the Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

700 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is it implicit in the hon. Member's answer that he is telling this House, given that he has repeated it twice, I think, that he has had to start from scratch, that he believes that there is no ongoing contact? There was no ongoing contact on 7th December between the previous Government and any airlines. Is this what he is trying to say without actually uttering the words? What does he mean when he says he has had to start from scratch?

705 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, I said that we had to start virtually from scratch in respect of new airlines – contact with new airlines. There was, of course, contact, Mr Speaker, with the current operators. Here I am talking about additional routes and new airlines, Mr Speaker, but I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman for allowing me to clarify that part of my answer.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE & YOUTH

Gorham's Cave Complex Application for World Heritage status

Clerk: Question 6, Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Heritage provide an update in respect of Gibraltar's application to achieve World Heritage Status for Gorham's Cave Complex?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, Government officials from the Heritage Division attended a meeting in the Department of Culture, Media and Sport in London on Monday, 9th January.

The briefing meeting involved all sites on the UK Tentative List; this is a first stage in the process of selecting sites for nomination.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member knows that this side of the House will certainly continue to be very supportive in respect of Gibraltar's bid to join UNESCO's World Heritage status. However, given that the hon. Member has recently announced that, in consultation with his Chief Minister, they have appointed an inter-ministerial type of committee and so on, could he perhaps elaborate a bit further how these other ministries and so on would have an influence or a supporting angle, as well, in respect of our joint UNESCO bid?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, since this new Government is now working as a team, we thought, and the Chief Minister rightly thought, that it would be better to co-ordinate this site, which is not only for heritage – as in heritage for Gibraltar and a World Heritage under UNESCO – but that there are implications to do with the environment, and therefore the Minister for the Environment is joining the inter-ministerial group.

Also, it has implications with tourism because, ultimately, when it does, hopefully, become a World Heritage Site, we would like people to visit it – and how we can market for people to visit the place – and it would be chaired, and I am glad that it would be chaired by the Deputy Chief Minister who, as a historian, has an interest in all to do with heritage.

Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, I take it from there that it would be a question of opening up Gorham's Cave Complex for visiting tourists and so on. Would that, then, have an impact, positive or negative as well, to the ongoing scientific excavations and research which are being carried out by the museum team to date?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, Government is currently assessing the works that need to be done and since we have experts within Government, they will advise me and the inter-ministerial group as to how better to protect the area. That would mean that if we have to, either – and I am thinking aloud and I am sure the experts would probably have ideas on how to go about it, but you could probably limit the amount of people that go in and out, or they will advise us on how to deal with a Heritage Site.

It is not up to the Minister to decide how to deal with a Heritage Site.

Clerk: Question 7, Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details in respect of the additional football pitch it is committed to provide?

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with question 8 of 2012.

775

Details of provision

Clerk: Question 8.

780

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details in respect of the children's football facilities it is committed to provide?

785

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government cannot provide details at this time. All this information will be provided when we are in a position to do so.

790

Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, am I correct in deducing from that that the Government is committed to providing a new football ground, but it hasn't the foggiest idea where on earth it is going to provide it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Certainly not, Mr Speaker. What the hon. Gentleman can deduce from that... (Interjections) and his other – (Interjections)

795

800

Hon. Chief Minister: – and his other colleagues will be able to deduce from the many other questions across all of the areas of ministerial responsibility that they have asked about our manifesto, is that we are not answerable in this House for our manifesto, Mr Speaker. As the hon. Gentleman used to say to me, we are answerable in this House for the things that we do as a Government, and the things that we will do as a Government will be what we have said in our manifesto that we will do.

805

Now, less than two months into it, for the hon. Gentleman to say that we have not got the foggiest, just because we have not started work on the pitch and we have not made an announcement of where it is going to be to the general public is, frankly, quite ungenerous, given that he was a member of the Government which, in the last months of the previous administration, had not yet even started work in deducing how much renewable energy Gibraltar got from renewable sources and how much electricity Gibraltar got from renewable sources, and only then said that, in the early part of their administration, they had decided to change the criterion, the target that they were going to meet.

It is not about not having the foggiest, it is about wanting to do things properly. It is about wanting to announce things when the time comes. It is about this community having chosen an option that is going to deliver for it absolutely fantastic services in the next four years and make an announcement when the time comes. They can expect that sort of answer in respect of many of the questions that they have put, leading to a cross examination on our manifesto commitments.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I see that this business of Chief Ministers popping up and down is contagious! (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker, what the Hon. Chief Minister has said begs the following question: Given that he has told the people of Gibraltar repeatedly that his manifesto of the last election was fully costed, can he explain in this House how he could have costed the cost of a football pitch without knowing where he was going to build it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that question precedes a question specifically on costing already on the Order Paper further down the line, so I will deal with the issue when the hon. Gentleman asks me that question then.

825 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, with your leave, may I simply ask, then, although he does not yet know the locations, am I correct in assuming that there is a commitment to provide a new football pitch and then, in addition to that, there will be a further facility for children's football, or will the same pitch incorporate both the senior and the junior football?

830 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, Government has committed itself to providing an additional football pitch, and it will do so. We are currently investigating the viability of specific sites and will consult the relevant parties and technical staff so as to provide a facility that will be fit for purpose.

835 Additionally, quotes have already been requested for the substitutes' bench which parents and children now suffer. It is absolutely disgusting the way those changing rooms for children were, or are still, until we get them done, and the provision of changing facilities are also being investigated. So I cannot, for the life of me, understand why the Minister is pressing me, after he was for four years Minister for Sport and allowed those changing rooms to get to such a state, about what we are doing.

840 We have already come in and, within a month and a half, I have already investigated with the technical people about what we are going to do for these children who are, every Saturday morning... and I am a parent and I do not mind, I put my coat on, but there are parents and children who have been suffering with neglected toilets, neglected changing rooms on the CEPESA area of which he was the Minister for. (Applause)

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I concur that I did inherit from the previous administration. (Laughter and interjections)

845 A Member: Sixteen years ago! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

850 Hon. S E Linares: If I may continue –

Hon. Chief Minister: On a point of order, the hon. Member, as I understand it, was elected in 2003. The previous administration was the GSD administration. (Interjections)

855 Hon. E J Reyes: Well, Mr Speaker, what I was trying to get at was that the building for changing rooms that had been left next door to the CEPESA petrol station, that had been provided by the previous administration, was of a temporary nature, not a permanent one, and that, under our administration, adequate changing room facilities were available, albeit on the western side of the football pitch and not on the eastern side. It is not just a question of convenience, but adequate changing rooms and toilets were available and that I would like to get down on the record.

860 Mr Speaker: Well, the hon. Member should have asked a question – that is the purpose of supplementaries. Is there a question coming up?

865 Hon. E J Reyes: Well, the question, then, Mr Speaker, is I do not think I quite got... Although the Hon. Minister started to reply, I am still not entirely clear whether there is going to be a separate additional football field for juniors, or is it going to be combined with the seniors? I am still not completely clear on that side.

870 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I repeat again: we are currently investigating the viability of specific sites and will consult with the relevant parties and technical staff so as to provide a facility that will be fit for purpose.

We are consulting people. We do not do things unilaterally. We go, we ask the GFA and we ask the associations what they require and, obviously, we are motivated by fulfilling every single item in our manifesto. This is what I have done since we have got into Government. So that is the answer to the question.

875 Hon. E J Reyes: So therefore, Mr Speaker, has the GFA recommended that it have a separate junior and senior football pitch or a combined one?

Hon. S E Linares: The GFA has not only recommended that, they have recommended to do many other things of which we are sitting down with them in consultation, in order to fulfil as many as they require. We cannot probably deliver with every single item that they want us to do, but... (Interjection)

So what... Sorry, Mr Speaker, could the Leader of the Opposition in his murmuring ask a question?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister would be well advised to ignore any remarks of that nature.

A Member: Absolutely.

Hon. S E Linares: I will, therefore, ignore those comments.

What we are doing is that we are consulting the GFA and every single other association who have welcomed the amount of hours that I have been spending, for the last month, seeing them because all they tell me is that they are being ignored. What I am doing now is, in consultation with them, to see how better we can develop the football.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I did not quite catch... Is it going to be one separate for junior and for senior, as recommended by the GFA, or a combined one? I did not quite catch the answer.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, has he read our manifesto? If he has read the manifesto, whatever the manifesto says, we will deliver. (Banging on desk)

Hon. P R Caruana: On a point of order, either, as the Hon. Chief Minister says, he is not accountable in this House for his manifesto or it is as the Minister now says, that he remits us to his manifesto. It has got to be one or the other. I do not see that it can be both. (Interjections)

A Member: Mr Speaker, in my... (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman is absolutely right and that commitment the hon. Gentleman has now brought into the House. He will be answerable for that commitment, given that that particular commitment in the manifesto he has now said in this House, he will be responsible for ensuring is delivered.

Fire Station Smoke extractor system

Clerk: Question 9, the Hon. I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister for the Fire Brigade confirm whether the smoke extractor system for the Fire Station has been ordered?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, Government instructed the Chief Fire Officer in its first meeting, within a week after the General Election, to make arrangements for the fire extractor to be ordered as soon as possible. The Fire Brigade management is currently consulting two specialist exhaust extractor system suppliers in order to procure the most cost effective installation.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Hon. Minister confirm if he has an idea of when the extractor system will be installed, then?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am not a technician and therefore I do not know how long this will take. It is in the order process, which we said we will do within 14 days of being in Government and that is exactly what we have done, and then it would be up to as long as it is possible to take to put in the extractor system as soon as it arrives.

935 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And can the Hon. Minister confirm that the smoke extractor system was put out to tender?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, no, it was not put out to tender because there are only two companies that are providing it and I can give you the names of the companies, if you want?

940 There is Nederman from Sweden and Ecovent from Germany. These are the type of extractor system that is needed and the Chief Fire Officer will select, as I said, the most cost effective installation.

945 Airport
Major incident exercise

Clerk: Question 10, the Hon. I M Ellul-Hammond.

950 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for the Fire Brigade tell us when the Government is intending to hold the major incident exercise at the airport?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

955 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the first planning meeting will take place today, 19th January, and it is intended to hold a full-scale exercise during April this year.

960 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, my understanding is that the exercise was scheduled for February of this year. Why is there a postponement until April?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to answer that question since, when I came in, one of the first things I did was meet the head of the Civil Contingency and he informed me about having a meeting on the 19th January.

965 I presume, due to the Elections, they have moved it, but it is not I who decides to move anything. They informed me that they were having a meeting today and, from the meeting today, they envisage the exercise to be done in April. So, basically, why they have moved it, I have not got an idea why they moved it.

970 ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Social Security
Control of Expenditure Returns

975 Clerk: Question 13, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security provide a copy of the Monthly Expenditure Returns Report from the Department of Social Security to the Financial Secretary commencing from December 2011 to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

985 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Monthly Expenditure Returns Report requested by the hon. Member is a financial management information document that the Department of Social Security provides to the Financial Secretary on a monthly basis. A copy of the Monthly Expenditure Returns cannot be provided to the Member, as the budgetary expenditure logically is subject to amendments throughout the year, hence the final expenditure figures will only be available on the closure of the public accounts after the year-end.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I have not understood the answer by the Hon. Minister opposite him to send, sir, in the sense that he seems to be saying that he cannot provide me with information because it will be subjected to amendment further on.

995

At the end of the day, Mr Speaker, we are talking about a document which was so introduced by the GSD Government for the purpose of having transparency and accountability. After all, we are talking about expenditure which is incurred by a Department, a Government Department expenditure that comes under the Appropriation Bill, which is something for which Government has the responsibility and the Opposition, obviously, has the responsibility to look into the accounts of the Government.

1000

It does not make sense to say that he cannot give me the information on the basis that it will have further amendment, because all I am asking is the same copy of the same Report that the Minister will get at the end of the month. So, therefore, both the Minister and the Shadow Minister will be in the same position to know how expenditure is moving, notwithstanding the fact there will be amendment further along.

I find it quite odd and contradictory to give that type of answer when the party opposite seems to be saying they are a party of openness, transparency and accountability. Well, if they are the party of accountability and transparency, surely they should give me the equal footing to be able to have the same information to be able to question the Minister opposite. Will he, therefore not consider the statement I have made and provide me with the document?

1010

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker. I think the hon. Member is talking a lot of rubbish because, in fact, he is asking me to provide him with documents for when he was there, which he must have had already if he says he had them regularly – and which he did not provide to me.

1015

The reality of it is that what he is asking for is that we reproduce... [Inaudible] that every Member of the House on this side, and on that side, should get a copy of this thing and make public, which means he is asking us to produce a copy of this every month with seven columns of possible amendments being changed backwards and forwards.

1020

Certainly, if that is something that was introduced by the previous Government and something that every Minister had, I can tell him that when we came in, no Department provided us with those copies. The first time I have heard of the existence... is when he put the question and this is the answer that the Department has provided me with. They tell me that he did on some occasions ask for this information, but that it was an irregular thing that they provided every month to him; but whether they did or they did not, if he feels so strongly that both Members of the House should have had it, I am surprised that he did not provide it when he was here and that he is now asking me to give him information that he claims he already has and that he had when he was a Minister.

Well, I can only remind him that when I used to ask for half yearly – not every month with every amendment – the figures for the first six months of the year, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition used to say to me that this would put an administrative burden on the Department and I would have to wait a couple of months after September to get the information, which I accepted.

1030

He is actually saying that he wants us to produce this, with the figures changed, every single month of the year and I can tell you that in six months, as I used to be told by the Government then, it is not necessarily an indication of how the year is going to end. You can imagine that every month going up and down is even less of an indication.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that the one who is talking rubbish is the Member opposite.

Mr Speaker: Order. Order. I imagine... [Inaudible] Order. Order.

The Hon. Minister used the word and I did cringe. May we please eliminate that sort of language from this Parliament.

Hon. P R Caruana: What... both sides? (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Yes, sir... (Interjections)

I did point to the Minister and I did hear the Minister use the word first, but let us omit it from this Parliament altogether.

The Hon. Mr Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: I am quite happy for him to tell me that I am talking ‘rubbish’ –

Mr Speaker: Well, no, no. Let us eliminate that –

Hon. J J Netto: – because I know that he will remind me, telling that he is talking ‘rubbish’, so I do not take any offence from him, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Well, I think I take offence then.

Hon. J J Netto: Having said that, Mr Speaker, let me tell him that I am not asking him to provide me... well, I am asking him to provide me with this Report, right, which basically says – which he will get available as a matter of course, right... he will get it as a matter of course at the end of each month, but it basically says, from the estimates book, what every single sub heading is, the movement that it is in terms of the payment of those months and whether it is a surplus or a deficit at the end of that month. That is all he will get as a matter of course and he will get it as a matter of course because we, on this side, when we were there in Government, we introduced it to ensure that we kept within the limit of the Appropriation Bill.

1060

This information, as he would have reminded us many times before, was not passed to him because you never asked a question. If you asked a question when you were in a position, you would have got the information. At the end of the day, the point I am making, from a parliamentary position, is that we, in this legislature are entitled to be able to control the movement and the rate in terms of every single subject and every single head.

He gets the information, like all Ministers get information, every single month and all he needs to do, once he gets that report by the civil servant, is to say, ‘There is a copy for the Minister, the opposition spokesman on the relevant...’ That is all I am asking. There is not any great effort in simply putting one of these copies into an envelope and passing it to the Opposition. The problem is that he does not want to do it, and he does not want to do it because he does not want to give us the opportunity to scrutinise the accounts that he is responsible for under the Head in this Government.

1070

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman’s remarks do not contain a question, but I think it is important that I should raise an issue, an important parliamentary issue, and an important issue of form.

1075

The hon. Gentleman appears to have a document that he was given when he was a Minister. I would be grateful if the hon. Gentleman could return that document, please, because it is obviously a Government document. It is still in his possession. Of course, he must have, perhaps, taken it home to work on it when he was a Minister, but if it is a Government document, which we are saying in this House is not a document even we have received – they are not documents that we are being given – and there is an issue between us about whether that is a document that should be shared. Certainly it is a document that I think, if he has it from his time, should be in one of the files that relates to the work he did for Gibraltar in his time. It is not a document that should now have been taken by him from Government officers into his personal possession at home.

1080

A Member: Hear, hear.

1085

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is not a parliamentary matter (Interjection) and begs an important question about the status of papers that are to become ministerial working papers that we can certainly discuss, but could I just ask the Hon. Minister for Employment whether he would consider providing the information, as I used to do to him on many occasions, with a qualification that, of course, this is tentative and might, at some future date, change.

1090

He will recall that there was – I cannot remember now what it was, but some of the statistics that he used to ask me for regularly, I would issue him, I would give it to him with a warning that it could change, it was tentative and it could change, subject before the year end in terms of ... If that information is available, he can provide it, presumably, if he is willing to do it, subject to the fact that it may change, without then necessarily committing to provide every amendment in the ‘seven columns’, as he calls it.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, first of all, it is not true that I have been provided with this information by the Department. (Interjection) No. No, but the hon. Member has said that I was provided with... as if I had been (Interjection) and I was withholding it from him. It is not true. None of us have been provided with this monthly report.

I do not know if it is true that every single Minister previous to us had this report. I do not know because, clearly, I have not asked for the figures for before December. I find it quite extraordinary that the hon. Member has actually got the figures he claims that I do not want to give it to him when, in fact, he has something that I do not have and that I have no right to have, anyway, because I was not there in September. So why should the Department give me detailed breakdowns of figures of something in September, or volunteer to give it to me?

The point that the hon. Member is making is that he has, on some occasions, said to me, 'Well, look, we don't want this material to be in the public domain because we do not think it is in the public interest and therefore we will give it to you confidentially.' That has happened, but that is not the point. The point is that – I do not know whether the hon. Member appreciates it or not – if we did what the questioner is suggesting, it means that, on every single page of this document, every single possible warrant, every single thing that has been tabled today which shows movement in wages, movement in overtime, expenditure up and down, which is being estimated on a month-to-month basis, which may materialise or may not materialise... If we did that for every Department, not just for the one that is being asked, it would mean that we would have to get the Department not to report to the Financial Secretary, which they are doing now, whose job it is to control expenditure. They are our Controlling Officers. This is the internal document of the Controlling Officer.

Certainly, it did not happen before 1996. I do not know if it has been happening from 1996 until now. We did not know it existed. We have not been given this information automatically. Neither me nor any of my colleagues have already asked other people and, therefore, it is not that we are getting something which we want to withhold from the other side; it is that, in fact, we think the job of the Controlling Officer is the job of the Controlling Officer and not the job of the Minister.

I would like to remind the Member and, if necessary, I will bring up the questions in which he said it, the number of times for considerably less information than reproducing a changed set of figures for the whole of the estimates book, he used to say to me, 'Look, the work involved is very great.' I would have thought the work involved in this is monumental.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, first of all, I was not referring to the confidential information. It is when he used to ask me for information on a quarterly... first of all, it was half yearly and then we tried to give them information on a quarterly basis, and there was some information, I think it referred to Departmental expenditure or some expenditure which had not been reconciled by the Treasury, and I used to say to him, 'Well, look, this is the Treasury information that exists. It is subject to reconciliation and then subject to change.'

Mr Speaker, no one is asking him to do the Government's annual accounts monthly.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, he is.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, can I suggest to you that the Hon. Mr Linares that he does not, you know... In this instance he is unlikely to have a grasp of such matters.

Mr Speaker, as part of our budgetary attempt at budgetary expenditure control and not find at the end of a financial year, or towards the end of a financial year, Departments just stuck out their hands and said, 'I have run out. I have spent my whole year's allocation. Now, if you want me to carry on providing the public service until March, I need supplementary funding'... In order to try and monitor and prevent that from happening and monitor monthly expenditure, we put in place a system whereby every Department had to submit to the Financial Secretary, and to his Minister, a statement of that month's expenditure simply so that others could monitor whether they were likely to make their budgets stretch to the 12-month period or not.

We are not asking for any additional work to be done. This does not require any. This simply requires that making available to the Minister who has asked for it, that monthly return which is already generated, which exists, and which is unlikely to change, given that it relates to expenditure actually incurred. Now it may change if there is a need to calculate over time retrospectively, for example. So there are some circumstances in which monthly expenditure can change something being in respect of a previous month, but it is mainly not the case.

So, look, the hon. Members have to decide whether they are willing to provide the information or not, but it does not require a new exercise in information collation. The return, the monthly return to the Financial Secretary, exists in all the Departments, by the way, not just theirs.

Hon. J J Bossano: All I can say is if it is so easy and it is all there and does not require any effort, then I must say that I will have to look at the answers he gave me when I used to ask him for the figures, once a year, for six months. Their figures, all that he told me then about how difficult it was to produce cannot possibly be true, if he was getting the figures every month and he used to say to me then that to give me the heads of expenditure – this is asking for every single subject in the book – and all that I ever used to ask for was the equivalent of the first two pages of this book once a year so that I could see, half way through a year, how close we were to spending the amount approved. (Interjection)

Yes, that is what I used to get, but that (Interjection) used to be... that which I used to get, the hon. Member used to say to me, if I asked him in October or November, that it was not ready, that it needed more time and it needed more work. Now it turns out, from what he has just told me, that he needed neither more time nor more work because he was actually giving it to me twelve times a year, according to him, and in a massive volume of breakdown... Every single penny in this book can move up or down.

All I can tell the hon. Member is, we will discuss what he has suggested, but I have to say to him it is in flat contradiction to every argument that is ever put in this House about excessive detailed information about everything else.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with respect, it is not. The amount of administrative effort and political will that went into the previous Government, my Government's, attempt to give the hon. Member all the statistical information that he asked for is legion, on record and unprecedented.

For the hon. Member now on that side, because he is wearing the boot now on the other foot, to pretend that he had difficulty getting information that was readily available from the Government is simply not consistent with the facts as they happened, in terms of the information that he got, to the extent that the hon. Members now boast that they put it online to spare us the need to have to ask for it.

Well, Mr Speaker, it is not true. This is information that exists. It is information. It is monthly reporting by the Departments to the Financial Secretary. It is not collated. It is not audited. It is not checked. It is just a return of expenditure. It is available. He can choose not to provide it to the Opposition, but if he chooses not to provide it to the Opposition it cannot be because it is difficult or onerous, or burdensome to collate. It requires no effort on their part to collate it. It is simply a question of forwarding on, but it is a matter of policy if they choose not to provide it. So be it.

Mr Speaker: There is still no question there.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, then I can tell the hon. Member that when he complained about the excessive detail of information that is available within the Departments, he was not being straightforward in... he was exaggerating the effort involved.

What he is asking is that this should be reproduced every month, the whole book, with figures that go up one month or down the other, with seven additional columns.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, no one is asking him to put the information –

Mr Speaker: There must be a question.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes. Does the hon. Member accept that no one is asking him to put the information in budget schedule form? It is simply a crude, raw, unaudited existing Return of Expenditure by a Department. It does not have to be put in columns, seven, or any. If the format exists, Mr Speaker, it is produced... He may not have seen them yet. Indeed, I never used to look at them every month. They used to go to the Financial Secretary's office, where they used to die.

I know the hon. Member wants a copy. The Hon. Opposition Member, Mr Netto, wants a copy. The Government can decide whether it wants him to have it or not and that is the Government's choice, but the hon. Member cannot justify not giving it to him on the basis of onerous effort required and he should not try to justify it on the basis of what he now says we used to do when he was in Government.

1210 Look, they have won, by 200 or 300 votes, an Election on the basis that they had swept up the ogres who were emperors and did not provide information and they were now a new broom that was going to open the windows of Government and transform the way Gibraltar was governed by providing information. If that is what they believe, surely they cannot now try to copy our behaviour, which they thought was terrible.

1215 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, the last thing I would want to do on this planet is copy everything that he has ever done in his life! (Laughter) Of that you can rest assured. (Laughter) But what I have to tell him is that we are now going down the route of saying that he misled the House, which requires a motion... (Interjection) Without going down that route, I have to tell you that the excuses he made, (Interjection) which I believed were true, do not fit with the position that he is now taking.

1220 It is not that I am saying because you did not do it, I am not doing it. I am saying that what he is asking for is far in excess, far in excess, of what he just was saying before was not reasonable to us – that is what I am saying. I am saying to him that, in fact, for him to go on saying that I am denying information to the Member opposite, when the Member opposite has (Interjection) it in front of him and has waved it at me, and I have not seen it –

Hon. J J Netto: You will get it. You will get it if you haven't.

1225 Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, it is not true. It is not true that when we came in on the 9th, every head of Department came to us and said, 'These are the monthly reports we send to the Financial Secretary.' We have not asked for this report. We did not know the report existed. (Interjections)

1230 Hon. P R Caruana: Alright.

1235 Hon. J J Bossano: The first I have heard of the existence of this is when the question has been put and this is the answer the Department has given me, and that is the answer given to the hon. Member, but from the content of what they put to the Financial Secretary, from what they have shown me, which is the first line, (Interjection) the first column, of every page of approved expenditure in this book: column one, with seven additional columns behind it.

1240 That is what they say to me in that report, which means, effectively, reproducing a book which is twice as thick as this one, every month (Interjection). Well, they have just discovered a passion for numbers that, before 9th December 2011, I used to be the nitpicking guy that used to be interested in scrutinising every penny in every statistic. It seems I have contaminated everybody in the Opposition with my disease!

1245 Hon. P R Caruana: Would the hon. Member not accept that there is a great difference between what he used to ask for, on the few occasions that we were not able to give it, and that it is not the case that this requires much more effort than what he used to ask for, and be denied? He used to ask, effectively, for the accounts of Gibraltar to be compiled for the forecast outturn of revenue and expenditure at quarterly stages, or half yearly stages, during the year to be compiled. In other words, all the information brought together... This is not what is being asked here. What is being asked here requires, if he had the political will – which plainly he does not – no effort on his part at all. There is no degree of difficulty.

1250 So the question of whether it is more or less difficult than the things he used to ask me, and I denied, simply does not arise because this requires no effort on his part.

1255 So I ask him again: is he willing to provide whatever information... [Inaudible] which simply requires him to instruct an official to send a copy to the hon. Member – and we accept what he said in his first intervention, that it might be subject to change. Fine, we understand and accept that.

1260 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think what is getting lost in the context of the debate, as it is going, is that the hon. Gentleman said a few minutes ago that we will discuss this internally and see whether... because we have found (Interjection) these numbers only when the hon. Gentleman asked the question and that has lead us to question whether the information we were provided before was correct or not.

So let us please leave it that we are going to consider further whether this information can be provided and the manner in which it is provided. It may be that, if we decide it should be provided, that it should be provided confidentially because it is one thing for hon. Members to be able to see how the estimates book predictions are going and another for everybody else to see every penny that is being spent in every Department before that is collated.

We have already, as the hon. Member knows, put online a lot of the statistics that were in this House, and it may be that the decision is made to give this information. It will also be put online, so that everybody can scrutinise it on an up-and-down basis, but I think that the prudent course is just to say that we are going to look at this. I know that there is another question on the Order Paper, Question no. 47 that the hon. Gentleman put to the Minister for Social Services and Equality, that deals with the same point and I think we should just leave it that we are going to consider further, before the next meeting next month, how this information can be shared, if it can be shared.

1270

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, we accept the Hon. Chief Minister's undertaking to consider the matter.

1275

Supported employment opportunities
Grants to employers and disabled persons

1280

Clerk: Question 14, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Employment state what type and conditions for employment grants will be made available to employers and disabled persons, in order to optimise supported employment opportunities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, there are presently 50 persons being assisted under the Vocational Training Scheme, sheltered/supported employment programme. These persons are receiving an allowance of between £250 and £450 per month. As from 1st February this year, under the announced future job strategy programme, they will receive £912.60, which is the standard minimum wage for full-time employment.

The consultation process with associated bodies and representatives on the future provision for persons requiring sheltered/supported employment assistance is at a very early stage. Future policy will be decided on the outcome of such a consultation process.

In the meantime, other persons in need of sheltered/supported employment will be incorporated into the Future Jobs Strategy programme, which is underway from 1st February.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

The hon. Member, the Minister opposite, seems to be saying that they are now about to start a process of consultation. I think those were his words. But would he give us at least an idea of what sort of scope of issues that will be discussed, if he has any outline, at least, for the issues that will go into the thinking?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, what we are going to do, Mr Speaker, we are going to pay people more money than they were getting before and continue with the provisions that exist, extended to people that are not included already, new cases brought to our attention and, at the same time, ask those who are involved in this field to put any ideas that they have got to us, as to any improvements that they would like to see.

It is not that we are going there with a preconceived idea of what needs to be done, other than improving their income. For example, the 50 people that are in the present programme are the 50 people who are already there on the 8th. They are being kept where they are and whether the circumstances under which they are working – many of them are working in Government departments or Government authorities or Government agencies and a few are in the private sector – whether there is any issue in relation to the environment in which they are working, which needs to be addressed. When we hear the views of those who are involved, we will act to put it right, if there is anything that needs to be improved or put right.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, what I was trying to get at, basically, was whether the thinking by the Government, obviously in consultation with other interested parties in relation to this future subsidy or employment grant, is going to be one which is earmarked for a specific period of time for that disabled person, in order to be able to allow the employer to absorb or take in or optimise that particular disabled person into employment, and whether that subsidy is going to be for a specific period of time, or depend on the condition of the disabled person, may need a level of subsidy for a much longer period of time, perhaps even during the entire employment life of that particular person, all depending, of course, on the degree of severity of the disabled person.

So I was trying to engage the Hon. Minister whether there is any thinking going on, when we talk about subsidies for disabled persons, as to whether the thinking by the Government is one where they are going to look at bringing professionals to be able to determine the level of severity of the disabled person and, in accordance with that, there will be some disabled persons, for instance, who may not need any subsidy at all. Just because they are a disabled person does not automatically mean you need a subsidy but, of course, there will be some disabled persons who need a level of subsidy and there may be some disabled persons who need a permanent level of subsidy. That was one of the issues that I was trying to engage with the Hon. Minister.

The other thing is, of course, given that this is one of their manifesto commitments in terms of employment grants, one of the things that would help disabled persons being able to get into the world of work, would be by giving the employer, perhaps, like they do in the UK, in fact and many other jurisdictions, a small amount of money to be able to do some small adjustments, refurbishments to be able to work in an environment that is able to be absorbed and allow a proper working space for disabled persons.

So the question that I am trying to put over to the Minister for Employment, which seems to say that he is going to consult about that, is whether he will at the end of that consultation process end up with particular criteria or structure in which disabled people will be analysed by the professionals in accordance with the levels of severity of their disability, will be able to get a subsidy depending on that and whether employers also will be able to get a certain amount of money for furniture, equipment, alterations that may be necessary for the disabled person, because if they do both things together, hand in hand, the possibility to absorb more disabled people into the world of work obviously is going to be much greater. So would that be part of the Government's thinking, Mr Speaker?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, we are paying the persons with disability, we are treating them no different from persons without disability but, as I say, they are getting a contract of employment with the Government in a wholly owned Government company and that wholly owned Government company will place them in a place where, at present, it is no different from the place where they are already; that is to say, the people that are there already, working either in the public or the private sector, who have been getting £450 per month, will instead get a salary paid by the Government, 100%, £912.60, which is the minimum wage that a worker should get. Therefore they will have a contract of employment with the same company that employs other people that do not have disabilities; they will be completely integrated in that system.

In addition to that, there are improvements in the working environment which can only be established by looking at each one of the 50 cases; and all the new ones that may come up, which the employer needs financial assistance with, it will be provided. There is no question of there being a limited amount of money available for this and, when that money is used, that is it: we will provide what is required and each case will be looked at in the context of what is required. As I have already told the hon. Member and as he must know, because the people were there already when he was in office, many of them are working in Government offices or in an environment where they have been there for many years.

I cannot imagine that we are going to find that there was only very detrimental, before 9th December, that was being ignored by the previous administration, and that we need to put right. I would expect that since everybody that is there now, was there before, if there was something seriously wrong with their environments, somebody before me would have put it right. But, certainly, if there are things that still need to be done, they will be done and it does not matter what they cost. It will happen. Whether there is or there is not, I will not know until I discuss it with the people who are working in that environment or the relatives of the persons with disabilities who are in sheltered employment and they make representations to me about what we can do to improve the quality of their life at work.

The answer, basically, is that we are there to provide what is required, if it has not already been provided by him before, when he was there. That is all there is to it. I would expect that most of it would have been done already, because it is not a new situation, it is a situation that has already been happening and the main difference is that they were treated before under the VTS scheme, as if they were being trained for a job when, in fact, the reality of it is that what they need is a subsidy in that job and we are going beyond that stage of simply subsidising part of their income and saying to the employer you pay for the other part. We are saying, we will pay you the full standard minimum wage that the law provides.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, but I am still not quite clear, or perhaps the hon. Member has not sufficiently explained his point. I take on board the fact that he is saying that he is going to pay the minimum wage. I take that on board, but what I was trying to get at, perhaps, is whether the payment of the minimum wage is for a specified period of time or not, because the point I was trying to make is, what is the scheme?

Is the scheme depending on having analysed the needs and necessities of disabled persons, one which will say, right, this particular disabled person has a chance to go into the world of work, provided that all these criteria have been met by the professionals and, therefore, the first year will be a payment of the minimum wage and at the end of the minimum wage – and I am talking hypothetically – it would be the employer who absorbs the payment, I suppose, to the Government through the scheme. I am not sufficiently clear, that is why I am trying to ask further supplementary questions, to be able to say whether there is a finite period of time for the payment of the minimum wage or whether there is, perhaps, a scaling off period after the final period of time in which the minimum wage is going to be paid. That is the first point I was trying to make.

The second point I am trying to make and it brings to mind, perhaps, we do have in the office of employment, in the Employment Office, we do have a disabled person who was employed when I was first Minister for Employment, when we got in, and one of the successes for her was that, long before she was sent to work in the Department of Employment, was because the handling of that process was one in which, first, the occupational physiotherapist went to assess the working environment, had several meetings with the management there and there was a lot of alterations as to the manner upon which that particular person was going to do a number of tasks, including the design of new software packages to be able to help her in that particular work.

The point I am making is that to be able to make it successful to some disabled person, it requires not just, necessarily, an employment placement officer, it also requires other people from other parts of the Government like the occupational therapist, who will have to determine, amongst others, the needs of that particular person.

1395

What I am suggesting to the hon. Member, given that he said he is going to enter into a period of consultation is that perhaps this is an area that needs developing further to making sure that those people who are registered unemployed disabled are willing and able to try and find work, that as much help as possible be given to them by ensuring that the professionals give a helping hand. That is the point. Will he, therefore, take that on board in the consultation process?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, all the things that he says happened, have happened already.

It is not that there are 50 people on the 9th that were there on the 8th, so the person in the department that he says had this assessment done is one of the 50 and, presumably, it was done for the other 49 as well. There is no new case. Therefore, I assume that all these ideas that he has about how it should be done, are the ideas that were already in practice, being implemented when he was there. If they were not then, certainly, having suggested that they should be done, even though they were not being done, I will find out, case by case, what has been done.

All I can tell him is that, at the moment, what is happening is that the case, for example, in the department that he has mentioned, will now be getting a contract of employment, which did not exist before and that that contract of employment will be permanent and for life. Therefore, the salary will be paid, which is a salary that I have mentioned, and there are many hundreds of people in Gibraltar who get the minimum wage and, therefore, what we are doing is making sure that somebody, because they have a disability, does not get at least less than the minimum wage, at the very least that.

In the process of training, they are able to take on a type of job which pays more, then again, they will be treated exactly the same. The whole idea is that, in the programme that we have got, there is not a section for people with disability or for ones without disability. They are all treated the same way. Within the requirements which are determined by the nature of the disability in each and every one of these cases, if there is something that is not being done that ought to be done and that we have recommended to us, it will be done, whatever the cost.

I cannot say more than that, but there is no limit to the amount of money we will provide, if somebody

1430 shows us that someone with a disability is at a serious disadvantage because of something in the environment that ought to be there is not there but, at the moment, nobody has made representations to me in respect of the 50 people that are there and the only change at the moment is that they are exactly where they were before, in exactly the same circumstances as before, but with a contract of employment and the minimum wage. That is the only thing that has happened to date.

1435 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the point I am making is that, of course, money is important to try and get disabled persons into work. In relation to the 50, it is a mixed bag. It is an ad hoc process. Some of them did find another professional who assisted them when they got employment, others did not. The point I am making is that there is room for improvement here and that is why I keep saying to him that he should consult with the professionals in the field, in order to make sure that, when we do have a registered unemployed person in the Employment Service, that that particular – all disabled persons are monitored to the extent of their needs and to the circumstances which they can then fulfil by working for an employer by looking at the work environment. I think that there is a lot of room for improvement, if we bring the professionals into the field. That is only what I am asking him.

1440 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, may I just ask a short supplementary so that the hon. Member might... [Inaudible]. Surely what the hon. Member says about Government, he cannot mean that, for example, if there were a disabled person that works or wants to work in a building in which there is no lift and three staircases and there are three floors and staircases, he is not suggesting that he is going to install a lift in the building. So there has to be – presumably that person will be encouraged to be redeployed for work somewhere else. He does not literally mean, surely, that he will spend as much money as is necessary to accommodate every disabled person that wants to work in every physical environment? Surely that would not be viable?

1450 Hon. J J Bossano: The disabled persons, any more than people who are not disabled, do not live in a happy world where they can choose the job they want and they get it. They are provided by the Employment Service with the opportunity of working in a particular area by agreement with the employer which, in the bulk of the cases, are public sector employers. If, in any one of those areas, the advice that we get is that something needs to be done, which has not been done before – and I would expect that that would be rare, rather than common, because if the 50 people that were there already in circumstances which are very bad, I would have expected that something must be very wrong, must have been happening before with all these professionals having their input.

1455 So I would expect that it would be the odd case, rather than the normal case that they might need something extra.

1460 Hon. P R Caruana: I accept that but, in that odd case – I can illustrate it with an example, if you like – he is not saying that there is no limit to the amount of money he would spend to accommodate one individual in one particular workplace.

1465 For example, this is not an example – the lift at 6 Convent Place does not go all the way to the top floor. As he knows, it stops at the Chief Minister's floor. If there was a disabled person that wanted to be redeployed to the office of the Chief Secretary upstairs where the lift does not reach, he does not mean, does he – and I am just asking what he means by the no limit point – he is not saying that to accommodate that particular person in that particular work opportunity/place, he would extend the lift just to accommodate that person, or would he say to that person look, find a post in a department of Government where there is a lift or the premises are suitable?

1470 Hon. J J Bossano: There is no reason for the hon. Member to have to ask that question, because I have not said there is no limit to the money we will provide for anything that any disabled person wants. That is not what I said. I said, there is no limit to the money we will provide, if we are advised that there is something in the working environment of that person.

1475 It is not that that person says well, until the GSD lost the election, I was happy to go to the third floor, but now that the GSLP is in I want the fourth floor, and I want the lift to go up, but if the person says on the third floor where I was, they did not provide me with adequate access and there should be adequate access, then the problem –

Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member, if he will allow me to clarify, the hon. Member, is not saying that he will guarantee access to all employment environments, to all disabled persons under the scheme.

1485 What he is saying is, presumably, you would not be there in the first place now, if the environment was not suitable. If something turns up for those people, it will be corrected. He is not saying to guarantee case no. 65 – we are at case 50 now – to guarantee a disabled person in the future opportunity to work in every environment, we will make sure that he is not unable to work in a place for lack of environmental support. I accept that that would be different from simply accommodating the environmental needs of existing placees where they are.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is why, Mr Speaker, I have been saying throughout that I am talking about the position of the 50 that we have got and I would expect that if there was an obvious thing that could be done to improve, it would have happened. Therefore, I would expect that things that cannot be done and have not been done would be rare, rather than common, for those 50. When no. 51 comes along, we will not put them in the wrong environment, and then spend a lot of money putting the environment right, we will put them in the right environment from day one.

Hon. P R Caruana: Except, Mr Speaker there are, as he knows, EU directives and other international treaties on the rights of disabled people. This is why he needs to be careful about the commitments that he enters into with existing placees, because there are circumstances in which employers do have to make all their workplaces accessible to disabled people to avoid discrimination. This is a very expensive and, potentially, a very onerous regime and I was not challenging the hon. Member on that, I just wanted to see what the parameters, or the extent, of what he had said and I think he has clarified that.

Government companies in the construction sector
Number of contracts of employment terminated

1510 Clerk: Question 15, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many workers employed by Government companies involved in the construction sector have had their contracts of employment terminated or notice of termination has been given to them since the General Election, identifying the company and the number of employees relating to each company and how many of these employees are resident in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1520 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this with Question 16, Mr Speaker.

Private companies in the construction sector
Number of contracts of employment terminated

Clerk: Question 16.

1530 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many workers employed by private contractors working in construction projects funded by the Government, as at 8th December 2011, have been notified since that date (either directly or by notification to their employer company) that their services are no longer or will no longer be required on those sites, identifying each site and the number of workers relating to each one and how many workers are resident in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1540 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, during the period from 8th December 2011 to Monday 16th January 2012, the Employment Service records show a total of 283 persons whose employment contract was terminated in the construction industry by 39 different employers. Of those terminated, 31 were resident workers.

From the information made available to the Employment Service, it is not possible to identify on which particular construction project or construction site these workers were employed when their contracts were terminated.

1545 In respect of the workers employed by Government companies, the only company involved in the construction sector is the one known as Gibraltar General Construction Co. Ltd. which was set up by the previous administration to complete the Government housing projects following the collapse of Haymills and Bruesa.

1550 This company has informed the Employment Service that 42 workers, of whom 14 are resident workers, have been given notice, but their termination of contract have not yet reached the Department and therefore they are still not recorded as unemployed.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: Out of the 83 terminations by 39 employers, can the hon. Member state how many of the redundancies of those workers have been caused by the freezing of projects on instructions of the Government?

1560 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, the 283 from the 39 private contractors that we have in the department simply say that their employment has been terminated, but they do not give any indication of the site where they were working.

1565 In fact, it is possible that some construction companies may not have terminated the person from the site where the work ceased because they have used the last-in, first-out and people get shifted from one site to another. If they follow the procedure, which is normal, which is that the most recent employee is the first one to be made redundant, so it may be that a site has been closed down because we have not continued with the work as Government and the work on that site has been moved to another site and somebody else has been made redundant.

1570 There is no indication in the termination of employment by the employer, which sites the person was on. I would say that the fact that it involves 39 private contractors means that a lot of this took place before we took the decision that some of the jobs that had people on site in the expectation that they would continue, for example, the tunnel, I would not have thought that there would be anywhere near that number of subcontractors on that site, for the job that was being done there, but this is simply my speculation. In terms of official accurate information, the only information that I can tell you is the number of employers and the number of employees, because there is nothing else that comes in on the termination.

1575 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Member saying this, that he does not know, as the Minister for Employment, how many redundancies his Government's actions in terms of freezing works on sites, or terminating work on sites, has caused in terms of redundancy and numbers of people that have been made redundant?

1580 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is asking me as Minister for Employment.

As Minister for Employment, I am giving him the statistics recorded by the Employment Service, which is the information he has asked for and the information that I have given him. As regards the fact that these numbers reflect or do not reflect the stoppage of work, there is no information in identifying the individuals. There is nothing.

1585 When a contract is given out by the Government now, as it was before, it is not the case that the contractor provides the names of the people who were working on each job, nor do people stay on a particular site all the time, nor are people necessarily laid off from the site on which that contractor may have had some workers on one site that is no longer functioning and has other sites and other contracts from the Government or from another client to which they move people, so it is not possible to say which of the individuals that have been terminated, were actually the people that were working on the different sites or the different projects. That is not information that is available to the Employment Service.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it not extraordinary that the hon. Gentleman is saying that, as a Government, you take a decision to stop work on a particular site or sites and he does not even bother to ask, or to find out, how many redundancies they are causing by that action? Is it not extraordinary, Mr Speaker?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether he expects you to answer whether you think that is extraordinary, but if he is asking me, I do not think it is extraordinary. I do not think it is extraordinary that the Government should say, look, we have got £20 million to carry on with the tunnel. It cost £55 million, we are not prepared to borrow more money to carry on with that tunnel.

I find it quite extraordinary that there should be a situation where you set up a company, as a Government, to take on the workers from Haymills and Bruesa and, four years down the road, you are still having the people that were made redundant by Haymills and Bruesa and there are, literally, potentially hundreds of workers in Gibraltar, resident in Gibraltar, that I have got registered as unemployed. That is what I think is quite extraordinary, that we should have so much work for outsiders, and so little work for our own people. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, last time I read about parliamentary procedures, questions are supposed to be asked via Mr Speaker, but, Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman feel comfortable with the fact that one of his very first acts as Minister for Employment is to actually cause the redundancy of some 240 people?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, it is not true. What the hon. Member says is not true. It is not true that I have caused these redundancies of 240 people.

I have just told him that the Government company has notified the Employment Service that they have given notice of termination – which has not yet happened – and the notice period is not yet over, 242 workers, of whom 40 are local residents and they will be at the top of the list for getting re-employed.

Of the 283, the 42 are not included. I cannot tell him how many of the 283 were people working on Government contracts, nor can I tell him how many of the 39 employers were on Government contracts, but I can tell him one thing, that the Government will not, in fact, spend money on doing things that it does not think provide value for money on the basis of keeping people in work when they should be re-employed in areas that are carrying out work that the Government wants done. Therefore, I have not the slightest doubt that every single resident construction worker will be back in work on another project in a very short time.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation, Mr Speaker, to that, can the hon. Gentleman confirm that all residents of Gibraltar, regardless of nationality, who have been made redundant and wish to avail themselves of the new arrangements under the Future Jobs Strategy, will be able to do so?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, every resident worker will have an opportunity to enter into the employment scheme being started by the Government, irrespective of nationality.

Future Jobs Strategy Date of commencement

Clerk: Question 17, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment confirm that the trainee employment contract scheme, or the so-called Future Jobs Strategy, will be in place, at the latest, by 1st February 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question, together with questions 18 to 20 and 22 to 24.

Future Jobs Strategy

1670

1675

1690

Clerk: Question 23.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment provide a breakdown of those who have applied to sign up to the Future Jobs Strategy by the following categories: (a) those who are unemployed (b) those who are in existing vocational training schemes (c) those who are in existing NVQ vocational traineeship schemes (d) those trainees undertaking any other kind of courses and (e) those who are in sheltered employment schemes?

Future Jobs Strategy
Origin of applications

1705 Clerk: Question 24.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many people have applied to sign up to the so-called Future Jobs Strategy directly with his department and how many have signed up, having had their applications submitted to his department via the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party?

1710

Clerk: Answer, the Hon, the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the trainee employment contracts are expected to be in place by 1st February 2012, as previously announced.

I can also confirm that it will be open to all registered unemployed persons, all vocational trainees, all school leavers and residents on casual or supply terms. The new arrangements will also extend to trainees undertaking the adult nursing diploma.

Initially, though, it will be the current vocational trainees, together with those in sheltered/supported employment, and those undertaking specific vocational training, like the nursing diploma, some 400+ in total, who are currently paid an allowance between £250 and £450 per month, that will be offered such training employment contracts on 1st February.

I can also confirm that all trainee employment contracts will entitle trainees to enjoy all the rights afforded by employment legislation, like other workers have, including the right to the standard minimum wage of £912.60 for full-time employment.

There are no applications as such. As the scheme progresses, potential candidates will be identified from the groups mentioned and given the opportunity to join once the initial placements have been completed.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Member said that, initially, it will be the trainees and several others. Is he saying that, effectively, the scheme is going to commence for trainees and people in sheltered employment on 1st February and then, later on, in relation to others? Is that the position?

Hon. J J Bossano: The position is that on 1st February everybody that was there in January under the vocational training scheme in the placement where they are already, will be, in fact, given contracts the last week in January and take up employment on 1st February. That is expected to be between 400 and 450.

1735

As the scheme progresses during the year, there will be a movement of people from the Government employment company into the areas where they are trained. In some cases the time that they require in the new Government company will be, in fact, quite short, because they have already had a long period beforehand under the scheme that was there already and those schemes – not all that many, but there are a number – where the employers have indicated that they are satisfied with the training that has been provided and the way that people have successfully completed that training and that there is a full-time job for them.

1740

From that moment on, the placements will only be in areas where there is a job guarantee at the end. If the employer does not guarantee the job, then we will not place somebody in that area, unless we are doing it because we have got somebody else that is interested in taking people if they are trained, but is not able to provide the training themselves. For example, in areas we might be getting people who are coming into the market as labourers from the construction industry, and we have identified that there is a shortage of plant operators, forklift truck drivers and that sort of thing and there is at the moment a very high level of importation of labour and very few local skills. In those areas we may be actually doing the training in one construction company and eventually, during the course of the year, people will take employment with a different one, but the majority of the placements, the employers that we are talking to will be the ones that will provide the jobs during the course of the year. As people come off a scheme, other people will come in.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, I do not think the hon. Gentleman has answered my question. He has answered part of it. Initially, on 1st February, the scheme is going to commence for those people, as I understand from the answer that the hon. Gentleman has given us, for those people who are in existing DTS schemes or additional vocational training or taking NVQs. That is what he said. And, of course, people in sheltered employment. He estimates that those are 400 to 450 people, but he has already said, in answer to my question, that it is also going to be open to people who are unemployed.

1760 He may recall, from his manifesto, no doubt, that he had a hand in writing that particular chapter of the manifesto, that the figure that was quoted in the manifesto was, as at the last Election, there were 421 people who were unemployed in Gibraltar. In relation to those unemployed people who want to take advantage of the Future Jobs Strategy, when are they going to be allowed to commence or enter the scheme?

1765 Hon. J J Bossano: They will not all start on 1st February, that is quite obvious.

The scheme starts from 1st February and the probable timescale is that many, if not most of them, will be in the scheme within three months of the first ones coming in on 1st February. We expect to be able to take people through the scheme, so that by, say, June or July, most of the people that are in a position to take advantage of this opportunity and be put in permanent jobs, will be in the scheme. Therefore, that scheme will start with 450 and, during the course of the next financial year, will grow up to something like 800 or 900.

1770 The potential number of people that are in the labour market, when we take into account that people who are registered as unemployed and people who have lapsed... simply because the Employment Service has not been very successful till now in placing people in employment because the jobs that are registered are filled before they are registered in a percentage of something like 90% – which will not be happening in the future – and there are something like 530 people on supplementary benefits or social assistance, of whom at least half are considered to be able to take up some form of part-time employment.

1775 That is the total size of the potential market for labour, which we hope to be able to bring into obtaining skills and training and have employment. How soon we can go through the whole of the 1,200 is a matter of speculation at this stage, but certainly it will start with 450 and it will grow – and in some cases, of course, the growth will be matched by people moving out of the scheme into jobs at the end that the training has obtained for them.

1780 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when the hon. Gentleman says three months, June, July for the unemployed, can he also confirm that by June, at the latest July, all those residents, and casuals on supply terms, will also be able to avail themselves of the Future Jobs Strategy?

1785 Hon. J J Bossano: I cannot, Mr Speaker, tell him when the whole exercise will be completed. We are starting the exercise on 1st February.

1790 Once we start the exercise, the people that we have got in employment, the employers we are talking to, the people that we will be replacing in the labour market... is a question of the supply and demand being managed by the Employment Service in a way that has never been done before. As we go along, we will no doubt find ways in which we can improve the effectiveness of the scheme, but, certainly, I think the hon. Member will see an improvement in the numbers of residents in employment from the moment that we start the new process in February.

1795 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does this not represent a watering down of the much heralded and vaunted Future Jobs Strategy that is outlined in their manifesto. In their manifesto, the hon. Gentleman opposite guaranteed that it was going to commence on 1st February this year: not only did he guarantee that the scheme was going to start for everybody on 1st February this year, but that there would be ‘guaranteed employment’ for everybody at the end of those three years. Does he not accept that what he is now saying is actually a renegeing and a watering down of his commitments in the manifesto?

1805 Mr Speaker, I am telling him that there will be 450 people in Gibraltar – residents of Gibraltar, the majority Gibraltarians, the majority under 25, but also older people with families to support – who will be getting £912 instead of £450, which they would not have had if he had been in my place. So what is there to renege about?

1810 On day 1... the scheme will start when we said it would start – a difficult enough target. And for somebody who, a few months ago, used to say ‘You haven’t asked me about the manifesto, this is work in progress’, well, look, certainly I can tell him that the manifesto will not be completed on 2nd February. That I can tell him.

The manifesto will start being implemented, as far as this is concerned, on 1st February, and I, certainly, am totally committed to ensure that every single Gibraltar resident that, as a result of the policies of the Government, has been faced with an avalanche of competition from outside Gibraltar, will not be put in that situation from 1st February on.

1815 The result will speak for itself and I have no doubt that everybody who is going into the scheme now, and will go into the scheme in the future, will know that if they had won the election none of this would have happened because what, in fact, he accused me of was being a Soviet-style programme... putting everybody in jobs. And now, because I am not doing all on day 1, he is complaining about it! He is wanting me to be even more Soviet than he is expecting me to be...

1820 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, perhaps I ought to correct my statement about the scheme being Soviet in nature. Bearing in mind what he now says, it is more capitalist than Soviet, because he is really reneging on what he has said in his manifesto commitment.

1825 But, Mr Speaker, at a meeting on 16th January in the John Mackintosh Hall with trainees that were qualified for this scheme, the hon. Gentleman said:

‘We do not expect to keep anyone for longer than three years.’

1830 Can he explain to the House why is that?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know what meeting the hon. Member is talking about.

1835 Hon. D A Feetham: The meeting in the John Mackintosh Hall last week was widely reported in the Chronicle. In fact, I have brought the article here if the hon. Gentleman wants me to pass it over to him so that it can jog his memory.

1840 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not know about ‘jogging’ my memory. The fact that the Chronicle has said something does not mean that my memory needs jogging. I do not know who reported in the Chronicle and I do not know what it is that I am supposed to have said that he wants me to comment on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, did he have the meeting, Mr Speaker, and did he make the comment?

1845 Hon. J J Bossano: We do not expect to keep anyone for longer than three years. It is true that, from the beginning, when the scheme was set up, we do not expect that the training for anybody would be a training longer than three years. For example, if the trainee is going into the construction training centre... (Interjection)

What is the point the hon. Member is asking?

1850 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I accept that what the hon. Gentleman’s policy is – training for three years, but even that is a watering down – but take it at its highest, three years, what the hon. Gentleman appears to have said in the meeting, which has been widely reported in the press, is that you do not expect to keep people for longer than those three years, the training period. Can he say to this House why that is the case?

1855 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I cannot say to this House why it is the case that the Chronicle says that I said something that I did not say.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, does the hon. Member expect to keep people for longer than three years?

1860 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not a case of keeping people for longer than three years. We do not expect any training programme to require more than three years. That is the whole point.

The hon. Member must understand that he has [Inaudible] vocational trainees on £450 a month and, in some cases, they have been there for six years, which should have been sufficient to train them to be brain surgeons! We are not going to keep people there for the rest of their lives, supposedly training, at the minimum wage. The training will be the training that is required to provide them with the skills to do the job.

1865 There is not watering down. We want people to have skills so that they are not on the dole and others from the outside get taken, on the excuse, by private sector employers, that the skills do not exist. So we are going to make sure that the skills exist – where the skills are required. Three years: the training programme will be three years.

1870 Where the skills require three months, the training programme will be three months. If somebody has got a driving licence and a van licence and requires a plant operator's licence and that takes a month, or two months, or three months, that is the training they will get and the job they will get at the end.

If somebody comes in and says 'I want to do NVQ level 1, 2 and 3 as a carpenter', then that is what will take three years.

1875 So it is not that we are saying to people, 'Well, we'll only keep you three years, and then sack you' – because that is what he is trying to imply – the nature of the training programme, in our estimation, should not take longer than three years in respect of any of the skills that we have identified require training. If there was a skill that needed more than three years – and I am not aware of any, but if there was – then the programme would carry on longer than three years. There is not a time limit on the training, the time limit is on what is required to produce the skill that the labour market currently says is not available in Gibraltar on the basis of the analysis that has been made of the jobs that go to residents and the jobs that go to outsiders.

1880 In effect, what the programme will achieve is the creation of a pool of skills here, which does not exist and which should exist, so that we rely less on imported labour.

1885 Hon. D A Feetham: Will these people be guaranteed employment after the three year... or after their training has been completed?

1890 Hon. J J Bossano: Everybody will be guaranteed employment because there will be no training unless a job has already been identified. We have made that clear from the beginning. It is not that the people are being given skills and then said, 'Well, now you've got the skill, now that you've come out of the construction training centre you've got a piece of paper that says you've got an NVQ and now you go and look for a job.'

1895 I can tell the hon. Member that the analysis we have made of that system is that the number of people that finished up in the trade that they learnt is miniscule, compared to the numbers that have been through the system. We are not going to put money, time and effort into training people for something for which there is no job.

1900 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if these individuals are not offered jobs in the private sector after their training, would the hon. Member confirm and give a categorical assurance here to this House today that those people will then be employed permanently by Employment Training Company Ltd or another relevant company?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, because the answer to his question – which he ought to know, unless he just wants to send some message out which is completely false and misleading – is that their training will not start.

1905 People will not be asked to train for something for which there is not already a commitment on employment. The identification of the job precedes the training. It is not that we train people first and then say, 'Now let's find out who will employ them.'

1910 Hon. D A Feetham: That is an absolutely nonsensical statement.

Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member not agree with me that it is not possible to have a situation where, in the private sector, a company guarantees a job to somebody after three years' training, when you do not even know what is going to happen economically, either to Gibraltar or to that company, during that period. Isn't that the case, Mr Speaker?

1915 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether it is the case or not, but it has nothing to do with what we were talking about, because he has now come and said nobody can guarantee that after three years, as if three years was now the minimum period that they have to train and, therefore, everybody has to tell me who they are going to employ in three years. He may think it is nonsensical and he may think it is impossible. I can well believe it, because presumably, if they thought it was a good idea and possible, they would have done it.

1920 I am being charitable to the hon. Member in thinking that it was their ignorance of the possibility of doing something that had prevented them from doing it, and not that they did not care about the situation that they have been creating in the last 16 years of increasing Gibraltarian unemployment and increasing frontier workers, which is what we are going to put right and which every single statistic from now on will show we are putting right.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am just going to read from the hon. Gentleman's manifesto and ask him a supplementary on all of all this:

1930

'Future Job Strategy: there will be, from 1st February, a new dedicated training strategy with a maximum of three years and a guaranteed full-time job on completion.'

1935

Will the hon. Gentleman confirm that if, for whatever reason – as I explained, because of the economic outlook of the company or Gibraltar, or whatever – those individuals that form part of his scheme who are not taken into full-time employment by a private company, will be employed by the Government through a Government-owned company: yes, or no?

1940

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I will not guarantee that, because that is precisely what he falsely accused me of wanting to do during the Election campaign, when he said I was going to create an unmanageable situation of masses of people in the public sector with no real jobs to do. What he is asking me to do is to give him a guarantee to do something, which is not what is going to happen because what I will guarantee him is that everybody who terminates the training will have a job. That I will guarantee you.

Hon. D A Feetham: How is he going to guarantee to everybody a job?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that if he does not know how I am going to do it, I am not here to explain to him how I am going to do it. I am here to tell him that that is what is going to be achieved, and he can either believe me now or wait until it happens, in which case he will have to believe me then.

All I can tell him is that for a Government that talked about work in progress and talked about the Opposition not having the right to tell the Government to do things that they did not have in their manifesto, all those ideas seem to have disappeared overnight because, by their reckoning of their views of the last 16 years, he has no right to demand explanations of things that he would not have done if he had been elected.

I am telling him we will deliver, I am telling him I will deliver, but if he wants to know how I am going to deliver, then he should have stayed in the GSLP. (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the secret economic plan or derivations thereof. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, isn't it extraordinary? Doesn't the hon. Gentleman think it is extraordinary that a party that constantly accused the then administration, our Government, of not complying with manifesto commitments... that it has taken the hon. Gentleman barely a month to renege on one of their largest commitments contained in their manifesto at the last Election? Isn't it extraordinary, Mr Speaker? (Interjection)

1965

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member was telling the truth, it would be extraordinary, but it is not. We are not reneging on anything, and I can tell the hon. Member that the 450 who will collect £912.60 in February would not agree with him and the many more people who will be entering into the system after that will not agree with him.

1970

If the hon. Member thinks that reneging on the manifesto is not completing the whole manifesto after five weeks, then by that criteria they have done nothing but renege since 1996.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, as I have understood the Hon. Mr Bossano, he has said that he is starting as of 1st February with the 400 or 450 trainees, people who, in January, were in the training scheme and, of course, he is right, they will be very happy having this sum – someone earning four hundred and something and now he is going to earn eight hundred and something, albeit that he now has to pay tax and social insurance, which before he did not, but he is still going to be net considerably better off. Those will indeed be very happy and I must congratulate the hon. Member for the speed with which he pays for his votes.

(Interjections)

But, Mr Speaker, the point is that he may want to argue with us about what his manifesto commitment meant, but does he not understand that, apart from the 450 who are going to be very happy immediately, there are another four or five hundred unemployed and... Sorry, there was... (Interjections) Yes, the overall... the difference between the roughly 1,000 – 900 or 1,000 – overall and the 450 who think – wrongly, it appears, regardless of who says what during the Election campaign – who wrongly believe that they have a commitment from the GSLP Liberal Alliance Government to provide them with this £900-odd job – well, more if you are a graduate – under this scheme for this business.

The questions are not designed to expect him to do it today or tomorrow, or all on the 1st, but simply to establish that the scheme that he has devised indeed extends to those people. He has said that it does, but he has said that they will not be beneficiaries from the 1st, as I understand him, but by... I think he has said within three months the unemployed – which may be whatever the number turns out to be – will be on the scheme. I think that I have correctly understood what he has said.

1990

He has also said – and this is my supplementary – that one of the big differences here, apart from they earn more money, is that these guys are not ‘trainees’, although they are being trained, but their status is not trainee. Their status is full employee. So these people come into this company and they will be trained, although they are full employees.

1995

I think what the hon. Member has just said to my colleague, Mr Feetham, is that they will be let into the company unless they come with a letter from some employer – which could be a public sector employer or a private sector employer – saying, ‘I will employ you when Mr Bossano’s training company has finished training you.’

2000

Given that they will be employees of the Government Training Company, which he has said he wants to use to create a labour pool, if for whatever reason the employer, for example, simply reneges – to put it at its most simple – on his commitment to take on the employee – for good, bad or indifferent reasons, simply says when the time comes, ‘I will not employ this person’ – does he not accept that he then has an employee of a Government company that he can only do one of two things with? He can either sack him and say, ‘Well, I took you on thinking that this other person was going to employ you and they have reneged, so off you go’; or offer them permanent employment, keep them on yourself in the company. In other words, because they are employees and not trainees, they are on your lap.

So, if whatever you thought, the Government thought, was going to happen to take them off your lap does not happen, they are your employees and that status can either be continued or discontinued. If you continue it, you are guaranteeing them employment, and if you do not continue it, you have got to sack them.

2010

So that is my first supplementary: does the hon. Member agree that that would be the position in that scenario? Does he have a concern, or not, that there is a danger that people will see this vehicle as a pre-entry into a public sector employer, in the knowledge that if the private sector does not take them off your hands they stay as employees of a public sector company and that no-one is going to want to be placed with a private sector company because everyone is going to want to go to a public sector placing because, that way, they see scope for staying in the public sector, thus frustrating what the hon. Member had in his mind when he devised the scheme? In other words, everyone will want to go into a public sector place, which was really the case under the Youth Training Scheme already, as he well knows. Everybody wants to place with a public sector employer, not with a private sector employer. Does he consider that these dangers may exist, and does he have these concerns?

Hon. J J Bossano: We have had no indication of that to date. When we put the scheme into place and it starts working. If there are problems of that nature we will solve those problems.

2025

I can tell the hon. Member that we have not found resistance from employers to what we are doing and that in fact there are people who are volunteering to co-operate with us in the system, and that is a very encouraging (Interjection) early start to it. Therefore, I think that we are going to be successful in achieving what we set out and, if we are, I hope the hon. Member will celebrate that as much as we will.

At this stage, all I can tell him is that what is starting on 1st February is programmed to continue during the next 12 months and that the results will be obvious, verifiable and for the benefit of residents of Gibraltar, and that therefore it ought to be something that everybody in this House should welcome.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I should say, just by way of preamble to what will be my last supplementary, that the Members on this side of the House, much as they will celebrate if he finds employment for everybody in Gibraltar who is unemployed or a trainee, we have grave, grave scepticism to the point where we think it is fraud in design, this idea that employers are going to commit in advance of so-called training delivered by this company to employ somebody after they have been trained without knowing how they are going to emerge from that training, not least when you include the 400 unemployed people who include some of the most unemployable people in Gibraltar, in terms of the difficulty for one reason or another.

Of course, the hon. Member will find employers willing to co-operate with them – that has always been the case – but he will not find co-operative employers, in the private sector at least, in the thousand... well, 900-1,000, 850-1,000 people who fall into the three categories to which the policy is going to be extended in due course. Does he not recognise that, in those circumstances, there is a danger, which is how people generally have interpreted the effect of the scheme? Whether it was the intended effect is another question, but the effect of the scheme has been interpreted that, effectively, of these 850 or a thousand people, those who are not taken on by the private sector will end up with permanent jobs in this Government-owned company.

We certainly have that concern, which is not to be confused with a wish that it would succeed. Of course we wish that it would succeed, but we do believe it has that fundamental flaw that it actually discourages people from wanting to go to the private sector because they see it as a possible route to stay under the protective umbrella of the public sector which, as he well knows, is the preferred employment option of most Gibraltarians, and certainly of the category that we are discussing here. Does he not have that concern, and will he make a statement in this House when he sees signs that that might be the case?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not have the concern and I will make the statement.

Clerk: Question 21, the Hon. –

Hon. D A Feetham: I had not, in fact, finished.

Mr Speaker: I thought we had rather exhausted the subject, but I will allow the hon. Member one supplementary on that.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has been asked supplementaries about one or two of these Questions. He has bunched, I think, it is about eight questions or seven questions into one answer and he has not actually, for example, answered the Question in relation to the applications received in the GSLP. He has not touched upon that.

But that is not the first supplementary question. The first supplementary question was: has the hon. Gentleman estimated the actual cost of the Future Job Strategy on a monthly basis?

A Member: Or annual?

Hon. D A Feetham: Or an annual basis, of course.

Hon. J J Bossano: The cost for the two months of this financial year will be of the order of £1 million, with 500 people at £10,000 a year.

Hon. P R Caruana: That is the gross cost, Mr Speaker. Not the tax and all of that.

Hon. J J Bossano: The gross cost, yes. It is two months and not a full year, but that is, for the numbers that are coming in at the beginning, what the cost in a year would be.

In terms of the applications, there are no applications. I have already answered that. I have told him that the people are being selected and that the people will be identified and will be offered a contract in a training programme which is programmed to produce a skilled person with a job at the end.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member... Mr Speaker, allow me to ask, then... So an unemployed

2090 person – not on 1st February, because he is not ready, but after 1st February, March, April, May, June, July – an unemployed person cannot go and say, ‘Hi, look, I love Mr Bossano’s job strategy policy. I want to apply to join that strategy.’ The answer will be, ‘No, go and find yourself – or we will help you find – an employer that will commit to employing you at the end of your training, and only if you or we can find such an employer will we let you into this job strategy scheme.’

Is that the position?

2095 Hon. J J Bossano: No, that is not the position.

The position is that we have got the jobs already identified and there will be more identified, so the pool of skills in the economy and the pool of skills in the unemployed people who want to become employed are going to be matched. They are going to be matched because we are matching what is there with what is needed, and therefore the programme, as it progresses, will take people from the unemployment list and say to them, ‘Look, we’ve got a job for you, but the person that is giving you the job needs you first to go through this training. You will learn to do this and you will learn to do the other, and then the employer will take you on.’

So we are doing all the work.

2105 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see. So, subject to that, and because you have already done all that work, as of right now every unemployed person can go to your Department and ask to participate in the scheme, to get a job, because you have already matched the skills and you have already found job opportunities. So, as of now, all the 400-odd registered Gibraltarians – or others, because this is not just Gibraltarians... any resident person who is unemployed in Gibraltar... Question: can he or she, as of now, go and participate in this scheme to have their skill matched with one of the vacancies that you have identified?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, the initiative is not taken by the person; the initiative is taken by us.

Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see. So, you pick and choose.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: No, we do not pick and choose. It is not the case that we ask people who did you vote for, and if they voted for him we say, ‘You cannot go.’ The commitment, which I have already answered, is that it will apply to everybody.

The 450 that are starting have not been selected because of who they vote for; they have been selected because they are already there and they are already in a position to transfer from something that was there into something that is going to be there, which is an improvement on what was there.

2125 The hon. Member may try and pick as many holes as he can think of picking, even before the system starts, which puts in doubt how much he would want it to succeed. I think he seems to be keener to see it failing than succeeding.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not picking holes. I am trying to understand how the hon. Member’s flagship policy is intended to work. I have to say that the hon. Member opposite is not doing a very good job of explaining it, because he contradicts himself constantly.

What we have now established, will he confirm, is that there is no job guarantee for any... The 450 trainees that were there in January will get this new form of employment contract on 1st February. For everybody else, from 450 up to about 1,000 or 900... these people should not go to the Employment Service and say, ‘Look, I read this thing and I want to take part in the scheme.’ No, they remain unemployed and they wait for you or somebody in your Department to call them at some point in the future to be told, ‘We’ve matched your skill to a vacancy and found an employer willing to employ you at the end of the training; so come down and we will now give you one of these new employment contracts.’

2135

But until you do that there is nothing that they... They cannot come and... This is not something that they are entitled to come and claim from you in exchange for them having voted.

2140

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the scheme will start on 1st February. The hon. Member can try and ridicule it as much as he likes. The scheme will succeed and then he will have to swallow everything he is saying now. It is as simple as that, and time will tell who is – 2145 Hon. P R Caruana: I am entitled to try and understand the scheme.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, of course. You would be even more entitled if you were registered unemployed, but you are not, and therefore the position is that the people we are going to explain it to are the beneficiaries and they will understand it when we explain it to them and they will benefit from it, and the result will be there. It is quite simple, Mr Speaker.

2150 The hon. Member should not be so anxious to bury the scheme even before it starts. He ought to control his anxiety and his wishes in this respect and wait and see what happens over the next few months, and then he will see that in fact the results are that we are getting more Gibraltarians working, which I am sure he must want as much as I do.

2160 The purpose of my question is neither to ridicule it – although I think it is not going to work – nor to hope that it does not succeed. It is simply to elicit and establish, for the benefit of my constituents, what it is that the Government's policy entitles them to, so that people can know (a) whether there is anything that they can do today to get access to this scheme to end their unemployment status; and (b) to compare whether the scheme, as you are now explaining it, as the hon. Member is now explaining it, is the same as they were led to understand before 7th December. I think both of those are legitimate objectives, neither of which signals that the Opposition does not want as many unemployed people to be helped by the Government into employment.

2165 I hope that the hon. Member succeeds. I think he will not. I think what he will succeed in doing is filling a Government-owned company, at public expense, with people who start as trainees now earning twice as much and who will, in future, demand more and more and more Government company employee-type conditions, because that is what he has made them.

2170 Does the hon. Member understand and accept that he is making them... With all the best will in the world that he thinks his policy is motivated by, he is making all of these people employees – not trainees – employees, in the same way as employees of GJBS, of a Government-owned company. He has been in politics in Gibraltar long enough to know that this raises people's expectations, and that is our concern principally, as well as the cost.

2175 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether it raises their expectations or not, but Mr Speaker, the position is that the scheme will start on 1st February. It will start for the group that I have mentioned. It will be made available over the succeeding months to a greater and greater number of people and those people will be trained and will be employed.

2180 That is what I am committed to achieving, and therefore the hon. Member, when the time comes, can criticise me if I fail, but whether I fail or whether I succeed will not be known until the scheme gets under way.

Hon. P R Caruana: This is not about failure or success.

2185 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, it is, because... Mr Speaker, if everybody stays working in the Government for the rest of their lives, of course it is failure, because that is not what the scheme is about, so he cannot say it is not about failure.

2190 The hon. Member's questions list all the things that can go wrong with it. I am not in the business of finding how many things can go wrong with it; I am in the business of making everything go right with it, and I am telling the hon. Member wait and see, and you will see that your fears are unfounded and will not materialise.

Future Jobs Strategy
Meeting at John Mackintosh Hall

Mr Speaker: I think we should progress to Question 21 now.

Clerk: Question 21, Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment confirm that, on or about Thursday, 15th December 2011, he held and chaired a meeting at the John Mackintosh Hall with people who had signed up to the so-called Future Jobs Strategy at GSLP headquarters during the General Election?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is referring to a meeting called by the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party for party members and for which I am not answerable in this Parliament.

2215

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman not accept that now he is Minister for Employment, to hold a meeting of that nature, albeit for party members, GSLP members, in relation to the Future Jobs Strategy, is inappropriate and crosses the line of what is proper ministerial behaviour. He has a responsibility to the people of Gibraltar as a whole, to all the trainees, not just to those who are also members of the GSLP, and that kind of meeting crosses that line between proper...

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I do not agree with his view, but then, of course, he does not belong to the GSLP any more, so they may have different rules in the party to which he now belongs. As far as we are concerned, (Interjection) I share the view from... (Laughter)

2225

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank God.

Hon. J J Bossano: Oh well, I share the view. Thank God he is here.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! The Hon. Minister is in the middle of his answer. Please, order!

Hon. J J Bossano: A meeting for all the people in the scheme was held by me, as Minister, where I gave them a very detailed explanation. This was organised by my Department and each and every trainee was asked to come to this meeting, and each and every employer with which a trainee was placed was asked to give people time off during working hours to attend that meeting.

Therefore, everybody in the scheme was given a detailed explanation. The meeting lasted two hours and they were able to ask as many questions as they wanted.

The fact that, as well as a Minister, I am a member of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party does not mean that because I am a Minister I am not entitled to have party meetings or discuss with my fellow members issues in which the Government is involved and in which the party members are fully committed to help the Government implement the policies on which it has been elected.

Therefore, I do not accept that Ministers cannot attend party meetings.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, does he not accept that we have to review this particular issue and put it in its proper context?

During the General Election, the hon. Member, referring to the Future Jobs Strategy, was asking young people in Gibraltar to attend GSLP headquarters to sign up to the Future Jobs Strategy and then to become members of the GSLP. That is what has been happening at the last General Election.

Doesn't, in the light of that, a meeting of this nature smack of political patronage and jobs for the boys? (Interjections and banging on desks)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, let me assure the hon. Member that no GSLP member has been offered patronage or a job for the boys or a job after the Election.

2255 I can tell him that the only people that I have given jobs because they were promised a job before the Election are the people that he promised jobs to, which he told me at the official opening of the House, as we were going down the stairs, that he was going to ask, or that I should ask the person that was working with him, to pass me the files because he had seen these people and told them that if he was returned to office he would offer them employment in the public sector, in the Government.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is a total –

2260 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: That is absolutely not true and I challenge the hon. Member to produce evidence of it.

2265 I did see people in my role as a Government Minister the months preceding the General Election –

Mr Speaker: Is the Member raising a point of order?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what I am saying is that the hon. Member is simply not telling the truth.

2270 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister is in the middle of an answer and he may be interrupted only if a point of order is raised.

2275 Hon. J J Bossano: If the hon. Member says I am not telling the truth then, of course, I will ask the people who have come to me on the basis that they were promised by him a job if he got re-elected, to put it in writing and sign it, and I will let him have the letters.

2280 He actually said to me, outside the door downstairs, that he had seen these people and that I should ask for their files so that I could see the circumstances in which they were unemployed because he had told them that he would help them to get a job after the Election, if he got re-elected. I am not saying that that was ‘jobs for the boys’; I am not accusing him of having done anything wrong. I am saying that if he is accusing me of ‘jobs for the boys’, the only promises that have been made to employ people have been made by him, not by me, and I am honouring the commitment that he gave.

2285 If he did not give any commitment, then the people who have come to see me asking for those jobs have been, in fact, getting jobs under false pretences because the reason why they got the jobs – some of them are already working – is because I felt that if they had been promised that then they should not be adversely affected by the fact that he was not elected and we were, and therefore it was right that we should honour that. But if he is now saying that that is a lie, then I will go back to the people who lied to me.

2290 Nobody has been given any job, and certainly to give an unemployed person £912, which is the minimum wage... if that is ‘jobs for the boys’, then I would like him to tell me what giving people, seven days before the Election, contracts of £40,000 and £45,000, what kind of ‘jobs for the boys’ those are, because there were people on the eve of the Election getting promotions, getting new contracts and getting contracts under which we may not be able to get out, even though we see no need for those people in the roles in which they were engaged.

2295 But if we go down that route then, Mr Speaker, all I can tell you is that when we say something in this House, if the hon. Member challenges us on the basis of it is not true, we will produce the evidence.

2300 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I look forward to seeing the evidence, but does the hon. Gentleman not accept that there is a world of difference between a situation where a previous Government Minister has a conversation with the present incumbent and says, ‘I have seen these people, I was going to try and help these people – see what you can do about that,’ and a situation where you are actually guaranteeing jobs to those people, which is certainly not what I have done. The hon. Gentleman only needs to talk to the Deputy Chief Minister’s PA, who was present at those meetings, and he will confirm that is not the case.

2305 Hon. J J Bossano: Well then, Mr Speaker, all I can tell him is that having looked at the cases, as he asked me to do, the cases that we saw came away from meeting him with the impression created – rightly or wrongly, because I was not there in the meeting – that if he got back they would have their jobs. Then they come to see me on the basis that this job was promised to them and would I honour it, and I have said, ‘Yes, if you were promised it, we will honour it,' like anything else where there is a commitment from the preceding administration that we feel we have to honour, and we will honour it. We might have done something different, and we might not. We might have given them the job, anyway, but their jobs have been given to them on the basis that they claim that that is what they understood that the Minister had told them.

This may be a similar phenomenon to the one the hon. Member, the Leader of the Opposition, expects about people thinking they are going to get jobs in the public sector. Obviously, all those who spoke to the Minister thought they were going to get jobs in the public sector, and they have got them, so their expectation in this limited category has been met.

I can tell him that not one single person has been employed in the employment company, or anywhere else, on the basis that he has been selected for being a member of the GSLP, and therefore where the 'jobs for the boys' come in, I do not know, because in fact there are no 'jobs for the boys'. The whole of the 450 that were in the schemes in the Government are the ones who are going to start work in a Government company on 1st February, all of them – nothing to do with whether they are in one party or in another party. So it is jobs for all the boys and all the girls who are getting less than half the minimum wage.

Several Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. P R Caruana: I would like to ask one supplementary and afterwards, and separately, raise what I hope will be a short point of order, with your indulgence.

Does the Hon. the Minister for Employment, the Hon. Mr Bossano, agree with me that whether or not this or the previous Government indulged in 'jobs for the boys'... In other words, Ministers are there to help people in employment, so if somebody comes and says to the Government – as they used to every day, to my clinics and no doubt they will to you. Ministers say 'we will do what we can', fine.

Is he not able to draw a distinction between that situation, which is the one that he has been speaking to just now, and the situation in which people might wrongly have been led to believe that there is a blurring of the lines of distinction between state and party? In other words, if a section of the population – unemployed people, or youth, or trainees – are told by a political party days before an election, 'Come to my party office, register with me' – it is reputed, although I cannot know this for a fact, that they were also being asked to be encouraged to become members of the party – does he not understand... and then that party wins the election, and the first thing that the person that they saw at the party office does is convene them to a public meeting of that sort...

Does the hon. Member not have any degree of sympathy or understanding at all for the view that there is, at the very best, the danger that these people might draw a link – which he says does not exist, but that is not the point – the point is what they think, not what he thinks – that these people might be led to believe that there is a connection between their prospects and their attendance at the GSLP party meetings?

It is about perception and lines of distinction between party and Government have got to be preserved properly, because people cannot be allowed to think – even wrongly think – that somehow, participating through the party machinery is an advantage, or a potential advantage, when it comes to dealing with the government of the state.

Does he not have any degree of sympathy for the view – does he not share the view – that many people, including us, and this side of the House believe that those lines between party and state have been blurred by the chronology of events from before the election, through the election and these meetings after the election?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I do not, Mr Speaker.

Indeed, if that perception existed, then it can only exist until the end of January because, on 1st February, the people who are going to be given the opportunity to join the new employment company are going to be the people who are there today, irrespective of whether they are in the GSLP or they are not in the GSLP. So if there was a perception that it would be only for the GSLP, that perception is incorrect.

Hon. P R Caruana: My point does not depend on the correctness of the perception.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I do not want to accept that the perception exists but, if it does, it can only exist for another week because, at the end of January, it will be seen clearly that the opportunity is going to be offered to every single person and they can take it up, or they may not take it up, but the old scheme is disappearing and everybody is going to begin to go into the new one.

In fact, everything that had to be explained was explained to everybody. As I have already said, if there had been a party meeting exclusively for party members, and there had been nothing for those who were not party members, the meeting that I addressed on the Job Strategy was a meeting held during working hours for all the 450 cadets or trainees, where the Department asked them to come to the meeting and where the employers were asked to give them time off work and a full detailed explanation was given in a meeting that lasted for three hours, where I answered hundreds of questions from the people who are directly affected.

I do not know what more you can do in order to make sure that the people who are going to be affected by a policy be given an opportunity. They did not need to wait for this meeting of Parliament to find out what was going to happen; I actually convened them all, paid them for being there, and explained it all to them, and it is those people, and only those people, who are starting in February.

The fact that, in addition to that, the party is, of course, fully committed to the manifesto and the policies of the Government and that there are many people in the party who are being kept completely up to date of everything that the Government is doing – as they should be – that does not mean that now we are in Government, we forget about the party. No, that will not happen.

A Member: The first meeting was through the party!

Hon. Chief Minister: I had breakfast on the party as well, and really enjoyed it! (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, a point of order.

I would like to invite the Hon. Chief Minister to withdraw a remark that he made loud enough, not just for everybody in the House to hear, but for everybody in the public gallery to hear, at the beginning of this last exchange, where he said: 'Mira lo que dice, el hijo de Michael Feetham.'

I think that it is not appropriate to bring our fathers and our mothers into our political debate. I think, on reflection, I am sure he will agree with me that his remark was uncalled for, unnecessary, unparliamentary and, in any case, I do not suppose he was making any imputation against Michael Feetham because, if he were, that would be in breach of another Standing Order. So I am hoping that, without the need for me to go on any further, he will, by now, have reflected on what he said and agree with me that it is not an appropriate remark. One thing is for us to attack each other and another thing is to make imputations about, or attack, our paternal roots.,

So I make that invitation to the hon. Member for him to accept or as he pleases...

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I said in my speech at the ceremonial opening of the House that I would do everything possible to bring down the temperature. I have let myself down with that remark and I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman's invitation to withdraw it – and I do withdraw it.

In particular, Mr Speaker, I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the statements he has made on a number of occasions of the parent of another one of the Members of this House, who is Dr Garcia who, when he was on the other side, often had the hon. Gentleman referring to his particular profession etc.

The hon. Gentleman is absolutely right, it was one of those heated moments of political exchange this morning, where we all get hot under the collar and say things that sometimes we should not say, and I am quite happy that the proceedings today should continue on the basis of us attacking those of us who are here, for the good of our community, so that what we are doing is not attacking but scrutinising each other's policies and nothing more.

Mr Speaker: I am most grateful for that.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am very grateful, too, to the hon. Member for having withdrawn an eminently withdrawable remark. I am grateful to him for doing it, I think he has done well to do so.

On the other hand, I cannot agree with him that it is right to compare that remark – (Interjections) which is accusatorial and insinuating about the father of a Member of the House, with a point in which I was being attacked for giving Government-funded advertising in a newspaper simply because they were supportive of the GSD. I was simply saying, 'Look, how can you accuse me of this, when I give Government advertising also to a newspaper that is owned by the father of Dr Garcia?' I do not think the two references... For a start that is a factual statement. Not only is it factual, but it makes no insinuation, adverse, critical or otherwise, of Dr Garcia's father. I honestly do not think the two allusions are comparable in nature.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, that the one thing I should have clarified is that there was no accusation in my remark, other than the hon. Gentleman's father was a member of the GSLP at the time that those accusations were made and that the hon. Member himself was.

So I am happy to clarify that that was the sum total of the accusation contained in the remark, membership of a political party, of which those of us on this side of the House at least are very proud.

Mr Speaker: I think we are in danger of descending into an argument which is not necessary.

The remark has been withdrawn, and we might close that chapter. Move to Question 70.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Trees from Engineer's Lane car park Present condition

Clerk: Question 70, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Will the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm what has happened to the trees which were salvaged from the Engineer's Lane car park and re-sited temporarily on the East-side Reclamation towards the end of last year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, would you please allow me to say that this is the first time I have had the honour to address this House and, given my former career, that I am particularly pleased to have been given the opportunity to talk about trees.

Mr Speaker, the trees that were removed from the edge of the Engineer Lane car park and unsuitably re-sited temporarily at the East-side Reclamation have now all been replanted.

Two of the palm trees and the two olive trees were planted at Sir Herbert Miles Road, opposite the access road to the car parking area for Catalan Bay. The Phytolacca and the third palm tree were planted at Corral Road in front of the Landport skate park. All the Robinias were planted along Harbour Views Road, opposite St Bernard's Hospital, where I see them virtually every day.

The sites selected for the trees in question were not all suitable and, in some cases, the trees which should not have been moved in the first place will never fully recover. The locations were chosen and most of the planting carried out during the term of the previous Government.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the Minister will then concede that he was wrong when he suggested back in October that the previous administration were simply misleading the public in relation to their fate.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Sorry, I did not hear the lot, could you repeat that?

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, of course. The Minister will then concede that he was wrong when he suggested, back in October, that the previous administration of the GSD were simply misleading the public in issuing statements to the effect that the trees were being salvaged and replanted, with the idea of ultimately replanting them permanently in the sites in which they currently are today.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do not believe I am answerable for things that may have been said during an election campaign in this Parliament, (Laughter) particularly in heated debates, which some may have seen on television.

Certainly, I was not misleading anybody. The trees should not have been moved. They were moved incorrectly, they were badly treated, and the result of them having been replanted means that they will never thrive. Therefore, the fact that they have been put into sand, and not soil, in some cases, means that the trees' fate may have been sealed. Nature is resilient. They sometimes come back – there is no hard and fast rule about these things, but the trees were badly treated and, therefore, their fate was sealed when they were removed. I hope that, depending on climatic conditions, they will be able to survive, but there is no guarantee.

2475 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will the Minister confirm that it was, indeed, subcontracted to the main contractor who were taken on board to conduct this re-siting of the trees?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I have no idea. That was done by the previous administration.

2480 Hon. S M Figueras: Well, perhaps, Mr Speaker, the Minister, as the Minister with responsibility for the Environment now, will take an active interest in those trees and re-site them if necessary, if the contractor is indeed found to have done things incorrectly.

2485 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Actually, that is probably not going to be very good for the trees, Mr Speaker, because if they do have a chance, we cannot disturb the roots for a considerable amount of time. So, botanically, I do not think that would be acceptable for the trees.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, at a risk of labouring the point, perhaps too far, it was the contractor's responsibility in respect of those trees to ensure that they were dealt with correctly.
2490 I am happy to leave this point at this juncture.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It was done by the previous administration, so I am afraid I have no idea.

2495 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether the Hon. Minister for the Environment, Dr Cortes, can help me reconcile a predicament, and I ask him to by way of a supplementary.

Can I ask him whether, in his view, we can reconcile the position that has been stated by his colleague, Mr Linares, who is in the House today, that 'it is not for the Minister to decide how to deal with a heritage site'?

2500 Nevertheless, it appears to be. Ministers of the previous Government were appropriately held to account for the appropriateness of the circumstances in which temporarily uprooted trees were stored. Does this not suggest to the hon. Member a rather contradictory approach to ministerial responsibility? How can it be a Minister's responsibility how a tree is temporarily stored? How can that be the responsibility of the Minister of the Environment, as the hon. Members have made clear politically before today... but it not be the Minister 2505 for Heritage's responsibility to decide how to deal with a heritage site?

2510 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I think it is down to style of government and different outlooks will do things in different ways. If the previous Government – the Minister for whatever particular aspect – took a lead interest or perhaps gave certain instructions that some things should be dealt with in a certain way, then I suppose, Mr Speaker, that they should be held accountable. If another administration – indeed another Minister – lets the professionals get on with the job, then there is a different kind of accountability, but the professionals have to do the job that they may or may not be allowed to perform.

2515 Hon. P R Caruana Mr Speaker, when the hon. Members, then in Opposition, launched the attack against the Government and its Ministers for the way that the trees had been handled, they did not stop first to find out whether it had been a ministerial decision or a technician's decision as to how the trees were temporarily stored. They simply launched into an attack, holding the Minister...

2520 I am not saying they were unjustified in doing it, by the way. All I am saying is that that view of holding a Minister accountable in this House, and outside of this House, for how trees are handled does not appear to me to be consistent with the view now expressed by them, when they cross the floor of the House to the Government side, that it is not even for the Heritage Minister to decide how to deal with a heritage site. It seems to me a very significant moving of the goal posts of what Ministers' responsibilities are and what Ministers should be held accountable for.

2525 So I am not saying that it is wrong to hold Ministers to account for how trees are handled. All I am saying is that there has to be some consistency, surely, between Ministers being held to account for how trees are handled and whether it is then appropriate to hold Ministers of a party that used to hold Ministers to account for how trees were handled to now hold them to account for how a heritage site is dealt with.

I just was wondering whether the Member could help me reconcile this apparent contradiction in the level of ministerial responsibility and accountability. But I can see that he cannot, so we will leave it.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, since he mentioned me on this crossover debate, I will tell him that if it were something to do of which I am a professional – and I do not intend to be a professional of heritage, therefore I will leave technicians to do whatever they deem necessary to do, but as we all know, Dr Cortes is a professional in trees – probably knows more than you and I about trees – and if he uses an opinion with the technician, I think that the technicians could hear what he is saying, even though he is a Minister.

2535

Therefore your argument is flawed, in the sense that, if I were to talk about education and teaching, and even now about law, I could have an opinion as a Minister, and that was what my comment was directed at.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, my argument is not flawed. What remains flawed and has shown no sign of improvement, despite him being elected to the status of Minister of the Crown, is the Hon. Mr Linares's capacity to listen, understand and analyse.

It is not, in the context of the exchange that I was having with Dr Cortes, Dr Cortes's knowledge of trees that is relevant, but the previous Environment Minister, Mr Britto's knowledge of trees. He has no knowledge of trees, just like you appear to say you have no knowledge of heritage. Therefore, what I was comparing was holding an Environment Minister who is not an expert on trees but was held to account by you when you were in opposition, with now you who are also not an expert on heritage saying that it is not for you because you are not an expert.

So we are not comparing Dr Cortes's knowledge of trees with your knowledge of heritage; we are comparing the Hon. Mr Britto, the previous Environment Minister's knowledge of trees with your knowledge of heritage.

2550

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think it is down, to a large extent, as to what a Minister who may not be an expert on the particular subject listens to advice and as a Minister or Chief Minister, or whatever Minister, is given advice and chooses not to listen to it, that he should be held accountable for not having listened to the advice. That is one thing.

2555

Another thing is that some Ministers have been known, in the past administration, to go to a particular site, not particularly like a landscaping design, and at very short notice and at considerable cost, change the design that had been prepared by the experts.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well, Ministers are entitled to views about designs, too. Design is not necessarily about expertise; it can also be about taste. We always found that our taste was invariably better than yours (Laughter) – despite your superior expertise on trees.

Now, Mr Speaker, there is no need to pursue this any further, except to say that I agree with what the hon. Member has said about Ministers being held to account for not taking advice. If a Minister chooses not to take technical advice, the least that he must be expected to do is to justify, politically, his departure from the technical advice. I think that that is absolutely spot on correct.

I still cannot reconcile – and I am not going to labour the point, because I think we have finished it now – but the hon. Member then must now couple that statement with an acknowledgement that, to the extent, that there was previous criticism of the previous Environment Minister's decision for the trees issue – if I can just call it that – they assumed that he had taken advice which he ignored, and you assumed, against him, that he was not acting precisely on the basis of the advice or, indeed, that he was simply not aware, and this is what the technical people did. That is what I am saying: either Ministers are held to account for things that technical people decide, because that is where the expertise lies, or they are not; but it cannot be 'yes' for trees when you are in Opposition but not for heritage when you are in Government.

2570

That is the only point I was making. I think it is just one of consistency.

2575

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I must comment here. We are speaking about Ernest Britto, who is present in the House and who is a personal friend of mine and, obviously, I have to distinguish anything political with anything else.

What I must say is that I am aware that the Government, which channelled particularly... and which ministry it was directed to – because I know that it was not always the Ministry for the Environment which took these sorts of decisions – it was often [Inaudible] had been advised about these trees because, in another life, I actually formed part of the body that made that advice available to the Government.

2585 But I think I must correct the Leader of the Opposition in saying that his taste is better than mine, because at least in one project, my taste in designing the landscaping of the Trafalgar Interchange was certainly at least as good as his, because he actually used it to promote his party during the election campaign! So at least on that we agree. (Interjection)

2590 Hon. P R Caruana: I thought the Trafalgar Interchange is superb, although I have heard somebody else claim credit, other than you and me, so we will just have to have a drink one day and decide, between the three of us, who designed it. It certainly was not me – I will just buy the beer!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Accepted!

Water pollution at Western Beach
Progress on resolution

2600 Clerk: Question 71, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm how the Government is progressing with the resolution of the water pollution at Western Beach, in particular in respect of the relocation of the Spanish storm drain which empties into the area?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2610 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government takes the issue of sewage pollution in general, and at Western Beach, extremely seriously, as confirmed by one of the first actions we took on 16th December 2011, which was to close the beach due to the high levels of sewage pollution present since mid-November 2011.

2615 Although we have been in administration for just over a month, I have already had an initial meeting with senior legal advisers to take stock of the existing situation that we have inherited from the previous administration. The Government has already started exploring possible avenues, with the intention of solving the problem of sewage contamination as soon as possible. In the interim, both the Environmental Agency and the Department of the Environment are closely monitoring the situation and providing the Ministry for Health and the Environment with regular briefs on the situation at Western Beach.

2620 The Government will therefore be keeping the public fully apprised of any development in this regard. The ongoing results from the monitoring carried out by the Environmental Agency are available online on the Agency's website, should the public wish to inform themselves of the current quality of the water at Western Beach.

2625 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to commit to a timescale in respect of these solutions that the Minister explained are being discussed at the moment?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I am not.

2630 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether or not there have been any cross-border communications in respect of the resolution of this issue?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, there have.

2635 Hon. S M Figueras: Could the Minister provide us with any kind of clarification with respect to the outcome of those discussions?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: These discussions were held at a technical level before the election.

The Opposition may be aware of the outcome of that, and I am informed that the matter had clearly not been resolved by them, which is why we are seeking legal advice on what Gibraltar's position could be in dealing with the matter.

Hon. S M Figueras: Sir, for the avoidance of doubt, the Minister has not yet had a cross-border communication in respect of this issue, since the election on 8th December.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Not from Spain, no.

Hon. S M Figueras: Has the Minister attempted to make contact or discuss the matter further beyond the technical meetings held before the election with the authorities in La Línea?

2650

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, we have not. We are seeking advice as to what steps we could take, in order to allow us to better handle such a meeting.

2655

Hon. P R Caruana: Is the Hon. Minister aware – and it is probably because the same person who used to draft the Answers for us has drafted it for him – that, despite the fuss that he used to make about this issue, the position that he has just described, which to me seems eminently reasonable for his Government to take, is exactly the same position as the previous Government took?

2660

Can I further ask the hon. Member, when he says that 'this is a situation that we inherited from the previous Government' and that it was not resolved by us, does the hon. Member acknowledge that there is nothing physical that any Government of Gibraltar, short of invading La Línea, repairing the thing for them and then making a quick retreat à la sortie before the defending garrison awakens (Laughter), does the Hon. Minister not understand that there is not a great deal that any Government of Gibraltar can do about this – this is not a situation that he inherited from the previous Government, this is not something that we failed to resolve – and that the steps that he has announced that he is taking are the steps that we have taken.

We went further than that, and I hope that the technical people advised and informed him in detail of the steps that were taken in terms of meeting with the Junta de Andalucía, in terms of my meeting with the Mayor of La Línea, upon which I am perfectly happy to brief him myself directly, all now embroiled in shortage of money on the Spanish side, shortage of money on the Junta, shortage of money in the Ayuntamiento de La Línea, that this is the physical reality and that any legal route which we have investigated and on which opinions are, I believe, already available to him, any legal approach to this will take years and years to resolve in the courts? So either we suffer the pollution which is not of Gibraltar's making or we go to the courts, if advised that there is a decent... and wait for the European Court to deliver, in 10 years' time, a final outcome or we try to persuade the Spanish authorities to do what they should do and repair...

2670

Does the hon. Member acknowledge that the previous Government was trying to steer the middle course albeit that, for financial reasons on the Spanish side, it never came to fruition? Does he acknowledge that there is no point in him... [Interruption] once he is now on the Government benches, with the responsibility to act, he has to change his chip... There is no point – he is only creating a rod for his own back – in him raising expectations that he has the power to end this unfortunate, regrettable and unacceptable situation because he cannot and, in a year or 18 months' time, I will be here, asking him why he has not fixed it yet – as we used to be asked, not from inside, from outside the Government.

2675

This is outside of Gibraltar's control. We, on this side, acknowledge that it is outside of his control. We expect him to engage with the Spanish authorities to try and persuade them to do the work, but if that fails we are not going to hold him personally responsible, his Government responsible, for the pollution that Gibraltar suffers for something that is not only not of the Gibraltar Government's making but, indeed, is not in the Gibraltar Government's physical gift or capacity to resolve. Does he accept that?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I certainly do not wish to raise anybody's expectations. Certainly –

Hon. P R Caruana: Not now that he is a Minister!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do not think... and I will respond to that comment. I do not think I have ever tried to raise anybody's expectations unjustifiably in my previous career when I was not a Minister; I gave people great expectations –

Hon. P R Caruana: Forgetting the debate on television, which you already asked us to airbrush away.

2695 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We will forget the debate on television but, certainly, any expectation that I have given people in the past would have been that I would do my work well and I would convert a dump into a prominent botanic garden. I think that expectation was, in fact, fulfilled. I know that a lot of the electorate actually have great expectations of me and I hope to make Gibraltar bloom in the way that I made the Alameda Gardens bloom.

2700 Certainly I do not want to raise people's expectations on this particular point but, obviously again, members of the Opposition as was did not have access to the information of the Government as they did, and even less when I was not even the Opposition – I was somewhere in the wilderness – and, obviously, I am now aware of some things that I may not have been aware of in the past, but that does not mean that I will not make every effort, without unnecessarily raising expectations, to try and follow some of the avenues that may or may not have been taken by predecessors to try to resolve this.

2705 What I do think is unfortunate is that while the sewage works were being built, and while the trench was being dug – which was evident and visible to anybody who wanted to cross the frontier in those days, perhaps a year or a year and a bit ago – and when concerns were raised by NGOs, the Government apparently did not take any steps then to stop the work being completed, but that is looking in to the past even further than I would wish.

2710 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am sure Question Time is not for the new Opposition to defend, in the face of the new Government, its record in Government, but I suppose it is inevitable that the first few Question sessions will descend to that!

2715 The hon. Member surely must know, because we have made public statements to that effect, firstly that Gibraltar technical people were indeed monitoring the works as they were being carried on – but that does not make it any more possible for us to stop the works, than it is possible now to demand that they are fixed!

2720 Why he thinks that monitoring the works would have strengthened our ability... I know that he thinks... many people in Gibraltar think that all power emanates from Gibraltar, but we did not succeed – and I hope he does succeed – in finding the formula to oblige, coerce, the Kingdom of Spain to do as we demand, order. Please, if he can find the formula to do that, he will find me standing just behind him, on his right shoulder behind him, supporting him, encouraging him and patting him on his back. Until he achieves that, suggesting that any Government of Gibraltar can bring about – other than through attempts to persuade the Spanish to do it, which was done ad nauseam – to bring about that unacceptable position which, in my opinion and in Government lawyers' opinions, which he must by now have been told, represents a violation of European Union environmental directives, is not something that we can oblige.

2725 We can demand but we can be ignored or we can try and persuade politically, which is what we attempted to do – got their commitment to do the work – I had a very good meeting with the Mayor of La Línea, who, by the way, before she was Mayor of La Línea had been the official in the Junta de Andalucía before responsible for giving the licence for the work to be done in the first place, in her capacity as environmental officer of the Junta de Andalucía, and there was immediate acknowledgement of the need to fix the problem. But, from that, to actually getting an ayuntamiento which cannot pay its staff their wages, to undertake a major job of repair, because Gibraltar does not like pollution emanating from the beach – I hope he will understand the extent of the difficulty that we faced, and which he now faces, in bringing a rapid end to this situation.

2735 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, of course we understand difficulties. The Opposition did not succeed at the time. We cannot be blamed for that lack of success, but we will carry on trying, without unnecessarily raising expectations.

2740 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

2745 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that this House do now adjourn to 3.00 p.m. and if it is of any assistance to the Members opposite, I propose to proceed from Question 80 to Question 106, and then return to Question 72.

Mr Speaker: Is that convenient? All those –

Hon. P R Caruana: I wish the Hon. Chief Minister a good voyage.

Mr Speaker: Is an adjournment to 3.00 p.m. convenient to all hon. Members? (Several Members: Aye.)
This House will adjourn till 3.00 p.m.

The House adjourned at 1.10 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

CHIEF MINISTER

Civil Service Employment of disabled persons

25

Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.
Question 80, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the Chief Minister's pronouncement on the review of the Civil Service, will he undertake to review the historical practices in the employment of disabled persons, 30 particularly in ensuring that the application process of Government vacancies are disabled user friendly?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes.

35 Any review of anything should include ensuring that established practices are brought up to date with modern practice to ensure that people with disabilities are not in any way disadvantaged.

40 Potential investors in Gibraltar
Outcome of discussions

Clerk: Question 81, the Hon. D A Feetham.

45 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in an interview with GBC on 12th May 2011, the then Leader of the Opposition confirmed that he was in discussion with potential investors to Gibraltar that he had up his sleeve, should he win the General Election. Can the Hon. the Chief Minister confirm whether those discussions have borne any fruit?

50 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: What is the fruit?

55 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to provide the House with that information at this time, but a public statement will be made when it is possible to make such a public statement.

60 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he, at the very least, inform the House of what country these potential investors come from?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, from a number of different European countries.

65 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, were all these people, who are waiting somewhere, waiting for the hon. Member to win the election in order to come to Gibraltar to invest, when they were not otherwise willing to do so?

Can the hon. Member provide any explanation as to why these people should suddenly appear?

70 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not that they suddenly appeared. They include people who were interested, as a result of a relationship with me, in exploring further contact with Gibraltar and people who had tried to have a relationship with him, but found that sometimes he did not answer their letters.

75 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, first of all, I am not the Minister with responsibility for inward investment and never have been. Secondly, I am not aware of any inward investor – or at least any serious inward investor – that has sought access to me and failed.

I am aware of a lot of inward investors that were at an advanced stage of negotiation with the outgoing Government, and I look forward to hearing the details of the hon. Member's instant magnetic inward investment attracting qualities, just to make sure that they are not a re-hash of things that were in the pipeline already.

80 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can rest assured that where there are projects which were commenced under his direction, or the direction of his Government, and they are announced during the course of my Government's tenure, as the administration of Gibraltar, it will be made clear that they were commenced under his. We will not be ungenerous to those projects, in giving credit, if they were 85 commenced and even some of them brought very near to completion, but not at the stage where they could be announced, before the date of the General Election.

90 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member acknowledge that the international reputation of Gibraltar is key, that it is, as international reputations of small countries always are, fragile, in the sense that relatively little can destabilise them, to considerable economic consequence, and that it is therefore important to be careful when accepting inward investment, that the source of the inward investment and the people concerned should be of the utmost repute, so that by the nature of the investors, this jurisdiction does not obtain the reputation that other jurisdictions have obtained in that direction?

95 Does he accept, firstly, that that is a factor to be borne in mind and, secondly, that a reputation for Gibraltar as a place where people of less than entirely reputable credentials invest could have serious knock-on adverse implications for the finance service and other important sectors of our economy?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

100 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. Chief Minister enlighten the House as to what kind of inward investment we are actually talking about?

105 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are talking about many different types of potential inward investment, across a whole range of different industries. It is not that I do not want to give the hon. Gentleman the information; it is that he will have it as soon as it is possible to provide it.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is possible to provide it today. He is not doing it. No-one is asking him for the numbers or the addresses of the people concerned, or even the names of the people concerned – simply to identify the nature of the investments, and I do not see that that is anything commercially sensitive that he cannot provide today.

110 I should remind the hon. Members, since they have been so quick to throw General Orders in the face of the Opposition, having done their best to circumnavigate them for the last eight years from this side of the House, that the correct place to announce Government policy is in this House and not outside, in his favoured public relations media mode, and that there are not only rulings from the Gibraltar Speaker but, indeed, from the Westminster Speaker that we rightly rely on, when we need to, that make that clear.

115 So for the hon. Member to say, ‘I am not telling you in the House today – wait and hear my public statement’, is a complete finessing of Parliament in a most unparliamentary way, which is completely inimical to the importance in which he said he wanted to elevate Parliament.

120 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman’s intervention makes a number of assumptions. I will not address them, because they are just that – assumptions; they are not questions.

Where it is necessary or appropriate that statements be made in this House, they will be made in this House, but the hon. Gentleman was in administration for 16 years and very often one got to hear about the things his Government was doing in the press – and sometimes not just in the Gibraltar press.

125 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I never declined to answer a Question in Parliament, on the basis that I preferred to make a statement in public in another place later.

130 If the Opposition were asking the Government to provide things which he cannot presently provide, because the deal is not done or because it is not yet enough in the bag or because there are still confidential dimensions to it, that is a reasonable, understandable answer for not being able to give it now, but for giving it later. We are not asking for any of that; we are asking him to identify the nature of the investments, which cannot possibly give away any information that is confidential in nature and which cannot possibly be outside of his power and ability to give the House today.

135 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I assume that is a question. The answer to it is that, in my estimation, to give any further indication at this stage would be to give away things which are potentially commercially sensitive, would be to give indications which it is not appropriate to give at this stage. We will make a statement when it is necessary to make it and, if it is appropriate to make it in this House, rather than outside, we will make it here. If it is appropriate to make it outside rather than here, we will make it outside.

140 The hon. Gentleman has to understand that the people who make these decisions now are the ones sitting on this side of the House, not him.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well, the phrase ‘rabbits’ and ‘hats’ comes to mind.

145 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the phrase ‘Do as I say and not as I do’ also springs to mind, given what he is saying these days.

Mr Speaker: It has to be a question.
The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

150 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, can the Hon. the Chief Minister at least confirm this: that this inward investment is a crucial part of the Government’s predicted – predicted in their manifesto during the election campaign – 12% annual growth in the economy?

155 Hon. P R Caruana: 65% employment.

Hon. D A Feetham: Or 65% employment.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is a part.

Guaranteed Superannuation Fund
Government introduction

165 Clerk: Question 82, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister confirm that the Gibraltar Government has introduced a new guaranteed superannuation fund?

170 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I will answer this Question together with Question 83.

Guaranteed Superannuation Fund

180 Clerk: Question 83.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister confirm the exact terms of the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund, including but not limited to, the contributions to be made by the employee and the contributions made by the Government or employer and any guarantee on the value of the employee’s fund?

185 Mr Speaker: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund is in the process of being formed under the auspices of the Financial Secretary and will be available with effect from 1st January 2012 to new public service employees and to those presently covered by the No 1, No 2 and No 3 Provident Fund.

190 The intention is that public service employees will be able to contribute up to 7% of their salary as contribution to the Fund and the employer will double that by way of employer contribution. If the employee contributes 8% then the employer will contribute 17%, bringing the total contribution up to 25% of the salary.

195 Mr Speaker, I am reading from the answer I have got. I am quite happy to make a copy available to the hon. Gentleman. It is not a schedule, but I am happy to let him have a copy.

Amounts above a £50,000 salary will not be eligible for the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund. The Fund is also open to private sector employees and the self-employed. Much as there will be no contribution from the Government, the guarantee will still apply.

200 On maturity, contributing persons will have the choice of a 100% tax-free lump sum or the purchase of an annuity provided by the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

Mr Speaker, I should also add that these are matters which are being dealt with by the Minister with responsibility for labour, given that he takes responsibility for the DSS these days.

I am happy to give the hon. Gentleman my copy of this answer. I think I have got an extra one.

205 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just dealing with the guarantee first, in their manifesto the hon. Gentleman opposite said that the Government would guarantee the value of the Fund. Is that the case?

210 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I really do not mean to be obtuse about this, but the hon. Gentleman asked the question to me directly, to the Chief Minister. It is not a matter in my ministerial responsibility. I would urge that he put the question again at the next meeting of this House, which will be next month; or I am quite happy for us to set this question aside until Mr Bossano is back in the House, given that he is the person dealing with it and he can be asked the supplementaries.

215 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he suggesting that he does not know the answer? He is the Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know it is easy to try and score that sort of point. I have been the Chief Minister of Gibraltar for less than four full weeks. I am trying to deal with a lot of other matters, and I am not the person dealing with this matter but the question was addressed to me specifically.

220 If he wants to score that sort of point... Look, it's an open goal, go ahead and score it.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, he is dead right it is an open goal, but it is a thoroughly undesirable open goal!

225 The hon. Member, the Chief Minister, is the Minister responsible for the public finances of Gibraltar. He is the Minister for Finance. How can he possibly have approved the entry by the Government into financial commitments of a long-term nature without knowing what the cost of it will be, for which he – not the Minister for Employment, but for which he, as Minister for Finance – is responsible?

230 The hon. Members are saying that they guarantee the value of the Fund. What is the cost of that? And he is not just guaranteeing the value of a pension fund for taxpayer employees, for Government employees; if I have correctly understood him, this is available for the private sector and self-employed, too. In other words, all the private pension funds in Gibraltar, or any individual who is self-employed or employed in the private sector can place their pension arrangements in the hands of the Superannuation Fund, and have the value of their pension pot guaranteed by the taxpayer.

235 The Chief Minister, who is head of the Government and the Minister for Finance, has allowed that policy to be committed to and deployed and has no clue of what the scheme is, still less how much it will cost.

Mr Speaker, on this basis, he is going to have to make many more statements like the one he made on television last night, except they will all be true, unlike much of what he said last night.

240 Hon. Chief Minister: What was the question?

245 Hon. P R Caruana: The question is does the Hon. Minister for Finance believe that it is a proper discharge of his ministerial obligations, as Minister for Finance, to allow his Government to enter into this commitment not just for Government and Government-related employees, but also to the private-sector employed and the self-employed, without knowing the nature of the scheme and therefore the contingent financial liability that this represents on his Government and future governments and the taxpayer?

Does the Hon. Chief Minister consider that it is okay in those circumstances simply to come and say, 'I am not dealing with it; ask my Minister.'?

250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has given a speech about how incompetent I am to deal with these issues. I am used to him getting up in this House (Interjection) and simply, from a different position, saying exactly the same thing. I believe this is a good thing. The Superannuation Fund is a good thing. (Interjection) It is not something that I am dealing with specifically; therefore I cannot answer specific questions on it.

255 I tried to be generous by telling the hon. Members opposite who they can direct their questions to. I am quite happy, if they like, for them to write to me and I will provide the specific information that they require. That will be the sum total of my answers. He can now get up and tell us again what a fool I am.

260 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, how can he know that it is a good thing if he does not know what it is and he does not know what it costs?

265 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not that I do not know what it is; it is that I do not have to hand the specific information that he is asking me for. That is the position. If the hon. Members were to get into the habit of asking questions of the Government rather than of specific Ministers, then they would have the person responsible for this specific amount that they want to ask about here in the House to deal with it. It is that simple, Mr Speaker.

270 This is about getting through parliamentary business. It is about making sure that the Opposition have the information that they need to have and about holding the Government to account; not about telling me whether I am competent or not competent to do a particular job. That is what the last Parliament was about. It is not what this Parliament should be about. But I can see that the hon. Gentleman wants to continue playing it his way.

275 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I have not said that he is incompetent. I happen to believe that he is, but I have not said it. I have not said it on this occasion. I have asked him whether, in his capacity as Minister for Finance... The Minister for Employment may be dealing with the nitty-gritty of the scheme but, as Minister for Finance, he, and not the Minister for Employment, is responsible for the financial cost to the Government of every policy in the Government. I have asked him whether he considers that it is appropriate that, in those circumstances, he does not know basic questions about this scheme.

280 Mr Speaker, he may not be dealing with it but he has had five days, at least five days, to ask the Minister for Employment – assuming that they are still on speaking terms – what the details of the scheme are to provide to this House.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

285 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Hon. the Chief Minister aware that subscribers to the pension fund No 2, for example, actually have a choice of a number of ways in which their pension fund can deal with investments? One of them is income. Another way in which that investment can proceed is investments in, for example, shares in bonds and growth, effectively. Is he aware of that?

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

295 Hon. D A Feetham: Is it Government policy, then...? I assume that the hon. Gentleman, when he was in private practice, advised... during the course of his private practice, advised pension trustees, or at least their pension funds. Is he not aware that, in fact, investments made by pension funds can either go up or down, and is it Government policy that the Government underwrite, at the taxpayer's expense, bad investments made by pension trustees?

300 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can put that question to the Minister for Labour as soon as the next House convenes, or he can write to us and we can give him all the details that he wants about these issues. I am happy for this Government to provide as much information as the Opposition want. They just simply need to ask the right person.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, for a party that is supposedly concerned... for a Chief Minister who is supposedly concerned about the state of public finances, he is remarkably unconcerned about the taxpayer 305 picking up huge bills because of bad investments by pension trustees which it appears the Government policy is to guarantee. Is that not the case?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it appears that the hon. Gentlemen do not want to hear my answers.

Government-funded construction projects
Details of cessation

315

320

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister provide a list of Government funded construction projects, as at 8th December 2011, indicating which ones the Government or its agents have given instructions for work to cease and whether, in relation to each project, that cessation will be temporary or permanent?

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am handing the hon. Gentleman a schedule which I am advised contains a full list of all Government-funded construction projects as at 8th December 2011. [see next page]

In respect of this list, it will be an irony that may not be lost on the hon. Gentleman that, for the date in respect of which he has asked, I should be asking him for the information, as that was the last day in office of the previous administration.

It is not possible at this stage to give any further indication than that set out in my ministerial statement of last night as to which projects will progress. A statement about any final decision to cease work on any project will be made when appropriate.

335

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister indicate, in relation to the schedule, which ones of these projects are actually paused or work has ceased,

340

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, none of the projects are 'ceased'. Some of them are paused, some of them are not paused. There are some where the pause is the result of having reached the end of a particular phase before a decision is made whether they should progress to another phase. There are some of them that are paused because they had reached that stage, literally by the time that we got into office, and we are looking at which of them were going to proceed, and, as I said last night, we will have to make careful decisions about which projects now proceed and which do not.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I quite understand what the Hon. the Chief Minister has said, that he cannot indicate to this House which ones of these projects' work will be abandoned on a permanent basis. That is what he is saying: he is reviewing it.

What I am asking, and what the question asked, is which ones of these projects there has been a temporary, at this stage, cessation of work, where there has been a cessation of work at this stage.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on all of those, where work had reached the end of a particular phase, there is now a pause.

I have a different list, Mr Speaker, to this one. I have a different list to the one that has been provided here, where I might have been able to indicate to the hon. Gentleman which are paused and which are not paused. Unfortunately, I cannot give him that information right now. I can give him an indication of those that I am aware are paused.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it not unsatisfactory for the Chief Minister today, this afternoon, not to be able to tell us, in this House, which ones of these projects there has been... he has ordered a cessation of work, and this morning the Hon. the Minister for Employment could not tell us how many redundancies had 360 been caused by that cessation of work. Isn't that unsatisfactory, Mr Speaker?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it may be unsatisfactory to him, but the process through which we are working, the number of projects which were ongoing and the work that we need to do to assess whether, in the public interest, they should be continuing and to what extent they are continuing today, even if there is a pause – because there may be two or three men still on site, securing the site and finishing something – is much more complex than me being able to give a list that says, ‘Paused, stopped, ongoing.’

We have been in Government for less than two months. I know that they want to do everything possible to return as soon as they can. I know that their attempts to ridicule us in this first meeting of the House are simply attempts to try and take our seats away from us already but, Mr Speaker, they have to bear with us. We have said that we will be making statements when we make decisions about which projects will progress and which will not.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member cannot defend himself from what is a clear lack of preparation for coming to this House to account for his chief ministerial responsibilities by inventing all these reasons about our motives. Again, I remind him that Standing Orders does not allow him to impute improper motives. I think he is going to live to regret elevating Standing Orders now to us, but if he is going to do it, we are going to do it, too.

Mr Speaker, we understand and respect the fact that a new incoming Government is entitled... We may agree or disagree with their decision, but a new incoming Government is entitled to review capital projects in hand and decide whether they want to not start them, or abandon them even though they have started them. That is your right. You will answer for your decisions politically and we will criticise you for those we do not agree with. That is a different issue, Mr Speaker. That is not what he is being questioned on.

He has come out on television on more than one occasion now saying that his Government has stopped Government projects whilst they are each reviewed one at a time to see which are value for money, which they will prioritise, which this and which that. Can the hon. Member say who has made the decision to stop projects for evaluation, which he has said have been stopped? Can the hon. Member say whether he has made those decisions and, if not, who has made the decisions that he has announced?

We are not attributing to him the stopping and starting of projects. He has said publicly, as recently as last night on television, although he had said it before, that the Government had stopped these projects whilst they were re-evaluated. Now I am asking him who has made those decisions, and the Hon. D A Feetham is asking him which have been stopped and which have not been stopped, unless they have all been stopped.

Can I ask him just to bear in mind, when he answers, my third supplementary is that GJBS, a company owned by the Government, has caused its subcontractors to make workers of it redundant, on the basis they have been told that the Government has stopped their work and will not allow them to get on with work. So someone somewhere – either him, or somebody obviously without his knowledge – has issued instructions in specific projects.

The hon. Member must at least be in a position, surely, to make good his public statements that projects have been stopped in order for their re-evaluation. No-one at this stage is commenting on the correctness of the decision to stop or whether the projects should finish or not finish. That is for a later day. The question now is has work stopped on all projects, has work stopped on no projects, or if it is a hybrid, on which projects has work stopped and on which has it not stopped? This is what he has been asked for, and, again, he seems unable to answer. Can he, indeed, answer?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is not the position. The position is that we have made, collectively, the decision to stop all the capital projects. We have also – (Interjections)

Hon. P R Caruana: They are all stopped?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, ‘stopped’ does not mean stopped for good (Interjections); it means that they were stopped and they are being restarted.

The only issue with not giving the answer that the hon. Gentleman seems to want is that some of them may already have been restarted and I do not have clear indication that they have restarted, and I do not want to be told: ‘You didn’t say that at Montagu Gardens there was going to be somebody on the scaffolding, and there they are and why didn’t you say that?’ That is what I am saying, Mr Speaker. We have started the process of reassessment of the projects. Some of them have been allowed to recommence; some of them have not. There are some, Mr Speaker, where I am very happy to tell him that works have stopped, and he knows.

420 Mr Speaker, the tunnel, for example, across the airport, or under the airport, is a major project. That project is presently stopped and there will have to be a detailed assessment of whether that is going to go ahead. There is another question on the Order Paper that deals with that and my answer on that will also offer the hon. Gentleman a conversation, so there are not things said across the floor of the House that could prejudice Gibraltar PLC – and I am sure that he will accept that that is the position.

425 I can go through this with him, if he likes. A lot of these are projects that actually came to completion by the time that they were leaving No. 6 and Government. Those are not going to be controversial, but I think that there are projects, which are not necessarily on this list that I have been given, which I have seen on another list, and I do not want to mislead the hon. Gentleman. But I am quite happy, Mr Speaker, to show that I know exactly what is happening with all of these projects on this list and go through them one by one.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, GLRC projects –

430 Project 1a: air terminal and frontier access roads. The air terminal continues, obviously. That is number 2, but the access road works have been paused whilst the Government makes a decision. That includes the tunnel.

Project 1b: the Devil's Tower Road dualling. That has been substantially completed, as I understand it.

Project 2: the air terminal. The air terminal is in the process of being completed. That continues.

435 Project 3: MoD relocations. That is in part paused, but in part proceeding because there are demolitions that relate to those MoD relocations which may be going ahead.

Project 4b: Mid Harbour reclamation. That, as I understand it, is substantially completed.

Project 5: GoG relocations. Some of them are ongoing; some of them have been paused.

440 Project 6: infrastructure projects, including the pumping station. I believe that most of those are going ahead.

Project 7: GoG rental housing and link road. I believe that that was substantially completed by the time that the hon. Gentleman left office.

Project 8: the new power station initial set-up costs. The initial set-up has continued, but no decision has yet been made, as the hon. Gentleman knows, on whether we are going to proceed with the power station contract.

445 Project 12a: park-and-ride car parks were substantially completed by the time that the hon. Gentleman left office.

Project 12b: short-stay airport terminal car park. I believe that that is one of the ones that is completed, insofar as it is an open car park outside the terminal, but other works there may have been paused.

450 Project 14: revetment repairs. I understand that that is now substantially completed.

Project 21: beaches. I understand that a lot of that was done in their time in office. I understand there is a second phase which could start very soon, which is paused.

Those are the projects, Mr Speaker, that relate to the work on which Gibraltar Land Reclamation Company is providing advice to the company.

455 On the Improvement and Development Fund head, Mr Speaker, the beautification projects at Orange Bastion and Irish Town Depot and the beautification of Europa Point are paused.

Mr Speaker, the new roads and tunnel projects are substantially paused as well.

The GIS development we are having a meeting on. It is not an infrastructure project in the physical sense. That is more a software project. We are having a meeting on that very soon.

460 Mr Speaker, under head 5 of the Improvement and Development Fund, on the other projects, the new prison is substantially finished.

The rubble tip removal, I believe, was in the process of continuing.

The women's hostel is completed.

The law courts continue; they are not yet completed.

465 The revetment and promenades: I understand that that was substantially completed.

The upgrade of the playgrounds was substantially completed at the time that the hon. Gentleman left office.

The Old St Bernard's Hospital demolition and conversion works continue.

The Old Naval Hospital conversion and refurbishment will continue, subject to some changes which may need to be made to the works being done.

470 The Cancer Relief Centre, as far as I understand, has been substantially completed and that is something that will be welcomed across both sides of the House, and it was substantially completed by the time that the hon. Members opposite left office.

The Heritage Building refurbishment is paused, Mr Speaker. That is something that had not started yet. We are in the process of making a decision about whether it will proceed.

The bus shelters have been substantially completed.

The public toilets, Mr Speaker, thank goodness, have been substantially completed, because those definitely would have been stopped by us.

Mr Speaker, the smart bikes. The first phase was completed. The second phase has not yet commenced. We are assessing how best to proceed with that.

The implementation of the Parking and Traffic Plan is a thing in constant motion. It involves parking, and I will get to issues which relate to parking in a few moments because the next items are car parks. That is something that continues in respect of the car parks at... I have difficulty seeing here where the Arengo's car park and the Engineer Lane car park... That is Grand Battery next, is it?

Hon. P R Caruana: That is not a car park.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, you are right, sorry. So Engineer car park and Arengo's car park are continuing. The others are paused, Mr Speaker.

Grand Battery (Interjection) is the top of Casements, that is right. The one at the top of Casements is continuing and soon will be completed, and maybe we will move to a second phase there.

Governor's Parade: there is a phase that is being finished as we speak. Before we move on to the second phase, we need to make an assessment which will relate to some allegations of right of light, which the hon. Gentleman may be aware of, which we need to investigate for ourselves.

The Upper Town and New School Buildings, Mr Speaker, is paused.

The Town Range Building (Clubs) I believe is continuing.

The Men's Hostel at the Old Guard House is paused, Mr Speaker.

The Main Guard is paused.

The loans for repairs to housing estates, as I understand it, have continued.

The installation of CCTV cameras was... All the procurement had been done before the Election. The works had not started. I believe that the works are about to start.

The boat moorings work, I believe, has not been paused. The partial payment of premium on land sales in St Peter's...

Hon. P R Caruana: Not paused but continued.

Hon. Chief Minister: I believe we said at the beginning that that should not be paused. I believe it continued through.

The partial repayment of premium on land sales in St Peter's Close is not a works issue, but it is under that head as an expense.

Mr Speaker, in respect of Government companies, Montagu Gardens and Montagu Crescent repairs, as I understand it, continue.

The ex-OEM housing projects continue. Some of them have been completed and may have to be done again.

The works at Waterport Terraces will continue.

The purchase of the new buses is something that we are looking into.

The retrenchment block at Lathbury Barracks, I believe, was substantially completed in their time in office.

The Upper Town refurbishments will continue, but those are paused at the moment.

The repairs to the Harbour Views podium: as far as I know, we have not been asked to stop those. I do not know whether those were actually completed and did not come to us as an ongoing project.

The Brympton Estate repairs, including Victoria Residency, is an issue that we are discussing, Mr Speaker.

The Willis's, Sandpits and New Harbours car parks, as I understand it, were substantially completed.

The Western Beach project which, as I interpret it, as a capital project, is a reclamation... is something that we expect and hope to be able to start planning quite soon.

The Eastside project, what the hon. Gentleman had given instructions for, which was the reduction of the height of the mound, were substantially completed, less for an area which resembled a cove, which may be maintained, at least for now, in the area to the north of Catalan Bay. It may be that we progress further works in respect of the Eastside project, but I have not yet had an opportunity of having further discussions with the principals that the hon. Gentleman had entered into an agreement with.

Mr Speaker, in respect of other projects, South Jumpers Bastion is paused.

Plata Villa, I believe, is paused.

The improvement works in the play zones at Varyl Begg Estate – the first phase had finished. We were about to start the second phase, and what we have said in respect of that is that we would like to see the work done in respect of the first phase, which was covered in scaffolding during the course of the General Election campaign, the hon. Gentleman will remember. We want to see it for ourselves before pressing the button on the second phase.

The refuse shelters, Mr Speaker: as I understand it, all of those were completed, or substantially completed, by the time that the General Election was called.

Mr Speaker, I must tell the hon. Gentleman that I think that there are other Government projects which are actually not on this list, because the way that this list has been compiled is from the estimates and I think that there are others that may be out of this list, but I hope that that is helpful.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it is helpful, but it would have been more helpful if the question had been answered.

The Government asks, as at 7th December, which projects were ongoing... The Opposition asks, rather, which projects were ongoing, and in respect of those which have been paused and which are continuing, and what we get by way of answer is a printout of all the capital... Some of them are not even projects. Some of them are expenditure on motorcycles for Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd. It is just a printout from a computer. No attempt made to actually answer the question asked.

The hon. Member, assuming that the information he has given us on his feet is accurate, could easily have put that into a proper answer to the question asked, instead of giving us a schedule which makes no attempt whatsoever to answer the question asked. That is all. It is not a question of being helpful or unhelpful. Of course, it is helpful to have things rather than not to have them, but he has demonstrated that the Question could have been answered easily.

Mr Speaker: There is no question over there, you know.

Next question.

Increasing the age of consent Government consultation

Clerk: Question 85, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister confirm that his Government will now be consulting the people of Gibraltar on increasing the age of consent?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question No. 32/2012.

Crimes Act and Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act Intention to commence

Clerk: Question 32.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Justice state whether the Government intends to commence the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act?

Mr Speaker: I think we had assumed we had reached that Question by now.

585 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education and Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

590 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with respect, the Chief Minister has said that he will be answering it with Question 32, but he can change his mind about this if he wants.

The Minister for Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): What the Chief Minister meant was that the Government will answer these two Questions together, because they are, in some way connected. So I will answer this one and the Chief Minister will answer his one, and the Opposition will understand why these are being taken together.

595 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see. You are going to answer one and he is going to answer the other.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, Question 32 is asked of me, and the other one is asked of him.

600 Mr Speaker, the Government intends to commence the Crimes Act 2011 and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, although some amendments will be required and not all parts will necessarily be commenced at the same time.

605 I have already held discussions on these matters with the Commissioner of Police and the Commissioner designate. Those discussions are ongoing. The Government is also consulting the Attorney General, the Bar, the Gibraltar Courts Service and the Judiciary on the commencement of the two Acts. A decision on the final form of the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act and which provisions will be commenced on what date will be taken once those discussions and consultation are concluded.

I can, however, inform hon. Members that there are several policy decisions which have already been taken by the Government and which are unaffected by the ongoing discussions.

610 The provisions in part 12 of the Crimes Act which impact on the age of consent will only be brought into effect after a public consultation process has taken place in accordance with the policy announced by the Government when in Opposition. That policy was, and continues to be, that there should be equalisation in the age of consent for heterosexuals and homosexuals but that the age at which equalisation should occur should be fixed by statute only after consultation with the general public has taken place.

615 Equalisation has already occurred as a result of the ruling of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar dated 8th April 2011, following a reference to the Court by the then Chief Minister. Commencement of the relevant provisions in the Crimes Act is not, therefore, necessary to achieve equalisation.

The Government intends to issue a consultation paper on the age at which equalisation should be fixed by statute. The precise form of the relevant sections within part 12 will be determined after the public consultation exercise has concluded.

620 As regards the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, the Government intends to repeal those provisions which abolish the right to silence. As stated by me during the debate on the Second Reading of the Bill, the right to silence is a fundamental right and it was, in our view, wrong for the then Government to introduce legislation to abolish this.

625 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Member accept that, given that, as he has rightly pointed out, the Supreme Court of Gibraltar has already equalised the age of consent at the age of 16, what they would effectively be consulting on would be an increase in the age of consent from 16 to 17 or 18 – for everybody, obviously?

630 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, we will not pre-empt what that consultation will be about. We are currently preparing a consultation paper. The consultation paper will be about what age should be fixed by statute. That is what the consultation paper will be about. We will consider any matters that are brought to our attention during the course of that consultation process, and a final decision would be taken at that stage, and not now.

635 Hon. D A Feetham: I am not asking the hon. Member to make a decision now; that is not the question. The question is, in the light of the fact that the Supreme Court of Gibraltar has already reduced the age of consent for homosexuals from 18 to 16 – they are equalising it at 16 – what the Government is, in fact, consulting on is whether there should be an increase in the age of consent for everybody, either to 17 or to 18.

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, the Government is not going to be consulting on simply whether there should be an increase. There is a possibility that the age will stay the same, so the consultation will be about what age should be fixed by statute for consultation. I can say the same thing 20 times, if the hon. Member wants.

Hon. D A Feetham: It is just, Mr Speaker, that the Members opposite are in unusually slippery form today. That is why I have had to repeat my question.

Can he say to this House what parts of the Crimes Bill he intends to commence and what parts – in other words, that are non-controversial – he intends to commence on the Crimes Bill and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Bill? Can he also give an indication to this House of when he intends to commence those parts?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the position, as I understand it, was very clear in my original Answer and there was nothing slippery at all about that.

I have said that I am holding discussions. In fact, I have had two meetings with the Commissioner of Police where I have discussed this particular issue. I am also in the process of consulting various other interested bodies like the Bar, the Attorney General, the Courts Service and the judiciary, and those discussions and consultations are ongoing. It is not for us to pre-empt what the outcome of those discussions and consultation will be. The final form, the precise form, of what is going to be introduced and when they will be introduced will be determined once that process has concluded.

I can, however, say to the hon. Member this: I have given an indication of specific policy decisions that have been taken in relation to matters which have been brought to our attention which we have considered under the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure Act. We will consult and take a final decision at that stage, but what I have also said is that there are some amendments that could be required. In particular, there will be a number of drafting amendments. I am not sure whether the hon. Member was aware, during his time as Minister for Justice, but there are some issues where there is a cross referencing between one Act and the other. Some sections are referred to in one Act as being sections in the other Act. My understanding is that that cross reference does not always match and there is a need to make some amendments to that cross referencing that applies.

There are also a couple of substantive issues – (Interjection) Well, we certainly missed it. The Government missed it. The drafters have brought these matters to our attention and it is our responsibility to correct it. So amendments will have to be brought to this House before those matters can be actually commenced.

There are also a number of substantive issues which are being considered and which may, in all likelihood, require amendment. There is a substantive issue, I can say, for example, in relation to the offence of arson, where there is a specific defence provided which, as we understand it, should not be there. So that will require an amendment.

There is another substantive issue in relation to disclosure by the defence, specifically in Magistrates' Court proceedings, where there should be powers given to the Court to disapply the disclosure exercise in very minor, run-of-the-mill cases where it would be cumbersome for disclosure obligations to arise. So those matters are currently being considered.

There is also another substantive issue which is being considered, which is of a sensitive nature, and on which I am happy to brief the hon. Member privately. That is a matter that is being considered.

There are training issues which arise. There are issues related to Customs officers because the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act extends the provisions of that Act to Customs officers. As I understand it, no provision had been made by the previous administration to provide training. There is a provision for declarations to be made by the Minister with responsibility for Customs for modifications to apply in terms of the procedure when it applies to Customs officers. That had not been done as at 8th December, as we understand it.

There are provisions which relate to other public officers, like factory inspectors, like labour inspectors. Again, there is a provision for modifications to be declared in respect of how the Act is going to apply to those officers. Again, that had not happened as at 8th December.

There are all those issues that are currently in the mix and, on top of that, we are carrying out consultation, as I have indicated, in respect of the specific commencement of the Act, whether it is possible for the whole of the two Acts to be commenced at the same time, or whether it should be done in various parts. That is part of the consultation exercise. I can tell the hon. Member that my preference is not to do a piecemeal approach, but it really depends on how long it is going to take for all these other matters to come in place, and once all that comes into place we can take a final decision.

What the hon. Member will see is that there has been some progress done. Some discussions and consideration of all these matters have been done. We have been in office for four or five weeks. The hon. Member had these Acts in place and in force for a considerable length of time and these matters were not in place. I would ask that the hon. Member should be at least a bit understanding that this is going to take some time. I am not able to say precisely whether we will be ready in two weeks, in three weeks or a month, but the process is ongoing.

Hon. D A Feetham: I can assure the hon. Gentleman that the Opposition is going to be entirely supportive of the process, provided... and I am sure, from what the hon. Gentleman has told this House today, he intends to make progress with what are seminal pieces of legislation.

I can tell the hon. Gentleman that all this cross reference between sections is all news to me. I did know about the arson point – that was the only point that was brought to my attention – but none of the other points.

I do notice that, in their manifesto, they had a commitment in their crime section to introducing a Rehabilitation of Offenders Act, hate crimes legislation and also a sexual offenders' register, all of which is contained within the Crimes Act. Can the hon. Gentleman given an indication to this House whether it is the intention of the Government to effectively hive off those parts into separate pieces of legislation, or is it the case that the Members opposite had not read the Crimes Bill when they compiled their manifesto?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member knows precisely what the answer to that is because it is an issue that was raised in a debate that we had during the Election campaign, when he made exactly the same point and I gave him the same answer.

Of course, we knew what the provisions of the Crimes Act were. I specifically answered the hon. Member when he presented the Bill and I participated in the debate on the Second Reading of the Bill. The reason those matters were there, as I told the hon. Member just before the Elections, and I will repeat now, is to show the commitment of the Government in respect of specific matters.

The hon. Member will have been satisfied that we are entirely committed to the process that was started by him, and which I commend him for, because these are formidable pieces of legislation and we are committed to this process, subject to some amendments and some policy decisions that we have already taken. It really depends on how long the whole process is going to take. We are committed to the rehabilitation of offenders as quickly as possible, to that sex offenders' register as quickly as possible, and the other matters.

Hon. D A Feetham: As separate pieces of legislation?

Hon. G H Licudi: Not necessarily. It depends on how long the process is going to take. If we see that the process is going to take too long, that it is a protracted process because of the issues that I have raised during the course of my answer today, then the Government will give serious consideration to actually hiving off those specific provisions and enacting them in the form of separate legislation. We hope that that will not be necessary and that the process will continue seamlessly, as has been started, but time will tell.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will the hon. Gentleman at least consider – bearing in mind that the hon. gentlemen opposite are as keen to see rehabilitation of offenders legislation introduced in Gibraltar as the hon. gentlemen and lady this side of the House – that he gives serious consideration not to hiving it off and enacting it in a separate piece of legislation, but commencing those parts relating to the rehabilitation of offenders legislation before other parts? Will he give serious consideration to that suggestion?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, I will certainly do that, and we are in the process of doing that.

I can confirm that we have had meetings and I have discussed this matter – not this particular section specifically, but the extent to which a lot of the sections in the parts hang together. For example, I mentioned part 12: a lot of part 12 hangs together as a whole part and it is very difficult to say, 'This particular section is not going to be commenced and this one is,' but to the extent that we can identify specific sections, or parts, of it that are standalone and can be commenced, we will endeavour to do so as quickly as possible.

750 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can I commend for the Hon. Minister the view that he first expressed, or the preference that he first expressed, which was to keep the Bill intact and also (Interjections) the view expressed now by my colleague, Hon. D A Feetham, to start it piecemeal, if necessary, because one of the 755 virtues of this piece of legislation is that it amounts to a codification of a large area of the law in a single Bill.
It is the closest we have ever come in this jurisdiction to a real codification of our criminal law. It will be a pity if that codification, that single-document approach, were lost as a matter of chronology of commencement when it can be achieved in another way.

Mr Speaker, can I ask my supplementary, which is this: while I applaud the hon. Member for his policy, or for his Government's policy, of consulting on the age of consent, can the hon. Member say when that consultation might take place?

760 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have already given instructions for the process to draft the consultation paper to take place. I would have liked to see that as quickly as possible.

I am told that a draft is going to be with me very soon. I will have to consider and make appropriate 765 changes and consult with the necessary parties in order to finalise, but that process has already started, of actually drafting the consultation paper.

770 Hon. P R Caruana: Can the hon. Member say whether the Government, laudable as it is that it should seek other people's view, too, through a process of consultation, can the hon. Member say whether the Government has its own policy on this question? Does the Government have a policy on whether the age of consent should remain equalised at the age of 16 or be raised, both for homosexual and heterosexual, and for all other purposes of the Act or be raised? Does the Government have its own policy view on this or is it devoid of ideas and just waiting to see what public opinion says on the question?

775 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is not a question of the Government being 'devoid of ideas'. There are different views from people who sit on the Government benches. There is no collective view that will be put out there as being the Government's preference. We will consult the people, we will take their views into account, and then take a collective decision which we will all stand by.

780 Hon. P R Caruana: So if there are... if it is presently equalised at 16 and there are different views, then at least some people on the Government's bench must believe that it should be increased?

785 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that much is gained with a debate on individual views, all I can say is that we will stand by collectively what that view is at the end of the day, but that process must take place.

The Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I accept that Mr Speaker...

790 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, we certainly are all of the same view that there should be an equal age for all.
That is the view...

The Hon. P R Caruana: That is a legal requirement...

795 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, it is a legal requirement, which the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has resisted in accepting because he caused the then Minister for Justice to bring in a Private Member's Bill because he did not accept that it was a legal requirement and it was only after he went to court that he was told that this was the position, even though he had received advice to that effect, that he accepted this was the position.

Our position is that we will act collectively, we will seek the views of the public, then take the final decision and introduce those provisions in part 12 of the Crimes Act after that process has been considered and concluded.

800 Hon. P R Caruana: With respect, I can ask the questions in which I am interested, not the answers that he is interested in giving. If he does not want to answer my question, he is free to say I do not want to answer your question.

805 My question was, given that it is presently set by law at an equalised level and given that I have asked him whether the Government has a policy as to whether it should stay equalised at the current level, or equalised at 17 or 18 or 19 or 20 or 50, it has got to stay equalised by virtue of the court's ruling, but we can equalise it at any level. So it has got to stay equalised. I have asked him whether the Government has a view on whether it should stay at 16 or be raised and he has told me that there are different views about that question in the Government.

810 I have simply asked whether it is equalised at 16 and doing nothing leaves it equalised at 16, if he has said to me that there are differences of view on the Government side, and there is no reason why there should not be – there is nothing wrong with having different views within the Government and, of course, there will be presumably collective responsibility around the majority position adopted in due course. All I have asked is for him to confirm that necessarily that must mean that there are people in the Government who believe it should be equalised at a raised level, because otherwise there would be no difference of view. Everybody would think it has to be at 16; it is inevitable.

815 A further supplementary question would be, regardless of what the Government's policy might be, given that it appears not yet to have been reached in terms of collectivity, can the Minister for Justice, given that he is responsible for this area of Government policy, can he at least tell this House what his position on the matter is, even though it may not be subsequently reflected in Government policy?

820 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker dealing with the first supplementary, which was addressed more generally. It is possible, actually, Mr Speaker, for there to be a different mechanism which we want to explore as part of the consultation process, which is that the ages at which people can indulge in that sort of activity could be subject to a sliding scale. In other words, people of a particular age are able to have intercourse with people not above a particular age, but people above another age cannot have intercourse with people of a lower age. This is a more sophisticated system, which I think applies in Canada, which is called the banding system.

830 To give an example, you could not have somebody over the age of 21 having sex with somebody under the age of 19, but you could have somebody under the age of 19 having sex with somebody... somebody of the age of 19 having sex with somebody who is at least over the age of 16. Those are more complicated systems, it maybe they are unworkable, but there are things beyond simply having to have it at 16, 17 or 18 that need, in our view, at least to be explored and that is one of the things that the consultation process will look at, where it is not simply a question of Members on this side of the House insisting on 16 or insisting on 18 or 17.

835 We want to look at that and it may be that those things are completely unworkable, because I do not know whether you can ask people to show you an ID card, when these sorts of moments come up, (Laughter) but it is certainly that is something that is worth exploring.

840 Mr Speaker, if he wants an answer –

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

845 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am here to answer for Government policy, not to express personal views. What I have said is that it is Government's policy to carry out that consultation process and then we will take a view and the Hon. Chief Minister has explained that there are different models, and I can say that that sort of model will be part of the consultation process and a view as to the specific model for Gibraltar will be taken once that is concluded.

850 Hon. P R Caruana: But in that consultation process, will the Government, as is usual in consultation processes, be indicating any sort of steer or preference? Is this a sort of consultation process that says, do you think the Government should leave it or change it and, if change it, to what level? Is it a questionnaire or is it consultation process? In a consultation process Governments normally provide a degree of indication of what the Government's thinking is, which may be changed as a result of the outcome of the consultation, but it is not usual for Governments, unless they are just doing a questionnaire, a vox pop, not usual for Governments to just do a consultation process that does not indicate what the Government is contemplating doing. That is normally what governmental consultation processes are like. So this would be more in the form of a questionnaire seeking people's expression of opinion about what they think should happen.

860 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, that is not what we have said. This is a full consultation. (Interjection) This is going to be a full consultation process.

The precise form of the consultation paper itself will be considered by the Government in Cabinet once we have a draft and once we take a particular view as to how to proceed. The issue that the hon. Member has just raised will be part of that consideration when we have a consultation paper to look at.

865 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Gentleman commit to making public the results of that consultation exercise? Also, will the hon. Gentleman give an indication as to whether they are merely taking into account the views expressed during that consultation exercise, or whether the Government intends to effectively be bound by any overwhelming view that is expressed by people consulted?

870 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there is a difference between a referendum and a consultation process. Whether the consultation process leads to a referendum is a different issue and we are not there yet. It is the hon. Members opposite, who have spoken in the past of a consultation and then, possibly, a referendum.

875 At the moment we are talking of a consultation process. As to the publication of the views, clearly subject to any views which may have been given anonymously and protecting any anonymity that may be part of that consultation process, in terms of giving numbers and general views of people, we see no reason why that should not be made public.

Clerk: Question 86.

880 Mr Speaker: Does the hon. Member have a supplementary?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes I do.

885 May I say this as well, that it appears that I will be commencing the Crimes Bill in four years' time when we are returned back into Government at this rate, but (Interjection) Mr Speaker, what he is saying is that, effectively, he is going to be consulting the people of Gibraltar, but then the Government is going to be doing whatever it wants to do. Is that what he is saying?

890 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that may have been what the hon. Members had in mind when they talked about consultation and it is a very strange consultation process that they have in mind, when they intended to enact, as they have enacted, commenced the provisions and then consulted the people as to what the provisions should be in the first place. That is what they announced that they would be doing.

895 We are not putting the cart before the horse, we are doing things in the way that we think it should be driven. We are not coming at this with, as I have said, a predetermined view. There may be a view that is actually put out there as part of the consultation process, a Government view but, ultimately, consideration will be given. This is not a predetermined process and we are simply going through the motions. This is a proper consultation process to find out what the people of Gibraltar want on this very sensitive and much debated issue.

900 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker does the hon. Member not agree that that is a very ungenerous answer to the question that was asked, given his answer to the previous supplementary. (Interjections) It is not what we want to do, it is when asked whether he would commit to any overwhelming outcome of the consultation process, he said 'no'. He said that the Government would then consider what it did, in other words he declined to commit the Government to adhere to an overwhelming outcome of a public consultation. In other words, the consultation does not bind the Government.

905 So what the Government is effectively doing is asking people's opinion without committing even to honour an overwhelming expression of opinion by the people and then deciding whether to adhere to the overwhelming expression of opinion by people on this question or not. So, really, the consultation is to see whether the overwhelming expression of opinion coincides with whatever they decide to do, but they will decide what they do and not be bound by the referendum. I am not criticising (Interjections) that, by the way.
910 I think it is perfectly legitimate for Government to carry out a consultation and not be bound by the outcome, but the hon. Member, then, should not put so much store by the consultation, because it is a consultation to inform Government policy. It is not a consultation to see what people want. It is a consultation so the Government knows what people think when the Government decides its policy, which it has not yet done.

(Interjections)

Hon. G H Licudi: The Hon. Leader of the Opposition seems to have turned his argument from the very first part of the question to the end of the question.

920

The position is the Government cannot commit itself to anything if it is embarking on a consultation process. What we are also not doing is starting this process on the basis of hypotheticals or assumptions: if we get 50%, if we get 60%, if we get 70%, or if we get 90%. We are not proceeding on the basis of hypotheticals. What is an overwhelming amount? Is it 50% or 60% or 75%, or does it have to be 99%? We are not pre-judging this process; we are keeping an open mind, and we are going to take into account the views that are expressed to us. Once those views are known to the Government, a collective decision will be taken.

925

Hon. D A Feetham: Just one more. I hope it is not contentious. Can the hon. Gentleman confirm that, when he undertakes the consultation exercise, he will also pay particular attention to the point that certainly caused me a lot of concern, when I was looking into this issue of the age of consent and increases to 17 or 18, which is that anybody, any 17 or 18-year-old that may be convicted as a consequence of increasing the age of consent to 17 or 18, would then automatically be placed on a sexual offenders register, which then has enormous consequences for that person for the rest of his life? Can he at least confirm that that is a point he will take into account in the consultation exercise and the deliberations of Government?

930

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, sir.

935

Aggregate public debt and cash reserves
Position at 7th December 2011

940

Clerk: Question 86, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister please say what were the aggregate public debt and the cash reserves as at 7th December 2011?

945

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman was clearly aware, given his statement that very night of 7th December on the leaders debate, the aggregate public debt as at 7th December 2011, when he was in office, was £520 million and the cash reserves stood at around £234 million.

Pensioners' Monthly Income December 2011 4.25% Debentures Value as at 7th December 2011 and subsequent position

955

Clerk: Question 87, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say the total value of Pensioners' Monthly Income December 2011 4.25% Debentures outstanding as at 7th December 2011 and how much of that amount was withdrawn after 7th December or was redeemed on the expiration date and not reinvested in other Government debentures?

960

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

965

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think we have taken it that it was Monthly Income Debentures of 2011, not December.

The total value of special pensioners three-year fixed 4.25% Monthly Income Debentures as at 7th December 2011 was £77,874,200. There were no amounts withdrawn after 7th December, other than on the expiration date, which was 31st December 2011, when the amount of £11,955,900 was redeemed and not reinvested in other Government debentures.

Hon. P R Caruana: And of the roughly £65,000,000 of expiring debenture that he has described that was reinvested, is he confirming that it was reinvested in Government debentures or had the Chief Minister by then given the necessary instructions for debentures to be issued in the name of – as he subsequently announced – the Gibraltar Savings Bank?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have got a schedule that shows that breakdown, which I am happy to let him have. It also shows how the £11,955,000 was paid out and I am happy to let him have that.

Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member agree that, if that £77 million – I do not know if the 11.95, I will see in a minute when he shows me that paper – whether that was not reinvested in Government, but was reinvested in other things... Whatever the breakdown might be, when I see it, but whatever was available to be reinvested by the depositor, if you could call him that, the expiring debenture holder, had the debenture holder been invited to reinvest that money in Gibraltar Savings Bank's investment, does he agree that the immediate effect of that would have been to reduce the gross public debt by that amount?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he and I are going to continue to have this debate, I can see, for a long time.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is not the same debate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, I believe that would have been the result.

Hon. P R Caruana: And I agree that you would be right to say that that would have been the result. Can the hon. Member say whether any of that happened, in fact?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman can see, the £65 million that was reinvested went to the limited issue for the period.

Hon. P R Caruana: Is that the Government, or a savings bank?

Hon. Chief Minister: I believe, that is the Government until 28th February 2017.

Hon. P R Caruana: So the hon. Member passed an opportunity to, despite the concern he has expressed about the level of gross public debt, here he had an opportunity to immediately reduce it by £56.9 million. Instead, he has chosen to preserve the gross public debt in that amount, unnecessarily high, until December 2017.

Why did he not do with that what he has subsequently announced that he was going to be doing, and that is, reissue that through the Gibraltar Savings Bank, instead of announcing yesterday, or the day before, that he had made a start for future debentures, he could have stood up in this House, or made a public statement, saying that he was well on the way to cutting the gross public debt by half in four years, indeed he had reduced it by nearly 12% in four weeks. Why did he not take that opportunity, if he is as concerned as he professes about the level of gross public debt?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is because we believe that we will be doing this in another way and he has been offering us this way of doing it since the last Budget. We believe we are going to reduce debt in a different way. We are going to... This will be part of what we do, but not all that we do.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, there is no way of reducing gross public debt without repaying the money out of the Government.

Once the Government has repaid the money to the debenture holders, those debenture holders can run off and take it away and put it in a bank, or a piggy bank, or under their mattress, or they can say to the 1025 Government, please issue me with a debenture through the Gibraltar Savings Bank. If they do that, the debenture holders, the investors, the pensioners, whoever they might be, get the benefit of a Government guaranteed investment, but the Government is not saddled with that amount of savings counting as gross public debt. Given that the hon. Member made such a store about gross public debt, is it not normal for people to assume that what he would want to do is reduce it immediately, as soon as possible? Here was an opportunity to reduce it by nearly £60 million overnight within three weeks of arriving in office and he nevertheless chose to issue the money, to renew the debentures through the Gibraltar Government savings...

1030 I am not criticising him for doing it, because I think he is wrong on his analysis of gross public debt and it makes no difference to the Government, or to anybody else, whether the debenture is issued by the Government directly, or whether it is issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank and guaranteed by the Government, as it is. So, this is the debate that we were having about the macro economic irrelevance of gross public debt, because gross public debt is a figure that is just inflated by debenture holders, whose cash is almost all there.

1035 I am not criticising him for not doing it, because we would not have done it. All I am saying to him is, given that he was so focused on the irrelevance of gross public debt on the seriousness of gross public debt, on the significance of the level of gross public debt to the state of our economy in general and public finances in particular, does it not strike him as illogical that he should have passed this early opportunity at no cost to the Government to have reduced it? That is what I am asking. I would have reduced it.

1040 Hon. Chief Minister: Obviously not, Mr Speaker, otherwise I would have done it. But I invite the hon. Gentleman to ask the next question, which deals with an issue which is very similar.

1045 Hon. P R Caruana: It is the same question in respect of the monthly one.

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.

1050 Hon. P R Caruana: Exactly the same question.

Gross Public Debt Reduction through redemption of Debentures

1055 Clerk: Question 88, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1060 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, given the Chief Minister's stated concern with the level of gross or aggregate public debt, can he say whether he will now reduce it by redeeming one-month notice debentures issued by the Government and reissuing them via the Gibraltar Savings Bank, thus instantly reducing the gross public debt by an amount equal to the total value of such debentures?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1065 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government will not reduce gross public debt by redeeming its existing one-month-notice debentures and reissuing them via the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1070 Even if the Government were minded to do so, Mr Speaker, under the terms and conditions of these debenture issues, the Government would have to give debenture holders six months' notice of its intention to do so. Instantly reducing the gross public debt in the manner suggested by the hon. Member here and during the course of the General Election campaign is therefore, I am advised by the Treasury, not a feasible option.

1075 The Government will, however, be discontinuing the sale of Government debentures in order to stop any further growth in gross public debt and will arrange for the Gibraltar Savings Bank to issue a range of savings products which will enable pensioners and other members of our community, who have come to depend on the availability of such debentures, to continue to have a Government guaranteed savings product.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the issue is not whether the Government has to give six months' notice or not – which I was unaware of and I am grateful to him for pointing it out. The issue is that there were about 1080 £116 million of monthly debentures, which he can give six months' notice of to, in effect, repay – no difficulty for the pensioner or the debenture holder because, as soon as the Government repays them, they can go round to the Gibraltar Savings Bank, does not even have to take his money out, it is all administered within the Treasury – and reissue the same debentures in the name of the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1085 Hey presto, £116 million is reduced from the gross public debt from that terribly high, terribly dangerous, level of gross public debt. So, why will he not give the six months' notice, if six months' notice is needed? Regardless of whether six months' notice is needed, so that he could not achieve that until June, but given that he has led everybody to believe that he would be a superhero if he reduces it in half over four years, he has had an opportunity, in three weeks, to reduce it by £60 million and he has got an opportunity by June to have reduced it by a total of £194 million, which is 40% of the entire gross public debt.

1090 Why does he set himself the task of reducing it by 50% in four years, when he can reduce it by 40% in six months? I put it to him, that it simply demonstrates the political fraud that was his conduct of an economic debate based on the level of gross public debt, as opposed to the level of net public debt I was recommending to the people of Gibraltar?

1095 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is only one political fraud in this House and it is the gentleman sitting opposite, who pretends to be the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. P R Caruana: We will see about that on Tuesday

1100 Unsustainable level of public debt
Criteria for determination

Clerk: Question 89, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1105 Hon. P R Caruana: No, on Tuesday, I am replying to your ridiculous broadcast of last night. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!
Question 89 please.

1110 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what level of public debt he considers to be unsustainable? He knows that I am asking because he made this point in his New Year broadcast. Can the Chief Minister say what level of public debt he considers to be unsustainable and by what criteria he fixes the amount at such a figure? Can he also say whether he distinguishes for such purposes between gross and net public debt?

1115 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1120 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have a lengthy answer and, to assist the hon. Member, I am quite happy to let him have my copy. It has got numbers in it, so I am quite happy to make it easier for him.

Mr Speaker, as I told the nation last night, the Government considers that the current level of public debt is too high and unsustainable and I know that the hon. Members laugh when I refer to Gibraltar as a nation. As the hon. Members know, the maximum level of public debt is prescribed under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act 2008.

1125 In terms of net public debt, the maximum level permitted under the Act is the lower of (1) 40% of Gibraltar's gross domestic product or (2) 80% of consolidated fund recurrent annual revenue.

In terms of gross public debt, the maximum level permitted is that which will not cause the annual debt servicing ratio – that is the ratio of annual debt interest payments of the consolidated fund recurrent annual reserve – to exceed 8%.

1130 Mr Speaker, the approved estimates of revenue and expenditure for 2011-12 on page 3 of the published estimates book reflects projected gross public debt, as at 31st March 2012 at £480 million and projected net public debt is projected to be £221.7 million. On 9th December 2011, our first day in office, this Government was confronted with a situation where gross public debt was £40 million higher, at £520 million, and net public debt was £64 million higher, at £285.8 million.

1135 Mr Speaker, with the maximum net public debt currently permitted under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act 2008 at £306.2 million, which represents 80% of consolidated fund of current annual revenue for the financial year ending 31st March 2011, the Government found itself with useable cash reserves of just £20 million. Taking into account the expenditure commitments on capital projects entered into by the previous administration, this would have seen cash reserves reduce further to levels that would cause the net public debt to exceed the limits permitted under the Act.

1140 Mr Speaker, this Government considers this state of affairs to be unacceptable. Putting Government in a position where it only has available £20 million of useable cash reserve is, in our view, unsustainable. The Government is not prepared to increase net public debt beyond the limits permitted under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act 2008 and, indeed, this Government is also committed to halve the current level of gross public debt by the end of its first term in office.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if I had wanted to listen to a replay of his ridiculous broadcast of last night, I would have done it on YouTube.

1150 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I had wanted. –

Hon. P R Caruana: I have not asked him this morning. Mr Speaker.
I am sorry... (Interjections)

1155 Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible] ...stop calling each other names.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, I haven't called him any names. I have called his broadcast ridiculous and I have referred to YouTube as rubbish. (Interjections) But, Mr Speaker, it is ridiculous.

1160 Hon. Chief Minister: This is how we find our temperatures rise, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, look, I have asked him a question. He has chosen not to answer probably, because he understands neither the question nor the answer and, instead, he just reads me out three paragraphs of his broadcast of last night, which have nothing...

1165 First of all, let me correct the hon. Member on the facts. It is not correct that, on 8th December, he was confronted with a gross public debt of £520 million, or has he forgotten two things? First of all, that he has told me, in answer to Question 86, that I myself told him in the leaders debate on the 7th, that it was £520 million and has he also forgotten that, as far back as July last year, immediately on the very afternoon of his speech on the Budget debate, he hotfooted it off to the GSLP office, recorded a little broadcast on public debt, in which he announced that it was £520 million. So if he had known it was £520 million since July 2011, what does he think entitles him to come to this House today to say that he was confronted with that statistic on 8th December?

1170 The hon. Member neither knows the facts nor understands them, nor has the intelligence not to forget what he has already known.

1175 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition must know, after his years in this Parliament, Question Time involves asking questions.

1180 Hon. P R Caruana: I am asking questions.

Mr Speaker: With respect, the preamble to that question is rather lengthy.

1185 If the Hon Leader of the Opposition wishes to debate this matter of the public debt issue, he can put a motion down and it will be heard, I am sure, pretty promptly, but questions must be questions with a fairly brief preamble.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, thank goodness for that, otherwise I do not know where the Hon. the Chief Minister would be.

1190 Mr Speaker, be all that as it may, the question was... the question is not what the statutory limit of public debt. Does the hon. Member not acknowledge that it was I who explained to him, in July last year, what the statutory definition of the level of public debt? I have not asked him that. What I have asked the hon. Member, given that he appeared on GBC and told 'the nation', as he likes to call it, with a very grave face that public debt levels were unsustainable, well, then he must – even though he knows what I think of his grasp of economic matters – have some economically based view of what level of public debt is sustainable for this economy and what level of public debt is unsustainable for this economy.

1195 He has described the current level of public debt as unsustainable, even though, by his own admission, it is below the statutory legal ceiling. So I have asked him to please tell me, given that he has expressed economic opinions about public finance matters to the people of Gibraltar, I am asking him, in his judgement or, in accordance with the policy of his Government, what level of public debts does he consider to be sustainable for our economy of a gross domestic product of just over £1 billion, and by what economic criteria he fixes the level at whatever level he chooses? Instead of saying to me, I think the level of sustainable public debt for an economy like ours is x and therefore the present one is too high, he ignores the question, ignores the answer and gives me some spiel about thinking that the present level is too high. So now we know that he thinks that a gross public debt of £520 million and a net public debt of around £280 or £290 million is unsustainable.

1200 At what level does that equilibrium switch to sustainability? There must be some level of public debt which he thinks is economically not unsustainable and I am just asking him what that is and to explain the economic criteria by which he fixes that. Is he able to do it, or isn't he?

1210 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said a lot of things about me in the past year in this House. He has started already today.

Hon. P R Caruana: Answer the question.

1215 Hon. Chief Minister: And I will answer the question.

Look, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman, when I have just got on my feet and started answering the question, if he is going to start mumbling under his breath, 'Answer the question!', then the minute he gets up to ask a supplementary, I am going to start saying 'Ask a question! Ask a question!' because he gives us lectures... He forgets that questions should not be a pretext for debate and he goes on with his usual less than enamouring style of wanting to call everyone much less able than him, at anything that we might turn our hands to.

1220 Let me start by answering, Mr Speaker, the 'ridiculous' – I think that is the word he has chosen and the only one I am going to allow myself to use – the 'ridiculous' statement that he made about my podcast. I did not say in my podcast, Mr Speaker, that has been so much a subject of debate across the floor of this House that gross public debt was £520 million. Mr Speaker, I said that the amount we were debating in this House did not include the £20 million of borrowing, which had been included in the Government company. First point, Mr Speaker.

1225 Second point. The hon. Gentleman said, only in the leaders debate, not before, that the gross public debt of Gibraltar was £520 million and I think he realised that he had said something that he had not said publicly before, because the jaws of the interviewer, the jaws of the member, or the individual, who was there for the PDP and mine dropped – and he was surprised that we were surprised to find out that that was the level of gross public debt.

1230 Mr Speaker, it is not possible in this House for us to have a Westminster-style system of government and opposition, whilst the hon. Gentleman tries to make supplementaries a possibility for him to cast ridicule – to take the word that he has chosen to use first – on members of the Government, as if we were still members of the Opposition.

1235 What I can tell him, Mr Speaker, is that our attitude to answering his questions to debates in this House, will be completely different to his attitude. Therefore, to answer, what should have been his question in his supplementary – if he felt I had not answered it – 'what do I think is an unsustainable level of debt for a Government like that of Gibraltar?': it is the level of debt which he left us, which gave us only £20 million of useable cash on 9th December. That, Mr Speaker, is unsustainable and frankly, in my view, it is that which is ridiculous and frankly, in my view it is that which speaks volumes of his economic competence, that he put

Gibraltar in a position that, without changing the law and without borrowing more, its Government had not a penny more than £20 million to spend.

1245

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the first thing I have to say, as a point of order, is that I am astonished that the hon. Member is saying in this House today that he did not in his podcast say that the gross public debt was £520 million. He did. He must know that he did and if he does not withdraw his denial of it, I shall have to bring a motion.

Does he not recall that he went further than saying it was £520 million, that he said it was £520 million and, therefore, in excess of the legal statutory limit. Does he not remember saying all of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: This is a point of order, Mr Speaker. I have said what I said about the podcast and Hansard will reflect it and I invite him to bring the motion.

This time...

Hon. P R Caruana: I will!

Hon. Chief Minister: I think I can confidently predict that the result will not go his way.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the result will not go my way, not because you did not say in your podcast £520 million – which you did – the result will not go my way because you will choose your majority to make your untruths look like the truth. That is why the result will not go my way.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order again!

I think, we are again deviating from what Question Time is all about. If I recollect my parliamentary practice well, it is the purpose of eliciting information on Government policy, eliciting information. It is not intended for debates of this nature.

1270

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, again, if we are going to limit Question Time in this House to eliciting information, I will, of course, abide by Mr Speaker's ruling, but it will be a very novel experience in this Parliament. I have been in it for 16 – no, for 20 years – and I have never known Question Time to be only for eliciting information, including the years that Mr Speaker has been presiding over it in the chair.

1275

Mr Speaker: I hope the hon. Member will concede I have given a lot of latitude today for debates of a completely different nature.

Hon. P R Caruana: As you have always done. When we were in Government and they were in Opposition, Mr Speaker.

I think it is laudable and all Speakers before you have done the same.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may say so, there is one difference, just speaking on the point of order that, of course, Parliament now intends to meet every month and there will be another opportunity for questions next month –

Mr Speaker: And motions.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and motions and not just... Parliament will no longer be meeting only three or four times a year.

1290

Mr Speaker: May I invite the Hon. Leader of the Opposition to pose a question?

Hon. P R Caruana: I will.

Just as a preamble to my question, I do not ask questions to ridicule the hon. Member, but I cannot help it if the effect of his inability to answer my questions is to bring ridicule on himself. I asked the hon. Member questions to test him and to elicit information on public statements that he has made vitriolically attacking me and my Government when we were in office. When I challenged him on it, demonstrating that he has 1300 practically no understanding of the issue that he pontificates about, all he can think of saying – and he has still not answered the question – is that I want to ridicule him. I do not want to ridicule him, Mr Speaker, I assure him, but I do want to demonstrate what I have believed to be the case since he first started debating economic matters in this House, that he is almost totally ignorant on matters to do with the economy and public finance.

1305 I repeat my question. At what level, would he be content – and if I could mention just one more thing to him – the amount of money that the Government has available to it to spend, which he has put at £20 million, has got absolutely nothing to do with the level of gross public debt, nothing whatsoever. That is a factor of the level of net public debt. Your gross public debt could be £6 billion if you wanted: it would not affect the amount of usable cash available to the Government.

1310 Eventually, I suppose, he will learn and understand these things, but Mr Speaker, will he, given that he has told the people that, at the current levels of gross and net public debt, he considers public debt to be economically unsustainable, will he tell this House and, through it, the people to which he gives economic lectures in Gibraltar, what he considers is a level of sustainable public debt?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not in this House to be tested by anyone. I passed all my tests at Bayside and at Oxford, and I did very well in all of them, thank you very much...

1315 Hon. P R Caruana: Not in economics.

Hon. Chief Minister: Frankly, the issue today is just that the hon. Member opposite does not like to hear the answer that he is given, Mr Speaker.

1320 Hon. P R Caruana: I want the answer to the question that I have asked, for goodness sake!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1325 Hon. Chief Minister: I must say I sometimes get concerned about the hon. Gentleman's health. He needs to relax.

1330 Mr Speaker, the answer – which he does not like – is that the sustainable level of public debt is the level that allows a government more than £20 million of usable cash reserves. He can take it from there that, whether it is in the net calculation or the gross calculation, we believe that debt has to be reduced and the levels to which it has to be reduced, he will know from our manifesto, which is not a document for which we are answerable in this House, but we believe that should be halved and therefore we must think that it is unsustainable for it to be higher than, closer to, half of where it was when we inherited the £520 million debt that he kindly left us on 9th December.

1335 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will he say whether the halving relates to gross or to net public debt?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not here to test him, but I thought he could read. Our manifesto says gross.

1340 Clerk: Question 90, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1345 Hon. P R Caruana: With the Clerk's and the Speaker's indulgence: so the answer that I should rely on is the last one that he has given me, and not the second last. The first answer that he gave me was that an unsustainable level of public debt was a level that only allowed the Government £20 million of spendable cash, from which most people would deduce he means that, provided there is more than £20 million of spendable cash, the level is then sustainable.

1350 He then went on to say that I should impute, from his manifesto – the one that he is not accountable for in this House – that the sustainable level of public debt, in their view, is half the gross public debt as it is today. So I am just seeking confirmation. I should rely on the second answer and disregard the one about the £20 million.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that he wants to make this division between net and gross and that never the twain should meet. He needs to understand, Mr Speaker, that he is the Chief Minister that achieved some things in 16 years and, in our view, (Interjection) failed in some others.

1355 I am the Chief Minister who arrived in office to be told that the previous administration, the previous Chief Minister, had committed Gibraltar to capital commitments, to capital payments, far in excess of the cash that we had available in the kitty and that the first act that I was going to be required to do in this Parliament would be to change the definition of debt in order to enable us to borrow more, in order to be able to pay for the commitments that he had entered into.

1360 He can take my second last answer, he can take my last answer or he can take this answer. It is not sustainable for the hon. Gentleman to have left this community in a position where the useable cash reserve of the Government the day after he left office was £20 million. One issue of unsustainability.

1365 It is not, in our view, sustainable for Gibraltar to have the gross debt that it has today. It will be halved by the time of the next General Election. He can assume, from the fact that I am talking about £20 million of useable cash reserve being too low, that we will therefore also be reducing net debt so that there is more cash available.

Mr Speaker, I know he does not like the answer, but he has to accept that that is the answer.

1370 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, as we will discover on Tuesday, that answer is wrong. He does not have to change the law relating to the level of public debt in order to have more than £20 million available, but he will have to sit on the edge of his seat during the weekend and listen to the reason why that is so on Tuesday.

1375 Mr Speaker, if he chooses to continue with the debate about public debt being unsustainably high, and by public debt he means gross public debt, as he has now said again, can I then re-put to him my question, which is: why, if gross public debt is unsustainably high, if the effect of gross public debt being so unsustainably high is, in his view, incorrect that the Government only has £20 million to spend, why doesn't he solve all of his problems and apparently the problems which he imagines Gibraltar has, he could have reduced it by 40% – four zero per cent – between now and June? Indeed, he could have done 60% on 1st January this year, 2012, and he could do the other 117 by June because he has got to give the monthly debenture holders a month to switch to the Savings Bank.

1380 If, as he says, the level of gross public debt has the effect that he, incorrectly, refuses to be shaken from, why hasn't he done the obvious thing, which is to slash it by 40% by June and then everybody in Gibraltar can sleep easily at night and breath safely? We can all sleep in the knowledge that we are not all about to go belly-up and bankrupt. He has it in his gift to humour his own false economic principles, but why doesn't he do it, Mr Speaker? Why doesn't he slash the gross public debt of the Government of Gibraltar by £194 million, which is 40% by June? He can do it before the next Budget. Why doesn't he do it if it has the adverse effect that he is describing in this House, or which he has described to the people of Gibraltar?

1385 Hon. Chief Minister: For the reasons set out in my answer to the previous Question 88 of 2012. (Interjections and laughter)

1390 Clerk: Question 90. The Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, what the hon. Member is going to be learning quite quickly is that constant waffle is just not acceptable in a Chief Minister. Substance needs to appear at some point.

1395 Mr Speaker: A question, please.

Hon. P R Caruana: What is the Question number?

1400 Hon. Chief Minister: I am quite happy to say those things about him, too, Mr Speaker. I am quite happy to get into discussions about these issues.

Mr Speaker, let us give the people of Gibraltar the parliament that they deserve and that they want – (Applause) a place where the Government comes to answer questions, not to be subject to the sort of speeches we are getting from the gentleman on the other side.

1405 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, but I do not believe the people of Gibraltar want a parliament or a Government in which the Chief Minister frightens them and then does not understand, cannot answer the simple question of why he does not lift the fright immediately when he is able to.

I do not think the people of Gibraltar –

1410 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: – want a parliament like that at all.

1415 Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the people of Gibraltar do not want a Chief Minister who leaves them with only £20 million of useable cash.

1420 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition was called to ask a question, but before he does so, I must remind members of the public gallery that you are invited here to observe the proceedings, not to participate in the proceedings.

1425

Government revenue and expenditure
Forecast at 31st December 2011

1430 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, Question 90.

Hon. P R Caruana: Obligated, sir, Mr Speaker.

It is still a good deal more civilised than in the United Kingdom, by the way, you understand that. As we learn everything from the United Kingdom, I think we are still considerably under their ceiling of incivility.

1435 Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what is the overall Revenue and Expenditure in the current financial year, as at 31st December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1440 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am advised that these figures have not been provided before, but we are happy to make this information public.

The overall Government revenue, as at 31st December 2011, stood at £314.8 million, whilst overall expenditure stood at £279.3 million.

1445 These figures may not reflect adjustments which are effected by Treasury at the end of the year and therefore represent no more and no less than a snapshot of the position. The figures, therefore, should be viewed in that context, I am advised.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member has been told that these figures have never been provided before, he has been misinformed.

1450 They have never been provided as simply as these have been asked, but the Hon. the present Minister for Employment, when he was Chief Minister and, I think, subsequently him, or certainly Mr Bossano, continued right up until the end to ask me not just for the totals – which is all I have asked for – but by Department, the total broken down by Department in terms of expenditure.

It is true you did not used to ask about revenue, but you used to ask about expenditure.

1455 Hon. Chief Minister: It is true.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, thank you very much. I am obliged to the hon. Member for his answer.

Former Chief Minister's 'impenetrable curtain'

Current Chief Minister to explain

1465 Clerk: Question 91, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, although I think this was the Answer that he read out to the last Question.

1470 Can the Hon. the Chief Minister please say what ‘impenetrable curtain’ he has discovered that he believes I set up?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1475 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman clearly ensured that the recent General Election was fought on figures for gross debt, net debt and amounts due from Government wholly owned companies which were based on published estimates presented in April 2011.

As it is now clear from the discussion this morning that Ministers were receiving up-to-date information on every movement in income and expenditure, he would have known that the figures upon which everyone else was debating were no longer accurate.

1480 By not sharing that information, by not calling more frequent meetings of the House for Questions and by continuing to refer to the ‘estimates’ when he knew the actual figures, the hon. Gentleman kept the right data behind an impenetrable curtain.

1485 Hon. P R Caruana: I see. Well, he will have to wait for the answer to that on Tuesday as well. (Interjections)

Well, I suppose you can see it on YouTube... You are a sort of ‘gadget wallah’ aren’t you? You can see it (Interjections) on YouTube.

1490 So the ‘impenetrable curtain’, as I understand it, is the fact that he thinks and he alleges that, during the election campaign, I was not using up-to-date gross and net public debt figures. Is that correct? Am I correct, then, in interpreting his answer?

1495 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, until the night of the leader’s debate, when the hon. Gentleman told those of us who opened the debate, and Gibraltar, the figure of £520 million of gross debt was not a figure that, as far as I am aware, was ever made public.

Hon. P R Caruana: Therefore, will the hon. Member... If I can demonstrate to the hon. Member that he knew this at the Budget time last year, will he withdraw all the nasty allegations he has made about me on television?

1500 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very sorry that the hon. Gentleman thinks that I have said anything nasty about him.

I have simply put the position, as I see it, in relation to the issues that arise. I am quite happy, Mr Speaker, to tell the hon. Gentleman that I believe that that was the correct position and that we shall have a debate about whether he can demonstrate something or not.

1505 Hon. P R Caruana: I am sure that he will.

1510 Airport tunnel runway
Position of project

Clerk: Question 92, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1515 Hon. P R Caruana: Right, we have had the one about ‘impenetrable curtains’, no? Yes, so this must be ninety-two.

Can the Chief Minister say whether it is the intention of the Government to proceed with the tunnel project under the runway?

1520 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman knows, the Government has received a pre-action letter from the original contractors selected by his administration for this project. It would not be in the public interest for me to say more at this stage. I am happy to speak to the hon. Gentleman about how things have developed since he left office on a confidential basis.

A public statement about the status of the tunnel project will be made in the coming weeks and I am happy to say to the House that we will be taking legal advice on what it is right for us to say and not say.

1530 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I have not asked him a question about what the legal status is of contractual claim and counter claim between the Government and the sacked contractor. They left the scene months ago. I have not asked him and nothing that he says about whether the Government intends to continue with the tunnel project or not has anything whatsoever to do with the fact that he has received a claim from the contractor that was terminated by the Government on expert legal advice from the United Kingdom and I believe that the Government has absolutely nothing to fear from the letter of claim that they have received.

1535 I offer my services free of charge to the Government, in whatever capacity he thinks I can help the Government – either as an ex Chief Minister or as an ex person involved in the decision to terminate the contract. I offer him my services in whatever consultancy or legal capacity, unpaid, to help him see off this entirely unmeritorious claim.

1540 Mr Speaker, that is not what my question was about. I would like to tackle this question in a sort of politically friendly way because I honestly do not think that the decision about whether we make a tunnel or not should be made on the basis of, ‘It was a Caruana GSD project and I will be damned if I am going to do it.’ There are serious long-term socioeconomic implications from...

1545 If the Government makes the decision that it is not willing to borrow more money, then it cannot build a tunnel, whether it thinks it is a good idea or not. That is why we do not agree with the Government’s decision not to borrow any more money, but I accept that if the Government, as it is entitled to do, makes the policy decision that it does not want to borrow more money, then it does not presently have £55... well, whether it is £55... I suspect £55 million is a back-of-the-envelope estimate by GJBS. It certainly cannot be done for the £15 million left to be paid to the OCL or whatever that figure is... £15, £16, £17 million. It will be some significant sum of money greater than the original £30 million, I think the figure was. But the Government certainly cannot do that immediately without borrowing more money, I can see that, which is why we never put ourselves in that position.

1550 What I would like to – through some supplementaries – try and convey to the hon. Member is the importance of this project to Gibraltar. This project is about two things. Does the hon. Member acknowledge, and will he agree to give due consideration when making his decision, both as to whether to proceed and the timing of when to proceed, to the fact that this project achieves for Gibraltar two important things. Firstly, it makes the new air terminal much more viable because it allows the hon.... who was it who said this morning who was already busy getting?... the Hon. Mr Costa, who was saying this morning that he was busy talking to new airlines already.

1560 Well, Mr Speaker, given that every time an aircraft lands or takes off, there is some degree of traffic paralysis in Gibraltar, therefore decoupling the vehicular traffic from the aviation traffic frees the Government to allow many more flights into Gibraltar than would otherwise be possible or viable without the barrier being up and down all day. So it is linked to the amount of volume of aviation traffic that can reasonably push...

1565 Will he also take into account that it decouples traffic congestion in the rest of Gibraltar from the tailback of frontier traffic because frontier traffic presently fills the loop, comes in front of the old air terminal, then there is a gap across the airfield and then it immediately gets to the Cross of Sacrifice roundabout, and once it gets there, all hell breaks loose. That would be finished because frontier traffic, in future, will have to fill the loop. It can then tail back along one of two lanes westbound, all the length of the frontier fence, all the length of the tunnel, all the length of the new motorway under the runway and parallel to Eastern Beach, and before it has any adverse impact on non frontier traffic: whilst, at the same time, because it is a two-lane road, allow people going to North Front, to the air terminal or to wherever else they are going – not to the frontier – free use of the other lane in both directions. Mr Speaker, these are very long-term socioeconomic things.

1570 The hon. Members will make whatever policy decisions they make. I would just urge them and ask them to give due consideration that whatever GSD project they decide to cancel for political prioritisation, manifesto prioritisation... no, they have said they are going to do that and they are entitled to do that. 'We want to spend the spending power that we have on our manifesto and not on yours.' Well, I am not going to criticise that. It is perfectly reasonable.

There is one project that Gibraltar will not forgive the present generation of politicians if it does not obtain, and that is a tunnel under the runway. Will the hon. Member at least agree to deal with the pros and cons of that project on an objective basis, stripped of any partisan rivalry consideration?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, first of all, I have not received a pre-action letter. He received it when he was Chief Minister, the Government received it, and it will be dealt with, as he knows, in order to defend the Government position to the best possible abilities of those advising us. Here the identity of the politicians is less relevant.

I must tell him, Mr Speaker, that in all the times that I was sitting where he is, or slightly to his right, and I was given this sort of answer, I simply said, 'Thank you. I will have the conversation' and I know that he has not tried to push me further and I hope that we can have that conversation about why I do not want to be pushed on whether works are going to start on that tunnel or not. But he should know, Mr Speaker, that when it comes to making a decision about whether this project, and other projects that were commenced or about to be commenced in relation to the tunnel, there is a lot done which is not visible, so it is a commenced project. We will not be making decisions based on whether they started it or we started it – whether it was a GSD project or whether it was a GSLP project. We will be making the decisions that we think are in the public interests of Gibraltar and all of the things that he has said are relevant to the decision that we are going to make.

I must tell him that, in the time that we have debated in this House the issues of the air terminal, and we have exchanged views about that, not just in this House but in press releases, he will have seen that we did not criticise the decision to create a tunnel. We might have criticised the way that the works were ongoing, but that was one part of the project of air terminal and associated works that we were not critical of. We were critical of the decision to create the new air terminal and he knows fully what our arguments were on that and we know what his arguments were on that, but the tunnel and the roads were not the subject of criticism by us.

I understand that things have gone pear-shaped. It is now, as he says, unlikely to be something that can be completed on project price of £30 million. I do not want to get drawn into saying more than I agree with him that those are the relevant issues in determining whether we should be pursuing that tunnel project or not, or some other project. He and I should talk, not about his offer to advise – I would expect nothing less from somebody who has been Chief Minister of Gibraltar other than to want to help Gibraltar on an issue like the one that is developing in relation to the tunnel... (Interjection) Well... but we should have a conversation (Interjection) about why I do not want to be pushed further today on this issue in particular.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I will not press him, except to ask him – because it would be news to me and no one had ever put this to me when I was in his chair – it has never been suggested to me before that there is any connection between the litigation and whether or not the tunnel proceeds. Now he tells me that there is, or he has now had new advice, which I have never had. I am certainly willing to discuss it with him in private.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not even going to go there and when we speak he will realise why.

New Power Station Commitment to proceed

Clerk: Question 93, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister confirm that the Government will proceed with the new power station, as they committed to do in their Election manifesto and other election statements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1630 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as we committed to do during the campaign, we will respect the agreements that have been signed in respect of the proposed new power station.

A further statement will be made in due course of how that will result in our ensuring that Gibraltar's power needs are provided for.

1635 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member's answer is, as he must well know, incomplete as to the extent of his election commitments.

1640 It is true that the manifesto costs it in terms of respecting agreements, but the Hon. Dr Cortes, no doubt reflecting the sense of urgency of the environmental lobby groups to get on with the building of the new power station, published articles in both the Panorama and the Chronicle newspapers... remember, you know, the article it has got a nice picture of him here – these articles that all the candidates had to publish – in which he says... well, not content to just commit him to do it, he actually chastised us for not having done it yet quote:

1645 'The GSD Government has delivered neither the much needed Power Station nor the sewage plant. We are committed to both.'

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly why, Mr Speaker, in due course we will be making a statement of how we will be ensuring that Gibraltar's power needs are provided for.

1650 Hon. P R Caruana: With respect, that is disingenuous.

Dr Cortes, on behalf of the GSLP, was not committing to satisfy Gibraltar's power needs, he was committing the party at the polls to proceed with the 'much needed power station' which he chastised us for not having built yet and the only thing that we had not built yet, which we were planning to build, was the new power station up at Lathbury Barracks. That is what he was committing the GSLP Liberal Alliance to do.

1655 Is the Hon. the Chief Minister now resiling from that? Is he saying that the Government is not committed to proceed with a new power station but just to some alternative means of ensuring that Gibraltar's power supplies are met?

1660 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are many potential permutations which flow from what I have said, some of which include the power station as he planned it and some them which he could include, the power station, but not as he planned it.

1665 Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Cortes was absolutely right, of course, to bring this issue to the attention of people in the terms that he did because what the hon. Gentleman might want the public to forget or, in fact, might not want the public to know, is that perhaps the reason he is pushing us so much – and we have been in administration for much less than eight weeks – is that in 1999, I believe, he had a Report, called the Manx Report, that told him that engine sets numbers one and two at Waterport are expected to reach the end of their operational life by 2004, after which either Waterport or OESCO will need to invest in additional generating capacity to maintain security of supplies to Gibraltar.

1670 Mr Speaker, the Report went on to say that, even assuming a more optimistic figure of 120,000 hours of running life, engine sets numbers one and two have only a further four years to run, which does not take them to the termination date of the Power Purchasing Contract of 2010, which is the OESCO contract. He was being told, Mr Speaker, in this Report, the following words:

'Therefore, serious consideration needs to be given to commissioning new generation plant capacity soon.'

1675 Mr Speaker, he got this Report in 1999. It was not until last year that the generating capacity got the importance it appeared to deserve from the hon. Gentleman. He knows that if this project were to go ahead, it will be the largest capital project in the history of Gibraltar. It is an important decision to take, whether we proceed with that project or not, not just because it is the biggest capital project in Gibraltar, not just because of the issues of debt that arise on which we can continue the debate about whether it would be debt or not be debt, whether we would breaking our commitments or not breaking our commitments of debt.

1680 I know what he said about the backing he would give us if we were to do these projects, but he needs to understand that we have not seen the agreements since they were initially drafted. We have not been seeing the proposal for the funding since the drafting started.

1685 He, of course, was in the driving seat when it was all started. He, I expect, will know it inside out. We have been there for less than six full weeks. We need to make a decision about how we deal with Gibraltar's future generating capacity needs, which we will make as soon as we are able and we will make an announcement as soon as we are able.

1690 Hon. P R Caruana: So the answer is that he is not committed to the power station that we have contracted to build and in respect of which he is aware that the export guarantee agencies of three leading EU countries have guaranteed the Government's new borrowing on.

I just say that to identify the project. He is not committed, at this point in time, to building that power station.

1695 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, at this point in time, having been elected six weeks ago, having started to see the detail of the agreement six weeks ago and not just what the hon. Gentleman was telling us publicly before then, having already met with some of the people who have been assisting us to put in place the financing and having, as he knows, had an opportunity to extend the period for making the final decision to proceed or to 'omit', which is the technical jargon that he will know that contracts carry for a decision to proceed or stop, it is not possible for us, Mr Speaker, to give him a clear statement that we are committed to that power station in that place, in that form. There are many permutations of this which could see that power station, for example, with less generating capacity initially and slowing building up to more. All of those permutations are on the table.

1700 Mr Speaker, what I am saying to him is he needs to stop trying to push me into a corner to say 'yea' or 'nay', because I believe that what we are considering, potentially, is within the letter of what we committed ourselves to do, within the letter of what Mr Cortes said in his articles. Of course, I understand that he is embarrassed because he knew in 1999 that these problems were going to start arising in the middle of the following decade. We are well over that decade. He did nothing whilst he was in power and now he wants to make sure that there are not power cuts in Gibraltar – which would be his fault.

1710 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has got to get out of Opposition mode and just accept that he is now the Chief Minister. (Hon. Chief Minister: Ditto.) It is not true that we did not do anything. (Interjections) No, I am now the Opposition. I am allowed to snipe. I no longer have the responsibility. I can now be as irresponsible as you were when you were on this side of the House! You are the one with the responsibility, (Interjection) not me. Whatever you need to...

1715 Mr Speaker, it is not true that the Government did nothing. Does he think that a decision to build a new power station is something that materialises in three months? He must be aware that there were reports and studies that needed to be done to seek a site, that there had to be geological things about... that a site had to be selected. Then there had to be a consultation about technical analysis of the sort of power station, or renewable energy alternatives had to be investigated. Then we had to choose the procurement route.

1720 Then it all had to be specified and, when we were ready to start, we were enjoined by the Court because somebody thought that we were obstructing his view or something, or making too much noise in the new power station. If not, that project would now be beyond the stage where the hon. Members could stop it. The suggestion that the power station, quote: 'achieved prominence a few months before the Elections...' or words to that effect, as the hon. Member... is just to... He must know it is nonsensical. He must know that the technical lead-in time, that the technical lead-in time... (Interjection) This project has gone through EU tender. It has been allocated. It has been assessed.

1725 The question is, Mr Speaker – I am not trying to push him into a corner – does the hon. Member not accept that I am just using the experience that I think I gathered over 16 years on that side of the House to urge upon him to continue with the project which, in my view... look, he can come to a different view, but I just want to make sure that he understands that, in my view... and these are the only projects I push him on. I do not push him on, you know...

1730 The tunnel and the power station are, in my view, key to the future social economic viability of Gibraltar and the ability of Gibraltar to comply with EU environmental directives. I just want this not to be a decision that is made... so I push him to urge him to try and do this project, not to push him into a corner. I do not expect him to give me an answer today, except on the power station. I was being a bit political because there was a commitment there by Dr Cortes, but the point of the question is not to embarrass Dr Cortes or him, 1740 although I am entitled to try and do that, that is what politics is, the point of the question is to urge him to come as quickly as possible to the decision that Gibraltar needs a power station. Whether it has got one or two generators more or less is a grade of decision which is a wholly different matter.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you see, I do not think politics is about embarrassing people, but he can consider me 'urged', I think, on this issue.

1745 The –

Hon. P R Caruana: You used the Report to try and embarrass –

Hon. Chief Minister: I think the issue is clear (Interjection) and I think –

1750 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: – it is important, Mr Speaker, that the community should know that this has been an issue which the Government of which he was the leader had a report in 1999, because he is urging me –

1755 Hon. P R Caruana: You say that to try and embarrass me.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. Did not the hon. Gentleman just admit that he brought up the articles in order to try and embarrass us? He is not here to answer questions. It is a rhetorical one. Right? (Interjections)

1760 I do not believe that politics is about embarrassing people, but I can see –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1765 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I can see where the hon. Gentleman is going.

I do not think politics is about calling people names, but when I get called a name by him, I call him one back because, unfortunately, I do not want him to think that he can get away with it. That is the only way to deal with bullies, Mr Speaker, to slap them back. (Interjections)

1770 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: But, anyway, Mr Speaker, the issue is clear.

1775 On this, despite the bluster, we all agree that there is a non-partisan issue to be resolved, which is that future generating capacity that Gibraltar needs to have to have a continuity of supply. He can rest assured that whatever decision we make about the power station, which is, I think, in the lexicon that we have shared across the House – the proposed new power station at Lathbury Barracks, – it will be made only with that in mind: the need to have for Gibraltar a secure supply of generating capacity for the future.

If only, Mr Speaker, the work had started earlier.

1780 Clerk: Question 94, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am just trying to recall when I called him a name... well, I don't recall calling him a name in respect of a question when we were discussing the power station. The only name I called him was 'Chief Minister'. Maybe he thinks that that...

1785 Mr Speaker: There were no names today, but there were... (Interjection) descriptions like 'nonsense'.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, we will leave it there, if that is potentially embarrassing.
Mr Speaker, Question 94. Yes. Is it 94?

1790 Mr Speaker: Yes.

Public holiday

Cost to Government and private sector

1795 Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister say what is the cost to (1) the Government and (2) the private sector of a public holiday?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1800 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, exactly the same as it was when the hon. Gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, declared a public holiday on 12th January 2009 to celebrate the fantastic victory in the ECJ tax case – which fantastic victory was overturned on appeal!

1805 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, but the difference is that he has now declared a public holiday, not on a one-off basis to celebrate one victory which was overturned on appeal, but the benefit of which survived the loss of appeal, by the way. I always have to complete his statements in order to make them completely true!

1810 Not only was mine (Interjection) a one-off... His is annual. His is annual and they come within days of each other and I am just wondering, because I have never worked out... He is quite right. He appears to think that I asked this question as a leading question. It is a genuine question. It had never occurred to me in 16 years of being in Government to try and get somebody to calculate what was the cost of a public holiday, and people must know that there are costs. For example, the public sector has to carry on offering public services, Police... not the Police... ambulance, nurses, electricity generators and all of these people on public holidays earn overtime rates. So every time there is a public holiday, there is a cost for Government. The private sector has similar costs and an additional loss of sales and things of that sort.

1815 It is not a question designed to trap him; it was a question designed to see whether the Government could deploy machinery, which he now controls and I no longer have access to, to work out what this holiday is and the hon. Member has chosen to declare a Workers' Memorial Day, the day or two before... Workers' Memorial Day by another name, otherwise known as 'May Day'. One is to celebrate workers as a whole and the other one is to celebrate workers who have died at their place of work. I am just interested to know whether anybody in Gibraltar... whether the Government has any internal information about what the cost is of a public holiday.

1820 Not all my questions are designed to pin him to the ropes. I will indicate to him when they are.

1825 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he does not need to. I am quite happy to take him on in the ring whenever he likes and I daresay that it may not always be me that ends up pinned to the ropes.

1830 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman declared a holiday for the Royal Wedding of Prince William, which we supported. He declared a public holiday for the constitution, I think in 2006 or 2007. Mr Speaker, what we have done is what we set out in policy to do during the course of –

Hon. P R Caruana: We are not criticising that!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1835 Hon. Chief Minister: – not just the Election campaign, but since I became the leader of the GSLP, and that is that 1st May was already a public holiday given the closest weekend, and that 28th April should be a public holiday to commemorate workers who have died during the course of their work.

1840 Mr Speaker, 1st May celebrates something completely different, which is the struggle of workers to achieve workers' rights. So, in that context, we are perfectly satisfied that declaring a public holiday for every year, instead of declaring one ad hoc, depending on what it is that I might decide is worth celebrating in any particular year is quite worthy.

The cost of that, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows – and his answer reflected that he knows – is not something that has been calculated previously by any Government.

1845 Hon. P R Caruana: I don't know.

Hon. Chief Minister: I agree with him, actually.

1850 Hon. P R Caruana: I don't know.

Hon. Chief Minister: I agree with him, Mr Speaker. (Interjection)

Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has just said to me that he had never done the exercise of calculating, therefore he must know that it is not an exercise which has been done.

1855 Therefore, Mr Speaker, (Interjection) I am quite prepared to see whether it is possible to carry out such an exercise because it may be something that is worth us knowing because it is important that we understand these things. The hon. Gentleman is absolutely right. In other places there are calculations done on this basis.

1860 He will know, Mr Speaker, for example, that shutting down Government for the period between Christmas and New Year, which may or may not be so desirable, depending from which point of view you look at it – fantastic from those of us who work in Government and I am delighted to include myself in that number now, but not so desirable from the point of view of private sector individuals and businesses that need to interact with Government Departments – also costs money and, despite the mechanism that there is that people need to take those days as leave, they are forced to take those days as leave, of course it affects Government cashflow, which is not something that costs us money but does mean that cash is not flowing so readily into Government coffers.

1865 This is an exercise which I am as interested as him in seeing whether it is possible to carry out and perhaps we can do that as an exercise in the coming months.

Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible] ...to take the pill. I do not see why the hon. Member is so defensive. There is no trap in this question.

1870 I have already told him I do not know and I have been in office for 16 years. I was just wondering whether there was something the Government had to look...

1875 It is easy, peasy for the Government to know what it costs it. I am sure the Treasury will tell him in a flash what one day's overtime cost is for all the essential services in the Government. I mean, you have got a brain, sir. You do not have to ask anybody whether it is possible. I suppose any junior clerk in the payroll section of the Treasury can tell him what the cost is.

It never dawned on me to ask and I was just asking whether the Treasury knew and, if they had asked him he could have told them. I do not see why he has got to go on all this about what the deal is for and what I knew. Certainly, in terms of the private sector cost, this is not something that the Government can calculate by itself.

1880 I do not know. I said I did not know. Why couldn't he just have said, 'Well, I do not know, but I think it is a good idea. Let's commission a study to find out.'?

1885 I think we should find out what the cost is of public holidays in Gibraltar and I think, and I am not criticising this holiday... the fact that you do not think something is a bad idea, does not mean that you do not want to know the cost of it. So I am asking the hon. Member whether he will agree to commission a study to work out what the elements are and then what the aggregate cost is of public holidays in Gibraltar. I think it is worthwhile information. Would he agree to do it?

Mr Speaker: I think he said so.

1890 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not me that is on the defensive and perhaps if he was not (Interjection) on the defensive, he would have heard that that is what I have agreed to do.

1895 Mr Speaker he should know, and I am quite happy to tell the House, that I did ask whether the information was available, and it was not, and therefore that is why I took... I do not think he heard my previous answer, Mr Speaker. I said I asked –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, his answer was a statement when –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I said –

1900 Hon. P R Caruana: That was his answer.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that was my first answer, not my previous answer.

- 1905 Mr Speaker: But the Hon. the Chief Minister did say he would commission the estimated costs.
- Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the – - Hon. P R Caruana: Eventually.
- 1910 Mr Speaker: With respect, we cannot expect any Member of the Government to answer questions in the order and the speed and the way the hon. Member wants him to answer. The answer was there.
- Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in my previous –
- 1915 Hon. P R Caruana: The answer would not have been forthcoming if I had not eventually got to it through a supplementary.
- Mr Speaker: Yes, we do have the answer.
- 1920 Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member could have said it in the first place.
- Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asked one supplementary. I gave him one supplementary answer. In that supplementary answer, I said that we would do it because I had asked and that information was not available.
- 1925 I commend to him that he should listen to what I say, even though he appears not to like the sound of my voice. Sometimes we are in agreement and sometimes I am giving him the answers that he wants to hear.
- 1930 British Overseas Territories
NGOs addressing UN Committee of 24
- Clerk: Question 95, the Hon. P R Caruana.
- 1935 Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister say what NGOs from the other British Overseas Territories address the UN Committee of 24?
- Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.
- 1940 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the information sought by the hon. Gentleman is publicly available from information sources at the United Nations. Nonetheless, to assist him, I would refer him to speeches made in my presence and his by, for example, the Chamber of Commerce of the Cayman Islands.
- 1945 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I know that there are examples. It is just that, in his broadcast, he says that they are from all the listed territories and I was just trying to elicit what were the NGOs from all the territories which, to my knowledge, most territories do not appear before the committee, either through their Government or through NGOs.
- 1950 Just giving me an example does not get to the point that I was seeking.
- Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I cannot give him a list of all the NGOs from all the territories but, needless to say, they go from some, if not all... I believe that they go from all of those that are populated.
- 1955 Perhaps I should (Interjection) have prefaced my statement in the New Year's address by saying, 'All those Overseas Territories that are populated and that attend the UN.' It is only Gibraltar that had a Government, until 9th December, that insisted that they should be the only ones to address the UN.
- Was this a trick one to put me on the ropes, or not?
- Hon. P R Caruana: No, I mean...yes. (Interjections)

1960 Mr Speaker, the point that I was trying to get at is not that he says in his statement, as he is perfectly entitled to do... 'I think that Gibraltar, like some other territories, should go, not just by their Government, but by school children and the Leader of the Opposition, whose fare we will pay, and NGOs and anyone... we all arrive there and sock it to them together.'

1965 Alright, that is fine. I was simply challenging the accuracy of the hon. Member's public statement, where he says that all the territories go, suggesting that we were the only one who did not do it in the way that he was now going to do it, when I think he would agree with me that, for example, of the United Kingdom Overseas Territories, most do not go near the Committee of 24, let alone with NGOs and school children and the Leader of the Opposition. I was just trying to get to the bottom of when he said 'all the territories', did he mean all the territories or whether he was just using loose language?

1970 To my knowledge, and to his, it is not the case that all the territories make it their business to transact with the Committee of 24. He knows that that is not the case. I know that is not the case.

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely correct, Mr Speaker, but those that do, in my experience, but those that do, in my experience, deploy a larger entourage.

1975 Hon. P R Caruana: But that is not what he said. What he said to the people of Gibraltar was that all the territories go, through their NGOs. That is the only point that I was trying to make. There is an element of rope tightening, but not life threatening...

1980 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs to rest assured that I feel not at all threatened by him.

Adjournment

1985

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it was lost on me – and these are the teething troubles that one has – that it is now up to us to decide when we have tea. So could I move the adjournment until a quarter to six?

1990 Mr Speaker: The House will recess until a quarter to six

The House adjourned at 5.27 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.45 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

Procedural

5 Clerk: Question 96, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Mr Speaker: May I inform the lady in the Public Gallery that photography is not permitted without the permission of the House.

10 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker. I do not intend to advocate for anyone who is in the Gallery, but I understand that the press may have been informed that today was the session to take pictures for their library pictures, and I believe the lady is from one of the publications that was not here this morning.

15 Hon. P R Caruana: Panorama.

Hon. Chief Minister: So if the hon. Gentleman opposite will agree, because this is an issue that goes ahead with the consent of the whole House, I would ask that she be allowed, for the purposes of having their gallery of pictures of the House.

20 Mr Speaker: I am grateful. I was not aware that it had been consented to.

Hon. P R Caruana: Anything for Dr Garcia's father. (Laughter)

25 Mr Speaker: Yes.

UN conditions for de-listing a territory
Gibraltar compliance

30 Clerk: Question 96, the Hon. P R Caruana.

35 Hon. P R Caruana: If she is taking a picture, I had better tie up my jacket. Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say, what are the United Nations' current conditions for de-listing a territory and can he also say whether he considers that Gibraltar satisfies them all?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

40 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the information sought in the Question is publicly available, in that it seeks that the Government should list criteria set out international legal instruments.

I will tell him that my own view is that we have reached the maximum possible level of self-government and should, therefore, be de-listed by the UN. I am surprised he is interested, given his previous statements about how irrelevant he considers de-listing to be.

45 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member knows that I am a little bit more Machiavellian in the Questions that I formulate to him than simply ask for information that I already know. I never ask a Question to which I do not already know at least part of the answer.

50 Now, Mr Speaker, the question is this: the hon. Member will acknowledge, I am sure, that we are separated across the floor of the House and it is relevant to his invitation to take me on holiday with him to the United Nations in New York, is that we have a different view, not about the Fourth Committee, but about the Committee of 24, the special decolonisation committee. That difference of view is, as I am sure he is aware, based on the fact that the United Nations' de-listing criteria are such that they will not recommend de-listing to the Fourth Committee, if there is anything in the territory's constitution that allows the ex-administering power any residual legislative rights.

55 We presently have a constitution that does leave the ex... the United Kingdom, through Her Majesty, with residual legislative rights. On the other hand, the United Kingdom is saying – to all the Overseas Territories, by the way – we are not willing to give up our residual legislative rights, except if you want to retain your constitutional links and your sovereignty links with the United Kingdom. Why? Because we are not willing to have international responsibility, without any wherewithal to put an end to unacceptable behaviour in Overseas Territories.

60 We in Gibraltar want both maximum self-government, but we also say we value our British sovereignty, which we want to retain, and our constitutional links with Britain, which we want to retain. Those continuing constitutional links with Britain that we want to retain, and that British sovereignty which we say we want to retain, are not available to us in a way that can deliver compliance with the United Nations' de-listing criteria, because the United Nations say they are not willing for you to be British sovereign, and to have a constitutional link with Britain, unless I have legislative last resort, legislative powers, and the United Nations says, 'Well, if you have got legislative powers in the territory, then you are not eligible for max de-listing.'

Because we want, not one of those but both of those, there is no point in changing the UK's mind. The UK is simply saying if you... we want British sovereignty and constitutional links.

So I am asking the hon. Member to consider whether, given that we want both things – de-listing and to retain British sovereignty and our constitutional links with Britain, which are not available without the UK having some sort of final handle over Gibraltar, much as we might not like that aspect of it – is it not logical, rather than carry on saying to the United Nations, 'Delist us, delist us, delist us,' when we are in blatant non-compliance [Applause] with one of their de-listing criteria, is it not more logical to say to the United Nations, 'Your de-listing criteria are antiquated and should be changed, because I am entitled to be de-listed and to preserve a constitutional link with Britain and to preserve my British sovereignty', which are the three things that we want. That is what separates us at the United Nations. I have not identified much else that separates us at the United Nations.

I am just asking the hon. Member what the de-listing criteria are and whether he thinks we comply with them, to have a debate to seek his views about whether he shares our assessment that, to obtain de-listing and keep our British sovereignty and our constitutional links with Britain, we are going to have to persuade the United Nations to drop that de-listing criteria with which we cannot comply and keep our British sovereignty and constitutional link with Britain, which we say we also want.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just on a point of form, because there is a lot that we agree on in what has been said, and I will go onto it now. The hon. Gentleman has actually said, 'I am only asking this Question in order to have a debate on this issue'. A Question must not be a pretext for debate...

Hon. P R Caruana: I am asking.

Hon. Chief Minister: Except that, Mr Speaker, this is a very important issue that we should be debating in this House. Therefore, Mr Speaker I would invite that, in future, if there are issues like this, the hon. Gentleman put a motion, because I think it is important that we bring back the concept of debating on motions in this House, not just on issues upon which we disagree, but also on issues where it may be that we want the House to be committed on issues where there is broad agreement.

Mr Speaker, it is not that I want to take the hon. Gentleman on holiday. I wish that we got on better and perhaps we might both look forward to going together on holiday! (Interjection) I am not excited at the prospect, so he cannot expect that I am going to invite him to come to the seminar with me as well, or anywhere else – just New York, and for business, Mr Speaker.

But a lot of what the hon. Gentleman has said is a matter of agreement across the floor of the House. In his interpretation, and I know that he has said this before, and in mine, there is a residual legislative power to the United Kingdom, but it is pretty sparse and it is only there to be used in the sparsest of circumstances and I dare say that it is very likely that the United Kingdom would find that it was against both Government and Opposition and any other political party in this place and most people here, if it sought to exercise its reserved powers. The developing case law shows that the good government aspects of those residual powers now must be interpreted only in respect of the good of the territory and not the United Kingdom's wider good, although I am sure that lawyers could argue over those points here and in the Privy Council for days.

The important thing is that we believe that we have achieved the maximum possible level possible of self-government and our attitude – and it may just be a different side of the prism. Our attitude has been to say at the United Nations, 'Can you, Committee of 24, can you, Fourth Committee, please tell us why it is that you think that we have not achieved the maximum possible level of self-government required for you to delist us?' because those residual powers are only in our constitution, not because the United Kingdom has given us such a constitution and has reserved powers to do whatever she likes in the 'colony', which is what was the case when the criteria were established, but because the people of the territory, in an exercise of self-determination, vide the preamble of our constitution have chosen that that should be the case. So it is not the old colonial style, where the mother parliament withholds certain powers to herself. It is a modern relationship – of course, we agree it is modern, we just do not think that is enough – where the people of the territory have, in a referendum, chosen the status and we say to the UN, 'In that context delist us or tell us why you think that you cannot delist us, having heard those arguments.'

The hon. Gentleman has taken a different tack. It is true that perhaps it is not analysed in this way, when we go head-to-head on the issue, but we are all, it appears, trying to reach the same destination.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member not acknowledge that what he has just said is squarely with what I was saying and demonstrates the need to adopt the GSD Opposition's approach? It is precisely because the territory population has chosen it that the United Nations has to be persuaded that their view that, even when the territory has chosen it, they will not delist if there is a residual legislative power, that that is anachronistic, because we can never comply with that condition.

The United Nations are not saying it is okay for the ex-colonial power to have residual legislative power if the colonial people are content. Peter Isola went to say that, and they said they were only content, because the Spanish had gunboats pointing at us!

The United Nations are saying that the United Nations' de-listing criteria say that even if the people are content, even if the people are content and vote for it in an act of self-determination, it is still not acceptable to the United Nations to delist if the ex-colonial power has a residual power of legislation, and we say that is what we have got to demolish. We have got to persuade the United Nations that that condition is undemocratic, anachronistic, for the very reason that the hon. Member has just said, because the people have wanted it, have chosen it in an act of self-determination, and who the hell are the United Nations to decide what is an acceptable form for us to be decolonised and not to be colonised?

That is why I say to the hon. Member, it is not a question of going to ask them to tell you why our constitution is not compliant and in what respect; we know the answer to that question. The answer to that question is, because one of the de-listing criteria is that the ex-colonial power must not have legislative powers, and our constitution provides for the United Kingdom to have legislative powers.

Now, we can spend the next 25 years going to ask the United Nations to tell us what we already know and what is clear to anybody who reads the de-listing criteria and our constitution, and even if they answer the question, the position is still that we cannot comply with it; or we spend the next 25 years trying to persuade the United Nations not to be so damned autocratic and to allow us to delist, notwithstanding that the United Kingdom has residual legislative powers, because that is the will of the people of Gibraltar in an act of self-determination, and they should modify their de-listing criteria, not to forbid de-listing in those circumstances, but to permit de-listing in those circumstances. That is the GSD's position on the matter and has been...

In the meantime, we do not go to the Committee of 24 precisely because we take the view that we have already achieved the maximum level of self-government that we can and we want, if we want to keep our relationship with the UK, which we do, and therefore there is no point going to ask for more than we want which, in any case, they are not going to give us. That is the difference between us. Much of what the hon. Member has said today recommends our approach much more than it would recommend a different approach, Mr Speaker.

Can I just, finally, ask him to acknowledge, if he would, that he is, I think, dangerously understating, in UN terms, he is dangerously understating the nature of the United Kingdom's power of legislation in the Overseas Territories, including Gibraltar. The United Kingdom habitually legislate for the other Overseas Territories. Every time the United Kingdom passes an Order in Council applicable to all the Overseas Territories, it is legislating for the Overseas Territories.

It is true that we, in Gibraltar, after a long rearguard action, certainly during all the 16 years that I have been in office, have persuaded the United Kingdom not to legislate by Order in Council for Gibraltar, but to allow us, through local domestic legislation, to replicate whatever they were going to do in the Order in Council for us. But the United Kingdom – particularly in aviation matters, for example – habitually passes Orders in Council. That is legislation. The law of the United Kingdom is that Parliament is sovereign and Parliament is free to legislate in the House of Commons, with territorial application in the Overseas Territories, whenever it wants to and, indeed, purported to do so recently – we have now persuaded them to reverse it – but did so under the Armed Forces Act 2006.

So this is not a theoretical or residual or rare thing. It is rare in its application to Gibraltar by agreement between us, but it is not residual in the practice. The United Kingdom is free to do it whenever it pleases. It may choose not to do it, as a matter of relationship or as a matter of whatever, but that distinction is irrelevant to the United Nations. I would ask the hon. Member to consider that the United Nations would simply take stock of the fact that the United Nations, without so much as a by your leave from the people of the territory, are free if they want to legislate as often as they please for the Overseas Territories and that is all they will look at. They will not look and say, 'But they're nice and they don't do it, because they respect' and all of that. That is going to be irrelevant.

180 So, I would ask the hon. Member just to consider, I am not trying to persuade him today to express a definitive view. I would welcome the opportunity for continuing conversations between us, public or private, to see if this difference can be narrowed, so that there is a single Gibraltar view and, frankly, when there is a single Gibraltar view, it is not necessary for me to go with him to New York. I am very happy to be represented by him as the Chief Minister of all Gibraltarians, including me. This is not about who goes and who does not and who pays the fare and does not pay the fare. This is about whether we have a viable, common position with a reasonable prospect of success, as opposed to now a position which sounds very hairy-chested, but has no prospect of getting to where we both want to get, which is to get Gibraltar's name of the UN's list.

185 I would ask the hon. Member to consider at least whether we can continue in discussion.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, of course, we can continue this discussion, publicly or privately, and it is important that we should, because we must do everything possible that, on this important issue, we should not be divided if we can avoid being divided.

190 Mr Speaker, the argument in our view is a little bit more complex than that. For example, short of modifying the UN criteria, it may be possible to persuade the UN to apply its criteria in a more modern way, looking at the way the world has changed.

195 I think, Mr Speaker, that Sir Joshua Hassan, who was Leader of this Parliament for so long and Peter Isola, who contributed so much to this Parliament, did much more than just turn up in New York and say, 'We do not want to be Spanish, because they have got Spanish gunboats pointing at us'. The criteria were there then; they are there now; they are 60 years old.

200 Would that we could achieve that the United Nations change its criteria and model it around the sort of status that we have today to achieve a de-listing, but it is also possible to say that the criteria 60 years ago applied in the modern world must cover a situation such as this, where the ex-colonial people, as we see ourselves, have chosen a constitution which contains these criteria.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member give way just a second?

205 The answer to his question is 'no' and do you know why it is no? Do you know why it does not extend? Because the United Nations decolonisation crowd assume, as they assumed when Peter Isola and Joshua Hassan went, that we are going there meekly to say that and there is some sort of direct or indirect undue influence by the perfidious United Kingdom that has some sort of hold on us and simply uses us as their lackeys to bring about a result that allows what they regard as a continuation of a colonial status.

210 So they assume – they do not believe this business of exercise of self-determination. They assume that nobody would opt for decolonisation through a formula that allows the ex-colonial power to continue to legislate over them. That is anachronistic because they think that, because they recall their own decolonisation experiences.

215 My antidote to the argument is to say, 'Well, look, if you think, United Nations, that having the United Kingdom having legislative powers over a territory that is not part of the union of the United Kingdom makes them a colony, why have you not listed Jersey and Guernsey?' because the United Kingdom have the same legislative powers over Jersey and Guernsey as they have over Gibraltar, but nobody thinks that they are a colony. They are not on any United Nations list.

220 So we have got to attack this as anachronistic and undemocratic, this old 1960s view that if somebody is trying to break from the colonial shackles and comes along and says that they are happy for the ex-colonial power to legislate over them whenever it suits their fancy, they must be lackeys of the colonial power, oppressed, suppressed, cajoled by the colonial power into trotting along to New York to say those things, because they cannot imagine, recalling their own experiences, that they would have accepted anything of the kind. That is the anachronism that we need to break.

I am obliged to the hon. Member for giving way.

225 Hon. Chief Minister: It is not usual to give way at Question Time. This is becoming a debate and, if the hon. Member does not mind, I am going to say just a few things and I think we owe it to everybody to get on with the Questions.

230 But, Mr Speaker, the simple answer to why Jersey and Guernsey are not brought onto the list by the United Nations is because it was up to the UK to notify the Territories in the 1950s, and did not. That is the issue.

Of course, the United Kingdom reports to the Committee, to the UN, under article 73. The United Kingdom reaches a consensus decision with Spain. So although it is saying to us, 'The criteria are outdated, you do not need to be involved in that', it is actually taking part in the proceedings of the Committee. This is all the issues that make this much more vexed than just their position or our position. There is a lot in there which I think we should continue to discuss, because if it is possible to have a Gibraltar view on this, we owe it to Gibraltar to reach that view.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not want to shatter the entente cordiale that has temporarily developed between the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition –

Hon. P R Caruana: On this issue.

Hon. D A Feetham: On this issue.

But in the light of the position he has expressed, the position the Government has expressed, in relation to this issue, that he believes that Gibraltar has the maximum level of self-government, short of independence and short of being commensurate with British sovereignty, does he not accept (1) that that arises out of the new constitution, (2) that, therefore, their position on the new constitution was misconceived, and (3) that the position that he has expressed in this House today is, in fact, a U-turn from the position they adopted on the new constitution?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not a U-turn.

He does not seem to understand the niceties of what we have discussed. We are not here to answer for the things that we did as Opposition; we are here to answer for the things that we do as a Government, but I am quite happy to say that we do not feel that we were wrong in the position that we took.

That sort of contribution is what makes it difficult to reach a consensus for Gibraltar. It is a cheap political point and, frankly, it is better not made.

National Day Potential changes

Clerk: Question 97, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the Chief Minister able to say – I realise it is early days – what changes he plans to introduce to the format of National Day to update it?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, not yet, other than to say we will be putting the accent on young people and the political importance of the day that we are celebrating on 10th September every year.

An announcement will be made in due course. It maybe that we will have an opportunity of discussing those issues as well – not across the floor of the House – before the announcement is made.

Hon. P R Caruana: I was just a little taken, Mr Speaker, by one phrase in his broadcast on this Question, when he said that even with all the entertainment things for the youth were going to be refocused, so that these guys understand the political significance of what they are doing, which suggested to me that everything, even the concert, was going to be given a political flavour.

Presumably, the hon. Members may be planning to restore a political event, but they are not suggesting that they are going to be introducing political content into the non-political events, like concerts and... This is what he suggested.

I am glad to say, I can see his head shaking, that that is not what he meant.

Hon. Chief Minister: No Mr Speaker, except what we are celebrating is a political event to a great extent, because we are celebrating the referendum, etc. That is what National Day started as.

But I think you will find that this is not going to be us trying to force politics down anybody's throat on that day. There are, of course, civic events – most of them which originated after 1996 – which will be kept as part of the recasting of the whole thing. At Casemates, when we reintroduce the rally, there will be a political element to that, which is the focal point for many of us on that day.

But, as I said to him, I think this is an issue again that if it is possible, we should be discussing outside the confines of Question Time, because this is a day for all of Gibraltar and it must be seen as a day for all of Gibraltar. I know that there are very many people who would be very happy to hear that National Day is coming home to Casemates. That is one part of it – not all of it.

Chief Minister's proposed changes
Consultation with the House

Clerk: Question 98, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether he intends to consult the House and in particular the Opposition Members of it, in relation to the changes that he has said he will introduce soon?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, implicit in that, although we recognise that, by their majority, they can change, effectively, whatever they decide, but it is implicit in that that there will be no unilateral or bilateral Speaker-to-Leader of the House changes simply announced to us, the Opposition will get an opportunity to participate through an expression of views, through consultation, in all the restructuring that we are going to do?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am much obliged.

Hon. Chief Minister: There will be two veins of these changes: one vein will be the independent commission which we are setting up, which will be subject of the difference between us at the time of the motion. That is looking at the long-term changes that might be desirable in this Parliament.

The other vein and other things that we think are important, and we think are deliverable, even absent that sort of investigation of how things should change... The hon. Gentleman will know that I have said that we will now have monthly meetings of the House, as he and I have been discussing – and he knows I have discussed with the Speaker – that means that we will be using the Government majority to adjourn the House sine die on a monthly basis and bring it back administratively, as I am entitled to do, on a monthly basis. So there will be monthly question Times and there will be a monthly opportunity for motions. That really was the substance of our debate at the time of the motion, that those things could be done.

There is one thing that has happened during the run-up to this meeting which I think, really, was very much in our gift and would have been in his gift, which was simply to say, to give an indication to the general public and to the Members opposite, of when Parliament was going to sit, when we were going to adjourn to, when it was likely – because it really cannot be more than that, unless we put Parliament into some strictures – that certain questions were going to be dealt with. That has happened because I have no difficulty in giving the Clerk an indication of when I expect to rise, and when we expect to come back and I hope that will have the effect of making Members' lives easier in planning their diaries and the general public who might have an interest in this place, who might have an interest in particular questions, in planning when they need to be here or when they need to have their radios on to hear a particular set of questions.

I do not think it is going to be possible for us to have as clear a timetable as perhaps is the case in other places, where they know when certain questions are going to be asked, unless those questions are going to be the ones at the beginning of a session. But that was really in the gift of the Leader of the House, the hon. Gentleman could have done it at any time during the 16 years that he was here, and the previous Chief Minister could have done in that way.

I still believe that it is possible to do a lot more that there is more broad agreement on, without waiting for the independent commission to report on the things which may be more controversial across the floor of the House and outside of this place. Certainly, it would not be my intention to try and force those things through, even with the Government majority, if there was a great measure of disagreement on the other side, because I think, in this place, we must not just be bulldozing things through, 10-7. I think that it is important that, unless we have a series disagreement about the benefit of something to the community, we should try and do this by consensus.

The issue of cameras, for example, is one that would not be able to happen simply with a conversation between myself and the Speaker, although we could then turn that into a vote of this House which goes 10-7. That is the sort of thing that I think we need to be talking about, because it is easy to say, 'Let us transmit and let us broadcast' – (Interjection by Mr Caruana) It is easy to say, 'Let us transmit and let us broadcast', but that could take many different forms. What does 'broadcast' mean these days? Does it mean television on the airwaves? Does it mean internet? Does that make it more accessible to people because most people during their working day would be accessing the view of Parliament from their PCs at work, rather than at home on television?

So are all of those issues, the hon. Gentleman can rest assured, we will be talking about. It will be, I hope, an inclusive process, and I hope he does not mind me revealing that we have discussed, just before this question, during the break, the possibility that Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Minister will meet, given that there may be different ways of achieving the same effect that we intend to deliver, and that he may be contributing to that. So I am grateful for that indication from him earlier. I hope that we can do this as a Parliament, and not that there should be Government and Opposition debates on this. Of course, there are the independent commission issues which may be more controversial and which will come to the House, once the commission reports.

Alliance Manifesto Total cost of implementation

Clerk: Question 99, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, given that the Chief Minister said, during the recent Election campaign, that the Alliance's manifesto was 'fully costed', will he now say what is the total cost of implementing all the commitments contained in that manifesto?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the costings we did before the Election are not the costings of the Government; they are the costings of the parties that sit on this side of the House.

The cost of each of the projects in our manifesto will be public and subject to all scrutiny as we commence them as a Government. Any such costings will, by then, be the result of open tenders for the projects.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is he not willing to give me his costings?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I am not.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I suggest to him that he is not willing to give them to me, because he does not have any because it was not a fully costed manifesto.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not the case. In fact, costings are not mine, they are not of any individuals here. They are the costings of the party, as his costings are the costings of his party.

The position is a little bit more complicated than just wanting to share with him what these costings might be, Mr Speaker, because of course, he will understand – and he has deployed this argument with us in the past and I believe we have accepted it, almost without exception – when one delivers information like that across the floor of the House and we are going to go to open tender process for many of these projects, we are giving away what we think something might cost.

Mr Speaker, I do not think that is in the public interest that we should do that. He should rest assured that he is wrong in his assertion. I am sure he makes that mischievously. We know exactly what the cost of delivering our manifesto is, in our estimation. It may be that we can deliver it for less, as a result of the open tendering procedures, or it may be that it is going to cost a little more. Those are issues which he can quiz us on once those projects come on stream, and they are public. You will have the opportunity of asking us then, ‘Is that what you thought it would cost? Did it come in higher or lower?’

Hon. P R Caruana: With respect to the hon. Member, that is completely nonsense.

I am not asking the hon. Member to identify the cost of each project individually. I am asking him to give me one global figure – £400 million, £500 million, £600 million? To say that the entire manifesto will cost £500 million to implement does not help any tenderer when it comes to tendering for building the lake in the Commonwealth Parade! So that whole reasoning is neither here nor there.

The hon. Member knows that, in our conservative estimation, the cost of implementing his manifesto is between £400 million and £500 million – £400 million, excluding – although this did not come out in the Election campaign – the halving of the national debt.

Mr Speaker, he has what he says was a fully costed manifesto. He says he will not tell me now, because he is now Government and not the party and he is not in the House to answer for the party, he is in the House to answer for the Government. When we were going head-to-head, party to party, in the Leaders’ debate, I asked him what was the cost of his fully costed manifesto, he would not tell me then, either.

The hon. Member should then not be surprised that people come to the conclusion, when he does not tell me when we were parties and he does not tell me now that we are Government and Opposition, people will come to the conclusion... Does he not accept that he runs a grave risk that people will come to the conclusion that he does not say, because he does not have a clue – which is my view.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, you see, he did not tell us what the cost of his manifesto was when he was competing with us in the General Election campaign.

Hon. P R Caruana: You never asked.

Hon. Chief Minister: It became abundantly clear, I think, to the whole of Gibraltar, and certainly to me on 9th December, that I was absolutely right when I was going round the estates, saying that there is only one way to fund it, in the hon. Gentleman’s imagination – D-E-B-T – debt. That is what he was going to do, in order to deliver – take us down the road of more debt.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can press me as much as he likes. He is going to get the same answer from me on this issue and it does not take people to the conclusion to which it takes him, which is always the most negative and the most perfidious.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I was illustrating that the hon. Member’s commitment to all this transparency of statistics and information is tempered by one overriding consideration, which is nothing to do with a commitment to transparency: it is transparency, so long as it does not suit him not to put the information transparently in the public domain.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is neither a request for a statistic or information. This is a clear partisan attempt to try and curry some favour with those few supporters that he may have left.

Mr Speaker, I am going to leave it at that. It is up to him whether he wants to come back. Let him come back.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I do not know how many supporters he thinks I have left. But can I just remind him of what he used to remind me – notwithstanding that I had a bigger majority than him – that he has won this Election by fewer than 400 votes, and that, just to use the calculation that he used to use, that requires only 240-odd people to have decided to vote differently for me to be sitting on that side and him to be here where I believe he belongs.

The hon. Member is in grave risk of losing that very slender majority, if he is going to go around behaving as if he was a Chief Minister who had been swept into office with a landslide majority, telling the Opposition that has got just 380 votes less than him that he only has a handful of voters left. My advice to him is that he does not go down that well, because a majority of 240 is very easily lost – indeed, he may have lost it this morning, just on the basis of the Minister for Employment’s answers to our Questions on the Employment Strategy.

Mr Speaker: May I remind the Leader of the Opposition, there was no question in that statement. We really must confine ourselves to questions. (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker. I really am obliged, Mr Speaker. They need to be short and contain questions. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is one debate I am delighted to have, Mr Speaker. Perhaps rightly, when I said to him after the last General Election, when he saw his voting majority reduced or the percentage by which he won the Election reduced, I said to him, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister and his party ‘got in by a whisker’ and he said to me, Mr Speaker, ‘That whisker is irrelevant. We are the Government and you must stop arguing these things or you do not have a chance of winning the next General Election.’

Well, Mr Speaker, I carried on. He was wrong about that and he is wrong about this.

Government procurement policy Subject to open tender

Clerk: Question 100, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: I said that is not a view widely shared in Gibraltar. (Interjection by the Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether it is the policy of the Government that all procurement of goods and services by the Government should be subject to an open tender process?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, subject only to the caveat that there may be cases where the public interest requires that the product or service subject to procurement rules may have to be procured directly as a result of urgency or other exigency. The rule will be open tender process.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that was the previous Government’s policy. It did not stop him from criticising those few cases in which public interest and exigency or urgency dictated otherwise. We used to put it in a slightly different way: exceptional circumstances.

So, the hon. Member’s policy is that a tender, yes, unless they decide that there is a good reason not to do it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that is the policy of most governments – in other words, tender yes, unless there is, in the public interest, an urgency or other exigency which requires it.

The hon. Gentleman is putting his question, in my view, as if to suggest that we will find a way out of going to tender when it is not in our interest, as if that were in some way nefarious. He needs to accept that we are the Government of Gibraltar and we will only be taking items out of procurement by tender if it is in the public interest.

Now, he knows that I have taken him to task on this issue in the past, in circumstances which were not about urgency or exigency, as I read it. The term ‘exceptional circumstances’ could mean something different.

Mr Speaker, I do not share the view that some of the things that were done by his Government had to be done outside open tender procurement, and I believe that they were done outside tender procurement for reasons other than in the public interest. That is a debate that he and I, I am sure, can have until the cows come home.

We have not yet procured anything, in my understanding, outside of the open tender mechanism. When we do, he will be entitled to come here and say, ‘Why did you do it in this instance? Was it a case of urgency? Was it a case of exigency and can you satisfy me of that?’ That is what his role is as Leader of the Opposition – but he has got to let us at least start procuring!

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, alright, let us deal with the first one. What was the exigency that caused them, as we heard this morning, in answer to a Question on the smoke extractor system... what was the exigency in the public interest that led the Government not to go to tender on a relatively standard piece of equipment as smoke extractors?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am sure that he will reconsider, when he sits down, having asked that question because, of course for us, it is an exigency that there should be members of the City Fire Brigade – and perhaps the Shadow Minister will share this view – who are suffering with these fumes in the fire station, having been promised an extractor some time ago, because of the Health and Safety need for such an extractor and, where there are only two producers of this type of extractor, to have gone straight to the producers in order to get the best costings available.

Now, Mr Speaker, in my view that makes absolute sense. If there are people who could be inhaling this smoke for longer, from the day that we take over in Government, we want to stop that as soon as possible. That, in my view, is urgent and it is an exigency.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, the word ‘exigency’ is even wider than ‘exceptional’, then. Because, frankly, Mr Speaker, look – first of all, it is very arguable that anybody is inhaling anything. Secondly, it is very arguable that there are only two companies in the world that make these extractors – I do not know whether these are NASA space-rocket-type extractors or whether they are just... I suppose every fire station in the world, we are led to believe, must have them, if what he says is true.

But, in any case, given that this has been the case for 50 or 60 years, does the hon. Member think that it is actually urgent to override the public tender system to do it in six days? This is what I mean by the concept of exigency being very subjective. So what it really boils down to, does he not agree, is that the hon. Members go to tender when they want to do and do not go to tender whenever they think there is any sort of reason that justifies not going to tender. I do not think anybody could argue that it is urgent – would he agree with me – to correct in six weeks what has prevailed for 60 years?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do disagree with him. I think there are some things which have prevailed which it is urgent that we should resolve.

The Hon. Minister with responsibility for the Fire Brigade reminds me that all that has happened is that the Chief Fire Officer is in communication with the two producers. They have not yet been procured from anyone. We are seeking information about this and it may be that it is possible to go through the tender process for the procurement. (Interjection by Mr Caruana) Mr Speaker, therefore the question is based on a false premise. (Interjection by Mr Caruana)

I must tell him, Mr Speaker, that I do not believe that there were exceptional circumstances of any description which could have led to the entry into agreements for consultancy services with one particular company that he and I have debated, in respect of that agreement, across the floor of the House, and that we have a serious difference of opinion on that and that that costs Gibraltar a very large amount of money.

Mr Speaker, that is an issue which is worth debating and I am happy to debate it with him, if he wants, but to take this point now, when this Government has not yet procured anything, suggests to me, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman is not feeling sufficiently comfortable in his own skin, in his capacity as Leader of the Opposition, and that he thinks he is still the person who is in charge of procurement.

Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member must know that I do not ask the question on a false premise unless the Hon. Mr Linares has made a false premise to the House. It is not a false premise. It is based on the premise that the Hon. Mr Linares said in the House this morning, in answer to another Question, that they would not be going to tender because there are only two manufacturers.

So now I ask a supplementary: on the assumption that we are not going to tender for this, because your Minister told the House this morning that we were not going to tender and gave us the reason, and you say now that it is a false premise because they have... Well, I am delighted if, as a result of our debate now the Hon. Mr Linares' Answer is no longer valid. So, despite Mr Linares having said this morning that they would not be going out to tender, for that pretty unpersuasive reason, the position now is that you might well be going out to tender, which we think is the correct thing to do.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Member wants to persevere with this view that there was a procurement impropriety in the engagement of services –

Hon. Chief Minister: What is the question?

Mr Speaker: Next question please.

Hon. P R Caruana: I will ask a question. In respect of Gibraltar Land Reclamation Ltd, is the hon. Member aware that all Governments of Gibraltar have always procured – including the previous GSLP Government – consultancy design services on that basis, including from the heinous company in question? Is he aware of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is he that is suggesting that I am in any way characterising that company as 'heinous'. I am not doing that, Mr Speaker, because that company is not here in the House and it is not answerable to the House.

It is he, Mr Speaker, who was in this chair when those agreements were done. He is not here to answer my questions, so it will be a rhetorical one, but is it that he did not know that the procurement rules and the procurement laws changed in January 1996, in order to give compliance to the first tranche of directives on public procurement and that those also affected services?

Mr Speaker, he may or may not like it, but I do not agree with him that there were any exceptional circumstances for his Government to enter into those agreements without going out to public procurement. That is the issue. It is not about the company: it is about his Government; it is about his actions.

Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned, I am not imputing any improper motive. I am just talking about the process of procurement, which was not followed, which in my view was required by law after January 1996. Those are the issues, Mr Speaker.

If he gets up, Mr Speaker, he should get up to ask me a question and not give me a speech.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I will answer his rhetorical question and I will... I know that it does not suit the hon. Member for me to populate my questions with information which he cannot grasp and cannot deal with and cannot...

Is the hon. Member now suggesting to this House and to Gibraltar at large that all his campaign about the Government's contractual relationship with the Gibraltar Land Reclamation Company and its directors and all its people was not to suggest that there had been... If all that he was complaining about was an alleged breach of EU tendering rules and was not, as is his style, suggesting impropriety, why, in his pre-Election manifesto to the Civil Service, did he put in brackets 'a relation of a Minister'? If he was not suggesting corruption, why tell civil servants in his manifesto that, to boot, the person was a relation of the Minister – because that is not relevant to whether there is a breach of EU directives or not which, as he well knows, we do not believe that there was.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are entitled in this House to demand that.

Hon. P R Caruana: Exactly.

Mr Speaker: The remark made by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition was a question – he did style it as a question – but I must remind the Leader of the Opposition that the questions must be brief. They can be preceded by a brief preamble but the questions must be brief. We have spent a whole day dealing with less than 100 Questions. In the past we have dealt with a hundred Questions in a matter of a couple of hours.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, because in the past the Questions were all statistical, they did not have any supplementaries, and now we are asking political Questions.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to give him a political retort to the things he said. The people on this side of the House can grasp the information, and I am sure the people on that side of the House can grasp the information, because this is not a parliament where we come to say that each of us are not able to grasp information.

625

Mr Speaker, if he wants to get up and talk about corruption, he is the one getting up to talk about corruption. We have got parliamentary privilege. We can talk about corruption if we want to, but that word is in his mouth, not in mine. He is the one casting aspersions, not me.

630

I am saying that when he was in this chair, when he was Chief Minister, he – not anybody else, he – did not follow the procurement laws of Gibraltar and the directives that are relevant. That is all I am saying. If he wants to elevate the issue further, it is a matter for him. Let him stand up; let him ask a question. That is the role the people of Gibraltar have chosen for him: to ask questions, not give speeches. That was over on 8th December. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

635

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister enlighten this House as to whether the Government has procured any alternative energy hybrid vehicles, directly and not by tender, because it has been reported in the press that you have done so.

640

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answer is no. The only thing that has happened, if the hon. Gentleman looks at the press release... I do not know what the press has said, but what the press release said was that we had procured a test vehicle of one particular type of model. A test vehicle means, Mr Speaker, that the showroom gives you the car. It is like a test drive. So we have procured nothing that has cost the people of Gibraltar nothing.

645

All we have done is start the process – a process that you would have thought any Government would have wanted to start earlier – of testing different types of vehicles. That will help us to set the criteria when we go out to tender, to understand exactly what it is that is best in the circumstances of Gibraltar, what it is that is best for our community, how we can lead by example as a Government on all issues of renewable energy, including the vehicles that are used as part of the Government fleet.

650

It may be, Mr Speaker, that at the end of that exercise we will have to say there are no vehicles which are suitable for Gibraltar because of its topography, and it may be, Mr Speaker, that if the hon. gentlemen opposite, when they were here, had done that, they would not be open to criticism for not having done so. You see, you must not just put your finger in the air and say, 'This car works for Gibraltar, that car does not work in Gibraltar,' or 'We don't need to go down that road for Gibraltar.' You need to ensure that you are doing as much as possible.

655

The short answer, Mr Speaker, is we have not procured anything in respect of such vehicles outside the tender process. All we have is that we have very kindly been provided with a test vehicle of one particular model and we are seeking other test vehicles of other models from other dealers, some of them in Gibraltar, some of them outside, which other dealers in Gibraltar may be interested in bringing in in the future if they are the right vehicle for Gibraltar.

660

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister confirm this is the Toyota Prius? Can he confirm when he was provided with this car free of charge and when is he going to, effectively, give the car back to the garage?

665

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I cannot give that information because I have not been provided with the car. It is the Technical Services Department of the Government that has reached an arrangement with one particular dealership and they will have set out how long they need it for in order to test it. It may be that the car has already gone back; it may be that we still have it. They are doing the exercise of understanding whether that particular vehicle works in the topography of Gibraltar.

I actually have not seen the vehicle and not been in it, but the hon. Gentleman will, I am sure, be delighted to know that when I go to the United Kingdom I use a company that uses Toyota Priuses to ferry people from the airport to the centre of London. It costs almost half because, obviously, the vehicle uses much less petrol when it goes on the M25. I commend it to him. I am delighted to give him the details if he is interested.

675 I am very keen that the Government should also use those vehicles if it makes sense in the UK. It may be that it does not, and again it will be something that will have to be investigated.

680 We are not for making decisions just for the sake of making decisions. This is an important issue. If Gibraltar can be more compliant... If Gibraltar can procure a fleet of Government vehicles that is better for the environment, what is wrong with that and what is wrong with starting the investigation at no cost to the Government? Absolutely nothing, I am sure the hon. Gentleman will say.

685 Hon. D A Feetham: I agree entirely. I am not questioning the motive. I am not questioning whether it is an environmentally friendly policy or whether it is not. That is not the point. The point was that it was reported in the press that the hon. Gentleman acquired a Toyota Prius. There is an article here in the Newsweek Magazine. I have got it here. I was just wondering whether that had been procured by direct allocation. The hon. Gentleman has explained it.

Can I ask him this: will this tender policy also apply in relation to these foreign investors that the hon. Gentleman confirmed at the interview with GBC that he had up his sleeve, and that he has confirmed during the course of today's session that he is in negotiations with – is it going to apply also to them?

690 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if they are going to provide services to the Government and they are going to obtain land from the Government, of course it must mean that we are going to be in a process which is going to be open and fair and is going to allow different approaches to prosper but, of course, give people an opportunity genuinely to compete for those projects.

695 Hon. D A Feetham: That does not necessarily follow at all. May I urge the Hon. the Chief Minister to reconsider that?

700 Is it not the case that if you had a situation... and I am just exploring here the parameters of their policy in relation to this tender policy. Is it not the case that if you have a situation where you are in negotiations with foreign investors who come to the Government with an excellent idea to do something in Gibraltar, it would be wrong – having those investors come up with that idea – to then say, 'Hang on a minute, it's your idea; yes, we're interested, but we are also going to put it to tender and allow others to compete on your idea.' I do not know: is that the policy of the Government?

705 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not see the conflict. I really do not see the conflict.

I think if there are people who are international investors who are interested in coming to Gibraltar, they do not necessarily come and talk to you to say, 'I want to be the person that provides you with this particular service, to the exclusion of everyone else.' That is not the type of international investor that I am talking to. There could be a circumstance where an investment requires the use of land in Gibraltar for a particular new industry, and it may be that, in those circumstances, the Government makes a decision to make an allocation of land to open a new industry that creates employment.

710 In our view, because we would not be procuring services and we would not be buying property or goods from that entity, that is not an issue that would be covered by the procurement directives. Making a direct allocation of a plot of land in the public interest of Gibraltar, in the economic interests of Gibraltar, to create employment etc, is not something that is covered by the procurement directives that we are talking about. We are talking about the Government procuring, i.e. the Government buying services or goods. That is what we are talking about. That will always go out to open tender, unless in the situation we have been very clear there have been cases of urgency or exigency which are going to force us in a particular direction.

720 The hon. Gentleman will know – and I do not want to say much more than that, because actually I was supposed to be meeting them an hour ago, and I have to meet them a bit later – that there were people who were talking to him about things which are good for Gibraltar, which we all agree were good for Gibraltar, that he was not able to talk about because of certain constraints imposed by the type of group that we are talking about, where there might be an allocation of land that would result in something positive for Gibraltar and the creation of jobs. If the hon. Gentleman looks at my lips, I will tell him what it is... Right.

725 So, in those circumstances – a particular chain of hotels, for example – where you are talking about an allocation of land, if the allocation of land results in great economic activity for Gibraltar, the creation of jobs... The hon. Members opposite had taken the view that there would be an allocation.

That is not procurement, and this Question, Mr Speaker, is about procurement of goods and services by the Government, and that is why our Answer is absolutely clear on the issue. Procurement of goods and services, in our view, under Gibraltar law already – and under EU directives that we have taken a view would have been directly effective in Gibraltar because their transposition dates have passed – must be subject to an open tender procedure and, depending on their cost, they sometimes even have to be European tenders. This Question is about procurement of goods and services, not about allocation of land.

Hon. P R Caruana: In any event, I am interested in the hon. Member's answer, which suggests that he has the same policy as us but, in terms of the other sort of tendering, for the making available, the selling, the alienation of Government land, he is, in effect, continuing the previous Government's policy whereby, if a property developer came to the Government with a proposal which the Government judged was, exceptionally, in the economic interests of Gibraltar, he considers that his Government is free – as I think it should be, and we felt we were free – to make a direct allocation, as we have already agreed to do with the very important hotel chain and the investors behind it that he has alluded to for the site of the – it's no secret – yacht club. That is good.

When we exercised the same judgement in favour of the Mid Town development, the hon. Members will recall the fuss that particularly Dr Garcia made about it, that the propriety or impropriety of such a policy cannot depend on the different judgements across the floor of the House of whether it is interesting, it is a good deal or not – that judgement is for the Government. The hon. Member will enjoy the Opposition's support for a policy that acknowledges you cannot expose inward investors to the lottery of a tender process for a project that is very good for Gibraltar.

Would he, however – and this is the supplementary attached to my very long speech – commit to making a public statement immediately that any such commitment is entered into and which has been exempt from the usual thing, which is that you sell, you alienate Government lands through a sale tender process.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, subject to the fact that we do not agree that the Mid Town project was that sort of project, and that is our position – we never suggested that it was 'improper', because those words have connotations – we believe, Mr Speaker, that that, as a project, should have gone out to tender because to give to a local developing consortium a local piece of land is not to alienate a piece of land in Gibraltar for the purpose of attracting inward investment which will be positive for Gibraltar.

It is not to say that international investors are going to enjoy a better regime than national investors when they come up with the right projects, and it may be, Mr Speaker, that the Westminster model of Government and Opposition means that the Opposition is always going to question whether the Government considers that there are exceptional circumstances in a particular instance. We do not think Mid Town was that sort of thing.

Mr Speaker, I think it is almost conjunctive that if we have made a decision to grant a parcel of land to an investor, international or national, because of what he, she or it are going to do there is in the economic interests of Gibraltar, we will be chomping at the bit to make the public statement, and he has my commitment that I certainly will be looking to make a public statement immediately – and that is an elastic term – as soon as possible after making such a decision, perhaps even before the documents have been signed, because if it is in the public interest of Gibraltar, we will want everyone to know.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member acknowledge that the project that we are both talking about and we are not identifying is exceptional and in the public interest and we have no professional or other connection with it? We had got to the point of agreeing and negotiating the structure of the transaction and the lawyers just did not deliver the documentation in time to be signed but, certainly, if the hon. Member has come to the conclusion, as we came, that that project is, indeed, exceptionally in the economic interest of Gibraltar, we will support any decision that the Government makes to do a direct allocation of that land to those developers.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this morning when I was indicating that if we took projects forward which had been started whilst they were in administration we would not be looking to take the credit for them, this is the project I was thinking of.

In other words, if it is completed, there will be a public statement that will say, in respect of negotiations commenced before our election, which we have brought to a head because of our election, this is happening and it is happening in this plot and we have made the decision that this plot should be used for these purposes in these circumstances. The hon. Gentleman knows that that is not the only plot that is being discussed on that basis as a residue of things that were happening before the Election.

There are a number of others which could be used for one purpose or another and international investors had already indicated an interest in them and his Government was taking forward that interest and it may be that my Government reaches a conclusion in respect of those which will result in the grant of land to certain such investors, not just the ones I am hoping to see this evening to try and progress it and to try and get it to a stage where Gibraltar has the benefit of that sort of economic activity and the creation of employment.

Alleged unfairness under previous administration
Referred to Chief Minister and Ministers

Clerk: Question 101, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what matters relating to unfairness suffered under the previous administration does he believe many people wish to see him and other ministerial colleagues on?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there are so many such instances that it would take me days to go through the list.

Suffice to say that I have come across cases of people who have never had letters replied to, having written repeatedly to Ministers on issues which caused them serious personal problems. These range from issues to do with immigration to housing and employment.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I suspect that the hon. Member will discover that what people call ‘unfairness suffered under the previous administration’ and he now calls ‘unfairness which caused them serious personal injury’ is simply not having got the decision that they wanted out of the system, which people quickly convert into a sense of personal grievance.

Anyway... so these relate to housing and immigration matters and things of that sort? Mr Speaker, I look forward to being able to ask him, in due course, how many of these he has been able to resolve.

I am grateful to him.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have never referred to the hon. Gentleman inflicting serious personal injury on anyone. If I thought he had done that, I would be reporting him to the Police, I am not trying to sort it out myself.

Of course, I accept that there are some people who think that they have been hard done by but, in fact, their grievance has no merit; but I think that there are people who feel they have been hard done by who have merit in their grievance. That may be an issue between us across the political divide. I am doing my best to resolve as many problems of as many people who need my help as is possible because I see that as one of my roles in politics.

Hon. P R Caruana: As he has not seen them yet and, indeed, the statement was to tell them to be patient because he has not been able to get... As he has not seen them yet, he does not know whether they fall into the category of people who have been genuinely treated unfairly by the Government, as opposed to the complainer type. So this is a statement that he makes in his New Year broadcast on the assumption that there are people out there of this kind, aggrieved by the unfairness, but because he has not been able to see them yet he does not know whether that is true or not.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, unfortunately, again, there are more things in heaven and earth than are thought of in his philosophies. I may have read their letters asking to see me and identified there the grievances which I think are genuine that they need to see me on.

Alleged unfairness under previous administration
Link to promises made during Election campaign

Clerk: Question 102, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister say whether he thinks it possible that the many people that he says want to see him and other ministerial colleagues about housing, employment and immigration matters is actually because he spent the Election campaign and much time before promising people to see them, solve their problem and give them what they wanted immediately on his being elected, if they voted for him?

Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I do hope so, as politicians are elected to serve people and resolve their problems, not to rule over them imperiously.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, but he misses the point of the Question, which is that the long queue of people clammering to get into him, which is not humanly possible for him to see all at once, are not because there is a great battalion of people out there who have been injuriously and unfairly treated by the previous administration, but if you go round Gibraltar for three months promising houses to everybody that asks for one, jobs for everybody that asks for one, immigration papers for everyone that asks for one, then when they deliver their part of the bargain, which is to vote for you, and you come into office, they all go clammering to cash in their chips, and that this is why he is inundated with people wanting to see him and not because there is a long list of people.

Mr Speaker, he was dealing with a long list of people before the Election. Do you remember when they used to come back here and tell us that, from their Opposition offices, people, constituents, used to go round this building along the pavement queuing to get in to tell them just how badly they had been treated by the GSD Government? So these queues must be generated by a different reason to what used to generate the queues before.

The question is whether the hon. Member thinks that it may be possible that these people who are wanting to see you and that you cannot fit... whose demands for timely meetings you cannot humanly satisfy, are actually the people who are responding to your invitations issued before the Election to do precisely that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, first of all, there are many people who I have not even heard of, let alone met during the Election campaign, who now want to see me, who write to me and show me that they have serious grievances as a result of the way that they have been treated before the Election, so that cannot be true, Mr Speaker.

Whether before an election, during an election or after an election, in a great measure, that is what we are there for, Mr Speaker – to deal with the problems that the people of Gibraltar have – and perhaps the fact that he did not see himself in that way may mean that that is why I am seeing letters that have not been replied to from 2008, 2009, 2010 and 2011.

Mr Speaker, it is almost as if, in 2007, the hon. Gentleman had made a decision that he was not going to stand for election in 2011, because he has completely neglected some people, some people who I have not met during the General Election campaign and who therefore cannot be queuing outside my door because of anything I told them during the General Election campaign.

In fact, Mr Speaker, I am seeing a lot of people who saw him before the General Election campaign, who tell me that he promised them things and who tell me that he said that if he was elected he would deal with giving them a home. But, of course, Mr Speaker, he deployed another device during this General Election campaign to show that he was the incumbent, to not just go around promising people things but actually giving them things, and I think, Mr Speaker, that was the problem. They cashed in the chip before the vote, and that is why he is there and we are here.

‘Paperless’ Government Official policy

895 Clerk: Question 103, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether it is the policy of the Government that the Government should go paperless?

900 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes.

905 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the Government is to go paperless, can the hon. Member assure the House that there will be a system, and can he explain what that system will be, to ensure that, having gone paperless, which means that nothing is on papers in files, but presumably done by e-mail or something... Can the hon. Member say how he proposes to make good, in any meaningful way, his commitment to allow freedom of information, to allow people access to their files and to their papers and to everything, not just the 20-year rule – what is the 20-year rule going to be worth in 20 years’ time if there is not a paper in the Government? – and what will he be showing people if there is no paper in the Government? What system exists? I am sure some system must exist. What system exists and what system will he be implementing to ensure that his supposedly environmentally motivated decision to go paperless does not empty of real meaning his commitment to open, transparent Government, to production of information and to access to files, which then will not exist, of course.

915 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, despite the apparent aggression with which it is delivered, I detect a humble asking of a Question in respect of a matter on which the hon. Gentleman does not know much. I do not call him a Luddite, but perhaps, generationally, I am better able to deal with issues such as this.

920 Mr Speaker, going paperless does not mean that there are no bits of paper at all. It means that you reduce the bits of paper as much as possible, because that is accepted by everybody else to be environmentally friendly. For that reason, Mr Speaker, we will be reducing the use of paper as much as possible. One of the things that we are doing, Mr Speaker, is that Members are getting only their Questions in printed form to come to that House so that when we are dealing with debates like this we have got a piece of paper, and they are receiving everybody else’s Questions and Answers, in order to be able to follow the debate, by e-mail.

925 Therefore, Mr Speaker, to answer his question – what will freedom of information require in terms of being paperless – it is very simple: when somebody makes a freedom of information request and we go back to the old files, which are on paper, it is very likely, if we are able to get the systems going, that we will simply scan those in and send them to those persons by e-mail, which is the way that it is done in the United Kingdom, you should know.

930 In the United Kingdom, the freedom of information mechanisms work on the basis that the first attempt to interact with the person who is seeking information is to ensure that they have got e-mail to try and send them the documentation in that way, and people can then see on their screens – on their iPads or any other devices that they use – the information, and there are now sophisticated programmes which allow you to even make notes in respect thereof. The same would apply in respect of the 20-year rule. He knows that, before the General Election, he was already looking at digitising the archive, which means that the archive... although 935 what was there in paper will be kept in paper, will also be kept in electronic form. It is almost nonsensical – but I will not say that it is that because I complain when he makes such allegations about things that we say – to suggest that it is not possible to do these things electronically... For years, newspapers have kept their records on microfiche rather than in hard copy, although a hard copy may exist in one library somewhere, which is the library of record.

940 So, Mr Speaker, there are many ways of doing this. I would have thought that this is something where we should be getting support from the hon. Gentleman and I will interpret his Question only as seeking information, despite the tone with which I detected it was delivered.

945 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I suggest the hon. Member limits himself to what is his statutory duty, which is to answer my questions, not to interpret my tone.

Mr Speaker, I do not know whether I am a Luddite or not. I do not even know whether being called a Luddite is being called a name, which he complains of when I call him one. I do not know whether being called a Luddite is being called a nasty name, which he always makes this fuss about when I call him... but I am not as sensitive as he is about these things.

Nor have I done anything such as he has attributed to me. I have not attempted to suggest (Interjection), let alone suggested, that it is not possible for the Government to go paperless. What I have asked him, and I would ask him again –

Hon. Chief Minister: What is the premise of his question. He is not asking a question. He needs to ask questions.

Hon. P R Caruana: Look, Mr Speaker, I do not know how long the Chair in this parliament is going to want to take instructions from one Member of the House from a sedentary position. He knows, Mr Speaker, that it is not for him... This is like a footballer who asks the referee to produce the red card. He should sit there quietly and when the Speaker wants to enforce the rules of Parliament, he will.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! May we please get on with the question?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, exactly, Mr Speaker – prompted by the Chief Minister, there is always an admonition.

The question that I have asked him is not to suggest that it is not possible. I have asked him what system he is going to put in place to ensure precisely that the paperless Government... and the first question was whether it was going to be paperless, and he said yes. He did not say, ‘No, the only element of paperlessness is that we are not getting copies of the Questions.’ He said that the Government was going to go paperless. ‘Paperless’ means without paper.

Hon. Chief Minister: It does not.

Hon. P R Caruana: ‘Paperless’ does not mean without paper, okay. Well, it means without paper to most people.

Hon. Chief Minister: It does not.

Hon. P R Caruana: What I have asked him to do is to explain to this House what method, what technology, what system is going to be put in place to ensure that paperless Government does not mean unauditable, inaccessible, unverifiable, recordless Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are many systems around the world that deliver that. ‘Paperless’ in the context of trying to deliver the use of less paper does not mean no paper.

Mr Speaker, Mr Luddite was a gentleman who destroyed a machine because he thought it was going to rid him and some of his colleagues of work. It is not an insult; it is a description. It is in the dictionary; it has a meaning. I am surprised the hon. Gentleman –

Hon. P R Caruana: So is ‘bastard’. I do not think I can call him one.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman says that so is ‘bastard’. Of course ‘bastard’ is in the dictionary. It also has a meaning which is applied even in courts, describing what that name implies. In playgrounds and in people who speak as if they were in playgrounds, that word means something different. ‘Luddite’ in a place like this has the meaning that Mr Luddite bequeathed to those of us who speak the English language.

Mr Speaker, there are many systems that can be used for this purpose. These are the things that we are looking at. Already we are making progress: e-mail is one of them. Frankly, how is it that we can have a row about something like this, Mr Speaker? One really is left to wonder whether there is the animus to have a parliamentary session which works like a parliamentary session should.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, in my view – (Interjection by Mr Caruana) In giving him my Answer,

Mr Speaker, I want to say this to the hon. Gentleman. He spent a long time asking me a question. In most instances, when we look at Hansard, it will be visible for anyone who cares to consult it that today the questions have taken longer than the answers. Mr Speaker, the questions should be that: questions.

1005 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the reason why we are having a row about this is that the hon. Member not only does not answer my question; he invents the question that I have asked him and then answers not the question that I asked but the one that he manufactures and attributes to me. That is why, and it is his style. It is his... incorrigible waffler not in control of detailed style, which characterises him not just in this House but outside.

1010 I have not, for example, suggested to him that there is no system. I have asked him to explain to the Opposition, as we are entitled to ask, and I do not care whether he thinks it is a good question or a bad question, whether he approves of it or not. It is none of his business. (Interjections) His business is to answer it. I have asked him what system, of all the ones that he thinks exist... Given that he has already issued instructions for the Government to go paperless, he presumably has already chosen a system to allow non 1015 paper-based information to be stored in a retrievable fashion, in a collatable fashion by subject matter, to ensure that, for posterity, it can be protected and retrieved, and all I have done is ask him how he is going to do that, and then I got 'Luddite', and this, and motive and –

1020 Hon. Chief Minister: I got 'bastard'. I got 'bastard', Mr Speaker. 'Luddite' is not so bad.

Hon. P R Caruana: You did not get 'bastard'.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I mean waffle, not in control of detail. Mr Speaker, come on! (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)
1025

Mr Speaker: Order! Let's move on to the next Question.

Hon. Chief Minister: There are some things... [Inaudible], but one does not say out of politeness.

1030 Mr Speaker: Order!

Clerk: Question 104, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1035 Hon. Chief Minister: You didn't ask the Question.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, I did. I asked you what system you have chosen.

Hon. Chief Minister: You got carried away with yourself, as you usually do.

1040 Hon. P R Caruana: So he is not going to tell me what system he has chosen.

Hon. G H Licudi: No, the next Question has been called.

1045 Hon. P R Caruana: Exactly, so he is not going to tell me. That is what I have said.

Hon. Chief Minister: I have told him. We are going to have an e-mail system and scan the records.

1050 Development of Gibraltar
Modern, vibrant city

1055 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what he thinks Gibraltar needs to make it a modern vibrant city?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, four years at least of a GSLP Liberal Government! (Laughter and applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, and what does the GSLP Liberal Government intend to do during those four years, particularly to increase the modernity and the vibrancy of our city? (Interjection by the Chief Minister) I would have thought the Question was a reasonable Question. He has given the Answer that he has given and then he wonders why we end up in a row. He knows why we end up in a row.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, all the things that are set out in the manifesto which saw us elected by the people of Gibraltar to become their Government on 9th December.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is implicit that he does not believe that Gibraltar is a modern, vibrant city now, then?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is implicit that, as the proud Gibraltarian that I am, I see that this country could be going much further than it has in the past 16 years and that its modernity and its vibrancy have been constrained by the previous Government.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has not said that he wants to make Gibraltar a more modern and vibrant city; he has said that he wants to make it a modern and vibrant city, namely it is not a modern and vibrant city today. If he had said a more modern and vibrant city, then the answer that he has given might be apposite, but it is not apposite. I want to know whether he considers that Gibraltar today is not a modern and vibrant city and that it needs four years of GSLP Government to become one.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes.

Changes to Constitution An 'evolving document'

Clerk: Question 105, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say in what respect our Constitution is an evolving document, and can he say whether he intends to seek further changes to our Constitution?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, every constitution is an evolving document. Ours contains a Chapter on Fundamental Rights and as these evolve so will we need to update that Chapter.

In political terms, if there are changes de facto in the way we operate in Gibraltar, we will seek to amend our Constitution, in partnership with the UK, to reflect those changes de jure in the letter of our Constitution.

Hon. P R Caruana: But, Mr Speaker, would this be evolving change to increase the level of self government, rather than to decrease it or neuter it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I should trust that there will never be any difference between us across the floor of this House or anywhere else that might suggest to anyone that the evolution in our Constitution should actually be devolution. 'Evolution' means only one thing –

Hon. P R Caruana: In one direction of travel.

Hon. Chief Minister: In one direction of travel, absolutely right.

Hon. P R Caruana: Good Mr Speaker, we can agree on that, if we have to, here.

1115 Does he agree that evolution means formal change to the document, that this is not a question of reinterpreting any part – you are reinterpreting what is in the document unilaterally – that what we mean is that if he can find a way of increasing our levels of self government he will try to get those reflected in the letter of the document called our Constitution?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe that is exactly what my first Answer said. If it did not, I am delighted to confirm it to him.

Gibraltar Constitution
External reasons for change

1125 Clerk: Question 106, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, and I see that the Clerk is moving me on at his speed. Alright. Mr Speaker, can I – 1130 The Speaker: Does the Hon. Leader of the Opposition want to...?

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I was in jest.

1135 Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what reasons external to the relationship between us and the United Kingdom would justify or require changes to our Constitution?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, none that I can think of.

1140 My view is that nothing external to the relationship between the UK and us would justify or require changes to our Constitution. That is what I said in my New Year's message to the nation.

Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry, then I have misread it. Your message to the nation said:

1145 '... and we need to keep that evolution fluid and constant, never believing that it is a document set in stone that cannot be changed for reasons external to the relationship between us and the United Kingdom...'

– which means that it can be changed for reasons. 'Never believing that it cannot be changed' means believing that it can be.

1150 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I believe that what my message says is that it cannot be prevented from changing for reasons that are external to us.

Mr Speaker, there, what we are saying is Spain cannot stop us from going further if we and the United Kingdom are prepared to go further.

1155 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is what I believe that says, and I have read it 20 times to see whether it is possible of mischievous interpretation. I would invite the hon. Gentleman to agree with me that it is not, for reasons that are bigger than him and me.

1160

Hon. P R Caruana: That is a very helpful clarification. I agree with him.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1165 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the hon. Gentleman, the Hon. the Chief Minister, tell this House that, in the light of the previous statement that he made earlier on this afternoon – that we now enjoy the maximum level of self government short of independence, or which is compatible with British sovereignty – how does he envisage further constitutional evolution to grant us more self government in the light of that statement?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, because constitutions are evolving documents and relationships are evolving, and it is possible that, for reasons neither known to him or me today, there can be changes which are positive to the people of Gibraltar.

1175

Frankly, if what he is trying to do is put me in the corner on this one, he needs to put his Gibraltar hat on, take off his GSD hat, and allow us to make that progress if it is possible, and not simply say, ‘You cannot reconcile your statement, so there is no way forward.’

1180

Of course there is a way forward, Mr Speaker. As my Government progresses and perhaps, Mr Speaker, when I am here for four, eight, 12, 16 or, heaven forbid, 20 years – and I would not want to be here for anywhere near that long – we will make progress in our relationship with the United Kingdom which we cannot envisage today. The world changes, things change and it is possible that the maximum possible level of self government today is not the maximum possible level of self government tomorrow.

The Hon. the Chief Minister, in the ... The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition... (Interjections) Teething trouble – he must be giggling where he has gone! The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Interjection) said before, Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: If he wants to change roles now...

1190

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said before that, despite what the Constitution says, the practice has developed that the United Kingdom does not make law for Gibraltar by Order in Council. There is a development, Mr Speaker, that we all bank, rightly, de facto and that one day we may be able to reflect de jure. There, Mr Speaker, is just one example.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not trying to catch the hon. Gentleman out at all. I am just trying to understand the Government’s policy on this.

The Government has said that its view is that we enjoy here in Gibraltar the maximum level of self government short of independence and compatibility with British sovereignty, and I was just trying to explore with the Hon. the Chief Minister what areas he envisaged might be ripe for further constitutional development in the light of that statement.

So really, at this stage, the answer is that he does not envisage any further... Is that the answer, that he does not envisage, or he cannot come up with any areas for further constitutional development in the future, at this present moment in time?

1205

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the position. I am not going to accept that the hon. Gentleman put words in my mouth. I have said what I have said, not necessarily what he said I have said.

The hon. Gentleman who has just come back in the Chamber will be delighted to know that he was called something much better than a Luddite a few moments ago when he was out of it!

Hon. P R Caruana: By whom?

Hon. Chief Minister: By me.

Hon. P R Caruana: You think I should be Chief Minister?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I don’t think you should be. It was a Freudian slip.

Hon. P R Caruana: It was a dream. I miss all the better ones! My bladder has let me down!

Hon. Chief Minister: Believe me, it was not a dream; it was a nightmare, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I have already come up with one example of a circumstance which might somehow one day develop and evolve into something that is reflected in... a new constitution and it is the example that the Hon.

the Leader of the Opposition gave, which is that there has been developed a practice that the United Kingdom actually does not make law for Gibraltar by Order in Council – something that we all, of course, welcome, Mr Speaker – that may have consequences and, as time passes, that may become something that we reflect in some way in our Constitution. Of course, that is one example. What we cannot do is pretend to know everything that will happen and how things change.

Therefore, I believe that there are circumstances that could result in us wanting to change the Constitution, even though I have said what I have said, namely, that we have achieved the maximum possible level of self government.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, the problem is – and perhaps this is what set the kite flying – that if in a New Year message, Gibraltar's newly-elected Chief Minister says the things that he has said, it does make people think whether he has something in his mind that he is setting the scene for and my questions.

I have no doubt my hon. colleagues were in the vein of trying to pick his brain to see whether he did have anything in mind, positive or negative, for Gibraltar in terms of this carefully constructed paragraph which followed immediately after the reference to Mr Liddington's... to the... not Mr Liddington's... to the Overseas Territory Review which had... Bellingham, the Minister of State, the Foreign Office for Overseas Territories, is conducting on a cross overseas territory-wide basis. It was the link.

I was just trying to establish whether there was a link between those, or whether he was simply saying, which is the impression he has left me with this afternoon... whether he is simply saying that the fact that Spain would protest is not a reason for withholding further constitutional development for Gibraltar. If that is all that he is saying, fine, then there is no link of the sort or other implication.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman ever has that thought again in relation to issues like this, I would say to him I will take your phone call whenever you ring, and it is important that, if there are issues like that (Interjection by Mr Caruana) we should not... it depends what type of phone he is calling from. We should not necessarily –

Hon. P R Caruana: From my mobile.

Hon. Chief Minister: – have to talk about them across the floor of the House because if I did have such a thought, it may be that it might have been useful for us to share it. I would call him if I had such a thought before putting it in a statement like this or he would have an indication from me otherwise.

Mr Speaker, what was in my mind then and is in my mind now, and will always be in my mind, is that we had the 1969 constitution for 37 years and we were very often told that that was it and our constitution was never going to be up for renegotiation and it is important that nobody get the impression – and I thought that this would be an issue of common ground – that we accept that where we are is where we are and there is nowhere else to go because it may be that, across the floor of the House, we agree that there is somewhere to go in the future.

In respect of the first Chapter, Mr Speaker, on fundamental rights and freedoms, there are fundamental human rights and freedoms, which are evolving. For example, there are rights for disabled people not to be discriminated against. We now face the possibility, as a result of international legal conventions, that we may be making laws to enshrine those rights and we may find ourselves, Mr Speaker, with certain fundamental rights set out in a constitution and others set out in a statutory provision, and we may agree, Mr Speaker, that it is important that all of those fundamental rights should be equated within the first Chapter of the constitution. There is one example that comes to mind of something that may be very easy for us to agree inter se and may be very easy for us to agree with the United Kingdom. There is provision, Mr Speaker, in the constitution for there to be changes to that Chapter for just those reasons.

Hence, Mr Speaker, I believe I am reflecting what the constitution is, a living and, therefore, in our view, and I hope across the floor of the House, only in one direction and positively evolving document.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, thank goodness we are not all Luddites on this side of the House as my very young and very un-Luddite colleague has been able to give me a copy of the Constitution.

Does he acknowledge, nevertheless that, insofar as the European Convention of Human Rights is concerned – in other words, human rights that are recognised on an inter-government basis in Europe – there is no need to change the constitution to recognise them because the constitution already says precisely that – that the constitution shall be deemed... I am just trying to get to that... that the... Yes, here it is:

1280 'That the decisions, amendments to the European Convention of Human Rights judges' decisions, declarations of advisory opinions, opinions of the European Commission of Human Rights, decisions of the Commission in connection with article...'

– that these are all effectively incorporated automatically into our constitution. So that is one of the things that we did, in the constitutional... [Inaudible] to avoid the constitution ever being out of sync with the European Convention of Human Rights. He is aware of that?

1285 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, that is what I was saying in my previous answer. That is why it is an evolving document and that is why that chapter can also be changed, but, Mr Speaker, there are some things that come to us not just from Europe. There is an International Convention on the Rights of Disabled People (Interjection) which is not necessarily covered by that.

1290 What I am saying, Mr Speaker, is that we may make a decision as a parliament, this is not a decision of the Government unilaterally, but we may make a decision as a parliament and as a political class to incorporate those things in the fundamental chapter and we should not close the door to that and I take it from what I am hearing on the other side that they agree.

1295 Hon. D A Feetham: We do not disagree with that, but would the hon. Gentleman agree with me that, in fact, that particular chapter has nothing to do with the levels of self government? It deals with human rights, not levels of self government in Gibraltar that you are talking about.

1300 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is why I spoke before about the issue to do with levels of self government and then spoke about the issues to do with fundamental rights. He may not have been following and I commend the Hansard to him, where he will have seen that I was talking about the other matter previously. I should say with his current leader.

1305 Adjournment motion

Government ‘projects’
Definition for planning purposes

Clerk: Question 76 of 2012, the Hon. S M Figueras.

15 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker.
Will the Minister with responsibility for planning define what the Government considers 'projects' in the context of the requirements that all Government projects will be subject to the planning process?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

20 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I will answer together with Question 77.

25 Government 'projects'
Date subject to planning process

Clerk: Question 77.

30 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will the Minister with responsibility for planning confirm the date from which the Government expects all Government projects to be subject to the planning process?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

35 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the new Government at this stage intends to continue with the policy of the previous Government not to require the approval of the DPC. However, in line with our philosophy in this matter, Government intends to present all development and planning projects that would ordinarily require planning permission to the DPC for an opinion and for guidance. (Interjection) To the DPC, for opinion and for guidance. This will enable a wider input into the 40 process and ensure consistency with the Commission's overall planning policy.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in relation to the question of which projects it is intended eventually will be required to go to planning, can the Member confirm whether any discussion or consultation has been carried out in respect of which ones will eventually be required to go through that planning process?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government has taken the view that we will not go to the DPC to ask for planning permission for any projects, but will present all projects for an opinion and for guidance from the DPC. So there is not, actually, a list of what will go and what will not. Everything will go to the DPC, except that it will not require planning permission.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Member can confirm whether it is the Government's intention to not proceed to make Government projects subject to the planning process during the term?

55 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is too soon to determine. What I can say is that, at this stage, Government projects will not require the approval of the DPC, but we will go to them to seek an opinion and to seek guidance. This may change but, at this stage, that is the policy.

Hon. S M Figueras: This a rather surprising turn of events, in the light of the new Government's claim to this new era of openness and modernisation which, of course, is welcomed, certainly, by myself.

It is surprising to notice, is it not, Mr Speaker, the suggestion that all Government projects may – in the General Election that all Government projects would indeed go to Planning is now not something that is even scheduled or considered or expected to occur within the foreseeable future. Can the Minister confirm why it is that this apparent change of heart has occurred?

65 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, but I am certainly happy to clarify the position.

I think the hon. Member may have been misled by reports, which I also read. The Government has actually never said in our policy commitments or manifesto that Government projects would be required to go to the DPC for approval. What we have done is say that we will present them to the DPC for opinion and for 70 guidance, but actually they never have taken the position that they would all go to the DPC for approval. That is the policy at this stage. This may change.

75 Hon. S M Figueras: So I see, Mr Speaker, that the projects will be put to the Planning Commission for an opinion, but regardless of what that opinion may be, Government will proceed with those projects. Is that correct?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government will initially deal with the DPC, in the same way as the previous administration used to deal with the DPC. That is to say, there is no change of policy in this respect. We will present projects to the DPC for opinion and for guidance.

80 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker, we understand that that was a policy of the previous administration, but it was a policy for which the previous administration was criticised continuously by the previous Opposition and it is something that certainly that report was allayed to. It is surprising that there is now a change of heart, as it were, in the Government bench and I would be grateful for an explanation as to why that has come about.

85 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government has never been that our projects will go to the DPC. Therefore, there has been no change of heart.

90 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes, indeed, in terms of clarification, the Government projects were put initially to the DPC, as the hon. Member himself has explained... was policy and this was something, failing to take it through the whole planning process... was something that was criticised by the previous Opposition, now the Government. (Interjections) I still, unfortunately, have not had an answer from the hon. Member in respect of...

95 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

100 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I do not recall ever having criticised the previous administration for not having taken projects, or not having presented projects, to the DPC. In fact, my understanding is that they did present projects, up to four or five years ago and then this actually stopped. So it is something which I am now criticised for.

In any case, we are here to answer for our policy as a Government and the policy of the Government is that projects will go to the DPC for an opinion and for guidance.

105 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, wary as I am of the discussion that was had yesterday in this House in respect of manifesto commitments and their suitability to be mentioned here, I do think it is relevant to mention that, within their manifesto, there is a commitment that Government projects will be subject to the planning process.

110 That is the source of my confusion on this matter and the reason why I am asking the question. Once again, I would ask why the change of heart?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I think the hon. Member may have been misled by information which appeared in the press, contained...

115 Hon. S M Figueras: No, Mr Speaker, it was in the manifesto on page 45 of your manifesto.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The policy of the Government is to submit projects to the DPC – that is not going to change what we are doing. It is a change in a sense that they did start doing it as well and then they stopped.

120 We intend to continue with the policy which they initiated, which is to present projects to the DPC for an opinion and for guidance. That may change, but that is the position at the moment.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Dr Garcia saying that all the innate persistent sniping criticism that persisted about the previous Government's ignoring the DPC, doing its projects without... That 125 all of this had nothing whatsoever to do with the Opposition and actually they were content. It is now the position of the GSLP Liberal Alliance in government that they are content with the policy of the previous Government and the use of the DPC in relation to Government projects to the extent that they are minded to continue it and the Hon. Dr Garcia appears to be unaware of the content of his manifesto.

130 No, he cannot shake his head. The content of the manifesto has been read to him, Mr Speaker, he has said, no. The manifesto, on page 45, says:

‘Government projects will be subject to the planning process.’

135 The planning process is not a process whereby people submit projects to the DPC for their guidance and opinion, the planning process to which they are committed to submit Government projects is a process –

Hon. Chief Minister: Where is the question, Mr Speaker?

Hon. P R Caruana: – a process whereby projects –

140 Hon. Chief Minister: This is supposed to be Question Time, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

145 Hon. P R Caruana: – is a process whereby projects are submitted for their approval.

Will the Hon. Dr Garcia therefore concede that the position that he has set out today of a policy of continuing the previous GSD Government’s policy is, firstly, incompatible with the political use they made of this subject before the General Election and, secondly, an entire U-turn from what they put in their manifesto, on the basis of which people voted for them (Members: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

150 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government – the position of the Government – has not changed. We have said... what I have said is, the Government projects will be submitted to the DPC and they will be submitted for an opinion and for guidance at this stage.

155 There is a review of the town planning legislation going on at the moment. I do not want to predetermine the outcome of that review. That position may change. I have kept on saying, ‘at this stage’.

160 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Members have shown remarkable alacrity in applying those parts of their manifesto that do not cost money and which it is within their gift to employ immediately – 30 days, 60 days, 90 days, 6 days. Here is something that they can do immediately, at no cost, complying with their manifesto. They do not need to change the law; all they have to do is say to the DPC, ‘approve or disapprove of this project’ in accord... They can submit voluntarily to the planning process, they simply choose not to do so and it is yet a further resiling from their manifesto, all of which will be listed in due course by the people.

165 Does the hon. Member not see that what he has announced here today is not what the manifesto says. He could say, if he wanted – I will still say to him there is no reason for the delay – but he could say, yes, it is a manifesto commitment, we are not doing dealing with that commitment just yet, that is for some time in the future, but what he has said today is that this is not what his manifesto says and I want him to acknowledge at least, please, if he would, that what he has said today is not consistent (Interjections) with what his manifesto says.

170 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! The point has been made by the Chief Minister twice. There was a question in the last question that started off, ‘Is the Hon. Dr Garcia saying...’ so there was a question, albeit followed by a very long text.

175 Hon. P R Caruana: I beg your pardon, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is exactly it.

This is a parliament and it is Question Time and there are moments in Parliament when people can say what they like. It is not a question of trying to stop people from saying what they like, because people can bring motions and they can say whatever they like. That is what they are paid for on that side and, to an extent, it is what we are paid for to do on this side. But at Question Time what they are paid to do... what their obligation is to the people of Gibraltar is to ask questions absent soliloquies.

Mr Speaker: Absolutely. I will listen to the Hon. Leader of the Opposition...

Hon. P R Caruana: The Hon. Mr Speaker has already said there is a question. Now, look, these questions could be briefer and fewer, if they would answer the question. The question is, even though he may wish to delay the implementation of the manifesto, will Dr Garcia concede that his manifesto does contain a commitment, as has been put to him and as he denied the first time it was put to him, to subject Government projects to the planning process? That is all. For the rest, he can implement his manifesto whenever he wants.

Hon. Chief Minister: We are talking about the issue of questions, not –

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government is that the Government projects will not be submitted to the DPC, will not be submitted through the planning process at this stage. There is a review of town planning legislation.

Some of the commitments in our manifesto are specifically dated, other commitments in the manifesto are not specifically dated. What we will not allow the hon. Member to do, is to try and manage our manifesto.

Mr Speaker: Before the next question is put, I really must insist that questions must be questions, not speeches and if it is necessary to set the question in its proper context, only a short preamble is necessary.

There are at least four lawyers on this side and we all know how to ask questions.

Hon. P R Caruana: Very well, in a very short form: regardless of when he intends to implement it, does the Hon. Dr Garcia acknowledge that his manifesto contains a commitment to subject Government projects to the planning process?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is the wording in the manifesto. (Laughter) However, what the manifesto does not say is when that is going to happen.

Like I said before, some commitments are time dated with specific dates as to when it is going to happen and other commitments are not dated and do not have specific dates. My answer is at this stage – that is not the intention – there is a review of town planning legislation going on. When that finishes, then we will see what happens.

Hon. P R Caruana: Indeed, Mr Speaker. Will the hon. Member, very briefly, by way of question, therefore now concede that the first answer that he gave in this House, in answer to the Hon. Mr Figueras on that very question, was not correct when he said that that was not what his manifesto said?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will read the first answer for the benefit of the Leader of the Opposition. The new Government at this stage intends to continue with the policy of the previous Government not to require the approval of the DPC. That is what it says, at this stage. That was the first answer.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with respect you see, they obfuscate and then they complain when it takes a long time to clarify and expose their obfuscation.

Mr Speaker, I have not said the answer... his original answer to the original question... I have said, on the first occasion that he was asked by Mr Figueras to confirm what was in his manifesto. In answer to that, he said that that was not in his manifesto, not in his original answer, in a subsequent supplementary. Will he admit that, prior to clarifying it with me, he had told the Hon. Selwyn Figueras just three minutes earlier that his manifesto did not contain a commitment to subject Government projects to the planning process?

Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member answers, with respect, the purpose of Question Time is to elicit information, to urge a line of policy on the Government and so forth. The answer, which the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister has given, has been given, has been heard and understood by all of us. I do not see the purpose of Question Time in Parliament as in any way similar to cross examination in court, where we, as lawyers, are intent upon beating confession out of the witness.

The answer has been given. With respect, the question has been posed in different language, but aimed at the same answer.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, as has been the case for the last sixteen years in this Parliament, if Mr Speaker has decided that he wants Parliament, from the beginning of this parliamentary term, to be different from what it has been in the past, then let him say so and then we will all know what the new rules of the game are. He cannot suddenly, surely, start criticising behaviour which replicates what has always been the case and I am certain that Mr Speaker is not suggesting that Question Time is a sterile process, just because the previous Opposition converted it into one... that in the Westminster model of parliamentary democracy, Parliament is for the elucidation of sterile statistical information and not for the conduct of political activity.

This is a novel view of what Parliament is for, which is not the case in the United Kingdom and certainly has never been the case here, but if Mr Speaker rules that that is what this Parliament will be, he can be absolutely sure that I, for one, will comply with his ruling.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may, in relation to that point, the rules of the game have never changed. What has changed is that there is a commitment from this Government – and the hon. Gentleman is aware of it, as is the rest of the community – that there will be a monthly Question Time. Therefore, Mr Speaker, the need of the previous Opposition to set questions and supplementaries in context, which might have related to things that had happened months before the hon. Member opposite subjected himself to scrutiny on them, is no longer there and that is why I think it is absolutely right that you should take the attitude, which Erskine May suggests and urges upon you and which the Standing Orders and rules of this House have always required, that at Question Time we are there to elicit information, and information may be political information and need not be statistics and, in fact, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman need only tell us what statistic they are interested in by asking us a question one month and if we believe that it is information which can be put into the public domain, we will ensure that it is put into the public domain every month thereafter for the whole of the community, Mr Speaker.

You are right to insist that, at Question Time, the Opposition's role is to ask questions and the Government's responsibility is to give answers and, in my view, the only thing that is sterile is the hon. Gentleman's political discourse.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, Mr Speaker, then he admits that there is a change. He thinks – he has just said so – he thinks, he is urging upon you a different attitude, because he says there is now a change in the nature of parliamentary business, because he has decided, in a way that has not yet been formally deployed or approved in this Parliament that, as there are now going to be monthly Question Times, this alters the nature of Question Time. So he is confirming my statement that there is a view that there should be a change in the nature of Question Time. Well, there is not yet before this Parliament any change in the nature of its business, so any change that might be justified to Question Time by any such reform, it certainly cannot be deployed, the change cannot be deployed, before the reform is deployed formally in this Parliament.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, anyone who sat through the previous four years of Question Time and now hears the statement made by the hon. Member, never mind that he professes to be the champion of a vibrant and open and effective Parliament, relevant to what the people use that Parliament for... Never mind that he subscribes to that policy for political purposes, just anybody who compares the Opposition's inquisitorial approach, when they were in government, to Question Time – we used to spend an hour on some questions; 30, 25 supplementaries from all Members, who now compares that behaviour on their part to the attitude that he is now trying to deploy of clipping the wings of the Opposition, curtailing this Opposition's ability to do what they used to do. Why? Because he is not up to submitting himself to the same degree of scrutiny to which he subjected me. He demonstrated yesterday that he was not up to it and he thinks he can modify the practice of this Parliament to protect himself from his serial inability to grasp detail and to prepare for it to come and combat in this Parliament.

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman needs to get used to the fact that he was the loser in the General Election. He is the one now who has been paid by the people of Gibraltar to ask questions, that his 290 capacity to pretend that he has a right from divine intervention to decide for himself what the procedures of this place should be, are absolutely only in his head, Mr Speaker.

295 You are the person who is entitled to determine how this Question Time proceeds. I am the person, because I am so charged by the people of Gibraltar, that has conduct of the timetable of this Parliament and I do not need to go through a parliamentary reform, to decide that I am going to bring my Government to this Parliament once a month to answer the questions that the Opposition rightly puts to us, because that is their role in a parliamentary democracy.

The extent of the questions, how long he can be on his feet, giving us these Hamlet-style soliloquies, that all of us are so bored of listening to and that this community has decided should not be the level of political debate to which we are all subjected, is a matter for you and not for him. (Interjections)

300 Hon. P R Caruana: In as much [Inaudible] ...now, as it was before. Mr Speaker, the Hon. Chief Minister is wrong. It is not in his power as Chief Minister to decide on the procedures of this House. The procedures of this House.

305 Hon. G H Licudi: There is a timetable. A timetable.

Hon. P R Caruana: ...And the order in which it conducts its business are set out in Standing Orders, which would have to be amended by this Parliament. That is something upon which we are all agreed.

310 What I am saying, is two things. First of all, there cannot be a change in the style of what Question Time in this Parliament is for and how it is conducted, without a decision of the Speaker, who has to, if he is going to change the style, say why he wants, or why he feels he is going to change it. Anyone who believes that what we were doing here yesterday and so far this morning, differs from what they used to do here during the last four and eight years, Mr Speaker, would not be telling the truth. The reality is that we are doing exactly the same – we may be doing it with more political effect, is a matter of opinion. That may or may not be the case, but we are using Question Time for the very purpose...

315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I am sorry..

320 Hon. Chief Minister: I am sorry, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

325 Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman needs to get used to the fact (Interjections) that he no longer has the last word in this place. Mr Speaker, these are the rules that applied to us as an Opposition and apply to them as an Opposition. Standing rule 17.1:

330 'The right to ask questions shall be governed by the following rules, as to the interpretation of which the Speaker shall be the sole judge. Not more than one subject shall be referred to in any one question and a question shall not be of excessive length.'

335 Mr Speaker, those were the rules that applied to us, they are the rules that apply to them. They applied to us in the context of a Chief Minister who, in some years, called no more than two or three meetings, depending on the year. Now this should be applied, Mr Speaker, of course in the factual context, to a Chief Minister who is going to call monthly meetings, however you consider is appropriate.

Mr Speaker: I will allow the Leader of the Opposition to finish what he was saying, then I will call the debate to an end by saying what I think.

340 Hon. P R Caruana: I was replying and I was interrupted.

Mr Speaker: I know.

Hon. P R Caruana: Alleging a point of order simply to repeat his argument and interrupt the exposition of mine... which he is allowed to do.

Mr Speaker: I will allow the hon. Member...

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, we all know what Standing Order says. The debate is not on the basis of what the Standing Order says, this debate is on the basis that, notwithstanding what Standing Order says, the Gibraltar Parliament has never functioned in that way. If the way the Parliament is going to function is going to suddenly change, coinciding with them moving from the Opposition benches to the Government benches, that is something that has to be noted and specified by the chair, by you, Mr Speaker.

You have got to say that, notwithstanding that this had been so in the past, in the future it is going to be different for this, that, or the other reason. If any such reasoning depends on a change in the parliamentary timetable, or a change in the way Parliament conducts its business, or a change in the number of Question Times, then that change, in my opinion, should not be implemented until those changes, in turn, until those agenda changes, have, in turn, been formally adopted in this Parliament.

That is the view from the Opposition benches and there are plenty of political points that, as we are discussing with you on a point of order, I will not add the many political dimensions that I could to this technical – (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: First of all, it is not for me to engage in debate with any Member of this House. I am to serve in this House, my job is to apply the rules to the best of my ability and my understanding. Let me assure every Member of this House I am applying the same Standing Orders which were approved by this House, I think it was in 2007, shortly after the new constitution was promulgated. I have interpreted those Standing Orders in accordance with the same text book, Erskine May. Nothing, nothing has changed in the last two days.

What I have observed and I have pointed this out – and as I say, it is not for me to engage in debate – but I will ask the Clerk immediately... as soon as possible after the conclusion of this sitting to make a transcript of Hansard available to the Hon. Leader of the Opposition. He will see the questions in the last... well, yesterday and so far today have been unduly lengthy and I would invite the Leader of the Opposition to bring to me corresponding texts from corresponding Hansards in the last seven years to show whether the questions from the Opposition then were as lengthy. I do not – I may be mistaken – but I do not believe they were as lengthy. I have not curtailed the number of supplementaries – that is not curtailed – and I have no objection to as many supplementaries as are relevant to the subject and arise from the answers, as may be necessary.

My criticism – or rather my plea – to the Opposition has been to curtail the preambles, because every question, or almost every question, has descended upon lengthy speeches, some of it of a political nature, some of it... well, unnecessarily long. But I will invite the Leader of the Opposition to prove me wrong, by comparing yesterday's Hansard with any one of the last seven years.

Hon. P R Caruana: I will accept.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

Can we now proceed with short, sharp, quick questions?

Transparency of planning process Deliberations to be held in public

Clerk: Question 78, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Will the Minister with responsibility for planning confirm whether there will be any part of the planning process, any at all, including the deliberations of the Development and Planning Commission which will not be held in public?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

400 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only issues that have been raised to date in relation to this have related to security issues and this has been put forward by the Ministry of Defence, to security issues. The Government intends to discuss this matter further with the MOD.

405 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in addition to statements already made, would the hon. Member enlighten us as to whether any progress has been made on the holding of meetings in public and publication of the entire planning process online?

410 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the first public meeting of the DPC will be next week and the matter of placing all the application process online, so people can look for themselves and see the state of individual applications, is already underway. It is not, obviously, complete, but we have already started working on it.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member able to provide me with a timescale for the publication of these applications online?

415 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is certainly progressing, but I would not like to give a firm date. There is no date in the manifesto, obviously, but I can say it is progressing very quickly.

420 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in light of this new approach to planning and openness and certainly bringing the meetings of the Development and Planning Commission to the public, would the Minister concede perhaps that, given the importance of the openness that they are now placing on this process, holding every aspect, or rather, subjecting every aspect, of the planning process to public scrutiny is the desirable outcome of this process of change?

425 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is our policy. That is exactly what our policy is and it was not the policy of the Members opposite when they were in Government. They are entitled to have a different policy, but our policy is that it should all be open, it should all be online.

There may be issues relating to security or sensitive issues of that nature but, other than that, everything will be open.

430 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in light of this clarification that there are, as one would expect, issues relating to security but, however, that everything should, in fact, be put before public scrutiny, will the hon. Member concede that, on the basis that Ministers of Government and Opposition are representatives of the people, they will take the initiative to amend the law to permit a Member of the Opposition to sit on the Development and Planning Commission, as a representative of the people, who will be subject and bound to those issues in relation to security?

440 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I appreciate the hon. Member is obviously new to the House and I understand that, but the hon. Members were in Government for 16 years and they never took that initiative. I appreciate it may not have been their policy; they are entitled to have it but, in our case, it is not in our manifesto, we have no commitment to include a Member of the Opposition in the DPC, but there are two Government Ministers represented on the DPC, who represent the people, and given that the meetings will be public and everything will be online, there will certainly be more information available to the Opposition than when we were on that side of the House.

445 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am indeed new to the House and certainly finding my feet, but I am aware that it was the previous administration's position... I am aware of their previous position in relation to the Development and Planning Commission.

450 There is a new Government and there is a new approach to the Development and Planning Commission and will the Minister not concede that, perhaps consistent with this new approach, this commitment to openness, this commitment to public scrutiny, that appointing a Member of the Opposition to the Development and Planning Commission may be a good idea?

Hon. G H Licudi: He has answered the question already.

That Question has been answered.

455

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The hon. Member is certainly free to come to public meetings of the DPC, as anybody else is entitled to do that and to find out what the procedures are. What I certainly would be willing to consider, is to brief him on the issues which may not be discussed in public, because everything else he will be privy to.

460

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that.
Thank you.

465

Development and Planning Commission Chairperson Eligibility of Town Planner

470

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Will the Minister with responsibility for Planning confirm that he is satisfied that there are no practical, legal, technical, or other reasons why the Town Planner should not be appointed Chairperson of the Development and Planning Commission?

475

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the advice that the Government has received is that there are no practical, legal or technical reasons, or other reasons, why the Town Planner should not be appointed Chairperson of the DPC.

480

Hon. S M Figueras: As suspected, Mr Speaker, meaning no disrespect whatsoever to the office of the Town Planner or the Town Planner himself, will the Minister concede that it is far from ideal to have one of the more junior members of the Commission chairing any board or any Commission, much less that the person chairing the meeting is not one of two democratically elected representatives of the people at the Commission?

485

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I certainly do not think the Town Planner can be described as 'a junior person', but having said that... (Interjections) certainly, the policy of the Government in our manifesto was that the Town Planner should chair meetings of the DPC and that is already the case.

490

At the first meeting, the Town Planner took over the meeting from me and is now the Chairman of the DPC.

495

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is it, in the Hon. Dr Garcia's view, usual for somebody to chair any board, never mind DPC, any board, when there are the Deputy Chief Minister, a Minister, the Government's Chief Technical Officer... Some of the most senior people in the Government are sitting around the table and this person, who is much more junior in the pecking order, is supposed to direct them to, as the Speaker would do here, to ask shorter questions or not to extend so much in debate, or to be relevant, or to stick to the point, I could just see Mr Origo saying to the Deputy Chief Minister, 'Now, Dr Garcia, stick to the point, we have discussed your views long enough and now it is time to move on to the next application.'

500

Does he honestly believe that a junior civil servant – oh, not junior, he is not a junior civil servant, but in the context of the Government's Chief Technical Officer and all the other people that sit on the board, does Dr Garcia not accept that it is unlikely that any chair of any board would be able, in effect, to exercise control, as the chair must, over the people sitting around this table, most of whom are his considerable seniors?

505

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this may not have happened under his administration, certainly perhaps, it did not, but we have a different policy and it will happen under our administration, certainly I think part of that analysis is absurd. This is the policy of the Government. The expert in town planning is a town planner. I know I am not an expert in planning; my colleague, although he has experience in the DPC, is also not an expert in planning and the professional person who is an expert and is qualified to do that, should chair the DPC. So we do not agree with the analysis.

Hon. P R Caruana: Of course, the Town Planner is the expert in planning and he is now, as he was then, but experts offer advice to chairmen and board members, they do not chair the board that makes the decision. So if the expert on town planning is chairing the decision-making board, who is going to advise the decision-making board?

515

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may. The manifesto, all of whom sitting opposite, (Interjections) have a copy of –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

520

Hon. Chief Minister: – says on page 45 – the same page where they have been trying to get us to stick to what it says –

‘The Town Planner will be appointed Chairman of the DPC, while the Minister, as a representative of the people, will retain a seat on the DPC, but will not chair it.’

525

That is our policy –

Hon. J J Bossano: And we are implementing it.

530

Hon. Chief Minister: The people have chosen this policy. Therefore, neither we nor the people, agree with the interpretation of the hon. Member opposite.

535

Hon. P R Caruana: Therefore, Mr Speaker, according to that – I do not know if that is a Shakespearean soliloquy or not – but according to the Leader... the Chief Minister, so long as it is in their manifesto, even if it relates to the organisation of public bodies, of public affairs, we are not entitled to question them, because they are just implementing their manifesto.

Look, the Hon. the Chief Minister is going to lose his entirely undeserved reputation for being committed to transparency and reform much more quickly than even we suspected that he would lose it. We will ask questions in this House on any matter to do with public affairs or public policy, whether or not the hon. Members are doing things which are in their manifesto.

My question, on a matter of public affairs, to the Hon. Dr Garcia is, if the expert, to quote his name, to quote what Dr Garcia himself said, the technical expert of the Government in planning matters is chairing the decision-making Development and Planning Commission, who will advise the Development and Planning Commission on matters of expertise – that require expertise on planning?

545

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what we are saying is that we are entitled to our policy and they are entitled to theirs and if it is different, then so be it.

550

Hon. P R Caruana: I know they are entitled to their policies and because their policies relate to the public affairs of Gibraltar, I am entitled to ask the questions I have asked, even if it is their policy. He can say, ‘Lump it, it is our policy and I am not going to answer your question’, which is, who is going to advise the DPC on expertise requiring matters, given that they have put the expert as Chairman of the very board that would require the expertise?

555

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is as already answered. This is our policy, we respect it, nobody is saying he cannot come here (Interjections) and ask questions –

Mr Speaker: That is the answer.

Hon. P R Caruana: If the hon. Member is refusing to answer... (Interjections)

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The hon. Member is on his feet, so the hon. Member should be a bit more –

565 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The hon. Member is on his feet, so the Leader of the Opposition should keep quiet and listen to the answer.

570 Hon. Chief Minister: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: That is the answer, we have to accept it.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, it is not an answer, it is a refusal to answer.

575 Hon. Chief Minister: It is an answer he does not like.

Mr Speaker: No, that is the answer on the record. We have to accept it for what it is. Comment may be made elsewhere, that is up to whoever it is.

580 Clerk: Question –

Hon. P R Caruana: My question was...

585 Mr Speaker: I understand the question.

Hon. P R Caruana: Who will advise the Commission? It was not (Interjections) – is it the policy of the Government that he should be the Chairman? (Interjections) We know that, given that because it is their policy, they have appointed the Town Planner as Chairman of the board, in consequence of the implementation of that policy, who will now advise the Commission on technical matters? That is the question. The answer cannot be, 'It is our policy.'

Mr Speaker: Look, with respect, that is the answer which has been provided on three occasions when the question was posed. It is not for me to direct a particular answer. That is the answer and I have to accept it.

595 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, as do I, Mr Speaker.

At some point I am going to move a motion that the cameras of the GBC be allowed to televise these proceedings as soon as possible and preferably by the next meeting of Parliament. (Interjections)

600 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, if he does, he will find he will probably have unanimous support, because there could be nothing better...

605 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, let us get on with it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Than for the people of Gibraltar to see for themselves the antics that the hon. Gentleman gets up to in this House, his demeanour. The fact that he sometimes stands in front of a camera with his silk tie and pretends to be a nice guy is not the reality day to day in this Parliament, that he is a brute in parliamentary terms that they need to see. (Interjections) What was it that you said? (Interjection) You got up and said something and I am replying.

610 The hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, for all the cameras and for all the viewers, will have to be seen, by the whole of Gibraltar, no longer to have the last word and to see how much it hurts him that he no longer has the last word and how the sour grapes keep coming through every single day and why, because of that, this Parliament is unable to operate as a Parliament.

615 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am very happy for the people of Gibraltar to see that which, of course, they will not. What they will see is the refusal of the hon. Members opposite to answer the questions, the spectacle of a Chief Minister who cannot answer questions and what they will see... If the people of Gibraltar

620 had seen, including my overlong questions, what has happened in this House, during the last day and a half, particularly the performance of the newly elected Government and how it bears no resemblance to what they were served up before the Election as being their policy, Mr Speaker, I tell you that the majority would not, by now, be 250 votes, it would now be no votes at all. So, roll on the cameras!

625 Hon. Chief Minister: Actually, what they will see is they will see it once a month, because it was as much in the gift of the previous Chief Minister, as it is in this one, to call the meetings once a month.

What they will see, Mr Speaker, is an attempt to make this place work as a Parliament and what they will see is that the hon. Gentleman just cannot accept what his new role is, that the whole of his political discourse is about trying to say that we already are failing as a Government, that he should have been returned to office, that our majority in votes will be lower next time round, it may be zero already. Mr Speaker, he is in for a big surprise, if he is still around in four years' time, although I see that Cassius has a mean and hungry look and he may not be.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

635 Hon. P R Caruana: Point of order. I have a point of order.

The hon. Member says that I do not know what my new role is. I do know what my new role is. My new role is to ask questions on behalf of the people of Gibraltar, to hold the Government to account about their public affairs. When I have tried to exercise that right, this morning, by asking a simple question: if the Town Planner is now Chairman of the DPC, who is going to advise the DPC on technical matters, they have refused to answer me.

640 It is, therefore, not that I do not know what my role is, it is that they will not allow us to perform our role, because they refuse to answer straightforward, simple questions about the public affairs of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker: Order.

645 Hon. Chief Minister: I am lost as to what point of order I am answering, other than that the hon. Gentleman wanted to repeat the question again, in case, because people have not got the cameras on him, which, obviously, he is dying to have all cameras on him again, they might not have heard it the first time.

650 Mr Speaker, perhaps what we should do in relation to the substance of the question, is read the press releases that we have already issued on the subject and he might find

Mr Speaker: Order.

655 Hon. Chief Minister: – himself rather elucidated.

Mr Speaker: Okay. This is not the debate on televising, so I do not think we need to go into that yet. No doubt we will have a chance to debate the issue whenever it happens.

Can we move to the next question please?

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Registry of breast implants Support for patients with PIP implants

660 Clerk: Question 72, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

670 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, it is not only lawyers who know how to ask questions!

Mr Speaker: No. The hon. Member has probably misunderstood me. I said, as lawyers, we should know better...

675 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Hon. the Minister for Health confirm if the GHA will be setting up a registry of Gibraltar patients who had breast implants fitted through the GHA, including at St Bernard's Hospital; at all UK hospitals, as well as the Royal Marsden Hospital; and at private clinics; and how will women found to have poly implant prosthesis (PIP implants) be supported by the GHA?

680 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, it is not only lawyers who can reply to questions.

685 Mr Speaker, no patients have had PIP implants fitted at St Bernard's Hospital or through St Bernard's on referral to the Royal Marsden. If any patient was referred by the GHA to any other NHS hospital for implants, then that patient would be notified by that NHS hospital. If requested, the GHA will make the necessary enquiries for any individual concerned.

690 With regard to Gibraltar residents who have had breast implants fitted privately, they have been advised to check with the hospital, clinic or surgeon who fitted them and, if they have been fitted, they are advised to seek to have them replaced free of charge by that clinic or hospital. This is the same advice that the UK government is giving patients treated privately in the UK.

695 Should any GPMS-entitled Gibraltar resident present to the GHA with a ruptured PIP implant, they will be immediately referred to the visiting plastic surgeon for treatment. If a GPMS-entitled Gibraltar resident presents to the GHA with evidence of having had a PIP implant fitted and if the hospital, clinic, or surgeon that fitted the prosthesis is unavailable, or unwilling, to replace the implant, then the GHA will offer to remove the implant at no cost to the patient.

700 Should that person wish to have the implant replaced, the GHA will provide the service electively through the visiting consultant plastic surgeon. If there is no medical indication to replace the implant – that is, the original reason for the implant was purely cosmetic – the patient will need to pay for the incremental costs of the new implants.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister please clarify what he meant by 'other NHS hospitals will be contacting any patients who have had implants'?

705 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.

We have carried out an exercise immediately to identify all the patients who we have referred to hospitals in the UK, and all those that we have contacted have responded that they have not used those implants. There is always a chance in any system – and I have inherited this system, clearly – that we may have missed one.

710 You never know, this could have happened some time ago and this is purely to say that if there is any NHS hospital that may have fitted a PIP implant to any patient, including a Gibraltarian patient, then that hospital will, in any case, contact the patient. But if any patient in Gibraltar has had an implant in any other hospital and is concerned, then we will make the necessary enquiries to make sure that we get an answer from the relevant hospital.

715 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you for that, Minister.

Mr Speaker, can the Minister also tell us how far back in the records has the GHA gone, in terms of researching GHA patients who have had implants implanted?

720 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have not got an exact date, but the instruction that I gave, and that has been followed up, leads me to believe that it goes back possibly as far as 10 years. But I would have to confirm that subsequently and I would be happy to provide that information, possibly even by the end of the day.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Please, that would be very much appreciated.

725 Also, Mr Speaker, could the Hon. the Minister please let me know how many patients, if possible, have been fitted with breast implants after referral from the GHA, be it as a consequence of breast cancer or for cosmetic purposes?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, obviously that is not information I have with me now, as it was not originally requested, but I will make that information available.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I would like to go back just to the first part of the question.

If the Hon. the Minister could confirm if the GHA will be setting up a registry of Gibraltar patients which would include private patients, because, in fact, it would be good practice for there to be a registry of all medical devices, as it transpires that, according to the British Medical Journal, the very last one, there seem to be few checks and little regulation on medical devices, once they leave the factory floor to just before they are implanted in the patient.

Just for the sake of traceability and as future reference, it would be good practice for the GHA to set up such a registry.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the information is available. The question of whether it is in a form that we consider a registry, which nowadays – although this may surprise the Leader of the Opposition – can be done in digital format and not necessarily on paper with the word ‘Registry’ on the front, it is a possibility.

Clearly, if there is not a registry of this nature at the moment, it is because I have not inherited such a registry, but I shall certainly consult the professionals within the Health Authority towards the possibility and we will certainly consider that.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you very much.

Concern over KGV Hospital Progress on new mental health hospital

Clerk: Question 73, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, given the Chief Minister’s concern for the KGV Hospital, as relayed in his New Year message, will the hon. Gentleman be expediting the completion of the new mental health hospital at the former Royal Naval Hospital site?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, on coming into office, the Government has become aware that work on the new mental hospital has so far been limited to enabling works. The design for the hospital had not been completed, nor had the staffing needs been identified.

As Minister for Health, I have now initiated an urgent process, and I can report that the design is finally virtually complete and work is progressing at last in identifying staffing needs. This will allow work to finally commence in earnest, with a view to a new mental health facility being operational in the shortest possible time.

There is an urgent need, as the facilities at KGV have been neglected throughout the term of the last Government.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Hon. Minister tell us when the date of completion for the new mental health hospital will be?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I cannot at this stage. The indication that I have been given, following the works as I found them on coming into office was perhaps a year, but I am afraid that because the design had not been completed, I hope to have a completion date very, very soon, and it will be as soon as possible because, as the Members opposite will know, we are giving great priority to the welfare of our mental patients.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Is the Hon. the Minister for Health aware, with regard to his New Year message, where the Chief Minister stated that nothing has been spent on the KGV for years that, in fact, a considerable amount had been done and purchased for the KGV these last four years, and that therefore the Chief Minister’s statement is untrue?

785 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have not delved into the annals of the expenditure in specific items in the Health Service of the last administration. What I can say is that if they did spend any amount of money, I could not see the fruits of it; neither could the Chief Minister. Therefore, clearly, that was by no means enough.

790 I am resisting the temptation of commenting further on the state of neglect at KGV Hospital, because that has been evidently clear to the public, so I will say no further at this point.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the Opposition welcomes the fact that £70,000 will be spent on the KGV over the next few weeks on painting, new furniture and equipment. Can the Hon. Minister tell us, who will be doing the works on the KGV, seeing that there is little GJBS staff left?

795 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the works will partly be carried out by the workforce employed for maintenance by the Health Authority, who are normally based at St Bernard's Hospital and were available over the last four, eight and umpteen years, too, actually working in KGV. They will be deployed and we are looking at sourcing work outside, and that is currently a process that is being undertaken by the relevant department of the GHA.

800 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker –

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, can I – ?

805 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joe Bossano.

Hon. J J Bossano: Since the Hon. Member opposite has said there is little GJBS staff left, I have to tell her that we have had no notification of any reduction in GJBS in the Employment Service. So, as far as I know –

810 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am so sorry – subcontractors to GJBS.

Hon. J J Bossano: Subcontractors.

815 Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Is the Hon. the Minister for Health aware, in fact, if he delves into the annals of the GHA estimates and works that have been done and items that have been purchased that, over the last four years, the steps leading to the entrance of the KGV Hospital were underpinned, the patients' lift was replaced, the building was painted, a new water boiler was installed, a new key locking system was installed, improvements were made to the drainage system, extra sensors for the staff attack system were introduced, seven special mattresses were bought, three special pillows were bought, two blood pressure monitors were purchased, privacy curtains round the beds were installed, dining tables and chairs were bought for the KGV...? A new kitchenette for the acute ward was also installed, Mr Speaker, blinds for the bathrooms were also purchased, a tinted film roll for the patients' smoking room, an ironing board, an iron, a tumble dryer, (Interjection) a large industrial pedal bin, large medicine cabinet, dressing waste pedal bin, thermometers, pots, pans, office furniture, dishwasher and so on?

825 So quite a lot, in fact, was purchased, and money was spent on the KGV. Is he aware – (Interjections) from delving into the...? (Interjections)

830 Is he aware, then, that nothing was spent?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am now aware.

835 But I think the pertinent point is not whether we have underpinned steps and bought ironing boards; I think the case that we have to consider – and I am not here to ask questions of the Opposition – is was that enough, and the answer is clearly not.

It goes further than that. I am not sure when any Member of the Opposition, present or past, last visited KGV, but if they were to visit it today, then they would be embarrassed to run up a list like the list we have just been listening to, because the effect of what they did was certainly nothing to benefit the patients – or very little to benefit the patients.

840 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I did visit the KGV last year, and the year before that, and several times in the last four years, as a former member of the GHA.

The Opposition does recognise that the KGV needed work done. Is he aware, because of that, a new mental health hospital had been planned for the last four years and is underway?

845 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am sorry to hear that the hon. Lady did visit and that, despite that – she was not a Member of the Opposition then – and despite her membership of the GHA board, nothing was done, but I –

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes. A lot was done. I have just read to you the list.

850 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Look, it is not a question of whether... alright, I will rephrase that – of whether anything was done. Certainly not enough was done. You can ask anybody who saw the pictures and I invite you to come with me again, if you want – anybody who has had or has relatives in KGV, you just cannot justify the present condition of that institution by reading out a list of what was done. The question is not what was done; the question is what was not done. That is the question, Mr Speaker. So I think we have to place 855 that absolutely in context.

The KGV is not in a state that any of us would like any of our relatives to be in. If you do not believe me, ask the relatives. Starting a mental health facility after 15½ years, or 14½ years, if you started it before, is simply not enough.

860 Mr Speaker, I wanted to resist going on and on, but I have to tell you, I was manager of the hospitals in the Health Authority, coincidentally, from 1988. When I was manager in 1988, we completely restored St Bernard's Hospital and gave it 20 more years of life and we restored KGV Hospital. I last visited as manager of the Health Authority in 1991, and when I first visited within days of being elected by the people, I found it in a worse state than I had left it 20 years ago.

865 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member agree with me that you can never do enough to satisfy need, in any public service? If the hon. Member is going to set himself the benchmark of success of 'doing enough', there is always more that can be done and he is very ungenerous in his analysis, Mr Speaker – does he agree with me – if he takes the view that the question is not what you have done, but what you have not done? Actually, even if he wants to do that, should he not more accurately say 'what you did not get time 870 to do'?

Does the hon. Member agree that to point out – which is an obvious reality – that we had embarked on building a new mental hospital but had not finished it, that is true? But, of course, it is not as if we spent the first 15 years doing nothing – surely he recalls that we had introduced a new professional ambulance service when, before, it was done by the Police shift. We had a new primary care centre, we built a new hospital and we have always said that the final piece of the jigsaw was the new mental health hospital and that we were in 875 the process of doing it. Does he acknowledge that, in his analysis of what he has just said?

Mr Speaker, I do not know, in technical terms, what the actual state of the mental health hospital is; but can the Hon. Minister tell me, given that he thinks that the KGV, he has found it in such a shocking state, and even though he was not then a Member of the Opposition, can he tell me how many questions, motions or 880 anything, the previous GSLP Opposition raised, during the last four years, during the last Parliament, about this allegedly shocking state of the mental health hospital because, really, the shocking state did not begin on 8th December?

885 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, unlike the Members opposite, I have not had the honour of serving in Opposition. Certainly, I cannot answer personally for what the Opposition may or may not have done.

But I can certainly answer personally for what I may or may not have done.

Hon. P R Caruana: That is not my question.

890 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I will answer your question, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order! The last part of the question was clearly not within the Hon. Minister's ministerial ambit as to what the Opposition did last time.

Carry on.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: What I can say – I will answer him, because it does cast certain aspersions – is that as far back as a public general meeting of the Health Authority at the John Mackintosh Hall at the time that Mr Azopardi was Minister for Health I publicly said that the mental hospital at the KGV had to be restored or replaced, and nothing happened. That must have been in 2002-03. When the new hospital was planned, as a member of the board of the Health Authority before I was removed for perhaps speaking my mind too freely, I constantly mentioned the fact that KGV needed work to be done. So I, personally, have always maintained and have always been very aware of the needs of the KGV Hospital, but as to how much... about being a work in progress, about not having got round yet to having done something at KGV, how much time do you need to spend a basic £70,000 in giving the patients the dignity that they require?

The hon. Member opposite authorised spending more than double that on plants that died at Europa Point, Mr Speaker, (Applause) so they may have done... new ambulances, a new primary care centre, but they have also done new toilets and a new air terminal, whilst these people, who spend all their lives there, who have nowhere else to go to, are living in conditions where we would not want any of our relatives to be in, with broken down toilets, with broken cupboards and with their property in plastic bags. That, Mr Speaker, is shameful – absolutely shameful.

I will not go any further because I am very inexperienced here, and I do not know quite how much I can say without getting into trouble!

Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member agree with me, firstly, that the outgoing GSD Government was in the process of building a new mental health hospital? Does he also agree with me that if the situation is as shocking as he is now making out, then his current ministerial colleagues, when in Opposition, were in grave dereliction of duty not to have pointed all of this out? Perhaps they were not aware of it, either!

But, certainly, Mr Speaker, to now be faced with the bombardment that we get from Dr Cortes, who has appeared on the scene 15 minutes ago in political terms, and pretending that something is a scandalous shock, when the previous Opposition used to cross-examine the Government on health matters in minute, inquisitorial duty, apparently neither spotted this, nor thought it was so shocking to the extent that no questions have been asked in the last several years, suggests to me that there is more about Dr Cortes in this attack than about his party, because his party did not take this view when he was in Opposition – does he agree with me?

Mr Speaker: There were a couple of –

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I have... Yes... There is one answer that I could certainly give. Do I agree with him? No, sir.

I do agree that they were in the process of commencing works on a new mental home – not far enough, not fast enough, and they were nowhere near ready enough. If there was dereliction of duty by the Opposition, how much more dereliction of duty by the last Government and the last Minister whose responsibility it was and who at least would have been allowed into the premises, whereas perhaps the Members of the Opposition may not have been.

As to having been here politically for 15 minutes, well, if I am rattling him so much after 15 minutes, just wait till I have been here for a few hours! (Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, can the hon. Gentleman explain to this House, who has advised him that this particular project – the mental hospital, I mean – is going to take another year? When we were in office, we were being advised that, in fact, it was going to be completed by June or summer this year.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, very soon after coming into office, my colleague, the Hon. Minister for Equality and Social Services and myself both took a great interest in the new RNH site. In fact we called a meeting on 4th January of all the stakeholders both in the new mental home and the new Dementia and Alzheimers' unit, where we discussed and we were able to establish where the project was.

Having spoken to people on works on the site, they suggested that it was just about possible to complete in nine months, but it is likely that that will slip, as construction often does, and therefore the period of a year was the one that was mooted by the people working on the site.

Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is GJBS.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The answer is people working on the site, which include members of GJBS, but obviously it is a team that is working on that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Of course, there are a lot of people working on the site. The hon. Gentleman is not suggesting that he has spoken to a labourer, and taken the labourer's view in relation to this; he has spoken to the management of GJBS, and it is the management of GJBS that have told him that it is going to take nine months – or at a push, nine months – or more realistically a year. Is that the case?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I will have spoken to labourers, because I speak to everybody, but that information would have been provided... The team working there is not just GJBS; there are also project managers and so on. We had about 25 people discussing this subject in a room, and this was the consensus that came out.

I do not know what the point of the question is – maybe if I knew where the hon. Member is getting to, I will know what it is he wants. I do not really understand what the relevance is of who told me or did not.

Hon. D A Feetham: It is certainly obvious to all of us on this side as to the reliability of the information that he is actually giving this House – which is at a push, nine months, more realistically, a year – when we had been told, when we were in office, that it would be completed by June, the summer, of this year.

With respect to the hon. Member, will he answer the question: is it the management of GJBS? How high has he gone in order to elucidate this information – the information that he has provided to this Parliament and through it to the people of Gibraltar?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The discussion held on site included managers from GJBS.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, for the purpose of clarification, the Hon. Dr Cortes mentioned that he had a meeting on the site, I think he said, on 4th January –

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, sorry, just to correct that, the meeting was not on the site. The meeting was held in the boardroom of the Health Authority.

Hon. J J Netto: The Health Authority where, presumably, I think he said, he discussed the completion date proposed for the mental health hospital and for the Alzheimers' and Dementia hospital – is that correct?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the meeting was bringing together all the players in both projects, which included contractors, advisers, consultants, members of staff of both the Care Agency and the Health Authority and was chaired jointly by my colleague, Samantha Sacramento, and myself. It was a lengthy meeting in which we discussed not just the buildings themselves but the whole question of Alzheimers' and the mental health policy for Gibraltar.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, although there are questions on the Order Paper later on, as far as the completion dates of the Alzheimer's and Dementia hospital, I am only standing up right now in the context that, as far as the Alzheimer's and Dementia hospital is concerned, the completion date that we had was April this year. This is something I will refer to later on.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am purely referring to the wing and the other annexes, which are destined to become a mental home or hospital or whatever we want to call it, and I am not referring at all to the Dementia and Alzheimer's wing.

Gibraltar Health Authority
Possible changes to non-local management

Clerk: Question 74, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1010

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Has the Hon. the Minister for Health made any changes to the non-local management of the GHA who they claimed were a hindrance to the GHA staff getting their work done?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1015

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no changes have yet been made to the management of the Gibraltar Health Authority.

1020

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health tell us if any changes at all have been made to the management structure of the GHA?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No changes have yet been made to the management structure of the Gibraltar Health Authority.

1025

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Could the Hon. the Minister clarify 'yet been made'? What planned changes does he envisage he will be making?

1030

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am currently looking at the whole organisation, with a view to making it more functional, effective for, and in the interests of, the patients and, with the support of the staff, I am looking into the organisation, as I say. It is a work in progress. No changes have yet been made – to the actual structure.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health confirm whether the current Chief Executive Officer of the GHA will be replaced by someone else?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have not yet made any changes to the management of the GHA, and therefore I cannot answer that question.

1040

GHA complaints process
Implementation

Clerk: Question 75, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1045

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health provide details on the GHA complaints process and how it will be implemented?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1050

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have been assessing a great many issues during my ongoing process of induction into the Gibraltar Health Authority and the Ministry for Health. No change has yet been made to the complaints process. Once the decision on the process is made, it will be communicated to Parliament.

1055

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in the media and in their manifesto policy, their pledge is to change the complaints system and have it taken over by the ombudsman, so therefore some thought must have gone behind including that commitment. Could he enlighten us a little further on the thought behind that pledged policy statement?

1060 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said, I am looking into many matters, and this includes the complaints procedure.

The manifesto intention is still there, but the detail of how the complaints procedure develops has to be taken after thought and consideration which cannot be put in place until you are actually there doing the job. Therefore, it will happen in discussion with the staff, with the patients, with relatives, as to how we can improve it, as well, of course, as the members of the board of the Gibraltar Health Authority. Therefore the work is progressing and will progress, but I cannot at this stage make any further comment.

1065 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, could the Minister for Health tell us how complaints on issues considered by the GHA to be minor but yet still important to those making the complaint, how they are now dealt with and how he envisages they will be dealt with?

1070 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have a copy of the current complaints procedure, which was put in place by the previous administration. This covers all the different aspects of complaints. It is a large document. I would be happy to make this available to the Opposition, but going through, stage by stage, what the different procedures are, I think would take unnecessary time for this Parliament.

1075 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: That will not be necessary, Mr Speaker, but perhaps he could tell us how he would like to see complaints – these minor complaints – to be dealt with in their new policy.

1080 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think we require a definition of ‘minor complaints’ before I can even attempt to answer that question. What is minor? In the minds of the complainant, it is going to be a major issue; in the eyes of the Authority, perhaps it is not. Perhaps the hon. Member could explain little bit more.

1085 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Informal complaints, Minister.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, clearly this is not directly relevant to the question – but in any case, I will attempt to answer it.

1090 Informal complaints are normally made through the staff of the Health Authority and are contained within that. As I say, it is an intricate system and I am happy to pass this document on. I am not an expert yet on the current complaints procedure, but I have it here in front of me. I can pass it on, and it should be clear there. I do not really know what else I can say at this stage.

1095 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Minister confirm, then, whether this process will be changed as well, as per the manifesto commitment?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: You mean the process for informal complaints – ?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: The process for informal complaints and formal complaints.

1100 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I like to do things well and I like to consider things thoroughly, and I cannot be rushed here in making a statement to which I will be held accountable for – or for which I will be held accountable, I will get my grammar right! – before I have carried out an extensive exercise, which will include all manner of complaints. When that is done and when the system is changed, in full consultation with staff, patients and relatives, then I will be able to talk about all the complaints and not just the minor complaints.

1105 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, just a final supplementary.

Will the current complement of staff, Minister, working for the GHA’s complaints department then be transferred to the ombudsman’s office or to alternative employment within the GHA?

1110 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that consideration will have to be part of the process.

1115 EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

Schools' health and safety audit
Date of commencement and duration

1120 Clerk: Question 25, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, could the Minister for Education confirm when the health and safety audits of every school in Gibraltar commenced, as per the manifesto commitment of a starting date of January 2012, and how long does he envisage it will take?

1125 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1130 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the health and safety audit process for schools has already started. The first site visit will take place in January 2012, as stated in the Government's manifesto commitment. I envisage that the process will take several months.

1135 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Minister for Education envisage how much this health and safety audit will cost?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is being done using internal officers, therefore it will cost nothing.

1140 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. the Minister aware that there is already an Education Health and Safety Policy in place, which all schools abide by, each with their own policy document, which was created in 2010, in consultation with the Gibraltar Teachers' Association?

1145 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, of course I am aware of that. There is a world of difference between each school having a health and safety policy, which they all have and they all adhere to, and the process we are embarked on, which is a health and safety audit of each school, with a professional coming in from outside and looking at health and safety – auditing the school from a health and safety point of view.

Clearly the policy is there. Clearly, any health and safety issue that arises is dealt with under the policy. The fact that an audit is going to take place, and it will take place over a period of several months, does not mean that nothing is done on health and safety in schools. Those policies are there, those policies are complied with, and this is a new policy which has been introduced, to have a general audit of each school, which will be reported to my colleague, the Minister with responsibility for health and safety, and myself, as Minister with responsibility for Education, and we will see from that audit process what comes out and what needs to be done.

1155 But the individual policy for each school is there and they are complied with.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, so the Minister for Education does not feel this is a repeat exercise? He also mentioned that an expert from the outside will be coming in: surely this would cost money?

1160 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have not said that any expert from outside –

A Member: Yes, you have. (Interjections)

Hon. G H Licudi: No, I said an internal expert.

1165 Hon. D A Feetham: No, you said professionals from the outside –

Hon. G H Licudi: Not from the outside, Mr Speaker. (Interjections) From the inside, an internal expert. The hon. Members were clearly not listening. It is coming from – 1170 Hon. J J Netto: You said from the outside!

Hon. G H Licudi: I did not say from the outside. If I did, then – (Interjections) I certainly recall saying an internal expert would be conducting this, and that is why it will cost nothing. Of course if it was somebody from outside, then it would have a cost. (Interjection)

1175 The hon. Members should perhaps listen to the answer. The experts will be from the Department, from my hon. Colleague, the Minister Balban, and that is why it will cost nothing. It will be done internally.

1180 Hon. J J Netto: If I may, Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member confirm – I do not know whether he is listening to the supplementary question – that the audit will be done by the factory inspector?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, sir.

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister tell me who then will conduct the audit?

1185 Hon. G H Licudi: The health and safety inspector engaged with the Technical Services.

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister tell me the range of issues that will cover the audit?

1190 Hon. G H Licudi: No, sir. What I have said is that the process has already started.

We are currently considering a document that has to be prepared. It is still not finalised. It will be finalised by next week, and as I have stated in the answer, the first site visit will take place in January 2012. We have started the process which has involved meeting with hon. colleagues, with the technical experts, with the Acting Director of Education, with experts from Technical Services. That is the process that has already been started as a result of that meeting.

1195 Exactly what that document is, which will lead to the audit itself of each school, is something that is currently being finalised and we will certainly be happy to say what that document is when that is finalised.

1200 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I will rephrase the question. Is the audit being done in order to comply with the management of health and safety?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, the audit is being done, because we committed ourselves to carrying out an audit of each school and to identify any issues which require to be redressed.

1205 There is nothing in particular – it is not the case that something has been brought to our attention which says there is a health and safety issue, and some policies are not being complied with. We have simply determined, as a matter of policy, that it is appropriate for each school to have an audit during the course of this year, to identify any issues which ought to be looked at. That is what the audit process is all about.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is that a one-off audit?

1210 Hon. G H Licudi: This is intended to be a yearly audit.

Hon. J J Netto: But in order to comply with the management of health and safety legislation?

1215 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, we start on the premise that schools already comply with whatever legislation on health and safety exists. There is, as his hon. colleague has already indicated, a health and safety policy which applies to all schools. This is separate from that as an audit process, to identify any issues which ought to be brought to the Government's attention and which may or may not need to be redressed. That is the purpose of the audit.

1220 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Hon. Minister undertake to make the results of the audit public?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, sir.

1225 Clerk: Question –
Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1230 Hon. P R Caruana: Implicit in doing an audit, I suppose, is that anything that it shows would have to be done immediately, otherwise the Government would be exposed to any subsequent complaint that they knew that something needed to be done, they did not do it and there was some accident. So implicit in doing annual audits is that, then, the Government commits itself to promptly correcting whatever, if anything, a particular annual audit of a particular school might show. Is that true?

1235 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what could be more important than health and safety in schools? The purpose of the audit is to identify any issues which need to be redressed.

Of course, if any issue is identified as needing to be redressed in schools, it will be redressed by this Government!

1240 Outgoing Director of Education Replacement

Clerk: Question 26, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1245 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister for Education confirm that the outgoing Director of Education will be replaced?

1250 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Yes.

1255 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education confirm that he will be replaced by someone from the teaching grades, as has been the tradition up to now?

1260 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is not for me to decide who is appointed as Director of Education. There is a process, there will be an advertisement, this is a matter that will go to the PSC and the PSC will decide in accordance with its normal practice.

1265 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but perhaps what my colleague is trying to ask is that in the past there has always been an agreement with the Gibraltar Teachers' Association, who have the negotiated rights for that grade, that the conditions for the post... it was open to qualified teachers who, on top of that, had to be graduates, as well. Perhaps that is what we are trying to ascertain – are you keeping to the same condition or are we changing?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Sorry, to clarify – not from the clerical grades, but from the teaching grades.

1270 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is not what the original question asked. I have not seen the advertisement myself. I would assume that that is the case. The instructions that I have given, as Minister for Education, immediately upon the appointment of the former Director to the post of Chief Secretary, was that the post should be advertised.

1275 I have simply assumed that that will take its normal course and whatever process needs to be done will be done, the adverts will be issued and the matter will be decided by the PSC.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, all I wanted was clarification that it be advertised on the same terms as in the past.

1280 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what I have said is that I assume that that is the case. I have not seen the advert itself. I have given instructions for the post of Director to be replaced and the relevant officials are getting on with that in the same way, I imagine, as has been done in the past.

1285 No specific instructions – if this is what the hon. Member is driving at – have been given to change anything that has happened in the past. The instructions have been that the post of Director of Education should be filled.

1290 Increased complement of teachers
Measures taken to fill posts

Clerk: Question 27, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1295 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education please explain what measures are being taken to increase the complement by 47 new teaching posts within the Department of Education, by open advertisement or straight from the teaching supply list?

1300 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the complement of teachers will be increased by 47 and, as usual, this will be undertaken by advertisement.

1305 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister tell us how he arrived at the figure of 47?

1310 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this was a matter that was considered when we were in Opposition, as to the policy.

It was arrived at, having undergone a process of consultation with professionals, with the GTA. We were aware that there were a significant number of additional teachers that were needed, as a result of information that I have obtained in this House during the course of my time as Opposition Member with responsibility for educational matters.

1315 We set up an Education Committee, before the elections, to look precisely at all education matters, including this one and, having had the necessary feedback from professionals, from the GTA, and having considered the matter in that Committee, a recommendation was made – this is not a Government matter – it was made to the Party at the time, that the figure of 47 would be a sufficient number in order to meet the needs of the profession and our children, in order to carry out the policies that we have identified. As a Government we have adopted that and we will be engaging 47, which will do a number of matters.

1320 First, it will bring to an end the practice which has hitherto been the case of people being permanently on supply, not necessarily the same person, but of particular posts in schools being taken on, year after year, by supply workers: we do not agree that is conducive to good practice and that ought to be replaced, so it will do that.

1325 It will also allow us to comply with our policy of providing additional resources for children with special educational needs and it will also help us in our policy of reduction of class sizes. So after taking all that into account we consider that increase in complement by a figure of 47 was appropriate. That is the policy decision we took and that is what we intend to implement.

1330 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you but, Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain how many, then, of the present supply teachers will form part of the new 47 teaching posts. You have already mentioned some who have been there for a few years filling a post that needed to become permanent and pensionable. What about the other supply teachers?

1335 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, Mr Speaker, in the original answer I said that this would be undertaken by advertisement so all those members on the supply list, whether they have been working for one year or two, or simply on the supply list and working on an ad hoc basis, all those teachers, supply teachers will have the opportunity to apply for specific posts that will be advertised. Then the process – and it will certainly not be up to me to pick individuals and say put this one in this school for this particular subject – the process will be undertaken by advertisement, by interview, and the appropriate candidates will be selected.

1340 What I can say to the hon. Member, that this is a process that will be curriculum led. It will be on the basis of the needs of the curriculum for each school and, therefore, subject specializations for each school – in Secondary I am talking about, because in First and Middle schools teachers tend to teach a broad range of subjects – so subject specializations are at present being considered in terms of which teachers needing which specialization should be advertised as part of the 47 and, once that process has been undertaken and approved by the Director of Education, at the moment the acting Director of Education, in consultation with me, those adverts will go out, all the supply teachers will be able to apply and they will be interviewed and selected by the board. I certainly won't be part of that board.

1350 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister please clarify, would those 47 posts all be posted in schools or would some, perhaps, be used to help increase the advisory service or is an increase in the advisory service going to be something over and above the 47 teaching posts within schools?

1355 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is envisaged that these are teaching posts.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, I would remind the Member, perhaps other colleagues who are qualified teachers and have worked in schools. The advisory service are also qualified teachers.

1360 Hon. G H Licudi: But they are not teaching posts. There is a difference between –

Hon. E J Reyes: They certainly are teaching posts Mr Speaker.

1365 Hon. G H Licudi: No, no, there is a difference between a teaching post where somebody undertakes teaching in schools and a teacher who happens to have a different post. If the hon. Member were to check the approved estimates which we passed in this House last year, there is a list under Education of the various posts and has the complement of teachers which, as I seem to recall, something like 332/333 and then separately there are different posts – Director of Education, the Senior Education Adviser, the two other Education Advisers – all those happen to be filled by teachers but they are not identified as teaching posts.

1370 The process that is being undertaken at the moment is to identify these specializations, the specific posts that are required to be filled by the 47 so that the applications can be made and everybody knows where those posts, in fact, are.

1375 Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, so can I just double check one or two things properly, Mr Speaker. The 47 posts are going to be for teachers working directly within the schools, can I then ask the Hon. Minister, can he confirm that there might be perhaps even an increase, then, in posts within the advisory service?

Hon. G H Licudi: But that is a different exercise Mr Speaker.

1380 What we have also said is, quite apart from this exercise of filling these teaching posts, we need to look at the clerical support that is required, both in schools and in the... if I can finish my answer first... there is a need to identify clerical support and administrative support that is required both in schools and in the Department of Education. The purpose of that is that once a clerical worker is engaged at whatever level – whether it is AO, EO, HEO, whatever level is identified – once that is engaged and they assist either schools, Headmasters, and Deputy Headmasters or in the Department by assisting the, if necessary, the Education Advisers, that will free up time from those persons who are qualified teachers, who will have more time to engage, rather than on the administrative tasks that they undertake at the moment but on the more educational and teaching tasks that they are qualified to undertake.

I am not sure whether that answers the hon. Member's questions, but that is the process we are engaged in.

1390 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, but can the Minister confirm or not whether all schools for all years will be receiving an extra teacher?

1395 Hon. G H Licudi: As I have indicated, the process of identifying where those posts are going to be is currently being undertaken by the Department of Education. I did say that that will then be a matter that will clearly have to be considered by the Director of Education in consultation with me. That process has not yet been completed so I certainly have not seen the list of what is proposed because that process is ongoing and has not yet been finalised.

1400 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And as my final supplementary Mr Speaker. Minister, in your press release of 25th November last year you say the increase in permanent posts would not remove the need for real supply teachers to cover occasional demands, as required. Can you please explain what status constitutes 'real supply teachers'?

1405 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I can tell the hon. Member, not what may have happened before the 8th December, but what the policy of the Government is.

1410 There is a need to introduce teachers into various schools to fill up posts which actually exist at the moment over and above the complements of the 333 and which are being taken up permanently by supply workers, not necessarily permanently by the same supply workers but, year in year out, many schools have additional numbers of teachers as generally part of the, what may be known as the over complement. That is going to be eradicated. There will clearly also be a need at some point, whenever this exercise is completed, and as from September 2012, where there will be temporary absences from teachers. Teachers may have the flu, may be ill, may be on maternity, so temporary absences will have to be filled from whoever is on the supply list. So this exercise of the 47 is to increase the permanent complement of teachers but that will certainly not eradicate the need for temporary provision of supply workers whenever the need arises.

1415 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you for that.

1420 I understand what you are saying but will the status for supply teachers therefore change? Will there be a new arrangement or a new policy on how teachers are registered as supply teachers and their terms and conditions?

1425 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the one change that there will be is that those supply teachers who continue to carry out supply work to cover temporary absences, where that temporary absence is for three months or more, the supply teacher will actually get a contract of employment, and therefore it will be a temporary contract of employment for that period that they are carrying out supply, unlike the position at the moment where no contract of employment is actually offered.

1430 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you Minister.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1435 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, just so that we are all clear here. Is the example the Hon. Minister is trying to give, for example a teacher going away on maternity leave, if the period of maternity leave is going to extend over three months then another teacher will be taken on a sort of fixed term contract, and what rights then will that teacher then acquire for the next academic year?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is not a question of acquiring rights for the next academic year.

1440 If someone is engaged on a temporary contract of, say, three months or six months, they will have rights as an employee during that period. When the temporary contracts come to an end then whatever needs to happen if the teacher that is part of the complement comes back, then the temporary engagement comes to an end in the normal way, and the teacher, as part of the complement, resumes his or her – well, in the case of maternity, her work.

1445 Hon. E J Reyes: So that teacher, then, simply reverts back to the supply list.

Equality of educational opportunity Improving the quality of schools

Clerk: Question 28 of 2012, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

15 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister for Health, please tell us, sorry, excuse me, for Education, please tell us what measures will the Government be taking to ensure the GTA/NASUWT's wish and recommendation for a move towards equally-sized, equally resourced and equally staffed schools to ensure that all children in Gibraltar are offered exactly the same equality of education regardless of catchment area?

20 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

25 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government's commitment is to relocate Sacred Heart Middle School. This is being done in consultation with the GTA/NASUWT, in fact discussions on this have already taken place. Potential sites for the relocation are currently under consideration. A redefinition of catchment areas will be an intrinsic part of this process. The Government is in any event satisfied that all children in Gibraltar receive the same standard of education, regardless of catchment area.

30 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Gentleman tell me what plans the Government has with the old St Bernard's Hospital site and are you committed to relocating St Bernard's School and its Nursery and Sacred Heart School there?

35 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the Government is not committed to that. That was not a manifesto commitment of us, nor have we said that we have a policy to do that.

What I have said is that we are carrying out plans to make sure that our commitment to relocate Sacred Heart Middle School is carried out, and that has been done in consultation with the Union. We have already identified potential sites which are under consideration.

40 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker does the Hon. Minister... is he going to take into consideration that the old St Bernard's site was being prepped as a potential school?

45 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the information I have is that very, very little work was done in terms of converting that or prepping that as a potential school and that is something that we will clearly take into account but it is not the only matter that is being taken into account.

Hon. D A Feetham: What plans do the Government have for the old St Bernard's Hospital?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I don't believe that that falls under the question that has been asked, we will have to be given notice of that question.

50 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, the Honourable Minister mentioned the, if I got it right, he intends to carry out a review of the catchment areas.

55 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes

Hon. E J Reyes: Does that mean a review of catchment areas for all schools, across all age groups, all sectors, all key stages, or is it just limited to a particular sector?

60 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what I said was that a redefinition of catchment areas will be an intrinsic part of the process.

65 Clearly, if there is a relocation of one school, catchment areas will have to be redefined to take into account that there will be another school of that type – that is going to be a Middle School – in a particular area. So until we have the site and we know the school and the number of children that will be in that school we won't know exactly what catchment area needs to be taken into account for that particular school and how it will affect other catchment areas but, clearly, there will be an effect on other catchment areas if there is a redefinition of catchment areas. It is inherent in that process, that it will affect catchment areas for other schools.

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, thank you for that, Mr Speaker.

I understand that, therefore, it is acceptable that, until the move is made and then one is able to redefine the catchment area... I was trying to take the Minister a bit further – if we are talking about Sacred Heart School, which is a Middle School – will he also take advantage that, in redefining catchment areas, to also perhaps look into redefinition of catchment areas in respect of First Schools?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, catchment areas take into account schools that are available in particular areas. The specific move that we are contemplating is related to the Middle Schools so that we have, as we have already set out, Sacred Heart moving to a different location, whereby there can be an increase in the number of children in the catchment areas.

Let me say this – not in the catchment areas, in that particular school – let me say that this is not, as I have already said, prompted by any concern about the standard or quality of education that is delivered in that particular school, this is simply the result that there has been, and there continues to be, a population shift in Gibraltar. Over the last few years we have seen a population shift towards the west side of Gibraltar, more recently towards the southern end of Gibraltar, with some developments there, and this policy was put in place as a response to that population shift.

That population shift was also recognised by the previous administration because there were plans – and it is not intended by these comments to enter into a political controversy but simply to state, as a fact, that there were plans by the previous administration – to build another school, Middle School, in the Mid Harbour areas. That clearly took into account that there had been that population shift so there was a recognition across both sides of the House, as I understand it, that there is a need for a school because of that population shift, but what we do not go along with, if that is what is intended in the question, that there should be all children in Gibraltar in equally sized, equally resourced... to deliver equality of education in Gibraltar.

If that is intended to suggest that unless schools are of equal size the same quality of education is not delivered to all children, we do not accept that. There is... there are very good teachers and very good quality of education that is currently being delivered to children at Sacred Heart, but the fact is that, because of the population shift, the intake of that school each year is getting smaller and there has to be a response to that because we cannot have that school with a first year every year getting smaller and smaller. Because of that we feel that it is necessary to relocate the school and to equalize the size of the schools as much as we can in the middle sector and that will bring benefits all round.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, thank you for that answer, but the desire and the sort of the philosophy that schools should be as equal in size and as equally resourced as possible is a desire from the professional teaching body represented through the Unions, yes, so is your Hon. Minister saying that he does not necessarily share those views, as held by the profession?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I share those views but there are different reasons for perhaps those views.

There are two different matters that have to be considered when we talk of equalisation. We can talk of equalisation of numbers in a school and that is desirable from a number of respects, particularly where there is a population shift, so that people have a school as near as possible and, therefore, to the extent possible, if we have schools of more or less equal size that can accommodate catchment areas and have the same number of pupils, that is desirable.

The other view that the hon. Member has expressed in terms of a move towards equalization, as set out by the profession, that also takes into account that, as currently structured, the posts – and I am thinking in particular of TLR posts – Teaching, Learning, Responsibility posts which is I understand what the hon. Member is getting at, they are different in Sacred Heart than they are in other Middle Schools, particularly because of the numbers, because they are posts that are calculated on the basis of the numbers. So we do want to accommodate that request and that wish by the profession to seek equalisation in terms of posts but there is also a need to achieve equalisation on numbers because of the population shift, so what we want to do is, as it were, kill those two birds with one stone.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman mentioned population shift and also to the south district, so, therefore, will the Government plan... will there be plans for the use of St Christopher's School and its building once pupils are integrated into Gibraltar's education system and could it service this growing population in the south district?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, St Christopher's School has not been handed to the Government yet but it is a matter which is under active consideration.

I can tell the hon. Member that I visited St Christopher's School with the Deputy Chief Minister only about two weeks ago to look at the school and it was the first opportunity we had to see what resources are available there. Those are matters that will be taken into account but it is certainly not a piece of land or school that has been handed yet to the Government, but we will be looking specifically at what use can be made of that school.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker will the hon. Gentleman be taking the parental view into consideration when, before finalising a decision on movement of catchment area and movement of schools?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he also give us an indication as to what sites the Government is considering in terms of possible location of schools to cater for this shift of population and catchment areas? Can he also give an indication as to timeframes for completion of this review that he was talking about earlier?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker I cannot give an indication of sites, except to say that potential sites are under consideration and, until the plans are a bit more advanced, I would not want to go with identification of the sites concerned.

In terms of timescale, what I can tell the hon. Member is that it does not appear to be likely or feasible, even if we wanted this to happen, for this move to happen before September of this year so that, for the next academic year, it does not seem likely that there will be a relocation. From there the hon. Member can infer that we will try our utmost to achieve that for the beginning of the next academic year because it does not seem proper to have a move of this nature, to move to a new school, in the middle of an academic year, with the possible disruption – because it needs redefinition of catchment areas, trying to get new children in. That is a move that is properly done at the beginning of the academic year.

As I have said, it does not appear to be likely or feasible that this will happen this year.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just one final question. I am not trying to catch the hon. Gentleman out in any way, shape or form, but can he confirm that the sites under consideration were the sites that we were considering ourselves when we were in Government, or are there any other sites that he is also throwing into the mix?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have absolutely no idea what sites were being considered by the previous administration.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, you know because we had a debate about this in Parliament. There is Rooke, there is the St Bernard's Hospital site, St Christopher's, as my colleague has pointed out.

Are there any other sites, apart from those three, that the Government is considering?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, sir.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would, perhaps – and, again, we are not trying to be, sort of, awkward or whatever but just trying perhaps, for the benefit of the teaching profession, to clarify some matters for them – amongst all the considerations that the Hon. Minister needs time to consider, consult with and so on, hypothetically, could it also even be possible that an existing educational establishment moves elsewhere, so that that particular site then becomes a Middle School?

I do not know if you want me to name them as a hypothetical example, we could.

Hon. G H Licudi: That is possible – and the hon. Member says 'for the benefit of the teaching profession'. These are matters that we are in active consultation with the teaching profession.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give an indication as to at what stage he thinks he will be seeking parental views that he mentioned earlier. At what stage of the process will he be seeking parents' views?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, certainly once the process is somewhat more advanced than it is at this stage.

We have been in office for five weeks, we have already had preliminary meetings specifically on this issue. I have already indicated that there has been one site visit to consider a school that has not even been handed over to us, so there has been some preparatory work. In due course and, once we have clearer views as to where we are going with this, the necessary consultation will take place and I can assure the hon. Member that that is what will happen.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can I ask the Minister what the extent of that consultation will be?

Hon. G H Licudi: The hon. Member can ask.

That is a matter that will have to be determined on advice from the Director of Education, who I expect will be in post by then. Whoever the new Director of Education will be, this is primarily an administrative process that will be led by the Director of Education.

Hon. D J Bossino: The Government does not have a policy in relation to seeking parents' views in relation to that, as such – you are seeking officials' advice in relation to that issue – or have I misunderstood the Minister?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the policy is as I have said in answer to the question from the hon. Mr Feetham. There will be consultation. How that happens, and when the consultation and how that policy is put into effect, that is a matter on which we will take advice and the Director of Education will take the lead on that. The Government provides the policy and the managers manage.

Free nursery education policy Manifesto details

Clerk: Question 29. The Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Education provide details on the free nursery education policy, as outlined in their manifesto

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government's policy is to provide free optional nursery education. The Government is currently engaged in discussions with the Department of Education on the implementation of this policy. Private nurseries will also be consulted.

An announcement providing further details will be made once the discussions with the Department of Education and private nurseries are concluded.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member explain if any extra places will be made available at Government nurseries to provide free nursery education for all?

Hon. G H Licudi: That will be something that will have to be considered as part of the process of the implementation of the policy that is currently underway. At the moment there are, I seem to recall, approximately 300 odd places for nursery education for 3 year olds and applications are received by the Department and are processed. Not, as I understand it, not every applicant is able to get a place.

What we want to ensure is that everybody – because this is an optional, voluntary, it is not education that has been provided to people of statutory age that have to attend school, so this is a voluntary and optional – but what we want to make sure is that those who want to take up the nursery place in pre-school are able to do so and to the extent that the process identifies that there is going to be a need for further places to be available, then that will be available in the implementation of the policy. Again I must stress that what we have set out and what I am confirming today is what the policy is. How the policy is precisely implemented will be a matter of, on which I will be taking advice and consulting with the right professionals.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can I ask, can the Hon. Minister explain, then, exactly what he means then by ‘on a public/private basis’ which is part of their policy.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker. I have explained what the Government’s policy is.

The Government’s policy is that that there should be free nursery education on an optional and voluntary basis. That will be done, because at the moment, at the moment, as I understand it... there are, sorry, Mr Speaker, at the moment, as I understand it, there are insufficient places and there are people who look to private nurseries to provide that facility if they are not able to get into a Government nursery.

We will have to have consultation with – a process of consultation – with those private nurseries and see what the best way of making sure that there are placements for everybody is, and that is why a partnership is something that is on the cards and will have to be considered and discussed. As I have said we have the policy, the precise details of the implementation of the policy will have to come at a later date.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, may I ask one further thing. As a matter of policy, if there is an expansion of nursery placements, would it be the Government’s policy that these nurseries, if need be with new physical buildings, whatever, would come under and be attached and come under the head teacher of an existing or new first school, or would they be totally independent and not come under the guidance of the head teacher of an existing school?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, some nurseries do come under that already and in one particular place there is a separate Government nursery that I am aware of. What we are talking of is making sure that there are places available for everybody, either in those facilities or by carrying out the consultation and that sort of partnership with the private sector that has been identified.

I am unable to give any further details at this stage because the process is ongoing and I have had discussions with the Department of Education on this but we need to have further discussions as to how the policy precisely is going to be implemented but, certainly, the nursery that currently comes under the auspices, if I may say so, of a First School and therefore under the headmaster of that particular school, there are no plans to change that at all.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, sorry I don’t mean to be difficult, just further clarification behind, then, this policy: so are you saying that, perhaps, private nurseries could be compensated to offer free nursery care to some individuals who choose the option to seek free Government nursery place?

Hon. G H Licudi: The details of the implementation of the policy will be announced in due course.

Hon. D A Feetham: And will the hon. Member confirm that teachers actually running the nurseries will be qualified teachers, they won’t, you know... that they will be qualified teachers, not non qualified?

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, the teachers that are at the moment running the nurseries have the necessary, have qualifications to run nurseries so they will have whatever qualifications are necessary in order to run the system that has existed under the previous administration.

We do not... can I say that this is not a policy that envisages any change to the previous administration’s system. This is simply a policy to ensure that all children who want to avail themselves, on an optional, voluntary basis, of this facility have this facility available. To the extent that there was a system in place in terms of qualifications, that is something that is going to continue.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, the reason why I am asking is that, in fact, in 1996 there was a nursery that was run during a... prior to 1996, was not run by qualified teachers. All nursery places... nurseries that were, that have been created subsequent to that, we made it a point when we were in administration that they would be run by qualified teachers: what I am asking is – is the hon. Gentleman going to return to a policy that was pre-1996 or will he continue with a policy that we instituted post-1996?

That is all. I mean, I am not trying to catch him out. It is just so I understand this.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there has not been any change; there have not been any instructions to change the current system, so whatever current system is in place will continue.

Law Courts project Town Range completion

Clerk: Question 30, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. the Minister for Justice state when the Town Range part of the Law Courts project will be completed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the latest project update provided by the contractors, Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Ltd, is that the Supreme Court Registry Office at Town Range was due to be completed by 20th January of this year, that is today.

I am, in fact, informed that we anticipate that this will probably happen on 25th January, in other words next Wednesday, so there is a few days' delay from the anticipated date. The target completion date of the new building that houses the Magistrates' Court, Coroner's Court and associated offices is 29th February 2012 and can I just clarify that that is a target completion date. The information I have is that there could, in fact, be a little bit of slippage and we could be talking of the middle of March.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman accept that it is important for the administration of justice for this project to be completed as quickly as possible?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: Have there been any instructions for a decrease of labour on this particular site, or is the programme of work that is being adhered to, the programme of works that we instituted when we were in office?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I don't know what the programme of works were when the hon. Member was in office and what instructions had been given. What I do know is that, what I am advised, is that the target completion date for the new building was around May 2012. It was brought forward to February 2012 and, in fact, it is going to happen in the middle of March 2012 so there has not been any slippage as such. Therefore, works are progressing properly, with a view to having it completed, as far as the contractors are concerned, with a target date of 29th February 2012, which may slip by a couple of weeks.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, that was not the question. Now he must know – and if the answer is 'no', the answer is 'no' – he must know whether there have been any instructions for there to be a decrease of labour on this particular site. That is the question that I am asking. Have there been any instructions?

And let me also say that, in fact, the original target date for completion of that particular project was 30th November and, in fact, there have been slippages from 30th November and now the hon. Gentleman is saying that it is going to be February. But have there been any instructions for there to be a decrease of labour on that particular site? He must know that.

345 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure what the hon. Member means by 'decrease of labour' to the extent that he talks of evening work and weekend work, then evening work and weekend work is not happening but, on the basis that the work is continuing under the contractor under normal hours of work, there continues to be the normal complement of labour during that time and works are on schedule to be completed, if not by the end of February then a couple of weeks later.

350 Hon. D A Feetham: Did he give the instructions for there not to be this, to be work during weekends and I think he mentioned something, I think he mentioned –

Hon. G H Licudi: Evenings.

355 Hon. D A Feetham: – evening work. Did he give those instructions?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, sir

360 Hon. D A Feetham: Who gave those instructions?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am advised that work in the evenings and the weekends has stopped and I have no idea who gave those instructions.

Fourth Supreme Court Judge
Sitting to hear criminal cases

370 Clerk: Question 31, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Minister for Justice state when the fourth Supreme Court Judge will begin sitting hearing criminal cases?

375 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

380 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the fourth Supreme Court Judge, Mr Justice Black, is scheduled to begin sitting on criminal case matters from the week commencing 23rd January of this year.

Hon. D A Feetham: So he is sitting as from today?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, the 23rd – Monday

385 Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, I beg your pardon I thought he said 20

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, apologies if, I do not know if I said 20th or 23rd: it is, in fact, 23rd January, next Monday.

390 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he accept that, once the Law Courts project has been completed, whilst the fourth judge is sitting, there is no reason why the delay in hearing criminal cases should not be brought within what are reasonable parameters and reasonable timeframes?

395 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is precisely what the Gibraltar Court Service is working to.

Hon. D A Feetham: And does he envisage that any delay in the implementation of the Crimes Bill and the Criminal Procedure – sorry, the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act – might actually have an impact on the timeframes for dealing with criminal cases?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure what the hon. Member means by ‘having an impact’, whether he means it is going to have a negative impact on the timetable or a positive impact on the timetable. The position is... (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) No, no, the position is that there is a backlog of cases. There is a backlog of criminal cases that need to be dealt with. Those are offences which are unaffected by the Crimes Act and the implementation of the legislation that the hon. Member has referred to, those are offences that existed at the time when they were committed. There is a need to clear that backlog.

Mr Justice Black has been brought in. He will be sitting on criminal cases and that will certainly clear the backlog in due course and will bring the administration of cases on criminal and also on civil matters within what the hon. Member has described as ‘reasonable timeframes.’ Unfortunately, without necessarily going into reasons, there has been undue delay in the past in both civil matters and criminal matters and this will certainly help to clear that backlog.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he accept that, for example, having long committals, which is something that occurs now, and which is going to be done away with through the introduction of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, has an impact on the length of time in which a case actually gets to trial, and therefore does he not accept that any delay in the implementation and commencement of the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act is also, by definition, going to have an impact on how long a case takes from, to get to trial from the moment a person is charged?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, not all cases have long committals. In fact, in my experience very few cases have long committals. That is a process that was used – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) It might be an example, but that is the odd occasion, or the rare occasion, rather than the norm, so we cannot exaggerate the impact that removing the ability to have long committals will have on these matters. Clearly, it will have an impact.

As regards the delay the hon. Member has talked about, any delay... Well, these are pieces of legislation that were enacted during the hon. Member’s term. It is not just because of the delay in the courts that these Acts are not implemented. They could have been implemented by the hon. Member when he was in office. They have not been implemented yet. The position on those Acts is as I mentioned yesterday, we are embarking on a consultation process. By and large, we agree, as I indicated during the debate on the Second Reading of both Bills, that the provisions of these Acts ought to be implemented; but there are practical and substantive matters that are being looked at and, again, I am not going to pre-empt the result of that consultation. But let us not exaggerate that removing long committals is going to be the panacea that resolves all problems that have existed in Gibraltar up to now.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much. So if, effectively, commencing the Crimes Bill, the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Bill is going to have a minimum impact on delays facing criminal trials, does he not accept, therefore, that there are now no excuses why there ought to be delays in criminal trials, bearing in mind the new building and also the criminal judge and everything else that has been done?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there is a backlog of cases. When the hon. Member says it –

Hon. D A Feetham: Not backlog, future.

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, the future, I am not sure whether the hon. Member means as from next Monday, as from six months’ time or from as from a year’s time.

There is a backlog of cases and I appreciate that the hon. Members took steps in respect of the court buildings, in respect of the engagement of the additional judge – the fourth judge – that has now taken place and I appreciate that all those steps were taken. Those steps are now coming to fruition, with the courts being ready, hopefully very soon, and with the fourth judge already here, having been sworn in and starting work as from Monday.

But there is a backlog of cases, which the Gibraltar Court Service has to deal with. Once that backlog is cleared, then we expect that the normal schedule will be able to operate. That will really depend on the amount of cases that there are. It is impossible to anticipate what the position will be in, say, six months' or a year's time as to how long a case will take to get to trial, but it will certainly be – and I agree with the hon. Member – it will certainly be less than it has been up to now, which the hon. Member will agree with me has been unacceptable.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman used to ask me a lot of questions about it when I was Minister for Justice, about the delays (Interjection) and he used to comment adversely upon the delays and he used to describe it as being unacceptable.

What I am asking, and what I am trying to get to the bottom of is, does the hon. Gentleman not accept that, with all these measures – I am not talking about the backlog of cases... I accept that those backlog of cases have to be dealt with – but with all these measures that were introduced by the previous administration, there is now no excuse why there ought to be the unacceptable delays, which we both agree, the unacceptable delays in dealing with criminal cases that there were in the past. Yes or no?

Mr Speaker: Excuse me, before the Hon. Minister replies, isn't that a hypothetical question because we have established that the new judge will take office on Monday? We have established that all the buildings are not yet in place.

Why are we talking about delays which may or may not...? We have not established there are delays in the future, have we? We can ask about delays today or delays in the past, but delays which may or may not occur in the future is hypothetical.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not asking about delays in the future. Mr Speaker, with respect... (Interjection) No, what I am asking the hon. Gentleman is to confirm that, once all these measures are in place, there will be no excuses for any delays.

Mr Speaker: What delays?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, we hope –

Mr Speaker: Have you established a week, a month?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, we all hope that, in fact, there will not be any delays, but if there are delays –

Mr Speaker: But what delays? Are we talking a week's delay, a month's delay? It is all hypothetical.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, we know that there have been delays in the past.

Mr Speaker: Yes, and the Member (Interjection) may ask about existing –

Hon. P R Caruana: Don't argue with –

Mr Speaker: Well, the Members may ask about existing delays and past delays, but asking about delays which may or may not happen... We have not established they have happened. Surely, it is hypothetical?

Clerk: Question 33.

Mr Speaker: But if the Minister wants to answer, he is welcome to answer it. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: He was answering before... (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: Well, because the same question was asked three times and he got the same answer three times.

Can we move to the next question?

Insolvency Act
Completion of subsidiary legislation

510 Clerk: Question 33, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Minister for Justice state whether the subsidiary legislation to the Insolvency Act has not been completed?

515 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, it is anticipated that the subsidiary legislation to the Insolvency Act will comprise the following:

520 (1) Insolvency Rules setting out detailed insolvency procedures. These have been drafted and are currently being considered by me.

525 (2) Regulations covering cross-border insolvency. The relevant provisions were, I am told, originally drafted as part of the Insolvency Bill, but a decision was taken at the time, before the Bill was finalised, to include them in separate regulations. These provisions have, therefore, already been drafted and need only be put in the form of Regulations. I have not yet seen these provisions.

(3) Regulations setting out transitional provisions in relation to both the Insolvency Act and the Insolvency (Consequential Provisions) Act. These regulations have not been drafted.

530 (4) Insolvent Partnership Regulations, setting out rules for dealing efficiently with insolvent partnerships. These regulations have not been drafted.

(5) Insolvency Practitioners Regulations and Code, which provide for the detailed regulation of licensed insolvency practitioners. These regulations have not been drafted.

535 (6) Administration of Insolvent Estates Regulations, setting out the rules and procedures for dealing with insolvent estates. These regulations have not been drafted.

I am intending to meet with a legislative draftsman involved on these matters at the earliest opportunity to discuss all outstanding issues. In fact, I can now confirm to the hon. Member that that meeting is scheduled for Thursday of next week.

540 In addition, an Insolvency Consequential Provisions Act to amend the Companies Act and other legislation impacted by the Insolvency Act has been drafted and is currently being considered by me.

545 hon. Members will be aware that the Government will reform the Companies Act with the introduction of a new Act. A decision will need to be taken by Government as to whether the consequential amendments which are required as a result of the Insolvency Act will be introduced as part of the new Companies Act, or whether the current Companies Act will be amended with the Insolvency Consequential Provisions Act being brought to this Parliament. This will depend on how far advanced the drafting of the new Companies Act is when all subsidiary legislation to the Insolvency Act is completed. A decision as to how to proceed will be taken by Government at that stage.

550 Hon. D A Feetham: I appreciate and I will try to be as fair as possible with the hon. Gentleman and that it is a difficult question, but does he have a timeframe in mind for the commencement of the Insolvency Act?

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, no, Mr Speaker. As I have said, there are quite a number of regulations that need to be drafted and I am having a meeting next week with the draftsman involved in these matters and until I have those discussions, I really do not know how long that will take.

Courts Service
Increased staffing levels

560 Clerk: Question 34, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Minister for Justice confirm that the Government intends to increase staffing levels at the Courts Service?

565

570

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, shortly after my appointment as Minister with responsibility for Justice, the issue of staffing levels was raised at my first meeting with the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Courts Service.

Following the increase in courtrooms now available and the appointment of a fourth Supreme Court Judge, there is a need to review the staffing levels in the Courts to help tackle the backlog of cases.

The Chief Executive has been asked to submit his requirements to the Chief Secretary. This will then be considered as part of the Government's review of the need for resources across the Civil Service.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I remind him, before I ask my supplemental question, of a question that he asked me about this when our roles were reversed. He said:

'What changes, if any, are envisaged in terms of staff arrangements in respect of a fourth judge, because one assumes that additional staffing needs will be required if there is a fourth judge and another court being operational at the same time? If there are two jury courts being run, you need extra clerks and extra staff, otherwise you leave nobody in office. What arrangements are being made in that regard?'

585

I said the Government is actually reviewing the position – the same answer that the hon. Gentleman is giving me now, I gave to him – and he chastised me because he said that the Government should not be conducting a review. The Government should have an answer to that question.

590

Does he not accept that it is the height of political hypocrisy for the hon. Gentleman to adopt the same position that I adopted when I was in his shoes which, in the light of the position that he used to adopt when he was here...?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, so it is hypocritical to adopt the position that he adopted. But what the hon. Member (Interjection) has not explained is precisely why I chastised him.

We have been in office for five weeks. At the time of that debate the hon. Member had been in office for almost four years. There had been a building project that was started years ago, not five weeks ago, years ago, and was due to be completed, as the hon. Member has indicated. The information that he had was that that project was due to be completed in November.

600

What I could not understand – and I still cannot understand – is that in a project that was designed years ago and where, clearly, there was going to be a need for a review of staffing levels because you knew exactly how many courts were going to be available and what the staffing needs were, that what the hon. Member was telling me at the time was, 'We are going to wait until the project is finished. We are going to wait until the building is finished, even though we have the plans now, even though we know exactly how many courts are going to be run and then, at the end of that process, we will review the staffing levels.' That is what I chastised him for and that is what I actually considered to be unacceptable.

605

What I have told the hon. Member today is that, very shortly after coming into office, I raised this in my very first meeting with the Chief Executive, and the Chief Executive, what he has done... It is not for me to say, 'You put this extra number of staff here or there.' What the Chief Executive has been asked to do is to submit his staffing requirements and that is precisely the process we are engaged in. It is a process that should have finished long before the hon. Member left office. Well, we have been in office for five weeks. You cannot complain about us reviewing something when he had years to do it and never did.

610

Hon. D A Feetham: Again, the hon. Gentleman is wrong.

615

If the position is as simplistic as the hon. Gentleman has just outlined, which is he knew how many courts there were, he knew how many judges and he therefore must have known how many extra staff... Well, look, he knows that is the position that he has outlined. Does he not accept that he knows that knowledge is also... the hon. Gentleman knows exactly how many courts there are, exactly how many judges there are. Why can't he make a decision now if it were as simplistic as what he is saying it is?

620 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I cannot make a decision now because the Chief Executive has been asked to submit his staffing requirements. Only today I have seen, for the first time, what those staffing requirements are. That is a matter that will need to be considered. I have seen that for the first time today.

The hon. Member cannot expect that I am going to say, 'Well, fine. Go ahead and do whatever.'

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I didn't.

625 Hon. G H Licudi: He obviously cannot expect that, but I raised it in my first meeting. There was a public meeting of all... not a public meeting, a meeting of all Heads of Departments, that was conducted by the Chief Minister with the Chief Secretary and all Heads of Department were invited to submit their requirements, including the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Courts Service.

630 I have today seen the letter of the Chief Executive to the Chief Secretary, with an organogram of staffing requirements – that is something that will have to be looked at, or is it that the hon. Member thinks that we are not entitled to look at anything, even though they had four years to look at this and never did?

635 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am not, in fact. I think that the policy... (Interjection) the policy that the hon. Gentleman has just outlined is an eminently reasonable policy. I am not chastising him for the policy. I am chastising him for the position that he took when he was on my side and I was on his side – that is what I am chastising him for.

640 But isn't the reality of the situation, Mr Speaker that, in fact, the question of staffing levels at the courts is far more complicated than just simply the number of courts and the number of judges and that it also has to be looked at in terms of the IT resources available to the courts and factors of that nature. Isn't that the case?

645 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, issues of staffing levels will depend on what other resources need to be available. Once the IT infrastructure is in place, which I expect will be in place very shortly after the... well, in fact, the cabling is being done as part of the project, but there will be a need for connections in terms of a sound system and PCs. Those physically need to be put in after the building is handed over by the contractor but, once that is in, the staffing levels that we are looking at are staffing levels in the court administration generally and, in particular, in relation to the running of various courts at the same time. That is the staffing exercise that will need to be conducted.

650 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the issue of IT in the courts, actually been settled yet?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure what the hon. Member means by the 'issue of IT'? If he is talking about PCs which had been ordered when he was in office –

655 Hon. D A Feetham: And computer programmes to be available for staff.

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, as I understand it, PCs were ordered before we came into office and those PCs are there and are available and will be installed.

660 In respect of computer programmes, there is a need to look at precisely the software that is needed to manage the system to make the system compatible, for example, with the Police, where there is a lot of manual inputting that needs to happen, particularly at Magistrates' Courts level because the systems are not compatible. Those are issues that I am discussing actively with both the Gibraltar Courts Service and the Police themselves, but there is going to be a need for a study to be carried out in terms of the IT infrastructure, not the physical infrastructure, but the software infrastructure, and instructions have been given already, so a decision has been taken already for that study to be carried out.

665 Hon. D A Feetham: And does he not accept that that also has an impact, if he knew exactly how many staff are required at the Courts Service, the extra staff resources that might be needed in the Courts Service?

670 And also, by way of final supplementary, does the hon. Gentleman accept that, in fact, there is going to be a need to increase staff levels at the Courts Service, even though he might not be able to point out today, and I accept it, the exact numbers?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, I have said nothing about Courts Service. I have mentioned PCs. I have not mentioned Courts Service at all.

675 Hon. D A Feetham: I would ask the hon. Gentleman, does he not accept the question of exactly what IT resources, the settling of the question of IT resources at the Courts Service, has an impact on the exact numbers that one would need by way of an increase?

680 I am also asking the hon. Gentleman to confirm that, I know that he cannot actually pinpoint the exact numbers in any increase, but does he accept that an increase in Courts Service numbers – numbers working at the Courts Service – will be needed?

685 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, I do not accept there will be any need to increase the numbers in Courts Service. As I have indicated, the infrastructure that I was talking about was the installation of PCs, not service.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am sure the Minister has addressed this issue and he will forgive me if he has, but when is the Chief Executive expected to come back with the staff requirements to him?

690 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I indicated that the Chief Executive was asked to submit his staffing requirements to the Chief Secretary and, in fact, today I have seen a letter to that effect.

Hon. D A Feetham: But if the Chief Executive comes to the Government and says, 'We need five extra staff', can he give a commitment that that is what the Government will do?

695 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is a hypothetical situation.

What I have said is that the Chief Executive has been asked to submit his requirements and that will be considered by the Government in the review of the Civil Service that is currently being carried out.

700 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, it is not hypothetical to ask if more staff is requested, whether Government will accede to the request. And also, it is strange that the hon. Gentleman should adopt that particular line when he was saying, when he was in Opposition, that more staff would be needed because of all these reforms – that was the thrust of all his questions. He was saying more staff will be needed and, in fact, I was agreeing with him that more staff was needed and the position that I was adopting was, 'Well, we don't know the exact numbers.'

705 Will he now acknowledge that if the Chief Executive of the Law Courts comes back and says, 'We need extra staff', that the Government will honour that request for extra staff?

710 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker. The Chief Executive has been asked to submit a request and that request will be considered in the normal course of events.

The hon. Member cannot possibly say that it has been the policy of any government to commit itself before looking at and studying any requirements which may be submitted by the (Hon. D A Feetham: We did.) Head of any Department; but if any Head of Department was going to come in, say, two weeks' time to a Minister and say, 'I need x', that the Government was committing itself, two weeks in advance, to provide that. That, as I understand it, was not the policy of the previous administration and it is certainly not the policy of this administration.

715 The policy is to consider requests and, to the extent that those are reasonable, we will seek to accommodate those requests, but I cannot give a commitment as to the outcome of a process that involves the Chief Minister, involves the Chief Secretary – that is a process that will have to be undertaken as part of the Civil Service review which is currently being undertaken by the Office of the Chief Minister.

720 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, we had actually committed ourselves to an increase in levels of staff. The only issue – because it was obvious to us there would be a need for an increase – is just a question of numbers.

725 But does he not accept that the position he is now adopting from the Government benches is a complete U-turn from the position that he adopted when he was here in Opposition?

Hon. G H Licudi: Absolutely not, Mr Speaker. There is no question of any U-turn. I have already 730 explained that what was at the heart of that exchange that the hon. Member has indicated was that the Government ought to have had foresight and proper planning, which was certainly not in place.

I have not said that there will be no increase in staff and therefore there is nothing to have a U-turn from. What I have said is that requests are being considered and a decision will be taken. What the outcome of that process will be, I cannot say because I do not have a crystal ball, but there is certainly no indication of any U-turn and no U-turn is intended or will be made.

Audit review of public buildings
Resolving disabled access

740 Clerk: Question 35, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state what... Sorry, I think I have got the wrong question. I will start again.

745 Will the Government conduct and provide an audit review of public buildings, which at the moment does not allow disabled persons access, with a view to rectifying this?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

750 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government will undertake such an audit of public buildings and undertake reasonable adjustments, as required by law, so as not to discriminate against those with disabilities.

755 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that particular answer. Whilst obviously the intention is a generalised one, in terms of providing access to all disabled people where this is possible and feasible to do in public buildings, the reason why I prompted this question so early at the beginning of this Parliament session was perhaps in the context of parliamentary reform.

760 One of the things I would ask the hon. Lady, and, in fact, I would ask the Hon. Chief Minister, is if there is one public building which, above all public buildings, we think is most important it is probably this Parliament and this Parliament, unfortunately, is not accessible to disabled people, particularly those who are in wheelchairs.

765 In the context of the parliamentary review, Mr Speaker, perhaps within the answer that the hon. Lady has given, will priority be given, perhaps, that if we can be able to fit lifts, perhaps, in this building to allow disabled members to go into the Public Gallery or even, one day, perhaps, that we can have a disabled person in Parliament sitting in the Government benches or the Opposition benches... I am sure that, on both sides of the House, it would be something that we would be very proud of.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

770 Hon. J J Netto: The question is: will the hon. Lady or the Chief Minister give priority within the review within this particular building?

775 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answer to that has to be a non-partisan ‘yes’, because I think we all agree on the importance that this building has. It has had it for a long time. It is a pity there was not already, when we arrived, the capability for people to have the access to this building that they need if they are disabled in some way.

780 Despite that, I do not think this is an issue on which we need to make partisan points. What we need to do is ensure that, as part of whatever review there is, we work together and, in particular, on issues on this, we deliver together to people who want to have access to this place, who desire to form part of the democratic process as such, that they are rightly not satisfied with simply listening to the proceedings of this House on radio or seeing it by the time that... or once we have decided that the whole proceeding should be transmitted in whatever way by video link also. Those who want to be here, we need to be embracing with open arms.

There are some people who are disabled in other parts of the world who have reached very high office in other governments and we need to put this Parliament and the public service at the disposal of people like that. The Rt Hon. David Blunkett, a blind person, became Home Secretary in the United Kingdom and held other high offices of state, that being probably the highest, which was one of three highest offices of state.

So, Mr Speaker, I absolutely agree with the hon. Gentleman. It has not happened by the time that we have come into office, but that is not the issue. The issue is delivering it insofar as possible within the timetable in which those things can be delivered in the context of the Government's other priorities.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that.

Disability Action Plan Costs and starting date

Clerk: Question 36, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state what features and objectives the proposed Disability Action Plan will contain, what the cost involved is and by when will it be introduced?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government will be meeting all representative organisations in the field of disability in order to establish the features and objectives that the proposed Disability Action Plan will contain. Once we have completed this process, we will then be in a position to assess the exact contents of the plan and will provide an estimate of the cost incurred.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, of course the Government will wish to consult as widely as possible in the development of a Disability Action Plan, but given that this is an important issue, at least for the party opposite to be able to mention in their manifesto, one would have thought that, despite consulting other people as to the details of the Disability Action Plan, at the very least the Government, or the party when it was in Opposition, would have had a general idea, a scope of what the issues that are contained within the Disability Action Plan.

What I am asking the hon. Lady is why they thought it so important to put it in the manifesto because, obviously, they must have thought there was a gap and a need to develop this, so what was the scope of the idea that would go within the Disability Action Plan? I am not asking for the details of the Disability Action Plan. At the end of the day, the Disability Action Plan, by definition, is nothing other than a pathway for the disabled people, whether to do in Education, whether it be in Employment, whether it be to do with participation in culture, in the arts etc. Will the hon. Lady at least give me a scope of what she thinks will be contained in the Disability Action Plan?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, we have already had representations made to us from certain disability societies and certain disability movements, both before the Election and since taking office. However, this is a plan that we will hope to achieve, that we certainly will achieve in this term of office and it is not a plan that will be rushed. It is a plan that will be given careful consideration and will be given in-depth consultation to make sure that we meet the objectives of the service users to whom we will be delivering this plan. At this moment the Disability Action Plan is at an early stage.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, I do not think the hon. Lady opposite has understood my supplementary question. Of course, the Department will take the time that it needs to be done and, of course, the Government will want to consult with as many stakeholders as is reasonable to do so, but that is not what was my supplementary question.

My supplementary question was: given that they felt it important during the Election to mention it on page 82, surely they must have concluded that there is a need of a Disability Action Plan to be able to do a number of things. I am not saying about what they are going to do over the next four years. What I am saying, the hon.

Lady, is what does she think that the Disability Action Plan will contain, regardless whatever the fruits of the consultation thereafter?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it seems that it is the hon. Gentleman opposite who did not understand my response.

My response is that we are not going to tell people with disabilities what is going to be contained in the Disability Action Plan. We want them to tell us what the Disability Action Plan is going to contain. Therefore, we have already started the consultation process. Clearly, given that we have not been in office for barely two months yet, it is still at a very embryonic stage. (Applause)

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that the hon. Lady is simply not listening to what I am saying. (Interjections) I am not telling her –

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Lady is new to this Parliament, but she has to accept and understand that if I am on my feet about to ask a question, she has to have the patience to sit down and listen to the question.

Mr Speaker: I think that is a bit unfair, personally. Worse crimes have been committed in this Parliament!

A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, well, I do not know whether... well, I had better not say.

Mr Speaker, I understand that she will want, along with other stakeholders, to enter into a process of consultation in order to develop, eventually, the details of the Disability Action Plan, but that is not what I am asking. What I am asking her, regardless of whatever the views of other disability representative groups, what her views are in relation to the Disability Action Plan for which they think it was important enough to put in their manifesto? That is what I am asking.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, at the risk of repeating what I have said earlier, I want to make it clear that I do not wish to pre-empt what the ultimate service users are going to ask me what they think is required as part of the consultation process that the Government is going through with them.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. J J Netto: I am not going to hold a gun against her head just because this is embryonic or because I am trying to pre-empt. All I am asking, Mr Speaker, is whether she has any notion whatsoever what the Disability Action Plan is going to be – yes or no?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may assist here, the word is ‘consultation’ and the hon. Member must remember that when you consult, you listen to people and you do not try to direct. Unfortunately, he was a Member of a Government where often consultation papers sounded more like decrees. That is not the way we are going to do things. We are going to listen to the people and, after that, of course we will contribute our side, but we want to hear what they have to say because we do not want to impose our wishes. We want to listen to the people. These groups are the ones that know more about it than anybody else.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I entirely agree with the hon. Member opposite, except his allusions to the previous Government. (Laughter)

Does he nevertheless not agree that, laudable as it is to consult other people and seek their views to take them into account, consulting other people to find out their views is not an alternative to having views of your own, or is the Government saying that it will simply do, on this and every other issue, what other people say to them needs doing? That is not what a Government is, and that is not what people expect of a Government.

So the question, which sounded to me rather simple and did not require all this banter, was simple enough, and I will illustrate it for him if he wants. Notwithstanding that they are laudably going to consult, and separate to what other people may say to them is their view or preference in that consultation, do they have a view? For example, let me jog their memory. It is not the case that they will do only what the consultation process say because their manifesto says:

‘...that in Government we will adopt the proposal for a Disability Action Plan which we will develop in close consultation with the Gibraltar Local Disability Movement and their relevant representative organisations. This will include action to increase the number of disabled parking bays and to control abuse of parking spaces...’

So that we know now, from reading their manifesto, that regardless of the consultation process, it is their view that the plan will include at least the number of disabled parking... Now, is there anything else, or do they have no view beyond what should be in such a plan beyond those two points?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman laudably continued to read beyond the sentence that appeared to have prompted the question – so already he sees that there are other issues there.

If he carries on reading the rest of the page, Mr Speaker, he will find a lot of other things, which will necessarily, if we do them, form part of a Disability Action Plan. For example, the issues relating to respite, future planning for the disabled, the disability laws, the import duty waiver that disabled people should be entitled to, the changes in the way the Disability Allowance is granted, home help, funding, orthopaedic equipment, sheltered employment, how we will deal with the blind, all of those things must be an indication to the hon. Gentleman and Lady opposite of the things that would form part of the plan.

I think it is absolutely right when you go to a consultation not to say necessarily, ‘This is what we want to do. Is it okay? Have you got other ideas?’ It is equally valid to say to people, ‘Look, can we have your ideas?’ and, of course, we have been doing that in Opposition and we know what their ideas are and that has informed our thinking on the whole of the page and the action plan will be further informed by that thinking.

The thinking that already forms part of the manifesto is the basis of what an action plan will include in some parts and other things will come through as a result of the consultation. On this issue, I think that there should be very little for us to disagree with.

Life planning for disabled persons Features, costs and implementation

Clerk: Question 37, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state what features of the programme of life planning for disabled persons will have, as stated in their manifesto, what the costs, if any, are, and when will they implement this policy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as a preliminary to the life plan, the Government is in the process of identifying individuals with a disability first, so that we can then proceed to make an assessment of their needs. This is at an early stage.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, again, Mr Speaker, fine, they can assess the needs, but that does not answer the question as to what the features of the life programme will contain.

Are we talking about, perhaps, either some other life planning schemes run by other jurisdictions which look into income and expenses, life skills, educational skills, etc etc. In other words, are they copying the model of, say, the UK model? Are they copying a model of the Australian model? Are they doing a hybrid of the two? What features will it contain?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Again, I will refer to those features that have already been highlighted in our manifesto, which are features that relate to people with disability; but, clearly, before we can identify what feature will relate to each person, we first need to identify what disability each person has.

950 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Lady know how long this process will take?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I cannot at this stage say how long this process will take because, unfortunately, I am finding difficulty in undertaking the first audit of identifying who has a disability and what disability this is.

955 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, doesn't the Care Agency, in relation to the ??? that deals with disability have a register of disabled persons and the disability that that particular person has?

960 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as far as I am aware, the Care Agency has a register of disability of people who come within the remit of the Care Agency, such as the people who use the facilities at St Bernadette's, Dr Giraldi Home and the other care homes, but not of the general public in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker.

965 I am, however, at the stage where I have asked for the information from all the different Government Departments in order to collate a database of people resident in Gibraltar with disability and what their disabilities are.

970 Hon. J J Netto: I accept the fact that, perhaps, the only information available to her is information with regard to disabled people who are being provided a service by the Care Agency and not necessarily by all disabled persons in the community. I accept that, but, given that at the very least she has the information in relation to disabled people who have a service by the Care Agency, at the very least in relation to them, she can start the process of a scheme for life planning. Is that not the case?

975 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, first of all, one would expect that those that come under the umbrella of the Care Agency already have a certain element of planning. However, what is not desirable in this exercise is for us to go through it piecemeal. First of all, what we need to do is identify the needs and our project can commence from there, Mr Speaker.

980 Increased Home Help
Date and cost of introduction

Clerk: Question 38, the Hon. J J Netto.

985 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state what aspects of Home Help will be increased, as stated in the Government's manifesto, by whom, when it will be introduced and what the extra cost will be?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

990 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, a study is currently being undertaken. Phase one of that study will be to identify what aspects of help individuals require in their homes.

995 Phase two of the study relates to the cost of that service and then phase three of that study will be to identify who will provide that service.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in relation to the study, presumably what she means, that the ... What I am trying to get at is what is the type of Home Help that is required?

1000 Are we talking about here 'Home Help' in the sense of, perhaps, providing extra care workers in order to provide some kind of a respite, or perhaps some kind of a sitting service, or perhaps in their own flat in the community? Is that what she means by Home Help or does it mean something else completely?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, the first issue that we are tackling is that of domiciliary care because, unfortunately, I have inherited a waiting list of people who want domiciliary help and, as of last

- 1005 week, Mr Speaker, the number of people in Gibraltar who require domiciliary care is 309 people.
There are people on this waiting list for domiciliary help dating back to 2003, 2005 and 2006, so the most urgent task that has been undertaken in this regard, Mr Speaker, is to assess the needs of those people on the list and the urgency that may be required for domiciliary help and the level of domiciliary help that may be required.
- 1010 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I detect a tendency, probably started by the Hon. Dr Cortes, in relation to try and score cheap political points (Interjections) and trying to say, 'Well, you know, we have got a waiting list of 309.'
- 1015 Well, let me tell the hon. Lady that domiciliary care did not start with the GSLP Government; it was started by the GSD Government. It started with the GSD Government in 2002, with a budget of £160,000. Currently, this financial year... a current budget of £750,000 and that shows the extent to which the commitment of this GSD Government in relation to providing this kind of help to a lot of people. That is the first thing I have got to tell the lady.
- 1020 But the purpose of me standing up is for the purpose of asking questions, not going backwards... and the purpose of my question is to try and identify whether the domiciliary..... the increase in Home Help, is it going to be targeting, in this particular case, just the elderly or elderly and the disabled, and whether we are talking about here, Mr Speaker, in providing more assistance by way of care workers or perhaps even other things that may be needed by these particular groups of people?
Can she give an answer to that?
- 1025 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, if I wanted to score cheap political points, I would have told the hon. Gentleman opposite that it was his Government who had a statutory obligation to make sure that this building did not discriminate against disabled people since 1st March 2007, when the Equal Opportunities Act came into force. I did not do that, Mr Speaker.
- 1030 All I have done is I have stated the facts that –
- Hon. P R Caruana: You have just! (Interjection and laughter)
- Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – the waiting list (Interjections)
- 1035 Mr Speaker: Order, the Hon. Minister is trying to... (Interjections) Order! The Hon. Minister is trying to answer the question.
Please continue.
- 1040 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes. So in answer to the question is that immediately what concerned me and alerted me to this problem, having found that 309 people in Gibraltar needed domiciliary care, is to assess what kind of domiciliary care they need.
Now, in answer to the question, as to whether this would just be restricted to the elderly or also extended to the disabled, then my answer to that is that it will be extended to both and any other person who may need domiciliary care, as may be assessed by the Care Agency as necessary and as relevant, Mr Speaker. At the moment what we are doing is assessing the needs of the people on the list, because there has not even been an assessment of need, or of urgent need, of the people on the list.
- 1045 Hon. J J Netto: I take issue with that particular comment, because when people put their name on the list, for domiciliary care, the people in charge of domiciliary care take into account the needs of that particular person, so it is not true to say that there is no knowledge about the needs of people who put their name for domiciliary care. There is.
- 1050 When she goes back to the office and when she calls the relevant people to do that, she will find that there is an assessment on the needs of the particular person. In the vast majority of the cases she will find there is a need, perhaps, for more money as we were committed to do to increase it, as we have been increasing it since 2002, right, to be able to give those particular people, more care workers to be there for particular hours during the day.
- 1055 She can do all the assessment and all the consultation she wants, but if she wants to start tackling the problem, she is going to have to put more money into the kitty, as we have done. (Interjection) and she can do 1060 it right now, regardless of how much she wants to assess. So the question is, can she start implementing the policies in her manifesto, which will produce a positive result?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the short answer is, yes, but I would also like to ask the hon. Gentleman opposite, that if he knew the answer to the question, then why ask?

1065 Having said that, actually, it is not the case that there is assessment of all the people on the list because, otherwise, enquiries that I have been receiving since I have been in office for under two months, or even a month and a half, I have been receiving enquiries from people who have been on the domiciliary waiting list for over two years and have never had an assessment done, Mr Speaker.

1070

Care Agency staff Training programme on child protection

1075 Clerk: Question 39, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services confirm that she will continue with the previous Government's training programme on child protection for the Care Agency staff and all other stakeholders and, if so, provide a breakdown of the persons involved in 2012 across public sector organisations, the level of training and when?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that such training will continue and, in fact, will be wider and more robust.

I can confirm that the Safeguarding/Child Protection Training programme will continue to be delivered to employees of the Gibraltar Health Authority, the Education Department, the Royal Gibraltar Police and the Care Agency.

In respect of tier 1, Safeguarding/Child Protection and Training, it is proposed that there be one training session each month, as from February through to December, except during the month of August.

In respect of tier 2, Safeguarding/Child Protection and Training, there will be training sessions in February, June and October 2012.

I now hand to the hon. Member a handout with the proposed training dates and, in addition to this training, there also will be a child protection conference, second child protection conference during late summer/early autumn 2012.

1095

The Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that information and I am grateful also for the fact that she will be continuing with the programme started by the GSD government in relation to these particular training courses being provided, not just to the Care Agency staff but, indeed, all front-line staff of other Government departments and other authorities and agencies in such provision.

1100

Can I ask the hon. Lady, in relation to the training that took place a couple of days ago in Bleak House, who was the person who delivered the training there, Mr Speaker?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I am happy to answer that, Mr Speaker, but that was not child protection training, that was DCRT training, not directly related to the question.

I am happy to answer it, nevertheless, it was Mr Alan Benn.

Hon. J J Netto: Alan Benn. Sorry, I did not quite catch –

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I understand he has been providing training for the Care Agency in the past.

1110

Hon. J J Netto: Right. Can the hon. Lady tell me what the aim of this training was?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I said, this question is not related to the original question, it is 1115 in relation to completely different training. I am happy to respond to it.

Mr Speaker: Well, it is up to the Minister if she wishes to provide the information. If she can't, she can't.

1120 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: The DCRT training which was provided last week was in relation to training care workers in dealing with children who have particularly challenging behaviour.

Hon. J J Netto: Right, well, I am grateful for that.

1125 So, basically, if I can jog her memory, the aim of the training was to be able to teach students about awareness of current legislation relating to conflict resolution training, to be able to teach safe breakaway techniques and positive handling strategies, teach students the importance of post-incident analysis, reporting and recording staff and services users support after an incident. That was the aim of the conflict resolution training two days ago, then, by Alan Benn?

1130 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, it was not conflict resolution provided two days ago. In fact, the training commenced last week, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: So, in fact, this particular training was part of the training that was announced by the Care Agency in establishing a development programme for January to December 2011. Can she confirm that?

1135 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker. This is different training, in addition to the training which we had to organise as a result of certain events: this was training that was organised at short notice. It was a five-day training: it is not the training that had already been programmed by the Care Agency.

1140 Hon. J J Netto: Could the hon. Lady, Mr Speaker, the hon. Minister, then reconcile the fact that she seems to agree that the training has been delivered by Alan Benn, she agrees with me what were all the aims of the training provided, she will agree with me that it was inserted into the report of the staff training and development programme for December 2011. The only thing that was left in the report, if she – I do not know whether she has got it in hand – but she can look at it, was that a date had to be confirmed, so everything that happened two days ago was scheduled to happen last year? Will she not agree with me?

1145 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Gentleman opposite if he is referring to a Care Agency document which is not in the public domain? Is this the document that the hon. Member is referring to?

1150 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am referring to the note which, if she wants to cross the floor and sit between Hon. Mr Figueras and myself, she can look at for herself.

Can she answer the question, then, which is, if she agrees with me that the course was delivered by Alan Benn, if she agrees with me on the aim, if she agrees with me that the course was inserted and planned for last year, right, does she agree with me with all of that?

1155 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, I do not, because although there was a course which was planned for now, it is not this one.

1160 This is a more intense course that was planned as the result of certain incidents, Mr Speaker. It is a new course that was planned a couple of weeks ago, which Alan Benn has already delivered training on these themes. This is not a training course that was delivered to students, it was a level 2 training course, a more intense training course delivered to care workers already in employment and it is a more intense training course than that which was envisaged would be provided at the time when the training programme was commenced, Mr Speaker.

1165 Hon. J J Netto: The hon. Lady says that this training almost came about in a kind of emergency way, because there were some incidents. Perhaps she can enlighten us, what incidents she is referring to, and when was the date of the incident that prompted, in such an emerging way, in such a rush and emergency way, to get Alan Benn to get into an aeroplane at Gatwick or wherever he lives in the UK and rush here to prepare this course? Can she, therefore, tell us what incident prompted such an emergency to get this man in an aeroplane, 1170 to come to Gibraltar, to deal with this particular course?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Gentleman could give notice of the questions he wishes to ask. This one is not related to his original question and if a decision to implement certain training is taken as a result of any incident, then, Mr Speaker, it is done as a responsible measure and it was done because of that.

1175 I will not... I do not think it is appropriate to give any further details in relation to anything. I am happy to do so to the hon. Member in private, Mr Speaker.

1180 Hon. J J Netto: I am not asking for things to be said in private, what I am asking her, Mr Speaker, is that, if something serious happened – let us leave aside the details of what happened – but something happened in the last four weeks, surely, as Minister for Social Services, she would have been so concerned about it, right, that she would know when the date of the incident was, which then resulted in her giving instruction to the Care Agency to get this man into an aeroplane, to come to Gibraltar, to get a booking in Bleak House and get all the staff in Bleak House to attend this emergency course?

1185 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is called being efficient, although that is not a question, but, yes –

1190 Hon. J J Netto: I am asking the hon. Lady, Mr Speaker, when was the date of such a serious incident to get this man into an aeroplane to come to Gibraltar? (Interjection)

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I was satisfied that the incident was serious enough to warrant the organisation of this training. It is training that was organised as the result of an event and not one that was already in the training plan last year, Mr Speaker.

1195 I have already answered the question.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, if this is so serious an incident, does she not remember when it happened? Was it – let's see – they got into government on 9th December. Did it happen before Christmas, or after Christmas?

1200 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this is the result of certain incidents which, in fact, commenced in early December. They continued during December and reached the stage, where, at the end of December/early January it was necessary to take the action that was necessary, which was to make arrangements for a specialist trainer to come and deliver intensive level 2 training, a five-day course to 16 care workers working at the residential homes.

1205 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, obviously without transgressing into any giving of public details that the hon. Lady may feel is inappropriate, certainly none that identify anybody, is there anything that the hon. Lady can say of the nature of the incidents that caused her to take this serious view. In other words (Interjection) well, yes, but no-one is suggesting... no-one is blaming you for the incident. I was just asking whether there is anything she can say to identify the type of incident. (Interjection)

I mean, was it child abuse, was it bad fire drill practice, was it pilfering from... you know, what was it? (Interjection)

1215 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not believe it is appropriate for me to provide details. It is just something that has been ongoing since early December, Mr Speaker.

1220 Hon. P R Caruana: I am not asking for details, I am asking just for a general categorisation of the matter. Are we talking about abuse of power, are we talking about child abuse, are we talking about pilfering, are we talking about bad hygiene practice, I mean, no-one is asking her to identify anything by way of detail about a particular incident, I mean, you know, what sort of thing is going on in the Care Agency since early December? I mean, if she thinks there is nothing she can say, but it is pretty odd there is nothing that can be said.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think if the hon. Member opposite asks the person responsible before 1225 the Election for the nature of the problem that was having in control in certain circumstances, then the Minister responsible at the time was aware of the problem and the problem got progressively worse. Therefore, the advice provided was that the people in employment were having difficulty in keeping that situation under control and needed a professional input.

1230 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see, so it was staff training to assist the staff in better handling an evolving and worsening situation around a particular person. Fine.

1235 Hon. J J Netto: Can the hon. Lady perhaps telegraph me whether we are talking about a particular person, which in my time in office or perhaps I will drop it... if I drop it now, will the hon. Lady be able, on a confidential basis, to provide me with the detail of that particular person – (Interjection)

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as you may recall, I offered to do that in my first answer, but not telegraph it across the floor. Maybe the hon. Gentleman may be happy to discuss it with me later. I am happy to discuss it with him on a confidential basis, as I have already informed him that I will be providing him with confidential answers to certain questions that he has asked.

1245 Child Protection Team
Resources available and cost

Clerk: Question 40, the Hon. J J Netto.

1250 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state what resources over and above current ones will be made available to the child protection team, the cost involved and by when will this be available?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1255 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, a complete review of the structure of Social Services has already commenced with a view to identifying what resources are required. Once known, this will be costed.

Hon. J J Netto: Does the hon. Lady know how long that review will take place?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: This review will be done quickly, because it is something that needs to be resolved quickly. If additional resources are required, then they will be provided quickly.

1265

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, without wishing to sound pedantic, but when the Hon. Chief Minister used to be on this side of the bench, he used to chastise us on the definition of 'quick'. How quick is quick, he used to say quite often. Can she give us, at least, whether we are talking about weeks, are we talking about months, are we talking about – what – an indication of how quick is quick?

1270

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: As quick as is needed to do it properly, but as soon as possible.

Hon. J J Netto: Does that mean a day, a week, a month, six months?

1275

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is envisaged that it will be done as soon as possible. It could be a number of weeks. It could be a month or two. At this stage I do not know yet. It may be that the review is ongoing, but certainly, I envisage there will be changes to the structure very shortly.

Hon. J J Netto: I am deeply grateful.

Care Plans Documentation criteria

Clerk: Question 41, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if all care plans have been fully documented by all relevant staff associated with the individual care plans, needs and objectives within the Agency and, if not, why not?

1290

1295

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the answer is yes. When a child is first brought into public care, placement plans and an essential information record are presented and completed. This information is then transferred into a residential plan. The objectives of the task identified on the residential plan are translated into a day-to-day plan for each looked-after child, which will highlight meetings, appointments, contacts and the basic needs of the child, including health, education etc.

This document will enable the staff to understand the child's routines and likes and be able to manage behaviours. All looked-after children have an allocated key worker who is responsible for the completion of the tasks identified in the residential and day-to-day plan. All looked-after children are subject to placement reviews, which will result in the residential and care plan being updated. This ensures that plans are continuously monitored and meet the changing needs of every looked-after child.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful even though I am very well acquainted with the details of the care plan, as introduced by ourselves.

The point I was trying to labour on, Mr Speaker, and the reason why I have put this particular question here, is because when we moved most looked-after children into Tangier Views we had, for a short period of time, some teething problems with a minority of staff there, who were refusing to??? some of the care plan... not entirely to the care plan...

It is something which I took very seriously with the senior management, because obviously that was unacceptable. The reason I was prompted to ask this particular question is that are they being complied with and the answer the hon. Lady has given me is that it is something that has been dealt with successfully and the care plans have been fully met by the people employed in the Care Agency, so I am grateful for that.

1315 Court requirements for looked-after children
Meeting Care Plans

Clerk: Question 43, the Hon. J J Netto.
I beg your pardon, Question 42.

1320 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if all Court requirements for looked-after children, as reflected in the care plans (that is Care Agency, Education, Health etc) are being met and if not, why not?

1325 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am happy to report that they are being met.

1330 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for her answer and I am very pleased they are being met.

Once again, the reason why I am prompted to ask this particular question was because, at one time, for a short period of time, we did have problems on the Health Authority side in coming on board with their contribution within the care plan. It is something that we took up with the senior management of the Health Authority and the problem was that GPs did not want to make the contribution that was needed from the Health Authority to ensure that that part of the element of the care plan which dealt with health matters were being looked after.

1335 So perhaps, what I am asking, in this case, the Hon. Minister for Health, Dr Cortes, that he would not mind keeping an eye on this particular issue to ensure, through his senior management, that his GPs do comply with this requirement because, at the end of the day, it is quite an important and significant element of the care plan, as dictated by the courts.

1340 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will assure the hon. Gentleman that I am keeping a close eye on many things and also to assure him that the Health Authority and the Care Agency are working together extremely well and possibly better than ever before.

1345

Unallocated referrals of children
November and December 2011

1350 Clerk: Question 43, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if, in the months of November and December 2011, there were any unallocated referrals of children waiting for a service, and if so, provide a breakdown of the risk to any such children.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1360 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am happy to report that, during the months of November and December 2011, the child protection team had no unallocated referrals. Of course, it was not until July 2011 that the backlog of unallocated referrals were dealt with, because, in November 2010, there was a point when there were 52 unallocated referrals outstanding. In May 2010 there were 119 children referrals unallocated and outstanding and in February 2009 the figure was 101.

1365 I can confirm that in November and December 2011 there were none unallocated.

Hon. J J Netto: Obviously, the hon. Lady feels obliged to try and score cheap party political points, but does she not recognise that the reason why there were not any unallocated referrals in October, November, December, was the result of the fruits of the GSD Government by introducing the Children Act and by having more social workers? This is the reason why you do not have any unallocated cases now.

1370 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is Question Time, not 'justification of my sixteen years of Government's time'.

1375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am sorry, it is the hon. Lady who is trying to score cheap party political points.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is the hon. Gentleman who has to get up in this House in this part of the Order of the Day to ask questions.

1380 Mr Speaker: But I think that was a preamble, which asked the hon. Lady to recognise the fact that there were no unallocated referrals during October, November, December was due to the efforts of his Government. That is what I understood the question to be.

1385 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento I can state that, as a matter of fact, there are no unallocated referrals in November and December 2011. That is a matter of fact.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the fact that she acknowledges the success of the GSD Government when there. (Interjections and laughter)

1390

Looked-after children
In employment, education or training

1395 Clerk: Question 44, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services confirm that all its looked-after children are either in employment, education or training and if not, why not?

1400 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, they all are. Out of the 41 looked-after children, 34 children are in education, seven are registered and are awaiting placements in a vocational training scheme.

1405

Care Agency
Incidence of bullying or harassment

1410 Clerk: Question 45, the Hon. J J Netto.

1415 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any acts of bullying or harassment in the Care Agency, since this policy was launched and, if so, can a breakdown be provided showing the number of occasions by month, type (that is, verbal, non-verbal, physical or corporate bullying by line managers etc.) and whether informal or formal measures have been instigated?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1420 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): The Care Agency's bullying and harassment policy was launched on 17th November 2011. However, I understand this is still in draft format.

I am informed that this policy has not, in fact, been ratified and is therefore not in force. As such, no complaints of bullying and harassment can be made under this policy.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, that is news to me.

The policy was launched actually and was launched with the support of the union representative. In fact, they were actually the instigators of getting the bullying and harassment policy going. It is something, Mr Speaker, that was launched and I remember rightly now, we made it official with a press communiqué, with a press statement, so the actual policy was initiated, so I do not see why the hon. Member says it has not been initiated.

1430

So the question is, Mr Speaker, for the period in which it was launched, right, were there any acts of bullying during that period?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am advised by senior management that there was a launch but, following the launch the policy was not signed off, was not ratified and therefore not enforced.

This was a question that I asked, because obviously in answer to this question, I asked for a copy of the bullying and harassment policy. The document that I got was in draft. When I queried whether this policy was still in draft, or whether perhaps I had mistakenly been given the wrong document, I was informed by senior management – and again I have queried this today – whether this document is in draft or not, and I have been assured there was a launch on 17th November. I accept there was a launch, I said that in my first answer, but senior management advised me that it was not ratified, therefore not in force. So if it is not in force, no complaints can be made under this policy.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the only reason why the hon. Lady has got a copy of the report there with the word ‘draft’ on the front page is because she has a previous draft that has been given to her. If she cares to look at the draft that was given which was attached to the press statement, obviously it did not have the word ‘draft’ on there.

The only person that sanctions the policy was me, by doing it publicly, so it is not in draft form, it was officially launched and made public to the press.

1450

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I have checked this point today again, because I was concerned that the document I got said ‘draft’ on it. I therefore checked the matter and I have been assured by senior management at the Care Agency that the document is still in draft. I am told that, in order for it to be enforced, it needed to be ratified and signed by the Minister and that the document was not signed by the previous Minister.

1455

That is what I have been told by senior management, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: With respect, if the hon. Lady asked to get a copy of the press statement when I launched the policy, right, she will find that that, by definition, makes it official and is ratified. It may not have, on a little corner by the page, where it is signed or not signed, but if the Minister actually makes a press statement, having done all the consultation process, both internally with management and externally with the union which instigated this policy, and I launch it officially, then it is the official policy of the Care Agency.

I am sorry, Mr Speaker, that is the official policy of the Care Agency, because the Minister has officially launched it, having completed the consultation process. That is the fact, so what I am saying, Mr Speaker, having launched it officially, for that period in time, was there any act of bullying or harassment? (Interjection)

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not aware that a press release or a press conference brings a document into force or ratifies a document. I am, of course, conscious of my duty to this House and therefore I have checked more than once with senior management on the position and what I am advised by senior management is that this document is not in force, because it required a signature by the Minister and such signature did not happen. Therefore, the document, I am told, is not in force, Mr Speaker.

1475

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, can the hon. Lady confirm, the Hon. Minister confirm, whether she intends to commence the policy herself, then? (Interjection)

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this is a matter that needs to be reviewed with the Care Agency 1480 and, of course, in line with this Government's Command Paper on the same matter. It is not a commitment that I can make today, Mr Speaker.

1485 Care Agency Residential Homes
Recordable acts of violence

Clerk: Question 46, the Hon. J J Netto.

1490 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency residential homes from 8th December 2011 to date and, if so, could she provide a breakdown showing the date of the incident/s, whether the incident was between children, or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required, either at the home or in the hospital and for what purpose?

1495 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Yes, I have a handout of these incidents which I would like to pass to the hon. Gentleman.

1500 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, whilst the answer is coming through, could I proceed with my supplementary?

Mr Speaker: Yes, certainly.

1505 Hon. J J Netto: Following the incident, whatever the incident and the number of incidents and the nature of the incident, is the Minister satisfied that the right protocols have been invoked after the incident?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I am sorry, Mr Speaker, I did not hear the question.

1510 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, what I am saying, following the incidents – obviously, I am presume she would be informed, just like I was informed before – and is she satisfied that the right protocols of the Care Agency were invoked post incident?

1515 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Not only am I satisfied that the protocols have been properly employed, but we went over and above, because it is as a result of these incidents that we arranged for the level 2 DRC training by Mr Alan Benn.

Hon. J J Netto: As a result of the incident, were incident forms filled after the incident?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Sorry, I did not hear that, Mr Speaker.

1520 Hon. J J Netto: As a result of the incident, was incident forms filled after the incident?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I would expect that they were.

1525 Hon. J J Netto: Would the hon. Lady, when she has the opportunity to go back to her office, confirm that?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I am happy to confirm it. I do not have the actual information. I will confirm it to the hon. Gentleman on a confidential basis.

1530 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1535 Hon. D A Feetham: Do these incidents that the hon. Lady has listed in the schedule that she has been so kind as to produce to this House, do they relate to the incident we were talking about a few moments ago, when the hon. Lady said that she...

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, the incidents that commenced on 28th November 2011.

1540 Hon. D A Feetham: So, effectively, what we are talking about, just so that we are clear, is that there were incidents on 28th, two incidents on 28th November last year and then there is a plethora of incidents as from the date of the General Election on 8th December and all the way through to the end of December? That is correct, isn't it?

1545 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, although some of the incidents do not relate to the same child.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, can the hon. Lady inform this House as to how many children or persons in care do these incidents relate to?

1550 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is a question that I would rather answer to the hon. Gentleman opposite in private. I would rather do that for the sake of the children involved, Mr Speaker.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: But you see, Mr Speaker, does the hon. Lady not accept that, in fact, my question does not ask her to betray any confidence or reveal anything that is confidential in nature, it is just a question of numbers in relation to these incidents. Is it one more child, two more children, three more children? That is all that we are asking.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is just that if I answer that question, I do run the risk of identifying the child or children.

1560 Hon. D A Feetham: Why is that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman is truly interested in the information – and the Hon. Minister is telling him he can have the information and she will give it to him – on every occasion that has been the case in the past, particularly on issues like this, we have accepted that. If the hon. Gentleman wants the information, it is there for him to have.

Look, if he makes a judgement that, having been given the information confidentially, it is not information that could possibly have identified the child, then next time when he asks questions on this subject, he can make that point. But the Hon. Minister is not saying that she will not give the information. In her judgement – and the Members opposite have to accept that now it is our judgement that matters – before, it was theirs – this could lead to some potential identification. We are not trying not to provide the information, we just want to give it to them, as responsible Members of this House, outside the confines of what everybody else can listen to.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that may well be your judgement, but that does not mean that we cannot question that judgement, and that is precisely... (Interjection) At this stage, that is not what I was doing, but certainly the reality of the situation is that this House is to elicit information, the answers are given in public, unless, of course, there are cogent reasons why those answers should not be given in public.

At the present moment, I just simply cannot understand why the question – how many children does this relate to? – give rise to any potential breach of confidential information? I am entitled to ask that question. Of course, I am not going to press it further and I will wait for the hon. Lady to provide the information and if, of course, we are not satisfied, we will come back and we will ask further questions.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you see the issue is this. Having the information, as the Minister does, she makes the judgement that it can, in some way, have the effect of disclosing the identity of people whose identity, I am sure, across the floor of the House, we do not want disclosed, because it would not be in their interest. Therefore, the Minister makes that judgement.

What the hon. Gentleman is doing by questioning that is (a) doing something that we have never done, when we were on that side of the House but, look, if they want to do it, they are free to do it, and (b) is, in effect, to say that they want to make the judgement by eliciting further information without knowing what it is that could result in identities being disclosed.

So, look, I will just say to him on this issue, which is a sensitive issue involving children, do not press us, because we will give you the information, but not all over the airwaves.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, that is the pot calling the kettle black. As I recall, my hon. Friend, Mr Netto, was consistently and systematically pressed on issues of this nature, when they were in Opposition.

Look, I am not going to press it, though I have to say, again, I cannot see how you could possibly say, that saying there were two children involved, rather than one, raises any issue of confidentiality, or could possibly raise to a trail of inquiry actually identifying that child. But as I say, I am not going to press it and we will hear what the hon. Lady has to say.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman is doing, is actually the usual ‘do as I say, not as I do’, because he is saying he is not going to do something which he then goes on and does by the manner of his intervention which, frankly, Mr Speaker, he should not be making, because this is Question Time, not ‘reason why I am not going to press the Question Time’.

Mr Speaker: Unless it is a question.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I ask this question?

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Lady at least enlighten us in relation to this? Will she accept (1) that the majority of these instances have occurred on her watch and (2) would she also inform the House as to whether, in relation to the one or two or three or four other children that this entails, that that is not as the Hon. Mr Bossano indicated earlier on during his intervention that the incidents started prior to the 8th, that the incidents actually occurred after 8th December?

1620 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: If the hon. Member opposite can read, he will see that the incidents actually happened on 28th November and not after 8th December. There are, I accept... it is a matter of fact that there are incidents post 8th December. It is a matter of fact.

1625 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, you see, but of course, I accept that if you are dealing only with one child, then it is absolutely correct to say the incidents in relation to that child commenced on 28th November and they continued and you have 12 to 15 other incidents under her watch. What I am saying is, do all the incidents in relation to all the children that appear to be involved, commence on 28th November, or do some of them in relation to some children commence afterwards on her watch?

1630 Hon. Chief Minister: This information has no partisan political value, I assure him. The only thing he is doing, by pressing us further, is to put us in a position where we may say something which may inadvertently identify a child.

Hon. J J Bossano: It has already.

1635 Hon. Chief Minister: I ask him to please do as he said he would, which is not press us further and, when Question Time is over, the hon. Lady will give him the information behind the Speaker's chair. That is the only issue.

1640 Hon. J J Netto: If I may ask another supplementary question.
The hon. Lady stated earlier on that, as a result of this incident, or perhaps some other incident, that this was what triggered bringing Alan Benn to do this particular course. Despite that, can she also state whether, as a result of the incident, quite apart from the training course, the Care Agency has introduced any changes in respect... to the practices where the incident took place, or in relation to this child or the people involved in the incident with this child?

1645 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I can be of assistance, the very manner in which the hon. Gentleman has phrased his question leads us to this issue of potentially identifying a child. So can they please, just on this issue, even if they give us no quarter for the next four years on issues which relate to children, can they please just accept that we are not saying we are not going to give them the information. We are going to give them the information behind the Speaker's chair.

1650 If they take the view, when we give them the information behind the Speaker's chair, that they want to issue a press release and break the confidentiality in which that information is provided, because they say that there is no reason for it to have been confidential and they do not care, in their judgement, whether making it public is going to affect the child in any way because it may be identified, is a matter for them and they will answer to the electorate on it. But on this issue, if they give us no quarter on anything else, because in our judgement it affects potentially identifying a child, can they please just leave it there.

1655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, We are going to leave it there but I have to say that we do not agree. We do not accept their judgement for the reasons I have already expressed.

1660 Mr Speaker: May I permit myself a supplementary? The first two incidents referred to: is the date correct? They talk of January. That is what my copy says, anyway.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, and mine does as well, Mr Speaker. Those are the figures.

1665 Mr Speaker: I am just wondering whether... Anyway...

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, those are the figures that have been provided to me –

1670 Mr Speaker: I will not press the Minister on that.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – by management, Mr Speaker.

Care Agency monthly Expenditure Returns
From September 2011

Clerk: Question 47, the Hon. J J Netto.

1680

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services provide a copy of the monthly expenditure returns report from the Care Agency to the Financial Secretary commencing from September 2011 to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, you may recall that this is the same question as Question 13 that was asked to the Hon. Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment yesterday, and our answer is the same, that is, that this is a matter that we were not aware of until the question was posed to us and is something that is being considered.

Hon. J J Netto: Is the hon. Lady aware that, as a result of the discussion yesterday, the Chief Minister said that they will discuss the matter further and they will give it further consideration?

1695

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: That is what I have just said, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry?

1700

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: This question is the same as Question 13 yesterday, Mr Speaker, and my answer to the question is the same as the answer that the Hon. the Chief Minister gave yesterday.

Discrimination legislation Scope and application

1705

Clerk: Question 48, the Hon. J J Netto.

1710

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Equality state what the proposed legislation to protect people from discrimination will contain, what types of discrimination will it cover, and whether such law will apply to all residents, regardless of whether Gibraltarian, European or non-European, and by when?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1715

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Government will start by conducting an audit to identify areas which do not protect individuals from discrimination. Once identified, we will be in a position to identify the scope and nature of the legislative programme.

1720

Hon. J J Netto: Despite the process that the hon. Lady has outlined, does she have any idea of any current areas that she thinks are not being covered by current legislation?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, this is our position at the moment, a month and a half into Government.

Although I have ideas, I will not be entering into that position today.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Lady, this is something that, once again, entered into the opposite Members' manifesto. Surely, Mr Speaker, it is not unreasonable to ask that if it had entered the manifesto, because they had identified an area which is not currently legislated as far as discrimination, it is not unreasonable for me to ask whether the hon. Lady knows that particular area, in order to legislate accordingly.

1730 So, does the hon. Lady know of any particular area that triggered the inclusion of that aim within the manifesto?

1735 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady, the Hon. the Chief Minister, the hon. the Members on this side of the House, all of us have, in our experience in the preparation of the manifesto and in our political careers and outside of our political careers, our own views about these issues. What we are not going to do is give him our own views about these issues today.

1740 I would have thought that this is something that, again, should not find great controversy on the floor of this House. All we want to do is to conduct an audit so that we all understand the areas objectively – not subjectively – that create the opportunities for discrimination in our laws and to people of all different characteristics which may give rise to those discriminations.

1745 Our position is that we are not going to share with the hon. Gentleman today our personal views or opinions on the subject. We are going to do the audit. Once the audit is out, it will be a public thing. They will have an opportunity to question us on the things that are in the audit and the things that are not in the audit. It is not as if we are going to attempt to conduct this in private.

If he wants to say to me, 'Once you have conducted the audit are you going to publish it? Are you going to share it with all of us?' Yes, the answer is, 'Yes, we are going to share that, we are going to publish it.'

If he reads just our section in the manifesto on disability, we think that there are discriminations there, but to ask us for just our general views on the subject, frankly I do not think is going to advance the matter.

1750 The hon. Gentleman has been elected to Opposition and therefore he has the obligation to hold us to account on these issues. I think he has got, in our first meeting, a commitment that we are going to publish this audit so that we can progress it. That is probably as far as we are going to take it today.

1755 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Chief Minister, he can do all the audit he wants, but what it stated in the manifesto, and I am quoting word for word:

'We will legislate to protect people fully from discrimination.'

1760 Their manifesto does not say, 'When in Government, or if in Government, we will do an audit.' So presumably, just like day follows night, at the time when they drafted this manifesto they must have known some areas where they think there is a vacuum, as far as the legislation is concerned. So what I am asking them is at the time they drafted this, what was it that they thought was missing?

1765 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, at the time that we drafted this manifesto, we were all, at that stage, not even Members of the House, so the hon. Gentleman cannot ask us questions about what we thought at the time that we drafted the manifesto. He can ask us what we think today, and I have told him that I do not want to start giving opinions of each of the Members on this side of the House as to what we think will end up in that audit report. It is coming, it is going to be shared, it will involve our views as Ministers and Members of the Government. It can include their views, as Members of the Opposition, it can include the views of anyone who wishes to participate in the audit and it will be published and shared, but what we are not here to do, Mr Speaker, is to give opinions on what we thought when we were drafting our manifesto.

1770 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the Hon. the Chief Minister, he is merely waffling. Can the Hon. the Chief Minister at least enlighten this House about this: will it include the adoption of children by gay couples?

1775 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it may, if that is a discrimination which the audit identifies should be on it; it may not, if the audit does not identify that it will be on it.

1780 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Hon. Chief Minister think that it ought to be on it? Does he think that there is discrimination in regard to gay couples in relation to the adoption of children?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, it is obvious that he does not want to answer the question.

1785 Mr Speaker: I would ask the hon. Members to refrain from having a parting shot. Question Time is about asking questions.

Hon. J J Netto: I agree.

1790 Mr Speaker: Well, it was a parting shot from the hon. Member without a question... Anyway, next question, please.

1795

Civil partnerships
Recognition and entitlement to benefits

Clerk: Question 49, the Hon. J J Netto.

1800 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the comments by the hon. Members in their manifesto with regard to civil partnerships, will the Minister for Equality state when it is intended to legislate for the recognition of civil partnerships, regardless of gender or sexual orientation, and whether this would bring entitlement to housing and Social Security benefits?

1805 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this is a commitment that will be implemented in this term of office.

1810 Hon. J J Netto: Will she, which is part of the question... She has not answered the other part of the question, whether this will be an entitlement to those people to housing and Social Security benefits.

1815 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will refer the hon. Gentleman opposite to the manifesto, and the Government will make an announcement when the legislation is in draft for consultation with the community as a Command Paper.

1820 Hon. J J Netto: Is the hon. Lady aware, perhaps, Mr Speaker, that at the moment there may be some Social Security benefits which, obviously, are not entitled to people who may form, later on during the course of this parliament, civil partnerships?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, but... Yes, Mr Speaker.

1825 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Lady have any view as to whether granting homosexuals the right to a civil partnership without granting them the right to adopt children makes civil partnerships meaningless? Does she have any view of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago.

1830 Mr Speaker: There is also a Standing Order which deals with asking of opinions.

A Member: Absolutely.

1835 Mr Speaker: If the hon. Member accepts my word for it, I will leave it at that; otherwise, I will have to look for it. (Interjection) I beg your pardon? (Interjection) There is a specific Standing Order against that.

Hon. D A Feetham: It will just require a rephrasing of the question to say does the Government have any policy in that regard.

Mr Speaker: There we are.

1840

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, on a supplementary question, I think the hon. Lady, in her first answer, said that they intend to introduce civil partnerships during this period of parliament, which is a very vague answer to give.

1845

Could she perhaps be more precise in that particular answer, and whether she can say whether it will be perhaps within the next 12 months or the next 24 months, or the next 36 months? Could she give an indication whether this is the kind of legislation that the Government will prioritise, or perhaps will not?

1850

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may just assist the hon. Gentleman for this and future sessions of the House, our manifesto contains commitments which are timed and it contains commitments which are not timed.

In respect of those which are timed, we will comply with the timings that we have set out in our manifesto. It may be that if we slip up with any of those timings, they will have an opportunity to chastise us for it on behalf of the community, and those which are not timed, Mr Speaker, we will have to comply with in the period of the four years.

Whether we choose, or are able, to comply with them earlier or later will be a matter on which, no doubt, there will be much debate in the community, but it is not a question on which we are going to allow the hon. Gentlemen to push us. They will recall that, in previous parliaments, we were told that we were not going to be allowed to be timekeepers for the then Government. In the areas where we have given specific dated appointments they are free to be the timekeepers; in those where we have not, I am afraid that we are not going to allow them to hold us to a timetable which we set on the hoof.

1860

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can, at the very least, the Chief Minister tell us whether this is a particular commitment which is timed, or one of those that is not timed?

1865

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if it were timed, there would be a time for it in the manifesto. If there is not a time for it in the manifesto, it is one of those that is not timed.

1870

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Chief Minister answer this: the manifesto says that regardless of gender or sexual orientation, people will be allowed to enter into civil partnerships. I presume what that means is civil partnerships will apply to homosexual couples, whether they are women or men; or is it the policy of the Government that they will allow some kind of civil partnership to, say, for example, a brother and a sister who live in the same house for years and years and may wish to enter into a form of agreement so that, when one passes away, for example, the other inherits property, tenancies etc?

1875

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government will be set out when we issue a Command Paper on the subject, given this matter deals with amending legislation for the purpose set out in that paragraph of our manifesto.

1880

Clubhouse for Special Olympics Committee
Site for construction

Clerk: Question 50, the Hon. J J Netto.

1885

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government state if they have a site earmarked for the construction of a clubhouse for the Special Olympic Committee, as stated in their manifesto and, if so, when will work start and finish; or is it that they have identified an existing empty Government property and, if so, which of the two options is it and what is the cost involved?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1895 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the manifesto commitment is not to construct a clubhouse for the Special Olympics. The construction of a clubhouse is an option which is open to Government or, alternatively, an existing building can be provided for this purpose. A site has not yet been identified. This is a matter that needs to be assessed and shall be provided in this term of office.

1900 Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital
Date of completion

Clerk: Question 51, the Hon. J J Netto.

1905 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide the date of completion for the Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1910 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the previous administration were first given a completion date of October 2011 for a 66-bed dementia unit and a 40-place day centre. These plans were then revised by the previous administration in April 2011 for a 90-bed unit. Then again, in May-June 2011, the plans were revised because the facilities available were not appropriate and sufficient for the 90 residents and, at this time, the completion date was advanced to March 2012 for an 80-bed dementia unit with a day centre being a new build later without a firm date being contained in the plans.

1915 Mr Speaker, we were called to office on 9th December. On 13th December, I went on a site visit to the Alzheimer's and Dementia unit and I was advised by the contractors on site that the completion date for the site, on the basis of the existing plans by the previous administration, was June 2012. It must also be borne in mind that this would be the date of completion and handover of an empty building, and not the date that it would be furnished and equipped. That would have to be commenced by Government once in possession of the building.

1920 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if she has gone to site and she has asked somebody on the site as to the completion date, and that particular person, whoever that particular person happened to be, told her June, that simply does not square up with information that was available to us in relation to our plans. In relation to our plans it was April.

1925 I can understand, like all construction work on most sites, as far as history is concerned, gets delayed, but the date which we had, the latest date which we had, was April. She now seems to be saying that it is not April, that it is June. If the date is not now April and it is now June, is this due to the fact that the plans have been changed, or is it because one of those particular construction projects... that when the new Government came in, they decided temporarily to stop it just in order to know what was going on?

1930 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as at 13th December, the envisaged completion date told to me by the contractors on site and the Managing Director of Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Ltd is, and he tells me always has been, June or July 2012. Further, he tells me that March 2012 was a fanciful date and never a realistic date.

1935 It has never been the case that, on the basis of the current plans, completion of the Alzheimer's and Dementia unit would have been ready for March or April 2012. I can confirm, Mr Speaker, that there is no delay on account of the present Government because works have not stopped.

1940 Having said that, when I attended the Alzheimer's and Dementia unit on 13th December, I was very, very concerned by what I saw. My advice is that the unit is not fit for purpose. What we have now done, Mr Speaker, is engage proper consultants in relation to an Alzheimer's and Dementia unit. We are awaiting feedback from them.

1945 As the hon. Member, the Minister for Health and the Environment, said this morning, there was a multidisciplinary meeting on 4th January. We are now working from there but, having said that, works have not stopped. The people on site have been redeployed to ensure that, if there are any changes, this will not result in any delay, but what we have to bear in mind is that there have been changes to the site four times already and this, I am told, has resulted in an incredible delay, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do not deny the fact that the GJBS may have told her that... I think she said in May... No, in June, that it is going to be June. But the same people that have been talking to her have been the same people who have been talking to us, and I can tell her that the expected date of termination of our project, when we started, was April.

1955

I am glad to hear that the plans are moving ahead. What she needs to be aware of... and I am not necessarily saying that GJBS may wish to prolong the project but it is not unusual for contractors to prolong projects. It is a fact that that is what they told us – it was going to be April – and what she needs to realise is that if it was April for us by GJBS, the contractor does not unnecessarily add extra cost by delaying the project now.

1960

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, that is not a question, but when I attended the Alzheimer's and Dementia unit on 13th December, it was absolutely clear to me that that construction site would not be ready and fit for purpose for March or April, or May, for that matter, of 2012.

1965

Had the hon. Gentleman visited the site before 8th December – or on 8th December or the 7th – he, too, would have come to the same conclusion, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Is there a question? (Interjection)

No, it is not a debate. I allowed the last statement, but I think we must make the assumption where any Member stands up and makes a statement and sits down, we must assume there are no further questions.

1970

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask a question?

Mr Speaker: Yes, sure.

1975

Hon. D A Feetham: She said there were changes to the site. Just so I understand it, what changes to the site? She said there had been changes to the site. What changes to the site have been made since she has been elected as a Government Minister?

1980

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, I have not made any changes to the site. Changes to the site had been made by the previous Government, Mr Speaker, and I am happy to outline them.

The initial proposal for the Alzheimer's and Dementia unit, Mr Speaker, was proposed in April 2010. The first plans were dated July 2010 for a 58-bed dementia unit, an eight-bed young physically disabled unit and a 41-person day centre. In March 2011, the bed capacity was increased to 80, with the loss of the young persons' disabled unit and the day centre. In April 2011, Mr Speaker, the bed capacity increased to 90 beds.

Then, Mr Speaker, we understand that there were great concerns by senior management in the Care Agency because of the lack of recreational space and generally it was felt that the place was totally inadequate to meet the needs of the intended service user, and by the end of May 2011, or June, the bed capacity was once again reduced to 80.

1990

Those were the changes that I was referring to, and that is my answer to the hon. Gentleman's question.

Hon. D A Feetham: So there are no changes to the site.

What is the need, so that I can understand it, for engaging what she describes as 'proper consultants' since she became a Government Minister?

1995

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, the obvious need is because no medical clinical consultants in the design of this building have ever been engaged. This is an Alzheimer's and Dementia unit, Mr Speaker, where a room needs to accommodate people who, once admitted, will probably not leave, and that will be their home. That room needs to include a bed, a wardrobe, an armchair and a hoist, Mr Speaker. As the plans currently stand, that is not possible; therefore, the place is not fit for purpose.

What we are doing is we will now consult, and we have had names of clinical architects in this field by several people, including the Alzheimer's and Dementia Group, which we are told by them have never been consulted in this project, and what we want to do, Mr Speaker, is ensure that, given the amount of money that is being spent on the project and given the user group which it is targeted to accommodate, we will make sure that this project is fit for purpose.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has said that there are no changes to the site that have been made or envisaged since she has become a Government Minister. She now says that she needs experts because of beds and hoists and wardrobes.

2010

What do beds, hoists and wardrobes have to do with the construction of the Dementia Unit?

Hon. Chief Minister: Hoists might not fit in the bedrooms. It does not take a rocket scientist to work that one out.

2015

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Because the construction –

Hon. D A Feetham: If the Hon. the Chief Minister wants to stand up and answer the question on behalf of the hon. Lady, then of course he can, but the point is –

2020

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I want to stand up and answer a question on behalf of the hon. Lady I can and I will and I do not need to be invited by a Gentleman who needs to realise that he is now in Opposition and not in Government.

Mr Speaker: The Minister was answering the question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Exactly.

Mr Speaker: As is customary in this Parliament, we often have remarks said in depositions, but –

2030

A Member: In every single Parliament.

Mr Speaker: I have not spent much time in other parliaments.
The Hon. Minister, please continue.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the construction of the unit includes the construction of the rooms and our concern is that the size of the rooms may not be appropriate. Therefore, what we have done, in order not to delay the project, is that the construction workers have been redeployed elsewhere on site to make sure that there is no delay while we consult on the actual layout of the internal construction, and once the consultation process is complete, then we will reconsider the position, Mr Speaker, but it is part of the construction.

2040

The construction of a wall is part of the construction, and it was made by the same construction workers who are painting the façade of the building. The façade of the building is ready. The façade of the building was ready before the Election, Mr Speaker.

2045

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, on a small point of order, the hon. Lady stated that there had been no consultation with the Dementia and Alzheimer's Association.

Hon. G H Licudi: She had been told that.

2050

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I had been told by them.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, on that point of order, the precise words of the hon. Lady were that she had been told, not that there was none, but she had been told.

Perhaps the hon. Member –

Hon. J J Netto: For the sake of accuracy and for the record, she can go to her PA – who was my PA – and she can produce the minutes of the meetings that I had personally with the Alzheimer's and Dementia Association, for which they were consulted.

Mr Speaker: There is no point of order there.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman because that helps to clarify what may be a position that has been, according to the hon. Member, misrepresented to the hon. Lady, and I am grateful to him extending to the hon. Lady access to his files in respect of that particular minute that he has identified, which she would otherwise not have access to, and we are grateful for the opportunity to see that minute.

Hon. J J Netto: I have not said that I am giving access to my files.
The Chief Minister is misinterpreting what I have said. What I have said (Interjection) is the minutes.

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman – I do not want him to think that I am suggesting access to the file. Access to the file to see that minute is what the hon. Gentleman said, and I am thanking him for access to the minute which is in the file.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, they do not need access to the file. All she needs is to press the button on the keyboard of the PA to get the minutes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am sorry to tell the hon. Gentleman that is not the way that a change of Government works.

The fact that there may be an electronic Word version on his ex-PA's machine of a file note that has been printed, or a minute that has been printed, and put in his file does not mean that we can access it just because it is in the computer. It would be improper to give us access to that document if we should not otherwise have got access to it because it has been bundled as one of the files that relate to his Government and his time in office.

We are grateful that he is saying that we can have access to that minute. Whether his PA gives us access to the minute by pressing 'Print' and giving us a fresh printout of the document or whether she gives us access to it by giving us a photocopy of the minute that is in the file, either way I am grateful that he is giving us access to it because, from what he is saying, a position has been misrepresented to the hon. Lady –

Hon. G H Licudi: May have been.

Hon. Chief Minister: May have been misrepresented to the hon. Lady and we should get to the bottom of it. I am grateful that he is giving us access to the minute.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: So the position is this: that there might be a need to change the internal layout of the Dementia unit, but no decision as to whether there is going to be a change in the internal layout of the Dementia unit has been taken, and even if there is an alteration of the internal layout of the Dementia unit, the Government still expects the Dementia unit to be completed by June. Is that the position?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: In principle, yes. In principle.

Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital Extra personnel requirements

Clerk: Question 52, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the Government have available the new extra personnel requirements for the new Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital from their senior management and, if so, could it be provided to this House, showing a breakdown of the grades of persons to be employed and by when?

2115 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

2120 The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the personnel requirements for the above are now being compiled by senior management. Given the numerous changes to bed capacity made by the previous Government, senior management are now having to revise the staffing requirements once again.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, when will the hon. Lady be in a position to get the requirement from the senior management? Does she have an idea whether we are talking about weeks or perhaps months?

2125 The reason why I am asking is because if we are now working towards a deadline of June, recruiting people takes time, so the sooner this process starts the better, leading to the people being recruited and the Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital starting to provide its services. Does she have any inclination or idea when she will be getting the figures from the senior management?

2130 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, this is something which is underway which I have asked to be prioritised, and I understand I will be getting it very shortly.

By the same token, Mr Speaker, I would like to remind the hon. Gentleman opposite that, in December, when the previous Government were under the impression that the unit would be completed by March, these plans were not in place.

2135 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, when we heard, by the contractors, that the completion was going to be in April, I instructed senior management to prepare the requirement before we left office. I think it was in November, from the top... So the point I am trying to make, without trying to score any cheap party political points is, if she is talking about... that she will get it soon, when is soon? Is it likely to be in a week or a month? (Interjections)

2140 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: 'Soon' means soon, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

2145 I am told that there has been sufficient progress made on these matters. I think they are being reviewed, so I think literally 'soon' means soon. I could probably have an estimate, if not a final product, in the next couple of weeks. Of course, we need to review it properly. Everything needs to be given due consideration, Mr Speaker, but we are confident that we will be able to identify the staffing requirements and, of course, be able to recruit and train in plenty of time in advance of the unit being open.

2150 Hon. J J Netto: Will the hon. Lady, once she has the requirement by the senior management, be able to provide me with a copy so that I can be in a position to see what the skill mix of people for recruitment will be?

2155 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the answer is no, and an announcement as to recruitment will be made at the appropriate time.

Alzheimer's and Dementia Day Hospital Projected completion date

2160 Clerk: Question 53, the Hon. J J Netto.

2165 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that the day hospital for sufferers of Alzheimer's and Dementia at the site of the old Royal Naval Hospital is going ahead and, if so, when will its projected completion date be and the range of services that will be provided therein?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

2170 The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, insofar as the day centre at the old RNH hospital, it is anticipated that this is going ahead. However, I need to make it clear that no construction on this has commenced and no completion date is available. A review of the services required will be undertaken to establish the needs of the service users so as to ensure that we can provide a facility that is fit for purpose and meets the needs of the service users.

2175 Hon. J J Netto: I do not understand that, Mr Speaker, because she is quite right that the works have not started yet, but even though the work has not started yet for the day hospital, which she is calling the day centre, we did have ideas of the range of different types of services that we would incorporate within the day hospital. We are talking about physiotherapy services, speech therapies, memory clinics, things of that kind. Does she have any idea herself, in relation to the discussion that she may have had with the senior management, as to what elements of services will be provided therein?

2180 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, because this is a matter that was given a lot of consideration in the multi-disciplinary meeting that I held with my colleague, the Hon. Minister for Health and the Environment.

2185 What I have to say in relation to the proposed plan that existed for the day hospital, or the day centre... and, in fact, it is important because one of the issues at that multi-disciplinary meeting was the issue as to whether it should be a day hospital or a day centre, because there is a distinction. The plan for that has changed and we have changed that immediately because the original plan was for a one-story lightweight structure and it is immediately apparent that that is not big enough and able to service the needs of the community. We are, however, still working on this feature, both in terms of design and in terms of the facilities that will be provided in that unit.

2190 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I accept that the plans will change. I am not querying that. All I am asking for is whether she has an idea of the type of services, whatever the plans may be in the future, in terms of services that will be provided.

2195 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may answer this part of the question, or this particular supplementary, because we are working very closely together. We have set up an inter-ministerial team at all levels of all the professionals – which includes care workers, includes occupational therapists, includes nurses and includes doctors – to give us an idea – more than an idea, to give us an indication, a plan – of what that day centre/hospital would require.

2200 It is something which we feel is even more important than the previous administration felt. We want to increase the services it can provide and we are not in a position at this point in time to give further details, but there is actively a team working hard on the matter.

Alzheimer's and Dementia respite home
Services, cost and when available

2210 Clerk: Question 54, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government specify to whom will they make available funds to provide a respite home for Alzheimer's and Dementia sufferers, what services will they provide therein, what will the cost involve and by when will this be available?

2215 Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, an assessment to provide a respite home to those in need of it has been started to determine the level of need and the services that will be provided.

2220 The Care Agency are working in conjunction with the Gibraltar Health Authority. It is too early to say what the cost of this will be.

2225 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Lady at least specify whether these new services will be provided by the Care Agency or by, perhaps, the private sector?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Not at this stage, Mr Speaker. We will conduct an assessment first and then assess the cost. We will then assess who the provider of the service will be.

Alzheimer's and Dementia sufferers home care
Resources and support available

2235 Clerk: Question 55, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government specify what resources and support will it provide to sufferers of Alzheimer's and Dementia for home care, the cost involved and by when will it be available?

2240 Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, as I said in reply to the earlier question, we are now conducting an audit and assessment into domiciliary care. This will, of course, include sufferers of Alzheimer's and Dementia.

2245 Phase 1 will be to identify what aspects of help individuals require in their homes. As in my answer to Question 38, phase 2 of the study will be the cost, and phase 3 will be to identify who will provide the service.

Debilitating Unit at old Royal Naval Hospital
Date of completion

2250 Clerk: Question 56, the Hon. J J Netto.

2255 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide the date of completion for the Debilitating Unit under construction at the site of the old Naval Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

2260 The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there is no Debilitating Unit under construction.

2265 Initially, the previous administration, I understand, mooted that a particular building at the RNH site be earmarked for GHA medical nursing staff accommodation. However, this was then changed to a building to be used for physically disabled adults. I am informed that the Care Agency was shown feasibility plans in July 2011 and a request was made to revise these due to lack of facilities available and wheelchair access on these plans for people with disabilities.

We understand that there has been no further communication and that these plans... or that these plans were revised or approved by the previous administration.

2270 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, as far as my recollection is concerned, obviously, as far as progress on the work was being carried out or spearheaded by number 6 Convent Place. (Laughter)

As far as I am aware, we did have also a completion date for April/May. So I am bit surprised to hear, if I understood the hon. Lady correctly, that no work has taken place in what used to be the administration block. Is that what she is saying, that no work has been done?

2275 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: If the hon. Gentleman is referring to block E at the RNH site, then no, no work has been done, Mr Speaker.

When I visited the site on 13th December, I was told by the contractors that the use of that site had not yet been identified and, in fact, neither a commencement date nor a completion date had been given to us by GJBS. So, no, the matter is not under construction as far as I am advised.

2280

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I will have to explore this later, so I will leave it for another occasion.

2285

Debilitating Unit
Extra personnel requirements

Clerk: Question 57, the Hon. J J Netto.

2290

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that Question 57 is a follow-up of the previous one, I will withdraw it at this moment in time.

2295

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Independent living complex, old St Bernard's Hospital
Date of completion

2300

Clerk: Question 58, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state what is the expected date of completion of the independent living complex at the old Mackintosh Wing of the old St Bernard's Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I am informed, through GJBS Limited, that the estimated completion date is April 2012.

Hon. J J Netto: Given the answer the hon. Gentleman has given, that the completion date is April, will the Government continue to provide the services for independent living for the elderly in that particular building?

2315

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 59 –

Mr Speaker: I think the hon. Member wants to put a question.

Hon. J J Netto: Given that April is not a date which is too far away, does the hon. Member know whether there will be any requirements for, perhaps, recruitment? In other words, if the building is going to be managed more or less like Bishop Canilla, for instance – as he is aware, we have a caretaker service – so what I am asking, basically, is it going to be in the same model as Bishop Canilla where we have a caretaker service and, if so, whether there will be a need for recruitment to provide that service?

2325

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will need notice of that question, Mr Speaker. I have answered the question.

2330

Government housing blocks
Rolling programme of lift installation

2335 Clerk: Question 59, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state whether the present Government will continue with the previous Government's rolling programme of lift installation in Government housing blocks; and, if so, which blocks are earmarked for this year?

2340 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2345 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, the Government is committed to the provision of lifts in Government housing wherever this is practically possible to install. Insofar, or as to which blocks will be tackled this year, I can tell the House that options are currently being considered.

Hon. J J Netto: When the hon. Gentleman says this year, he means in this financial year or this calendar year?

2350 Hon. C A Bruzon: I have said, this year.

The Hon. J J Netto: Which?

2355 Hon. C A Bruzon: I have not been informed as to whether it refers to the calendar year or to any other type of year. So this year I assume refers to 2012.

2360 Hon. J J Netto: The reason why I am asking the question, Mr Speaker, because I can understand that with reading what is left of this financial year, he may not have the provision to make a commencement of any particular lift installation in any of the Government housing. So, therefore, he may wish to use the remainder of this financial year to be able to determine and take a decision once the commencement of the new financial year takes place and they can programme the lifts. This is the reason I have asked.

So is it that they are waiting, doing the deliberation right now, so that works on lift installation can start from the beginning of the next financial year?

2365 Hon. C A Bruzon: Regrettably, Mr Speaker, I cannot answer the question exactly, so I will find out and let the hon. Member know.

2370 Disabled housing programme
Costs and implementation

Clerk: Question 60, the Hon. J J Netto.

2375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state what is the housing programme for disabled persons and their families as stated in their manifesto, by showing the site or sites earmarked, the number of flats to be made available, the costs associated with the project and the start and completion dates of this programme?

2380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2385 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member will be aware, the Housing Department has, in the past, and will continue, to supply provision for disabled persons and their families with support from the Gibraltar Health Authority's Occupational Therapist. In addition, our plans for affordable housing will be inclusive of the needs of the disabled, and further details will be publicised accordingly and in due course.

Hon. J J Netto: So, basically, what he is saying is that this manifesto commitment will be honoured in the context when they do new housing projects. Is that what he is saying?

2390 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Housing Waiting List as at 9th December 2011
Breakdown of flat requirements

Clerk: Question 61. The Hon. E J Reyes.

2400 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants were on the Housing Waiting Lists as on 9th December 2011, giving a breakdown of their flat requirements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2405 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will answer this question, together with Question 62.

Up to date Housing Waiting List
Breakdown of flat requirements

2410

Clerk: Question 62.

2415 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants are on the Housing Waiting Lists, as up to date as possible, giving a breakdown of their flat requirements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2420 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): As the Usher hands over to the Members opposite some simple statistics, I will, however, vocalise just the basic aspect of the answer to the question. A total of 962 applicants were on the Housing Waiting Lists as on 9th December 2011 – the details are on those sheets.

In answer to Question 62, a total of 956 applicants were on the Housing Waiting Lists as on 13th January 2012.

2425 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister be able to confirm that he still intends to keep to his election pledge that the applicants on the Housing Waiting Lists, as on 9th December, would be offered suitable housing before the next General Election?

2430 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is indeed our intention.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister, at this early stage, have any idea where the construction of new houses, that I suppose will be needed to cater for these needs, will take place?

2435 Hon. C A Bruzon: I am not in a position to give you that information. It will be publicised in due course.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the Minister then, more specifically leading to Question 62, which he has chosen to answer together... anyone putting their names down on the Housing Lists after 9th December would be given a suitable flat within three years of their registration for housing?

2440 Hon. C A Bruzon: We will try our hardest, most certainly, to achieve that. Yes, Mr Speaker.

2445 Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, does it not deduce mathematically from there that if you put your name down on the Housing List any time before 9th December, the allocation date for housing could be any time within four years; yet if you put your name down for housing, say, on 12th December, the deadline happens to be less because it then cuts down to three years? So those who were on the list before 9th December might actually have a year longer to wait than those who put their names down afterwards.

Hon. C A Bruzon: There is an element of hair splitting here, Mr Speaker. We will do our best to provide homes for everybody on the Housing Waiting Lists.

2450 Hon. E J Reyes: And priority will be given as and when you put your name down and not in respect of a particular type of flat? One, I assume, will continue a system of accumulating points and so on. In that case then, a sort of limited pecking order, if one wants to call it that, would be according to the chronological date of your application.

2455 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the system is extremely complicated.

2460 We will do our best using whatever gift of wisdom the Good Lord has given the Housing Manager to allocate homes in the fairest possible way; but the system is complicated, as the Member will appreciate, because there are a whole range of different kinds of lists, social categories and medical categories. I would love to concentrate more, not so much on the exact three-year, four-year, but in doing our utmost to provide homes for our people as efficiently and as quickly as possible.

Housing from the homeless
Applications to Housing Authority

2470 Clerk: Question 63, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with by the Housing Authority?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2475 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, a total of 25 applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with by the Housing Authority.

2480 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister able to say at this stage the priority or what sort of system he has implemented to expedite the allocation of suitable premises for these persons, seeing that they are actually homeless?

2485 Hon. C A Bruzon: Homelessness does not always necessarily mean that somebody does not have a roof over his or her head. Some people have been described by the previous administration as 'technically' homeless.

The reality is, Mr Speaker, that we, again, are doing our best to address all these issues with the greatest possible wisdom and it is not always easy to determine exactly what yardstick to use because the truth is that there are many, many genuine people in Gibraltar with real human problems and I have not been able, as yet, to identify sufficient homes to cater for all the needs of people on the waiting lists, social lists, A-lists, medical and so forth.

2490 These 25 people who are categorised as homeless, have to be included with a whole range of social cases – social categories As. In fact, these 25 form part of the social category applicants that we have got. Again, we are doing our best to serve our people well and to provide homes for them as soon as possible.

2495 Hon. E J Reyes: So, then, Mr Speaker, am I right in deducing from there that they are being considered along with those on the social category, that these applicants do not need to go onto any pre-lists to then be passed onto the Housing List or anything, but are being treated distinctly from a normal applicant.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Sorry, I do not think I have understood the question, Mr Speaker.

2500 Hon. E J Reyes: What I am getting at is that these homeless persons, on application for housing, do not have to go through the process of a normal person who is not classified as 'homeless', who first goes onto the pre-list to then pass on onto the other Housing List?

2505 Hon. C A Bruzon: I am really not sure what you mean, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Reyes: Alright. Let me see if I can explain better, Mr Speaker.

2510 A routine applicant for housing, on applying to the Housing Department, is first placed on the pre-list and then moves onto the Housing List proper. (Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes.) Then, am I... I am just double checking myself, have I understood the Minister correctly, in that those who are homeless do not need to go onto the pre-list, but are being considered alongside those of the social housing category?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I understand now, yes.

2515 If anybody is assessed by the Housing Authority to be homeless, they will obviously... an attempt will be made to fast track them, because they are on a special list which the Housing Allocation Committee or, rarely, maybe the Minister himself can determine these are genuine social cases, homeless in this case, and therefore we have to do our best to help them as soon as possible.

2520 Housing Allocation Committee
Number of meetings since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 64, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2525 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many times the Housing Allocation Committee has met since 9th December last?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2530 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Housing Allocation Committee has met once since 9th December – that was just last Monday – and they should be meeting a second time this year on Monday, after the weekend.

2535 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may ask a supplementary question because it has been many, many years now since I used to be the Housing Minister. When the Hon. Minister says the Housing Allocation Committee has met, whatever number of times it has met and whatever date it has met, under the current arrangements does it mean that the Housing Allocation Committee incorporates what used to be in the old days, the Medical Committee and the Social Committee within the Housing Allocation Committee? In other words, that there is now no longer to be meetings of the Medical Committee. Is that correct, Mr Speaker?

2540 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is correct.

2545 Allocation of homes since 9th December 2011
Number and by which authority

Clerk: Question 65, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2550 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many homes have been allocated since 9th December, indicating whether these homes have been allocated by the Housing Allocation Committee or by any other authority?

2555 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 29 homes have been allocated since 9th December 2011, two of which have been allocated by another authority.

2560 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to say who was the other authority?

Hon. C A Bruzon: The other Authority was the previous Housing Minister, that is one of them, and I authorised the allocation of the other. This is a case that came over from the previous administration and I saw a note that the previous Housing Minister was recommending that this person should be allocated the home and I approved that recommendation myself.

2565 Hon. E J Reyes: I am much obliged to the Hon. Minister, having kept to that commitment. Thank you.

2570 Government tenants
Number of homes requiring work done

Clerk: Question 66, the Hon. E J Reyes.

2575 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many Government tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done in their homes by the landlord?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2580 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 67.

2585

Housing Agency
Number of jobs outstanding

Clerk: Question 67.

2590

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs are currently listed as requiring the attention of the Housing Agency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2595

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): In answer to Question 66, a total of 1,512 Government tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done in their homes by the landlord.

In answer to Question 67, a total of 876 jobs are currently listed as requiring the attention of the Housing Works Agency.

2600

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Minister can enlighten me, if it is that 1,512 tenants require works to be done, how can the number of jobs be less than the number of tenants who require jobs to be done? There must be some numbers that fitted, perhaps, into some other category.

2605

Hon. C A Bruzon: The Housing Works Agency usually looks after internal repairs. There are tenants who are still awaiting external repairs to be done.

Hon. E J Reyes: Am I correct in assuming those external is the balance remaining between those figures?

(Hon. C A Bruzon: Sorry?) Yes? The number of external works requiring to be done can be arrived at by subtracting one figure from the other.

2610

Hon. C A Bruzon: I really am not sure, Mr Speaker. I would not like to say yes, without being sure.

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, and there is no great hurry for the answer either, I mean, Mr Speaker. So perhaps the Hon. Minister at some other stage can be pass on the information when he has been able to get it from his technical advisers and so on.

Can I also ask the Hon. Minister, when we have tenants who require works, if some... I am going to give him perhaps a bit of a hypothetical example – if some of the tenants happen to be elderly citizens, perhaps residents of Bishop Canilla House or Albert Risso House, does the Housing Department, the Housing Ministry in itself, try to prioritise that for senior citizens who tend to be more concerned and their lives are far more easily disrupted when they have got pending repairs to be done at home?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Absolutely, yes, Mr Speaker.

2625

Hon. J J Netto: Could he then clarify that, to my understanding, the works in Bishop Canilla, and I am not quite sure about Albert Risso House, are not done by the Housing Works Agency, they are done by GJBS. Is that not the case?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, that is correct, actually. Yes, that is correct.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a further supplementary question? Within the figures that the Hon. the Minister for Housing has given us, would that include elderly people awaiting a shower to be fitted in their flats?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I would need notice of that question, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Does the hon. Member, if he doesn't mind, look to see whether it does include elderly people awaiting showers to be fitted and, if so, how many in total please? I mean, not that he necessarily has the information there, but I mean if he has not got the information there, whether at some later date he can obtain the information and just pass it over?

2640 Hon. C A Bruzon: I would be grateful if you would put a request in writing so that it can go through my staff. If I say yes now, I may not do it, through simple lack of memory or... If you write to me, through my staff, I definitely will give you the information, Mr Speaker.

Separate Housing List applications
Those wishing to return from Spain

2650 Clerk: Question 68, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many persons have registered to date in the separate housing list for applicants who are currently living in Spain and who wish to return home?

2655 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, a separate list for those living in Spain wishing to return home will be introduced very shortly.

2660 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, any indication of whether it will be this side of the summer season or afterwards?

2665 Hon. C A Bruzon: Of course, the reaction has been nil at the moment in terms of people wanting to go on such a list. So if there is a demand coming to us soon, then the list would be created immediately... if the Minister knows what I mean.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but is the Hon. Minister aware that there are people who have, at least to me, expressed an interest and are patiently, and perhaps correctly, waiting for an announcement to be made by the hon. Member because they are not quite certain of what the terms and conditions would be.

2670 For example, a simple question that was asked is because they wished to return home, would a condition be that they must then surrender or sell the property that they have in Spain because some feel that they might be accused of then having two homes – one in Gibraltar and the other one would be considered more like a holiday home and so on? So I think, you know, the...

2675 Hon. C A Bruzon: When the criteria are determined, we will make a statement, Mr Speaker.

2680 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, within the criteria that needs to be discussed amongst the Minister and perhaps the Government generally, will they also take into account, perhaps, the distinction between a person who may have gone... a Gibraltarian who may have gone to live in Spain... as a result of not finding a house here, either in the private sector or in Government, as against Gibraltarians who did have a house here, perhaps, sold the house and, with the money from the sale, went and bought a house in Spain?

2685 Hon. C A Bruzon: The answer that I can give at the moment is that we will consider each case as it comes to us and we will act wisely and fairly. The reality is that there are, as the Minister has hinted, people who live in Spain, but who dearly want to live in Gibraltar. Obviously, those people would be placed on the list without giving it a second thought. You know, that is absolutely certain.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2690 Hon. D Feetham: Is the position that the criteria for this list, who qualifies for this list, has not yet been determined; and, if that is the position, why did he say earlier on that there had been no interest expressed by anybody in coming on to this list? Surely, if the criteria have not developed, then the list is not in place.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I was being totally honest. Obviously, the Hon. Mr Reyes has been approached. (Interjection) Excuse me... (Interjection) No, no. I, 2695 through my staff, have not had a glimmer of a demand yet from people... 'Mr Bruzon, I would like to go on the list. I live in Spain, so put me on the list.' Of course, the offer is there, the commitment is there, and, as I said earlier, when we determine the criteria, we will make an announcement.

2700 Hon. D Feetham: So is the position that the list is in place, that there is a list, but the criteria has not yet been determined? Is that the position?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, there is no list yet. There is nobody on the list. The list is not there yet, but the offer of people wanting to be placed on the Government waiting list, that offer is definitely there.

Co-ownership housing estates
Discussions over increasing service charges

2710 Clerk: Question 69, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. E J Reyes: Question 69 is mine.

2715 Clerk: Yes, there is an error.
Sixty-nine, the questioner is the Hon. E J Reyes.

Mr Speaker: In my bundle, it shows the Hon. Edwin Reyes initially, but I have now been handed a separate sheet which shows the Hon. J Netto there. This was in the bundle and this one is to do with that.

2720 Hon. E J Reyes: I have no problem in accepting, Mr Speaker, it could be a simple –

Mr Speaker: No, I am just –

2725 Hon. E J Reyes: – human clerical error.

Mr Speaker: No, I am just trying to find my way around.

Hon. J J Netto: I can assure the House that I have not drafted the question.

2730 Clerk: I would agree with that.

Hon. E J Reyes: I can assure Mr Speaker that I signed and handed that question in personally to the Clerk.

2735 Well, Mr Speaker, Question 69: can the Minister for Housing state what discussions he has held with management companies of co-ownership housing estates in order to address the issue of increasing service charges?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

2740 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, none at the moment.

2745 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister aware that despite his desire, which I have no doubt to work with the management companies in Government co-ownership housing estates to address the problem of increasing service charges that, in many housing estates – and I can let the hon. Member later on have a copy – residents or owners at Harbour Views Estate have been notified just a few days ago that their service charge has increased by 3.8% as from 1st January and, in fact, the letter increases...

The letter goes on to say that this increase is customarily carried out in January of each year. So I would like to work together with the Hon. Minister to address this problem because the fear (Interjection) of residents there that they have is that if the trend would be that would be an annual 3% or close to 4% increase 2750 and many residents in that estate, which includes myself, are eagerly awaiting to see what the Hon. Minister can help to do to alleviate these ever increasing charges.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Okay, Mr Speaker. Thank you very much.

2755

TRAFFIC, HEALTH AND SAFETY AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

2760 Line Wall sewer
Duration of repairs

Clerk: Question 11, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2765 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the Minister with responsibility for Technical Services confirm how long the Government envisages repairs to the Line Wall sewer will take?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

2770 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the repairs to the section of the main sewer along Line Wall Road, which was blocked, have been completed and the excavation reinstated.

2775 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Member can enlighten the House in respect of when the traffic flow will be restored as it was originally in light of the completion of the works?

Hon. P J Balban: At the moment there is an inspection of the main sewer, upstream and downstream, as the blockage has identified some other defects. So until we actually look at that, two-way traffic will not be restored. Sorry, the blockage or diversion will still be in place.

2780 Hon. S M Figueras: I take it from that, Mr Speaker, that there is no indication of a timescale for that?

Hon. P J Balban: Not at the moment, no.

2785 Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you very much. I am obliged. No further supplementaries.

2790 New roads and parking spaces
Set targets and objectives

Clerk: Question 12, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2795 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services provide details of the set targets and objectives for the building of new roads and the provision of more parking spaces which the Government has announced will form part of its comprehensive traffic plan?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

2800 Minister Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government has announced it will carry out a major review of the existing traffic arrangements and draw up a comprehensive traffic plan for the whole of Gibraltar.

We have embarked upon a public consultation exercise aimed at seeking the views of all interested parties. These views will be taken into account when the traffic plan is drawn up. It is therefore premature to state targets and objectives at this point in time as they can be subject to revision.

2805 Hon. D J Bossino: I see the press statement said that – presumably because it is in line with the Government’s manifesto commitment – the set target and objectives for the building of new roads – in plural... rather the plan will contain set targets and objectives for the building of new roads – in plural, as I said earlier – and the provision of more parking spaces – again, in plural. So, presumably, there is already at least a commitment from the Government in relation to these issues.

2810 Hon. P J Balban: As part of the general objectives, although we are not ready to prepare general objectives and targets, obviously there has already been some commitment in terms of looking for new parking spaces, disabled bays etc.

2815 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, it is, as I pointed out earlier, a Government manifesto commitment, so therefore must be Government policy that there is an intention to build the new roads – again, more than one road – and new parking spaces. So, in that sense, is the consultation process as open as the Minister suggests?

2820 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just assist the House on this.
Before, when we were saying that the consultation process was open and we did not want to give our views of what was going on there and was going to go on as part of that consultation process to then become the document that might become Government policy, we felt that the hon. Members were suggesting that we had to put our views across as to what should be there. Now, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems to be again pressing us on this issue to say that, if we have got those said ideas, we need to put them on the agenda now.

2830 Hon. D J Bossino: No, I am just trying to establish what the Government’s position is and really this is not in any way intended to be maliciously political in any respect whatsoever.

2835 I was just surprised that the Minister himself, Mr Speaker, did not offer the fact that, yes, there would be a public consultation exercise and that he would be receiving the views of those consulted – I will ask him about that in a moment – but then it was somewhat curtailed, it was not as open as initially as he may have suggested to this House and it would be somewhat curtailed in that there is already a manifesto commitment from the Government to build new roads and to build new parking spaces. So, as far as those two issues are concerned, the Government is already committed and intends to do those two things and it will not be dissuaded by any representations, for example, to the contrary, like, for example, from the environmental lobby.

2840 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not that the process is going to be curtailed in any way. Just because we have identified that we believe that there should be new roads and new parking spaces, which happens also to be the policies, I understand, that they put at the General Election, it does not mean that the consultation process is curtailed. It is a consultation process, in this instance based around what we have already said in our manifesto.

2845 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, may I have further clarification on the environmental point. There is one of my Department’s Environmental Officers in the team that is looking at the traffic plan.

2850 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful.

Is it at all possible that the Government may be dissuaded from building new roads and new parking spaces as a result of the consultation process which it is undergoing? (Interjections)

2855 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, everything is possible; it is not probable.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, with respect, if it is possible, then if it is within the realms of possibility that the Government may be persuaded, as a result of undergoing a public consultation exercise, not to build new roads and not to build new parking spaces, will the Minister accept that, as a result, he would be reneging 2860 on a manifesto commitment?

Mr Speaker: That is hypothetical.

2865 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs to go back to the dictionary and look up the definition of 'possible' and compare it to the definition of 'probable'.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am simply trying to establish how wide the consultation will be. So... (Interjection) In relation to its width... (Laughter)

2870 I have another question: has the Government, or rather, can the Minister clarify when the Government first notified interested parties, as he says in his statement, 'all interested parties', that they could make submissions?

2875 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, a press statement was issued to that effect and the closing date will be 30th January.

Hon. D J Bossino: So in terms of timeline, can he confirm that the timeline is from the date of the issue of the press statement, 11th January, up to the 30th January?

2880 Hon. P J Balban: Correct.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Minister consider that that is a sufficiently lengthy period of time to allow for a substantive and proper consultation period, especially if the Government is seeking what is, as it described in its press statement, 'a major review of the existing traffic arrangements'?

2885 Hon. P J Balban: Obviously. (Laughter)

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister assist me in advising the House who the interested parties are?

2890 Hon. P J Balban: No, not at this stage.

Hon. D J Bossino: With respect, the Minister, and his Department presumably, has issued a press release stating that 'all interested parties will be consulted' and they are seeking their comments. So surely, he must have a view, or must know, who those interested parties are. I just want that clarification.

2895 Hon. P J Balban: I will tell you at the next House, at the end of the consultation period... if you ask the question, obviously. (Interjections)

2900 Hon. D J Bossino: With respect, this is a public statement issued in the press and if the Minister himself does not know who those interested parties are, how will those parties know who they are?

The Hon. Chief Minister: For a very simple reason, Mr Speaker.

2905 Hon. D J Bossino: With respect to the Chief Minister, if the answer (Interjection) perhaps is... (Interjection) and I will assist... Look, we have equality of arms in the sense that I am new to this House, as indeed the Minister is. If the answer is that it is the public in general, that perhaps is an answer. Is that the answer?

2910 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has to ask questions; not ask questions and propose answers.

The answer is, Mr Speaker, that there are people that we have identified who we will be consulting. As a result of the public statement that there may be others that may be consulted. Therefore, we do not want, at this stage, to give an answer that deals only with those that we may have identified. We will give a full answer at the end of the consultation period. If the hon. Gentleman is interested in the information which will set out the people that we consulted and the people that asked us to consult them as a result of the public statement, I

- 2915 would have thought, of all the things that there are to ask about, that this one is fairly fine one..
- The hon. Gentleman, in his virginal appearance in this House, has kept on asking questions on who are the parties that we are consulting and yesterday asking us questions on a bus timetable. We are happy to provide the information once we have got it. At the next House we will have finished the process and we can give him chapter and verse of who has been consulted.
- 2920 Hon. S M Figueras: So can the Minister then confirm that by the time of the next House, the process of consultation and the results of that process will have been completed?
- 2925 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, by the next House, the process that ends on 30th January will have ended and we can tell him what happened in the course of that process; and then we can tell him, as well, Mr Speaker, what other process that might lead on to; and then, Mr Speaker, he can ask us questions about that process once it has been completed; and then, Mr Speaker, he will have the information that he wants.
- 2930 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Chief Minister, the question was whether the process of consultation and the result of that process would be published by the next meeting.
- Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago.
- 2935 Hon. D J Bossino: Maybe the Chief Minister should take his pill and calm down a bit.
- I am completely bemused by the reply received from the Government in relation to this issue. It is a simple matter. You are inviting submissions in writing, which should be addressed to the Ministry in a publicly available – set out in the press statement – email.
- If I am an ordinary Joe Bloggs member of the public, do I write or don't I, because it seems that the Government itself either does not know or is not willing to provide – and I still do not know why – the answer to the simple question: who... The answer, again, maybe it is... and this is what I assumed would have been the answer, which is the whole of Gibraltar.
- 2940 All I am asking is: has the Ministry identified the interested parties, who it considers to be the interested parties, who ought to participate in the consultation exercise?
- 2945 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am as bemused as him and I offer him the other half of the pill. If Joe Bloggs is listening at twenty to nine on a Friday, he should write in – that is what we meant.
- Hon. D J Bossino: So, going back to it, by way of clarification, is it the member of the public, any member of the public can write in to the Ministry in this email address and make submissions in relation to the major review which is being carried out in relation to the traffic plan and the traffic arrangements. Is that correct?
- 2950 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, sir, that is correct.
- 2955 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, the answer. At last we have got to the answer, Mr Speaker. (Interjections)
- Mr Speaker: Order. Order.
- 2960 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is wrong to say, 'at last we have got to the answer', because the answer that he got now was to a direct question, which was very clear. The answers to the previous questions were answers to different questions. So the answer he got now was to the last question, as to whether the general public would be able to write in with their views, and the answer was quite clearly, yes. If he had asked that 10 minutes ago, he would have got the same answer.
- 2965 Hon. D J Bossino: I did ask the question.
- Hon. G H Licudi: No, you didn't. You said, 'Who are the interested parties?'. You did not say whether anybody could write in.

2970 Hon. D J Bossino: Has the Minister produced a consultation document which would set out the parameters within which this public consultation exercise is to be carried out? Is there such a consultation document in existence?

2975 Hon. P J Balban: No, sir, there isn't.

Hon. D J Bossino: So can he confirm therefore that there aren't any parameters and there is no structure to this consultation exercise?

2980 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is the structure that allows people at this stage, by 30th January, to write in and give us their opinions. Joe Bloggs, Damon Bossino, Fabian Picardo, opinions will be welcomed from all of them, which will lead us to a second stage and that will have a different structure, and there may be a third stage which may have an even different structure.

What he calls 'lack of structure', we may call 'structure'. That is a matter entirely for him.

2985 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D Feetham: Yes, it is just that we are bemused on this side because is it the position that... Is the position this: that the Government has invited opinions from the general public but, in addition to that, the Hon. Minister has consulted specific interest groups that he has identified as being relevant to this exercise? Is that the position?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we have set out the position ad nauseam –

2995 Hon. D Feetham: No, you haven't.

Hon. Chief Minister: – at a quarter to nine in the evening. We are not going to set it out any further. They can ask as many questions as they like. From now on, they are going to get the same answer.

3000 Hon. D A Feetham: Is this going to be the practice for the rest of the four years, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. the Chief Minister, every single time that the Government is in difficulty about a particular issue, just simply declines to answer it? (Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we have given the answers that we have given. Whatever other questions they may be asking from now, they will be getting the same answer.

3005 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, exactly. So much for transparency, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

Will the Minister advise this House whether, at the end of the consultation process, his ministry will at least publicise and publish the details of the... or at least a summary of the responses that it has received as a result of the public consultation exercise.

3010 Hon. P J Balban: The answer remains as previously stated

Hon. D J Bossino: For my benefit, as it is rather late and I was forty the other week and so maybe I am getting up on... what was the answer they stated earlier.

3015 Hon. P J Balban: As I set out before, you may check Hansard if you want.

Hon. S M Figueras: Well, with respect to the Minister, we cannot check Hansard for that answer because that question has not asked until a minute ago.

3020 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker our position is as already set out in the answers that we have given in respect of this subject matter. We are not going to go further. This is an ongoing consultation process. By the next House the hon. Gentleman will have seen some developments and can ask us about that.

3025 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he answer at least this: has the Government identified any new roads they think are necessary and has that been put to any interested parties that he may have consulted?

3030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers we have been given for the past five minutes.

Hon. D A Feetham: So obviously he is not going to answer the question.

3035 Hon. D J Bossino: Again, as part of this consultation process will the Minister advise this house whether he intends to provide feedback to the supposed interested parties that are going to be participating in this process?

Hon. P J Balban: The answer remains as previously stated.

3040 Mr Speaker: I think... (Interjections)

A Member: So the answer has to remain as previously stated, as to a question that has not been asked previously.

3045 Mr Speaker: I think if I understood the Hon. the Chief Minister's general response, it is that the Government has gone as far as it is willing to tonight to answer questions on this subject, as I understand it. It seems pointless to ask more questions, then. (Interjections)
Have I interpreted the Chief Minister correctly?

3050 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Mr Speaker: In that case, I think the hon. Members must accept that that is as far as it is going to go

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask –

3055 Mr Speaker: Order, order.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask if it is a new policy set out by the Chief Minister that when it is quarter to nine that they will never answer a question? (Applause)

3060 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no. (Laughter)

3065 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, given Government's position, I have another three supplementaries to ask but, if that is their position then that is their position. I will not press the issue. I will ask presumably after the consultation process has been completed – and the Government is relaxed with that?

A Member: Absolutely.

Hon. D J Bossino: Shocking.

3070 Hon. Chief Minister: Shocking, you should have been here for eight years (Inaudible) (Laughter)

Mr Speaker: Order. (Interjections)

Order! Order!

3085

Hon. Chief Minister: I now have the honour to table the answers to written questions numbered W1 to W48 of 2012 inclusive and, Mr Speaker, may I take this opportunity, despite the lateness of the hour and how frayed tempers get during Question Time, to congratulate all the new Members of the House for their first Question Time and look forward to the next Question Time with them here.

3090

Hon. D A Feetham: May I echo the Hon. the Chief Minister's sentiments and may I ask him that, perhaps the next time, that he may answer our questions.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he can. We have answered for two almost full days many, many questions and to suggest that we have not is really to do the usual attempt to obfuscate the truth.

Announcements

15 Clerk: 5. Announcements: the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

20 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, at the last meeting of Parliament, I made an announcement in relation to Command Papers and I indicated that we had announced then a new procedure for publishing Bills in draft in the form of Command Papers. I said to Parliament that draft Bills would be published in the Government's Gibraltar Laws website. I just want to clarify the procedure to avoid any misunderstandings. It is not all Bills that will be published in the form of Command Papers. We have realised, since I made that announcement, that there are some Bills which clearly do not fall within that category and do not require to be published in draft.

25 An example is the draft supplementary or, rather, the Supplementary Appropriation Bill. That is clearly not a Bill that ought to be published in draft, which is a procedure to allow the public to comment for a period of two weeks before the Government decides to publish the Bill itself.

30 The other type of Bill that, perhaps, ought not to be published as a Command Paper is in fact one that we did publish as a Command Paper. Command Paper no. 2 was a Bill in relation to civil aviation, which simply changed from 'Minister for Transport' to 'Minister for Civil Aviation'. Again, that is not a Bill that is appropriate to publish in draft form or publish for public comment.

35 What we do intend is that any Bill which introduces a new law, for example, the first one that we did, the law which had to do with smoking, banning in closed public places, freedom of information acts, those kinds of laws which are new laws which we introduced, we will certainly publish those as Command Papers in draft, for a period of two weeks so that the public can comment.

I thought I should clarify that, given my announcement to Parliament on the last occasion.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

95 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, given the Government's propensity to issue press releases at almost every turn, I thought it was important for me to ask for better particulars as to how the Fitur exhibition went. I was surprised there was not any public announcement in relation to that, so perhaps can the Minister advise the House whether he attended any meetings while he was at FITUR?

100 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, just arrived, is now telling the Government when we have to issue a press release. That is first in my reply. Secondly, the reason why we did not issue a press release was very simple. I went to Fitur essentially on a fact-finding mission to determine whether or not... there were many things but, first of all, value for money for Gibraltarians, whether going to FITUR meant that there was going to be business coming to Gibraltar – and I have already set out my position to my Cabinet colleagues, which we will discuss in Parliament in due course.

105 I can tell him that the way that it is currently formatted does not give the full potential that Gibraltar can achieve in an international fair of this sort. I can assure the hon. Gentleman that, when I went, I did not, like I am told someone else did, sit behind and do nothing, I, in fact, held something like six or seven meetings in the one full day that I was there. Not only that, I did meet with international operators, which I will not reveal at this moment because I am in commercial negotiations, and there has been a follow up with one of those international operators here at my office in Europort.

110 So to answer the question of the hon. Gentleman, no, we did not issue a press release, because we did not think at the time that it was for us to do so. Secondly, I did hold meetings, many of them, one of which has already had a follow through and, hopefully, we will be able to make an announcement shortly in respect of that meeting.

115 Clerk: Question –

120 Hon. D J Bossino: Were all those six or seven meetings with international operators, or can he give any particulars in relation to other meetings that he may have held with other groups? For example, were there press engagements?

125 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if I recall correctly, I think I gave something like four interviews for Spanish TV channels, which of course meant free press... [Inaudible] ...stand. I also gave interviews to papers. There were meetings with international operators, as well.

Clerk: Question 109, the – 130 Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Damon Bossino has another supplementary.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am thinking about one!

Mr Speaker: You will have to think very fast, I am afraid?

135 Hon. D J Bossino: No, carry on.

140 Gibraltar Tourist Board
Exhibition at London Boat Show

Clerk: Question 109, the Hon. D J Bossino.

145 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House whether the Gibraltar Tourist Board exhibited at the London Boat Show held in January 2012 and if so, can he provide details of the cost of his participation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 110.

London Boat Show Minister's attendance

Clerk: Question 110.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House whether he attended the London Boat Show exhibition in January 2012 and, if so, can he provide details of the cost of its participation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Tourist Board did exhibit at the London Boat Show in January of this year, although I did not attend. The total cost was £15,394.79 and the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in a schedule, which I hand to him now.

By way of information the hon. Member may like to know that, last year, the cost was £23,000, in 2010, £20,000 and in 2009, £23,000.

The GTB pays for the stand and then charges local companies for using part of the stand.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the London Boat Show is quite an important one for business. The information that I have is that businesses such as sailing schools and yacht charterers lay a lot of importance on this Boat Show, because they take bookings, as I understand it, for the rest of the year, when they attend the Boat Show, so the previous Government laid a lot of emphasis on this particular Boat Show, because they saw it as a way of assisting industry. So, in this context, does the Minister not think it would have been of crucial importance for the Minister responsible for tourism to have attended this particular show?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the participants at the London Boat Show this year were Ocean Village, Tomboy Sailing and the Rock stand. This is handled primarily by the London Office.

As I have already advised the hon. Gentleman, the costs of the previous years were exorbitantly high. Last year was £23,411, 2010 was £20,737.47 and 2009 was the cost was £23,238.88, compared to the £15,000 spent this year.

If the hon. Gentleman were to take some time in looking into the matter, he will see that the turnout in participation in the London Boat Show has dropped year on year and, whereas this is something that has been considered as part of the global tourism policy, that the Cabinet will consider... for Cabinet to discuss, this is one of the items that would be canvassed. It was not, at this point, thought appropriate to have the additional cost of the Minister in the light of the decreasing number of turnouts in the London Boat Show and we felt it was an expense the Government could save at this particular juncture.

195 If we attend next year, it would be a decision the Cabinet would take, having taken into account and having a devised a full, global tourism policy to encompass this Boat Show.

Hon. D J Bossino: Could he confirm that his non-attendance was on account of a cost-saving exercise?

200 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have just replied to the question.

No, the answer is that we are looking at the tourism policy globally. That means, of course, Mr Speaker, taking a look at the road shows, the tourist fairs, the boat shows and all of the money that the Gibraltar Tourist Board and, therefore, Government, spends in any international symposium of this type.

205 Whereas I was able to make a determination that, with FITUR, it was important to go and establish fact finding at that point, the particular boat show, the advice received was that it was sufficient to have a Gibraltar presence and, as I say, it does not mean we will not go in the future, it only means that the advice received was that the Gibraltar presence at the moment was sufficient and whether or not the Government takes a policy decision to discontinue or to go next year will be determined in Cabinet. When we are ready to make a policy announcement, as the hon. Gentleman has accused me of already, we shall, no doubt, issue it by way of a press statement.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. D J Bossino: Was there any official Gibraltar presence, is that the case?

215

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the information is in the schedule I have handed the hon. Gentleman, perhaps if he cares to read it?

220

Hon. D J Bossino: There is an item in the schedule, which reads, ‘attendance by Gibraltar based officers of the GTB zero’. So, other than physically having the stand there, for which, presumably, the Government paid, was any physical, human presence from the Gibraltar Government. Clearly not the Minister, but was there any other official presence at the London Boat Show, Mr Speaker?

225

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I will be able to provide that information to the hon. Gentleman; it is not... I do not have it in my papers, but there was, of course, an official presence in Gibraltar... in the London Boat Show, sorry. I will be able to give him the information if he writes to me.

230

Hon. D J Bossino: That is all very well and good and I will take the Minister up on his offer, but the answer in respect of which I posed a supplementary was that the information was set out in the schedule he had handed to me. Can he confirm, in fact, that is not the case; the information is not set out in the schedule, which he handed to me?

235

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the information is there. What the schedule says is that the cost was zero, but there was an official presence. The schedule that I handed over to the hon. Gentleman says ‘costs zero’. The GTB pays for the stand and then charges local companies for using part of the stand. The officials present were from the London office.

240

Hon. D J Bossino: Okay, so there was a presence and the official from the London office, okay, but clearly not revealed from a prima facie look at the schedule, Mr Speaker?

245

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have already said, in answer to the question, what the schedule shows is the zero cost of the attendance, not that there was not an official presence.

Gibraltar Tourist Board
Senior management structure

250 Clerk: Question 111, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the positions/posts, which comprise the senior management structure of the Gibraltar Tourist Board?

255 Clerk: Answer, the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Tourist Board... the senior management structure of the Gibraltar Tourist Board is made up as follows: there is one Chief Executive, two senior managers, and eight managers.

260 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, have all these posts been filled?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, that will assume that they are unfilled at present.

265 Hon. D J Bossino: Are there any posts unfilled at present?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman did not ask about the existing vacancies and how the GTB will be replacing them, if there are any vacancies to be filled.

270 I am not about to answer to him in this House as to the vacancies that are open, by whom they are going to be filled, etc. If he wants specific information on that, he will have to give me notice.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, with respect, that was surely implicit in the question.

275 I have asked for details of the positions, which comprise the senior management structure, as part of that structure. He says that the Minister responsible for his Department... If he is truly responsible and in charge of his brief, he ought to be able to know whether the positions are filled or not. It is a basic question. For example, is the Chief Executive position within the Tourist Board filled? Simple question. I would expect a simple 'yes or no' answer.

280 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, first of all, the hon. Gentleman is not in court cross-examining me, (Members: Ooh!) he is asking me questions in the Gibraltar Parliament.

Then let me tell him what he asks, because the hon. Gentleman, who definitely is keen on making announcements and then saying this Government is erecting an impenetrable curtain to his questions, what is clear from the questions that he asks is that the answers, which are very clear, are impenetrable only to the hon. Gentleman opposite.

285 Let me tell him what he asks: 'can the Minister for Tourism etc provide details of the positions/posts, which comprise the senior management structure?' That is the question that he asks and I have answered to him to say, yes, one Chief Executive, two senior managers and eight managers. If he had wanted to know the number of vacancies and the process by which my Department would proceed to fill these, that is an entirely different question and I am not answerable in this House to him, to tell him how am I to do that without written notice of those questions.

290 Mr Speaker: I think it is a valid supplementary to the question posed and the answer given. I think it is a valid supplementary to say: are all those posts filled?

295 Hon. N F Costa: If the hon. Gentleman wants to ask me a specific supplementary on a particular post that he is referring to, I will be happy to give him the answer.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I really am astounded from this side of the House, that the Minister responsible for tourism does not even... is unable to answer the basic supplementary –

300 Hon. N F Costa: On a point of order... On a point of order. (Intervention by The Speaker) On a point of order, on a point of order! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: We will listen to the point of order first.

305

Hon. N F Costa: On the point of order, I did not say – he has just invented this – I have not said I am unable, I said I did not think it was appropriate, given the original question, not that I am unable to do so. That is very different.

310

Hon. D J Bossino: I think the charge remains, Mr Speaker, and the question is –

Mr Speaker: Put the question, please.

315

Hon. D J Bossino: And the question is, is it possible that the Minister with responsibility for his Department, which is tourism, appears to be unwilling, shall we say, not necessarily unable, he says he has the ability to do so, but is unwilling to do so, because I have not given him notice. It is a simple question. Is the position of Chief Executive Officer of the Gibraltar Tourist Board filled or not? Simple question. Is he willing to answer the question, or isn't he?

320

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, with respect, that was not the original supplementary, but if that is now the supplementary (Interjection by The Speaker) he is asking – but he should not mislead this House that that was the original, it was not – but if that is the specific supplementary he is asking, there is currently an acting Chief Executive.

325

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister advise the House who the acting Chief Executive Officer is? Is he willing to provide that information?

Hon. N F Costa: Sorry, sorry?

330

Hon. D J Bossino: Who the acting Chief Executive Officer is? Is he willing to provide that?

Hon. N F Costa: The hon. Member can look to his right and ask those beside him. It is the same person who has been there since May of last year.

335

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is the answer. It is the same person. He cannot look to his right. I know that the hon. Members regret finding themselves on this side of the House and wish that we were on that side (Laughter) Then I would know the answer to the question! But what we are trying to find out is whether there has been a change since they assumed the responsibilities of government.

340

Clerk: Question 112, the hon. D J –

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, was there a question there or was it just a statement?

345

Mr Speaker: There could have been a rhetorical question, but has there been a change? I think that was the question understood.

Hon. N F Costa: And I gave the answer.

350

Hon. D J Bossino: When does the Minister envisage the acting position to become a full-time, permanent position?

Hon. N F Costa: We will announce it shortly, Mr Speaker.

355

Gibraltar Port Authority
Post of Marine Officer

360 Mr Speaker: Question 112, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Since Question 4/2012 was put to the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, can he advise whether the position of marine officer has now been filled?

365 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government is currently in the process of advertising the vacancy.

370 Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister, I am sure, will be fully aware that the position of marine officer is a crucial aspect of the –

A Member: Of the Chief Secretary! (Laughter)

375 Hon. D J Bossino: – of the... is a crucial aspect of the architecture of the... I will repeat the question if the Minister wishes me to? (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) A visual aspect of the port architecture... Can he assure this House that efforts will be made to fill this position as quickly as possible?

380 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, it has been as crucial today as it was since it was vacant in April 2011. I have told the hon. Gentleman that we are in the process of advertising the vacancy. I trust my official would have, in fact, made the vacancy this morning, but, yes, if it was so crucial today, it certainly would have been crucial all the way back since April 2011, since it became vacant.

Members: Hear, hear. (Applause)

385 Clerk: Question 1 –

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister advise whether the terms and conditions of the post have been revised? In the last House he mentioned that that was being looked at and, given that the Ministry is now poised to advertise, can he advise whether the terms and conditions have been revised?

390 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the only – well, what I can do for the gentleman is, I can certainly provide him with a copy of the vacancy, if he so wishes.

395 I can tell him that, in terms of qualification, obviously, the person needs to be suitably qualified to be able to act as a deputy to the Captain of the Port. Part of the vacancy, from recollection, says that he must have considerable experience in maritime and port administration matters, precisely because he would be deputising for the Captain of the Port. Those are the most important qualifications, Mr Speaker, but, as I say, I am perfectly happy to provide him with a copy of it.

400 Hon. D J Bossino: Are you writing separately, or are you providing it to us in any case?

Hon. N F Costa: I will provide it.

405 Hon. D J Bossino: As part of the qualification, which is that he has to be suitably qualified, can he advise the House whether that will include the Master Mariner requirements, which I understand is a qualification that the Captain of the Port has?

410 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, what the Captain of the Port has is an unlimited Master Mariner's certificate and that is not a requirement for the marine officer. He does not need to have an unlimited... There are two types of Master Mariner's certificate, the unlimited, which is the class 1 and then the other certificate of competence, he would not be required to have the unlimited master's certificate.

Hon. D J Bossino: And if he is going to fully deputise for the Captain of the Port, do you think that would be a qualification that would be desired – the unlimited, what is it, Master Mariner’s qualification?

415 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman will have recalled when I gave my answer to him on the last occasion, there was a period of time where not even the Captain of the Port had an unlimited mariner’s ticket. Let me also tell him that, since this gentleman passed away in May, and there was not a marine officer, there was a sudden departure, as well, of Captain Hall, which meant that, for quite some time, the Port did not have a Captain and did not have a master mariner. That was during the time in their administration, so he can rest assured that, now that we have a Captain starting at the end of February and that we will have a marine officer, hopefully, I feel quite sure that the operational requirements of the Port will be to his full satisfaction covered.

425 Withdrawal of Gibraltar and Algeciras ferry service
Meeting with Managing Director of Medex SL

Clerk: Question 113, the Hon. D J Bossino.

430 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House, when he met the managing director of Medex SL, in respect of the withdrawal of their ferry service between Gibraltar and Algeciras and what transpired during the meeting?

435 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, at the request of the managing director of Medex, I met him, Mr Rodriguez, on 23rd January this year with two officials present.

440 During the course of the meeting, Mr Rodriguez briefed me on the financial situation of Medex and that the company, in his words, could not even meet the basic running costs of the maritime operation. He proceeded to request a Government subsidy to maintain the operation afloat.

445 Just for the sake of clarification to the hon. Gentleman, when he requested a subsidy, what we are talking about is between €44,000 to €49,000 monthly. I informed him that I would immediately hold discussions with the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister which, true to my word, I immediately did and that we would have a full discussion at the Cabinet meeting the week after.

450 Gibraltar Port Authority Licensing Committee
Applications awaiting determination

Clerk: Question 114, the Hon. D J Bossino.

455 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the applications which are currently before the Licensing Committee of the Gibraltar Port Authority which are awaiting determination by the Authority?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

460 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Question 115.

465

Gibraltar Port Authority
Dates of meetings since General Election

Clerk: Question 115.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide the dates of the meetings held by the Board of the Gibraltar Port Authority since the last General Election?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Port Authority will meet on 22nd March this year. There are currently five applications. In fact, there were five applications at the time the answer was drafted. Now there are four applications pending. There is one application for a tourist sightseeing operator licence, one application for a waste operator licence, one application for a ship agency licence and one application to transfer a bunkering licence.

Clerk: Question 116 –

Hon. D J Bossino: Again, Mr Speaker, I am rather surprised that the Gibraltar Port Authority, which has very wide and crucial statutory powers which it has to discharge, has not met once since the General Election of 8th December and that the first meeting has been scheduled for 22nd March.

As I understand it, the Minister is the Chairman of that Authority. Can he at least advise whether he has met with the current members of the Port Authority, even informally?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, the Government is in the process, obviously, of making the composition of the new Port Authority, but if what the hon. Gentleman is concerned about is to ensure that there is no effect on the operations of the Port, I can assure him that, other than personally attending to the Port on a couple of occasions, I meet regularly with the Senior Port Officer and with the acting Captain. I can assure him that no operations of the Port are being affected by the fact that the Port Authority has not met yet, and when it does, of course, it will be able to do so very quickly... deal with these applications.

But I can assure him that no operational activity or business is being affected.

Sea Trade Fair in Miami Government participation

Clerk: Question 116, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port inform the House whether the Government intends to participate in the Sea Trade Fair in Miami, USA?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: Has the Minister decided who will be forming part of the Government delegation at this stage?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, we are in the process of finalising that detail, but the reason why we felt that it was important to attend the Miami Sea Trade Fair is essentially because of the nature of the explosion.

We want to take the opportunity to meet with the current operators to assure them of the safety of the Port and, of course, not just existing operators but also we have already set up meetings with various operators to ask them and make representations as to why, if they are cruising the Mediterranean, they should come to stop in Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister aware that, whilst we, on this side of the House, welcome the fact that he should continue to attach importance to the comfort that the Port offers cruise operators in particular, that process had already begun under his predecessor and what we found, when we were on that side of the House, was central to that was a commitment by the Government, which was not actually given but it was indicated that the Government – and indeed I gave it in this House – was going to try to deconflict fuel activities from passenger-handling activities at the Port.

Therefore, does the hon. Member agree that continuing to try to relocate the sullage plant and, indeed, other fuel-handling facilities on the North Mole, will be an important part of giving comfort to cruise lines, particularly the affected ones which stood by the Port of Gibraltar, and that, as cruise ships become bigger, longer, the front or the back reaches even the most southerly fuel facility in Gibraltar.

Does the hon. Member therefore attach importance to continuing, as we had started to do, with investigating the possibility of coming to some arrangement with fuel operators to relocate them to other places?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might, because this touches on an area in which the hon. Gentleman was himself involved when he was Chief Minister and I am now involved myself.

As he is aware, there is litigation by one operator touching and concerning exactly these issues, and I think it is probably wise for us not to get into the detail of that at all today. In fact, I think the rules will prevent us from doing so. But let me put it to him this way: I am not going to dispute what he is saying. I think that is sufficient. At least he will understand where we are going.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member and I acknowledge his difficulty. Our Government had not proposed necessarily to proceed by compulsion. The question was carefully phrased around trying... in agreement with fuel operators, and that certainly would have been our preferred option, as I am sure it will be his.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, on a different matter, but it touches upon the answer given to the Sea Trade question, I appreciate that the Minister has been in office for about three months, but given his attendance at the FITUR Fair and the Government's apparent presence at the London Boat Show and now the intention to attend the Sea Trade Fair, it is looking very much like the previous administration did. Can the Minister advise whether he thinks there is, in fact, now a departure from previous GSD policy in relation to tourism marketing, which was so very much maligned and criticised by his colleague to his left?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Gentleman did not hear the part of the answer originally when I told him that the reason why I went to FITUR was precisely to determine whether or not the international markets do give value for money. Does he remember now? Does he want me to carry on?

Hon. D J Bossino: It is interesting that, in relation to the FITUR Fair, Mr Speaker, the costs were £10,000 more than last year, but anyway... A very expensive fact-finding mission.

Hon. N F Costa: Sorry?

Mr Speaker: Was there a question there? There should not be remarks... (Interjection) ...'expensive fact-finding mission'.

Hon. N F Costa: In respect of what?

Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister is saying that he went to FITUR on a fact-finding mission. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

The hon. Member said there is no question. Really, we must get used to the practice of asking questions. Next question, please.

Transport Commission
Dates of meetings since General Election

580 Clerk: Question 117, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide the dates of the meetings held by the Transport Commission since the last General Election, together with a list of all applications currently pending the Commission's determination?

585 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Transport Commission will meet on 29th of this month.

590 There are currently 13 applications pending: seven applications for renewal of a licence to drive a PSV omnibus; four applications for a renewal of a licence to drive a PSV taxi omnibus; one application for a renewal of a licence to drive a PSV taxi and omnibus; one application for a transport operator's licence.

I am advised by the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority that I cannot disclose the specific details of the applications but I was allowed to list the applications and the categories that were...

595 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, again, this is a Statutory Board body which has very important statutory powers to discharge, which include advising the Government on matters relating to public transport.

Does the Minister not agree with me it is a very sad and sorry state of affairs that a Commission of this nature, a statutory body of this nature, has, three months in since he took office, not yet met?

600 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps I can answer the question in this way: we have been in Government for two-and-a-half months and they had been in Government for 15½ years and, in 2011, between 31st May and 19th October, four-and-a-half months, there were no sittings of the Transport Commission.

605 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, certainly the membership of the Transport Commission has changed, because I was a member of it and I resigned, given my new role. (Interjections) Can the –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections) Order! Order!

610 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Can the Minister advise whether the membership of the Transport Commission has already been gazetted, because I have not seen anything published in the Gazette.

615 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I gave instructions for that to happen last week. I will double check now with my office, but if it did not happen last week it should certainly happen this week.

Hon. D J Bossino: I dare say, Mr Speaker, it was as a result of the notice of my Question.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker –

620 Mr Speaker: There was no question there.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, but the answer is certainly no. (Interjection by Hon. D J Bossino) (Laughter)

625 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister saying to this House... Did he say to this House – I think I heard him correctly – that the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority had advised him that he could not give details of pending applications?

630 Hon. N F Costa: Specific details of applications.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member aware that the GRA never gave advice of that nature to the previous Government, and they themselves, when sitting on this side of the House, did not feel that any data protection consideration arose when they used to ask similar questions about applications for Development and Planning Commission building licences and the sort?

Are we experiencing yet another example of the hon. Members slamming the stable door behind them as soon as they have entered the stable?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, certainly not, because, given that the hon. Gentleman has so much time on his hands,

Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible] ...the Hon. Minister, not to the Hon. the Chief Minister. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections) Order! Order! Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: He used to answer all the supplementaries before!

Hon. P R Caruana: A new dawn!

A Member: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: I am on my feet to give the answer.

Hon P R Caruana: A supplementary!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! The... Order! The Chief Minister has the discretion of deciding who answers questions. (Interjection)

Then what are we complaining about?

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister has the discretion. Mr Speaker, it is not the role of the Speaker in this House to protect the Government politically from the Chair.

Mr Speaker, just as he is entitled to stand up and answer the supplementary, I am entitled to stand up and ask him why it is not the person who was asked the question that is answering it.

The Hon. Minister gave an answer. The simplest form of supplementary, designed to establish the reasonableness of the original answer is not answered by the answerer, but by the Chief Minister, in an attempt to deflect the obvious point, and I am asking Minister Costa, if he cannot answer, then let him not do so. Let him say that he cannot.

My question to him is: what is the difference, in data protection terms, between these questions and the ones that they used to ask, particularly Dr Garcia, in relation to such things as planning applications and other applications pending in many areas of public life. I am holding him to his answer, that the GRA has given him the advice that he has said in his answer.

Mr Speaker: Well, having heard the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, it is still my view that the Chief Minister can decide who answers on his side.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman asks a question about they – us – closing the door behind us, and of the Government. He has tried to rephrase it to make it of the hon. Gentleman, but his general question originally merits an answer.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has a lot of time on his hands now. He can now attend public meetings of the Development and Planning Commission, something which he, in Government, was never in favour of. In those meetings, he can see exactly what is happening in respect of every application, something that he, in Government, prevented the public from doing.

In his manifesto he suggested that perhaps minutes of those meetings might be published. In our manifesto we promised that they would be open. So, in respect of the part of his supplementary that deals with the Development and Planning Commission, the position has changed so greatly, we have opened the doors and opened Government to scrutiny so massively that the changes are patent for all to see, and it could only be in an attempt to make a cheap, petty, political point less than 20 minutes after he has arrived late to this session of the Parliament, that anybody could want to ask a supplementary like the one the hon. Gentleman has asked.

I think it is absolutely right and proper that a Minister should take advice from the Regulatory Authority in respect of data protection issues and stand by that advice. Is it that he is saying, Mr Speaker, that having taken the advice we should contradict it?

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, what I am trying to establish from the hon. Member is the accuracy of his answer, that he has had advice to the effect and purport that he believes does not entitle this House to this information.

For example, Mr Speaker, does it not strike the Hon. the Chief Minister, given that he has no confidence in his Minister to defend himself on this issue (Interjections) –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a point of order – and therefore he must sit down –

Hon. P R Caruana: Does it not strike the Hon. –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: On a point of order, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: There is a point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: There is a point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: A point of order is to be established by the Chair, not by the Chief Minister!

Hon. Chief Minister: I have to pronounce it first!

Mr Speaker: A point of order has been raised. I have to listen to the point of order before I can pronounce on it.

Hon. P R Caruana: Every time I ask a question I am interrupted by a point of order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I specifically said that the reason I was answering was not because I have no confidence in my Minister. I have full confidence in all of my Ministers, as does, obviously, a majority of the electorate, because that is why we are here and they are there. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

The reason that I got up to answer the question was because I said that – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: – the hon. Gentleman asked a question of the Government and not of the Minister.

He misrepresents what I said a moment ago, and that is how we get ourselves into lengthy debates. I would ask that, given that they are going to have, not two or three chances a year to hold the Government to scrutiny – they are going to have 10, 11 or 12 sessions a year to hold the Government to scrutiny – he should simply not misrepresent the things that we are saying, because otherwise Question Time becomes extended into a slinging match, which is not what the public are interested in.

Two Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, first of all, the hon. Member does not have the confidence of the majority of the electorate; he has the confidence of a minority of the electorate –

A Member: More than you!

Hon. P R Caruana: – a fact that he should not forget.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, we on this side of this House will not accept the mantra that he appears to be trying to establish, which is that the frequency of the opportunity that we get to ask questions in this House degrades the quality of the Government's obligation to provide information in this parliament and to answer questions, and we will challenge in this House, as frequently as possible, waffly answers like that, which are just designed to deny questions to this House.

Mr Speaker, I cannot have misrepresented anything that he said, because I was not into my second sentence before he had interrupted me with an alleged point of order, (Interjection) which Mr Speaker was perfectly happy to allow, which was just a pretext to repeat the waffle that he had just served up immediately before already.

Mr Speaker, the question was this: does it not strike the Hon. Chief Minister as odd that the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Regulatory Office should have advised his Minister that he cannot provide details of applications to this House precisely because – does he not think it odd, precisely because – as he has just said, these applications are considered in public? Why does the hon. Member think that there should be a data protection issue and that the GRA would have advised the Minister that he cannot provide information to this House and the very next thing that the Chief Minister says in this House is that it is in the public domain because he could have gone to hear it live in the Commission.

Mr Speaker, it is not appropriate that the hon. Members should deny to this Opposition in this House information of the type that they felt free, justified and entitled to ask when they were in Opposition and which we gave them when we were in Government, and therefore, Mr Speaker, I ask the hon. Member to reconsider his answer to the question, which is that when the Opposition asks for information about matters that are before these decision-making tribunals, they should give it to us as we used to give it to them for the benefit of Parliament, and that, therefore, Mr Speaker, the question of frequency of Parliament meetings is not germane to that question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is no point in taking each other on, expressing that what one is saying is waffle and what the other is saying is waffle, because let me assure him that if he thinks I am talking waffle, there are no words which are parliamentary enough for me to describe the sort of things that he says. That is first.

Second, our recollection on this side of this House is that we never used to get information relating to what was before tribunals. In any event, if there is an interest in the hon. Gentleman obtaining this information, he can turn up, as he rightly says, to the Commission and hear what is going on at those hearings. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) In any event, Mr Speaker, information which is public should not be asked about.

Mr Speaker, the position is actually not about any of that, because the hon. Gentleman is trying to avoid the principal point, which is that we have advice from somebody who is responsible for data protection, who tells us that we should not be providing the information and he is the person responsible for determining what is or is not to be provided in terms of data protection, so we rely on that answer. The hon. Gentleman can write to the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority and ask them to change their advice to the Government, if he wishes to.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, have I correctly understood his answer, therefore, to be that if I want the information it is available if I bother to turn up in person to the tribunal, but that this Parliament cannot have it on the basis of some pretext relating to the Data Protection Act, which apparently does not apply to the people in the public gallery of the tribunal or the hearing? It is an incredible, unbelievable answer, which this side of the House does not accept as to its accuracy. (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, how dare the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition say that something that the Government is saying is a pretext?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, it is.

Hon. Chief Minister: We are saying clearly to him and to the community that we have taken advice on the issue, that the advice from the person responsible is that we should not disclose the information, that there is no secrecy agenda, that he can turn up to a tribunal and hear what is going on.

Well, Mr Speaker, if he does not like it, it is his data protection law that we are relying on, it is his Data Protection Commissioner that is giving us the advice, because all of these laws... and this particular individual was appointed in his time and we have no difficulty with that. We are simply seeking to act in accordance with advice that we have been provided.

But, of course, the hon. Gentleman needs to try as hard as possible to denigrate the absolute and complete transparency that this Government has brought to politics in Gibraltar. (Applause and banging of desks) He has to try, by a pretext, at every possible invitation to pretend that we are being more secretive than them. He has to pretend that what he could have done in the past 16 years with a flick of his pen, which was to call a meeting of this Parliament every month, means nothing in the context of openness, of transparency and of accountability, because we will not answer a question giving him a list of matters before a tribunal.

Well, Mr Speaker, I have told him before and I will tell him again: he seems to have plenty of time on his hands – he can go and sit in the Commission and make a list of the matters as they are called.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, what is becoming apparent to this side of the House, as indeed it is becoming apparent to much of Gibraltar, quite so recently after a General Election, is that the hon. Member's alleged commitment to transparency and open Government is paper thin and it is uttered with a forked tongue. (Applause) It actually does not materialise in public. It is froth. It is political mantra adopted for the purposes of sounding good, but then it does not actually get delivered in the practice. So I will denigrate the hon. Member's attitude for denying this Opposition information which was freely given to them by us when we were in Government, which they felt free to ask and did ask and we answered, and which we now ask from this side of the House, now that the boot is on the other foot, and they answer...

Can I ask the hon. Member whether the advice that is alleged to have been tendered to them by the Data Protection Commissioner was tendered spontaneously or was it sought by the Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only thing that is paper thin is the veneer that the hon. Gentleman sets up around his sour grapes at having lost the Election. The only froth that we see from this side of the House is the froth of the hon. Gentleman trying to continue to make himself relevant to the political debate in this town.

Mr Speaker, the only political mantra that bears any repeating, as far as the hon. Gentleman is concerned, is the political mantra of trying to denigrate a Government that is barely nine weeks into its job.

Mr Speaker, I will say to the hon. Gentleman, let him go into the Hansards and identify when this Opposition asked the question of the number of matters pending in the Transport Commission and they gave more information than they have been given today, because that is the premise on which he launches his questions. Let him find it and bring it to the House.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the premise of my question. The premise of my question is not specific to the Transport Commission. The premise of my questions has been generic, not specific, to asking about information on matters before statutory decision-making commissions and tribunals. Surely the Hon. Dr Garcia will remember his regular questions about matters considered and before the Development and Planning Commission. This House – all the Members that were in it in the past Parliament – will remember it.

But he has not answered my supplementary, which is: was the advice by the Chief Executive of the GRA sought or given? I armour him with my motives for asking that supplementary, and that is that, as far as I am aware, the very same Data Protection Commissioner never gave spontaneous advice to that effect, and therefore I have to assume that it was specifically sought. I am asking him was it specifically sought, the advice, or was it spontaneously tendered by the GRA without having been solicited by the Government.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the hon. Gentleman has realised that he was careering fast towards a wall in insisting that they had asked questions about the Transport Commission before, when clearly they had not, and that he has turned just in time before the brakes failed.

Mr Speaker, as I understand it, in relation to the second part of the hon. Gentleman's speech, the advice was sought on the recommendation of a civil servant who saw the question and felt that it required such advice, and therefore it was sought on the basis of the recommendation of a civil servant.

Hon. P R Caruana: And therefore it was sought by No. 6?

855

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it was sought by the civil servant who was dealing with the issue for the Minister. You see, the days of control at No. 6 are a thing of the past.

Yachting tourism in Gibraltar
Government policy

Clerk: Question 118, the Hon. D J Bossino.

865

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House what the Government's policy is in relation to yachting tourism in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

870

The Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in line with other areas related to tourism, the Government's policy is to increase the visitor numbers, be they from visiting yachts or cruise ships or coming through the border or through the airport.

875

Government has been, since being elected into office, meeting stakeholders in order to formulate and eventually establish a detailed policy plan in order to achieve the objective of increasing tourist arrivals and therefore tourism-generated revenue for Gibraltar.

Of course, an increase in passenger numbers cannot happen without also considering the existing transport infrastructure, which the Government is also addressing equally by a similar process of engaging in an extensive process of dialogue and consultation with the relevant stakeholders in their field.

At the same time, I am dealing with the Gibraltar Tourist Board and the relevant operators in that field to engage in devising – as I have already said in this House now, I believe, on three occasions – a global and holistic tourism policy.

City Fire Brigade
Commencement of new Fire Station

890

Clerk: Question 119, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for the Fire Brigade state when the full audit of the City Fire Brigade will commence and how long does he envisage it will take?

895

Clerk: Question 119.

Mr Speaker: Wrong Question – 119. I think the hon. Lady has missed Question 119.

900

Clerk: Question 119.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: My apologies, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for the Fire Brigade state when the Government will be commencing work on a new fire station and where?

905

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Question 120/2012.

910

City Fire Brigade
Commencement and length of audit

915 Clerk: Question 120.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the hon. the Minister for the Fire Brigade state when the full audit of the City Fire Brigade will commence and how long does he envisage it will take?

920 Clerk: Answer, the hon. the Minister for Sport, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, it is not known how long the audit review of the City Fire Brigade will take, but it will definitely commence before 9th March 2012.

925 Following the completion of the full audit review, Government will be in a better position to consider the specific requirements for the new fire station and advice on where it should best be located.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise who will be conducting the audit?

930 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the Chief Fire Officer is currently looking at two forces: one from Scotland and one from the Home Office. Once we have established the connections and contact with them and given them the remit, we will decide which force will actually do the audit.

935 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister give us an indication on how much the audit could cost us?

Hon. S E Linares: No, not at this stage, because we do not know how long it will take and what the length and the extent of the audit is, so we cannot at this stage, no.

940 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in relation to the location of the new fire station, seeing that in the Government's manifesto, you state that, within three months of your election as a Government, you will commence work on a new fire station as a priority, does the Hon. Minister have an idea as to where the new fire station would be located?

945 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the manifesto states that we will be conducting the review within three months, not the fire station – the commencement of work on the fire station. But be that as it may, we are expecting that, after the review, we will be in a better position, like I answered in my question, and that will include locations, because these experts come and do the review, they could also help us in giving us advice on where the best location would be.

25-metre swimming pool
Details of temporary closure

955 Clerk: Question 121, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the occurrences which led to the temporary closure of the 25-metre swimming pool on Saturday, 4th February, with details of the remedial works required to be carried out and estimated timescales of completion?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

965 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the ducts for the humidifier at the 25-metre swimming pool which had not been working for more than six years collapsed into the spectator stand some time during the night of 3rd and early morning of 4th February. Had this happened during the day, it would have caused a catastrophe.

970 When the workers arrived in the morning to open the premises, they realised what had happened and obviously closed the pool to the swimmers and the public. The emergency section of the GJBS was subsequently called upon to remove all debris from the stands area, the poolside and the pool itself. Instructions were further given to remove all the ducts that had remained attached to the ceiling of the pool.

975 A Health and Safety inspection and a structural survey of the ceiling was conducted by officers of the Government Technical Services Department on Monday 6th/Tuesday 7th. On Tuesday, an air quality inspection was carried out by two of our senior officers from the Environmental Agency. On Wednesday, a further structural survey was conducted and some minor repairs to tiles and doors were done to satisfy the Health and Safety officer. The pool was reopened to the swimmers and the public by Thursday.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would it possible at this stage to have an idea of the estimated costs involved now in carrying out those remedial works that were undertaken?

980 Hon. S E Linares: No, they have not sent the invoice yet.

985 Culture and Heritage Agency
Number of employees

Clerk: Question 122, the Hon. E J Reyes.

990 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can Government state how many persons are currently employed by the Culture and Heritage Agency, giving a breakdown by grade, sex, nationality and department?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

995 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the current information the hon. Member is seeking is the same as existed before 8th December 2011 and therefore I pass the information in this schedule (on the following page).

1000 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in thanking the hon. Member for this information, I was rather surprised that, at the last meeting, I sought this information through a written question, and the reply I got was that the Government was not yet in a position to provide the information, and yet the Minister now says that there has been absolutely no change from last time.

Could the Minister explain why the information was not available last time round?

1005 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker. Very simply, because when I got the Culture and Heritage Agency, the whole Agency was a mess, quite frankly. There were people from all GDCs, civil servants, private companies, all bunged into a last-minute signing off of these posts, so it has taken a little bit of time, and I was not at the moment in a position to give the hon. Member the information.

1010 Now I have gathered that information. We are still trying to reorganise and reschedule the whole of the Culture and Heritage Agency. We are still doing that.

But, as it currently stands – and the question was ‘currently’ – that is the information which I have given him, which has existed even before 8th December.

1015 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am a bit surprised with that because, before 8th December, all these persons were already registered at the Ministry of Employment as actually pertaining to the Agency, so at least that basic information should have been quite easily available, given the few days' notice that we gave for the question.

Am I correct in now interpreting what the Minister is saying, that he now intends to review further the structure and the employees to be working from within the Agency?

1020 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member has been misinformed as to the registration of the changes. We are now, in the Employment Service, catching up with a backlog of something like a year, with the Health Authority, of jobs that are no longer there and jobs that have been filled where the records of the Employment Service have never been updated, and that is true of almost all the authorities and all the agencies.

1025 So the information that all were registered with the ETB is not correct.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister now answer the second part of my question, which was, am I correct in interpreting from what he was saying, that he intends to carry out a review and modifications on the number and rate of employees within the Agency?

1030

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, sir.

Hon. E J Reyes: And, Mr Speaker, does he have any idea when this exercise will be carried out and by when it will be completed?

1035

Hon. S E Linares: Ongoing.

Hon. E J Reyes: It may be ongoing, Mr Speaker – I have asked does he have any idea by when it will be completed?

1040

Hon. S E Linares: No, sir.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme
Selective voluntary reactivation for civil servants

1045

Clerk: Question 123, the Hon. J J Netto.

1050

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, has the Government informed certain civil servants that the Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme has been reactivated on a voluntary basis?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1055

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question with Question 124.

1060

Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme
Retired civil servants able to opt back in

Clerk: Question 124.

1065

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, has the Government introduced a scheme for retired civil servants who opted out of the Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme to opt back in again?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1070

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker. Once any necessary amendments to the Civil Service Widows' and Orphans' Act have been made, those eligible will be informed.

1075

Hon. J J Netto: Therefore, Mr Speaker, when the hon. Members opposite in their manifesto stated, and I quote:

'The Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme will immediately be reactivated on a voluntary basis for serving civil servants' was it just a political comment at the time of the election?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, it was no more than when they put in their manifesto that a new scheme had been introduced to provide for orphans and widows which, in fact, has not happened. They put in their manifesto that they had already introduced a new replacement scheme, and they had not introduced it and they were not telling the truth in their manifesto.

1085

The reality of it is that the immediate provision of the previous WOPS which dates back to 1958 was made on the assumption that we did not need to change any legislation, in order to provide it. There is no evidence that there is a requirement to do this in terms of meeting a demand – that is to say, the position is, if the hon. Member remembers, that when I asked the question about giving people the opportunity to opt back in, the answer that his Government gave me a number of years ago was that there was no evidence that civil servants, in fact, wanted to go back to the old WOPS and that when we had the last debate, the hon. Members opposite at the time, on this side, thought that there was nobody left in the Civil Service, we discovered that there was one person left who was the Clerk of the House.

1090

We are going to do it, simply to make it available, but not because we expect to see anybody actually turning up with the desire to re-enter. I can tell him that the commitment is to go back to the original provisions, which is that people would have to pay 1.5% of their salary and, going on the basis of what was there in 1958, they would have to pay the arrears for all the years that they have not paid, and that those arrears would have to be paid with 3% interest.

1095

The feedback that I have had recently is that, as a result of 100% commutation, there are many people who think they will be better off by commuting, because then they will be able to invest that money and have the entire amount of money available for their estate and for their widows.

So, we are going to do it, because we promised that we would do it, but not because we expect there is going to be any take-up.

Hon. J J Netto: The fact is that he will confirm that it was a political con, because the manifesto actually said it would be done immediately. Three months in Government, you have not done it. You promised something to buy votes from the Civil Service and you have not delivered. That is the fact.

So can I ask, Mr Speaker, given that he has confirmed that it was a political con (Interjection), given that it was him as Chief Minister, when he actually stopped the Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme back in 1989, and as a result since then, there have been many civil servants who have gone into employment and now have been in employment all throughout this time, how is it going to work for those particular civil servants to recuperate a number of years for which they have not been able to contribute towards this fund?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if we conned the electorate by promising something that apparently nobody wants, then I have to tell him the con that he perpetrated was even bigger, because he actually went with a manifesto saying he had introduced something that had not been introduced. Apparently, it is perfectly alright for him to go and tell people that the Government has already introduced a Widows' and Orphans' Scheme, which in fact was not introduced, was offered to the civil servants, was rejected by the civil servants. It is not there: they were lying in the manifesto when they said they had done it. They had not done it!

We promised to do it on the basis that there had been representations made to us by retired civil servants and therefore we were committed to do it. I have already told him, as far as we are concerned, when it would be done and the law is changed it will be available with effect from 9th December or available from the day the guy entered because, at the end of the day, what we are saying is that anybody that opted out, or anybody that joined and did not opt in, would be able to opt in. But the hon. Member seems to have forgotten that, for years, they were saying that there was no interest in the scheme, and he seems to be now telling me that we won the election on the basis of offering something that we have not done in the first nine weeks but that we intend to do.

Hon. J J Netto: Which you said 'immediately'.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, and he said he had already done it, Mr Speaker! So I said 'immediately' and I have not done it, (Interjections) and he said 'done it already' and he was lying even during the Election! (Interjections)

He can only accuse me of not being 100% able to deliver the commitment in nine weeks. He actually lied before the Election by telling people that he had already done something.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

I don't want to interrupt the Minister, but he used the word 'lying' earlier on, and you said 'lying' – (Interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not saying he lied himself, Mr Speaker; I am saying the manifesto on which he fought the election contained a lie, which was that something had been introduced which was not introduced. Now if he thinks it is such a horrendous crime for me not yet to have done in nine weeks what I said I would do immediately, even though it will have no effect, because there is nobody who has retired in those nine weeks who will not be able to opt in, because people will be able to opt in, if they are in service or they will be able to opt in if they are retired. So if somebody has retired in those nine weeks and wants to come and join WOPS, he will still be able to do it. The guys are still alive! Nobody has died in these nine weeks and therefore there are no widows and orphans that have been left high and dry!

So the reality is the hon. Member is trying to make a big issue of something that is not a big issue because, as happened in his time, there is no evidence that anybody, when we do it, is actually going to take it up. We are going to do it, because we said that we would do it, not because we think there is a huge demand – or any demand at all for that matter, and I have told him that, in fact, what I have done – which was also in the manifesto, although not spelled out – is that we have introduced the opportunity for civil servants to commute not just 25% of their pension but 100%, and that by commuting 100%, the feedback I have had is that, in fact, people think that that is a better alternative than the WOPS because they do not have to pay anything; they will be able to get a lump sum and therefore if they can get a reasonable return on that lump sum, it may be less than their pension, but if something happens to them, you know the whole of the estate, the whole of the value of their years of service will be available to their widows or their children.

So the fact is that we have put something already in place which probably is better than the WOPS, but we are still going to do the WOPS.

Clerk: Question 1–

Hon. J J Netto: Just one more further supplementary.

The Hon. Minister did actually say that he intends to bring about changes to the legislation. Can the Minister indicate by when he thinks he will be in a position to bring those particular amendments to the legislation?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I cannot tell you, because I do not know how long the people who draft these things take to draft them. They seem to be taking an inordinate length of time for some of the things that I thought could be done almost overnight! So it seems to take long – (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: Five minutes! If only it could be done in five minutes! (Laughter)

Hon. J J Bossano: I thought it could be done in 24 hours! (Laughter and interjections) I thought it could be done in 24 hours, because I did not think there was a need to change the law! (Interjections) And I simply did not think the law draftsman would take so long to do things that appear to me to be quite simple and straight forward! So I cannot give him a date.

But I can assure him that nobody will actually be prejudiced if it takes longer than I would wish it to take, because there is no evidence that people are queuing up to make use of this.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I think I heard the hon. Member correctly to say that he was reintroducing, in effect, the old WOPS on a voluntary basis, and I will not refer to his comments about our manifesto – not just in our manifesto; the hon. Member will recall that it was in my Budget speech last year, the introduction of the Spouses' and Dependents' Scheme and that, indeed, the legislation was going to be retrospective to the Budget, but for the same reason, there was just not enough legislative opportunity.

But that brings me to my supplementary, which is, in restoring the WOPS – and it remains to be seen whether there is demand for it or not – obviously, some people thought it sensible, even when there was a commutation opportunity – would the hon. Member at least consider one aspect of our proposed alternative Spouses' Scheme, which is to eliminate the discrimination on the grounds of sex? In other words, why should the taxpayer make provision for the surviving spouse of a male civil servant, but not for the surviving spouse of a female civil servant? That is why we changed from 'widows' to 'spouses' on the basis that, otherwise, this was just a facility available to surviving women, but not to surviving men. I do not think it would be too difficult – particularly if the hon. Member thinks that there is not going to be a huge take-up of this – to go that modern, if I could put it that way, in this area, and just make it on a spouses', rather than a widows' basis.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for bringing that to my attention, and I will bring it to the attention of the draftsman.

Hon. P R Caruana: And when he said he was restoring the scheme, has he considered the position of civil servants who have retired already? Will they get the opportunity to pay their arrears, or does he have it in his mind that it would apply only to serving civil servants?

And then, if he goes to existing civil servants, then he has got the question of the surviving widows of deceased civil servants. These are the sorts of issues that we grappled with, when we were aligning... and I am sure he will have to grapple with it, too.

So has he given any thought to whether he would extend at least to retired civil servants who may still be alive?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker.

1210 I answered two questions together and the answer that I gave applied to both categories. There was a question about the current and the retired and I gave one answer to both, on the basis that I am looking at what needs to be done for both – those in service and those who have left. I think what the Government proposed was not implemented, not just because of lack of logistics this time, but because, in fact, it was not found acceptable. So you know, we are committed to what was there before. If, in fact, the proposals of the Government intended to introduce, but were not introduced, had not been done because of lack of time, but had been found acceptable, we would have honoured those, but since they were not accepted –

1215

Hon. P R Caruana: Could I just add, is the hon. Member aware that what I announced in my Budget speech were not proposals; they had been proposals at the time of the Strategic Agreement negotiation with the unions? That agreement was voted down, as he knows. Some of the elements in it were a matter of Government policy and, therefore, in my Budget, I said notwithstanding the agreement, three or four elements of the aborted agreement, was the matter of Government policy going to be approached? The Government does not need the unions' agreement to offer a facility to its employees. Anybody who did not like did not have to take it up, as it was not compulsory.

1220

1225 So we announced that we were pressing ahead. It was not 'not done' because the unions' agreement was not available – I think the union were quite content with that. At least, they never expressed discontent.

Mr Speaker: Question then, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1230 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, can I ask the hon. Gentleman – I think I know the answer – but can he confirm that the intention in relation to the Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme is to make it applicable only to, effectively, civil servants in the defined benefits scheme and not in relation to the Provident Fund No 2 – the defined contributions – because, of course, the idea was when it was first introduced by the hon. Gentleman that anybody with a contributory pension, obviously, has a fund that their widows would be able to rely upon in case of the husband being deceased. Is that the position?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, the position is that the people for whom the fund was originally... the provisions of the WOPS was originally available were the people of the final salary scheme where, once the pensioner died – and in some very tragic cases it happened very quickly, immediately after retirement – there was a whole life investment which was lost and this was intended to provide that safety net for the widow.

1240 I think with both the new Superannuation Fund, which can go up to 25% per annum of the salary, and the ones that were already in existence – the No 2 Provident Fund – in those cases there is a cash sum which can be very substantial, and therefore the need to supplement the pension, because the pension is personal to the holder, as it were – it does not really arise in the same way.

1245 Hon. D A Feetham: But, of course, now that the hon. Gentleman has also said that, in relation to civil servants, they will be able to commute 100% of their pensions, the distinction, which I understood, is irrelevant, because the civil servant will be able to obtain 100% of their pensions and the Provident Fund No 2 or the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund, they will have a final salary existence.

1250 Does he not think that, therefore, it is slightly illogical for the Government to just make this available in relation to only civil servants, when that distinction really has been blurred by the changes that the hon. Gentleman has indicated the Government will make today?

1255 Hon. J J Bossano: No, because, in fact, as I have said in my original answer, I would not think that there is any interest or demand for this, partly because the alternative is better. That is to say, if somebody is able to leave £100 million to their widow, why would they want to be spending 1.5% of their income every year?

So I have made it very clear that this is not being provided as something for civil servants because we think the civil servants require it or want it. We are doing it because we said we would do it, but we do not expect that there will be a demand. If we find that there are people who want to pay that on top of paying to be in the Provident Fund, we will consider opening it, but I think once we move in this direction and have it available, we will see what interest there is.

We have got no problem with making it available to more people because the whole thing is funded by the contributor, not by the Government. The Government does not put any money into this.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman has just simply, in the answer he has given, proved the point that I was making in the question: that really, given that the civil servants are being allowed to commute 100% of their pensions as a lump sum, the rationale for introducing a Widows' and Orphans' Pension Scheme in the first place really will not exist, because those civil servants...

But anyway, Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman know, on average, how many civil servants have retired over the last four years?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know on average how many have retired. I know, from the questions that I have asked the previous Government, that the average is about 150. So that would have been about 600 in four years.

Hon. D A Feetham: Has he also done the calculations in relation to, say, for example, a civil servant who retires on a final salary of £30,000, how much the Government has to pay in relation to the commuting of 100% pension – the allowing of the civil servant to take 100% of their pension as a lump sum? Has he done those kinds of figures, in order to determine what kind of liability the Government is exposing itself in relation to retiring civil servants for the next four years, for example?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I would not call it a liability – what we have done is what we think is the right thing to do, which is to give them the same opportunity to convert their pension into a lump sum that is going to be included in the new superannuation fund and is already there in the others. We believe that they should have that choice and that they should be given that choice.

We have not calculated and we cannot calculate because in fact so far, nobody has asked for more than 25% commutation. We will have to see how many people want it.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, 25% commutation, of course, because those are the existing rules and you have only been in office for two and a half months. (Interjection) But surely, the hon. Gentleman and the Government must have given some thought as to the bill that the Government is going to be picking up over the next four years by actually agreeing to pay 100% commutation of civil servants' pensions up front. That was not the position so far. Now, have you given any thought at all to that?

Hon. J J Bossano: I mean, I don't know, Mr Speaker, whether the questions in Parliament which require me to produce information also require that I have to share with the hon. Members opposite what I think, the things I have given thought to or not given thought to.

I can tell him that I am satisfied that if every civil servant decides to commute, the costs can be met.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Gentleman aware that, for example, in relation to a civil servant that retires on a final salary of £30,000, the Government is actually looking at a bill of £600,000. Is he aware of that? Just one civil servant.

Hon. J J Bossano: What I am aware of is the fact that the hon. Member is against this policy.

Hon. D A Feetham: No. I have not said that. I am asking questions of the Government as to whether they have given sufficient thought to this particular policy and I am quite entitled to do that because of course... Is it the position of the Government that if it is going to be paying commutation of pensions, over £½ million for 20 civil servants every single year for the next four years...

Does he not accept that, in the light of that, that their arguments in relation to public finances simply do not stand up to closer scrutiny and the public finances of Gibraltar cannot possibly be as bad as the hon. Gentleman and the Government opposite claim to be when, in fact, you are agreeing to provide and pay this amount of money to civil servants up front.

Hon. J J Bossano: The answer is that I do not accept anything he has said and that he is wrong in thinking that the cost will be what he claims the cost will be or that there will be a difficulty in financing it. There is a method of financing which will not produce the result that the hon. Member thinks. The fact that he does not know how to do it, that is his misfortune. I am not here to explain to him how these things are going to be done.

I can tell him that it can be done and that if everyone wants to take it up it will be done in a way that does not produce the results that he claims.

1320

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member able to confirm whether, in respect of existing civil servants to which I have understood he is going to make this facility of 100% commutation available, the commutation calculation will be on the same basis as they can presently commute part of their pension? In other words, the pension is calculated, and that this is not... the hon. Member is not planning some sort of net present value of a future annual entitlement.

1325

If it is as I am assuming it is – subject to what he may tell me when he gets up – if it is a simple extension, in percentage terms, of the present permissible commutation, would the hon. Member agree with me that, on the assumption that – which is an assumption – but on the assumption which he believes to be likely to happen, that all civil servants opt for this, the actual cost of it can be relatively easily calculated because, if we know the number of civil servants that retire, we know roughly what the annual cost is of gratuities – which is just another word for the permissible degree of commutation at present – and we just increase that to 100% we know by what factor the present gratuity bill would increase in any year, assuming that there isn't an odd year here or there? It seems to be more or less static, so that the hon. Member has a pretty good idea of how much it would be and that it could be very considerable indeed.

In other words, if he takes the present commutation bill he can extrapolate, by increasing the percentage of permissible commutation what the per annum, in capital cost, if I could call it that, would be. Although I know that he likes to do financial striptease acts, I just do not see how, for existing civil servants – for existing civil servants – I can see how, in the future, the Government make an arrangement of creating a fund to fund this, but for existing civil servants I have to admit that I have to join my friend the Hon. Daniel Feetham in the crowd of people who do not see how this could be funded by anybody other than the Government in respect of existing civil servants. I mean, for example, if there is a civil servant who retires the day after he announces this policy, he implements this policy, the cost of his 100% commuted policy can only be funded by the Government and not by anybody else.

1340

1345

Hon. J J Bossano: I can confirm that there is no change in the methodology of calculating the commutation. That is to say we have already, we have already changed the regulation so that it is already the case that there is no longer 25% in whatever the regulation is and it now says 100% and I can tell him that there is a way of doing it that will not have the result that he predicts and that he will see that when he sees the estimates.

Equalisation at 60 for men and women

Clerk: Question 125.

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, when will the Government be able to pay the Social Security Old Age Pension at 60 for men and women?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment. Question 125.

Minister for Enterprise, Training & Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government expects to pay the Social Security Pension at the age of 60 for men and women when it becomes compulsory under EU law – before 2020.

1365

Hon J J Netto: Does the Government have any indication whatsoever when they intend to do it, given that it is their policy?

1370

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the policy is to introduce a new pension scheme on 1st July, and that new pension scheme on 1st July, because it is a new pension scheme under EU law, will have to provide for the people that joined that new one to be eligible when they are 60.

1375 Hon J J Netto: Could I ask whether what he is actually saying is that European legislation specifically states that the equalisation has to be at 60 or is it that the European legislation specifies that individual Member States can exercise a level of equality at whatever age they see is fit to do it for that particular jurisdiction?

1380 Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member is correct in saying what is required is equalisation and therefore it would be possible to meet the EU law by increasing the age of retirement for women, and making them both 65, or by doing what some people have done which is to do it at 63 and bring the men down 2 years and put the women up 3 years. The policy which we announced many years ago, to which we still subscribe, is that the equalisation be done at 60.

1385 Hon J J Netto: So I take it, then, that the view that the Government takes is that they will equalise at the age of 60 whenever they are told by the European Union we have to equalise and therefore we will equalise at 60 – which is sometime... you mentioned... sorry?
2020

1390 Hon J J Netto: 2020, so I suppose it is quite far away from now? That's alright

Hon. J J Bossano: Okay, thank you.

1395

DSS monthly expenditure reports to Financial Secretary Availability from September 2011

1400 Clerk: Question 126, the Hon J J Netto.
[Technical interruption]

1405 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Government now in a position, following their rethink of last month, to provide a copy of the monthly expenditure returns report from the Department of Social Security to the Financial Secretary commencing from September 2011 to date.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1410 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker the Government has decided that they will not be providing this information.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask on what basis?

1415 Hon J J Bossano: Well, on the basis that, as far as the Government is concerned, this is information that is required for the controlling officers to do their job and transmit that information to the Financial Secretary.

1420 Ministers are not getting this information, have not been offered it and are not seeking it. When I used to ask for information on the progress of Government revenue and expenditure – I used to ask for it once every 6 months. – I only asked for heads of expenditure. I did not ask for sub-heads and the hon. Member opposite used to tell me I would have to wait a couple of months to get it, and I did. So I think it is not a reasonable thing to produce, basically, the equivalent of the estimates book with every single sub-head every month. We are not seeking this for ourselves: we think it is a job for the controlling officer and for the officials, not for the politicians.

1425 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker I have to say that is a very poor excuse for not giving information. I mean the fact that it is a report being done by the controlling officer to the Financial Secretary, right, that doesn't mean that all of us in this legislature, we are not participants of the whole process, because we are the ones in fact who have to vote for the Appropriation Bill right? The fact of the matter is that this is a report that costs no effort whatsoever to pass a copy to other Members of the Opposition. The extent of the effort that is required is that when the Executive Officer has to print 2 copies – one for the Department and one for the Financial Secretary, the Executive Officer will print a 3rd copy, put it into an envelope and pass it to the Member of the Opposition. So it requires no effort whatsoever, so the hon. Member cannot say that this will produce some kind of disproportionate amount of effort in being able to produce it. It is being done systematically every month and all that is required is sending one extra copy to the printers. He is just being difficult in not passing information. It is the classic attitude that the Members have of not being transparent, particularly him, it is the philosophy of I only have the information, and I am going to be damned if anybody else is going to have the information. It is simply his typical character of not allowing people to be given in this Parliament necessary information and the Chief Minister actually should tell the Minister for Employment that if he wants to take credit for transparency this is the place where he should do it.

Mr Speaker: There is no question there.

Hon J J Bossano: Notwithstanding the fact that he has not asked me anything, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) I have to tell him that if he attaches so much importance to this, for 15 years they haven't done it! They haven't volunteered to provide all this information to the people of the Parliament for 15 years. I don't think it is desirable for every single month and every single penny and every single change in this book to be made public. We are not seeking it for ourselves. We are not asking for it and therefore it is something that was introduced by the previous administration, apparently, which certainly did not exist in 1996. Therefore, if the hon. Member thinks it is now desirable to do it, if he ever gets re-elected he can volunteer to do it.

We have taken the policy decision on this, and this is the policy decision, but I need to remind him that, in my original answer, I pointed out that I used to be satisfied with much less than he is asking – I asked once a year for total heads of revenue and expenditure to be provided to me and, when I asked for it in October or November, I usually got told that I had to wait until December because that is how long it took to put the information together. From what he is telling me, what I was being told in the House, it was not true – it was readily available all the time, at the end of each month in much more detail than I was asking!

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am sure the hon. Member would agree with me that the right of this Parliament to information, and a right to ask for information, it may or may not be mirrored by their right to deny it to us. But our right to seek information is not curtailed or circumscribed by the information that they saw fit to ask for when they were on this side of the House. Had that been the case, then in 1996 there would not have been an explosion in the increase in information, compared to before. In other words, if every incoming Parl.. if every incoming Government were to say I won't provide you with information that I did not used to ask when I was in Opposition, and that went on and on and on, then there would never be any increase in the amount of information as we presided over.

But, in any event... so, Mr Speaker, we do reserve, on this side, the right to ask for information, whether they saw fit to ask for it before or whether, indeed, the Government spontaneously offered it before. The Government does not spontaneously offer information. But can I say, because the hon. Member said in his last answer that they had taken a policy decision that they did not think it appropriate for this information to be handed out monthly, would it assist the hon. Member in coming to a different conclusion if we were to ask for it less frequently than monthly, say quarterly or something like that.

I tell you what the purpose... I suppose why my colleague is seeking the information and, indeed, why we introduced the system in the first place – this was a means of allowing the Government and, therefore, Parliament to monitor the likelihood that a Department would overspend before the year end, if by, you know, calculating their monthly outgoings you could predict whether a Department would run out of voted funds before the end of the financial year, and this was a means of budgetary control.

Now, I can understand that the hon. Members may not want to give us that information monthly because, I don't know, any number of reasons I can think of that might create a rod for the giver's back. Would it help if it was asked for less frequently, say quarterly or something like that?

Hon J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the issue is not the frequency with which the information is delivered but the degree of detail – because when he is talking about the value of this information in predicting the result, that is precisely what the information I sought from him was doing because, at the end of the day, if you have got a head of expenditure which has got expenditure of £20 million that is then broken down in to 200 sub-heads, where one sub-head is going up and another is coming down, it is completely irrelevant to the prediction as to whether the £20 million that had been voted is going to be exceeded or not.

1485 When I used to ask him for the information at the end of September it was precisely to get an idea of whether the level of spending in the first 6 months of the year which he always used to remind me was no indication to the eventual outcome. He always preceded his answer to be by saying (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

1490 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon J J Bossano: Well, the answer is not about being quarterly, it is the fact that you are asking not has the £20 million been spent in the first month or three months, or sixth months and therefore we are likely to overspend the 20 million but 'are you spending more on paper clips and less on rubber bands every month?' That level of detail is not about controlling over expenditure.

1495 If you want to know about controlling over expenditure then you ask whether the budget of the Department is likely to be exceeded and that simply requires the figure which we vote because, at the end of the day, as the hon. Member knows, when we vote a head of expenditure the Financial Secretary can, in any case, authorise movement from one sub-head to the other. But the ultimate figure that matters is the headline figure, it is the fact that you are asking for every single line of the book to be provided either monthly or quarterly... (Interjections)

1500 Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member would give way just a minute...

1505 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to be giving the impression that the report I am seeking to have may contain 200/300 pages. The report I am seeking would have 10 pages of information.

Hon J J Bossano: No, that is not correct – it may only contain 10 pages in respect of the one he is asking me about the Department in which he used to be but if we do it for everybody – presumably he is not saying 'can I be the one that is given this information and don't give it to anyone else in the Opposition?' In each Department that is what he is asking for that Department. It means the whole book.

1510 Yes, it does, because when he waved that piece of paper at me at the last meeting of the House, I went back and asked to be given a copy of it because I had not seen it. Then what I saw was that, in fact, it was the change in the first month, with seven columns showing every single item in the sub-heads, how they had gone up and down, and now, if you do that for the whole book, it means you take the approved estimates voted by the House with every single sub-head and every single movement up and down and every single prediction based on every single movement, and that is seven more columns.

1515 That system, which they introduced to have an effective running total, the internal accounts of the Government... That is what he is asking for, the whole internal accounts of the Government. I remember, at one stage, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, as Chief Minister, told me on one occasion about some information that I was asking for the Government... to give him a copy of everything that goes through the Treasury and the Accountant General. Well, that is exactly what is being requested now.

1520 It is something that we are not seeking because he might have had... I doubt that he had the time, frankly, to go through all this mass of figures when he was here, but certainly I cannot think of any of us that have got the time to even look at this thing, never mind scrutinise it on the basis to try and make some kind of political judgement as to whether too much money has been spent in one month, as opposed to the other.

1525 But, at the end of the day, the point that I make is that the argument about the control of public spending, which is the role of the Government and, indeed, the role of the Parliament, is met totally by the figure that you vote for the heads. So if you vote £20 million for Social Services and we are finding that we are spending more money on social assistance and less money on something else, at the end of the day that is all in the final figure. The estimates only need to be supplemented, either through a supplementary appropriation sub-head at the end of the estimate or by bringing a Supplementary Appropriation Bill. If the head is exceeded within that head, heads of department and controlling officers and the Financial Secretary have got the freedom that, if they overspend on one sub-head and they have got under-spending in another one, they can vire the money from one sub-head to the other and do it.

1530 So, the controlling of the Parliament and the controlling of the Government is on the basis that the overall budget and the budget per Department should be adhered to and be as close as possible to the approved estimate. We accept that that is the rule, but not that every time somebody says, 'Well, look, this month we 1540 have had a lot of people seeking supplementary benefit'... Well, if he asks about supplementary benefit, he gets the information, but we do not accept that it is desirable for either us to all be involved in doing all this figure work, or indeed for all that to be put in the public domain and open up the entire movement of every penny in and out of every Department on every item. It has never been done before. I do not expect it will ever be done. It never occurred to us to ask for it and I doubt very much whether they would volunteer to do it if they were ever back here.

1545 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if I am correctly understanding the hon. Member, his position is this – is it ?– the information can be provided and it is available, without the usual parliamentary reason of disproportionate administrative effort, but the Government does not consider it appropriate to give that information to the House, on the basis that they think it is too detailed, or too transient or too unforensic about anything that the House should be interested in?

1550 Hon. J J Bossano: It is as I have explained. What I can tell him is that the Government can provide him with more than he provided to us, in the sense that he thought asking for the figures more than once a year, on the totals for the six months, was asking for too much. We are happy to give him the totals every month,

1555 [Technical interruption]

but the detailed breakdowns he is asking for [Technical interruption]

1560

The House recessed for 15 minutes from 11.00 a.m. to 11.15 a.m.

1565 Clerk: Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just before we go on –

Clerk: We were on Question 126.

1570 Mr Speaker: Yes, the Minister for Employment was cut off in mid stream, with apologies. Do carry on.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Well, I think the main stream has dried up! I will leave it where I left it.

1575 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, clearly the Government is not going to change its policy decision in providing me with a copy of the monthly report, no matter how reasonable my argument is.

1580 The fact is that the policy decision is only intended to silence me in my ability to ask questions to the Member opposite on matters of financial control in the Department of Social Security, which is a matter for which we all collectively have responsibility by voting the Appropriation Bill but, whatever the argument, he has decided he is not going to give me the information. He thinks he can silence me as a result of that.

1585 I think it is a sad day for Parliament. It is a sad day for democracy. It runs totally contrary to the image that the Chief Minister is trying to portray of transparency and, quite frankly, I have to tell the hon. Member that, whilst I cannot force him to give me the information, right, I will certainly continue in different ways to get the information.

Mr Speaker: One moment.

I must remind the Hon. Mr Netto that they have to be questions. One cannot end a mini-debate on a question, followed by supplementaries, with a parting shot of a statement. There has to be a question.

1590 The Hon. the Minister for Employment, do you want to say anything?
We move on to the next Question.

Disability Allowance
Withdrawal from those entering employment

1595 Clerk: Question 127, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, when does the Minister for Social Security and Employment intend to withdraw the Disability Allowance from disabled persons who are in employment, in accordance with their GSLP/Liberal manifesto?

1600 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Can I just point out to the hon. Member that he is misquoting the GSLP/Liberal manifesto but, of course, it is not his manifesto, so he probably is entitled to say what he likes about it.

1605 The position is that, under the present administrative arrangements, that have been there for a very long time, a disabled person's Disability Allowance had until now been completely withdrawn when the disabled person commenced full-time employment. The Government intends to reduce the disabled person's Disability Allowance on a staggered basis, instead of all at once, and this will not commence until the second month in employment. So in the first month there will be no deduction from the Disability Allowance.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member says I am misquoting the hon. Member. What the manifesto says is:

1615 'When disabled people in receipt of Disability Allowance start work, the Allowance will be withdrawn on a staggered basis.'

So, whether staggered or not staggered, you are saying – the people in the Government today were saying at the time that it was going to be withdrawn.

1620 That is what actually prompted my question.

My supplementary question, Mr Speaker, given that the hon. Member seems to be saying that it is going to be on a staggered basis, will this take into account the fact that, by doing such a process, some disabled people could be out of pocket, because some disabled people, by the nature of the disability, may have to either periodically buy certain equipment, certain services which they need to have, which some of them, in some cases, are expensive in nature? One of the things that can actually happen is that a disabled person can get a job, hopefully, and start drawing an income, as a result of that particular job, then start losing the Disability Allowance on a staggered basis, and then find himself financially in a much worse situation than before.

1625 So should not the Government then consider that by simply having a process that does not take into account the circumstances of the disabled person, that particular disabled person might be worse off?

1630 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the reason why I drew the hon. Member's attention to the original question is that the original question said 'intend to withdraw', as if, in fact, it had never been withdrawn in the past! Is it that he does not know that, when he was in office, it was withdrawn immediately and that what we are doing is an improvement on what existed, and that we are now going to do it in stages?

1635 That is the point that I am making in my original answer. We are actually saying the administrative system that has been there, not just when he was in Government, going all the way back – it has always been there – was that the Disability Allowance ended when you got your first pay packet. We are now saying it will not end when you get your first pay packet. In the second month, so as to make sure that you are not caught between two stools, given that the Disability Allowance is paid up front, and the wages are paid with retrospection, normally, you could actually finish up removing the allowance before you get paid. That is not the intention and, therefore, we do not want that to happen.

1640 In the second month, the position is that we will introduce a system where we do it in stages, so that you do not have the abrupt shift, and the adjustment for the person will be gradual.

If, indeed, there are any cases such as the one that is mentioned, then I will certainly make sure that the people that manage these payments are aware of that risk and bear it in mind in the nature of the stages.

1645 But all I can tell him is that I do not believe that can be very common because, otherwise, it would have shown up when the allowance was being eliminated immediately. If somebody gets employment and they lost the allowance immediately then, by definition, if the allowance was more than the pay, the guy will simply give up his job and go back to the allowance – he will be better off!

1650 Hon. J J Netto: But, in actual fact, Mr Speaker, the allowance was not withdrawn, neither in the four years I was as Minister, and perhaps he might even notice himself, but when... I think I have got it here, actually – yes, in response to a Written Question, Question 20 of 2012, when I asked ‘Can the Minister for Social Security state how many persons were in receipt of a Disability Allowance, blah, blah...?’ at the bottom, it says:

1655 ‘As of 30th January 2012, 162 persons are currently in receipt of Disability Allowance, of which six are in long-term employment and 15 in supported employment.’

1660 So we know there have been at least six disabled persons in long-term employment. I do not know how long they have been, but certainly for a long while. So, what I am saying to the hon. Member is that, even in relation to these ones, already in long-term employment, if they start removing the Disability Allowance, they could find themselves out of pocket as a result of the introduction of this policy by the new Government.

1665 Presumably, as the hon. Member seems to be suggesting, before actually taking away the Disability Allowance, they will look at the circumstances of both these six and the other... I cannot remember the number now – the other 15, before such a decision is taken. Is that the case?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the case is, Mr Speaker, according to the people who run the system, there is an arrangement where part 5, article 15(3), states:

1670 ‘The payment of the allowance shall be suspended if the disabled person is employed in full-time employment.’

1675 Therefore the advice that I have been given is that if people have full-time employment, they lose the allowance. I would have thought that if the allowance was more than the full-time employment, nobody would be encouraged to go into full-time employment, to be actually worse off than they were when they were getting the allowance.

1680 The purpose of the exercise that we are introducing now is to make sure that people are not worse off as a result of employment than they were before. We are going to do it in stages, and I will make sure that those who operate the stages will never allow a stage to be reached where people are actually in the red as a result of employment. The point that is made – I have noted it and I will make sure that those people take that into factoring the way the stages operate, so that, you know what he thinks, could happen if we are not on the look-out for it, might happen, and I will make sure that it does not happen.

1685 Unemployment benefit
Resident applications by nationality and industry

Clerk: Question 128, the Hon. J J Netto.

1690 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment state how many resident persons applied for unemployment benefit in the month of January 2012, broken down by nationality and industry group?

1695 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I hand over to the hon. Member the list giving him the information he has requested.

1700 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, in relation to the figures given in the first particular column, under ‘Construction’, we have 11 British, 7 Moroccan and 2 Spanish: will the Minister indicate whether these particular persons who receive unemployment benefit are mainly from the various subsidiary companies that were attached to GJBS? Does he know that, from the information he might have available?

Answer to Question 128 of 2012

The following table shows the number of resident persons who have applied for Unemployment Benefit, broken down by nationality and industry group, for the month of January 2012:

Industry Group	British	Moroccan	Spanish	Other EU
Electricity and Water Supply	1	-	-	-
Construction	11	7	2	-
Wholesale and Retail Trade	10	1	1	1
Hotels and Restaurants	6	2	-	-
Financial Intermediation	3	-	-	-
Real Estate and Business Activities	11	1	-	-
Public Administration and Defence	4	-	-	-
Health and Social Work	2	-	-	-
Other Services	10	-	1	-
Total	58	11	4	1

1705 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I have not asked the Department to provide me with the names of the people who were receiving unemployment benefit but, in fact, I would say that a turnover of 21 persons in the construction industry in one month is probably normal.

1710 There is, as the hon. Member must know, a constant taking on and laying off of people in all the construction sites. So there is no particular reason why these 21 should have come from subsidiaries of GJBS on Government projects if... in fact, I think most of the people who were laid off were frontier workers and will have claimed unemployment benefit on the other side, where it is considerably higher.

1715 Statutory Benefit Fund
January payments arising from an insolvent employee

Clerk: Question 129, the Hon. J J Netto.

1720 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment state what payments were made out of the Statutory Benefit Fund for the month of January 2012 arising from the insolvency of an employee?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1725 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer the question with Question 130, Mr Speaker.

1730

Statutory Benefit Fund
January payments arising from employers' insolvency

Clerk: Question 130.

1735

Hon. J J Netto: My colleague seems to be saying that I misread the word 'employer' for 'employee', so anyway...

Clerk: Question 130.

1740

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment provide a statement of the payments made from the Statutory Benefits Fund in respect of employers' insolvency in the month of January 2012, showing the amount paid due to redundancy pay obligations, the amount paid in respect of other sums payable to employees, the number of companies involved, the industry group affected and the number of beneficiaries that are either residents or not?

1745

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1750

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, happily, there was no insolvency of employers in January 2012, so no payments are to be made.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Jaime Netto.

1755

Hon. J J Netto: If there was no insolvency, when does the...? I suppose that the demise of the subsidiary company of GJBS might have occurred in December then. Is that the case?

1760

Hon. J J Bossano: No subsidiary Government company has been declared insolvent. (Interjections) Any payments that were due to them were paid by the company.

Social assistance Numbers and breakdown of January claimants

1765

Clerk: Question 131, the Hon. J J Netto.

1770

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment state what was the number of persons receiving social assistance at the end of January 2012, giving a breakdown by age and sex and showing periods in receipt of social assistance broken down in groups of less than three months, four to six months, seven to twelve months, between one to two years, two to five years, five to ten years, and over ten years?

1775

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Member the list giving the information that he has requested. [see following page]

1780

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I notice that part of the information at the bottom is that the breakdown I am seeking to have in those particular periods of time cannot be made available because of the computer database system that they have. Is it something they have that... the software system that they have and the way they record the information can be made available at a future date, perhaps?

Hon. J J Bossano: Apparently not, from what they tell me. When they input a figure, the previous figure 1785 disappears, so with the Microsoft Excel spreadsheet, they can only provide the information on the day that they access it, but they do not have any historical record of what it was a month before or two months before, three months before, and that is the system they have been using all the time.

1790 I do not know whether there is an alternative programme that they can use which would keep the historical data. There is no objection politically to them changing the system if they can think of another system that provides the information and can show... But the only way, it seems to me, from the way the explanation has been given to us and to him is that, clearly, only by getting the figures every month can you tell from one month to the next what the totals have changed. But that does not tell us whether the 531 total people on supplementary benefits at the end of January were the same as the month earlier, even if the figure is the same. So even if the figure has changed from one month to another, the changes could be new people getting social assistance and other people getting employment and no longer getting social assistance, because the time that they have been on it is not provided.

I think it can be done manually but, of course, that would mean going through 531 one by one.

Answer to Question 131 of 2012

Persons receiving social assistance at the end of January 2012 by month, age and sex.

	Age 18-25	Age 26-35	Age 36-45	Age 46-60	Total	Males	Females
Jan-12	87	136	136	172	531	200	331

I am informed by the department that the information requested with regard to how many of the above listed persons have been receiving Social Assistance, broken down in periods of less than 3 months, 4 to 6 months, 7 to 12 months, between 1-2 years, 2-5 years, 5-10 years and over 10 years, cannot be provided due to the information not being held in a dedicated computer database system. This information is held in an MS Excel spreadsheet which does not retain historical information.

1800 Hon. J J Netto: No, Mr Speaker, I am not suggesting that the work should be done monthly, but I think, at the very least, that if the Minister can perhaps take a policy decision and, in future, it can be changed, obviously that would be welcome.

1805 The other way perhaps, thinking aloud, that can be done is because if the Department of Social Security have the printout at the end of the month on the question he is asked, and that particular printout with names is given to your own staff at the Ministry of Employment, actually, they, I do believe, can provide figures for those particular breakdowns between those particular months and years, at least for those people in social assistance who are registered unemployed.

1810 In other words, if there were to be some communication between your staff in Social Security and your staff in the Employment Department, for the purpose of saying, well, Social Security cannot go retrospectively but certainly they can have a printout, send it over to Employment and, given that Employment do have the software programme which is not labour intensive, then they can do it, inasmuch as those who are registered unemployed and getting social assistance... It may not give me the whole picture of everyone in social assistance, but it would probably give me a good, fair, accurate picture for a lot of them.

1815 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not think that would produce the result the hon. Member...

First of all, I think the numbers that are actually registered unemployed are of the order of 10%. So we might be talking about 53 out of 530. Secondly, even if we were able to say to the hon. Member for how long the 53 had been unemployed, it would not necessarily follow that all the time they had been unemployed they had been getting social assistance. There is nothing in the Profile 2000 program that tell us if people are on social assistance or not.

1820 So I think, short of changing the programme from Excel to something else, I do not think it can be done. It is either that or manually, as far as I can tell.

Hon. J J Netto: But the 2000 programme can be amended to incorporate that, surely?

1825 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether it can or not. I mean, he is the one who introduced it in 2000! I am told it is something nobody uses any more, and the one guy that is left that understands it has to be brought out from London every time something has got to be done to it! So I am not very sure how much longer we are going to be using that, frankly.

1830 I would prefer to find a way in which a programme that is not specifically written for us in the Department but one that many people can share could be made more useful than what we have got at the moment. I think the best thing to do is to ask people to look to see if they can produce a system in the DLSS that can give them a breakdown of how long people have been getting social assistance, because I think it is useful information for them there – quite apart from the Employment Department.

1835 Hon. J J Netto: So do I take it, then, that the hon. Members is going to request that to the Department of Social Security?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am going to ask them to look into whether it can be done. I do not know enough about computer programming to be able to say that it can be done.

1840 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

1845 Future Job Strategy
Employment Training Company participants

Clerk: Question 132, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1850 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Minister for Employment confirm whether there are any individuals employed by Employment Training Company Ltd as part of the Future Job Strategy on 11-month contracts, and if so, how many?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1855 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question with Questions 133 and 134.

1860 Future Job Strategy
Transferees into Employment Training Company

Clerk: Question 133.

1865 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to any employees employed by Employment Training Company Ltd as part of the Future Job Strategy on 11-month contracts, how many of these were transferred to that scheme from existing training schemes, where their training contracts exceeded 11 months?

1870 Employment Training Company
Management structure

1875 Clerk: Question 134.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment explain the management structure of Employment Training Company Ltd, and whether anyone has been employed to run that company?

1880 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of employees in the company with contracts of up to 11 months is at present 270, none of whom were training on contracts that exceeded 11 months. There are no managers employed by the company.

1885 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, I did not quite get the last bit.

Hon. J J Bossano: There are no managers. The company employs just the trainees, nothing else.

1890 Hon. D A Feetham: May I ask the hon. Gentleman to actually check, go back to his officials in his Department, because I know of at least one person who was on a three-year training contract in relation, in fact, with the Training and Construction Centre as part of the European Structural Fund Vocational Training Scheme on a three-year contract and now he has been placed on 11-month contract. Would the hon. Gentleman undertake to go back and re-check with his officials whether that is the case?

1895 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, all the people that are in training, other than in employment placements – that is to say, the people who are doing nurse training, construction training, Gibdock training – all those will continue beyond 11 months. The 11 months are just related to their wages from the employment which replaces the previous allowances. Therefore, everybody currently is on 11 months. In fact, it does not mean that people at the end of the 11 months will lose their income; it just means that is how the company has been set up initially, and we expect the bulk of them to be in other permanent jobs before the 11 months and there will be a movement of people in and out of this company.

1900 But the apprenticeship schemes that go beyond the period that this contract is for continue in place. That has not changed.

1905 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, he has not answered my question.

I asked my original question. Your answer was ‘there is nobody that is now on 11-month contract that was, in fact, on more than 11 months before they were placed on 11-month contract.’ What I am suggesting to you is that, in fact, I know of one individual who had a contract for three years with the Construction Training Centre and now has been shifted to 11-month contract. I am asking the hon. Gentleman – it is not contentious – whether he will go back to his officials and check the position.

1910 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not need to go back and check, Mr Speaker. The information that I have is that the people who were in the Construction Training Centre getting £450 did not have a contract saying ‘you will get £450 for three years’. They had a training contract with the Centre and their pay, which came from Bleak House, was not on the basis that that was their pay for three years. Therefore, the contract that gives them £912 has replaced the payment they were getting of £450, which was not guaranteed for three years, or one year or at all.

1915 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am not trying to be controversial. When I am going to be controversial as, in fact, will be the case later on, no doubt, the hon. Gentleman is going to blow a gasket!

1920 Does he not accept that there is a difference between the position of somebody earning... As he has outlined, nobody is going to be earning x amount for x amount of time. What I am saying to you is that, in fact, there were people – at least one individual – who was on a three-year contract with the Construction Training Centre. All I am asking is: will you go back and just check? That is all I am asking.

1925 Hon. J J Bossano: I know, Mr Speaker, and I have told him that I have already checked and that the answer is there are people in the Construction Training Centre who are doing NVQ 1, NVQ 2 and NVQ 3. If they have done NVQ 1, they go on to NVQ 2. That does not mean that they are guaranteed that they will stay three years if they do not pass NVQ 1. So they do not have a contract –

1930 Hon. D A Feetham: If they pass, of course they are!

Hon. J J Bossano: If they pass, right. So, therefore, what the new contract is doing is increasing their pay from £450 to £912 in each of the three years, and therefore they have three one-year placements, one for each year. If they pass year 1, they go to year 2. That has not changed.

The nature of the relationship with the Construction Training Centre has not been changed at all, and they still have the same relationship, with the same guarantees that they had before.

So what the hon. Member is trying to imply is that, as opposed to being able to carry on three years in the Construction Training Centre, they are only going to be there now for 11 months, the answer is no. The 11-month contract with the Employment Company is only as regards to their getting paid the new salary and does not alter whatever they have got in writing from the Construction Training Centre.

1940

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the reason for these 11-month contracts to prevent trainees from acquiring statutory unfair dismissal rights after 12 months? (Applause)

1945

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, no more than the previous system and the £450 which excluded them, irrespective of how long they were, from all the statutory rights, where the definition of 'worker' excluded people on Government training schemes. (Several Members: Shame!) (Interjections)

I think that to suggest that, somehow, we are removing rights after 11 months from people who had zero rights before we gave them the rights during the 11 months, is quite extraordinary!

1950

The reality of it is that the 11 months is because the scheme starts on 1st February, and is designed for the 11 months of 2012. Those people that require to continue (Interjections) will be given up to three years, if that is the time they need for the training, (A Member: Hear, hear.) depending on the nature of the training that they require and the nature of the skills that they are getting! (Applause) So they are getting a contract for this year. (Interjections)

1955

Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is that, yes, they are being given 11-month contracts in order to prevent them from acquiring statutory unfair dismissal rights, is it?

1960

Hon. J J Bossano: No, the answer is no, that is not the reason!

The reason is because there are 11 months left in 2012 and it started on 1st February. It is a contract for 2012. If there were 13 months, they would have got a contract for 12 months. That is the answer. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: So, of course, if they get taken on in November or December, they only get one-month contracts. Is that the position?

1965

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I have not yet discussed whether we should be doing that or not – (Several Members: Ah!) (Laughter) We may well do it – I do not know what we will do in March. I can tell him that everybody who starts in February will get an 11-month contract, and it is quite possible that those who start in March will get 10 so that all the contracts are renewed on 1st January.

1970

But if we wanted to deprive them of their statutory rights to unfair dismissal, all we had to do was to leave them on the terms they were for the last 15 years and – (Applause and interjections) (Several Members: Hear, hear!) when they had no right to unfair dismissal, no right to the minimum wage, no right to annual leave, no right to sick leave, no right to injury at work. So I would have thought (Interjection) that even if the hon. Member was correct – which he is not – and I am not confirming what he said; I am denying it – even if he were correct, it would mean that out of 12 things that they were previously denied, we have given them 11. But he is wrong: we have given them the 12. (Applause)

1975

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept – (Several Members: No!) (Laughter) Listen to the answer first!

Does he not accept, and does he not agree with me, that the purported reason for the introduction of this particular scheme, as outlined on numerous occasions by the hon. Gentleman opposite, was to ensure that trainees have full statutory employment rights (Applause) and that the effect of giving them an 11-month contract is to do the complete opposite? (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Applause) Isn't that what – ?

1980

Several Members: Hear, hear! (Applause)

1985

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have already said 'no' to him three times. I am quite happy to stand up and say, no, I do not accept that and I do not agree, (Interjections)

1990 Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member is imputing a reason – and he is wrong – that might be the reason he would have if he were doing it because it is quite obvious, if he thinks I am doing it, it must be because that is what he would be doing if he were in my place.

1995 I am not doing it to deprive them of the right of unfair dismissal, because they will not be unfairly dismissed, period.

Clerk: Question 1 –

2000 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman is obviously determined not to answer the question, so I am not going to press him on that, but does he think that it is very socialist for a socialist Government to be introducing a policy that could have the effect of depriving trainees of statutory unfair dismissal rights? (Interjections)

2005 Hon. J J Bossano: I certainly do not think the hon. Member's history allows him to express judgements on what is socialist or not socialist. (Members: Hear, hear.) That is clear and the fact that somebody has a contract for 11 months is not evidence that the intention is to sack him at the end of the 11 months and not give him the right to go to a tribunal. This is nonsense, because then the hon. Member is saying that everybody ought to be given a 12-month contract, something they never did in 15 years with hundreds and hundreds of youngsters that went through the schemes.

2010 If he thinks it is the right thing to do, why did they not implement it in 15 years? He is now criticising something that, by any stretch of the imagination, is an improvement on what there was. I can tell him that nobody will lose their job at the end of the 11 months. He can take it or leave it. Time will tell who is telling the truth.

2015 Clerk: Question 1 –

2020 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member acknowledge that my colleague's last supplementary asked him not about his motives for doing it, but the effect of doing it.

2025 Hon. J J Bossano: No.

Hon. P R Caruana: In other words, the question that he had answered three times and threatened to answer a fourth, was actually a different question. The first three were denials by him – does he acknowledge? – of whether this was the reason why he had done it, to which he said no. On the fourth occasion my friend asked him, will he acknowledge that is the effect of it, regardless of what his intention might have been and then, because he assumed that he had been asked the same question again, he gave the same answer. It is a slightly different question: the effect, in law, and the other thing is what the hon. Member may intend to do or not to do – but in law, the effect of only having an 11-month contract is, is it not, to ensure that certain employee rights, amongst them that one, are not obtained.

2030 Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member also acknowledge that, of course, he can list all the employee rights that he wants and they will be different from what they are today, that is because we treated such individuals as trainees and not as employees, and therefore we made no pretence about them enjoying employee rights? Will he, however, acknowledge that it is their policy that is under scrutiny here?

2035 Their policy is that they should be employees; he said publicly that they would enjoy all employee rights and therefore it is legitimate for us to cross-examine him, to ask him to ensure that they do, in fact, enjoy all employee rights – and it is no answer to that to say, 'they are better off than they were when you were in Government' – we know that because they have now become employees, as opposed to trainees.

(Interjections)

2045 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, first of all, I did answer the last question by adding that no-one would lose employment at the end of 11 months and I am saying that in Parliament and the hon. Member and the trainees can hold me to that statement.

2050 Secondly, it is not true that an 11-month contract automatically deprives you of the right to unfair dismissal, because there are a whole range of categories where the 11 months, or the one month, does not apply. There are reasons for dismissal where there is an automatic right to unfair dismissal and automatic compensation.

Members: No, no.

2055 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am not talking about... I am saying that protection against unfair dismissal of 12 months applies for a number of categories, but there are other categories where the protection is from day one, so it is not true that automatically everybody, because it is 11 months, can go for unfair dismissal. But the bottom line is I am giving a commitment in Parliament that it will not be the case that anybody who comes to the end of the 11 months will be made redundant or be dismissed.

2060 Hon. P R Caruana: Even a subsequent period of 11 months, so even if they cannot get a placing with an employer, they will be kept on then?

2065 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, everybody that is now in the system is in placements. Of those... (Interjection by Mr Caruana) but, in the future, what is going on at the moment with people that are coming in and the employers I am talking to, is that the intention is that we match the candidates to the placements. The placements are identified first, otherwise what would we do with the people we have taken on?

2070 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, but if for any reason an employer, contrary to the hon. Member's expectation, if an employer, in fact, does not convert the employment from a placement into a permanent employment with the company, with the private sector company, in those circumstances the Government company will retain the employee, will they?

2075 Hon. J J Bossano: If an employer does not honour the commitment, then that person will come back to us and we will find him another placement, yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: So they will stay as employees of the Government?

2080 Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2085 Hon. D A Feetham: Just one more question. I think the hon. Gentleman took exception to my using the term 'socialist Government' and, of course, he is right. The hon. Members opposite are an eclectic mix of socialists and liberals, headed by a former liberal. (Interjections)

But may I ask the hon. Gentleman – (Interjections)

2090 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman talks about 'turncoats', but the hon. Gentleman to his left broke the GSLP manifesto on public television and... (Multiple interjections)

2095 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Continuing interjections)

Hon. C A Bruzon: The relevancy of manifesto breaking – what has that got to do with the debate?

Mr Speaker: Let us get to the question that the Hon. Daniel Feetham wants to pose.

2100 Hon. D A Feetham: May I ask the hon. Gentleman whether this was a decision taken by the socialist Minister for Employment or was it the Cabinet?

Hon. J J Bossano: What decision is the hon. Member talking about?

2105 Hon. D A Feetham: The 11-month contracts rather than longer contracts.

Hon. J J Bossano: The decision on the 11 months was taken by me with the people that are running the system, on the basis that we were starting on 1st February.

2110 This is not a policy decision that the Cabinet decided they would make everybody redundant in 11 months and have them back on our books. Does the hon. Member really think that anybody in Gibraltar is going to believe that we want to go into a system where we take all the people that are out of work and put them into a system to provide them with work, only to sack them all and have them all back in the Employment Service registered as unemployed?

2115 Hon. D A Feetham: To prevent them suing the Government for unfair dismissal, yes.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Government will not be sued for unfair dismissal, even if it were true, which is not the case.

2120 The people who would be sued for unfair dismissal would be the employment training company and, in fact, we would not be breaking new ground, because the first time the Government of Gibraltar was sued for unfair dismissal was in 1996 when there was a change of Government and the first thing the GSD did was that they sacked three people working for the Government, all of whom took the Government to court for unfair dismissal and all three won.

2125 So we do not expect, in our term of office, to face claims of unfair dismissal, but if it happens, all that would be happening would be what happened in 1996.

Clerk: Question 1 – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections)

2130

Approaches to Unite UK Discussions re leadership of Unite

2135 Clerk: Question 135, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether he has spoken to or written to anyone from Unite UK about the leadership of Unite, since he became a Government Minister?

2140 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

2145 Hon. D A Feetham: Has he asked anybody to speak to Unite on his behalf?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker.

2150

Gibraltar Development Corporation
Role within the public service

2155 Clerk: Question 136, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state what the Government's policy is in relation to the Gibraltar Development Corporation and its role within the public service?

2160 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2165 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government's policy in relation to the GDC and its role within the public service remains as established in its constitution – 'The object of the Corporation shall be to secure the regeneration and economic expansion of Gibraltar.'

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government propose to expand and extend the use of GDC?

2170 Hon. J J Bossano: The Government expects that it will play a much bigger role in the economic regeneration of Gibraltar than it has done in the last 15 years, or that he would have done if he had been in Government since they were going to abolish it.

2175 Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member envisage that the GDC will increase its staff? I have in mind certain remarks that he is alleged to have made to some of the people who were leaving the GDC to the Civil Service. Apparently, he gave an indication that there would be more career opportunities and an expanded role, so should we correctly interpret that to mean that it will play a more prominent role in quantum terms?

2180 Hon. J J Bossano: That, indeed, is the expectation. For example, one of the things we are committed to is the expansion of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and, therefore, there will be opportunities when that institution is able to operate.

I have set a target that is probably too ambitious, doing this in one year, but if we are able to do that, it will no longer be possible for this to be run as a sideline in the Treasury, it will have his own staff and there will be opportunities for people in the GDC in areas like that, which will be new areas of expansion.

2185 Hon. P R Caruana: So the Government envisages the possibility that activities that are presently carried out by civil servants, may in future be carried out by GDC and GDC employees?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, activities are at present not being carried out by anybody.

2190 Hon. P R Caruana: What about the Savings Bank?

2195 Hon. J J Bossano: What the Savings Bank is doing at the moment is in terms of the Treasury, booking sales of debentures. Certainly, if that was all that was going to be done with the Savings Bank, there would be no change.

Gibraltar Development Corporation
Employees appointed to Civil Service prior to General Election

2200 Clerk: Question 137, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2205 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state what the Government's policy is in relation to former GDC employees who were appointed to the Civil Service prior to 8th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, all GDC employees appointed to the Civil Service prior to 8th December have been able to remain in the Civil Service on the terms of their appointment, if they wanted to do so.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member explain to the House what offer he made to those employees who have not yet signed on the dotted line? As the hon. Member knows, the Government have sent a letter saying 'PSC or something has admitted you: if you accept the terms, sign below.' Some people have, some people have not.

2215

There is a difference across the floor of this House – which is not relevant to this question – about whether the fact that the Employment Service had or had not yet registered that change had any impact at all on the legality of the employment relationship, but, leaving that to one side, can the hon. Member explain what offer he made to those, either those who had not already signed, I do not know whether he offered even those who had already signed, the possibility of going back to the GDC and, if so, what was it that he suggested, or offered, that might have induced somebody to leave the Civil Service, which had been the sort of panacea to try and get into, and leave it again?

2220

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, although the hon. Member says it is a matter which we may have a different view in this House, the reality of it is that, on 9th December, everybody that was supposedly, on 1st October, in the Civil Service was registered to be as still being in the GDC.

2225

Although the hon. Member may not attach any importance to it, he actually brought legislation to this House with very severe penalties for failure to notify terminations and commencements and changes. My view is that, if Government authorities and agencies do not comply with the requirements of the employment law in registering changes in employment and commencement and terminations, they hardly have the authority to go round fining people, especially when some of the labour inspectors themselves were, in fact, not correctly registered with their employer and were going round inspecting other people.

2230

So, certainly, it is an anomaly that I found very peculiar and I would have thought if I was unemployed and I was taken to court by a labour inspector for not registering the termination of my employee, I would appeal to the judge to take into account that my accuser himself was guilty of the same offence.

2235

Putting that to one side, as he wants me to do, I have to tell him that there were 92 who had not signed the letter. Therefore, my view was that, irrespective of the fact that the position of the Human Resources was that, whether they had signed the letter or not, they were already in the Civil Service, the position of those who had not signed was that they were being asked to sign on the basis that signing meant acceptance, although, in fact, the letter simply said, 'I have read the contents of the letter and understand it' – not that I have read and agree. So even the ones who had signed were subsequently arguing that, by signing, they had not agreed and that, therefore, they could not be transferred without their agreement, irrespective of what had been signed with anybody because, in fact, it was a change in their relationship with their former employer.

2240

The initial decision that I took, after discussing it with many of the people concerned, many of whom were in the Department that was under employment – and most of the people who had not signed were there – was that they did not have to go to the Civil Service if they did not want to, because, at the end of the day, we had made a statement at the Budget in response to what the Government was introducing, suggesting that giving them the same pay and conditions and keeping them where they were, would be a better alternative, so that that was the statement we had made in the Budget and we stood by it. So they did not have to sign, if they did not want to.

2245

Then, a few of the people in the Department who had signed, came back and argued that they had not signed to transfer, they had signed simply to say 'I have read and understood what the letter says' and that, in fact, at the time the decision was being taken, on 8th October, it was really a one-way decision, because if you are told the entity that employs you is going to be dissolved and discontinued and not going to continue employing people, then if you do not go, where are you or where do you remain? On that basis, I agreed that even those who had signed should be given the option of, as it were, 'returning home', if they wanted to do that, to the GDC.

Given that much of the second thoughts that people were expressing was because of the ring fencing, I said to them, 'Look, the position is that you are guaranteed that the pay will be the pay in your original letter, the conditions will be the conditions in your original letter: from now on, the GDC will track the Civil Service'. So these are not conditions personal to the holder.

Everybody that gets taken on by the GDC will have the same pay and the same conditions that have been introduced and since you will not be ring-fenced and it is the intention, as a matter of Government policy, to expand the role of the GDC, rather than move in the opposite direction, you probably have got better opportunities if you stay in the GDC but, at the end of the day, the Government and I do not have a particular preference; we do not want to push people in one direction or the other. It is a matter that each individual will be able to choose which way they want to go.

In practice, there has tended to be a situation where, in each group, most of the people have gone the same way. So in one area almost everybody is Civil Service and in another area almost everybody is GDC, so it has turned out quite tidy at the end of the day, because it is not a fragmented situation, where people are half in and half out, but the final result is that 67 opted to be in the Civil Service and 94 opted to stay in the GDC.

Hon. P R Caruana: Two things: first of all, going briefly back to the issues that we have agreed to put aside, everything that the hon. Member says about... I have never known whether civil servants get registered at the ETB or not, because of the PSC, but assuming, taking in what is implicit in what he says that, even the civil servants registered and deregistered at the matter of administrative act?, which is not something that I am familiar with, but presumably he concedes that whatever may be the desirability or need for public servants to be in order, at the Employment Service, it does not undermine... In other words, any administrative failure is not germane to whether or not you are an employee of a particular person or not, which is a matter of employment laws. In other words, once you get inducted into the Civil Service you are a civil servant, even if the Civil Service is then incurred in an administrative failure in not doing the registration paperwork at the Civil Service.

So that he can answer both together, could I just also ask whether the effect of the fact that 67 have opted to stay in the Civil Service, I think he said – unless I have got them the wrong way round – and 94 remained behind or went back... how many of those went back to, or never left... but the effect is that, for the 67 that chose to remain in the Civil Service, the ring fence... the fence in the ring fence has become tighter, has it, because there are now fewer posts for them to be able to opt to, fewer other posts for them, or can they still opt for all the posts, even the ones currently occupied by someone who has chosen to go back to the GDC?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not think it has become tighter but, taking the first point: the whole point, Mr Speaker, is that in the GDC there were 160 people registered with the ETB, right? And their employer was the GDC. The law says that if the GDC terminates the employment of its people, like any other employer in Gibraltar, there is a penalty if they do not do it. (Interjection) Well, no, penalty is one thing, complying with the law is one thing... The rule of law... I am no QC, but I would have thought that the rule of law is important and if the inspector is breaking the law, how can the inspector take somebody to court for breaking the law that he is breaking?

It is not just the GDC. There are people in all the other companies, that are still shown in the GDC as working somewhere else, in breach of the requirements of the Employment Act, which was considered to be so important when the hon. Member brought it here, that he may remember he wanted to fine people £3,500 for not putting termination... and I thought that was a bit steep.

I can tell the hon. Member that the Employment Service now takes its duties in this respect very seriously, is fining everybody in sight, from the GDC on! They have not decided whether they should fine themselves, but certainly everybody else is being fined for not doing what the law requires them to do. The result of that is that I hope – (Interjection) – certainly.

Hon. P R Caruana: Does he agree with me... I agree with him that, of course, there is a rule in the law that has to be complied with, and it applies to the GDC or Government companies and, of course, there is an obligation to comply with it and the sanction is the same and it might even undermine your moral standing, as an enforcer, if you are not yourself in order.

Will he, on reflection, agree with me that he cannot take that so far as to say... and, therefore, any employment relationship that is the object of this administrative irregularity is not valid, cannot be right, because, otherwise, all an employer would need to do to defeat the employment contract aspect of the employer's relationship with its employee is simply not register and pay a fine? In other words, compliance by an employer with the administrative, legal, penalisable obligation to do certain things that the ETB does not, if it is not complied with, mean that the worker concerned is not actually, in contract law, a contracted employee of that employer. That is the only point I was making.

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not agree with him although, Mr Speaker, I do not pretend to be somebody trained in law, but I can tell him, that if I was an employee of the GDC and I was told on 1st October 'You are a civil servant, whether you like it or you do not', without my consent... Yes, that is what happened, because people were told, as a result of an agreement with a union, that the Public Service Commission has decided to put you all in the Civil Service. Here is a letter on your pay and your conditions and the Official Secrets Act and all the rest of it. Sign it! And 92 said: 'I do not sign it'.

If those people did not sign it, and if –

Hon. P R Caruana: A good point: he is right, those people are not, therefore, changing their employer. In other words, you cannot unilaterally be passed from one employer to another by the employer.

That is not the point I am making. The point I am making is that, when there is consensus, when the employee has agreed where an employee has been agreed to change from one employer to another, that transfer, that new relationship with the second new employer is not conditional for its legal validity on the paperwork being put in place in the ETB.

That is the point I am making but, of course, I agree with him that you cannot be transferred, so anyone who did not consciously agree to be transferred did not, in fact, transfer.

Hon. J J Bossano: Right, Mr Speaker, but that is not what people were told. (Interjections) No, no, but the 92 who did not sign, were told that the fact that you have not signed is neither here nor there, because the Public Service Commission has made you public servants. It is an issue that was reflected in a letter that he wrote and gave to Mr Albert Hewitt to read in a meeting, where he said that because the Public Service Commission has transferred you, you were transferred and that is it, and you have all been civil servants since 1st October.

I do not agree that that is the correct position in law and I certainly think that the 92 people who did not sign, who thought that if the letter required their signature, it was because they had an option to sign or not sign and that, therefore, it made a difference whether they signed or they did not sign... So, independent of the fact that the GDC failed to notify the Employment Service that x number of their employees had left employment and were now in the Civil Service, on top of that, even those who have not chosen to leave, were told that, whether they liked it or not, they also had left the GDC and were civil servants.

So, the net result is, because 94 have come back, it is true that the ring-fencing is now the ring-fencing of the 67, but also –

Hon. P R Caruana: In those posts?

Hon. J J Bossano: In those posts, but it is also, by definition, a position where only the 67 can compete for those jobs, so there are around 94 people who are excluded from the equation and, in the end, the only way one could see whether, actually, the 67 are better off or worse off, is dependent on the number of higher-grade posts that there are in the 67.

Hon. P R Caruana: They may be better off, Mr Speaker, would he agree, in terms of competition for 67 posts, but they are worse off in terms of the range of activities that they could opt to do, so that is what I had meant, when I said that the rings were getting tighter. Whereas, before, they had 150 something posts scattered around many activities, that anyone could have cross fertilised from one activity to another, now it is the number of activities and posts within the 67 that have stayed behind.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is, in fact, an accurate description, but I have to point out to the hon. Member that, from what I have seen of the spread of activities and the time that people have been in the area, it seems, really, that the people who are in the Tourist area are in the Tourist area because they want to be in the Tourist area and the people in the Employment area are in the Employment area because that is where they want to be. There has been very little, if any, movement between these sectors.

So what now happens is that, really, the people are staying in the kind of work they want to be and I would imagine that, even though the 94 may have more opportunity in other fields, it is more likely to be an opportunity that people who are at AO level will want to take up and not the people who are higher up the structure.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2375 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Gentleman confirm that, in fact, Unite have expressed a view to you that ring-fencing the ring-fence, so to speak, in relation to the 67 civil servants, the 67 people, that that amounts to a unilateral variation of those individuals' contracts?

2380 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Unite can have the view that it likes and it can take the matter for a judge to decide whether it is or it is not. In my view, the decision to put them all in the Civil Service, without their individual consents, was a unilateral decision of the contracts of the GDC employees.

2385 Hon. D A Feetham: So would the hon. Gentleman confirm that the answer is 'yes', that Unite have expressed the view to you that what he is doing amounts to a unilateral variation of these employees' contracts.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Unite, that was responsible for the unilateral variation of the GDC contracts, believes that what they did to 166 was right and that what I am doing to 67 is wrong. That is correct.

2390 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much – it was not that difficult! (Laughter)
Can the hon. Gentleman confirm that Unite have also asked for a meeting with the hon. Gentleman to discuss this and have asked for the process to be frozen until after that meeting.

2395 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, they have not asked it now, because the process is long gone by, and people have taken a decision. At the time that I gave the people the choice, Unite considered that having had two months to think about it was insufficient time, although they accepted that, with the previous administration, having had eight days to think about it was a sufficient time.

2400 So people were told on the 1st they were going to be moved and they had to decide by 8th October. I came in on 9th December and I gave them two months to think about it, and the people who had thought that eight days was sufficient before thought now that eight weeks was too little time after!

2405 Given that nobody was being forced – unlike the first time, when they were moved, whether they liked it or not – the second was that if they did not want to come back, they could all stay in the Civil Service. The view that I took was that I have gone to the length of giving them an option that did not exist, so therefore it was something that I was not obliged to give – I inherited a situation where they were all told they were in the Civil Service, take it or leave it. I came in and I said, 'Well, look, you do not have to take it or leave it, you can change your mind.' I explained it individually. I called a meeting of all 166, I answered all their questions over three and a half hours, and I thought I had given them a greater deal of consultation, involvement and participation than anything they had enjoyed previously and that, therefore, there was no justification in the request by Unite to delay the process, other than to delay the process - period.

2410 In any event, given that their concern was about the people in the Civil Service, I am not responsible for the people in the Civil Service; I am responsible for the people in the GDC. So, therefore, if the people in the Civil Service were unhappy about the offer for moving to the GDC, all they had to do was to stay as they were on 1st October, because there was no preference to bring them back. If they had chosen to stay in the Civil Service, then the GDC would simply have gone ahead with doing whatever it wanted to do with the new employees.

2415 Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is that the Government does a song and dance about greater consultation, greater transparency, greater accountability, but the Minister for Employment of that Government refused to meet Unite and refused a two-week freeze of the process – a two-week freeze of the process! – in order to allow the union representatives of these employees to meet with you and to discuss it. Is that not the case?

2420 Hon. J J Bossano: No, the case is that Unite was happy, when he was in Government, to have a decision taken in eight days and when we came in, we gave eight weeks – and when we gave them eight weeks, Unite thought it was too little and they wanted at least two weeks. The answer to that was it was quite simple: if they did not like what was on offer, all they had to do was stay with what they had signed up to and accepted from the previous administration.

2430 So the position of Unite had absolutely no basis and no justification, because they were not being told they could not have what they had. They had what they had and they could keep it! So why should the new Government, having given them more than they had, now have to enter into a period of consultation, when they were ready to accept less before?

2435 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, does he not accept that the reason might be because it is not as clear cut a choice as the hon. Member is describing? It sounds very good for him to say, 'Why do you need more than two weeks if, after all, you can stay as you are and just don't accept the offer that I am giving you two months to think about – or that I have given you two months to think about, which is either not to go at all or to come back?'

2440 Does he not understand that the reason might be that those who had already gone, and had to decide whether or not they wanted to come back, had legitimate concerns about how what the hon. Member was proposing would affect their ring-fencing rights, some of which I have asked him this morning in the questions, and they wanted clarification from the hon. Member about what the impact would be upon those who chose to keep what the previous Government had done for them and not entertained the hon. Member, and that the two weeks were needed, whilst those workers decided whether they should stay or come back, once they understood how their position might have been altered by this new development?

2445 Hon. J J Bossano: The answer to that question, Mr Speaker, is that if it was not that the two weeks was needed; it is that they wanted at least two more weeks with no - (A Member: No.) Yes, that is what the letter said – (Interjection)

2450 Mr Speaker: Order! The Minister is answering.

2455 Hon. J J Bossano: - to take a decision on something where it was not a 'take it or leave it' position. It was a position that had been under discussion for a number of weeks before and, in a three and a half hour face-to-face meeting in the theatre of the Mackintosh Hall, where people were able to ask as many questions as they could possibly think of, the two weeks would not have enabled me to give them more answers, more detailed answers or more explanations than had already been given to them.

2460 They already raised all these issues. They were already told that this was the position and that, therefore, nobody was putting a gun to their head. The position was that there were people who did not want to go and we wanted to give them the opportunity to stay; that the people who had already decided to go, to whom we had no obligation because they chose to do that, we were giving them the opportunity of coming back if they wanted to come back, and that having had eight weeks to do it...

2465 Well, look, the thing happened on 1st October. The election was on 8th December. Between 1st October and 8th December, no consultation, no meeting, no discussion, no nothing! We come in on 9th December and then, finally, after two months, they want two more weeks. We are not talking about two weeks any more; we are talking about five months since the original decision was taken. What is it - that the union had to wait for me to arrive on the scene before they could discuss it with anybody?

2470 Hon. D A Feetham: Let me ask the hon. Gentleman a question that was put in correspondence to a Human Resources manager, copied to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, which was not answered - perhaps he could answer it now here in this Parliament and, indirectly, to GDC members.

'Doesn't the hon. Gentleman think that refusing to meet Unite'

– refusing to meet with them – refusing a simple two-week freeze – just a simple two-week freeze –

2475 'that this has obliged many affected members, who required further clarification of their terms and conditions, to take a decision under duress?'

That is a direct quote from a letter on behalf of Unite to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

2480 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not know who drafted the letter from Unite. Certainly, the people who signed it I do not think were capable of spelling out the word 'duress'.
Nevertheless –

2485 Hon. D A Feetham: That appears to be the problem. The problem is your relationship with Unite and your – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!
The Hon. Minister is answering a question.

2490 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not have a problem with Unite. If Unite has a problem with me, then I think you should talk to them and not to me.

2495 The fact that Unite writes to me about something to do with the Civil Service is not something that I am going to answer, because I am not responsible for the Civil Service. I am responsible for the GDC, and the people in the GDC have not gone to Unite, asking Unite to say anything. The people who were complaining were the people remaining in the Civil Service who had no right to complain, as far as I am concerned, because I was giving them an option that they did not have on 1st October, that they had not complained about after 1st October, that they had from 9th December to think about, that they had eight weeks to think about it, that they had three and a half hours with me – and that is a level of consultation of workers involved in the GDC that they have never experienced in the entire 15 years.

2500 So the answer is, I do not agree with his analysis and, therefore, all he is trying to do is make political capital out of being the champion of Unite. Well, look, if he wants to be the champion of Unite, then he can be the champion of Unite. I do not want to compete with him in that area.

2505 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, please, on a point of order.
If you allow me, hon. Member, I honestly cannot remember the original question, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Well, I can.

Hon. C A Bruzon: You can. Are we still on the - ?

2510 Mr Speaker: Well, we are still on the subject and, in my discretion, I will allow the supplementary.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Okay.

2515 Hon. D A Feetham: How many times has the hon. Gentleman met in an official capacity with Mr Sisarello or Victor Ochello from 9th December last year?

Hon. J J Bossano: None - either official or unofficial. (Interjections)

2520 Hon. D A Feetham: It is the first straight answer that we have got from the hon. Gentleman in the whole morning! (Laughter)

2525 Just one final question. Again, I want to just read, before I ask him, from a letter on behalf of GDC members that was written to Brenda Cumbo but copied to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. It was written because, in fact, there was a previous letter from the same source, to the hon. Gentleman, that went without response, and it says this:

2530 ‘The fact that their [GDC] members’ genuine and reasonable request for further information and time to consider the same have been dismissed out of hand and without even the courtesy of a written reply has left many of the said members very distressed. Many of these members feel that they have been bullied into making an abrupt decision and go forward in an atmosphere of uncertainty, distrust and fear.’

Does the hon. Gentleman feel proud the GDC members feel in that particular way because of decisions that he has made?

2535 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I work very closely with GDC members and that is not what they are transmitting to me. That is the view of people who are probably out of touch with their own membership and, therefore, I do not agree.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I detected a certain degree of relish, almost pride, in the hon. Member’s 2540 answer that he had not had a single meeting with any of the elected officers of Unite since 9th December. I think that, Mr Speaker... would he accept that that is precisely an issue which is worthy of comment.

Does it not strike him, as being a Minister in a Government that prides itself and, indeed, got elected riding on the crest of a wave on openness, consultation, stake holding, relationships with outside stakeholders, that the Minister for Employment, himself an ex-trade union leader, has presided in the last eight or nine weeks over some pretty significant changes of policy, involving worker rights and interests, for example, the GDC part reversal albeit voluntary that he has presided over, the superannuation fund, the employment trainees - a shift of people from trainees to employ...?

2545 That this huge change, really, in areas affecting working people in Gibraltar, members of Unite. Does it not strike the hon. Member as odd that he should not have had a single meeting with the union, Unite, in respect of any of those matters? Does he not agree that that reflects a state of personal animosity between him and the then leadership of Unite?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not accept that it reflects what he says it reflects in his last remark.

2555 I will tell him what it reflects. It reflects the fact that the things that we have introduced, as a Government, are things that the union never requested, never thought of fighting for, never asked anybody to do. Therefore, I do not see how we need to consult if we have produced a situation, where the union is happy that people should get £450, I do not see any need to consult the union as to whether they agree that they should get £912. Or does he think that...?

2560 Hon. P R Caruana: The basis of consultation is not whether you agree or disagree!

Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, no, the union based on consultation is that the union is consulted about things, on the basis that the person consulting the union thinks they need the union agreement to do something, not because you are giving something that nobody is asking for.

2565 The introduction of the GSLP/Liberal manifesto is an electoral commitment with the electorate not with Unite. Therefore, we are delivering what we set out to deliver and the people that we had to consult, we consulted on 8th December. Those people that we consulted decided by a majority that they approved the programme and we are going to implement it. I do not accept that the implementation of the manifesto on which we have been elected requires consultation with Unite.

2570 That is the answer.

Hon. P R Caruana: A democratically elected Government can use its executive powers and its parliamentary majority to do what it likes without consulting anybody, without the courtesy of bringing in representative bodies to explain to them in advance... of course, that is the case.

2575 But this particular Government was elected on the promise of not doing that – of doing the opposite, Mr Speaker. That is the point. The point is that the hon. Members have made huge changes in things affecting the union which, with a Government with a normal relationship with the union would not have contemplated, surely, in introducing these changes without at least bringing the union in and explaining to them in advance what they might be contemplating doing.

2580 Will the hon. Member at least say whether, since the 9th December, to his knowledge, either the current District Officer, Charles Sisarello, or his deputy, the Branch Officer, Mr Ochello, had sought access to him – have sought a meeting with him?

2585 Hon. J J Bossano: They have not sought a meeting with me for anything for which I am responsible, which does not include industrial relations of the Civil Service. I am not –

Hon. P R Caruana: Have they sought a meeting with him?

2590 Hon. J J Bossano: Not for anything for which I am responsible. If they seek a meeting for me on an industrial relations problem in the Civil Service, they are pointed in the right direction - which is not me.

Hon. P R Caruana: Is it not the case, Mr Speaker, therefore that they have sought a meeting with him, that he apparently now is arguing that it has been denied to them because it was for something not to do with them -

- 2595 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I have not, no, no, no -
- Hon. P R Caruana: The union, Unite, has sought a meeting, yes or no?
- Hon. J J Bossano: No, I have not said -
- 2600 Hon. P R Caruana: Have they sought a meeting?
- Hon. J J Bossano: No, I have not said that; I have said, if they sought a meeting with me on an industrial problem, in anywhere in the Civil Service -
- 2605 Hon. P R Caruana: My question was not qualified.
- Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether they have or they have not but, if they have, they will have been pointed in the right direction, which is in the direction of the Minister with responsibility for industrial relations, which is not me.
- 2610 Hon. P R Caruana: I see. So they may have sought a meeting with you.
So will the hon. Member confirm that it is not the case that he has said to anybody that he would not meet with either of those two gentlemen?
- 2615 Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.
- Hon. P R Caruana: It is correct that he has not said that?
- Hon. J J Bossano: I have not said that, no.
- 2620 Hon. P R Caruana: And you are, therefore, quite open to meeting with them -
- Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, I am not quite open to meeting with them. I will meet them if what they raise is something which I am responsible for, and not otherwise – obviously.
- 2625 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is the Minister for Employment! (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) This idea that if a union wants access to the socialist Minister for Employment, they have to calibrate the subject matter precisely so that the hon. Member is not able to say ‘That is not my responsibility’ is itself an extraordinary state of affairs, is it not?
- 2630 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not... I will tell him why it is not an extraordinary state of affairs: because in the last 15 years, although the Minister for Employment had industrial relations in his portfolio gazetted, all the negotiations were done with him.
- 2635 Now the industrial relations is not gazetted as being mine, and therefore unions do not negotiate with me; unions negotiate with the Chief Minister, which they were doing before the 9th, except that, theoretically, the person responsible was Mr Montiel who was the last person to find out what was going on. That is the difference.
- 2640 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is he not the Minister with responsibility for the GDC? (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) And if he is the Minister with responsibility for the GDC, surely the union, Unite, is entitled to ask for a meeting with him about GDC matters?
- Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, but the union, Unite, was not making representations to me about the GDC matter. It was making representations to me about civil servants who, having accepted that they were staying in the Civil Service, now wanted to come back, having had a meeting in Unite, where Unite said the position of the Leader of the Opposition and the position of Unite is the same - that everybody is a civil servant.
- 2645 I do not know whether he has been converted, because he always used to remind me that he was not a socialist and now he has become part of the hierarchy of Unite, but the fact that he and Unite coincided in that 2650 they were all civil servants on 1st October, as far as I am concerned does not give Unite the right to talk about the positions of those who did not want to be in the Civil Service and who chose to stay in the GDC. If there are people in the 94 that came in to the GDC, bullied under duress, then I will write to each one of the 94 and let us see what they tell me, because I do not want people who do not want to be where they are.

2655 Hon. P R Caruana: But is it not the case, if he can hone this back to the GDC 67 or 94, however you like, had or had not... the fact that he is on that territory... surely, he accepts and understands the fact that he looks through a magnifying glass at the reason why union leaders want meetings with him, to decide whether they are appropriate or not, is the answer that I am trying to get to.

2660 Is it not the case that the Branch Officer and the District Officer of Unite have asked for meetings with him for general purposes and that he has refused to see them?

Hon. J J Bossano: If they have – and I cannot say without going back and checking – I would have refused to see them if they wanted to see me for general purposes. I am not the Minister for General Purposes! (Interjections) Therefore, they can only see me for something that I am responsible for.

2665 Hon. P R Caruana: General employment purposes...!

2670 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, they certainly have not come to see me about general employment purposes – and they certainly have not expressed one single word of concern about the fact that there are 1,300 people unemployed, which I find quite extraordinary from committed trade unionists!

Mr Speaker: The Hon. – Sorry, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

2675 Hon. P R Caruana: My final supplementary, Mr Speaker, on this issue.
Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member acknowledge in this House that, in his relationship towards the union, Unite, to date, and in his willingness to see them or not see them, he has been motivated in significant part, not by the normality of fluidity and accessibility that there ought to be between an Employment Minister and the leadership of Gibraltar's largest trade union, but rather by a degree of personal and possibly even political animosity towards the individuals that were in the leadership of that union?

2680 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I do not, Mr Speaker.

2685 Industrial Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation) Regulations 1992
Changes to Basic Award

Clerk: Question 138, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2690 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether it was the Government's intention when making the changes to the Basic Award in the Industrial Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation) Regulations 1992 to give those changes retrospective effect and make them applicable to claims that had already been lodged with the Industrial Tribunal?

2695 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2700 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, irrespective of the date when any claim is lodged, the changes to the Basic Award in the Industrial Tribunal (Calculation of Compensation) Regulations 1992 will apply in respect of any determination by the Tribunal made after this amendment.

Hon. D A Feetham: Did the hon. Member consult anyone before introducing these changes?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker. I did not consult anybody, because I had fought an election saying we would do it if we got elected.

2705 As far as I know, when the previous Government removed the provision which we have now put back, in 2008, they did not consult anybody, either.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, the hon. Gentleman would be wrong in making that assumption because, in fact, I did. I consulted all the chairmen of the Industrial Tribunal.

2710 The reason why we made the change was because the vast majority of the chairmen of the Industrial Tribunal took the view that the provisions as they then stood provided no discretion in relation to the Basic Award. What we did was we actually clarified the law in order to make that absolutely clear.

2715 Does the hon. Gentleman think that it is good practice to actually change the law and give it retrospective effect and that is affecting parties' rights in this particular way?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, if it is not good practice, then he should not have done it in 2008, because when he did it in 2008, he cut the figure at £2,200 for all the pending cases as well, so if what is with them now is retrospection, what he did in 2008 was retrospection.

2720 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, again for the hon. Gentleman's benefit, we did not retrospectively change anything. All we did was make sure that the law, as we were being told... We made clear that the law, as we were being told by the Industrial chairmen was the position – we made clear that was the position. That is not changing anything retrospectively.

2725 But does he not accept that this particular change causes huge uncertainty for employers and also for lawyers, who cannot now calculate the compensation payable to employees?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not know whether it causes great uncertainty or not. I can tell the hon. Member that it did not cause great uncertainty to lawyers or anybody else between 1992 and 2008. The law was there for 16 years. For 12 of the 16 years – that is for longer than it was under the GSLP...

2730 Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member have an interest in the answer or does he...? Is he interested in the answer?

Mr Speaker: I cannot order a Member to listen, but...

2735 Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, but if he is not interested in the answer, I will not bother to give it; I will sit down.

Mr Speaker: I will leave it to the Minister to answer...

2740 Hon. P R Caruana: I think the correct parliamentary procedure is that the hon. Member is addressing the Chair and addressing the whole House, not just the questioner.

2745 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I have no doubt that the Chair and the whole House is interested, but if the questioner is not interested, then I do not know whether it is worth doing it for the sake of the whole House and the Chair.

Mr Speaker: But I am interested –

2750 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman should not assume that I am not listening, simply because I am not looking at him directly.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, no, because he was in deep conversation with his 'mentor' and I do not know whether it was his 'mentor' was already preparing his next supplementary for him.

2755 The answer is that - (Interjection and laughter) Peppermint instead of 'mentor', is it?

The answer to the hon. Member's question is that the law was introduced on the basis that the award could be not less than £2,200 but there was no upper limit.

In 2008, the Government decided to change the law and make the £2,200 the maximum, because it was the only amount that could be awarded. He calls that 'clarification'; I can tell him that there were a number of 2760 pending cases that I was dealing with in the Tribunal, where the workers who might have got £2,200 or £2,300 or £2,400 were capped because of the change that was brought in, and he did not seem to think that depriving them of the legitimate expectation that they had before the cap was put was retrospective. But he is saying that this is now retrospective. Well, I do not know why it is retrospective now and it was not retrospective then, when the effect is similar.

2765 But, in any event, this does not require anybody to give more than £2,200; it makes it possible. So that there is no doubt, the wording that was there before has not been restored, so that we now make it very clear that it is at the discretion of the Chairman, how much above the £2,200 he wants to go. Now it may be that the lawyers that represent employers may find this something that is not very welcome. I am sure the lawyers that represent dismissed persons will welcome it.

2770 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, just by way of clarification to the hon. Gentleman, and I am working from recollection, but I am quite sure I remember reading two judgments where one chairman did, in fact, increase the basic award from £2,000 to around £5,000-£6,000, so there is judicial precedent by which chairmen can guide themselves, so it is not an insurmountable or impossible task. There is judicial precedent that I recall.

2775 Hon. D A Feetham: No, there was, in fact, I think, one decision by an industrial tribunal chairman. I had a meeting with all the chairmen of the Industrial Tribunal... In fact, I am not sure that the Speaker was there because I think that it was not appropriate to ask the Speaker.

2780 Mr Speaker: I had abandoned that practice by then.

2785 Hon. D A Feetham: - or he had abandoned the practice by then. But I had a meeting and the view that was expressed to me was that, as a matter of statutory interpretation, it was not right for... the cap was £2,300, as a matter of statutory interpretation. That was the view that was expressed to me, and that it was unsatisfactory that you had a situation where you had one or two chairmen of the Industrial Tribunal that took a different position to all the others.

2790 So the Government then took a decision to clarify the situation and say, 'Right, this is the law as it exists,' because it is clearly unsatisfactory for some chairmen to take the view... the vast majority of chairmen to take the view that it gave no discretion, and there were one or two, as I recall, that took a different position altogether.

2790 But may I ask the hon. Member opposite: how will lawyers and also employers calculate how much of the basic award is actually payable to anybody? Does he know? Does he have a clue about that at all?

2795 Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell the hon. Member, first, that when the law was introduced by the GSLP in 1992 it was introduced on the basis that what we were producing was a minimum of £2,200 and no maximum and that, therefore, if some people have chosen to pay the £2,200 and other people have chosen more, at no stage did people come to us and say, 'We interpret not less than £2,200 as meaning no more than £2,200.'

2800 I do not have the benefit of being a lawyer, so I read the English language as it is written, and therefore, for me, 'not less than' means that you can go, as a minimum, for £2,200. For some people to say that it is a matter of interpretation whether 'not less than' means not less than or not more than, which is what the hon. Member is telling the different views of different Tribunal chairmen has been, is something that was never put to me. If it had been put to me, I can tell him the wording would have been changed to make it crystal clear that 'not less than' means at least £2,200.

2805 Now, to make sure that that argument no longer holds true, it says not less than £2,200 and at the discretion of the chairman. The chairman is free to award whatever amount he thinks appropriate, using his discretion, in the circumstances of the case. There are, for example, in the United Kingdom, unlimited awards for compensation for a variety of grounds for dismissal, which do not exist in Gibraltar and which I hope to bring in as well.

2810 Hon. D A Feetham: But does the hon. Gentleman not accept that, in fact, the difference between the hon. Gentleman and myself in relation to this particular issue is that I happened to bother consulting the people who are administering the system: the chairmen of the industrial tribunal. You have not bothered to consult anybody, and this from the Government of many consultations!

2815 Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell him that the intention of Parliament – not the views of the lawyers that go to Tribunals; the intention of Parliament in 1992 – was that the minimum should be £2,200. (Interjection) At no time has anybody... Yes, the intention of Parliament, because that was done when we were in Government.

2820 Hon. D A Feetham: No, not the intention of Parliament; the intention of the Minister, because it never came to Parliament. It was subsidiary legislation.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, right, but it was a regulation made under the provisions of the law and the intention was then clearly spelt out that the minimum was £2,200.

2825 As far as I am concerned, the Tribunal chairmen have either given £2,200 or given more than £2,200 because they were not allowed to give less. It was not because they were not permitted to give more. The fact that his consultants and people have told him ‘We haven’t given more because we didn’t think we could,’ should make those people happy now, because now they know they can. So what I have given now to all the people who said to him, ‘We have got a problem, that we do not know if we can go over,’ now that problem has been removed. The uncertainty that worried all those lawyers representing employers has now been removed by the action we have taken. Now it is clear they can give more, they can now sleep at night, comfortable in the idea that the sky is the limit and they can give workers as much money as they want. (Interjections)

2835 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman may laugh at this but, in fact, there are many employers that feel very concerned about this particular situation, because now... and, indeed, there are a lot of lawyers that feel very concerned about this particular situation because the compensatory award is there to compensate for... to place the person in a position where they would have been had the employer, for example, not undertaken the breach of contract or not done what they have done.

2840 The basic award is something over and above that, but now, as the legislation stands... Does he not accept that that is the uncertainty? As the legislation stands, there are no principles at all on which anybody can calculate the basic award. The hon. Gentleman laughs, but what he is really saying is, ‘Well, look, I don’t care – it is up to the chairman of the Industrial Tribunal to decide what the basic award is,’ but that creates uncertainty for employers, for employees and also for lawyers. Does he not accept that? (Interjections)

2845 Hon. C A Bruzon: Where is the question?

2850 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not accept anything that he has said. I do not accept anything that he has said, because the intention in 1992, which they changed 16 years later – that is, it took them 16 years to realise there was uncertainty – (Applause) and after 16 years they decided to cap it, and I have to tell him that there were many occasions in the past, when we were in Government, where fixing a limit on what could be the penalty on something we were told was interfering with the independence of the judiciary...

So, yes, there were many occasions when I was told that. The hon. Member can shake his head, but I was told that.

2855 Hon. P R Caruana: Not on that occasion.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, surely if you cannot say to a lawyer, to a magistrate, how much he can fine somebody for parking or driving, then you should not be able to tell the tribunal, which is a judicial entity, how much it can award in compensation.

2860 So, as far as I am concerned, it was the intention in 1992. It was, in my view, scandalous that a former trade union official, Louis Montiel, should be the one that presided over the capping in 2008, and I am happy that one of the first things we have done is put back what was taken away in 2008 and what was happening before 2008 and what was intended in 1992. (Applause)

2865 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, of course it is open to the hon. Members as a matter of policy that the situation that the hon. Member has just described should be brought about. No-one is disputing that they have the right, as a matter of policy, to adopt whatever position is lawful, constitutional, and they wish to adopt in the matter of the re-balancing of the rights and risks between employers and employees.

But can I ask the hon. Member if he would consider that, from that side of the House, the responsibility is 2870 wider than that: that the primary purpose of the legislation we are discussing is, of course, the compensation of people who, let us not forget, have been found to have been unfairly dismissed, and that that is a very laudable objective and that the hon. Member should have as a policy that such people should be properly compensated, I think that is a perfectly legitimate policy. Whether we agree or do not agree with the exact figure, that is another matter.

2875 But that there is another objective, could I ask the hon. Member to take into account, by the Government, should have, and that is to encourage and not discourage, particularly given the efforts that the hon. Member is making on the training and employment front, that Government's policies need to balance everything that I have just said with not making it, not discouraging, not disincentivising employers from creating speculative employment because, if an employer cannot know what the financial cost or what the order of the financial cost would be to extricate himself unfairly – unfairly, it has to be said, because we are in the realms of unfair dismissal – from an employment situation, he is going to think much harder before taking that on.

2880 The issue here is not whether £2,200 is too high or too low or whether it was always intended to be a minimum and never a maximum, which is what the hon. Member keeps on harping back to, but rather whether the law should provide a framework that allows a calculation of the ballpark of potential liability, as opposed to an open cheque. There are no criteria, there are no guidelines, there are no benchmarks against which an employer or a lawyer advising an employer can possibly form a view about what the exposure might be.

2885 So the issue here is not between the position that occurred in 1992 as against the position that we brought about in, whenever it was, two-thousand and whatever, (A Member: Eight.) and eight. The position is that, now that he has done what he has done, in a way which is intended to signal an end to the cap, and the tribunals will take that into account, there is, for the first time – because there is a coincidence of clarification and new law – a complete vacuum of reckoner. There is a complete vacuum of criteria against which to calculate potential exposure liability, because it is all literally limitless in the discretion of a tribunal, and that, I think, is a point which may be worth more consideration in slower order than may be implicit in some of the hon. Member's answers.

2890 I would ask him to agree.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, there is no evidence from the 16 years when it was not less than £2,200 that any of the problems... (Interjection) Well, it did not operate... I do not accept that it did not operate because the people concerned thought they could not do it. It is because they thought they did not want to do it. I have never been in any tribunal where the tribunal chairman – and I have been to many, many, many, many – has said, 'I would like to give you £2,200 but, in my view, the law does not allow me.' That has never been said. They have just said, 'Well, look, £2,200 is what I have to give you,' and that is it. I have often argued for more and I have never ever been told by a chairman, 'I cannot accept your argument because my interpretation is that I am not able to give you more. Whenever it has been turned down, it has been turned down on the basis that the chairman has decided that £2,200 is enough, and when they have got over –

Hon. P R Caruana: Regardless of the figure?

2900 Hon. J J Bossano: Regardless of the figure in the –

Hon. P R Caruana: In the regulations?

2915 Hon. J J Bossano: Throughout the 16 years, in all the Tribunals that I have been, where I have always asked for the maximum in everything, because I think that what you are going to need to do when you go to a Tribunal... But whenever I have asked for more on the basic award, there have been a few occasions when the chairman has been persuaded to maybe say, 'Well, I will give you £2,200 plus inflation since 1992.' But I have never had a chairman who says, 'Well, I think this is a deserving case. I would like to give you £2,200 but my interpretation is that I am not permitted by the wording to go beyond £2,200.'

2920 I have never come across that in any Tribunal that I have ever been in and, therefore, I see no reason for supposing that what I have not experienced in 16 years is going to happen now. But if, indeed, there is a problem in the future which has not happened in the past and it needs to be revisited, I will revisit it – but I do not believe there will be a problem.

2925 Hon. D A Feetham: Just one final... Does he not accept that the very fact that he has not reverted to the former wording 'not less than', but has used a completely different wording, actually implicitly accepts that the position was not clear?

2930 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I accept that there were people like him that thought it was not clear, (Laughter) and therefore to make sure that he does not make the mistake again. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman gives me too much importance, I have to say.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it shows how much I think about about him, Mr Speaker.

2935 Mr Speaker: Next question, please.

A Member: As opposed to...?

2940 Mr Speaker: The Hon. –

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, I move the House to now adjourn to three o'clock today.

2945 Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members? This House will adjourn until 3.00 p.m. this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 1.05 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GIBRALTAR PARLIAMENT

AFTERNOON SESSION: 3.00 p.m. – 5.15 p.m.

Gibraltar, Wednesday, 15th February 2012

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.00 p.m.

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: M L Farrell Esq RD in attendance]

Questions for Oral Answer

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Offers of employment by and through Government
Guarantees to staff recruited through recruitment agencies

Clerk: Answers to questions continue.
Question 139 of 2012, the Hon. D A Feetham.

5 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Minister for Employment confirm that he will respect and honour any offer of employment made by any Government Agency or Authority to employees referred to them by recruitment agencies prior to his instructions that Government Agencies or Authorities should not recruit employees in that manner?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the employees that the Member is referring to.

15 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the hon. Gentleman confirm that if I refer him to a specific individual who attended an interview - in fact, an interview with the GHA referred to from a recruitment agency - who was offered the job prior to the hon. Gentleman giving the instructions that he gave, will he undertake to this House that he will honour that offer of employment?

20 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker. When he tells me about the case I will look into it, but I do not think the GHA or anybody else has got the power to make promises to recruitment agencies.

The position at the moment is that all Government agencies and authorities have to do the same as the private sector has to do, which is to open vacancies with the ETB fourteen days before they are filled, which is what the law requires.

25

Future Job Strategy
Graduate applications

30 Clerk: Question 140, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many graduates have applied to take advantage of the Future Job Strategy?

35 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

40 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): The 10 graduates, Mr Speaker, who were being paid £450 allowance a month, have been transferred to the Graduate Company, earning a salary of £1,368.90.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is it a policy of the Government to use graduate trainees in order to cover maternity leave in Government agencies?

45 Hon. J J Bossano: No. The policy of the Government is to employ unemployed graduates and those who were previously on £450 a month on the training that may be relevant to them – if there is a job for them – or in carrying out research work for the Government.

In fact, some of these graduates, two or three of them, were actually working in the Health Service and in other areas on £450 a month and now they are in the same place doing whatever it was they were doing before, but getting £1,368.

55 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but does he not accept that it would be quite wrong for the Government to be using the Graduate Trainee Scheme in order, for example, to just pick somebody, a graduate, from the unemployment list, and place them, for example, in the GHA to cover for somebody's maternity leave as part of the Graduate Trainee Scheme, with that person not learning anything? He is just covering for maternity, covering for a job, and therefore ought to be paid at the rates that that job actually carries. Would he not agree with me about that?

60 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not agree with anything that he has said because it is all hypothetical. What I have to tell him is that the people who are now in the Health Authority, now, at this moment in time, were already there before, except they were being paid £450, instead of £1,368. So whatever it is that it is wrong that they are doing it for £1,300, it was three times as wrong before when they were getting one third!

65 Hon. D A Feetham: But, again, the hon. Gentleman has a habit... although I have to say that I have to congratulate him because he has really fine-tuned it to an art form. He obfuscates every single time that I ask a question. He does not want to answer the question.

I have asked him: if you are using... the use of the Graduate Trainee Scheme to cover for maternity leave, that that would be wrong - yes or no? Does he agree with me on that?

70 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not agree with him because I do not have to agree with any hypothetical suggestion that comes into his head.

75 I have already told him there are 10 and I have told him what the 10 are doing, and he is asking me, 'Suppose, instead of 10 there are 200 in a year's time and they are doing something different, would it be wrong?' I can tell him that, at the moment, the 10 people that are in the Scheme are the same 10 people that were there a month ago. They are in the same place as they were a month ago, which is where they were on 8th December, except that they are now getting £1,300 instead of £450. That is the information that is available that I can give him about the people who are employed in the Graduate Scheme.

80 What may or may not occur in a future date is a hypothetical question and I do not have to answer hypothetical questions.

Hon. D A Feetham: Of course, the hon. Gentleman assumes it is hypothetical, but it is not hypothetical. It is, in fact, linked to the question that I asked in my previous question.

85 There is an individual who was referred to the GHA by a recruitment agency, who attended the interview to cover for maternity leave, who was offered the job by the GHA, who had that offer of a job retracted because of the instructions that he gave round about the same time, and she has now been offered the job – in other words, covering for maternity leave – not at the rates of pay that would have appertained to that post, but on the pay of graduate trainees. It is not hypothetical. Does he agree with me that that is wrong?

90 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not agree with you that that is wrong, because I do not accept that that is what is happening, but I will investigate it. (Interjections)

95 Future Job Strategy
Company contracts to refund ETC expenses

Clerk: Question 141, the Hon. D A Feetham.

100 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many companies have signed contracts under the Future Job Strategy agreeing to refund the expenses incurred by Employment Training Company Limited in training that individual if he or she is not employed by that company?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

105 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, around 70 employers have so far confirmed their willingness to enter into a Business Partnership Agreement with the Employment Training Company to employ trainees placed with them on completion of a training period.

110 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, but that was not the question.
What I asked was how many employers have signed contracts – have actually signed contracts? Can he answer the question, please?

115 Hon. J J Bossano: The answer to the question is that employers are required to sign the contract after 30 days and no employee has had that training for 30 days.

Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is that no employer has, as yet, signed any of these contracts?

120 Hon. J J Bossano: The answer is that no employer, as yet, has been asked to sign. They have been asked to say whether they are willing to sign if they are satisfied with the employee after 30 days and (Laughter) 70 have said they are willing to sign at the end of the 30 days. So it is not that we are asking them to do it now and they are refusing.

Hon. D A Feetham: So you are asking a hypothetical question!

125 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am not asking a... It is a clear question. (Interjection) Are you willing... (Interjection)

130 Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member wants to have information, then I am prepared to provide him with information. If what the hon. Member wants to do is have things that he can twist to his own advantage (Laughter) and make use for the propaganda that he wants to make use, then he is not going to get that from me, (Interjection) so he should stop trying. (Interjection) He can try, but he is not going to get it.

135 So the answer to the question is that, of the people that have had persons already been placed with them, they have now been notified that, under the new system, they have got up to 30 days to make up their minds, based on whether they think the person would be suitable for the job that is lined up for them. If, at the end of the day, they decide that that person is not suitable, they can then return the person to us.

If they do not return the person to us because the person is suitable, then they sign an agreement. Seventy employers have said, if they are satisfied at the end of the 30 days, they will sign. The employers who have not done that have been informed that we will find alternative placements for the people with them.

140 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he still satisfied that this Scheme, effectively relying on private sector employees to sign these contracts, that this fulfils their manifesto commitment, and I quote,

‘to give trainees a guaranteed full-time job on completion’?

145 Hon. J J Bossano: It satisfies everything that we have explained to all the interested parties that have approached us on how this Scheme would work. It does not satisfy the misrepresentation that the hon. Member gave when he said I was going to ruin Gibraltar by putting everybody into the public sector. So since he wants to be able to attack me for ruining Gibraltar, even though I have no intention of doing it, he now wants to say that I am going back on my intention of ruining Gibraltar!

150 Now either he has got to make up his mind whether putting everybody in the Government is a very good thing for which he should congratulate me, or not putting them in the Government is something for which he should congratulate me. Clearly, he wants to congratulate me for nothing, so he is going to attack me whatever I do and, therefore, given that he is going to attack me, whatever I do, I will tell him what I am doing and therefore he has to accept that that is what is going to happen. The result will be, I hope, and I am convinced that it will be, that there will be less people unemployed in a year’s time than there are now, which is the purpose of the exercise, which I am sure he wants me, at least in that, to succeed.

155 Hon. D A Feetham: I have a copy of... Can I pass up to the hon.... (Interjections)
Can he confirm that this is the contract that employers are being asked to sign, guaranteeing the trainees a job at the end of their training? Is this it?

160

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, it is, Mr Speaker. This is the one that says:

‘...to confirm to the ETCL within 30 days of the start of the Employment Training that there will be a permanent job at the end of this period, subject to successful completion of the employment training period.’

Seventy employers have said ‘yes’ to one.

Hon. D A Feetham: What happens in a situation where, for example, the trainee is, in fact, employed, but then sacked a week later? Does he not agree with me that this, actually, does not cater for this situation and that, in fact, it is easily circumvented?

Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell the hon. Member that I do not think employers are going to be irresponsible and want to renege on their commitments.

So far the employers that I have dealt with all seem to be responsible people who want the good of Gibraltar but, of course, if the hon. Member is saying that this paper is not worth anything because people can simply wriggle out of it without any commitment, first of all, it is at least an improvement on what was there before when they had to give no commitment of any kind at all. They did not even have to wriggle. They just simply said, ‘Go back and send me another one’; but, in any event, he has got to make up his mind. Either this is something that is too onerous for the private sector or something that is meaningless and places no burden on them. The last time in the last Question Time, he was standing up in defence of the private sector, saying how difficult I was making things for private sector employers.

I think the hon. Member has to accept that we are in the middle of February, that this started on 1st February, and that he wants me to speculate as to how successful it will be and all I can tell him is that I am determined to make it a success. Therefore, he can tell me that I have failed when I have failed, but I have not failed yet...

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept that, in actual fact, one looks at this... any cursory examination of this contract, you would be bound to conclude that employers could easily circumvent the so-called ‘job guarantee’ by just sacking a trainee a week or two weeks, or a month later and they would have to repay absolutely nothing; and, in the light of that, it makes a mockery, an absolute mockery, of the guarantee that the hon. Gentleman provided, and the Government opposite, provided in their manifesto – that everybody who undertook training would be guaranteed a full-time job? Isn’t that the case?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, it is not the case. What is the case is that the hon. Member, ever since he has spoken on this subject in the House and outside the House, has been rubbishing it. He has called it a con. He said I have reneged. He accused me of being Stalinist and wanted to put everybody in the public sector!

The answer is that I think he is afraid that it will work and he wants to undermine it and put a time bomb underneath and undermine confidence in it. I only ask him to please continue doing this because he has got 1,200 persons who are starting to benefit from this, who will be very attentive to all the fault-finding that he is engaged in and I think that will do the support of the Government the power of good. He should keep on doing this and rubbishing it. We will prove him wrong in a year’s time.

He will have to eat his words in a year’s time, when it will be a reasonable time to take stock and, on top of that, it will give me an opportunity to remind all the people that we have got in employment that, if he had been here, they would not be working.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say that, again, it is a masterful performance of obfuscation (Laughter) but does he not accept that this is a monumental U-turn because, at the end of the day, there is absolutely no guarantee at all? Does he not accept that there is a world of difference from what he promised at the last General Election, which was to employ everybody in a public company, in a Government-owned company, to the situation that we have now, which is a guarantee in the private sector that is not worth the paper it is written on? Isn’t that the case?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker.

I accept one thing: that he is the prime expert in Gibraltar on monumental U-turns and that, therefore, he is better qualified than anybody in Gibraltar to assess what is a monumental U-turn. But this is not a monumental U-turn. What is a monumental U-turn is what he told me in my office when he came back from England, which was that he had a wonderful career there, that he was not interested in coming to Gibraltar because he had political ambitions. He was only here to get rid of the man sitting next to him who had done so much damage to his family (Interjections) That is a monumental U-turn. (Interjections) That is what he told me. (Applause)

I have to say that, for the benefit and the safety of the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, with whom I have shared so many happy moments in this House, (Laughter) I am glad that he has made the U-turn and that he has got him so close, otherwise he might be in danger!

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, obviously, the hon. Member is not going to answer the question, but it is very fresh from the man that he forgets I have a longer memory, it appears, than him. He is obviously older than me, but the hon. Gentleman went from the IWBP to the Gibraltar Democratic Movement (Interjections), to the GSLP (Interjections) in the space of four years! (Interjections) That must be some kind of record, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order. Order. Is there a question there?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker. Is he refusing to answer the question, then?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I am not answering the question. I am disagreeing with the premise upon which the question is based and the premise is that I promise things that he attributes to me, which are his interpretation of what I promised and that he is claiming I am going to fail, which is his interpretation of what his wishful thinking is.

He wishes that there should be 1,300 people unemployed, so that he can say, 'You have been betrayed by Joe Bossano and unemployment has not gone down.' (Interjection) That is what he wants because if that is not what happens, then it will not be a monumental U-turn and everybody will have a job.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker.

Will the hon. Member acknowledge the possibility that that is not the position of the Opposition? Of course, the position of the Opposition is that we think that we should be over there and they should be back over here – and we look forward to bringing that about in four years' time, but not at the expense of unemployed people and certainly not at the expense of Gibraltar, as we have tried to make clear already.

Does the hon. Member acknowledge that it would be legitimate for the Opposition to press and question the hon. Member opposite on the detail, as it emerges, of his Job Strategy Scheme, not because we hope it fails or because we have no sympathy for the people that may benefit from it – and, therefore, we would prefer that they were unemployed – not for any of those reasons, but simply because it would be legitimate for us to compare how what he actually delivers compares to what he promised before the Election, which we think was the Election promise that probably got them sitting on that side of the House, as opposed to back on this side.

In other words, if there is a perception out there, it is not shared only by my friend, about which he has said all those unpleasant things, it is also the electorate out there who went into the Election on polling day thinking, wrongly apparently, that there was some promise by the GSLP to guarantee every unemployed Gibraltar longer employment, and all we are doing... and we think it is not illegitimate... and would he agree that it would not be an illegitimate exercise for us to seek to hold up what he actually does against that perception? Of course, the hon. Member would be free to say, 'Well, that is a wrong perception', but it would not be a wrong perception only held, I have to tell him, by the Hon. Mr Feetham.

That is what we are doing. We are not hoping he fails. We are hoping he succeeds. We want to know what the cost is of that success. (Interjection)

Hon. J J Bossano: [Inaudible] ...Mr Speaker, there is a difference in the way that is expressed by the hon. Member opposite and the hon. Member sitting beside him, because it is one thing to say, as he said at the last meeting, that they are sceptical and they are not as optimistic as I am about what will be achieved and another thing to say that I deliberately conned everybody in Gibraltar and that I never had any intentions of doing it. That this is a disgrace. That it is a monumental error. That, first, I am going to ruin Gibraltar, and, secondly, that it is not worth the paper that it is written on.

If you say all those things, it seems to me that you are doing your damndest to undermine confidence in –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, it was to –

Hon. J J Bossano: - the thing and make sure that it does not happen.

But I have to tell the hon. Member that if he wants to say it is reasonable and legitimate to see how we are doing, well, look, you see how I am doing, but I am telling you it is a fortnight since it started.

You are asking me to tell you how many employers have said they will sign it and I have told you that we will see how many actually deliver. You can then ask me a month later, how many of those delivered have actually given employment. You can then ask me how many people have been sacked. But if you are saying, at the beginning, it is clear from what has happened so far that it is all going to fail, then certainly the perception that you create with me, Mr Speaker, is that you want it to fail.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, there are two areas of questioning and they are distinct and the hon. Member systematically conflicts them. There are questions that go to the scepticism. In other words, do we think that this is a properly thought out process... policy? What are the loopholes? Will the employers comply with it? Will it have the effect that the hon. Member hopes that it has? All those are questions that go to the scepticism about it and, in that area, he is certainly in a position where he can make us eat our words in a year's time, as he says.

Then there is a second category of questions, would he not accept, that, say, never mind the prospects of success of what you are now doing... independently of its prospects of success or of our scepticism, is what you are doing actually what you led people to believe before the Election you would be doing? Those are wholly different things which have nothing to do with prospects of success, scepticism, asking for... It is simply holding the hon. Member to account to see the extent to which the policies that he is deploying and unfolding actually deliver what they promised the electorate, or what the electorate understood by their words to be promised, and that is a wholly different area of questioning.

Would he accept that that distinction exists and that one question does not necessarily ask for both things?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, because presumably, Mr Speaker, if in a year's time we have reduced by half the unemployment, the hon. Member will say, 'Well, yes, but you still have not done what you said in the manifesto.'

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, I could do that. Yes, that –

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, so –

Hon. P R Caruana: I beg your pardon.

There are people out there, Mr Speaker, who may have voted for him, believing that they were promising unemployed Gibraltarians... well, Gibraltar belongs – I do not think they ever used the word 'Gibraltarian' – residents of Gibraltar employed in Government-owned companies. The fact that he may do things that are positive in bringing down unemployment is laudable, but it does not amount to a delivery on the promise that people thought, rightly or wrongly, that they were making and on which basis they may have been persuaded to vote for them. They are wholly different issues.

Hon. J J Bossano: They may be wholly different issues, but that is entirely in the field of imagination and speculation unless we hold an opinion poll and say, 'How many of the people who voted, voted because they thought everybody was going to be put in the public sector?'

I do not believe everybody who voted for us voted because they thought we were going to put everybody in the public sector. What they thought was that the thing that I have been saying for 15 years, when the hon. Member used to tell me that he was rejoicing that the inflow of frontier workers was going to be stopped, and it has been stopped, and because it has been stopped there is now less competition and more opportunities. Because we are involved in providing more funding than ever before and organising the training on a level that has never been organised before, because it is not just a question of parking somebody somewhere for 400 quid a month, we believe this is an improvement on what there was there and that it will deliver the results and, consequently, when the results are delivered, they can spend the next three years after that saying, 'It is not what you promised.' But I can promise him that all the people who will be working and getting decent jobs, instead of being on the dole, will not be worried about whether the perception was the right perception or the wrong perception. They will be glad to be working.

Hon. P R Caruana: So do I correctly understand his answer to me that anyone out there listening, or reading us in print, who thought that the Members opposite at Election time were offering them a guarantee of employment in a Government company misunderstood what was being said to them and that, in fact, they were not told anything of the sort?

Hon. J J Bossano: What they were told was that they would be employed in a Government company to be trained and be given a job at the end –

Hon. P R Caruana: By whom?

Hon. J J Bossano: By the employer, whoever the employer was, or did the hon. Member think that I was saying we are going to employ 20,000 Gibraltarians in the Government because, if I had been saying that, then the figure would not have been the £11 million, it would have been £21 million? The £11 million was the figure that they came up with because they knew that there were 1,100 out of work, otherwise it would not have been £11 million, it would have been £4½ million, if that was really 450...

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, unemployed in Gibraltar. It was 1,000 you were saying –

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, 1,000 unemployed, so it is not 2%.

Hon. P R Caruana: No-one is suggesting that –

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has, in fact, consistently in the House, in Budget, in the media, in Government pamphlets and in the Election campaign, talked about 2% unemployment. A totally fictitious figure because it is 2% unemployment by including all the frontier workers in the workforce and, of course, the more frontier workers that are put in, the lower the percentage. But the frontier workers disappear when they become unemployed, so they never become unemployed.

The size of the workforce against which the percentage is calculated means that, if he decides to do the terminal, the tunnel, the generating station and 20 other projects and we import half of Andalucía, then we go from 2% to 0.2%, but there are still the same number of Gibraltarians out of work and residents out of work. So when we were addressing the issue of the unemployment, we were addressing on the basis that we would ensure the priority of employment? Certainly, for a start, in the Government. Certainly, in Government agencies, the priority of employment will be for residents.

All this business of bringing people in from outside while our people cannot compete with them and are on the dole is finished... and then ensuring that no employer in Gibraltar would have a way out by saying, 'Well, look, the problem is that the people who come out of the training centre are no good at construction work', or 'the people that come out of the universities have no experience.' Well, look, if nobody ever gives them an opportunity to be in a work environment, to pay them and to place them somewhere, the experience will never come.

You have a situation where the previous Government, Mr Speaker, has been recruiting people for the Care Agency and when the vacancies have come to me in the employment... the first time I saw them it said you either had to have five GCEs with one O level if you are a local, or a piece of paper that says you worked in an elderly people's home. Well, look, you can never have a piece of paper that says that, unless you work in the one elderly people's home that there is in Gibraltar, but in Andalucía there are 200, and if I did not work in any of the 200, it does not take too many euros to get that piece of paper.

So what do our people do? The answer is now we say 'no, no'. The Care Agency will have somebody placed with them whom we will train and then they have no excuse. I believe the strategy may not be perfect, it may need things that come up that are not working well which will need to be put right, but I can tell the hon. Member that my commitment to make this work is total and I normally do not give up that easily, as Members may have noticed. (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, so we have established, then, that ‘a guaranteed full-time job on completion’ – which are the words used in the manifesto – is a guaranteed full-time job in a private company in the private sector.

385 Will the hon. Gentleman commit... or will he answer this: what happens if any of these people are not taken on by that company? Are they kept in perpetual training until another company comes along? What happens if a company does not employ that individual?

390 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the scheme has been going for two weeks. The hon. Member is asking me, deliberately, questions that they have already asked.

In the previous questions, before lunch, I was asked what happens if the employer sends the guy back, and I said we take him back in the company and we place him somewhere else and we train him, and we keep on training him because the training is for the job. The training is not made before and then you hope somebody will find a job for the person with the skills that you have decided to provide. The skills will be the skills for which there is a demand in the market, and therefore the training will be provided so that those skills, in the public or in the private, will be there, so that there is no excuse for those who want to discriminate against our own people to continue to do so, and those that genuinely would like to employ our people but say our people are not sufficiently prepared will be given all the help they need by the Government to make sure that we overcome that obstacle.

400 The purpose of the exercise is to succeed. The hon. Member keeps asking me questions: what will you do if it fails? Well, I do not intend that it should fail.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am not suggesting... The hon. Gentleman keeps on going on that I have a desire to see the scheme fail. Absolutely not, but I am entitled to ask questions eliciting information from the Government as to whether the scheme has been properly thought out or not. That is the reality of the situation.

405 The hon. Gentleman may not like it when he is questioned. I know that he has never liked it particularly when anybody questions his authority, let alone any questions here in the House, but I am sorry, he is going to have to get used to the fact that, over the next four years, I am going to be asking plenty of questions in relation to this.

410 So can the hon. Gentleman confirm that the Government have actually thought this through in terms of what happens if somebody is not taken on by a company?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, it is not the Government’s obligation to tell the hon. Member what we have thought through or not thought through, because we are not here to answer to him for what we are going to be doing tomorrow or the day after, or in a month’s time, all of which is hypothetical.

415 He is putting up a series of problems that may or may not occur, and asking me how will I solve them if they do. Well, if they do – and I do not think they will, but if they do – I will solve them, and therefore the problems will not arise. I am not prepared to answer his hypothetical questions about future problems that may be encountered by something that has been in existence for a fortnight and where, as yet, not one single person is in beyond the original 30 days. I do not think that is something that he has got a right to ask. He can ask it, but he is not going to get the questions answered in the way he wants them answered. He will get the answers that I want to give him. Just like I cannot stop him phrasing a question the way he wants, he is not going to tell me how I am going to phrase the answers.

425 Mr Speaker: I think the Member must accept that this is (Interjection) about as far as we are going to get with this line of question.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, absolutely. I am not going to get any further with this. The hon. Gentleman has not answered the question and that is...

430 Mr Speaker: He did answer it.

Hon. D A Feetham: What can I do?

435 Will the hon. Gentleman, at the very least, consider this as a constructive suggestion from, certainly, this side of the House (Laughter). Will he go back and look at that contract and consider, in fact, adding some particular clause to the contract that at least compels the employer to actually retain the employee for a period of time before the repayment clause actually kicks in, because at the moment it is my interpretation, in relation to that contract that, if the employer were to sack the employee a week afterwards, they would not have to repay anything to the Government, and that seems to me to just be a circumventing of the intention of the scheme, as the hon. Gentleman has explained to this House.

Hon. J J Bossano: Assuming that he is making a constructive suggestion – which requires an exercise of belief on my part which is difficult to deliver... Assuming that he is doing that, I will consider it but, of course, I have to remind him that he thought initially that this was too onerous already. So if he is suggesting that I should toughen up the conditions, I will look at it.

GDC employees appointed to Civil Service Outside ring-fencing arrangements

Clerk: Question 142, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether any GDC employees or former GDC employees who were appointed to the Civil Service have been appointed to posts where the function or activity was undertaken by a Civil Service employee prior to the appointment of GDC employees to the Civil Service, and therefore outside the ring-fencing arrangements applicable to former GDC employees prior to 8th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

Registered unemployed on 31st January 2012
Breakdown by number of months

Clerk: Question 143, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many people were registered unemployed on 31st January 2012 between (a) 0-3 months; (b) 3-6 months (c) 6-12 months; (d) 12-24 months; and (e) above 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of people who were registered unemployed on 31st January 2012 who had been registered between nought and three months was 458.

Of the 458, 189 had been out of work for over three months and, therefore, in respect of all the numbers that I am giving him, the time register is, in fact, less than the time out of work because people do not register immediately they become unemployed. Three to six months registered is 123; 6-12 months is 57; 12-24 months is 32; and over 24 months is 35.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, effectively, there are 35 people who have been registered unemployed for over two years – correct?

Hon. J J Bossano: It is correct that they are registered for over two years and they may have been unemployed even longer than over two years.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept that, in relation to these people who are unemployed for longer than two years... in fact, others that may be long-term unemployed for longer, for example, than a year... that, in relation to those, the Government obviously faces particular challenges in terms of getting them back into employment and that, in relation to, for example, the Future Job Strategy and the getting of employers to guarantee places of employment for those individuals... that there are particular challenges in relation to those, and can the hon. Gentleman explain to this House how he is thinking in terms of trying to meet those challenges?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not accept that there are a group of people called ‘unemployables’, which is something that other people have previously thought of.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have not used that term.

Hon. J J Bossano: I know you have not used the term, but I am just making clear that I do not use it either.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, I use that term.

Hon. J J Bossano: You do.

Hon. P R Caruana: And I will continue to do so.

Hon. J J Bossano: And you will continue to do so, yes. There you are, you see: division on the Opposition back benches!

I think it is true that employers will be more reluctant to take on people the longer they have been out of work. That is a fact of life. Nevertheless, the position is that, clearly, it will be that it will be easier to deal with those who have been most recently employed – we hope, and that is the usual... Some people, frankly, get re-employed within three months with no help from the Employment Service. They just lose their job and they find another job and they do it on their own, and by the time that we learn of the termination of the vacancy in the ETB, it has already been filled because somebody else has moved from one job to the other. There is that level of movement which, in fact, exceeds the movement that has been going through the ETB itself. But as we reduce the numbers that are more easily placed, we will be able to concentrate more resources on those that are the more difficult cases.

I would imagine that, since there are something like 250 on Social Assistance who have to register as unemployed, many of those who have been in long-term unemployment, for over a year or 18 months, in the category of Social Assistance, some of them may not be in a position, for a variety of physical or other reasons, to take on heavy work or to work in the construction industry, but we will... The smaller the problem gets, the more time, attention and resources we will be able to devote to solving it. That will be the strategy.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I note that, in fact, some of his storm troopers are misrepresenting the statements that I have made in various letters to the Chronicle, and I do not... So I am going to be careful with the language that I use, lest the hon. Gentleman gets them to continue misrepresenting my position.

But does he not agree that, within that group of long-term unemployed, there are various reasons for those people being unemployed? Some of them, for example, may be unemployed because they have come out of prison, and I saw a lot of those people when I was Minister for Justice. Others, for example, may be, as the hon. Gentleman has outlined in his previous answer, people who are in receipt of Social Assistance. The way that certainly we would have dealt with... One of the ways we were going to be dealing with these people was... One was introducing, for example, rehabilitation, which we did in the Crimes Bill – rehabilitation of offenders legislation, preventing employers from referring and asking about the criminal convictions of particular individuals – and in relation to, for example, people who are long-term on the Social Assistance list, asking those people to enter into a Jobseeker’s Agreement, whereby they are actually paid more but there is an undertaking from that person that they are seeking employment.

I outline that because my question is this: what specific measures is the hon. Gentleman proposing to take, other than ‘Well, we’ll have to concentrate on these people’? What specific measures does he have in mind in order to deal with these people?

Hon. J J Bossano: ‘These people’, as he puts it, are just ordinary Gibraltarians, the same as us people, and therefore they will be dealt with the same as we are dealing with everybody else. They will have the same opportunity. It is just that more time, money and attention will be paid to them. But if the hon. Member says that he has had all these policies in the past, before 8th October – and we are talking about people who have been out for six months, nine months, a year, a year and a half, and two years – then it must be obvious that they were all there on 8th December and that all the Jobseeker’s Allowances and all the rehabilitation that he was doing was not working; otherwise, they would not be there.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, I quite distinctly remember, in our first term of office, in the GSD, when I was Employment Minister, that one of the particular issues that we did in order to provide as much support as possible to long-term unemployed – meaning more than 12 months – was to look specifically where those particular individuals were not actually succeeding in order to get employment. What we did find out was some of them – not all of them – had numeracy problems, literacy problems, lack of confidence in interviews. So this is the reason why we created the Job Club: in order to have counsellors specifically providing them with those particular skills to be able to offer themselves better to an employer at an interview, on the one hand; and, on the other hand, I remember and recall that we used to give allowances – not allowances, bonuses – to employers for a particular period of time in order to maximise the uptake of long-term unemployed.

I know it is a difficult thing to get long-term unemployed persons back into work, but I think that the question that my colleague is asking is a reasonable one. I think what we are trying to get at is that, presumably, those facilities are still there but, in the context of the audit of skills that the hon. Gentleman has alluded to in the past, will take into account what more extra resources, support may be given to those long-term unemployed. So can the Hon. Minister, actually, in the context of the skills audit he has mentioned, see whether there is the possibility to grow that particular service within the Employment Service?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, nothing has been terminated that was there already. Whatever help was being given and whatever incentives were being given, frankly I am not... I do not really know what they are. But, presumably, they are still there because nobody has said that they should stop. What I am saying is, in fact, that in the new approach that we are adopting, the fact that you have been a long time out of work, or the fact that you may have a particular problem, is not something that excludes you from the system that we have got in place but, in fact, as the numbers that we are dealing with start declining, more time and attention will be devoted to the more intractable and difficult cases.

What you cannot do, in my judgement, is to say to somebody who became unemployed three months ago, ‘You are not a priority because somebody was there two years ago and we will do the other one first,’ when we know that it is going to be easier to place the one who has just come out of work. Therefore, the resources that will come back to us will come back to us quicker because the other person will be given a job in the placement sooner and we might have to support somebody with long-term unemployment for longer before they are given the opportunity of staying there permanently.

But there are people already who have had these kind of problems and, in the past, have been placed and they have actually managed to adjust and are now in a normal working environment. There is no reason why that should not happen in the future.

Hon. D A Feetham: I hope I am not being unkind to the hon. Gentleman, but it appears to me –

Hon. J J Bossano: Heaven forbid!

Hon. D A Feetham: I want you to answer the question.

Of course, we accept that the fact you are a long-term unemployed does not exclude you from your entitlement for somebody to help you and to try and find a job for you, or for you to find a job. Of course. What we have asked is what measures have the Government actually taken in order to deal with these particular individuals, particularly also in the light of the Future Job Strategy, where the Government is guaranteeing anybody a job in the private sector. That is the question that we have asked, and that is the one that the hon. Gentleman appears to be refusing to answer.

Perhaps he can answer this: will the hon. Gentleman at least press the Minister for Justice, for example, as quickly as possible to introduce or to commence the rehabilitation of offenders parts of the Crimes Bill?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, a notice in relation to the rehabilitation of offenders will be published tomorrow.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you – the first straight answer we have received today!

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not going to press the Minister for Justice, in answer to his question. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member accept that... I would accept that there are... I agree with one of the last things that he said, namely that there are many people who can be helped back into the work ethic and a job environment and that those people are worthy recipients of additional help, additional funding etc. Indeed, that was our experience with the Gibraltar Community Projects Company – that some of the people who were there, supposedly because they could not get into the work ethic etc, actually, over the years, working in an increasingly normal working environment, did progress to the ability to join what we might call the mainstream labour force.

But when all those people have been helped, there will always be a residual group of people who are the ones that I call the ‘unemployables’ who, for one reason or another will not submit, will not succumb to the assistance that policies such as he has outlined are designed to help them. They will always be a problem. There will always be a core of people who will never be attractive to an employer, even as a trustee – not a trustee, either as a trainee – or as a permanent employee, and these are not the people that the hon. Member’s policy is designed to shoehorn into permanent public sector employment, through this company, presumably.

So the question is: does he acknowledge that there would always be, in any society, a group of people who, for one reason or another, will not, cannot, be helped into finding employment, and what does he have in mind for those? Presumably to continue to deal with them as they have been dealt with in the past – supported by social... but not shoehorned into the public sector through a Government company, presumably.

Hon. J J Bossano: At the moment, there is nothing specifically designed for the group that he has defined, but if we look at the figures here... If we assume that the intractable are those that are registered as seeking employment over one year, we are talking about 67 people. If we can bring the level of unemployment down to 67, we will be doing well.

Registered unemployed since 11th December 2011
Number of job vacancies filled

Clerk: Question 144, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many job vacancies have been filled since 11th December 2011, and how many of those vacancies have been filled by people who were registered as unemployed between (a) 0-3 months; (b) 3-6 months; (c) 6-12 months; (d) 12-24 months; and (e) above 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of job vacancies that have been filled since 11th December 2011 is 959. Of those vacancies, the number filled by people who were registered as unemployed between 0-3 months is 62; 3-6 months is 16; 6-12 months, 3; 12-24 months, 1; and over 24 months, 1.

This, in fact, demonstrates the point that I made earlier, that something like 90% or more of the jobs that have been filled have not been filled from the people who were registered as unemployed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does it not illustrate the point that I was trying to make, which is that, of course, the people who are on the long-term unemployment list clearly need additional measures targeted at them; and my question about what measures were the Government intending to take in order to help those individuals – has it not established that as well?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, what we have established is, for example, that of the 36 that there were unemployed over two years, one was employed and there are now 35, and that of the 60 that were unemployed between six and 12 months, three became employed and 57 still remain. So, in fact, the ratio under one year and the ratio above two years is no different.

I think what needs to be addressed is the fact that, in the period since the 11th, we are talking about 959 people getting work, and out of those only 83 were people who were registered in the Employment Service looking for work. That is the first issue that needs to be tackled because, independent of whether you have been out of work for three months or out of work for two years, if the jobs that arrive in the Employment Service are jobs that have already been given to somebody, then there is no chance of finding you a job.

The Employment Service, in fact, is taking a tough line with both public and private sector employers that the requirement that there is – that the vacancies have got to be open before they are filled – is there for a reason, and the lack of confidence that there is amongst unemployed people in the work that the Employment Service does is due to the fact that, when they get there, there are always cards with jobs, and when they go to the places where the jobs are supposed to exist, in 90% of the cases the jobs do not exist at all – they have already been filled.

Employers have had this practice, which now is almost cured but not entirely cured, that, for example, in January, what they used to call, apparently, the passing-through rate, was something like 80%, which meant that out of every 10 jobs, eight did not exist because a person had already been interviewed, a person had already been given a job and then the employer was sending the contract and the vacancy.

Clearly, if we are concerned about the guy with two years, then we have to have work sufficient available to us to be able to find him work, and at the moment that is a first priority, that the relationship that I have given him today of only 83 jobs out of 959 being filled from the unemployed will be a relationship that we will see changing. Unless and until we make inroads in the statistics, we will not really be able to help the long-term unemployed, whatever we do.

Housing Works Agency No requirement for CEO

Clerk: Question 145, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether it was his decision to sack John Cabezutto as CEO of Housing?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

The Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, Mr Cabezutto has not been ‘sacked’ from the post of CEO. The post was abolished by the board of the Agency after it was established that there was no requirement for it. Mr Cabezutto, therefore, automatically reverted to his previous employment as Deputy Manager of the Construction Training Centre in the Ministry of Employment and is still employed there.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, since the board of the Agency decided to place that post in the hands of Mr Cabezutto and then a subsequent board of the Agency decided to abolish the post, and the only difference between the first and the second board is the fact that one was chaired by a Minister in the GSD Government and the other was chaired by a Minister in the new Government, is it reasonable to surmise that the decision to abolish the post reflects the views of the political member of the board and not the others?

Hon. J J Bossano: If we accept that the appointment of Mr Cabezutto reflected the political opinion of the hon. Member opposite, who was the one who had been calling at his office every morning... When we took over –

Hon. P R Caruana: That was a sin, was it?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, but Mr Speaker, Mr Cabezutto used to report to the Chief Minister at the time every morning, and after 8th December he still kept turning up there, like a ghost in the convent, wandering through the corridor, looking for my colleague's predecessor, who was not there any more to give him instructions. Therefore, when we finally pinned him down and asked him what he was doing there, he said, 'Well, this is what I used to do before.'

When the board was convened the first time it was convened on 14th October under the chairmanship of Mr Vinet, and it took the decision to create the post of CEO and to give the job to Mr Cabezutto – which had not been advertised or trawled for qualifications required, or probation period provided, or any conditions attached to the performance of the post – to increase his pay from £30,000-odd to £65,000, and therefore to put him in charge of the Agency.

After the new Government was elected, the newly constituted board was asked to examine the necessity for this £65,000 job and they concluded that, really, there was no need to be spending that amount of public money and that, given the work that is being done, the number of supervisory grades that there are as a result of the early-exit package and the very reduced workforce that there is now, there was no need for two jobs at the top of the Agency. Therefore, the more expensive of the two was eliminated as the logical and rational commercial decision to take. Mr Cabezutto, therefore, was told that the post was no longer going to exist and would not have continued to exist, irrespective of who the incumbent had been, and therefore that he should now go back to where he came from and do the job that he was doing previously.

Therefore, he was not sacked from the Government service, he was simply reverted to his previous position before the job was given to him on 20th October.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is a very roundabout way – if somebody is employed as the Chief Executive Officer of an organisation and shortly after the General Election he is summoned by the Minister for Housing and told that his services are no longer required, would he go back to his previous job in another organisation that, by any other name, is to be dismissed from your post. Is the hon. Member saying, in fact, that what they think they have done is abolish the post of CEO?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, it is not what we think we have done, the post of CEO has been abolished by the board that created the post on 14th October and I have to tell the hon. Member that the fact that on the eve of the Election directors and CEOs were appearing all over the place does not mean that we are stuck with them for the rest of the four years.

We have a right, Mr Speaker, to look as we come in and decide whether the job that is being done is a job that we continue to want to be done at public expense, or we do not. Mr Cabezutto was told that he would go back to the job that he had before and he could continue working there and, therefore, he has not been sacked. Sacking somebody is putting him on the dole and telling him to go to the ETB and sign on.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is a rather simplistic view of the law of employment related to constructive dismissal, but anyway, Mr Speaker, doesn't the hon. Member understand that the 'board', as he calls it, is not at liberty to abolish the post of CEO? The Housing Works Agency is a creature of statute. It was created by the Housing Works Agency Act passed in this Parliament. That Act requires that there should be a post of CEO, it is mandatory, it is established so by Act of Parliament. The board, that is itself, a creature of that same Act, is simply not at liberty to decide to abolish a post which a statute has created and says is mandatory.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member can expect some of the litigation that they thought they would avoid on this particular change of Government by their own admission, they have purported to abolish a post which they cannot in law abolish and therefore what they have done is not abolish the post, what they have done is sack the incumbent of that post, because the post itself cannot in law be abolished by them, unless they bring legislation to this House to amend the Housing Works Agency Act.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, just for the sake of clarification, may I remind the House that the word used was not 'abolished', it was discontinued.

Hon. P R Caruana: It was not. It was 'abolished' and it is in Hansard.

Hon. C A Bruzon: It was discontinued. I was Chairman of the board and that is the word that I used and that is the word that was used: ‘discontinued’ not ‘abolished’. For the sake of accuracy.

770 Hon. P R Caruana: I did not think that I would live to see the day when I would see the Hon. Mr Bruzon to rise in this House to protect the back of the Hon. Mr Bossano but, still, I have given the Hon. Minister for Employment two opportunities to confirm whether or not he has abolished the post and he has taken great relish in confirming – and it is there in Hansard that what they have done is abolish the post, because the board considered that it was no longer required.

775 I am telling him now that that decision is unlawful and ultra vires the board, who have no power to abolish the post, because it is a post created by law and not a post created by the board.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if it is ultra vires and they do not have the power to do it, then clearly the post has not been abolished, according to his understanding of the law.

780 Therefore, the decision of the board has been to inform the occupant that the post was no longer required and even if it remains there empty, it is not going to be filled. If the hon. Member says that the board does not have the right to keep the post empty, then it did not have the right to fill it on 20th October and the way that it filled it was, effectively, that they did what they were told by him and they put the person that they were told by him to do. That is clearly known to everybody there, from the guy that is working in the yard to the guy that has got the no. 2 job in the organisation. That is why this supposed CEO, when ??? to receive his marching orders from the Leader of the Opposition when he was in Government. That methodology of running the Agency has been changed, following the Election, and therefore the position is that if Mr Cabezutto believes that the board is not entitled to tell him we do not want to continue employing you as CEO and you can now go back, then, of course, if he feels that he has got a case, he can pursue the case, as he is entitled to do, as a resident, in fact, the first thing he did, when he was told, I understand, was to say to everybody that he was going to take legal advice and probably he went to the Member opposite for the legal advice.

785 Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member not accept that this is not about the changing methodologies of the management of the board? The hon. Members opposite are perfectly entitled, if they want to, to procure that the board of the Agency should dispense with the services of Mr Cabezutto, or any other employee, despite the promise not to cut any heads in the Election.

790 Does he not understand that is what it would be, because this guise, this sort of dressing they have put on it, of an abolition of post is not open to them because they cannot abolish the post? Because they cannot in law abolish the post, the only way of dispensing with Mr Cabezutto, is to do what, in fact, they have done to him, is to sack him, because his employer, which was the Agency, has dispensed with his services, other than by means of abolishing the post because it cannot in law have abolished the post?

800 This is not about dispensing with his services. Look, the board can employ somebody and then sack them, as long as they understand that ‘sack them’ is what they have done and that has legal consequences. The behaviour of the hon. Members opposite now is not comparable to the previous Government’s. An Act was passed in this House which required the Agency to appoint a Chief Executive Officer and that power is vested in the board. The board met and duly appointed a Chief Executive Officer. That Chief Executive Officer was confirmed in his post in writing; the terms of his appointment were confirmed in writing.

805 Along come the hon. Members opposite, immediately after the General Election, and say to him that he is not acceptable. Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member accept – if he wants a question – given that the Agency requires by law to have a Chief Executive Officer, their objective of dispensing with the office of Chief Executive, because they think it is not necessary, cannot be achieved effectively or lawfully, until they have changed that Act of Parliament so that the law no longer requires the Agency to have a Chief Executive Officer? Does he accept that?

810 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I want to say two things.

815 The first is that nobody’s head has been cut off since this Government came and was sworn in on 9th December. Nobody’s head will be cut off, quite unlike the position in 1996 when the hon. Gentleman was sworn in as Chief Minister, when a number of heads were cut off and a number of cases were brought against his Government successfully by those whose heads were improperly cut off, to use the figurative term.

820 Hon. P R Caruana: Whose were cut off?

Hon. Chief Minister: Secondly, Mr Speaker, given that the hon. Gentleman has more or less indicated that legal proceedings will be commencing as a result of the matters which we are discussing, I do not believe it is appropriate for Government to continue to discuss these issues. We will await the service of legal proceedings and we will defend those legal proceedings, based on whatever advice we receive.

Hon. P R Caruana: Whilst he awaits those legal proceedings – and whilst I accept it is not appropriate to discuss legal proceedings that are afoot, not that these are, does the hon. Member agree that, if there is an Act of Parliament that requires the Agency to have a CEO, having dispensed with the incumbent CEO, they must, in order to comply with the law, now appoint a new one, because the Agency... the Act requires there to be a CEO?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am neither going to accept nor not accept any issue that the hon. Gentleman raises in respect of this matter, given that he has already said and more or less given notice that this is going to be the subject of litigation. It would not be prudent for the Government to put arguments here in respect of those issues, which we are being told may be the subject of legal proceedings. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Health wishes to say something.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think as a point of information, since we are speaking on posts not filled, I think I would like to bring to the notice of the House, that the Gibraltar Health Authority Act requires three posts which have not been filled, probably for over a decade, and there was no Act of Parliament changing that requirement. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the... I do not think the hon. Gentleman answered my question. Was it his decision to sack Mr Cabezutto or was it a cabinet decision? Was it a collective beheading of Mr Cabezutto, or did he wield the axe himself?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there have been no beheadings of anyone, despite the fact that if the hon. Gentleman cared to look at what happened in 1996, he would have understood that the Government that beheaded people simply because they believed that they did not share their political opinions is the Government represented by the party with which he sits.

Hon. P R Caruana: Who was beheaded in 1996?

Hon. Chief Minister: We are standing on the answers I have given already. We will not give any further answers in respect of these issues. There will not be any further answers provided, given that the hon. Gentleman has said that legal proceedings are to be expected in respect of this matter, so any matters can be ventilated in the appropriate forum, which will be such tribunal as whoever it is that is going to sue whoever it is that they are going to sue decides to sue it.

Hon. P R Caruana: If the Hon. the Chief Minister is so laudably... first of all I do not accept that the GSD Government beheaded anybody, but never mind, I am not here to answer his questions.

Mr Speaker, if the Hon. the Chief Minister is laudably committed to a policy of not beheading anybody and respecting everybody's rights, regardless of what their political colours might be, will he be instructing the Hon. the Minister for Employment to respect the right of the ex-GSD Minister, Luis Montiel to return (Members: Hear, hear.) to his previous post, as his terms of parliamentary appointment entitle him to, to return to his previous post in the Employment Service under the ministerialship of the Hon. the Minister for Employment? Will he be ensuring that that takes place?

Mr Speaker: I am not sure that is a proper question, with respect. We are talking specifically about Mr Cabezutto.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, we are talking about cutting off heads.

Mr Speaker: No, we are talking about Mr Cabezutto and now I do not think it is open for the hon. Member to start bringing other individuals into this line of questioning.

880 Hon. P R Caruana: The Chief Minister seems perfectly content to answer the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am perfectly content to stick to your ruling, Mr Speaker.

885
Government agency, authority or company
Vacancies since 8th December 2011 filled without being advertised

Clerk: Question 146, the Hon. D A Feetham.

890 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether there have been any job vacancies since 8th December 2011, in any Government agency, authority, or company, filled by any individual without any vacancy having been advertised, and, if so, will the Minister please provide details?

895 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, all vacancies in any Government agency, authority or company must be notified to and filled through the Employment Service.

900 Hon. D A Feetham: I take it the answer is no?

Hon. J J Bossano: The vacancies are... just like the private sector, the public sector is required to open vacancies in the Employment Service 14 days before they are filled. As far as I am aware, there have not been any filled in that period, but that is how it would be done, not by advertising.

905

Hon. D A Feetham: I see, so the answer is there have not been any job vacancies that have arisen, hence they have not been advertised? Is that the position?

910 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

915
Green tax measures
Government commitment and programme

Clerk: Question 147, the Hon. S M Figueras.

920 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm whether the Government is committed to green tax measures and, if so, is the Minister able to provide a list of those measures currently identified by Government for implementation in addition to those already in existence?

925 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government remains committed to the creation of a more environmentally friendly economy for Gibraltar.

930 This may include the introduction of a comprehensive green public procurement policy which will help to expand the market for low carbon, environmentally friendly products and services. We are also actively investigating ways of encouraging and promoting energy efficiency within buildings and transport. However, we have not yet finalised any measures and, consequently, I am unable to provide a definitive list.

Green tax measures will form part of a more comprehensive package of measures designed to achieve this. Any announcement of any 'tax measure' will, of course, be made in the debate on the Appropriation Bill.

935

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to give us an indication of the kind of tax measures the Government is considering for implementation at this stage?

940

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Not yet, it is a work in progress. We are working on all these areas, but I am not able to say so yet.

Smoking ban in public places Anticipated cost to taxpayer from tax and rate advantages

945

Clerk: Question 148, the Hon. S M Figueras.

950

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether the Government is committed, in line with the commitment to ban smoking in public places, to provide 'generous tax and rates advantages to amortise any potential loss' arising from the imposition of the ban and, if so, the anticipated cost to the taxpayer of this initiative?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

955

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Again, the Government is considering how it is going to assist businesses in mitigating possible loss as a consequence of a ban on smoking.

960

A number of different options, ranging from rate reductions, tax breaks and reductions in utility charges are being considered and this includes consideration of calculations of the cost to the taxpayers of each of the options. These calculations are not yet available, given the policy considerations still taking place in order to design a process which is both generous and fair.

965

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, as a commitment which will no doubt have found favour with many business owners faced with the prospect of a ban in every manifesto at the last General Election, I think it is probably legitimate to ask the Government whether it has a specific timescale in mind for the delivery of – and this is the subject of a question at a later stage – these measures?

970

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: The question by the hon. Lady on the health aspects of the smoking ban, I think, will answer part of your question. If not, I would be happy to expand further if it does not answer that aspect.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful. I had only asked for clarification of whether the commitment is for the measures to be delivered in conjunction with the ban when it happens.

975

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: That is the intention.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain how the potential loss of business from losing clientele who smoke will be calculated? Will there be a formula?

980

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: This is something in process at the moment. We have not yet decided what measures we are going to take, or what the formula would be. It is something that is being discussed at the moment and will form part of the programme on smoking that we will be undertaking and of which I will give a few more details in response to your question shortly.

985

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain if restaurants, bars and social clubs that have already gone smoke free will be able to benefit from these tax and rates advantages once they are announced?

990 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: This is an aspect we have not considered specifically, but obviously the package would have to apply to everybody who undertakes the ban, which will be a requirement of the law.
We are not going to single out those who have already done it and prejudice them against anybody else.

995 Sewage treatment plant
Progress of plans

Clerk: Question 149, the hon. S M Figueras.

1000 Hon. S M Figueras: Will the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm whether the Government is committed, within this term of office, to deliver a sewage treatment plant, as per their manifesto commitment? If so, by when and can he provide details of progress in its delivery, if any?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

1005 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): It is, indeed, the Government's intention to proceed with the construction of a new sewage treatment plant to comply with Gibraltar's obligations under the Urban Wastewater Treatment Directive, and to do so as soon as we are able to, although I cannot presently give a date for the commencement of this project.

1010 The available reports and assessments are currently being considered by the Government and we are also looking into the possible procurement strategies, at the end of which process we should have a more definite timescale for the delivery of the project.

1015 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, to hold the Minister to account only in respect of the detail of the manifesto commitment, could he clarify that the commitment is to deliver it within this term of office?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is the intention. Whether it is completed or not will depend on the ultimate decision, the procurement process and the time it takes, but the intention is yes.

1020 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, despite the fact that the manifesto was very clear that it would be within the term of office, now the Minister is unsure whether it can be delivered in that timeframe?

1025 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I am doing nothing of the sort. What I am saying is that, in Government Office, as you will not have any experience of yourself, you will come across detailed information, which may not be in your possession when you are in Opposition, as you all have experience of at the moment. Therefore we have to take other things into consideration and timescales may be slightly different, but the intention remains the same and I will work very hard to achieve it.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, one final question. Is there an estimated cost for the delivery of this?

1030 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Not at this point.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you.

1035 Barbary Macaque
Small-scale culling

1040 Clerk: Question 150, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm whether the Government is committed to small-scale culling for the management of numbers of the Barbary Macaque?

1045 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government is not going to carry out small-scale culling – bit of a tongue twister, sorry – as a means to managing the numbers of the Barbary Macaques.

1050

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you very much for the clarification, Mr Speaker.

The question arose out of a certain inconsistency where, in the manifesto, the now Government committed to not resorting to killing the Barbary Macaque but, however, I was made aware of an article in one of the newspapers, where a quote attributed to the Minister, said they would not go for large-scale culling.

I was grateful for the clarification that they will not be going for small-scale culling either.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I am happy to clarify that further. At that press conference I then continued, but what I said later was not reported and I explained that what I was meaning, is that there are sometimes individual monkeys, which perhaps through an accident or some other individual condition, would have to be culled, but not that there would be small-scale culling as a population control measure, more as a direct management measure in relation to health and so on.

1060

I did explain that at the time of the press conference, but that was not picked up by the press.

1065

Commonwealth Park Commitment and estimated cost

1070 Clerk: Question 151, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether the Government is committed to building the Commonwealth Park, as set out in its manifesto and, if so, can it confirm the estimated cost of this project?

1075

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Government is considering the details of a number of options available for the creation of the Commonwealth Park.

Given that the project will have to go out to tender, it is not appropriate to provide an estimate of cost at this stage; but the hon. Member should rest assured that any costs associated with the development will be announced publicly, once determined, and that the park will be delivered to the people of Gibraltar, as we have committed to.

1085

I will look forward to receiving his congratulations when he is able to stroll along this beautiful green area we will create in the centre of our city. (Applause)

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I will indeed – if it is delivered – stroll along it above double the number of car parking spaces currently available in the area which, to me, sounds certainly a little inconsistent with the environmental objectives of this Government.

1090

However, what I would ask is, if any geological surveys have been carried out of the area in advance of going out to tender?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: They will have been carried out in advance of going out to tender. We will, obviously, have to consider what the geology of the place is like.

1095

Hon. S M Figueras: I am sorry, just to clarify. I had asked whether any geological surveys have, in fact, been carried out?

1100 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: There is some information available, but no actual geological survey, to my knowledge, has been carried out yet.

Hon. S M Figueras: And, obviously, the Minister is unable to comment on the cost of the project. However, there is an element of surprise in this, in that when the manifesto at the last Election came out, there was every comfort that you knew what the manifesto was going to cost, does the Minister have an idea of the ballpark that we are talking about in relation to the Commonwealth Park?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not going to be drawn into giving figures when, as I said, we have to go to a tender process, because that is going to pre-empt all sorts of things.

1110 I believe that, in one of the debates before the Election, the Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond mentioned that it was known to the Government, because some survey had been taken out at the time. I have not been able to find such a survey, which is why I have to answer that survey, to my knowledge, is not available.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, (Interjection) the reference... I know personally of no references that my hon. colleague –

1115 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I apologise for the confusion.

Hon. S M Figueras: I certainly remember that – 1120 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if I can clarify for both hon. Members, I think that what was said in the past was two things: that the Government had a costing for a similar project in the Grand Parade and therefore we had an idea what the cost was of these underground car parks. Also, here in Commonwealth Parade, you have the not inconsiderable additional difficulty of the closeness of the city walls and the foundations of the city walls and also the closeness of the water table, which would result in huge costs in pumping during construction and then permanent pumping, once the car park was built and that that rendered the project

1125 hugely expensive, which is why we said at the time of the Election that, amongst many other aspects, that project was unaffordable.

Just to say, I do not think there is... at least, if there is, I never saw it in any Government file, any costing of the Commonwealth Parade, that I am aware of.

1130

Western Beach Resolution of sewage issue

1135 Clerk: Question 152, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether, further to last month's confirmation that legal advice was being sought, there has been any progress with the resolution of the Western Beach sewage issue?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1145 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Yes, Mr Speaker the Government is considering the advice received before determining what line of action to take in order to resolve the issue of sewage at Western Beach.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, would the Minister kindly confirm how long they expect this consideration process to take?

1150 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is obviously a complex issue.

I will probably be considering it for a considerable amount of time, but when a decision is going to be taken – which is probably what you want to know – I would have hoped we are able to do so within a relatively short timescale, but because of the complexity of the issues, I am not able to give you a firm date.

1155 Hon. S M Figueras: I am appreciative of the cross-border complexity of the issue. I merely raise the point again at a subsequent meeting of Parliament because, as we know, before long the bathing season is upon us and I am certain that beachgoers will be keen to know that the matter is in hand and as soon as a timescale is available I am certain people will be very grateful to hear it.

1160 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, no problem.

1165 GHA Board
Date and place of first public meeting

Clerk: Question 153, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1170 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister state when the first public meeting of the GHA Board will be and where it will be held?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1175 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): The date for the first public meeting of the GHA Board will be set once I have completed the review of the options for access by the public. These options are being developed by GHA staff and are based upon a review of the international literature on public meetings of healthcare boards.

1180 It is intended that public meetings will be held at the John Mackintosh Hall. To add to the prepared answer, I suspect it will be some time in April.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if the minutes of these public GHA Board meetings will be made public?

1185 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, certainly.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if the Medical Advisory Committee, as part of the GHA Board, has been reformed and who are its members?

1190 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Did you say the Medical Advisory Committee?
The Medical Advisory Committee, which is a statutory requirement, has not been in operation for quite a number of years. It is currently being reconstituted by the medical practitioners and they have a statutory duty to recommend representatives on the Board. That is happening now, but the MAC have not met for quite a number of years.

1195 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Finally, Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if, as part of the GHA's fiscal transparency policy, they will be publishing the GHA's monthly finance report submitted by the Director of Finance to the GHA Board? Will that information be made available on the GHA's or the Government's website?

1200 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I have not taken a decision on that yet.
As I say, we are looking at the way that public meetings of healthcare boards are organised in other parts of the world, and this is why we have not held a meeting yet. We have other aspects to look into as to how to conduct them. It is a fairly delicate thing, having health authority meetings in public. We have to take into account things, for example, like patient confidentiality and so on, so I am not in a position yet to undertake to do that, but certainly I will be in a position to do that very soon.

‘Metal on metal’ hip replacements
Gibraltar patients affected

1210 Clerk: Question 154, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health report back on the investigation to assess whether any Gibraltar patients could be affected by ‘metal on metal’ hip replacements that could be causing systemic toxicity in the body?

1215 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

The Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the GHA has used metal on metal implants on 13 patients over the past five years. This represents 14% of the total of hip implants performed over that period.

1220 Metal on metal implants, as opposed to metal on polyethylene or other material combinations, were designed to be long lasting and have been inserted in the relatively younger population with serious hip disease.

1225 The implant the GHA has used exclusively is the Birmingham Hip Resurfacing, manufactured by Smith & Nephew Inc. The reported excessive failure rates have been with the DePuy ASR implant, which has been taken off the market and which has not been used locally.

The GHA is offering consultant review appointments for each of the 13 patients in upcoming orthopaedic clinics. The primary purpose of the clinic is to reassure patients following the recent media concern. In case of existing problems, investigations will be arranged.

Norovirus at St Bernard’s Hospital Precautions put in place

1235 Clerk: Question 155, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health explain what processes were put in place when the recent norovirus outbreak was identified in St Bernard’s Hospital?

1240 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

The Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the GHA initiated its infection-control protocol for an outbreak as soon as the outbreak was declared by the Infection Control Officer on 20th January.

1245 These protocols, which have been in place for the past several years, are based on international standards of infection control practice. The protocols initiated were similar to those initiated in February 2011 and included segregation of infectious persons and the limitation of contact with uninfected persons beyond that deemed essential for care; universal precautions in the handling of infected materials, such as the use of aprons, gloves and suitable apparel and disposal of clinical waste in accordance with policy; regular and frequent handwashing, as well as cleaning of affected and risk-prone surfaces with recommended disinfectants; prompt disengagement of staff taken ill and restriction from return until clear of symptoms for 48 hours.

1250 However, unlike in 2011, it was not found necessary to close the wards to admissions.

1255 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then confirm that these processes that were put in place are public health clinical governance procedures and not Government policies?

1260 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: These procedures which were put in place are, as I said, based on international standards of infection control practice. They were controlled entirely by the professionals and there was no need or even consideration for the Minister to involve himself in any way in the work of the professionals and impose any other kind of Government policy.

These are generally recognised infection control procedures.

1265 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us if the norovirus is now contained and how far it got into the community?

1270 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It is quite likely that this virus is endemic in the community at particular periods of time, so you cannot really say that it will have gone into the community from the hospital; it will have come into the hospital from the community, so I cannot really answer the second part of the question. But as far as my statistics go, the latest that I have any incidence of a new case of norovirus in St Bernard's Hospital is 5th February.

These things can come in and out, as I say, if a virus is endemic in the community, but that particular outbreak, according to my data, finished round about that time.

1275 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you. Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us how many wards were closed and for how long?

1280 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: This is additional supplementary information which I would need notice of – specific wards and specific number of days.

It did affect, as far as I can see in the information I have, three or four wards. If I had this in colour I could tell you exactly because it is a black-and-white copy of a colour version. I can provide that information, but I do not have it off the top of my head at the moment.

1285 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, I may enlighten the Minister that three wards were closed. Does he not agree, then, that this year's outbreak was more serious than the outbreak of February of last year, which resulted in the closure of only one ward?

1290 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Seriousness of infection is very difficult to describe because how do you measure seriousness? By the number of occurrences? By the rate in which it passes? By how virulent it is in any particular patient? We felt that this year the rate of spread was less than last year – I am talking about rate – and therefore the decision was taken not to close the wards to admissions. But relative seriousness is something that is impossible to determine in this kind of brief conversation without specific data on all sorts of parameters.

St Bernard's Hospital
Date of last norovirus outbreak

1300 Clerk: Question 156, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1305 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Health state on what date the latest norovirus outbreak was detected at St Bernard's Hospital and on what date the Minister was made aware of this norovirus outbreak in St Bernard's Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

1310 The Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the outbreak was declared by the Infection Control Officer at 8.10 a.m. on 20th January. The Chief Executive was informed at 8.20 a.m. and I was informed by the chief executive at 8.32 a.m., 22 minutes after the declaration. Norovirus was immediately suspected but was not confirmed until subsequently.

1315 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then explain why it took so long for any information on the norovirus outbreak to be made public?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, because we have to take a responsible approach to this sort of thing. If one is told that there is an outbreak of a certain number of cases of alimentary canal issues, then you cannot just pick up the phone and call GBC and say, 'We have an outbreak of something – we're not sure what it is or how many people it affects.' Had we done that, we would have been criticised by the Opposition for not knowing what we are doing, for irrationally worrying people without the necessary information. So you have to really know and assess how this is going and what the details are before you make a public statement.

The important thing is the immediate implementation of infection control measures. That is our main responsibility – to protect the health of the community – and that was done immediately. Then it needs to take one or two days in order for you to determine whether it is something of concern to the community that the community should be made aware of. Obviously, relatives of people in the ward were also informed right away, so it was not a secret. It was in the public domain on a need-to-know basis.

By the time that a couple of days had passed... This was a Friday, so by the Monday, the number of instances had decreased tremendously – there were only three new cases on the Sunday, for example – so it appeared that the actual outbreak had been a very short one and had died out, and therefore it was not felt necessary to make a statement at that time because we would have been warning people about something that appeared to have been sorted out.

Subsequently, there was a slight peak later on in the week and, around that time, it became in the public domain because of the Opposition's statement, so there was not really any sense in making it right away. By the time we were thinking of doing it, it seemed to have petered out. We had a couple of slight peaks later, but certainly there was not really a need. By that time it was in the public domain.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the reality is that there was concern from the public, because that is how we got to hear of it, because restrictions were put in place.

I ask: why did it take GBC questions to the GHA and a press release from us for the Director of Public Health to finally make a statement on the norovirus situation and reassure the general public?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Because it did not appear necessary by that time to do it, because the infection had almost passed by that time, and we had no idea that, a few days later, there might be a couple more cases, but it did not feel necessary.

Immediately that this was pointed out and we had a press question, we very clearly asked the Director of Public Health to make a public health statement. As he himself said, it is not much more serious than a common cold, and I hope we are not expected in future to make a public statement every time three or four patients and five or six nurses get a cold at St Bernard's Hospital.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member agree with me that, clearly, there were no grounds for the hon. Member to believe that this had been sorted out and past, and therefore it was not worth mentioning to anybody, and then go on to say that, a couple of days later, there were peaks. If the outbreak has not peaked, on what ground did anybody presuppose that it had been sorted out?

Secondly, Mr Speaker, wouldn't the hon. Member agree with me that precisely the way to allay public concern about things that the public need not worry about is to make public statements, and that by not making public statements all that happens is that people end up speculating and therefore worrying precisely about things that the hon. Member believes is no cause for concern.

Thirdly, the hon. Member has said that this was in the public domain on a need-to-know basis because the families of patients were in the know. I have great difficulty accepting that because, precisely we, on this side of the House, got to know that there was an outbreak of something – we did not know what – in the hospital which had required restricted visiting rights and other things, from precisely a family member of a patient who was flapping precisely because no-one would tell them what it was that was going on and what sort of danger their family member was exposed to in the ward.

So this does not ring true with the statement that the hon. Member is now making in this House that families did know, were being told and therefore were being kept informed and therefore the public knew on a need-to-know basis.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am surprised about the last point. All I can do is look into it. Perhaps that relative did not get informed for some reason. I will have to look into that.

Public statements were made in response to press questions – (Interjection) Yes, indeed. They pre-empted any statement that we would have made otherwise, in the sense that it appeared that the infection had actually petered out by that time, and when I said ‘peaks’, these are minor peaks. I have a draft in front of me.

1375 Hon. P R Caruana: What is a minor peak?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: You can get a minor peak. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) If you have two cases one day and four cases the next day and three cases the next day, that case of four is a minor peak. We are talking about small figures. I am using scientific terminology which, to me, does not raise any alarm, but obviously to the hon. Member does.

1380 I do not feel that we did absolutely anything out of the ordinary. I think that we took every measure to protect the community. In fact, I am convinced this was a minor outbreak of a not very virulent disease. By the time we knew enough about it, it was apparently petering out. Then it got into the public domain and so it has continued.

1385 I have no concerns whatsoever. Everybody did what they had to do and rather well, as well, and the infection was over within a very short period of time. I do not think I have much further to say on that.

1390 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, I have no doubt that the infection was very well handled by the staff at the GHA – the nurses, the doctors and the management. That is not what we are discussing. What we are discussing is whether the management and, indeed, the Government should have made a public statement to allay public concerns and speculation.

I suppose the acid test of what I am asking the hon. Member is, given their style when they were in Opposition, what fuss would they have made against us in Government if they had discovered from a patient – the sort that used to line up outside Watergardens to speak to them regularly – that wards had had to be restricted to visitors because something was going on. They would have taken an even more aggressive view than we took.

1395 Would the hon. Member agree with me that, with the benefit of hindsight and perhaps for the future, it is best to make a calm... particularly when, as he says, he believes that there was no real cause of concern. In those circumstances, particularly, the most sensible thing to have done, does he agree with me, would have been to put out a statement so that there could have been no cause, no risk and none of what actually happened, which was people speculating and worrying, coming running round to the Opposition saying that something dreadful must be going on ‘because they won’t let me get in to see my family member’, and that, particularly when there is no serious issue at stake and people’s minds can easily be put at rest, isn’t it better to put them at rest by making a timely public statement?

1405 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No. First of all, I do not know what would have happened had we been in Opposition, because I have never been in Opposition, so I do not have the benefit of that. (Interjection)

No, seriously, quite honestly I am told early on a Friday morning that we have a number of infections of stomach ailments or whatever. I cannot make a statement until I know more about it, until I know what it is and how serious it is.

1410 We take the immediate anti-infection action. Relatives were informed. Maybe one slipped by – I do not know. Then, three days later, it goes down to two and it seems to be going down. There is hardly any need to say anything else because it is virtually over.

1415 Therefore, I think that had the pattern been slightly different, had there been more on the Sunday or the Monday than there were, then definitely there would have been a public statement, but my value judgement at the time was that it would have been irresponsible to make such a statement and unnecessary, and that is my opinion.

No two outbreaks will be the same and every outbreak will be treated as it has to be treated: responsibly, clinically, professionally and scientifically. That is all I can say.

1420 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, may I remind the Member opposite that, in fact, when they were in Opposition, the spokesman for Health did say, and I quote from 2nd March of last year:

1425 ‘Government should have alerted the public about the recent spread of a suspected norovirus in St Bernard’s Hospital at the outset, instead of keeping quiet about it until the situation was brought under control.’

Hon. P R Caruana: A very experienced spokesman for the Opposition, as opposed to an inexperienced Minister.

1430 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain why he got his priorities wrong when, on the day of the Government press release on the norovirus, which was not up to date, the Minister was able to give an interview on the Upper Rock which perhaps could have waited a day or two?

1435 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: As I was not in the House at the time, or anywhere near, I will look into what the Government responded at the time and see whether I can learn from that. (Laughter)

Primary Care Centre
Improvements to smoking cessation programme

1440

Clerk: Question 157, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1445 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the hon. the Minister for Health state how the GHA will improve on the already existing smoking cessation programme offered by the nurse practitioners at the Primary Care Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

1450 The Minister for Health and Environment (Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the GHA is already in the process of enhancing the existing smoking cessation programme and will, for the first time, provide nicotine replacement therapy to those on the programme.

1455 In addition, I will shortly be placing before Government proposals to expand the service. Once my Cabinet colleagues have had the opportunity to consider the best date to start implementation of the manifesto commitments in respect of the ban on smoking in public places, the programme will be expanded according to the Government's chosen schedule, more details of which I will provide in answer to another question on the Order Paper.

1460 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you.
Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain, then, if the GHA will consider funding prescriptions for smoking cessation aids such as patches, gum and inhalers?

1465 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We have already started providing the nicotine patches and we are considering, as part of the exercise that I referred to, what else we are going to do to carry this along, but we are committed to a wide-ranging smoking cessation programme.

1470 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain what the permanent anti-smoking campaign in secondary schools and youth clubs will be that is already over and above what is being done in schools in PSHE and through posters, and also, in fact, for the posters on No Smoking Day by the Public Health Department of the GHA?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am sorry, could you repeat that?

1475 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes. What is going to be done over and above what has already been put in place by the Public Health Department through the schools and...

1480 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Obviously, the nicotine replacement patches is new. This was not done before, but on the subject... This is currently being discussed. We are currently discussing what we are going to do to promote it. We have not completed it yet, but it will be finished very soon, and I can say a little bit more as to our timescale in answer to your next question.

Legislation to ban on smoking in public places
Date of introduction

1485 Clerk: Question 158, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the hon. the Minister for Health state when the ban on smoking in public places legislation will be introduced?

1490 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

The Minister for Health and Environment (Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, subject to the completion of the legislative options and completion of drafting by the LSU, which is already well under way, it is my intention to set out the timetable for this on National No Smoking Day, which is 14th March this year and, hopefully, we will have more information on the other aspects you asked about before.

EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

1500 Severely challenging pupils
Management policy

Clerk: Question 159, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1505 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Education explain what the current policy for dealing with severely challenging pupils is, what provision is presently made for them and what, if any, the Government's future policy for them will be.

1510 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the policy for dealing with pupils exhibiting extreme challenging behaviour is based on identification, assessment by a multi-disciplinary panel, the provision of resources and regular review – the same as it has always been.

1515

The majority of pupils displaying challenging behaviour are supported by the Behaviour Education Support Team in schools and will continue to be educated in a mainstream setting alongside their peers.

Where the child and family are known to the Care Agency, a joint Education/Care Agency plan is put into place. This may include a tailored programme delivered by a teacher outside the school premises and always in partnership with the Care Agency and other relevant bodies, such as the RGP and GHA. The process is monitored through multi-agency case conferences.

The most extreme cases are educated in specialist centres outside Gibraltar. The Government intends to create a dedicated discipline support facility to cater for the pupils with challenging behaviour who can benefit from an environment which will keep them away from the mainstream for their own protection and for the safety of staff and other children.

1525

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you.

Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain further, then, this manifesto commitment to create a unit away from mainstream education for children of challenging behaviour? Where will this unit be and for what age groups?

1530

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the position is that the Government intends to create a dedicated facility.

We are currently looking, in conjunction with my hon. Colleague, Miss Sacramento, at the sites which will be used for this. A site has been identified already and is being considered. The idea is to have a secure facility where children with challenging behaviour can be sent and can be cared for, both by the Care Agency and provided with education. That is the intention and that is what we are working for.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does this conform with other education systems in Europe, and what studies have there been to indicate that this does not psychologically damage those students, who may feel stigmatised by attending a separate institution or which may be seen as a correctional facility and fingers will be pointed?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is not intended to be the sort of institution that the hon. Lady is referring to.

There are circumstances already where children have to be taken away from mainstream education, both for their own protection and for the protection of others in that school. That already happens, and what we are doing is providing a set-up which does not exist at the moment. Now it is dealt with on an ad hoc basis and we want to have a dedicated facility to be used only in these rare and extreme cases. So it is not a case of creating an institution where we are going to be putting children at the first opportunity.

The efforts that are made, as I have explained, are based on keeping the child, to the extent that it is possible, in mainstream education and providing the support that is necessary. That is done through a multi-disciplinary agency panel. An assessment panel is constituted, which is formed by paediatricians, social workers, educationalists, therapists and educational psychologists. That assessment is made and the needs of that particular child are identified and considered as to how best it can be provided, always within mainstream education.

But we have had cases in the past where it has not been possible for that child to be kept in mainstream education. We have had cases in the past where the child has had to be sent to the United Kingdom to specialist facilities. We consider that it is best if we have that sort of facility replicated in Gibraltar, rather than having to send the child to England, primarily because the child is kept in a local setting, kept near his family. The people that have dealt with that child, both from a care point of view and the education point of view, can continue to have that care for that child, and we believe that that is a better prospect for the child than sending them away to the UK. But it is only in those exceptional circumstances that that facility will be used.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you.

Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member then clarify that you will be building a separate educational institution for those one or two children who would otherwise have been sent to a specialist education institution in the United Kingdom?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is not a separate educational institution. This is a facility which will provide a secure setting whereby a child with extreme challenging behaviour can be kept and can be cared for, including by the provision of education and the assessment of the necessary panels.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then explain what the role of Bayside School's Alternative Learning Centre is and the type of children that attend it?

Hon. G H Licudi: There are two different situations. One is where the child is identified as having behavioural problems and can be supported and be kept in school. That is the preferred option and that is why the Behaviour Education Support Team exists, which consists of teachers, and also the educational psychologists participate in that. That is always the preferred option, to keep that child in the school setting.

This alternative facility is not simply to provide the alternative for those particular cases that are currently handled in schools; it is to provide the alternative for those cases that cannot be handled in schools and, on occasions, have to be taken to the United Kingdom. Therefore, it is not a replacement for the facilities that already exist in schools.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister then tell us whether the Alternative Learning Centre will continue to function, and will it function in the same way as it has been so far?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful to the hon. Member opposite in the Government obviously going along this path because obviously this is something that we recognised, that there was something that had to be extended from the services that had developed in the past and in fact it was a manifesto commitment.

The reason why I need to seek further clarification from what he said is because he used the terminology “secure setting” a couple of times. Now for the purpose of clarification when we are talking about ‘secure settings’, normally this is done because a particular child is absconding and such absconding poses a risk to that particular child, so is the hon. Minister saying that, for the purpose of doing this particular centre and for having a secure centre, changes to the Children Act will have to be brought about so that the Care Agency – if the Care Agency is indeed the one that is going to manage this – will be able to go through a Social Worker to a Judge and be able to say to a Judge, well, you know, for this particular reason there is a need to secure this particular child for a specific period of time. Is that the case?

Hon. G H Licudi: It is the case that changes to the Children Act are being considered and may be necessary, as indicated by the hon. Member

Revised educational curriculum
Not necessarily UK-led

Clerk: Question 160, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker can the Minister for Education state if he will be exploring other jurisdictions’ curriculums or systems of education, in order to introduce a revised one in Gibraltar that is not necessarily UK-led, such as that of Scotland, Ireland, Canada, Australia or even other European countries, as highlighted by his hon. Friend, the then Opposition Spokesman with responsibility for Education, in his 2010 budget speech?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, there are currently no plans to move away from a UK based education system.

More specifically our education system, our public examinations system, the awarding bodies and our entire education arrangements are all historically and culturally linked to those of England. It goes without saying, however, that the Education Department will always keep abreast of worthwhile educational innovation regardless of national provenance.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister suggesting that his hon. Friend was, then, speaking out of turn and not in line with Alliance policy in 2010?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not suggesting anything of the sort. I am answering what the Government’s plans are, and the Government has no plans to move away from the current educational system, but the door cannot be left completely closed.

We constantly hear comments in the press about changes to the education system in Gibraltar, sorry in England, and where there are changes made we have to consider whether those changes are going to be replicated in Gibraltar. We have to take our own decisions on that. There are some changes which may be beneficial and that we will adopt. There may be others that would not be beneficial and we do not adopt – those decisions are to be taken at that particular time when changes are made. At the moment there are no plans to change the current education system.

New Director of Education Timeline for appointment

Clerk: Question 161, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the hon. Minister for Education explain what the timeline is for the appointment of the new Director of Education?

1650 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker the Bulletin of Circulars advertising the post of Director of Education was published on 31st January 2012.

1655 The closing date for applications was 14th February 2012. The Public Service Commission will meet after this date; in fact, I am now told that the date for the Public Service Commission meeting is the 8th March, so I expect that the Public Services Commission will decide on that appointment on that date.

1660 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you very much.

Maintenance Orders Compliance review

1665 Clerk: Question 162, the Hon J J Netto

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the length of time some individuals habitually remain in breach of Maintenance Orders, will the Minister for Justice conduct a review of this matter in order to ensure compliance with the Courts' Orders in a timely manner?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1675 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Clerk to the Magistrates Court will now receive a monthly report showing all known breaches of Maintenance Orders and information on Maintenance Orders that may be in breach, even though this has not been formally reported to the courts by one of the parties.

1680 The final decision on actions to be taken, however, remains by the collecting officers of the court and the court itself.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, of course, I can understand what the mechanism may be in place at the courts in order to ensure compliance with the courts order but, perhaps, this is... I mean, if there were to be a case where there are any material changes to the condition of a person that, obviously, the courts will look into the particular case of that particular person. Otherwise, if there are no material changes to that particular person which is in breach of the Maintenance Court Order, it seems to me, Mr Speaker, that given that we are in this particular case talking about 29 that are in breach, right, it is not a huge number, by definition, so the court quite easily could obtain information from other Government Departments, whether Social Security or Employment, to establish whether those particular persons in breach are actually in employment or unemployment. Once they have that particular information they can act particularly more quickly to ensure compliance, because the non compliance of the Maintenance Order will mean hardship for a particular family.

1690 So will the hon. Member now agree that this is absolutely necessary and perhaps look into it?

1695 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, of course, the Government appreciates that where there is a court order in place and there is, especially in terms of payment of maintenance to other parties... and that order is in breach, that may result in hardship to the person. The question of enforcement, however, of those court orders is essentially a judicial process; it is not a process for the Government or for myself as Minister with responsibility for Justice.

1700 What the hon. Member asked last month was the number of orders that had been in breach and I explained the process by which that is arrived at and the numbers. What I have today told him, in response to a question on a review, is that, in fact, that review has already happened by the Clerk and that the Clerk will now receive certain reports which he can monitor on a monthly basis, so we hope that, as a result of this matter having been raised, the position... I cannot say how it will be addressed in a judicial context because that is a matter for the court officers and the court itself, but certainly the system is in place for identification at hopefully an earlier stage of possible... because the mechanism for identification is about identifying on a monthly basis no breaches and Maintenance Orders that may be in breach, even though it has not been formally communicated to the court.

So we have put that system in place and we hope that it bears fruit and identifies at an early stage appropriate action to be taken: ultimately the action is for the courts.

Clerk: Question...

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Daniel Feetham

Hon. D Feetham: Yes, does he not accept that, in fact, part of the problem in relation to this, and I certainly experienced this when I was sitting in, not in his chair, slightly to the right, but when I was Minister for Justice, it is not the actual enforcement by the courts, it's the issuing, it's that the courts issue arrest warrants and then there are, there may be a number of arrest warrants in relation to a particular individual and the complaints certainly that I received was that the police weren't enforcing those arrest warrants.

Does he... is it something that in his short time as Minister for Justice that has been a problem that has been communicated to him and, if so, what does he intend to do about it?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there has been no communication to me of any particular problem in relation to the issue involved of arrest warrants. The question related specifically to breach and the systems that are in place for identifying those breaches and dealing with them and that is the answer.

If there is an issue relating to what happens subsequently that is an issue that clearly can be looked at and I will be doing so.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker would that be a convenient moment to break for 15 minutes?

Mr Speaker: That would be a very good moment for that! (Laughter)
The House will recess for 15 minutes.

The House adjourned at 5.15 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.35 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

Royal Gibraltar Police
Reported cases of domestic violence

Clerk: Question 163, The Hon. J J Netto

5 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Justice state if there have been any reported cases of domestic violence at the RGP from the beginning of September 2011 to the end of January 2012, showing the number of persons arrested as a result of the police attending the call, and the persons charged as a result of the police intervention?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

15 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Royal Gibraltar Police records domestic violence incidents into two different categories – Offence/Arrest or Reported for Information Purposes Only. The latter is subdivided into two sub categories – domestic violence, where there has been some degree of physical violence, and domestic non-violence, where no physical violence has taken place.

20 Fifty five cases of domestic violence have been reported to the Royal Gibraltar Police from the beginning of September 2011 to the end of January 2012. As a result, 38 were reported purely for information purposes only, 15 as domestic violence and 23 as domestic non-violence. Twelve persons were arrested, four persons were charged and are awaiting trial, two persons were reported and will receive summonses to appear in court. Two persons were arrested as a result of assaulting police officers attending to the disputes.

25 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I was not able to get all the amount of information. I wonder whether the hon. Member would mind providing me with a copy of the papers so I can get hold of the details of the information.

I am much obliged, Mr Speaker.

30 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member consider that, in the present day and age, the distinction that he has just recited to this House, as still maintained by the RGP as between domestic and non-domestic Violence, is justified any longer?

35 Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, is the question relating to domestic violence and domestic non-violence? Because the distinction I have drawn is between domestic violence and domestic non-violence, where there is, in the former case....

Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry, I misunderstood. I thought there was a category of violence – domestic and non-domestic violence

40 Hon. G H Licudi: No, No

Hon. P R Caruana: I see, I withdraw the supplementary.

45 Royal Gibraltar Police
Reported cases of rape or sexual abuse

Clerk: Question 164, the Hon. J J Netto

50 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Justice state if there has been any reported cases at the RGP in relation to rape or sexual abuse from the beginning of September 2011 to the end of January 2012, broken down monthly, and if there have been any persons charged as a result of the inquiries of the police?

55 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, no reports alleging rape have been received by the Royal Gibraltar Police from the beginning of September 2011 to the end of January 2012.

60 With regard to sexual abuse I am not entirely clear whether the hon. Member by sexual abuse means sexual abuse with children or sexual abuse generally, in other words crimes involving some element of a sexual nature.

65 Hon. J J Netto: Yes.

Hon. G H Licudi: What I will do is give the hon. Member the number of reports with allegations of a sexual nature made during this period.

70 September 2011 – in September 2011 police officers arrested and later charged a male and female for indecent behaviour. Both persons were sentenced to three weeks imprisonment.

October 2011 – no offences were reported.

November 2011 – a report was received from a female that she had been indecently assaulted. One person was arrested and charged with indecent assault and later fined £200. Also in November a report was received of an indecent exposure. This matter is still being investigated.

75 December 2011- one person was arrested for indecent assault. That person was charged with indecent assault and robbery and will be appearing in court on or appeared in court on 14th February 2012. Also in December, one person was arrested for indecent assault. The person is currently on police bail until the 1st March 2012.

80 In January 2012 a report concerning possession of indecent images of children was received. The matter is still being investigated. Also in January, a person was arrested and charged with indecent assault. The person will next be appearing in court on the 23rd May 2012.

Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member would not mind providing me with a copy of the answers... Thank you.

85 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not think my hon. Friend has a supplementary so, in fact, you can continue.

90 Mr Speaker: Well, in that case, let us continue.

95 Legal Aid and Assistance schemes
Policy on reform

Clerk: Question 165, the Hon. D A Feetham.

100 Hon. D A Feetham: What is the Government's policy on reform of Legal Aid and Assistance schemes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

105 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government is to reform the Legal Aid and Assistance schemes. There is a draft Bill which I am in the process of considering. I am consulting the Bar Council and the Registrar of the Supreme Court on the draft Bill.

110 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister confirm that is the draft Bill that was drafted when I was Minister for Justice?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, sir

115

Financial centre development
Islamic Finance and Shariah compliant financial products

120 Clerk: Question 166, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Minister for Financial Services state whether the Government has any present intention to develop Gibraltar as a financial centre for Islamic finance and Shariah compliant financial products?

125

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

130 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have discussed the possibility of developing Gibraltar as a financial centre for Islamic finance and Shariah-compliant products with the Financial Services Commission and the Finance Centre Director.

I intend to have further discussions with them and to consult the Finance Centre Council. Government will give due consideration to the views and representations made to it before a final decision is taken. I would add that there is no reason why Shariah-compliant products may not currently be marketed or developed by the providers of financial services in Gibraltar subject, of course, to all statutory and regulatory requirements being met.

140 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, that is certainly true but does he not accept that it would increase the attractiveness of Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for Shariah-compliant products if there was some statutory underpinning, which, for example – it does not need to be complicated – but, for example, would ensure that any Shariah products that are actually sold from Gibraltar need to comply with Shariah law?

One of the ways that is done is for a particular expert on Shariah law to actually certify that the products that are being sold are Shariah products or that the company that is selling those products is structured as a Shariah-compliant company. So does he not agree with me that if, despite the fact that I accept that at the moment Shariah products can be sold from Gibraltar, if we are to increase the attractiveness of the jurisdiction in that regard some form of statutory underpinning is necessary?

150 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I agree with him that this matter is worthy of consideration and that the issues that the hon. Member has raised are precisely the issues that I am currently discussing with the relevant parties.

With regard to the certification... to the extent that a particular product needs certification, a provider of financial services can already do that, although I have been made aware of the issue that the hon. Member raises in relation to possible legislation. That is something that we are actively considering.

EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Cochrane Ward

Places available since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 167, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state how many places have been made available at Cochrane Ward since 9th December 2011 and were they filled by long-stay elderly people already in hospital wards or straight from the community?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there have been six places made available since 9th December 2011. All were filled by long-stay elderly patients in hospital. No admissions to Cochrane Ward have been straight from the community, as was the policy when Cochrane Ward opened in 2009.

Calpe Ward, St Bernard's Hospital
Date of opening and staff requirements

Clerk: Question 168, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Equality and Social Services specify when the Calpe Ward in St Bernard's Hospital will be open, and what would be the new additional staff requirements, broken down by grades, and will it be run by the GHA or the Care Agency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the planned opening for Calpe Ward is Sunday 26th February 2012.

Staff requirements are 8 Registered Nurses, 18 Care Workers, three domestics and medical cover. Calpe Ward will be run in partnership between the GHA and the Care Agency.

The eight Registered Nurses and 18 Care Workers will be provided by the Care Agency and arrangements are being made to rotate existing staff to the new ward, so that new staff are spread out evenly throughout different areas of elderly care. Medical cover and domestic staff will be provided by the GHA.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us where the nursing staff will come from?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, although this is not a question that was specifically asked, I am aware that there will be four Spanish nationals recruited as Registered Nurses and there are four other nurses where recruitment is pending.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister then tell us if there was much response to the two vacancies advertised for Nursing Assistants and a Registered General Nurse for small elderly care units?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the exact number of applicants but I am happy to inform the hon. Member opposite should she write to me directly.

215 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if these nurses will be taken from, as in response to this advertisement or if they will be taken from existing wards within the GHA hospital?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, these are new recruits and they will not be taken from any existing wards.

220 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, why is it, then, that the advert was placed by the GHA, not the Care Agency?

225 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, although it is correct that there was an initial advert by the GHA, this advert was then withdrawn and there was a subsequent advert by the Care Agency.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise how much the running of the Calpe Ward will cost?

230 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I cannot give an accurate cost at present. Perhaps if I had been given notice of that question, which is not really implicit in Question 168, then I would be able to provide that information.

Of course, I am happy to provide that once final figures are known and if these are requested by the hon. Member opposite.

235 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain what additional measures will be implemented for their long term plans of, and I quote:

'a made to measure facility for the elderly'?

240 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I think that question is a bit vague and I don't know what... how this relates to Calpe Ward.

245 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, it relates to Calpe Ward in that, in their manifesto, they state:

'Our short term policy will be to add beds at St Bernard's'

– i.e. the opening of the Calpe Ward –

250 'We will also provide a made to measure facility for the elderly.'

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the opening of Calpe Ward is an emergency measure, given the state of the – 255 Hon. N F Costa: The lack of beds.

260 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – the lack of beds at St Bernard's Hospital and the long-standing problem of beds in surgical wards which have been taken by elderly people. So, Mr Speaker, a decision was taken to open Calpe Ward immediately.

Insofar as the bigger picture of addressing the issue with the elderly, a feasibility study in relation to the need to cater for that is being undertaken and, once we have the final result of that feasibility study, Mr Speaker, we will then consider what needs to be provided.

265 Hon. J J Netto: Earlier on, the hon. Lady did mention that the opening of Calpe Ward would be, if I quote her correctly, 'in partnership with the GHA'. Can she describe the partnership?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the partnership is that the Gibraltar Health Authority and the Care Agency are working together.

Hon. J J Netto: Of course... (Laughter) It is an answer of the obvious but, leaving that aside, Mr Speaker, what I was referring to is the management of the new ward. Could she be more specific?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker, then maybe the question could have been more specific. (Hon. N F Costa: Absolutely.) Indeed, people are commenting that staff from both the Care Agency and the GHA are commenting how unique it is that both agencies are working together and are working together so effectively for the first time.

Mr Speaker, in general the running of Calpe Ward will be undertaken by the Care Agency very similar to the way that Cochrane Ward at the GHA is run.

Care Agency residential home
Recordable acts of violence

Clerk: Question 169, the Hon. J J Netto

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency Residential Homes, since this question was asked in Question No 46 of 2012 to date and, if so, could the Minister provide a breakdown showing the dates of the incident/s, whether the incident/s was between children, or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required either at the home or in the hospital and for what purpose?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there have been five acts of violence; these have been between children and staff. Two of these have required medical attention.

I am now passing to the hon. Member a table with further details of these incidents, as requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 169 OF 2012

Date	LAC to LAC	LAC to Staff	Medical Attention/Where	What Purpose?
25/01/12		Yes	No
26/01/12		Yes	No
26/01/12		Yes	Yes/Hospital	Staff- Tetanus for a bite and antibiotics
28/01/12		Yes	Yes/Hospital	Staff - fracture of 2 ribs
29/01/12		Yes	No

Hon. J J Netto: While the information is coming through, did I understand the hon. Lady correctly that the five acts of violence were between juveniles and staff – is that the case?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Looked-after children and staff, not juveniles. 'Juveniles' implies that there was a criminal conviction.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, as far as the medical attention which the hon. Lady has mentioned, was that given at the home or at the hospital?

310 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I would refer the hon. Member to the table and if he sees the medical treatment that was administered I think I can safely say that this was administered at the hospital, as this can only be administered at hospital.

315 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could the hon. Lady say whether any of these incidents in relation to the looked-after children refers perhaps to the same children for which she gave me an answer, a written answer, last month?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information and I cannot confirm whether it is the same child or whether it is various children.

320 Hon. J J Netto: Will the hon. Lady, if I write to her, stating the fact that I would want to, or would like to, know whether we are talking about in all of these cases in this particular month – sorry in the month of January – are the same one to the previous month or not? Will she be able to give me that information?

325 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Indeed, Mr Speaker, I am happy to give this information on a confidential basis.

Clerk: Question 1-

330 Hon. J J Netto: Can I also say, Mr Speaker, whether as a result of the incidents, there was any discussion by management, post the incident, and, as a result, have there been any changes to the care plans of those particular children?

335 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, discussions are ongoing each time there is an incident and they are ongoing in any event because care plans are reviewed continuously.

Some care plans are reviewed daily; some care plans are reviewed weekly so, of course, any incidents would have a bearing on the review of the care plan.

340 Hon. J J Netto: What I am actually saying specifically, as a result of this particular incident whether care plans have changed as a result of this?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, not assuming whether this is in relation to one child or various children, each incident, there is, each time there is an incident, the matter is evaluated and then it is taken into account in the care plan.

345

Unallocated referrals of children
Level of risk to such children

350 Clerk: Question 170, the Hon. J J Netto.

355 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Services state if there has been any unallocated referrals of children waiting for a service, since this question was asked for the month of January 2012 and, if so, provide a breakdown of the level of risk to any such children?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

360 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there have been no unallocated referrals for children waiting for a service since the question was previously asked. All referrals are, in effect, allocated.

Seven registered looked-after children
Vocational Training Scheme placements

Clerk: Question 171, the Hon. J J Netto

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if the seven registered looked-after children are now in placements in the Vocational Training Scheme or, indeed, in any other scheme for training purposes, as stated in answer to question no 44 of 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, of the seven registered looked-after children, one child has now returned to the UK and the position in relation to the remaining six looked-after children has not changed since the question was asked at the last parliamentary session. Efforts continue to be made to assist them in employment, as suitable employment opportunities arise.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Lady what has been the total amount of time in which the other six now have been registered either in the Vocational Training Scheme or any other training scheme, for that matter? What is the period for which they have been waiting a placement?

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I do not have the exact information but I can confidently say that they have been on the list since the previous Government were in office.

Hon. J J Netto: I am not asking her what is happening, you know, when we were in Government or when the GSLP was in Government, or when the AACR was in Government... I am asking her now, in reference to this particular six children, does she know the period in which they have been registered for a Vocational Training Scheme placement or any other training scheme at all. Does she know?

Hon. N F Costa: She said she does not have the information. That is the first thing she said.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I have said that I do not have the exact information. Clearly, if they are on the new training scheme that could only have happened from 1st February. Before that they were on the waiting list for the Vocational Training Scheme. That they have been on the Vocational Training Scheme for some time I know. The first date on which they were placed on the training scheme I do not know, but I do know that they have been on the training scheme since before this Government came into office.

Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, are these six children... is what the hon. Lady saying that these six children are now part of the Future Job Strategy? Is that what she is saying?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker the... apparently there is a conflict of information provided between the people in the Social Services and the people in Bleak House. They did not appear as being on the Bleak House scheme in January and therefore they were not placed in the new scheme in February.

However, the people in the Social Services apparently thought they were in the Bleak House and we have not been able to establish, since the question came, whether, in fact, they were actually being paid the £450. Bleak House has no record of them. The Social Services were under the impression that they were getting paid by Bleak House and that they were in the previous scheme. I think they were not, frankly, and I do not think they were being paid, but I can't tell him that it is... In other words, what I am saying... if they were being paid and they were on the Bleak House scheme would have known, so I think the answer is that the information that the Social Services had was mistaken, not correct.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but surely will the hon. Lady undertake to actually look into these six cases and to come to the House next time round and to inform the House as to whether they were on the VTS scheme as 420 of the date of the change of Government? If they were, I presume that, in fact, they will automatically then form part of the Future Job Strategy.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, we all assumed that that was the position, but having taken an interest in all six looked-after children, although it was easily established from some Departments that they were on the list, it could not be verified by other Departments – but the matter is already being investigated.
425 If the hon. Member wishes to ask me the question in the next House then, of course, I will respond.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, can I ask one further question, supplementary question to the hon. Lady.
Given that two months have now elapsed whereby these particular six youngsters – I say youngsters because they must be between the ages of 15 and 18 or perhaps 19, right – have not been placed in any 430 training scheme or whatever we want to call it. What has been that they have been doing then, because they have not been in education, they have not been in training, so what have they been doing in that interim period?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker after the age of 15 there is no obligation for them to be in education and, in any event, Mr Speaker, my understanding was that they were on the waiting list of the Vocational Training Scheme and meetings and interviews were being held between the social workers, the children involved and the officers of the Vocational Training Scheme in, clearly, an attempt to place them in employment.
435

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes but does the hon. Lady not accept that you are not dealing with a normal situation here, certainly any child over the age of 15, it is not compulsory to return to school, but you are dealing with looked-after children, where the agency is in a situation of parental responsibility in relation to those children. Does she not accept that it is quite extraordinary that she does not know what the position is in relation to six children for which her agency is in a position of parental responsibility over the last two 440 months?
445

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker I have said nothing of the sort. I have not said that I do not know. What I do not know is the first date on which they were placed on the list for the Vocational Training Scheme. I know exactly what is happening in relation to each child. There are six children. I have a brief in relation to each child which, of course, I am not going to give details in the Parliament, Mr Speaker, but I am happy to provide them to the hon. Member on a confidential basis.
450

Mr Speaker, it is not always easy to place people in employment, which is why both the social workers whose responsibility it is to look after the children, as well as the people at Bleak House, have been working together in an attempt to secure employment for these children.
455

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Lady, is she now saying that they are in a training scheme or are they not in a training scheme? Because the previous answer was that you did not know whether they were on a training scheme. That was the answer in fact that the hon. Gentleman, Mr Bossano gave a few moments ago. Are they on a training scheme or are they not on a training scheme? Because the hon. Lady doesn't seem to know.
460

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, when the list was provided by Bleak House of the people of that were... these six names were not on that list. When my colleague asked the Department, the Department told her that they were on a waiting list but the Bleak House waiting list did not include them.
465

So we have the social worker saying one thing and the people in Bleak House saying something else. I have no doubt that they cannot have been in training because, otherwise, there would have to have been a payment and they would have had a place in which they had to be and, you know, we have not been able to establish why one set of public servants thought one thing and another set of public servants thought another, which is quite extraordinary when we are only talking about six kids and not...
470

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Lady perhaps agree with me that, whether these six children or persons are in training now or not, I am sure that it would be a view shared across the floor of this House that, given that the state is in loco parentis, they should be given, if anything, priority under any 475 scheme and that care should now be taken to co-ordinate as many of the state mechanisms as possible to ensure that these people do not fall between the two and get into employment or training because, otherwise, they will become a bigger problem for everybody else.

480 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Absolutely and that is what is being done, Mr Speaker. Actively, I might add.

Care Agency
Monthly expenditure reports to the Financial Secretary

485 Clerk: Question 172, the Hon. J J Netto

490 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Government in a position, following their rethink of last month, to provide a copy of the Monthly Expenditure Returns Report from the Care Agency to the Financial Secretary, commencing from September 2011 to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

495 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the response is the same as that given by my hon. Colleague in the reply to Question 126 of 2012 and that a policy decision has been taken in this regard not to.

St Bernadette's Occupational Therapy Centre
Nursing services

500 Clerk: Question 173, the Hon. J J Netto

505 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if nursing services are being provided at St Bernadette's Occupational Therapy Centre?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services

510 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that there are nursing services provided at St Bernadette's.

515 The service provided consists of two full-time Qualified Nurses, one Learning Disability Nurse and the other an Enrolled Nurse. The nurses provide fundamental care, administer medication, health education and support to the Care Workers, service users and parents. The nurses also provide support in activity sessions, outings and liaise with other professionals and contribute to the plan of care of the service users, much in the same way as they did just over 2 months ago.

520 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, well, I knew that was the answer but, given I knew there were nursing services provided at St Bernadette's, surely the answer given to me by her last month was incorrect because, in answer to Written Question 34 of 2012, when I did ask how many people were in employment of the Care Agency by location and she provided all the tables by the grades and by location, the two nurses are not specified there so, therefore, the information is incorrect.

525 But I also noticed, having looked at that, in terms that they are not there, that it seems to me that, perhaps, other totals are not as they should be or perhaps there has been some movement. For instance, we have a total of 29 non industrial employees and four industrial employees, which is 33 persons, as given by the information last month. But if we actually look at the Estimates book, there are a total of 25 persons in full-time and part-time basis, so there seems to be a discrepancy between the figures provided last month in the written form and the figures which we have got here.

530 That said – I do not know whether the hon. Lady is listening to what I am saying or not – but what... I mean there may be a justification for this. For instance, one of the things I can recall is that one policy decision we took when we were in Government that the Classroom Aides which were full-time are now part-time, so that partly explains the difference between the figure provided last month and the estimate book – but it does not completely tally. Not only does it not seem to tally in St Bernadette's, it does not seem to tally, 535 either, in Dr Giraldi Home. For instance, in Dr Giraldi Home the information given last month is that there are four unit managers, whilst the Estimates book provided a figure of five unit managers, so perhaps does the hon. Lady have an explanation for this?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the information that the hon. Member is referring to is information that has been provided to me by officials. Of course, I have not physically gone round each 540 Department of the Care Agency counting how many nurses and how many Classroom Aides we have! That has been information provided to me by management.

If the hon. Member is now comparing that to the Estimates book which he prepared, then I do not know – perhaps the hon. Member can explain the discrepancy to me. Certainly, there have been no policy decisions to change staffing arrangements by this Government yet, so if there is a discrepancy then it may be a matter of 545 human error by the people who provided that information to me. Of course, if the hon. Member wishes to ask me the question in writing I will respond to it. I will ask people to check the discrepancies and he can ask me the question in writing and I can, of course, respond.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, of course I know that the information is not being collated and prepared and given by the hon. Member opposite of course I know that it is being done by the senior management but what I am actually saying, that there are a number of discrepancies and information being given by the management for which the hon. Lady then has to stand here in Parliament and provide an answer, and given that there are discrepancies, what I am actually suggesting or asking the hon. Lady, because I cannot instruct the hon. Lady 555 to do anything, but to ask the hon. Lady could she actually take the information back given last month to give a satisfactory explanation. Perhaps there is a perfectly legitimate explanation for that, but given there are discrepancies like the unit managers and discrepancies like the nurses there has to be an explanation for this.
Can the hon. Lady take it back, therefore, and provide, you know, explanations for these discrepancies?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I have already said that I will, so the answer is yes.
560 Perhaps it would have been more fruitful if I had been put on notice of this, as opposed to being ambushed with figures that I provided last month.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, can the hon. Lady explain how on earth she comes to the conclusion that she is being 'ambushed' when, in fact, the figures were the figures which the hon. Lady provided last week, last 565 month?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Because that is not the question that was asked of me, Mr Speaker, in writing.

570 Hon. D A Feetham: Well does she not accept that she is responsible for the figures that she provides to this Parliament both written and oral and should she not, does she not accept that she should have checked both figures to see whether both figures correlated?

575 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is when Parliament starts to turn into an argument rather than a question and answer session.

There has been a perfectly civilized exchange between the Hon. Mr Netto and the Hon. Minister. The Hon.
Minister has undertaken to go back and the hon. Gentleman will know that the question didn't just relate to the figures from last month and this month but also to the Estimates in respect of which they are responsible for that Estimate book and it was done while they were in power.

580 I think the position is perfectly clear. The hon. Lady has said that she is going to go back and look. Let's not allow this to descend into argument when it is Question Time.

Hon. D A Feetham: I agree entirely but then perhaps he should have a word with the hon. Lady not to make comments such as that my hon. Friend has ‘ambushed’ her, which is clearly not the case.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is absolutely right. I will have a word with the hon. Lady, to congratulate her for how well she is conducting her answers in only her second session in this Parliament.

Mr Speaker: I take the point the Hon. Chief Minister has made. Let us keep the tempo down. I think it was progressing quite well but I must confess I think the use of the word ‘ambush’ rather triggered off a different tempo. Far be it from me to criticise the use of the language when it is not unparliamentary.

Mount Alvernia
Help for those in need of admission

Clerk: Question 174, the Hon. J J Netto

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker can the Minister for Social Services say how many of the 66 persons awaiting an immediate need for admission into Mount Alvernia from the community, as answered in Written Question No 38/2012, are receiving any home help either by the Care Agency, the family of the elderly person, both, or by nobody.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

The Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, of the 66 persons awaiting immediate admission need for admission to Mount Alvernia from the community, home help provision is as follows:

A combination of home help by the Care Agency and family support – 17

Family Support only – 36

Of the remaining 13, 4 have been admitted to Mount Alvernia... [Sound of loud siren]

Hon. J J Netto: Will the hon. Lady mind repeating the answer once the siren stops.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I will start again.

Of the 66 people awaiting immediate need for admission to Mount Alvernia from the community, the home help provision is as follows:

A combination of home help provided by the Care Agency and family support is 17. There are 36 people with family support only and then, of the remaining 13, four have been admitted to Mount Alvernia, eight have been admitted to the GHA and one has passed away.

ANSWER

THE HON THE MINISTER FOR EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Mr Speaker,

Of the 66 persons awaiting immediate need for admission to Mount Alvernia from the community, Home Help provision is as follows:

Care Agency Only	Care Agency & Family Support	Family Support Only	No Home Help Provided
0	17	36	0

Of the remaining 13:

4 have been admitted to Mount Alvernia
8 have been admitted to GHA
1 has passed away

625 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker but, given that there are 36 persons which only have help by the family, if I have understood that correctly and, given that we are talking about people who are in urgent need to go to Mount Alvernia, would it not be perhaps the case, Mr Speaker, that this particular 36 people may need an increase of home help by the Government in this particular case, by the Social Services Agency and, therefore, will that not be looked into by yourself and the Care Agency?

630 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Absolutely, Mr Speaker, which is why, as I said last month, the Care Agency, which has inherited a list of 400 people in need of domiciliary care, is undertaking an assessment of everyone on the list so that we know what domiciliary care needs to be provided. In fact, Mr Speaker, there are some people who have been offered domiciliary care but have rejected this.

635 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, this review that the hon. Lady talks about, can she indicate how long will the review take place because, obviously, we are dealing here with individuals who are in urgent need to be assisted into Mount Alvernia, and they have no help from the Care Agency. These are individuals that are only being assisted by the family, so could she indicate to the family who are providing the help to these particular persons how long will the Government take to do this review.

640 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, unfortunately these are people who have needed this help urgently for years and years (Applause and banging) and it is now that the new Government has taken office that these people have been given priority. They are being assessed by the staff at the Elderly Care Agency, as well as being assessed by the occupational therapist because, if people are to be given domiciliary care at home, we are not only talking about the support by way of carers but we also need to look at the issue of any aids and appliances which they would require. But I have to reiterate that these people have been on the waiting list for both Mount Alvernia and domiciliary care for years and years.

650 Juveniles in need of specialised care
Practical steps being taken

Clerk: Question 175, the Hon. J J Netto.

655 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that there are five juveniles who, in the opinion of senior management, would warrant further specialised care over and above the existing services being provided, as answered in Written Question 51/2012, will the Minister for Social Services say what practical steps are being taken to meet such needs, if any?

660 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

665 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are two levels of specialist care which are currently being explored, the first one being the infrequent, but nonetheless necessary, provision which would enable the restriction of liberty of a young person in specific circumstances. This is the provision of secure accommodation, which is the restriction of a child's liberty, which is provided for in UK legislation but which was omitted in the local legislation, when the Children Act was passed.

670 As such, this has led to a deficit in how Gibraltar can manage children who, for a time, may require their liberty to be restricted. We have already begun the process of exploring how this deficit in legislation will be addressed and how we may begin the process for planning for such a resource. However, as a direct result of the deficit in the current legislation and associated resources, the children's residential services have been faced with managing some very difficult and serious violent behaviours within the current service provision. We have, therefore, swiftly commissioned an expert from the UK to work alongside care workers for 28 days, as well as providing enhanced training for a dedicated group of care staff and working closely with other agencies.

675 Multi adaptations of a flat have taken place so as to optimise both the children's and the care staff's safety. We have also identified an expert child psychiatrist from the UK and are in the process of commissioning an assessment which we hope will offer opinion and guidance regarding future care planning.

On the second matter of specialist provision – that of a challenging behaviour unit – the hon. Member will, of course, be aware of the need for this resource because it is something that has clearly been identified for a number of years. As a result of the actions which have been taken by this Government, we now have a group of 16 level 2 staff, trained and experienced care staff in regard to managing challenging behaviour. We have also explored venues for such a unit and are considering possibilities in this regard. One of the five adolescents identified in the answer to Question 51/2012 now has firm arrangements in place to attend a UK specialist provision which will commence shortly.

Hon. J J Netto: If I understood, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady correctly, what she seems to be saying is that, in the short term, she is adapting certain flats – perhaps I am making an assumption here on my part – to be able to segregate those particular children with severe challenging behaviour from the mainstream facilities in Tangier View. That perhaps may be the short-term measure that she seems to be taking. If not, I will be glad if she can correct me, but, in the longer term, she is looking for a particular site, a particular building, to have these particular youngsters, and perhaps, if successful, even bringing some of the ones we have got in the UK back to Gibraltar, which would be in the best interests of everyone. (Interjection)

But when she talks about adapting flats in the short-term, is she talking about the flats that we have in Tangier View or flats out there in the community?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: It is a combination of both, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: So, if the hon. Lady is saying that, depending on the circumstances of each individual child, either that person with severe challenging behaviour will be given the service in Tangier View albeit with the staff who have been training, but perhaps there will be other children – perhaps the older ones – who will be out in the community. Is that the case?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, it may be the same child, depending on the level of behaviour or misbehaviour at the time.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask the hon. Lady, what does she mean by ‘secure accommodation’?

My understanding of secure accommodation is, in fact, an alternative to prison. For example, just to illustrate my point, Thompson and Venables, who are the killers of Jamie Bulger, because they were under age, they were not sent to prison, they were sent to secure accommodation. Is it the intention of the Government to build that type of facility in order to prevent juveniles from being sent to prison and being placed in secure accommodation?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker. The intention of Government is to enable to extend powers to be able to secure children in alternative accommodation so that they are not necessarily in the same environment as other children who are not exhibiting the same levels of challenging behaviour and giving us some powers to be able to restrict liberty, but certainly not an alternative to prison.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, at the present moment, the Government has no plans to actually build any type of alternative facility, and we would continue with the situation, for which the Government of the day – my Government – was severely criticised by the party opposite when they were in Opposition, for allowing a situation whereby a juvenile is sent to prison, rather than to a secure accommodation?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, my response was in relation to a question which was posed to me with regard to challenging behaviour, and not criminal behaviour of juveniles. My response, accordingly, is in relation to how we will accommodate children who have challenging behaviour.

My response is not in relation to children who are subject to criminal proceedings. It is a different question and a different answer, Mr Speaker. I think I have answered the question that was asked of me. The hon. Member opposite has asked a completely different question, which did not form part of the original question.

Hon. D A Feetham: I will ask it in the future, but is she aware that, in fact, the particular section that we took out – or I took out – of the Children Act in relation to secure accommodation... that secure accommodation, in the sense of that used in that particular section which exists in the UK Children Act, is secure accommodation that is used not only in relation to children with challenging behaviour, when they have got to be placed there because that is the only way, in fact, from memory, that... The thrust of the section is that they can only be kept in secure accommodation if the juvenile is going to abscond.

That is the reason why they are – ‘placed in secure accommodation’ – or that is part of the test under the section of the UK equivalent of the Children Act. But, in fact, the children are placed in exactly the same secure accommodation. The secure accommodation is the same for those types of challenging behaviour and also in terms of juveniles who are not sent to prison but placed in that type of secure accommodation.

So, is the Government’s position, therefore, that they intend to reinvent the wheel and to go down a completely different route to the route that is currently the position in the UK?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member opposite is simply confusing the matter.

The hon. Member opposite is referring to section 25 of the Children Act 1989 in the UK and I am perfectly aware of what it says. That is the section which I understand was initially included in the Children Act in Gibraltar and was taken out.

As he rightly says, that is the section that would give us the power to provide to both be able to restrict the liberty of children who exhibit challenging behaviour and would also (Interjection) give us the power to provide for secure accommodation in criminal matters, which he was alluding to. I agree with what he has said. What I am saying is that that is not the question that was asked of me, Mr Speaker. (Interjection)

In any event, as he said that he may ask it in the next Parliament, he is of course welcome to put that question to me in the next parliament.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not trying to be controversial here, I am not trying to catch the hon. Lady out in any way, shape or form. I am just trying to get to the bottom of the answer that she has given.

She gave an answer to my hon. Friend, Mr Netto, saying that the Government was looking into providing secure accommodation for children with challenging behaviour in the circumstances where the same power exists in the UK Children Act, which she has correctly identified as section 25 of the UK Children Act.

What I am saying is that, in fact, the same secure accommodation that is used in the UK for challenging-behaviour children is the same secure accommodation that is used as an alternative to prison. What I am asking the hon. Lady again is: is that the intention, or is the Government going to do something completely different in terms of secure accommodation? That is it.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the answer to this supplementary is contained in the original answer that was given.

There was a reference made to what is provided in the UK, and what the hon. Lady said is that we are in the process of exploring how this deficit in legislation can be remedied. The hon. Lady has referred to the particular section in the UK and that is something that is being looked at. It does not necessarily mean that we will replicate it word for word, but we are looking at it to see whether it can be adapted or used as a model for what we want to do in Gibraltar.

I acknowledge what the hon. Member has said opposite and we will take those matters into account, but there is a need. We have identified, as a Government and as a matter of policy, that there is a need to introduce something to provide for this sort of legislation. We are currently considering what the legislation is in the UK and how it can be adapted or adopted for Gibraltar. The process is being considered for the purposes of enacting at some point in the future.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am going to end the matter here because I do not want to push him, but does he not recognise the reality of the situation is that it is not a question of deficit of legislation? It is a question of deficit of resources.

If it were just simply a question of deficit of legislation, I would have left the section in. The reason why I took the section out was that this would have required, if it is to be used... If you are going to provide a secure accommodation in the sense of the UK, which is secure accommodation for children with challenging behaviour in circumstances where the authority is preventing them from absconding, and also in relation to as an alternative to prison, that is a massive expense for the Government. We took it out and what I asked the hon. Lady was: is the Government’s policy to do that or to go down a different route? That is not a question of legislation; it is a question of resources.

790 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is arguing at cross purposes to what his hon. Colleague argued earlier in response to... in a supplementary to a question that I answered, where the hon. Member specifically said and asked me, are we looking at legislation, an amendment to the Children Act, to provide for secure accommodation, and that was on the basis that the hon. Member, Mr Netto, recognised that that course of action needed legislation.

Now the hon. Member says, 'No, that legislation is not needed –

795 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I asked –

Hon. G H Licudi: – it is a question of resources.'

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect... May he give way?

800 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes.

805 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, I am not saying that the legislative amendment would not need to be made. What I am saying... (Interjection) No, what I am saying is that first you deal with the issue of resources and then with the question of the legislative amendment, and that we took it out because we did not have the resources here in Gibraltar to actually do it, and what I am asking is: is the Government proposing, or exploring, to go down the UK route of providing secure accommodation for both people with challenging behaviour and also as an alternative to prison; or are they going down a different route? Because my understanding of the answer to the question from the hon. Lady was that, in fact, the plans were fairly well advanced and they were looking at alternatives.

810 That is all.

815 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, the alternatives that are being looked at are in relation to challenging behaviour. That is the debate, or questions and answers, that we had earlier in relation to children with challenging behaviour, and what we have recognised is exactly the same point that the Hon. Mr Netto recognised when he rightly asked me a supplementary as to whether we were looking at the possibility of changing the Children Act, because I did refer, in my answer earlier, to the need for secure accommodation.

820 What I said earlier is that, in relation to children with severe challenging behaviour that have to be taken out of the environment that they are currently in, there is a need to identify a site, which we have already done, to turn that, if necessary, into a secure unit and to have the necessary legislation in place in order to do that.

That is all we are proposing. We are not proposing anything else. It was certainly good enough as an answer to the Hon. Mr Netto. I cannot see what the issue is any more.

825 If the question is, is the Government prepared to allocate the necessary resources? The answer is obviously, yes! It is a manifesto commitment. It is a manifesto commitment to create this unit – a dedicated facility to deal with children with [inaudible] challenging behaviour. We have identified the site. There is a need for work to be done on that site, and there is probably a need, as my hon. Colleague has identified, to make an amendment to the Children Act.

830 That is the route that we are proposing, as a matter of policy and, to the extent that resources are necessary, resources will be put in.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is precisely what I understood the hon. Lady to say.

835 Now, my question, which I am still none the wiser as to what the answer is, is whether the Government intends to use that secure unit that the Government has now identified and the plans are quite advanced, in relation to children with challenging behaviour, to extend that facility, in relation to children who may be guilty of a criminal offence, as an alternative prison – which is the position in the United Kingdom. That is all.

840 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the fact that something is in position in the United Kingdom, does not necessarily mean that it has to be replicated here.

Hon. D A Feetham: I accept that!

Hon. G H Licudi: The provision that the hon. Member refers to would give the Government the power to go down that route.

845 The Government has not made a policy decision to go down that route; it has made a policy decision to identify a site and to turn it into a dedicated unit for children with challenging behaviour. That provision will give us the power to do that. If it gives us wider powers, then the use of those wider powers would have to be considered in due course. But they are not certainly part of the Government's policy at this stage.

850 Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much! That was not too difficult. That is my answer!

Clerk: Question 1 –

Mr Speaker: I call on the Hon. Jaime Netto.

855 Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a further supplementary question to the hon. Lady?

860 In relation to this group of looked-after children with severe challenging behaviour, are any of them the ones that are perhaps waiting for a placement for the Vocational Training Scheme or any other training scheme? Is she aware whether any of these particular groups are related to my previous question in relation to waiting for a training placement?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not have the information, but I know that because some of those identifying the challenging behaviour are under the age of 15, then the issue does not arise in respect of them.

865

Residents' lift at Mount Alvernia
Arrangements for repair

870 Clerk: Question 176, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if the residents' lift at Mount Alvernia has been broken, and if so, when is it envisaged that repairs will be carried out?

875 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

880 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the residents' lift at Mount Alvernia broke on Saturday, 4th February. It was identified that a part needed replacing. The part was ordered and repairs were effected and the lift was working by Friday, 10th February – not even a week after it broke down.

It must also be noted, Mr Speaker that, during this time, there were two other passenger lifts operational at Mount Alvernia.

885 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful – despite the tone of her answer.

890

Shower units for the elderly
How many to be installed over three months

Clerk: Question 177, the Hon. J J Netto.

895 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, of the 66 elderly persons awaiting the installation of a shower unit, as answered in Written Question 52/2012, can the Minister for Housing say how many such installations it is envisaged will take place over the next three months?

900 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker. It is envisaged that all installations will take place over the next three months.

905 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

910 Government housing waiting list
Breakdown of allocation requirements

Clerk: Question 178, the Hon. E J Reyes.

915 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants are on the Government's housing waiting lists, as up to date as possible, giving a breakdown of the housing allocation requirements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

920 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): A total of 1,507 applicants are on the various housing waiting lists as follows: 1RKB – 1,123; the 2RKB – 86; the 3RKB – 171; the 4RKB – 106; the 5RKB – 17; and the 6RKB – 4; making a total of 1,507.

ANSWER

THE HON THE MINISTER FOR HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Mr Speaker,

A total number of 1507 applicants are on the Housing Waiting Lists, as follows:

			Pre-list		TOTALS
1RKB	-	748	375	=	1123
2RKB	-	52	34	=	86
3RKB	-	97	74	=	171
4RKB	-	69	37	=	106
5RKB	-	7	10	=	17
6RKB	-	2	2	=	4
TOTALS		975	532	=	1507

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.

925 So, given that there has been a increase of almost 50% from last time, is the Government now in a position to say what extra housing units it intends to build during its current term of office?

930 Hon. C A Bruzon: I think it is only fair to explain to the hon. Member that the way the previous question was phrased last month, the information he got was for people on the housing waiting list proper. The totals that I have given him include everyone on the pre-list as well. That is why the figure is substantially bigger.

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, Mr Speaker, I accept that, but can the Hon. Minister explain to me when it is – I think he has a commitment to do away with the pre-list – that these pre-lists will disappear, so that then there is no misunderstanding, we just talk about one general housing list?

935 Hon. C A Bruzon: There is, indeed, a manifesto commitment to eliminate the pre-list, but we have not given an exact date as to when this will be achieved. We are in discussion with a computer expert to help us to merge the two in the fairest possible way. I cannot give him a date but it is a commitment for this term in office.

940 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.
So then, as well, those who are on the pre-list who would eventually be... those will form part and parcel of those to whom this Government is committed to re-house within the term of office?

945 Hon. C A Bruzon: The manifesto commitment, as from 9th December, includes: everybody on the pre-list on that day and everybody on the housing waiting list proper. All those applicants, as from 9th December, will be housed before the four-year term is over. That is the aim, and we will give it our best shot.

950 Homeless persons
Number of applications for housing

Clerk: Question 179, the Hon. E J Reyes.

955 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with by his Ministry?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

960 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker.
The Ministry for Housing is currently dealing with 25 applications from homeless persons.

965 Housing Allocation Committee
Number of meetings since Question 64/2012

Clerk: Question 180, the Hon. E J Reyes.

970 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many times the Housing Allocation Committee has met since the answer provided to Question 64/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

975 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, the Housing Allocation Committee has met four times since the answer provided to Question 64/2012.

980 Housing Allocation Committee and others
Number of homes allocated

Clerk: Question 181, the Hon. E J Reyes.

985 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many homes have been allocated since his answer to Question 65/2012, indicating whether these homes have been allocated by the Housing Allocation Committee or by any other authority, and if so, by which authority?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

990 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, since the answer given to Question 65/2012, a total of 36 homes have been allocated by the Housing Allocation Committee – more accurately I should say, on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee, because it is the Housing Authority which, in fact, assigns these allocations.

995 May I also add that, as from today, there are 40 further allocations being offered to tenants – 40 – which we are awaiting an inspection and, hopefully, the approval of the applicants, insofar as they will accept these offers.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, just to be clear, forty – 40 – that have been offered, and now you are waiting to see whether those applicants wish to accept those homes?

1000 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, over and above the 36 homes that have been actually allocated and accepted by tenants, as we speak, there are also 40 allocations which we have offered to applicants but, of course, they have to accept or reject the offer.

I hope there will not be any rejections.

Number of tenants requiring work to be done

1010 Clerk: Question 182, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done in their homes?

1015 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 183.

1020

Housing Works Agency
Number of required repairs listed

1025 Clerk: Question 183.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs are currently listed as still requiring the attention of the Housing Agency?

1030 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): The number of tenants currently listed as requiring works to be done in their homes is 616.

1035 The number of jobs currently listed as still requiring the attention of the Housing Works Agency is 903.

Hon. E J Reyes: Nine zero three, sorry?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Nine oh three – 903.

1040

Housing Works Agency
Repair work contracted out

1045

Clerk: Question 184, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1050

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs have been contracted out, and to which companies, by the Housing Agency since 9th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1055

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the number of jobs contracted out by the Housing Works Agency since 9th December 2011 is five, as follows – I will give you the name of the company and the number of jobs:

Gemini Riteway Scaffolding Ltd – two; Skybridge Ltd – two; Wastage Products Ltd – one.

Gibraltarians living in Spain
Special housing list applications

1065

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing indicate when the separate housing list for applicants currently living in Spain wishing to return home will be introduced and what the eligibility criteria for these applicants will be?

1070

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1075

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman may be aware, in the time whilst they were in administration, applicants for Government rentals living in Spain have required a local address for mailing purposes. This was agreed by the Housing Allocation Committee during their time in office and this, therefore, already exists within the waiting lists.

In addition, the eligibility criteria are the same as already apply for those wishing to apply for Government housing.

Separately, and in order to give effect to our specific manifesto commitment, a separate list will be established to provide for applicants currently living in Spain. The specific criteria for this list – or lists, as there is a possibility that there may be more than one list – will be published in the coming months.

Co-ownership housing estates
Discussions re increasing service charges

1085

Clerk: Question 186, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1090

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state if he has now held discussions with management companies of co-ownership housing estates, in order to address the issue of increasing service charges?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1095

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, no, I have not yet met with any management companies of co-ownership housing estates. I am in the process of fixing meetings for this purpose, with me and with the Chief Minister. A number of estates have already been allocated dates for such meetings.

1100 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, just to clarify, the meetings will be held with the estates that are co-ownership – what happens to those where there is no co-ownership but rather, as from day one, they have been purchased the full 100% by the owners, therefore there is no Government share in it? Will he also be looking into the increased service charges for those people or will they be treated in a different manner?

1105 Hon. C A Bruzon: To be honest with you, Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. However, I will try to find out for him and maybe he can ask me the question in that format next time, if it is okay with you.
Thank you.

1110 TRAFFIC, HEALTH AND SAFETY AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Parking facilities
Preliminary assessment

1115 Clerk: Question 187, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services provide details of the preliminary assessment of parking facilities which the Government is conducting in Gibraltar?

1120 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

1125 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, at present all the data relating to parking facilities emerging from the public consultation process is being collated and will then be analysed.

The Government has chosen to wait to digest all the public feedback from what was described by the previous administration as a pilot scheme – that is, the North District – before commencing a more thorough assessment of the parking facilities.

1130 In the interim, the Technical Services Department and Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd will be assessing the various districts around Gibraltar to identify areas for the possible creation of more parking spaces. The potential use of some existing tunnels, including air raid protection shelters, is also being considered.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does this form part of the major traffic review, or is it something different? Can the Minister clarify that?

1135 Hon. P J Balban: Although this is part of the parking part of the Traffic Plan, it is all part of the same review.

1140 District Parking Scheme
Possible extension to other areas

Clerk: Question 188, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1145 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services inform the House whether a decision has been taken to extend the District Parking Scheme to areas in Gibraltar other than that which is covered in the North District Parking Scheme?

1150 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, a decision has not yet been taken on whether to extend the District Parking Scheme to areas in Gibraltar beyond that which is currently covered by the North District Parking Scheme.

1155 The Government will not take any decision on this Scheme without fully assessing and carefully considering the feedback received from the public consultation exercise.

1160 Hon. D J Bossino: Given that, as I understand it, the public consultation exercise closed on 30th January, and given also that this is a matter which is receiving some public interest – there have been letters in the Chronicle, in relation to specifically the South District Parking Scheme – can the Minister be more precise as to when he feels he will be in a position to make an announcement in relation to this?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, at the moment, it would be impossible to actually give a date. The first part of the actual Scheme, which is the public consultation exercise, has now been completed, and obviously now we are actually, as I said, collating and analysing the data, following which we will be consulting other interested members of the community.

1165 Hon. D J Bossino: Is he able to give some information in relation to the data which has already been received?

1170 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the data is actually being collated by members of staff. They are actually preparing a summary spreadsheet of all the findings and, once that is finished – which I hope they will be finishing shortly – that will be handed back to me and then I will be in a position to be able to give more specific details of the outcome.

1175 Hon. D J Bossino: So the Minister has not seen the data as yet.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I have seen parts of the data. As the feedback has been coming in, I have actually been reading bits of the comments but, obviously, I have not read the whole, all the data, as there is quite a lot of submissions that have come through – impossible to read them all.

1180 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister commit now to making the data received, and information gleaned from the data, public?

1185 Hon. P J Balban: Once the data comes back and a decision is taken as to what will happen with the data, then we will take a... we will actually move on with actual suggestions for the Parking Plan.

1190 Consultation process re Traffic Plan
Interested parties

Clerk: Question 189, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1195 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services provide details of the interested parties which are involved in the consultation process relating to the Traffic Plan and, of those interested parties, which were identified by the Government for consultation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

1200 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the consultation process has started with a public consultation exercise requesting input from the general public, who are therefore the first and, arguably, the most important, interested party.

1205 This input will be considered together with the feedback which Government will receive from other parties, all of whom have an interest in the way traffic is managed locally. These parties will include, but not be limited to, those who depend on the reliability of our road network as a core part of their business. None of the interested parties that participated in response to the press release issued were identified by the Government for consultation. Among those submitting feedback were environmental NGOs, local disability groups and tenants' associations.

1210 Hon. D J Bossino: This was the subject of quite a few questions from this side of the House on the last occasion, if the Minister will recall, and as I understood the answer from the Government – in particular the Hon. the Chief Minister – he, in fact, said that there were people that had been identified by the Government and those interested parties would be consulted by the Government.

1215 Hon. P J Balban: At present, the actual feedback that came through, the Government had not identified these parties. It was completely left open to the general public. In the next stage of the process, the Government now will get in contact with other interested parties.

1220 Hon. D J Bossino: In the press statement, what the Government was referring to by 'interested parties' was simply the general public, which is, in fact, the answer I was offering to him on the last occasion and he was not willing to accept.

1225 Hon. P J Balban: That was what we concluded last time, that 'interested parties' at that moment was the general public, yes.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, having moved rather precipitously to this Question, I did not have the opportunity to ask the supplementary, but I think it is still relevant in any event, given that we are still looking at the consultation and the data that has been received.

1230 Can the Minister confirm, by virtue of the fact that he referred to a spreadsheet and the fact that the data was being collated in a spreadsheet, it seems to imply, certainly to me, that the data has been received, involves figures and the kind of information that can be collated in that way. Is the Minister in a position today to identify for the House any trends or specific patterns that they are seeing in the information that they are receiving at this stage?

1235 Hon. P J Balban: No, I am afraid not. The actual referral to the spreadsheet... I know with 'spreadsheet' you would assume a numerical, arithmetic-type spreadsheet; it is actually, really a spreadsheet of all the salient points, a summary of all the comments made by the public, not figures.

1240

Traffic Commission
Dates of meetings since General Election

1245 Clerk: Question 190, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services provide the dates of the meetings held by the Traffic Commission since the last General Election, together with a list of all applications currently pending the Commission's determination.

1250 Clerk: Answer: the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, there have been no meetings of the Traffic Commission since the General Election. The Commission is currently being reconstituted.

1255 There are currently 67 applications pending the Commission's determination. The information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand over to him. [See next page]

1260 Hon. D J Bossino: I am sure the Minister with responsibility for traffic is aware of the statutory duties of the Traffic Commission, and one of them is to advise the Government on matters affecting traffic on the roads.

In the midst of a major review of existing traffic arrangements, in the midst of a parking assessment and when the Government is poised to take a decision in relation to the district's parking schemes, does he not think it is a very sad and sorry state of affairs that, almost three months into the life of this new Government, the Traffic Commission has not only not met but does not seem to have been constituted as yet?

1265

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the Traffic Commission presently has now been constituted and letters have actually been sent and members have been consulted for their agreement. In fact, we already have a date set for the first Traffic Commission, which is on Friday, 2nd March 2012.

Answer to Question 190

Below is a breakdown of pending applications for the Traffic Commission to consider:

Traffic Calming Measures	8
Traffic flow issues	2
Parking issues	19
Parking Bays	4
Disability Bay issues	6
Zebra/Pedestrian Crossings	4
Road Markings/Signage	9
Bollards	5
Miscellaneous Items	10

1270

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, of the zebra/pedestrian crossings listed in the schedule, numbering four, is the Minister able to clarify which crossings these are, or which areas in Gibraltar these relate to?

1275

Hon. P J Balban: The information on the actual sheet I handed over to the hon. Gentleman is just a summary of them. I will not be able to actually specify which crossings they were. I could always provide that information, but it is not possible at the moment.

Hon. S M Figueras: So, Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member confirm whether these pedestrian crossings are crossings which are pending installation or pending application?

1280

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, that is right. There are a few zebra crossings which are pending the Traffic Commission to advise the Minister on.

1285

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer. I only wanted to clarify whether the two pedestrian crossings which have been added at Bishop Caruana Road, which I think were... It is certainly something that I personally welcome... whether those two crossings were something that were contemplated by the Commission or whether there was an initiative of the Government to install those.

Hon. P J Balban: The Traffic Commission, as you are aware, is an advisory body which actually advises the Government, advises the Minister.

Sometimes we see there is a specific case in question where there is urgency and the action is a real, legitimate need for a zebra crossing in that place, and obviously that is done. There could be other instances whereby advice is sought because there is a discrepancy as to whether it is really... the place in question, whether it is suitable or not, or even advisable or not.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that. I merely wanted clarification on whether these were another four pending crossings.

1300

Health and Safety professionals in Government
Grades, qualifications and training

Clerk: Question 191, the Hon. J J Netto.

1305 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety say the total number of factory inspectors employed, the number of Health and Safety representatives employed in various Government Departments, authorities and agencies, their grades, qualifications on Health and Safety, and whether any of them are currently undergoing any training or courses leading to a Health and Safety qualification?

1310 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, Government employs two factory inspectors. Both have an International Diploma in Risk and Safety Management as qualifications. Currently, they are undertaking no further courses.

1315 There is a need to clarify between the term Health and Safety 'representative' and Health and Safety 'adviser' or 'officer'. Health and Safety representatives are nominated by the staff side, the trade unions, similar to how they nominate their shop stewards. On most occasions, they are the same person. The employer – in this case Government or its agencies – would employ Health and Safety advisers or officers. As to how many Health and Safety representatives are in Government or their agencies, the question should be posed to the trade unions, as they would be in a better position to provide a figure as an answer.

1320 The information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule, which I now hand over to him.

Answer to Questions 191 of 2012

Department	Grade	Nos.	Qualifications
TSD	HPTO	1	NEBOSH Certificate (in Construction) NEBOSH DIP Parts 1 & 2 Occupational Health & Safety
Housing Works Agency	PTO	1	NEBOSH Certificate Occupational Health & Safety
Environmental Agency	SEHO	1	CIEH Approved
Factories Inspectorate	Factories Inspector	2	International Diploma in Risk & Safety Management
CFB	Firefighter	1	MSC Occupational Health & Safety Management CMIOSH AIEMA
Customs	AO	1	NEBOSH (Health & Safety Practitioner) NEBOSH (Occupational Health & Safety)
Sports Authority	Deputy CEO	1	Certificate (Health & Safety in the Workplace)

1325 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is it the intention of the new Government, and in particular the new Minister for Health and Safety, to develop more Health and Safety advisers throughout Government Departments, Authorities and Agencies... to the one contained in the schedule?

Hon. P J Balban: At the moment, that is not the intention, no.

1330 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the reason why I ask this question... because, obviously, I can see, in relation to the column on Departments, that there is one in the Technical Services Department, there is one in the Housing Works Agency and another one in the Environmental Agency, leaving aside the factory inspector, the Fire Brigade, Customs and the Sports Authority, but it seems to me just at a glance and looking at the schedule, that perhaps one of the most important places of the Government has not got a Health and Safety adviser, which would be the Health Authority.

1335 The reason why I say this is because the Health Authority is perhaps the largest employer within the public sector, and not by necessarily being the biggest employer by the number of people employed. By the multiplicity of functions and diversity of functions that the Health Authority has – laboratories, x-rays etc – I would have thought that perhaps that is a likely area within the Government to develop at least one person to be dedicated in that particular area.

1340 So my question really is that, given that there is not any particular Health and Safety adviser for the Health Authority, which is the largest single employer within the public sector, and given the diversity of function, would not the Government consider perhaps that it is necessary to support, obviously, the senior management with a dedicated officer dealing with Health and Safety at the GHA?

1345 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, at the moment we are conducting a number of different reviews of the manning of the Health Authority, and that is an aspect that we are considering in all the other things that we are doing.

1350 Hon. J J Netto: So, obviously, do I take it, then, that it is in hand, in terms of whether there is a need or whether in the future the Health Authority will decide to employ a Health and Safety adviser?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We are currently looking into all sorts of areas, including the aspect of Health and Safety.

Previous Written Questions re Factory Inspectorate Statistical information

1360 Clerk: Question 192, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Minister for Health and Safety now in a position to answer the Written Questions submitted last month, namely numbers W5/2012, W6/2012, W7/2012, W8/2012, W9/2012, W11/2012 and W12/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

1370 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Factories Inspectorate is in the procurement stage of acquiring a new computer software programme that would fulfil their statistical requirements.

Before commissioning the software programme, this would need to undergo a trial period to ensure that the Inspectorate is content with the statistical data produced.

1375 Due to the above-mentioned reasons, it would be premature at this stage to provide you with a definite date as to the availability of the statistical information requested, but rest assured that we are working on this information being made available as soon as possible.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the reason why I pose this particular question in an oral form, as opposed to a written form, is because the last time round, when I actually posed it in written form, he neither gave me an indication as to the particular day...

1380 I then followed, in a personal letter, which I wrote to the Hon. Minister on 25th January, basically saying, 'Well, can you give me the information as to the likely timetable available?'

1385 I know the Chief Minister is not, at the moment, in this Chamber, but given that the Chief Minister has stated that it is the policy of the new Government that they at least acknowledge letters within I think it is 14 days and then give a substantive answer in 21 days, is the Minister saying that he will not acknowledge letters from Members of the Opposition, or whether he is in a rebellious state against the Chief Minister and undermining his authority?

A Member: For goodness' sake!

1390 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not aware... I have actually got a copy...
Sorry, you were saying that I had not replied to your letter dated... (Interjection) Well, I have actually got a copy of the letter here which was sent –

Hon. J J Netto: Well, I have not received it.

1395 Hon. P J Balban: – and signed etc. I will have to check why you have not received it, but it was sent.

Hon. J J Netto: What date?

1400 Hon. P J Balban: On 7th February.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I certainly have not received the letter.

Mr Speaker: Well, blame it on the Post Office.

1405 Hon. P J Balban: I will chase it up for you, but it was sent on 7th February. I have got a copy of it here.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, one more supplementary question.

1410 If I understood the Minister correctly, for some particular reason he is saying that there is a need for a new software programme to be purchased, and then, obviously, a trial period to be able to detect...

1415 Obviously, there must be some technical reason for that and I take his word for that, but for the purpose of facilitating answers, do I take it that, once the software programme is purchased and is running, that the collection of information is not necessarily a function, or most of it, that would be undertaken by the Factory Inspector? In other words, once we have a prescribed form to collect the information I am requesting, this is, more than anything an administrative function rather than a dedicated person who is a Factory Inspector actually collecting information, inputting the information and then analysing. In other words, were the Factory Inspector more often comes into the equation, is by the analysis once the information has been inputted. So my question is, is the new software programme, in terms of collecting the information, because some information is stored in various Government departments, authorities or agencies, whatever, that part of the equation will be undertaken by the administrative grades, which will then enhance the facilitation of information in this matter.

1425 Hon. P J Balban: At present, the actual Inspectorate, as inherited by the Government, consists of two individuals without any administrative support, so for the time being they will be the ones inputting the information.

1430 The reason for the fact that we do not have the computer software in place, which is something which surprised me when I took office, was that the actual licence agreement was terminated in June 2009 and, since that date, the computer programme has just not been available, so what we have done now is actually that they have a system whereby they have actually got a licence for, I think it is about a month, whereby they can check the programme, see whether it will do all the things that they need it to do, and then, if it is working as they want and provides the information they want, they can actually engage in a permanent licence. Otherwise, if not, they will have to seek an alternative software programme and repeat the process again.

1435 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in the explanation that the Hon. Minister has given, where exactly are they right now, in the sense that have they identified a specific software programme that can analyse this particular information? Have they already obtained a particular supplier who can provide this, or is it that they are still waiting for that?

1440 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, they actually have a one-month programme on which the licence expires in a month's time and they are, at present, inputting the information to see whether it will do, and provide, all the statistical information that is required of it. So they are actually at the stage, at the moment, doing that. They have actually got this computer for a month and they are actually –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, that was not my question.

1445 My question was that, given that there is a need, according to the Minister, to purchase a new software programme, where, at what stage, are they right now in terms of identifying the correct particular software programme? Is this a particular software programme that they can buy from the shelf or is it something that has to be tweaked for the particular necessities of the Factory Inspector? Where exactly are they in relation to that aspect? Are they still looking for a particular software programme or is it that one has to be written specifically for them?

1450 Hon. P J Balban: As I think I said, they already have the software programme. They actually have it on a trial basis for a period of one month before that licence expires automatically, and then they have to decide whether they are going to re-engage... satisfied with it, and then they will actually extend the licence. I do not know whether it is yearly or indefinitely. Otherwise, they will have to seek an alternative software programme. But, at the moment, they have the programme in their possession for a period of one month.

1455 Hon. J J Netto: So, following the trial period of a particular month, for them to be able to conclude whether this particular software programme is the one that is required, or they need, for the production of these particular sources of information, when does the Minister consider that sufficient time has elapsed beyond a trial period to be able to be in a position to provide the information for me?

1460 Hon. P J Balban: Once the trial period is over, the month, if they are satisfied, it is assumed they are satisfied with the programme in question, then they would actually purchase the licence and then they could start inputting the raw data to produce the information. As to how long that process will take, I have no idea at this present moment in time.

Factory Inspectorate
Number of inspections in January 2012 and details

1470

Clerk: Question 193, the Hon. J J Netto.

1475 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many inspections during January 2012 did the Factories Inspectors conduct, showing the industry group targeted, whether any possible contravention has been incurred to the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation by any company and whether legal advice is being sought from the Attorney General's Chambers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

1480 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, fourteen inspections were carried out during the requested period and all have been construction related.

1485 One inspection was found with serious contraventions of the Factories Act and a Prohibition Notice was served on the construction site until the contraventions identified were remedied. No advice has been sought from the Attorney General's Chambers.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

1490

Factory Inspectorate
Investigations of accidents at work in January

Clerk: Question 194, the Hon. J J Netto.

1495 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if any investigations of accidents at work have been carried out in January 2012 by the Factories Inspectors, showing the industry group involved and whether any such investigation may lead to prosecution?

1500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no accident investigation has been carried out during the requested period.

Accidents at work
Details for January 2012

1510 Clerk: Question 195, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if there have been any reported accidents at work during January 2012, showing the industry group and showing which ones were major, reportable or fatal?

1515 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 196 and 197 of 2012.

1520

Accidents at work
Statistical analysis for January 2012

1525 Clerk: Question 196.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety provide a statistical analysis of the reported accidents during January 2012, showing the number of accidents which occurred by age and sex distribution, type and cause and industry group?

1530

Accidents at work
Loss of working days in 2012

1535 Clerk: Question 197.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if there has been any loss of working days through accidents at work during 2012, broken down by industry group and cost?

1540

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

1545 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, it is premature to provide an answer to this question, as notifications of accident reports are still coming in. However, the computer software programme that details the statistical information requested is in its procurement stage, as stated in answer to Question 192.

1550

EU Directives on Health and Safety
Need for seminars and provision of information

Clerk: Question 198, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in relation to the two EU Directives on Health and Safety to be transposed, and for which there is draft legislation already, as answered in Written Question 13/2012, does the Minister for Health and Safety consider that, prior to enactment, there might be a need to provide seminars and sufficient information to the relevant industry groups and workers that may be affected by it?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the transposed EU Directives entail minor amendments to the list of the schedule to the regulations and add new chemicals to the list and their occupational exposure limits. It also modifies the occupational exposure limits of other chemicals already on the list.

In this case, a press release informing stakeholders would suffice. In view of the fact that these are minor amendments, the holding of seminars is not considered necessary.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member say which industry groups, which employers and, perhaps, what type of worker will be affected by these two Directives?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I will have to actually find out specifically because that reply has not been supplied to me. But, as I say, it is a very limited group of individuals which will be affected by these chemicals.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Minister, I would have thought, given that notices have been given to him, at least he would have had a conversation with the professionals in the field to know exactly which workers and which employers and which companies would have been involved in the transposition of these Directives, which brings the whole question – my main question – back into the fore, which is, basically, if the Hon. Minister does not know which particular workers are going to be affected by this, surely he should then consider whether there is a need for information to be given to those particular workers in those particular companies? But, obviously, he does not seem to know

Could I also ask, is the Minister being advised or assisted for the purpose of this transposition by any scientific or professional group, other than the law drafter?

Hon. P J Balban: Could you repeat the question, please?

Hon. J J Netto: My second supplementary question was whether the Hon. Minister, for the purpose of transposing these two particular Directives, has he been assisted or advised by any local scientific or professional groups, for the purpose of transposing these Directives, other than, of course, the two law drafters?

Hon. P J Balban: The transposition of the said Directives is actually done by EUID officers and they will make sure that all the necessary things are in place.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the reason why I ask this is because I have taken the care myself of printing out the Directives and in relation to the Directive on the third list of indicative occupational exposure limit values, for instance, the actual people who wrote the Directive said, in little clause (2) down here:

‘In carrying out these tasks, the Commission is assisted by the scientific committee on occupational exposure limits to chemical agents set up by the Commission Directive...’

– and it gives the number.

So, basically, what I am asking is that, given that the people who drafted the Directive are supported, assisted and advised by the relevant scientific and professional body, will the Minister not also require that he himself should be advised by the local people who are knowledgeable in this area, who may come from a scientific and professional background?

1610 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member knows well the procedure in relation to transposition of EU Directives. These are matters that are handled by the EUID office. They advise the Ministers as to what is required. They will consider and assess what is necessary to transpose these Directives and will obtain the necessary support and advice that they need in order for the transposition to be effected. They will then be in a position to present the necessary advice to the Government as to what is required. That is the normal process and that is what will be required in this particular case.

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Minister for Justice, what he has just said does not tally with what the Minister for Health and Safety said a while ago.

1620 The Minister for Health and Safety a while ago, in responding to my question, was saying this is a minor issue which does not require to give any information whatsoever, neither to the companies, nor to the workers, who may be involved by this.

The Minister also does not even know the people who are going to be affected by the transposition of this, so in my further supplementary question I am asking whether he has been advised by anyone at all, who may be affected by this particular Directive?

1625 So we have a situation where this has all been transposed with no information, no advice being given, either to the industry, to companies, to the unions, to the workers directly, who may require some training. So what I am basically saying is will the hon. Member not consider that before rushing into transposing these Directives, whether he will give it some thought to giving some advice, some information, perhaps in seminars, to all those various stakeholders who may be affected by the transposition of his Directive? That is what I am saying.

1630 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has repeated the very first question that he asked and he was given an answer in the first place. The answer is as stated originally.

1635 Hon. J J Netto: Sorry, could you repeat that?

Hon. G H Licudi: The hon. Member in a supplementary has simply repeated the original question and he was given an original answer. The answer remains as originally stated by my hon. Colleague.

1640 Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask the Minister for Health and Safety who will be the Government authority – that is, the Department, authority or agency – that will sign the EU Declaration of Conformity, as prescribed in Annex 6 in order to ensure compliance under the Restricted Substances List in annex 2?

1645 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, that is not information that arises directly from the original question. Obviously, I will need notice of the question.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, it does not arise, but if the hon. Member had printed out the Directives –

1650 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes, but –

Hon. J J Netto: – he would have given notice [inaudible].

Mr Speaker: Point of order. Point of order now.

1655 With respect, the hon. Member cannot tell the Minister what he should have done or should not have done. He has asked a question. He has been given the answer. Let us draw a conclusion and move on.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, but there is a point that I still want to ask first – 1660 Mr Speaker: Oh, you have further questions, then. What he should have done and printed it out and read it is another matter.

Hon. J J Netto: But my supplementary question, given the nature of the Directive, is that there will be a competent Government authority who will sign the Declaration of Conformity at local level – that is in the Gibraltar jurisdiction?

1665 The reason why I am asking this supplementary question is that because we are talking about hazardous substances, one would have thought that the local knowledge for knowing what the chemical value should be is not necessarily in the Health and Safety Department, but perhaps more on the Department of Environment where they have the element of people employed there, the professional people employed there with, the necessary scientific and professional background to be able to answer that.

1670 So my supplementary question is that, although it remains a Health and Safety matter, that the actual authority for signing conformity with these may not necessarily be signed with Health and Safety, but perhaps with the Department of Environment. So if that were to be the case, will it be the Department of Environment, as opposed to Technical Services Department, or his own Ministry?

1675 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, again, that question does not arise from the original question, which was to do with providing seminars and information to industry groups. Now he wants to talk about the competent authority and whether it is one Department or another. We will need to have notice of that question.

1680 Airport Terminal
Open for departures

Clerk: Question 199, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1685 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House when the airport terminal will be opened for departures?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

1690 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is referring to the new air terminal, then the answer is that we cannot (Interjection) provide a firm date.... Well, the question was ambiguous, but I am assuming that he is asking about the new air terminal and therefore I will answer it, to say that we cannot provide a firm date.

1695 Whatever our differences may have been in relation to the new air terminal, the position is that the new Government wants to see the terminal operating for both arrivals and departures as soon as possible, in order to be in a position where we are operating only one terminal and not two. We understand that the contractor anticipates handing over the terminal completely on 31st March of this year, if all the commissioned works are successfully completely by that date.

1700 The date provided to Government as the date when it is likely that all testing and training in relation to the testings will have been completed, and by when the terminal can operate fully for arrivals and for departures, is May.

1705 Old St Bernard's Hospital site Government plans

Clerk: Question 200, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1710 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Development and Planning explain what plans the Government has for the old St Bernard's Hospital site that was earmarked by the former GSD Government as a joint First and Middle School?

1715 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government is considering various options for the site and an announcement will be made once a decision is taken.

1720

Full planning process
Timescale for submission of Government projects

1725

Clerk: Question 201, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will the Minister with responsibility for Planning confirm whether the Government is committed to a specific timescale in respect of the submission of Government projects to the full planning process?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. This will follow stage one of the process where Government projects are submitted to the DPC for guidance and an opinion. The Government has not yet decided on a specific date by which a second stage will commence, given that there may be a need to take legislative changes into account.

1735

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you... I am grateful, Mr Speaker. However, though, I will not press for a specific date, as I know it is impossible at this stage to provide us with that. Is there at least a sense of the period of time we are looking at before Government projects go through the full planning process?

1740

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would not like to commit to specific dates or to... Definitely, it will happen within this term of office, but I would not like to say exactly when.

1745

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I press on the issue only because I am certain that the environmental NGOs now represented in the DPC will have strong views in respect of a number of the projects due to be completed within the term of office.

For the commitment to be effective, in my view, the subjection of projects to the planning process should occur sooner rather than later and, though you are committing to doing it within the term of office, you are not willing at this stage to give any further indication of the point during that term of office at which you will do that.

1750

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is definitely something I would like to do. It is something which I would like to do sooner, rather than later. I can say that, but I cannot be more specific than that at this stage.

1755

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1760

Development and Planning Commission
Nature of Government projects to be submitted for guidance

Clerk: Question 202, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1765

Hon. S M Figueras: Will the Minister with responsibility for Planning confirm the nature or definition of projects which will be submitted to the Development and Planning Commission for its opinion and guidance; whether it will publish the guidance obtained from the DPC; and, if so, whether the Government is committed to following such guidance as may be received from it?

1770

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1775 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, there is no definition of the word 'project' in the Town Planning Act. The Government, however, takes this to mean developments for which planning permission would ordinarily be required.

The guidance from the DPC will be delivered in public and online. This is a first stage. The opinion of the DPC will be for guidance only. In the second stage, it will be binding on the Government.

1780 Hon. S M Figueras: Oh, I am sorry, I did not quite catch the last bit.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: In the first stage, the opinion of the DPC will be for guidance only; and, in the second stage, it will be binding on the Government.

1785 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will this second stage of the first phase of the submission of projects to planning occur before projects are subjected to full planning process?

1790 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I can say that the first stage will start pretty soon. As soon as one of our projects comes up and it gets to the stage where it needs to go to the DPC, it will happen pretty quickly and then it will be for guidance only.

The second phase we are linking to the legislation – that is why it may take a little longer.

1795 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm whether projects are being submitted at least for the DPC's perusal at this stage, if there are any relevant projects?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: At the moment we are continuing with many of the projects that we inherited from the previous administration. There are private individuals and companies coming forward with projects of their own.

1800 The first Government project has not actually reached the stage where it needs to go the DPC yet, but I am sure it will come.

1805 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I trust that the Hon. Minister will have no issue with me bringing this matter up on a regular basis until such time as it happens, as it is something that, though it is not the position of the previous administration, nor this Opposition, that Government projects should go to the DPC for their approval, it is indeed this Government's commitment and we will be seeking to ensure that this happens sooner rather than later.

I have no question and for that I apologise. (Interjection and Laughter)

1810 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I appreciate that our policies are different on this issue and, certainly, whenever the hon. Member has a question, he is free to raise the issue, we totally respect that. In any case, he is also welcome to come to me, to the DPC, and actually see the process working.

1815 Development and Planning Commission
Government commitment to further improving public access

Clerk: Question 203, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1820 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, further to the first public meeting of the DPC, at which a number of applications which had been approved by sub-committee in private were passed, can the Minister with responsibility for planning confirm whether the Government is willing to commit to further improving accessibility to these meetings by way of provision of a live stream of the meetings, as well as opening up meetings of planning sub-committees to public or, at the very least, publishing minutes of said sub-committee meetings?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1830 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the sub-committee of the DPC is in place to determine minor applications, like shop signs, internal works that concern internal changes to residential, office and commercial units, or the placing of air conditioning units. The idea is to make this process as quick as possible for these types of minor works.

1835 There are no plans at present to open these meetings to the public as well. The decisions taken by the sub-committee are recorded in the agenda and minutes of the DPC, that is then available online. There are no plans at this stage for a live stream of DPC sub-committee meetings.

1840 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I raise the point about the private meetings and accessibility to them or minutes of their decisions only – though I understand that they are in respect of minor works, as defined by the Town Planning Act – that there recently, certainly at the last meeting of the DPC, where 26 or 27 – I am not sure of the number – items were approved by the DPC as having been approved initially by the sub-committee. Included in that was one matter, certainly, that came to mind that may have had a certain element of controversy attached to it, given that it had been originally rejected by the DPC.

1845 It is only in furtherance of the Government's stated open and transparency agenda that I would ask the Minister whether it is possible for minutes of these private meetings to be made available in tandem with the minutes of the DPC, as publishing minutes will certainly – I expect the Minister will agree – have no impact on the speed or efficiency of the meetings and the approvals themselves, as it will be an administrative matter after the event.

1850 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the decisions of the sub-committee are published and they are available in DPC meetings and they are available online; but we have not actually given thought to the decisions of a sub-committee being published or being made available online because of the issues that they deal with generally are quite minor.

1855 In the application to which the hon. Member referred, the banner application, that was originally submitted to the DPC before my time, obviously, but it was rejected by the DPC at the time. It was submitted. The design of something was changed and it was submitted a second time. By then, the sub-committee was in place and the sub-committee approved it. The Committee is the two-Town Planners and the Heritage Trust. There is no representative of the political Government on it.

1860 Hon P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member say on what grounds what was different about the application that the DPC originally rejected and the one that they subsequently approved, other than the intervention in between of the new Chief Minister that caused them to change their minds? I mean...

1865 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not present at that Committee so I am not aware of the details of the case. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) No, (Interjection) what I am aware of... (Interjection) What I can say to the hon. Member, is that I understand it was a new application. (Interjection) There was a new system in place.

Hon. P R Caruana: A new one. Then it wasn't the earlier one.

1870 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: A new application, a new system in place, and it was decided by the sub-committee. (Interjections) No, because it was not the same people. It was actually the sub-committee of the DPC.

1875 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, as I understood the answer to one of the previous answers, I think what he said was he had not given any thought to the question of publishing decisions of the sub-committee but that, in any event, that possibly his instincts – if I can characterise it in that way – were that they are decisions in respect of such minor applications that there would not be any useful purpose in actually publishing minutes in relation to those decisions.

1880 Will he undertake to, perhaps, give thought to publishing minutes if, in fact, they are requested by anybody that has an interest or any affected parties? That might be a way in which to deal with that because I quite understand the point that the administrative burden of publishing online or making public minutes might completely outweigh the benefits of actually doing so in relation to minor applications?

1885 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, publishing the minutes of the sub-committee is not an issue for the Government. The whole DPC is public, anyway, so it is not really an issue for us. It is something which we would certainly be prepared to consider.

1890 It is not an issue, but I suppose if somebody feels... if an applicant feels very strongly about a decision, they would then be free to request the minutes or to request reasons why the application for air conditioning or for internal works was rejected. In that case, I would assume the applicant would be entitled to them. Although, let me say that if the sub-committee rejects an application, the applicant is free to then go to the whole DPC and take it up there.

1895 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, also in relation to air conditioning units, in that there might be a situation where an application is granted to locate an air conditioning unit in a particular site which, because of its proximity to a neighbour, may give rise to an interest on the part of that neighbour – that is where I was coming from.

1900 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand that the applications are normally advertised and they are published. I did not know it well in terms of the smaller ones, you know, shop signs and air conditioning units – those are as well. But certainly, at a certain level they are advertised so people are made aware of the application.

Ongoing review of Planning legislation
Online access to planning applications and other information

1905 Clerk: Question 204, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1910 Hon. S M Figueras: Will the Minister with responsibility for Planning provide details about the ongoing review of planning legislation and the provision of access to all planning applications and other information online?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1915 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government is currently assessing the technical advice regarding the provision of access to all planning applications and other information online. The review of planning legislation is currently being conducted by the Department and has not yet reached a stage where ministerial input of policy is required.

1920 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I asked the question and point... I understand that this will be an involved process which may take longer than the Government has currently been at the helm. However, I have identified from looking at the DPC's website today that, following three meetings with the DPC, none of the minutes have yet been published and I wonder whether the Minister will be dealing with this issue as part of the review in terms of the speed with which the information becomes available following meetings?

1925 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Certainly, Mr Speaker, it is something that we are looking at, but the hon. Member should be aware also that two of the three meetings were in public, anyway, and there were applicants there.

1930 In fact, at this last meeting we actually had objectors coming forward and stating their case and the applicants responding. So all that happens in public, anyway, but I will certainly check out why the minutes are not online and I will make sure that they are.

1935 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am fully aware that it is happening in public, as it has been said in the House ad nauseam; however, it is unfortunately not always possible for me personally to attend at the meetings and so far it has not been possible. Hence, the reason why I would seek to rely as quickly as possible on minutes of those meetings. I can assure the Minister that, as soon as I have the opportunity, I will be attending a meeting of the DPC.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand.

1940 Primarily, obviously, the meetings are for the benefit of applicants, objectors, neighbours and what have you, although the hon. Member is obviously free to come as well. (Laughter)

Hon. S M Figueras: I will certainly be there at some point soon. Thank you. (Interjections)

10 CHIEF MINISTER
2012 Census
Government arrangements

15 Clerk: Question 205/2012, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Government state when they will be initiating the arrangements to carry out a census in 2012?

20 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, preparatory work in connection with the forthcoming census has already commenced.

25 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when does the Chief Minister envisage that the census will be distributed? How long will it take for it to be filled in?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is really not so much a question of how long it will take, but when is the best time to carry out a census.

30 We are advised by those responsible in the Statistics Office that it is likely to be best something done in November, and therefore it is anticipated that the work will commence... the actual delivery of questionnaires will commence on Monday, 12th November 2012.

35 Guaranteed Superannuation Fund
Annual cost to the taxpayer

Clerk: Question 206, the Hon. D A Feetham.

40 Hon. D A Feetham: Are the Government in a position to state what is it estimated the annual cost to the taxpayer will be of the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

45 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 207/2012.

50 Guaranteed Superannuation Fund
Nature of guarantee to employee

Clerk: Question 207.

55 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund, how will the Government guarantee the value of an employee's pension fund?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

60 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as already explained in answer to Question 124/2012 yesterday, if, by the cost to the taxpayer, the hon. Member means how much will be the Government's contribution as an employer, this is impossible to calculate until such time as there have been contributions made by employees on the basis of which a calculation can then be made.

65 As has already been made public, the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund will be invested in the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which carries a Government guarantee.

70 Hon. D A Feetham: Just focusing on this question of the guarantee and the investment in the Gibraltar Savings Bank, is the position – and I have read the pension deed that pensioners will be asked to sign – that the pension, the money, will be invested in a bond whose return will be pegged on the 25-year yield of UK government gilts, or is it that the money will actually be invested in UK government gilts? What is the position?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the position is that it will be invested in a bond with the Gibraltar Government.

75 Hon. D A Feetham: So when, in the actual trust, the deed, it says that the yields will be based on the 25-year yield for UK government gilts, it is because it is going to be pegged to that yield. Is that correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

80 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware that this type of investment, in fact – UK government gilts – is as near as possible as you can get to cash, and therefore virtually risk free? Is he aware of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am aware that that is a particular view.

85 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware that, for example, the returns on UK government gilts are 3.1% and that, in actual fact, it has only ever been, in the last 20 years, over 5% in 1998, thus reflecting the level of risk that this kind of investment poses?

90 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not think, therefore, that when the Government talks about guaranteeing the fund, that is obviously misleading because there is absolutely no risk to the underlying investment?

95 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Am I right in saying that contributors to the Provident Pension Funds No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 will be able to transfer into the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund?

100 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is that if they wish to do so, they may.

105 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware that, in relation to the Provident Funds No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3, there are different types of pension plans – there is income, there is growth, there is balanced – and for the different pension plans, the underlying investments are actually different? There are very low-risk investments; there are also higher-risk investments, such as investments in equities. Is he aware of that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

110 Hon. D A Feetham: Therefore, will he not agree with me that the level of risk, in terms of investments in the Provident Funds No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3, the type of pension plan that one is talking about – the creature – is completely and wholly different to the type of risk that one is dealing with in relation to the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am now aware that that is his view.

115 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman obviously has not done his homework! There is a simple answer: yes, or no. Is he aware, or is he not aware? (Interjections and laughter)

Mr Speaker, will the Hon. the Chief Minister confirm whether anybody that is transferring into the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund from what is a different type of investment, a different type of pension creature, will be provided advice in relation to that transfer, or will it be on the basis of execution only?

120 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position, as the hon. Gentleman knows, I think, from the answers given in this House yesterday, is that, as yet, there have been no applications by anyone to come into this Fund.

125 Hon. D A Feetham: But I am not asking about whether there have been any applications. I am asking, if somebody wants to transfer from the Provident Fund No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 into the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund, is that going to be on an execution basis only, or is the Government going to provide some form of advice to those pensioners – to their pensioners?

130 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to be answering any hypothetical questions because, in fact, there is a clear parliamentary provision that we should not, but when the time comes, we shall make a determination as to how to deal with those issues. Perhaps I should thank the hon. Gentleman for flagging that.

135 Mr Speaker: Well, I did consider whether that was a hypothetical question, but I did not take the view that it was a hypothetical question. It is a question aimed at a policy: whether advice would be tendered or would it be executed only.

140 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am very glad that I have been able to assist the Government but, obviously, I am none the wiser as to what the Government's policy is! (Interjection and laughter) Let me just read...
He has obviously been taught very well by the hon. Gentleman to his left!

Hon. Chief Minister: It is a pity you left his tutelage!

145 Hon. D A Feetham: Let me read what you said, what the GSLP said in its manifesto. It said this, and I quote:

'The value of the Provident Funds can go up or down and is not guaranteed.'

150 Then it went on to say that anybody could transfer into the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund and that, because it was guaranteed, that this was an additional benefit.

Will the hon. Gentleman not accept that that is, in fact, a misleading statement? One, because... (Interjection) Well, I haven't finished.

155 Hon. Chief Minister: I can tell you the answer now. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: No, we have heard the answer from Mr Bossano already: no.

160 Hon. Chief Minister: When one predicates a question like that, I can tell him what the answer will be, but I am quite happy to allow him to waste his time and his breath in expanding on his question!

165 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, because – let me explain, then he can answer the question – it is absolutely right that the investments in pension plans and the Provident Funds No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 can go up or down, but, in relation to the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund there is absolutely no risk with the investment going down because the underlying investment is as near as possible as investing in cash. It is like putting the money into a bank account. In actual fact, it is even worse, because the investment is going to be in the Gibraltar Savings Bank. Unless the Gibraltar Savings Bank goes bust then, of course, nobody is going to lose their money.

Does the hon. Gentleman not accept that, in the light of those facts, the promises made, and the 170 representations made, in their manifesto were false, and does he not accept as well that, in the light of those representations, it becomes even more necessary for the Government to provide proper advice to its own workers and make it absolutely clear that the fact that the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund uses the term 'Guarantee' is actually misleading?

175 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not a guarantee.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, to the first question, no; to the second question, no; to the third question, no.

180 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the hon. Gentleman received any representations from private pension providers in the private sector?

185 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have spoken to a number of people in the financial services industry, some of them who are private pensions providers about this and other matters, but this, frankly, Mr Speaker, deviates quite a bit from the question that I am dealing with.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if it is a point of order, I would argue the point of order. It is a valid supplementary arising from my original question.

190 Mr Speaker: Well, the question which I heard seemed rather wider. It did not seem to be linked to the Guaranteed –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am talking about representations in relation to the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund.

195 Mr Speaker: Ah.

Hon. D A Feetham: And he has understood the question.

200 Hon. Chief Minister: And he has answered it.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is it not the case that, in fact, private pension providers have expressed concern to the hon. Gentleman precisely on the grounds that I have expressed concern to him today, and also in relation to competition concerns? Is it not the case?

205 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no, it is not the case.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will the hon. Gentleman at least give me a clear answer this afternoon –

210 Hon. G H Licudi: It is very clear. Very clear.

Hon. D A Feetham: – and at the very least tell me what the nature of the representations about the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund were that were made to the Chief Minister?

215 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, because I do not think it is fair to tell people what it is that the representations that have been made to me in private are across the airwaves just because the hon. Gentleman happens to be curious about it. (Interjection)

220 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman is aware, because the hon. Gentleman has sought to cloak himself with a cloak of transparency, accountability, greater consultation and all those nice terms that the hon. Gentleman uses on a constant basis, that he is accountable to this Parliament, that we have concerns about the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund... (Interjections) that we believe that similar concerns have been expressed to him. Does the hon. Gentleman not agree with me that it is absolutely outrageous that the hon. Gentleman refuses to answer any questions and be accountable to this Parliament on what is an important aspect of Government policy, affecting thousands of Government workers?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I did not need to be elected on a manifesto that pledged accountability and transparency to know that Ministers are accountable to this Parliament, because I have spent eight years trying to hold Ministers accountable in this Parliament and they have been much less accountable in four-year terms than we have been in the eight weeks that we have been elected. (Laughter and applause)

In fact, Mr Speaker, one thing is to be accountable and another thing is for me to tell the hon. Gentleman everything that happens in my meetings, some of which continue to be ongoing and some in respect of which people are coming back to meet me to make fuller representations than they have made.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I suggest to the hon. Gentleman that either he really does not know very much about the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund... and, in fact, I have noticed that before he answered my questions, the hon. Gentleman, Mr Bossano, was constantly whispering in his ear. It appears that, although he has plucked up the courage to actually answer questions about the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund on this occasion because, on the last occasion that I asked him, in fact, he said that he would not answer because he was not in a position to answer because Mr Bossano was dealing with the position...

Does he not agree with me that that is an outrageous attitude for him to adopt in this Parliament?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in answer to the first question, no; in answer to the second question, no. But let me tell him a little bit more.

Mr Speaker, I know that, having left the confraternity of socialists to go to the hon. Gentlemen opposite –

Hon. D A Feetham: I can assure you that I am happier...

Hon. Chief Minister: – and to fall into the vice of seeking power at any price, the hon. Gentleman has obviously fallen out from the possibility of having what we are enjoying as a Cabinet, collegiate government, where we talk to each other about the things that matter to each other, we work together on the issues and we do not have to stand up on our own, defenceless, before a merciless cross-examiner who seeks only to ridicule us.

That is not what Government is about and it is not what the Opposition should be about, either.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am astounded, I have to say, but let me tell the hon. Member, the Hon. Chief Minister, that if he is going to be talking about my U-turns, let me remind him that he is, at heart, a liberal; that a liberal now leads the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party; and that if I were to stand in this Parliament and say what the hon. Gentleman used to say to me about the Hon. Mr Bossano, there would be a nuclear explosion on the benches opposite from here to Madrid! (Interjections and applause)

Two Members: What is the question?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have been called many worse things than a liberal before (Laughter) and if I want to stand here and say to the hon. Gentleman across the floor of the House, or remind him, of the things he used to say about the hon. Gentleman sitting to the left of him –

Mr Speaker: Please don't!

Hon. Chief Minister: – Hiroshima would pale into insignificance, compared to the explosion he would be sitting next to.

But, given that I understand that the hon. Gentleman sitting to his left used to say the same things about the hon. Gentleman sitting to his right, (Laughter) it may be that the implosion might be such that we might learn how to split the atom! But this is Question Time, not Science Time, Mr Speaker. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: I think the last two remarks were not questions.
The Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Chief Minister can rest easy: Mr Feetham and myself kissed and made up a long time ago! (Interjections, laughter and applause)

Politically speaking! (Laughter) Whether the same (Interjections) –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: Whether the same kissing and making up is evidenced in the ranks of his Government, given some of the tensions that one hears are already occurring within it, is another matter.

Anyway, Mr Speaker, I can see that the Hon. the Chief Minister is in the mood for multiple-choice questions and answers today, given that he is in a yes-and-no mood. My first supplementary, then, will lend itself to that sort of treatment.

Does he not agree with me that the Hon. Mr Feetham, rather than have left the confraternity of socialists, has left the confraternity of socialists? Does he not agree with me that almost every working-class representative in Gibraltar that has ever been respected by the working classes in Gibraltar has recognised that the GSD Government has shown many, many, many more signs of being genuinely concerned with the social and labour interests of working people than the GSLP has ever even dreamt of showing? (Applause) Does he agree with me about that?

A Member: That is why you are there and we are here.

Hon. P R Caruana: And does he agree with me (Interjections) –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: And does he, thirdly, agree with me that, whilst he may be free to take the view, as a matter of policy, that he should not account in this House for representations made to him by third parties for fear of breaching their confidence, it is nevertheless inappropriate of him to reduce this Parliament's right and interest in the public affairs of Gibraltar to, as he accused my friend, simply being 'curious' about it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is a self-serving diatribe that is a party political broadcast and a pretext for debate, not a proper question for Question Time, which may account for the fact –

Hon. P R Caruana: All I ask for is answers.

Hon. Chief Minister: – that it has taken us half an hour to get through two questions, the whole of the time that the British Prime Minister would have spent on his feet in the Commons, in Parliament, answering many more.

As it is a pretext for debate, as it suggests things, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman simply wants to raise in order to find perhaps, or carry, some more favour with headline writers tomorrow than he has been able to do (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to date since 8th December, I am simply going to say to him that, frankly, he should, next time, give me notice of that question and I will come back with a retort that he will not enjoy.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I will take that as a refusal to answer the question.

I do not know why he needs notice of supplementaries, each of which arise exclusively from what he has said in his last intervention.

Hon. Chief Minister: About the Superannuation Fund, not...

Hon. P R Caruana: Very well, Mr Speaker, a more constructive supplementary that the hon. Member may be able to handle: have I correctly understood the Government to have said that it will be offering annuities?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that is clear from the way that the whole of this subject has been phrased, even in the press releases.

335 Hon. P R Caruana: So, if the Government intends to issue annuities, can I ask the Government out of what fund it will absorb any losses that might arise?

340 The issuing of annuities is the purchase... An annuity is an annual payment for the rest of your life, or for a certain number of years, purchased by the payment up-front of a lump sum. That is what an annuity is. Therefore, if the Government of Gibraltar is going to go into the business of writing annuities, which is the business usually of life insurance companies – you can make a profit and a loss from the activity, depending on the accuracy of the actuarial calculations of how long people are going to live – does the Government entertain the possibility, then, that the taxpayer may make losses from it conducting the business of issuer of annuities?

345 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker – (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: I see, (Interjections) Mr Speaker –

350 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: – that the hon. Members' opposite conversion to socialism includes recognising me as the legitimate leader of socialists in Gibraltar. I welcome that. (Applause and interjections)

355 Hon. P R Caruana: Socialist leader of the Government, yes.

Hon. J J Bossano: And the Opposition, because the Opposition have been trying to persuade the electorate –

360 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

365 Hon. J J Bossano: – that they are genuinely the working-class party of Gibraltar. I do not think there is any other country in the whole of Europe, or possibly in the whole of the western world, where the Government and the Opposition are competing both to be socialists. I never thought I would live to see the day!

370 I would remind the hon. Member that when he launched... He, in fact, is the originator of the concept of providing Government Provident Funds. Yes, there were no Government Provident Funds with the possibility of an annuity until he introduced the concept in the House, and at the time he created something which I recall that he originally said, in answer to my question, was going to be done through the Post Office, and then he told me he was going to do it outside the Post Office, outside the Savings Bank, because of the 10% that was required in addition to the money in the fund, and I think... If he does not remember, because he is shaking his head, then I will have the question fished out and send it to him.

375 The hon. Member, originally, when he announced it in Parliament, announced that the thing would be done through the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which is what we are doing now, and then he said that he had decided against it when, at a later stage he did not do it that way, because it meant that every time people put money into the Provident Fund, the Provident Fund would then require the Savings Bank to hold an additional 10% – which is no longer the case – and therefore, if the stage comes... which is a very long time in the future because, in fact, the new Superannuation Fund starts on 1st January. There is currently nobody who is contributing to it. There may not be anybody in any of the other funds that wants to move. So far, only one person has publicly announced his intention of moving – somebody who is very familiar to the other side, who clearly does not share all their reservations about it.

380 Hon. P R Caruana: No, well, I would [inaudible].

385 Hon. J J Bossano: But you can advise him, of course, since he is one of yours! (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) You can give him the advice not to do it! (Laughter)

The point is that when we find that there are people who switch it and when we find that there is interest in the annuity, we will revisit the arrangements that he was planning to introduce initially, which was, in fact...

390 there was, indeed, a fund in the Savings Bank that would provide the annuities and that is what we propose to do, go back to what he had at the beginning.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, everything that the hon. Member has just said and attributed to me about any intention or statements on my part to issue anything that looks anything like an annuity is complete and utter fabrication on his part.

395 Mr Speaker, the Provident Scheme that we designed, will he accept, does not provide for annuities. What it provides for... He may be interested in listening to this supplementary. What it provides for, will he not recall more carefully now, is for the pensioners' accumulated fund to be drawable on retirement in annual instalments, but annual instalments from his fund, not annual instalments in terms of a contractual right against the Government, the issuer of the gratuity?

400 The Government was concerned at the time that if somebody had accumulated £150,000 in their account, they should not be able to draw it all out and blow it on a cruise and in the casino in one year and then have nothing more to spend for their old age, so we introduced what he is describing – which is not an annuity – which is that they could only withdraw it in annual amounts, and that is what he is describing, which is nothing like the annuity that they have described.

405 The annuity, as I understand it, that they have announced is that the pensioner surrenders the capital sum of his pension pot to the Government, in exchange for which the Government will contractually, or statutorily, agree to issue the person with a right to an annual income. That is an annuity: not what we intended to do.

410 Whether the Government makes a profit or loss on that, I would ask him to agree with me, just to convert this into a question... that would expose... Whether the Government makes a profit or a loss on such a transaction depends on the accuracy of the actuarial assumption made at the time that the annuity is purchased, and you decide, 'For that sum of money I will pay you y thousand pounds a year either for the rest of your life or for x years,' and if it is for the rest of your life, it subsequently depends on a second variable, which is whether the person lives longer or less. If he lives less, the annuity issuer makes a profit; if the person lives longer, then the annuity issuer makes a loss.

415 I am asking the hon. Member to simply recognise that issuing annuities in that way exposes the Government, if the Government is to issue it, both to the possibility of making profit and to the risk of making loss. Does he agree? (Mobile phone rings)

420 Hon. J J Bossano: I agree, Mr Speaker, that those possibilities exist.
All I am saying to him is that before he introduced the scheme that is...
He does not have to hide; I am not going to be nasty to him! (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: I am trying to work out how to turn off my phone! (Laughter) And, anyway, my protégé assisted me... (Interjections)

425 Hon. D A Feetham: But no kissing, please!

Mr Speaker: Order!

430 Hon. J J Bossano: If that is what the hon. Member is relying on, I suggest he comes along with a bulletproof vest.

435 Can I tell the hon. Member that, before he moved to the system of telling people (Mobile phone rings) that they had the option of reducing their capital base by making withdrawals, the first proposal was an annuity, and I will prove it to him. I will prove it to him. I will be able to fish it out because I remember it, you see. He may not, but I do.

440 The second thing is that if, when the time comes – which is probably a very long time in the future – that the first persons will be retiring from having contributed to the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund... When that happens and a decision then is taken and people are being given either an annuity or a lump sum – which they will be able to choose because a decision will only be made when you reach retirement – the plan at present is that that should be done through a fund that would be part of the Savings Bank, but, clearly, I think that before that happens there will be many elections and many changes of Government and another Government may have a different policy, but that will be the plan now if it was happening now.

445 Hon. P R Caruana: So any losses that might accumulate in this annuity-selling scheme would be the problem of some future Government and the hon. Members appear to be consoled by that fact?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, since I am telling the hon. Member that there is not yet one single contributor (Hon. P R Caruana: As yet.) to the system and that the date when the first payments have to be made is in the future. If at that time he or somebody that thinks like him is in Government, they can decide not to proceed down that route and not provide it.

I have no doubt that this can be done and that it can be done at zero loss, but I am not going to explain to him how it is done, if he does not want to do it. We will do it if we are there. It will not happen if we are not.

455 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member believes, surely, that annuity-writing business can be done with a guarantee of no loss, he has lost his vocation. He could have made himself a multi-billionaire in the City of London, explaining to insurance companies how it is possible to go into the business of selling annuities with no risk whatsoever of loss.

The hon. Member may think that he can just make glib statements in this House and get away with them, but no-one in the history of mankind has yet devised a way of selling annuities with a guarantee that it cannot result in a loss to the person who, in exchange for a fixed lump sum of money at the beginning, has to pay an annual amount for an indeterminate number of years, which may or may not exceed the amount that he received in the front end, plus financing costs. The hon. Member thinks that he can get out of every inappropriate policy that he announces in this House simply by saying that there are not any clients yet, and when there is a client I will have to wait until I am 156 to find out whether he was clever enough to invent a system that exposes the taxpayer to loss.

460 Everybody will know that if the Government of Gibraltar competes with insurance companies in the selling of annuities, then the Government of Gibraltar can make a loss on that business as easily and as much as the commercial companies can do. Will he not acknowledge at least the possibility of that? I acknowledge the possibility that the Government could make a profit from it. All I am asking him to acknowledge in return is that if you have the possibility of making a profit, you have the possibility of making a loss as well.

470 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, let me just remind the hon. Member that yesterday he did not know how it was going to be possible to provide 100% commutation to existing Civil Service pensioners.

475 Hon. P R Caruana: At no cost to the Government.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.

480 Hon. P R Caruana: That is what he said.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, that is correct, and therefore he clearly did not know how to do it in Government, because when I asked him to do it he told me from this side of the House it was impossible.

485 Hon. P R Caruana: I still believe it is not possible.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, and you still believe it is not possible. Therefore, you will believe it when it happens, and since this is not going to happen for a very long time –

490 Hon. P R Caruana: Explain it now!

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, Mr Speaker, I am afraid –

495 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member is asking questions about a policy. I have told him what the policy is. I have told him that it is a policy that is unlikely to be required to be activated within the term of office of 500 this Government. It is a policy that will happen with this Government or a successor Government that carries on with that same policy.

505 If there is a different Government in future when there is the first contributor due to take his money and that Government at that time – in 10 years, 20 years or 30 years' time – decides that they do not know how to provide an annuity fund through the Savings Bank which can, in fact, match its exposure with an alternating asset that will guarantee no loss, then that is the problem of the Government at that time. I can tell him we know how it can be done and that we could do it tomorrow if there was a need to do it tomorrow, but there is no need to do it tomorrow and there is no need to explain it.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, why does the hon. Member believe that this will not arise in this term of office?

510 Look, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has said that the Provident Scheme is open to the private sector; that you can change, transfer, from the Provident Scheme to the Superannuation Fund; that the Superannuation Fund will be available also to existing civil servants, who will be able to get full commutation. How does he know that, some time in the next few months, a civil servant who retires and commutes the entirety of his pension is not going to knock on his door and say, 'Now keep to your promise and sell me an annuity'?

515 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the reality of that is that it would take a very ignorant civil servant to do that, and I can only suppose that the level of economic ignorance of that civil servant must be matched by the level of economic ignorance of the questioner, if he suggests that that is conceivably possible for anybody that they should have a Civil Service final salary scheme, that they should convert that into a lump sum and then use their lump sum to buy an annuity which would give them a lower income than they had in the first place.

Hon. P R Caruana: It may not be a lower income.

525 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, it will be a lower income. There is no question –

Hon. P R Caruana: Why?

530 Hon. J J Bossano: Why? I will tell him why: because a commutation is based on 8%, that is why, and you cannot get that return. So you are selling something at 8% and then buying it back at 7% or 6% and you make a loss.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, is the hon. Member –

535 Hon. J J Bossano: So what that is saying is if anybody came along with that idea, the advice that he would get was that the annuity that we would be able to offer him would be less than the pension he had just sacrificed.

540 Secondly, I have not said that the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund is for civil servants who go for 100% commutation. I am saying that the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund is for the people who no longer have a final salary pension because he thought it was necessary to bring it to an end because it would be a millstone around the necks of future generations. What we have done is we have produced a smaller millstone around the necks of future generations by the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund, which, until a few days ago, was being condemned as being something that was so exposed that it would ruin the Government, and today it is being condemned as being misleading because it is so safe that it is almost cash!

545 So it is quite obvious that if they think that it is a risk they exaggerate the risk in order to attack what we are doing, and if they think there is no risk, they attack that there is no risk, so as to tell us we are misleading people in saying we are guaranteeing something that is self-evidently guaranteed! Well, if it is self-evidently guaranteed, then all their criticisms until now have been wrong.

550 I can tell the hon. Member that the reason why I am saying it is not going to happen in the next three years is because if somebody was close enough to retirement to join the Superannuation Fund tomorrow after three years' contributions, the amount that he could buy in terms of an annuity would be so little that nobody would do it.

He must remember that the first step that was taken by the Government in giving people the lump sum from the Provident Fund was on the basis that the amount of money that had been accumulated in the 555 Provident Fund was so small that to force people to take an annuity or to take an income stream was wrong and that they should be able to take all their money out. That is how we started moving in the direction of letting people take everything out, when the Government first started the process of removing the requirement for the 25% maximum amount that could be withdrawn, and the argument then, quite rightly, was, 'Look, you 560 are saying to people they have got to buy an annuity with the 75%,' and nobody will sell them an annuity because all they have got is only a couple of thousand pounds saved up. Well, that is all that would be happening in the next few years from new entrants. I do not believe there is going to be a rush of people wanting to switch from one to the other, anyway. It is just something that we have put there as a possibility for those who are interested.

565 If there is anybody in the private sector who wants to use this as a vehicle for their future, for his retirement, on the basis that what is available in the market carries the risk that he puts the money there and loses it, then that is all that we are offering. We are offering people something that is more secure, but more secure with the kind of return that you get on 25-year deals. What people cannot expect is to have a high-risk return on a zero-risk investment.

570 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, that is what your manifesto appears to indicate.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it appeared to indicate it to you.

A Member: And to everybody else.

575 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member thought that that is what it indicated...
First of all, he invents what the manifesto says; then he criticises it because it is not what we are doing; then he accuses us of doing a U-turn because we are not doing what he invented. Well, look, I am afraid he can keep on doing that for as long as he wants, but it will not get him anywhere.

580 The Superannuation Fund that we are offering is considered to be an improvement on what is there today by many people, but we are doing more than that. We are saying to people in the public service, 'You have got the choice of staying with the Provident Fund as it has been until now; you have got a second choice of opting for the improvements that the GSD offered in their manifesto and we are committed to introducing; and, thirdly, you have got the choice of going for what we have put.'

585 What are we being accused of doing? Not giving people enough advice as to which of the three they should choose? Well, look, we are doing more than anybody else has done before. We are doing something that we happen to think is better, but nobody is being forced to take it. They can either stay with what they would have had if the GSD had won the Election, or they can stay with what they used to have until 2011, or they can take what is new in 2012 – and they still have to find fault with it!

590 Well, I can tell the hon. Member that he can rest assured that this can be done, that it will not ruin
Gibraltar and that it will not create massive losses for the Savings Bank, and that if he does not know how it can be done, then I am afraid I am not here, nor any of us are here, in order to give him lessons in economic theory or in anything else.

595 I can tell him that I do not believe I could have made a million advising insurance companies because of what I have said today, but even if I could, I would not have chosen to do that because when I chose to come back in 1972 to serve the people of Gibraltar it was not because there were more millions to be made here than in London, but because it was what I wanted to do with my life. (Applause)

600 Hon. P R Caruana: I was wondering when he was going to deliver his valedictory speech. What I did not imagine was that it would be in answer to a supplementary question in Parliament!

Now, Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member just tell me whether he has said that the Superannuation Fund will be available to the private sector, to employees of private sector companies?

605 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, it was not my valedictory speech, because I have got 19 years left.
(Laughter)

Two Members: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

610 Hon. J J Bossano: What I announced when we launched this fund, which is a fund that is under the Gibraltar Development Corporation, like the other Provident Funds are, is that it will be open without a contribution from the Government, clearly, to any employer that wants to join this, instead of joining the No. 3 Provident Fund, which is the one that was set up by the previous administration for the private sector, or to an individual who is self employed and wants to provide for himself or, indeed, to an employee who wants to have a secure vehicle to provide for his own retirement in an area where the employer does not do it.

615 So, effectively, there are three categories of people in the private sector who, if they wish, can in fact become members of the Guaranteed Superannuation Fund and contribute, but the value will be the value of what they put in, plus the reinvested accumulated interest.

620 Hon. P R Caruana: 'Yes' would have been sufficient.

Therefore, any of the persons he has listed could transfer into this scheme the accumulated capital value in his present pension arrangement by way of transfer – yes, or no?

Hon. J J Bossano: I cannot say a categorical yes or no to that, because – 625 Hon. P R Caruana: Ah, well, because, you see, it is implicit...

Hon. J J Bossano: Because, in fact, I think it depends not just on our willingness to receive the money. The... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

630 Well, I was going to say it does not just depend on that. I have not said we are willing to do it. I have just said it does not just depend on that, but it must also depend on what are the rules in the alternative where their money is now.

In fact, the scheme, as it is set up now, does not... I do not think it is structured now. It may be we may need to amend it to do that, but I think, as it is structured now, it does not actually specify that you can make lump-sum payments irrespective of the amount, because what we are talking about is making regular contributions on a monthly basis. So I am not 100% sure that somebody can say, 'Well, look, I am going to withdraw the money that I have got in another pension fund,' and arrive with £½ million and put it into that. Certainly, it is something we are willing to consider if somebody comes along with that proposal, but I am not 100% sure that the rules, as they are now, include that possibility. It includes the possibility of somebody joining as from the current date, at the moment, as it stands.

640 Hon. P R Caruana: Does he not understand that if somebody can transfer into the scheme with a lump sum he is then in a position – if such a person were approaching retirement age – unlike the civil servant who is unlikely to happen because in the next three years it is not going to happen during this term, because no-one is going to have accumulated...

645 Such a person as we are now discussing could transfer a lump sum from an existing scheme into the Superannuation Fund, retire in two years' time, and come knocking at his door before the next Election, therefore, and ask him to sell him an annuity, and all the diatribe that he gave me before would not apply to such a person.

650 Hon. J J Bossano: I imagine that that is a list of hypothetical possibilities.

Hon. P R Caruana: There is nothing hypothetical about it.

655 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: And it is not a new word that they have discovered...

660 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he is saying do I not agree that it is possible that A will happen, and then that B will happen and that C will happen. It is also possible that Iran may have a nuclear bomb and attack Israel. That is also possible, in which case, nothing is safe any more!

Hon. P R Caruana: Whether it happens or not is hypothetical. The possibility that it can happen is not hypothetical; it is real. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

The Hon. Minister is answering... his answer is hypothetical, but I believe he is willing to continue...

Hon. J J Bossano: So I am saying that the fact that any of those things may happen or may not happen is a hypothetical question, but I will tell him what the answer is: if it happens – which I do not think it will, but if it happens – we would provide the annuity from the Savings Bank for that one or two or three people who decide to do it, and I can assure the hon. Member that we will do it in a way which guarantees that we will not lose money on it.

But I do not think we will have the opportunity of demonstrating to him that he does not know what he is talking about because, regrettably, all those hypothetical situations I do not think will materialise. I would welcome if somebody comes and does it so that we can show him that he does not know what he is talking about.

Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member stands up, I have allowed over half an hour discussion on this particular topic.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am moving on to a new topic, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I beg your pardon?

Hon. P R Caruana: I am moving on to a new aspect.

Mr Speaker: But on the same topic. It cannot be a new topic. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: We have already established what we wanted to establish on annuities.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

I was just going to suggest something: that I would allow one more supplementary in the hope of bringing this whole discussion to an end. It is open to the hon. Member to debate the matter on a separate motion whenever. I am told by the Chief Minister he will make time available to this Parliament as often as required.

Hon. P R Caruana: That is very generous of him indeed.

Mr Speaker, did I correctly understand the Chief Minister to say that these Superannuation Funds would invest in Gibraltar Government bonds and debentures?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I did not. I am just checking I did not say that... I said it would invest in a Gibraltar Government bond, not in a debenture.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I do not know what he thinks the difference is between a bond and a debenture but, anyway, leaving that point just to one side for a moment...

So this will constitute the sale of public debt. In other words, the same way as Government debentures is now. Does the hon. Member not agree – (Laughter from the hon. Chief Minister) Does the hon. Member not agree... But don't worry, I am not questioning him about the level of public debts, about which I am not as concerned as he is. Does the hon. Member not agree that the effect of people getting what is, in effect, their pension fund and using it to buy Government bonds – which is, in effect, Government borrowing instruments which the Government can then spend – is tantamount to the Government spending people's pension pots?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member demonstrates –

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, or no?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I will tell him. The answer is no, because every time (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) he asks us new questions he increases the exposure of his level of ignorance of the subject.

What is he now saying? That for the first time the £300 million deposited in the Government Savings Bank is now public debt – is that what he is telling the House?

720 Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, then, in fact –

Hon. P R Caruana: That is not what I have said; nor is it what he said.

725 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. J J Bossano: Then I have to tell him the contributions to the Superannuation Fund will be in the fund created under the same rules as the existing Provident Fund.

730 If he reads the audited accounts –

Hon. P R Caruana: That is not what I said before.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, it –

735 Hon. P R Caruana: In other words, what he is saying is –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

740 Hon. P R Caruana: On a point of order –

Mr Speaker: Order!

745 Hon. P R Caruana: On a point of order... Mr Speaker, when they rise and say, 'Point of order,' it is a licence for them to say what they feel. Eventually. Thank you.

Mr Speaker: I asked you the point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that would be a clarification of what they said before, upon which I based my last supplementary, but it is not what they said before.

750 When I asked the Member whether the Superannuation Fund would be invested in a Government Savings bond/debenture, he said, 'No, not debenture, bond.' In other words, the Superannuation Fund directly buying Government bonds. That is what he told me and that is what justified my supplementary.

755 If he is now saying that the Superannuation Fund would invest in the Gibraltar Savings Bank and that the Gibraltar Savings Bank will then buy Government bonds, that is a wholly different transaction to the information that was given to me in the last supplementary but one and would not have attracted my last supplementary. It is nothing to do with ignorance; it is about the accuracy of the information that they give me in answer to questions.

760 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the accuracy of the information given is that in the previous answers that had been given to questions it was made clear that the hon. Member was told the reason why the fund is guaranteed is because the fund will invest the money in the Savings Bank. That is in the original answer.

765 Hon. P R Caruana: I asked whether the Superannuation Fund would be invested in Gibraltar Government debentures and the answer was 'yes'. The answer should have been 'no', it would be invested in Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures or bonds. That would have been an answer which would not have invited my subsequent supplementary, but when I asked, I was told that they were investing directly in Government debt, Gibraltar Government bonds.

770 Hon. J J Bossano: No, the answer is no. The answer is, if the answer that we have given misled the hon. Member –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, he did not mislead me. It was the answer.

775 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the answer is as stated originally in the original answer to the question: the fund will invest only in the Savings Bank, and that is why the fund is able to say to people the money that we are investing is, in fact, guaranteed, because the Savings Bank is guaranteed by the Government.

Mr Speaker: I really must invite the Leader of the Opposition to take up my offer to bring a motion if you wish to debate the matter further.
780 We will move to the next Question.

785 Televising parliamentary sessions
Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation

Clerk: Question 208, the Hon. D A Feetham.

790 Hon. D A Feetham: When does the Government envisage that parliamentary sessions will be televised by GBC?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

795 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the intention of the Government is to provide a live stream of proceedings on a dedicated website of this Parliament.
That live stream will also be made available to GBC or to any other interested party. The Government IT Department have already started working on the specification of the cameras and systems required in order to facilitate the webcasting of the work of this Parliament.

800 Hon. D A Feetham: The original question referred to being televised by GBC. Is it the intention, at some stage, for proceedings of Parliament to be televised by GBC, with cameras here in the House?

805 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I have made very clear what the answer to that question is – in other words, that there will be cameras here and that the feed from these cameras will be made available to GBC. That would cause what is happening here to be broadcast by GBC.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understood the answer... I am not trying to be controversial; I just want to understand the answer.

810 I understood that it is going to be broadcast via the internet. Is it going to be also broadcast via conventional GBC broadcasting?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the best way to deal with that question is to explain to the hon. Gentleman what happens in other parliaments. In other parliaments, the parliament itself films its proceedings and makes available the feed to such broadcaster as may wish it.

815 In the United Kingdom, there is a channel that broadcasts what happens in the UK in the House of Commons, but not just in the Commons, also what happens in some of the debating chambers, what happens in the Upper House etc. The feed is made available to the BBC by the parliament.

820 It is our intention that the Parliament should have control of its cameras and make the feed available. The hon. Gentleman will know that there is more than one entity now seeking to broadcast. There are some entities online that want to broadcast news, for example. The feed will be made available to everyone and anyone, whether a broadcaster or otherwise, who is sitting at their desk at work and is minded not just to listen to the proceedings on the radio but to watch us.

825 They might think that there are some handsome devils in this House, or beautiful ladies, that they might like to see and not just listen to! Well, Mr Speaker, they will be able to see them on our website, as well as that night on television if a broadcaster decides to extract some part of the proceedings for the news. Or, of course, one of the broadcasters could also make available on their channel what is being put out on the internet, if they so wished.

830 Hon. D A Feetham: What type of timescale are we talking about?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the first time I talked about televising the proceedings of this parliament was in 2003, when I was first elected so, therefore, to the hon. Gentleman I will say that it is my intention that this should happen as soon as possible.

835 I know that already the IT Department are working very hard on this. I know there are some planned visits as early as next week by experts who have fitted the type of hardware required in other parliaments, and it may be that, therefore, hopefully before the summer we will have the systems in place to allow that, but, Mr Speaker, subject to this caveat: I do not think it is within the gift of the Government to simply say that this should happen. This exploratory work is going on on the basis of co-operation with your Parliament, but we would have to, I think, have a motion of this House before we can actually press the button to televise and 840 allow a camera in here.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, as I have understood the hon. Member, what he has explained is that the filming – to just choose a layman's term – by parliamentary equipment. That will initially be put out on the internet and then the feed will be provided to any other broadcaster such as may want to broadcast it by any 845 other medium – television, for example.

My supplementary is this: the hon. Member is aware that the quality of the broadcasting, the quality of the transmission, the quality of the equipment required for internet transmission differs significantly, or may differ significantly, from that required for the production of a signal which is of sufficiently high quality to be broadcastable by analogue or digital television. Will the hon. Member agree that, if that is the case, the 850 equipment and the systems in place would be such as to produce signal and broadcast of a standard both sufficient for the internet but also sufficient, if different, for broadcasting on analogue and digital television?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not agree with him for technical reasons, but I think we are both wanting to go in the same direction.

855 I think that there are now cameras of the sort that are used for internet broadcasting which are of the same quality – and it is high-definition quality, HD quality – as the cameras that would be used for television broadcasting. The difficulty in getting the quality, Mr Speaker, is very often in the transmission. In other words, when it goes down the internet, there is a lot of quality loss, but our view is that it is possible to give 860 broadcasters – in other words, people who do not want to watch it on the internet – who want to produce television news programmes or live television feeds, a feed before the internet... so that, therefore, if there is any quality lost as a result of the internet here, it is not going to be suffered when people watch the video of it at home, because the HD cameras that we are intending to use, or believe it is possible to use, will be of the quality required for television, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) whether that television is IP television or whether it is broadcast television, digitally broadcast or analogue broadcast television.

865 The hon. Gentleman, I think, will understand my example in this sense: it is possible to watch Prime Minister's Question Time in the United Kingdom on the Downing Street website, but you get there internet-quality video. At the same time, simultaneously, it is possible to watch it on the BBC Parliament channel and some of the other news channels that consider that an event that should be broadcast. That is high-quality, transmission-quality video, and that is what we anticipate providing, those two types of feed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will this be run by the Government IT Department, or is the Government proposing to go out to tender for this to be run by a company in the private sector?

875 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it very much depends on what the anticipated costs may be once we have had an indication of how much hardware is going to be required. It may be that there is a procurement process for third parties to provide and install the equipment, but that maintenance is then something that can be done by the Government's in-house IT Department. So it may be a combination of both of those.

880

Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation
Government premises for relocation

885 Clerk: Question 209, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister confirm whether the Government will be making premises available for GBC for relocation?

890 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 222.

895
Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation
Government action on King Report

900 Clerk: Question 222.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, have the Government yet decided on the best way to proceed in the light of the King Report into GBC?

905 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 209, yes.

In relation to Question 222, the Government had asked that GBC progress the appointment of a CEO designate. As a result, interviews were held and Mr Gerard Teuma was appointed. These were the things... the principal issue for us, Mr Speaker, as a result of the King Report.

910 We are progressing the move to digital as a matter of urgency because this was so delayed by the previous administration that it is now very urgent indeed.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member will agree that the King Report speaks about more than just premises and the need to appoint a permanent CEO. It is about the whole change in the culture and a whole series of restructures and things of that sort... programming.

915 Has the Government decided whether it wishes to pursue any of the aspects of the King Report beyond the ones that he has touched on – premises, switch to digital and appointment of a permanent CEO – which is not even a quarter of the King Report?

920 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is right. That is not even a quarter of the King Report, but he will also agree with me, I have no doubt, that they were some of the most fundamental issues that did arise from the King Report – in other words, the need to move out of premises that are no longer fit for purpose, and I think that, across the floor of the House, we would agree with that finding of Mr King; the need to have a proper management structure, in respect of which the appointment of a CEO designate, given that Mr King's own appointment expires next year, was also a very important matter. Of course, Mr Speaker, all of this pivots around the fact that there needs to be the capacity to broadcast; otherwise there can be no Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation.

925 Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman knows, the most urgent thing now is the move to digital, because if GBC is not digital by 31st December it will not be able to broadcast at all. There will be an analogue switch-off at midnight on 31st December, because that is now required by the EU and by various international agreements to which Gibraltar is a party.

930 Those, therefore, Mr Speaker, are for us the most important aspects of progressing the King Report. It is true, Mr Speaker, to say that there are other aspects of the King Report which we are considering with Mr King himself, who is still with us, and with the management of GBC, in order to ensure that we deliver the best broadcasting that we believe is available to our community.

935

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member agree with me... I will agree with him that, certainly, the switch to digital has now become urgent and was always going to be a priority in 2012.

940 Will the hon. Member agree with me that it is simply too simplistic a view to think that if GBC had always had digital broadcasting and had always had a CEO and had always had spanking premises, it would not suffer from any of the issues that the King Report thinks need attention?

945 In other words, does he agree that, whilst I do not say it is illegitimate for him to start with those three issues, those are not... However important they may be and, indeed, however time urgent some of them may be, they are not what is fundamental about what needs to be re-jigged and restructured in GBC, that it actually goes much more deeper, very often into non-tangible things?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman will not want to agree with me when I tell him that, in fact, a lot of the things that he has talked about have become urgent.

950 Going digital, when zero investment almost has been made to date – in 11 months – is going to be a very hard slog indeed, but I am sure that we will make it, with the goodwill and the investment that is required, not just from the professionals at GBC but also from the regulatory authority.

955 Not having had a CEO, Mr Speaker, or even a general manager since the last general manager retired many years ago, before the 2007 Election, the hon. Gentleman will know, is an issue that he and I have disagreed about since the date of that retirement, when I was asking him, as shadow Member for Broadcasting and he was then Minister for Broadcasting, to go down the route of appointing a general manager. He took this community through a General Election with no general manager of GBC and a rotating headship.

960 Of course, Mr Speaker, it is true that there are other problems at GBC, other than just going digital and the appointment of a CEO designate. Of course, that is the case. That is the case in every organisation, Mr Speaker, but I am very confident that the good people of GBC, the fantastic professionals that we have up there will be able, with the right backing from this Government and the right level of investment, to produce the broadcasting that this community deserves in the second decade of the 21st century.

A Member: Hear, hear.

965

Direct Democracy First session this month

970 Clerk: Question 210, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Chief Minister confirm that the first session of his proposed system of direct democracy will commence this month?

975 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

980 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister state what form this system of direct democracy will take?

985 Hon. Chief Minister: Not at this moment, Mr Speaker, because there are different forms that it will take in different quarters, in order to ensure that it is as accessible as possible to the different people who may be interested in accessing us directly.

For example, it may be that there are some social media sessions which enable people to put questions through social media and for the Government to answer those questions through social media. It may be that there is a more traditional sort of session where the Chief Minister appears on television to answer questions from a live audience or from telephone calls. All of that, of course, will require GBC to be involved, or any other broadcaster that may be interested in carrying it.

990 Mr Speaker, it is very likely that one of the options for the first quarter will have been chosen and announced by the end of next week. It is very likely, Mr Speaker, that we will choose to change the option that we go for each quarter, so that different people who feel more comfortable with different sorts of media will find it easier to access us in each quarter.

995

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member agree – would he agree with me – that, to the extent that he uses GBC as a platform for what he calls ‘direct democracy’, GBC would have an obligation under their charter and statute to balance that with equivalent or commensurate facilities to the other side of this House?

1000

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very happy to consider that with the hon. Gentleman, if he wishes, but of course he is (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) as able to open himself up to questions on Twitter or on Facebook as I am, without engaging GBC in its obligations. But it is an issue that would have to be considered in respect of any aspect of direct democracy that is carried on the national broadcaster, that is a statutory body.

1005

New Union in Gibraltar Support by GSLP activists

1010

Clerk: Question 211, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Government supportive of the attempts by GSLP activists to form a new Union in Gibraltar?

1015

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government respects the right and freedom of association of workers and our policy is to positively engage with all trade unions that exist in Gibraltar.

1020

It is not the policy of the Government to discourage or support the formation of new unions. Freedom of association and the freedom to form unions are fundamental rights.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware that, in fact, the main movers – the ringleaders in relation to this particular union – are GSLP members and at least one GSLP executive member; and is he not aware that GSLP headquarters is also used for the same purpose?

1025

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not recognise any of the pejorative things that the hon. Gentleman is suggesting, (Interjection) but I do have my own personal union card, which still says ‘T&G’ and it is a Unite card.

1030

Hon. D A Feetham: There was nothing pejorative in the question, but does he not accept –

Mr Speaker: The word ‘ringleader’ was pejorative.

1035

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept –

Mr Speaker: The word ‘ringleader’ only applies to someone who is engaged in an activity that is distasteful, at the very least.

1040

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I have to say that that was not my understanding of the term ‘ringleader’ –

Mr Speaker: If it was not intended, then it is understood.

1045

Hon. D A Feetham: But, in any event, does he not accept that, in fact, if he wanted to, he could put a stop to it by instructing his colleagues within the GSLP executive to actually put a stop to the attempt to create a new union? And is it not the case that this is an attempt, in fact, to undermine Unite and its leadership?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, first of all, I do not come from a political party where we tell people what to do.

1050 Second, the freedom to associate and the right to establish unions, as far as I am concerned, is so fundamental that I would never be involved in telling people what they should or should not do.

Mr Speaker, frankly, to put all that into a parcel and present it as an attempt to undermine Unite really is just the hon. Gentleman trying to imagine himself into a better political advantage than the one he is in.

1055 The fact is, Mr Speaker, that I enjoy excellent relationships with all the trade unions in Gibraltar: with Unite, with the Taxi Association, with the GGCA and with the Teachers' Association.

I should stop there, Mr Speaker, and congratulate the Teachers' Association for having achieved, today, 50 years of representation of those teachers in our schools. (Applause)

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will be very disappointed to know that I had dinner last night with Kevin Coyne from Unite, the union, and he came to visit me this morning in my office.

1060 Hon P R Caruana: Did he apologise to you?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, no doubt the hon. Gentleman says that he has excellent relations with Unite and with its leadership. From answers to questions yesterday by the hon. Member to his left, your position is completely in contrast with the position of the hon. Member, Mr Bossano.

1065 Is there a division in the Government in relation to this particular issue and in relation to the position that you, as Chief Minister, are taking and the position that the hon. Member, Mr Bossano... the more aggressive position that the hon. Member, Mr Bossano, is taking in relation to sponsorship of this new union?

1070 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman wants to misinterpret everything he is told.

I was delighted to listen to the debate yesterday after I left and all I heard was that the Hon. Mr Bossano was very rightly stating that he is not the Minister with responsibility for industrial relations – that I am – and that, therefore, I see unions when they want to negotiate directly with the Government.

1075 The hon. Gentleman wants to see division where there is none because it is in his political interest that there should exist division. He wishes we were divided, Mr Speaker. He wishes we were acting against one union in order to favour another so that he could sow his seed of dissent and make it grow, so that it might elevate him into the post that he so covets. It is just not there, Mr Speaker.

1080 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he think that it is appropriate for the former Leader of the Opposition, Mr Bossano, to actually say that the leadership of Unite could not spell the term or the word 'duress'? Does he think that is appropriate? And does he not agree with me that that is indicative of the hostility that Mr Bossano feels towards the leadership of Unite?

1085 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that we say a lot of things across the floor of this House in jest and in the heat of the parliamentary moment, (Interjections) but I must say that, of course, Mr Bossano must have been absolutely right, given that the post of leadership of Unite at the moment is vacant, as he knows, and there is nobody there.

Hon. D A Feetham: Did he discuss the leadership of Unite yesterday with Mr Coyne at the dinner?

1090 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I had a fantastic dinner last night with Mr Coyne. We discussed many things, none of which I am going to refer to the hon. Gentleman. I discussed them, Mr Speaker, with Mr Coyne as a member of the union that he represents and as Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

1095 I must tell him that we had a fantastic dinner and however hard he tries to sow that seed of dissent, it is just not going to take, Mr Speaker. The soil ain't fertile for this.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I did not ask the hon. Gentleman as to whether the swordfish that he had last night tasted good or not. I have asked him whether he has discussed the issue of the leadership of Unite: yes, or no?

1100 May I ask another supplementary question linked to this? Has he, on any previous occasion, written or spoken to Mr Coyne or the UK Unite about the leadership of Unite in Gibraltar?

1105 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to tell the hon. Gentleman what I discuss over dinner with people. I just do not think I am accountable, but I will say this: I did not have swordfish – and I should not be telling the hon. Gentleman because my wife thinks I am on a diet and I am having fish – but I had beef. (Laughter)

I will say this, Mr Speaker: in my capacity as Chief Minister of Gibraltar and in any other capacity, I have not written to anyone about the leadership of Unite. I hope that gives the hon. Gentleman the satisfaction that he is obviously looking for.

1110 Hon. D A Feetham: What about in a previous incarnation?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

1115 Mr Speaker: I do not think that needs answering. It is not a question. Next question.

1120 Overall Government revenue and expenditure
Current financial year as at 31st January 2012

Clerk: Question 212, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1125 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say what is the overall Government revenue and expenditure in the current financial year, as at 31st January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1130 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 213 to 217.

1135 Consolidated Fund to the Statutory Benefits Fund
Payments since 18th January 2012

Clerk: Question 213.

1140 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether any payments have yet been made from the Consolidated Fund to the Statutory Benefits Fund pursuant to his public statement of 18th January 2012?

1145 Consolidated Fund to the Statutory Benefits Fund
Payments to any Special Fund, Government-owned company or statutory corporation since 9th
December 2011

Clerk: Question 214.

1150 Hon. P R Caruana: Question 214 or 217, did you say? Question 214 and 217?

Hon. Chief Minister: Questions 214, 215, 216 and 217.

1155 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see.

Can the Chief Minister say what is the total amount of payments that have been made from the Consolidated Fund to any Special Fund, Government-owned company or statutory corporation since 9th

December 2011, giving the total amount for each?

1160

Aggregate public debt
Breakdown by bank loans, bank and Government debentures

1165

Clerk: Question 215.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister give a breakdown, as at 31st January 2012, of aggregate public debt by bank loans and bank and each different issue of Government debenture?

1170

Aggregate public debt and Government cash reserves
As at 31st January 2012

1175

Clerk: Question 216.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say what were the aggregate public debt and the Government cash reserves as at 31st January 2012?

1180

Gibraltar Savings Bank
Nominal value of debentures or other debt security issued since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 217.

Hon. P R Caruana: And, last but not least, will the Chief Minister say how much, by nominal value, has been issued in debentures or other debt security by the Gibraltar Savings Bank since 9th December 2011, giving a breakdown in respect of each such issue?

1190

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, tentative overall revenue in the current financial year to 31st January 2012 stood at £351.6 million, and the tentative overall expenditure stood at £318.7 million.

No payments have yet been made from the Consolidated Fund to the Statutory Benefits Fund.

No payments have been made to any of the Special Funds since 9th December that were not already approved by Parliament in the estimates and the Budget debate. If any payments above those set out in the Budget are required, these will be provided for in a Supplementary Appropriation Bill.

1200

We will not be providing a breakdown by month, as that is just a snapshot of the internal accounts of the Government, which will be constantly changing. At the end of the financial year, in less than six weeks, the Member opposite will see the position reflected in the estimates. In respect of advances to Government companies, a further £1 million has been advanced since 8th December, when he left office.

In respect of Question 215, Mr Speaker, I will hand the hon. Gentleman a statement with the information requested in a moment. (See following page)

1205

Mr Speaker, as at 31st January 2012, the aggregate public debt stood at £524.4 million. The cash reserves on that date stood at £224.5 million.

I hand the hon. Gentleman a statement with the information requested in Question 217. (See following page)

1210

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, did I correctly interpret the hon. Member's statement of 18th January 2012 to mean that the Government intends, before the close of this financial year, to make a payment from the Consolidated Fund into the Statutory Benefits Fund, equivalent to the shortfall in revenue over expenditure in the Statutory Benefits Fund, not just in this current financial year, but in respect of previous financial years as well?

1215

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I have said – and I think I said it also in the statement that I made to the nation on 18th January – was that it was going to be, in fact, a further £2.5 million that was going to be required. So a total of £10 million will be contributed this year, instead of £7.5 million.

1220

Hon. J J Bossano: To meet this year's...

Hon. Chief Minister: To meet this year's shortfall.

Hon. P R Caruana: So, when he said in his statement about an adjustment in respect of previous years, that is not... The intention behind whatever that statement may have meant was not that in this financial year 1225 the Consolidated Fund would be charged with previous years' 'shortfall'?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. It was that we were going to be making provision as from this year – what we consider to be adequate provision as from this year – and there would be a note below the line in respect of what was required in other years.

1230

Hon. P R Caruana: But his statement, does he not recall, treated separately what was required, in their view, for this year, and then went on to say:

1235

'... and we will be restating, we will be providing an amount in respect of the alleged shortfall...'

– well, 'alleged shortfall'; there was a shortfall of revenue over expenditure –

'...in previous years.'

1240

That is what he said and I am just trying to... The obvious meaning of the words, unless they mean something other than the obvious, is that they were going to make a one-off provision in respect of past years' alleged shortfalls in addition to this year's.

1245

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that he is confusing what I said in respect of companies and what I said in respect of the Statutory Benefits Fund. I am quite happy to read him what I said in respect of the Statutory Benefits Fund so that it is clear. I said this, Mr Speaker:

'The figures presented by Mr Caruana to the Parliament...'

1250

– I say 'Mr Caruana' instead of 'the hon. Gentleman' because that is what I said in my statement –

1255

'... in the estimates did not reflect this as part of the Government's own recurrent spending. Neither does this take into account the reduction in the reserves of the Statutory Benefits Fund, from which we pay old age pensions, in respect of which we will have to increase the provision from £7.5 million by a further £2.5 million required to keep the Fund at the same level at which it was at the beginning of the year. That will further reduce the surplus.'

That is all I said.

1260

Hon. P R Caruana: Carry on.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is all I said.

Hon. P R Caruana: Next sentence.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, then I said:

'The surplus for the current year will therefore be recalculated to give you a true and fully accurate picture by including the recurrent losses of Government companies and by reflecting the additional funding required by the Statutory Benefits Fund.'

1270

Hon. P R Caruana: So, when he lumps that last reference to the Statutory Benefits Fund, the last words that he has uttered, he lumps them with a reference to company balances, both in respect of previous years, leading me to believe that both related to previous years' shortfalls.

1275

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. I think my statement is very clear. He has had an opportunity to reply on the national broadcaster, too. He knows my views; I know his views. I think that, on this, my statement is abundantly clear.

Clerk: Question...

1280

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member say whether Gibraltar Government debentures, as opposed to Savings Bank debentures, are still open for public subscription?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand that they are no longer available.

1285 Hon. P R Caruana: So that, in fact, local savers may now only invest in the Savings Bank, where it does not reckon as public debt, as opposed to in the Gibraltar Government, where it does reckon as public debt, even though the Savings Bank is guaranteed by the Gibraltar Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the position.

1290 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it was a little bit difficult for me to follow exactly which of the questions he was answering.

When he said that he will not give me monthly information, was that in relation to the amount paid by the Consolidated Fund for any special Government or Government-owned statutory corporation? I did not ask for that...

Hon. Chief Minister: That is right, Mr Speaker, it was in relation to that, but I did give him the amount in respect of companies, which was £1 million.

1300 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, but I did not ask for it on a monthly basis; I asked for it as at a certain date. Is he saying that he is going to refuse to answer this question next month?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the advice that I have is that that is a snapshot picture which would change and means absolutely nothing and that, in fact, the contributions to the funds are made at the end of the financial year, and I think that has always been the position.

1305

I think I also said, Mr Speaker, that in six weeks, in effect, he will know what the position is going to be.

Government procurement since 9th December 2011
Goods and services obtained without tender

1310

Clerk: Question 218, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1315 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can Government say what goods and services have been procured by Government since 9th December 2011 without going out to tender?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1320 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member knows, there is currently a backlog of EU directives dating back to 2004 that are pending transposition into Gibraltar law that relate to procurement. In line with its manifesto commitment, this Government will prioritise transposing into Gibraltar law all EU directives on procurement, including those that relate to the procurement of services.

1325 It is anticipated that these directives will be made law very shortly. It is this Government's policy that all goods and services which are above the prescribed tender thresholds set out in those directives are to be put out to tender, as required by law. The Government is not aware, having checked with the Treasury and the Procurement Office, of any goods or services provided for in these laws or above these thresholds which have been procured without going out to tender.

1330 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Members' answer is neither an answer to my question, nor is it consistent with an answer that he gave me in last month's Parliament.

I have not asked him what procurement has been done of goods and services above the value threshold which are mandatory to be by public tender under EU directives. I have asked him what has been... You do not need an EU directive to go out to tender for every amount if it is your policy to go out to tender for any amount.

Last month, he told this House, without reference to EU directives, that it was the policy of his Government that, 'save in the case of urgency and other exigencies' – his exact words – it was the policy of 1340 his Government that all procurements of goods and services should be by tender. That has nothing to do, will he not agree with me, with EU directives? Has the policy, therefore, changed during the last month, such that it is no longer the policy as it was last month that all goods and services will be procured by public tender, save urgency and exigency, to the one that he appears to have described by his answer today, which is that he will go out to tender above the EU requirement threshold when he has got round to doing those laws? Is it last month's, or is that the position today?

1345 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not recognise any inconsistency in what I said last month and what I am saying this month.

In fact, Mr Speaker, I do not believe that we have gone out for any goods or services to be procured that have not gone out either to tender or they have been dealt with in accordance with people who have pre-qualified to make, supply even, services to the Government.

1350 Hon. P R Caruana: The answer is none.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, exactly.

1355 Hon. P R Caruana: The answer to my question is none...

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, therefore what I said to the hon. Gentleman was that, in checking with the Treasury and the Procurement Office, we do not believe that there was any procurement in excess of those thresholds.

1365 Mr Speaker, if this has suggested that the thresholds are only the EU thresholds, then it should not have suggested it because the position is that we will go out to tender for any goods and services that we need to obtain for the Government, other than in cases of urgency or exigency, either with a tender per item or by pre-approving people to provide things for the Government which it would just be impossible to be going out to tender for.

Hon. P R Caruana: But, Mr Speaker, that is not what he has told me in his answer.

1370 My question does not relate to EU directives and what he has told me, when he first answered the question and indeed just repeated, is that he has checked with the Treasury and, as far as he can see, there are no procurements that have not gone out to tender above the threshold that would be required by the EU directives.

1375 My question does not relate... or is not benchmarked against any EU directives. My question is because last time he told me that it was the Government policy regardless of EU directives. EU directives are mandatory tenders above a certain level. He told me last month that it was in any event the Government's policy to go out to tender for everything, even below the EU threshold of mandatoriness except for – I keep on saying it, so that I am not misquoting him – ‘urgency and other exigencies’.

1380 So I am asking him what has been procured by tender to which he can say, ‘I don't know’ or ‘I think nothing’ but [inaudible] so by reference to would have required an EU process under tender. Does he understand my predicament?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand what the hon. Gentleman is saying. I believed I was saying clearly and I am happy to say clearly, nothing has been procured other than by tender or by the pre-tendering procedure that makes services available to Government from people who have pre-qualified.

1385 Hon. P R Caruana: Because the reason why I am asking this question, Mr Speaker, is not because I am particularly interested in this point in what might or might not have been procured by tender, but because last month I did not make a great deal of progress with the hon. Member in extracting from him what he meant by ‘other exigencies’. I can understand, because I have been sitting on that side for many years, that there are occasions where urgency of the need to procure make it impractical for the Government to go out to tender. If 1390 something breaks down, if there is an emergency, there are any number of circumstances of genuine urgency where it would be quite absurd to expect the Government to delay the procurement by the period of time that the tender process requires. That part of his answer last month caused me, therefore, no difficulty.

1395 But I was a little bit concerned by the undefined width of the term 'or other exigencies'. 'Other exigencies' unless further defined could mean anything at all that they think.... So, in other words, emergencies or other exigencies could mean – is capable of meaning – emergencies or whenever the Government decides not to put it to the tender process, and I am just trying to get him to... through an interpretation of his examples – of which there are none, apparently, this last month – but he can do it dialectically across the floor of the House now if he wants to, to try and assist me further with what the Government understands and is there some curtailment, therefore, to the concept of 'other exigencies'?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no intention in this Government of granting contracts for services for many millions of pounds without going out to tender, as was the case before 9th December, when we came into office. It is not the intention of this Government to procure anything other than by tender, unless there is a great urgency or other exigency.

1405

There may be exigencies which are not urgent, Mr Speaker. It is not urgency alone that will drive us to have to procure something by tender, but what I want the hon. Gentleman to understand is that we would have to be in a very difficult position absent urgency, before going down the route of procuring something other than by tender, because we think that is the fairest system and that is the best way for us to ensure that we are getting the best value for money for the people.

1410

Now, he says that he can understand the need on some occasions not to go out to tender. Mr Speaker, I know that he and I have debated in this House things which have been procured for Government which were not procured through tender, not as a result of any urgency. So he himself must understand that there are other exigencies, absent urgency, which sometimes may drive you to have to procure something not by tender. He and I have disagreed about what those exigencies were for him. I hope that if they ever come to us – and it may be that they never do – he and I may not disagree about it being an exigency.

1415

If it is helpful, Mr Speaker, it would have to be, for my Government, 'Man bites dog' that we go out to procure something not by tender for a reason other than urgency.

1420

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I know that that is the stated policy – I have heard it before – of this new Government. When he refers in his answer, unlike the previous Government, absolutely right, it was not the policy of the previous Government – as, indeed, it has never been the policy of any Gibraltar Government before.

1425

Let us leave to one side the question of EU directives. It has never been the policy of any Gibraltar Government – GSD, GSLP, AACR, IWBP before it – to go out to tender for the procurement of professional services. Those professional services, as the hon. Member well knows to his benefit, include legal fees, as it does architect services, as it does engineering services.

1430

Now, this Government is, of course, free to reverse that longstanding position... I think, if he wants, as an aside, in the anteroom or on some other private occasion, I can tell him why I think previous Gibraltar Governments did not go down the tender route for professional services, but that is a different matter. They are certainly free to take a different view.

1435

But will the hon. Member agree with me that the tender process practice is one that if the hon. Members apply, as they say, to everything except urgent matters and over his.... he has not quite said 'over his dead body', but over a very sceptical Chief Minister that would have to be persuaded, as a definition of exigency, will he agree with me that it is reasonable for us then to interpret his answer – which I think does take the debate further than he took it last month – that given the height to which he has raised the threshold – not the urgency threshold; the 'other exigencies' threshold that he has personally just raised it to – it would be legitimate of us in this House to continue to ask him of the occasions upon which he has been persuaded, despite his great scepticism and personal commitment to the contrary, to go down the non-tender route?

1440

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes. And if there is a reason which is grounded in public security or public policy, I would ask him to accept that I should tell him behind the Speaker's Chair, rather than across the floor of the House.

1445

Hon. P R Caruana: Of course.

Hon. Chief Minister: But, look, I want to be accountable for my actions, and it is the hon. Member's job to make me accountable for my actions. I do not want the Government to be spending its money based on preference or favour to any particular person providing any particular goods.

1450 Now, there is a mechanism, which is this pre-authorisation mechanism, which means that people pre-qualify to provide goods and services to the Government. I think that is an important –

Hon. P R Caruana: By tender.

1455 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, that is a tender –

Hon. P R Caruana: Long-term tender.

1460 Hon. Chief Minister: – but it is long-term supply tender, which I think, frankly, works in keeping Government going, in all the things that it needs to be getting which are not exceptional. I know that the stock of wine gums that the hon. Gentleman used to have is running out, and I am assuming we are not going to issue an advert to see who is going to replace them – although again, that is an issue that affects my diet and we may be getting dried fruit instead of wine gums when they have run out!

1465 But, Mr Speaker, otherwise yes, I would expect that this is the sort of thing that, when it happens, is something that we can debate.

Hon. P R Caruana: I do not know whether to interpret that, Mr Speaker, as an admission on his part that he is in greater need of dieting than I am! (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely!)

1470 Mr Speaker, when I have asked him... I am grateful to him for his last substantive answer and I note the degree to which he has put the threshold. When I have asked him for examples today, he has prefixed his answer by saying, ‘I have asked the Financial Secretary’ – or whoever he said he had asked – ‘and as far as I am aware...’ etc, etc. Given the importance that he attaches, according to what he has just said, to the non-urgent out-of-tender procurement being an exception of which he should be persuaded, does he think it is appropriate that all procuring Department heads should be aware of the strength of the Government’s policy position on this matter, that any exceptions therefore should be reported and recorded in his Office, so that the next time I ask him he is able to say, ‘There have been none’ or ‘There have been the following ones’? But if all he can ever tell me – because I realise, where he sits in No 6, he does not see the whole of the Government machinery – if he is always going to come back to this House and say, ‘I have asked, and no-one has told me there have been any’, that is not reliably forensic about whether or not it has happened.

1480 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is the policy of the Government that that should be the case, and it is the set-out policy of the Government, because the hon. Gentleman is asking me, based on the fact that he knows it is the policy of the Government.

1485 I think when we started this debate last time, he was referring to statements in our manifesto before the Election or otherwise, so I would have thought, Mr Speaker, that anybody who is procuring services for the Government is procuring it in line with the Government’s rules for procurement and the policy of the Government. Absolutely, it is something that if somebody is going to go outside these rules, they will have to persuade the political Government – not necessarily me; their Minister who has been present in this debate – that they are going outside the tender procurement process, in order to obtain relevant goods and services for the Government – absolutely.

Paperless Government initiative

Storage, preservation, retrieval and audit of electronic communications

1495

Clerk: Question 219, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1500 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister confirm that its paperless Government... This is at the risk of being called – what was it? (Hon. Chief Minister: Luddite.) A Luddite, yes.

Can the Chief Minister confirm that its paperless Government initiatives will allow and require e-mail correspondence and other paperless communications to be safely stored, preserved and retrieved and audited indefinitely in the future?

1505 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government has in place IT measures within the corporate network to securely store, preserve and retrieve any information held electronically for as long as required – and I will not pretend that has been done since 8th December.

1510 Provisions for archiving and search and discovery solutions are currently being made in order to implement what is called ‘data auditing’. This has been an ongoing improvement, commenced before 8th December. I am advised by the Government’s own IT technicians that these tools will enable the Government to use powerful analytics, in order to comply with regulations, as well as to maintain audit trails, manage and enforce corporate policies on any Government-retained electronic information – which I think, Mr Speaker, is to say ‘yes’ to the question that he has asked, in technical jargon.

1515 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, if you humour a Luddite for a while longer, Mr Speaker, this Luddite has it in his mind that, with a paper file, if somebody wants to review and research and audit and to look at the papers relating to a matter, it is all in a paper file, marked this or that.

1520 Is it implicit in the answer that he has just given me and the technical jargon that he has used in it that these records will be searchable as if they were all sitting in the same file, physically?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, and my experience from using a similar system in private practice suggests that it is actually easier to find when they are in this form, once the system is up and running, than if they are in a paper file because, usually, documents are indexed either in a way that every word on the page is available to search for, or the document – if it is a document not created by a computer, but something scanned into a computer – is given tag words to enable the document to be found when those tag words are put in or it can be found by date order – which is probably the way the hon. Gentleman will go to a file, to look for something that he remembered, in other words, either looking for the specific word or document or looking around the date that it might have been created.

1530 Mr Speaker, it is in my view the right initiative, if we are also going to make archived material available because, as we start going forward and we create new material, it will be easier to archive and make available.

1535 I am quite happy to say to the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that e-mail – at the pain of being called a Luddite myself, which I do not think I am going to encourage – can sometimes be a curse and people can say short things in internal communications – ‘Okay’ or ‘See you later’ – the sort of thing you might not usually have archived and might have been a telephone conversation, which will be there forever.

1540 So people who are using e-mail now need to know that those things will be searchable and available and they need to say to friends that this is a work e-mail address and it is the Government e-mail address that will be the Government’s archive. But, yes, Mr Speaker, it should all be searchable and kept for good in this format.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am grateful to the hon. Member, and will it – I mean it is not necessarily implicit in the fact that it can be done, that it will be done – is it the Government’s intention that, once this system is in place and up and running, which I acknowledge is not yet, that the creation of paper copies will be discouraged, so that the Government is going to try and get used to working without paper, so if somebody sends an e-mail with an attachment, with a document attached, people will be discouraged – or not required, at least – to print them out and put them in a file? In other words, is that the philosophy or the policy? So, because it is searchable and auditable and all that, in order to get the principle – yes, I think he has understood the question – that people will not be expected to keep a paper file as well?

1550 Hon Chief Minister: With this nuance that, operating a paperless office does not mean that you do not print things out ever, because, very often – we are human beings – we sometimes appear to be able to interact better with a piece of paper, if we are checking an agreement, than we can with a screen. So, very often, people, when they are receiving documents that they need to work on, will want to print them at least as working copies and they will not necessarily want to shred that: they may want to put it in a file, in order to 1555 keep it with their notes etc.

So, what is happening already is that people, Ministers in particular, are looking at things on screens where that is viable. It is not, Mr Speaker, that this system is not already in place, it is that it is being improved and I recognise that if it is already in place, it must have been put in place, as a matter of good IT management, before 8th December.

He may have noticed, Mr Speaker, that even in Parliament each Minister is only bringing copies of their own questions in paper form. Copies of questions being answered by other Ministers are being made available to the Ministers – in the old days, people will recall, they all brought copies of everybody else's – on their iPads, so they are able to follow which question I am on and the answer that I am programmed to give on their iPads. Some of them have more –

Hon. P R Caruana: If he will supply iPads to the Opposition, we will do the same!

The Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am perfectly open to an Opposition request that the taxpayer should provide them with iPads. That is absolutely no problem at all. Some of my members are more or less enamoured of their iPads. Most of them have taken to them like ducks to water and we save an amount of paper there.

Mr Speaker, the hope is, and the aim is, not just of this Government, but I am sure of many professional organisations and many governments, to be able to cut down the amount of paper that we use, so far as is reasonable, without affecting how we have records for ever of the things that we are doing and it is in the interests of our community that we should for ever have records of. In fact, the whole aim is to make those records more permanent, more lasting and more easily searchable within the confines of political conventions.

Government advertising
Cost of local media spend since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 220, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say how much advertising by monetary cost has been placed by the Government since 9th December 2011 with (1) the Gibraltar Chronicle (2) the Panorama (3) the 7 Days (4) the New People and (5) any other Gibraltar newspaper or magazine?

And I hope that is not too far from the way he used to formulate the questions.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

The Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government has been invoiced £6,363.85, of which £1,400 has been paid and £3,963.85 is pending payment. Costs by newspapers is broken down as follows since 9th December.

The Gibraltar Chronicle has invoiced £4,404 and had £1,400 paid and £3,004 is pending payment.

The Panorama has invoiced £1,669.85 and that amount is pending payment.

Gibsport has invoiced £290 and that amount is pending payment.

The 7 Days newspaper has not invoiced anything and has not been paid anything and the New People newspaper has neither invoiced anything nor had any advert placed and has, therefore, not been paid anything.

This information is now being made available on a monthly basis on the Government website, worked out on the basis of what has actually been paid and not on the basis of 'monetary cost'. If I could just say to the hon. Gentleman, I think I used to ask what has been paid and when he has put the question in terms of monetary cost, he has made us think whether he was asking us what adverts had been placed, not yet invoiced for and not yet paid, which, I am told, we could not work out.

He may be interested to know that the information which is now on the website actually goes back to the 24th June 2011, the day after he last answered my question. So whoever is interested can continue to trace through the time since I last asked the question in this House, what amounts had been paid to any of the relevant publications.

This, in my view, Mr Speaker, is information that should have been up in January. It was not up in January, it is now February and the hon. Gentleman has had to ask the question for us to realise that it was not on the website. It will now be on the website on a monthly basis, so he can ask questions arising from the data, rather than having to ask for the data.

See following page.

ANSWER

THE HON THE CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker,

The Government has been invoiced £6363.85 of which £1400 has been paid and £3963.85 is pending payment.

Cost by newspapers is broken down as follows.

	Invoiced	Paid	Pending Payment
Gibraltar Chronicle	£4404.00	£1400.00	£3004.00
Panorama	£1669.85	-	£1669.85
Gibsport	£290.00	-	£290.00
7 Days	-	-	-
The New People	-	-	-

This information is now being made available on a monthly basis on the government website worked out on the basis of what has actually been paid and not on the basis of "monetary cost".

Gibraltar Chronicle

Government contribution to occupational pension arrangements

Clerk: Question 221, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1625

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Can the Chief Minister say whether the Government is committed to paying, or intends to make any payment, from public funds towards the past or present occupational pension arrangements of the past or present employees of the Gibraltar Chronicle newspaper or Gibraltar Chronicle Printers?

1630

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no sir.

1635

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member confirm that his 'no' is a comprehensive 'no' on the subject matter, and not 'no' to the question as formulated. In other words, that it is not the Government's intention to fund in any way, directly or indirectly, the pensions liability of a company that it does not own, such as the Gibraltar Chronicle?

1640

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, although I should only be answering the question as asked, but his interpretation is correct.

1645

Government decision on proceeding
Runway tunnel and new power station

Clerk: Question 223, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1650

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker... no.

Clerk: 223.

1655

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the Government has yet decided whether it will proceed with (1) building the tunnel under the Eastern Beach end of the runway and (2) a new power station at Lathbury Barracks Parade Ground?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1660

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in respect of the project relating to the tunnel under the runway, the Government is going to tender for the completion of the works. This will require an EU procurement procedure.

1665

In respect of the proposed new power station at Lathbury Barracks Parade Ground, the Government is in advanced negotiations with the joint venture partners, Volker Stevin Construction Europe and ETDE S.A., to determine whether we will proceed with the project as presently envisaged, or with modifications.

1670

Hon. P R Caruana: I acknowledge two things. (1) the conversation we had last week about legal implications and I also acknowledge the fact that because the Government goes out to tender, does not mean it is obliged to proceed with actually carrying out the project.

Can I ask the hon. Member, subject to those two caveats, whether the answer means that, in principle, they have decided, as a matter of policy, to proceed with a power station, if the price is right, can be right, can be made right, in their view and a tunnel, if the price is one that they are happy to accept on the conclusion of that tender? So what I am trying to find out is whether there is now political commitment to the concept of a tunnel proceeding and the need to build a new power station at Lathbury Barracks?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the issue in respect of the tunnel, really, has always been cost and I know it must also have been cost, before 8th December, because the contract to do it for £30 million went pear shaped and the hon. Gentleman knows I have discussed that with him.

1680

So cost is an issue. I think you would find unanimity in Gibraltar that a tunnel would be the preferred option, as long as it is affordable and it may be that we have to have an argument about what is or is not affordable in the future but, in principle, we believe a tunnel would be the best option for people to cross the runway vehicularly.

1685

In terms of the power station, Mr Speaker, cost is also very much the leading consideration and he knows we have differences as to what the appropriate cost of that, perhaps, should be and that is why we are discussing these issues, but there are, of course, other questions which are relevant in respect of the power station, not least, complying with European environmental directives and, in any event, wanting to find the best method for generating electricity in the safest and most secure fashion for our community. It may be that we do not disagree with decisions that the hon. Gentleman made before the Election, or it may be that we do, once we have had these further negotiations and we have seen what further options might have been available to him. Or, Mr Speaker, because this is an area, which I acknowledge is in flux, if technologies have moved on from the time when he commissioned a report into the issue and he was advised in respect of one particular technology.

Economic interests of Gibraltar
Justification for additional office accommodation

Clerk: Question 224, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1700 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether he believes that the economic interests of Gibraltar require that additional office accommodation be built?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1705 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government believes that additional office accommodation will be required as new business is attracted to Gibraltar. The Government will not, however, finance the new development of office space by private developers.

1710 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, my question was not aimed at the second part of his question, which would put him in a very awkward spot, given how critical they were of the previous Government when, as a last resort, we indicated that we would be willing to do it. But the first half of the answer is, really, the one that I was hoping to explore because, Mr Speaker, it begs the very question that I think is at stake here.

1715 The hon. Member has said, in answer to the question, 'Can the Chief Minister say whether he believes that the economic interests of Gibraltar require that additional office accommodation be built?' – he has said, effectively, yes, as new businesses are attracted, office accommodation will be required, as new businesses are attracted to Gibraltar.

1720 Will the Chief Minister agree with me that precisely the point is that there is a chicken and egg situation and that the chicken and the egg need to resolve their differences in the opposite way to the way that he has just described in his answer because, if accommodation is only available as businesses are attracted to Gibraltar, they will never be attracted to Gibraltar, because the availability of suitable office accommodation is one of the factors that businesses take into account, in deciding whether to put Gibraltar on the shortlist of alternative locations, of various possible locations, for their business? This is why the previous Government became so concerned, because the private sector was, for banking crisis reasons, unable to obtain bank funding for it and we were being told that insurance companies and other economic activity was finding that there was insufficient quality of business accommodation.

1725 Hence the question, designed to get to the conclusion of my urging the Government to take the view that a stock of office accommodation, a stock of suitable type of office accommodation needs to be available speculatively in order to attract businesses to Gibraltar, rather than only be provided as businesses are attracted to Gibraltar, which is too late for the business to actually come here.

1730 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a chicken and egg situation. Is it, if you build it, they will come, or is it that if you do not build it, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) they can never come.

1735 Hon. P R Caruana: They cannot come.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we built it. He turned it into a hospital! (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

1740 Therefore, Mr Speaker, the issue, really, is this. Is it that the private sector cannot bank any of its projects to build offices. Well, Mr Speaker, we do not think that is the situation at the moment and we do not think there has been a dramatic change since 8th December. In fact, all the evidence I have seen suggests that there is more than one project to build offices which is likely to be taking off very soon indeed, although one project, which should have been a flagship, may not take off.

1745 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, we are talking about the supply and demand equation today, where the economy of Gibraltar has tripled in size from when the days of the office building to which he is referring had lain vacant for many years and would have lain vacant for many more years in an economically unviable fashion for its then owners.

The question is that as he knows that there is a two or three-year lead from an office development being conceived and commenced to it being available for occupation.

1750 I am not pressing the hon. Member as to why he has not built any offices yet; I am simply trying to establish consensus with him that one of the obstacles at present to any success that the Hon. Mr Licudi may enjoy in attracting more gaming companies to Gibraltar, if that is what the Government wants to do, or new banks or insurance companies or any other financial [inaudible] Gibraltar, his success will be in vain if, when they get here and come to look, they cannot be physically accommodated in office space and therefore go 1755 elsewhere.

This is not an attack on the Government; I am simply sharing with them our experience over the last 18 months or so in Government, that the chicken-and-egg equation has been determined by the [inaudible]. People come, look, see the office accommodation that is available – there is always a little bit – but it is not what they are looking for and therefore cross Gibraltar off the line. One of the things we need to put in place – will he agree with me – is somehow encouraging private sector development – which I agree with him is by far the most preferable way of doing it – to get on with building these offices, so that whatever success the Government has in attracting additional business to Gibraltar can actually be accommodated?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I think he is asking me to agree with something that I can certainly agree with, which is that we can encourage private sector development of more suitable office space. But, of course, private sector development will do so when it considers there will be a market there and not to provide a bank of offices for Gibraltar.

But he says rightly, Mr Speaker, that there is a three- or four-year lead to the development of offices, and he says rightly, Mr Speaker, that there is not at the moment a bank of office space. Well, Mr Speaker, that is the position that we inherited two months ago from the Government that he was leading.

So without the need to get into something which might be less than a convivial discussion about it, where we can agree that private sector developers should be encouraged to develop offices for the expansion that we expect there will be Gibraltar's economy in the next four years, what we are not going to do – and this is a clear dividing line between us – is help them in financing it, by providing them with cash. That is something that the hon. Gentleman suggested he might be prepared to do as a joint venture partner or as an equity investor in one particular project (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and we said at the time, and we maintain, that that will not be the tack that we take.

Short of that, can there be agreement across the floor of the House, that there should be private sector development of office space encouraged by Government and Opposition? Well, yes, Mr Speaker. He obviously agrees with us that Gibraltar is going to expand quite substantially in the coming four years, and we are going to need it. I am grateful for his... I will not call it 'U-turn', I will just say 'support'!

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is not correct. The previous Government never intended to provide 'cash' as he calls it. We were not offering to finance a private property development. In fact, we made it perfectly clear that we were not willing to do that.

What we were willing to do was to take party, as joint venture equity partners, on a matching basis. In other words, a public investment in offices, just as there is public investment in many things. I have to say that... Will the hon. Member not agree with me that too hard and fast a commitment to the view that he has just expressed is capable of becoming illogical and irrational? This idea that there are no circumstance which the hon. Members can be persuaded that it would be an appropriate use of public funds to assist or participate as an equity investor in the building of offices, so that, for example, if the Government was certain that the economic prosperity and development and sustainability of our economy were being constrained, held back or prejudiced by the lack of offices – which may not be due to the fact that developers do not see demand, but simply that banks, because they have got their own balance sheet problems, are simply not lending for property developments, regardless of what demand there may be for the finished product; that, in those circumstances, the Government will continue, anchored in the view that better to let the economy of Gibraltar suffer structural macroeconomic damage than do whatever may be necessary to provide you with the office space that it needs.

I agree that it is much better... governments are not in the business of building offices; but governments are in the business of ensuring the success of our economy. And if the success of our economy, for reasons outside the Government's control meant that it had to resort to the extraordinary exigency of making itself an office property developer, does he not agree that in those circumstances, it would be the right thing to do?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in the very exigent circumstances that the hon. Gentleman describes, yes, it would be the right thing to do. We do not recognise that that has happened in Gibraltar in the past four years and that he was put in that position, when he was about to make an equity investment – which is providing cash, Mr Speaker, whether we express it one way or another.

You see, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) we do not see the position developing in the way – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

1810 I am not suggesting that the hon. Gentleman was a lender, Mr Speaker. (Hon. P R Caruana: Thank you.) You provide cash when you are an equity investor as well.

1815 Mr Speaker, but I do not see the position being as the hon. Gentleman posits, for reasons that he is probably in a better position to understand than me, because there are two particular types of office development that he will know of, because they have not arisen in the past eight weeks, which are very likely to take off, which do not rely on bank financing, and which would provide the sort of office environment that he and I might think is relevant in the future.

1820 Mr Speaker, there is, of course, the Government is not in the business of building offices, because we are not developers. We are in the business of building other things. We build industrial parks, which include some offices; we build homes for rent or co-ownership; but investing in the project that the hon. Gentleman was thinking of investing in, simply did not enjoy the confidence of us when we were on the opposite benches, and it would not enjoy our support today as a Government, in particular given that we know that there are two projects in the pipeline at different levels in that pipeline, that are likely to come to fruition and are likely to provide the sort of accommodation that the hon. Gentleman thinks is appropriate, and I agree.

1825 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member not acknowledge that the reason why the previous Government did not proceed with that investment...? The previous Government's position was always that, as a last resort, it would invest public funds to ensure that the economy of Gibraltar did not suffer. For two years, we were unable to find a single developer willing to commit to start an investment, in the knowledge that even when they had started, it would take them three years to bring it online.

1830 That position was publicly abandoned by the Government – does he acknowledge, precisely when the proposed development that he has just referring to came on line? And he may recall, he was present at Gibraltar Day in London last year, when I said that the Government was in negotiations which would result in it not having to proceed as a developer itself. That is a project facilitated by an agreement, which the Government has also been highly critical of in the last few weeks – one of the two projects in question is that.

1835 I do not know if that is the project he had in mind or the other one, more in Queensway. Both projects are good projects. Both deserve to be supported and encouraged, and I agree entirely with the hon. Member if both... perhaps if one of those – just one of those – proceeded, then it would not be necessary for the Government to invest public funds.

1840 A Member: Is there a question there?

Mr Speaker: Will he acknowledge?

1845 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am not able to say when the hon. Gentleman decided not to invest and what was happening at the time, behind the impenetrable curtain. But what I will say is that we are discussing what is happening today, and look, in these circumstances, we do not believe we are in the last resort.

1850 We do not necessarily accept what the hon. Gentleman has said about the one issue that has been the subject of a public dispute between us outside of this House, in respect of one particular office development, but I will only say this, Mr Speaker: I was in Gibraltar Day in London last year, and I have extended an invitation already publicly for the Leader of the Opposition, whoever he or she may be, to be there this year, too – something that was not a courtesy extended to me or to my predecessor.

1855 Clerk: Question –

Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible] refer to the United Nations? No?

1860 Hon. Chief Minister: No.

1865

New air terminal
Cleaning costs

Clerk: Question 225, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1870

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say, what was the cleaning cost of the new air terminal in respect of (1) cleaning carried out before it opened for arriving passengers and (2) the weekly cleaning costs in respect of the period from the date of its opening for arriving passengers to the current date and, in the case of the latter, give a break down by week?

1875

In other words, the weekly cost after opening, and the cost before opening.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if it is of assistance to the hon. Gentleman, I am going to read what is here, but then I am happy to give him a copy of what I am going to read.

Mr Speaker, the information available to the Government is as follows and it straddles the two administrations:

1880

The cleaning carried out before the new air terminal opened for arriving passengers, assuming the hon. Member means from the date the terminal was handed over to the Government, was handled by Dragados as part of their contract. The cost to the Government of the cleaning on the days the airport was open for pre-election tours was handled by GJBS Ltd at a total cost of £35,889.

1885

The invoiced weekly cleaning costs in respect of the period from the date of the opening of the airport for arriving passengers to date are as follows:

For the first week, from 26th to 27th November – that is just one day, because of the way the weeks have been worked out – £280.80.

For the second week, from 28th November to 4th December 2011, £904.80.

1890

Week 3, from 5th to 11th December, £904.80.

For the fourth week, from 12th to 18th December 2011, £904.80.

For the fifth week, 19th to 25th December, £748.80.

For the sixth week, 26th to 31st December, £904.80.

I think there is one day missing in the other week because, on Christmas Day, the terminal is closed in Gibraltar.

1895

We have not been invoiced for daytime cleaning for January and February to date. The weekly cost has increased to £1,453.60 per week, as the cleaning hours have increased due to the cancellation of the night-time cleaning contract service provided by GJBS and that was cancelled on 9th January 2012.

1900

A night-time cleaning service was contracted by the previous Government through GJBS Ltd during the public viewing days. The rates were based on a short-term contract basis and included what I am told was a mark-up by GJBS Ltd. An invoice for the initial period of arrivals of operations from 25th November to 10th December was expected for £88,281.90. That is an astonishing figure for two weeks of night-time cleaning contracted by the previous administration.

1905

This figure was challenged by the new Government. As a result of this, GJBS Ltd have reviewed the matter, and the invoice for the longer period of 24th November 2011 to 8th January – so in other words, not from 25th November to 10th December, but from 24th November to 8th January – is now £122,840.13.

The night-time cleaning service was cancelled on 9th January 2012, as I have just told the House.

ANSWER

THE HON THE CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker,

The information available to the Government is as follows:

1. The cleaning carried out before the new air terminal opened for arriving passengers, assuming the Hon member means from the date the terminal was handed over to the Government, was handled by Dragados as part of their contract. The cost to the Government of the cleaning on the days the airport was open for pre-election "tours" was handled by GJBS Limited at a total cost of £35,889.00
2. The invoiced weekly cleaning costs in respect of the period from the date of the opening of the airport for arriving passengers to date is as follows:-

		Daytime
Week 1	25 th to 27 th November 2011	£280.80
Week 2	28 th November to 4 th December 2011	£904.80
Week 3	5 th to 11 th December 2011	£904.80
Week 4	12 th to 18 th December 2011	£904.80
Week 5	19 th to 25 th December 2011	£748.80
Week 6	26 th to 31 st December 2011	£904.80

We have not been invoiced for daytime cleaning for January and February to date. The weekly cost has increased to £1,453.60 per week as the cleaning hours have increased due to the cancellation of the night time cleaning service, provided by GJBS Limited, on 9th January 2012.

3. A night time cleaning service was contracted by the previous Government through GJBS Ltd during the public viewing days. The rates were based on a short term contract basis and included a mark up by GJBS Ltd. An invoice for the initial period of arrivals operations (25th November to 10th December) was expected for £88,281.90. That is an astonishing figure for two weeks of night time cleaning contracted by the previous administration. This figure was challenged by the new Government. As a result of this, GJBS Ltd have reviewed the matter and the invoice for the period 24th November 2011 to 8th January 2012 is now £122,840.13. The night time cleaning was cancelled on 9th January 2012 as I have just told the House.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is precisely that presentation – that misrepresentation – of statistics that appeared –

1915

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker!

I think we have had an afternoon where we have been able to put points to each other which are political points in a political way; but to say that I have misrepresented anything, when I am providing the hon. Gentleman with figures that I have been provided by those that operate the terminal for the Government, I think starts to stray into the area where we are going to have arguments which we do not need to have.

1920

Mr Speaker: Does the Leader of the Opposition wish to reconsider – ?

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I wish to be allowed to finish my answer. Then he will understand...

1925

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I wish to be allowed to finish my answer and then he will understand that it is not quite –

A Member: It is a question, not an answer.

1930

Hon. P R Caruana: The question. I beg your pardon.

It is precisely that distorted representation, then, if he does not like the word 'misrepresentation', it is precisely that distorted representation of the comparability of figures which he has just read out which were contained also in the Government's Press Release that has motivated me to ask this question.

1935 Does the hon. Member not understand that to compare the cost of cleaning, post opening, once the cleaning from a building site to a clean terminal had been carried out, and then comparing it to the weekly cost after that – which was just cleaning the daily soil, the daily dirt and rubbish – is not a fair comparison? That before it opened to tender, there was not the three, four, five or six – I do not know what the contingent is that are bought in now to do the regular cleaning – there was an army of cleaners required to clean a terminal which had been a building site and convert it into the condition in which it could open for business and that, beyond that, the cleaning contract was to maintain it clean, and not to clean it. Does he, therefore, 1940 acknowledge that to compare what is, in effect, a lump sum deployed over a number of days is not comparing apples to apples, when the other apple is the daily cost of maintaining it clean?

1945 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman has got the problem that the airport contract has gone pear shaped for him, but we are comparing apples with apples.

I said specifically that the cost of cleaning the terminal, or that part of the terminal that was handed over to the Government, given the previous administration's angst to receive something to operate down there before the Election and to operate tours which operated as almost a live manifesto, that cost, Mr Speaker, of going from building site to keys handed over, was handled by Dragados as part of their contract. I have not given a figure for that, Mr Speaker.

1950 Then, the Government – and, of course, Mr Speaker, I assume that when a contractor hands over a site, he does not hand it over as if it were something to hand over where you could eat your lunch off the floor... then the Government spent an amount of money in getting it into the condition that the then Government wanted it to be for these pre-Election tours. That cost (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) £35,889... That cost £35,889!

1955 So, the contractor cleans it – we do not know for how much – and hands it over. It is perfectly normal, Mr Speaker, that when you get a building back from a contractor you might think it is not as clean as I want it to be before I can start operating it or showing it off as my flagship project – and that cost £35,000!

Mr Speaker, that is a lot of money to spend on cleaning, but it is a quarter, or just over a quarter of the £122,000! Let me just get that right: £122,000 that it cost to clean the terminal from 25th November – open for arrivals from that day, Mr Speaker – to 9th January because, of course, Mr Speaker, if it is in the politician's mind that he is definitely going to open at least a part of this airport before the Election, not just for tours, not just for 'manifesto live', but for operations, for arrivals... well, Mr Speaker, look, I perfectly understand that you are operating in a building site and that it costs a lot of money to clean a building site every day. And it has cost a hell of a lot of money, Mr Speaker – £122,000 – until a more sensible Government grabbed the bull by the horns, found a different way of ensuring that the terminal was cleaned. It now costs, instead of £122,000 for the seven-week period between 25th November and 9th January... it now costs £1,453 a week.

1960 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can say, Fabian – or here, I suppose, he should call me 'hon. Member' – you need to multiply what it costs per week now, by the number of weeks for which it has cost £122,000, to compare like with like. Well, you know what, Mr Speaker, I might be prepared to agree with that. He can do it himself, Mr Speaker. He can multiply £1,453 by seven and he can compare that to the £122,000.

1965 It is likely, Mr Speaker, that he is going to find that he has spent – or he gave orders for spending – £112,000 more than had to be spent to keep that terminal clean and open for arrivals, Mr Speaker. (Interjections)

1975 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: That is, in my view, Mr Speaker, the most obvious case of financial neglect that we have found since we were elected into Government in respect of this terminal to date.

1980 But, Mr Speaker, I am also happy to tell him... and he will be very happy to learn that I took another executive decision in respect of this terminal, and that was to switch the lights off at night, because he wanted them switched on for it to look tremendously beautiful. I said, 'Look, the environmental issues matter more to us. You can switch the lights off when there ain't anybody there.'

1985 A Member: Hear, hear. (Applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether he is saying that the GJBS, which is a Government-owned company, went out to pay £122,000 for what should have cost them £35,000. I do not know whether that is what he is saying.

1990 Or I do not know whether he is saying that I said to GJBS, 'No, even though it can be done for £35,000, go out and find somebody that will charge you £122,000.' I do not know what nature of allegation he is making against the management of a Government-owned company that was simply instructed to clean the terminal. But, certainly, some sort of allegation he is making because he cannot possibly believe that I personally – or any Minister – engaged themselves in the sub subcontract, given that JBS was a subcontractor of the contractors (Interjection) and the cleaner was a subcontractor of the subcontract...

1995 I do not know if he is suggesting whether Government Ministers engaged and found and negotiated with the cleaner. So, given that he cannot possibly believe that, he is either making the most serious of allegations against the management of JBS or he is continuing – and I would prefer to think it was the latter – to fail to understand the point that I am making, and that is that the process of cleaning a building the size of this air terminal from the moment that the Government were allowed access to it in order to prepare for the 'live manifesto', and in order to prepare to have as many voters as possible see it before polling day, that that, as a one-off cost which would have had to be done at some stage and was advanced, according to him, for electoral purposes, that that is a one-off cost which cannot fairly be considered, which cannot fairly be compared with the cost during any period starting after that effort had been made, and that effort was not a one day effort or a one week effort... It took quite a long time to get the building into that clean enough condition. It was not done by 100 women in one night.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is not just women who clean –

2010 Hon. P R Caruana: No, mostly... No, I think when I used to go down there were only women there. (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, clearly the hon. Gentleman and I have different views of the world. You see, I just do not think it is women who clean.

2015 Hon. P R Caruana: No, I haven't said –

Mr Speaker: Order. (Interjections) Order.

2020 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you see, the hon. Gentleman is doing what he best does politically, which is to try and pretend that he can talk about something other than the very serious inheritance that he left this Government.

2025 You see, Mr Speaker, I have not made any allegation against my great friends at GJBS who do such fantastic work for the Government and for the community. I have made, in fairly transparent form, Mr Speaker, an allegation of negligence and financial mismanagement against him (Interjections) although, of course, Mr Speaker, he would rather now say that the airport terminal had nothing to do with him; that he wasn't the Clerk of Works, that he wasn't on top of everything that was happening there, that he wasn't the person who came down there and threw his hard hat on the floor when it did not look like he thought it should look in time for the Election, Mr Speaker! (Interjection)

2030 He was the Clerk of Works. He knew everything that was happening. I sent him back his boots, Mr Speaker – because he left them at 6 Convent Place – that he used to use when he walked on site on all of these projects. (Laughter)

2035 Mr Speaker, it is impossible for him to wriggle out of this. The sum of £122,000 is not the sum that it cost to get the terminal into the state in which it could start to operate for arrivals. Let me make it clear. I know he is clever enough to understand it, but he is trying to obfuscate so that people do not understand what he did.

The sum to get the terminal up to scratch for arrivals is (a) an indeterminate amount paid by Dragados in handing over the site and cleaning it, such as they might understand cleaning to be; and (b), £35,889; and then it opens for pre-Election tours.

2040 Mr Speaker, from that moment on, from the moment that the terminal is open for arrivals, the cleaning, the continued cleaning – so therefore it must have clean enough to open for arrivals, otherwise the hon. Gentleman opened up a place that was not clean enough for arrivals in his haste to open something up in time for the Election...

From the date that the terminal opened for arrivals and was operating until we grabbed the reins and stopped it, for the seven-week period between 25th November to 9th January, the cost of cleaning overnight – in other words, the same areas cleaned each night – was £122,000 – £122,000! Mr Speaker, they can divide by seven and they can get the weekly amount. That is what it cost, and it would have continued to cost that per week if we had not stopped it.

It now costs £1,453 per week, and the terminal is clean and open for arrivals, although, Mr Speaker, we have made no bones of the fact that we considered closing the terminal for arrivals because it is only in the mind of the hon. Gentleman in his pre-Election frenzy than it can have appeared reasonable to have two airports operating within 50 yards of each other – one for arrivals and one for departures – just because he needed them to be open in time for the Election!

But, in terms of a financial cost, it is absolutely clear: what was done for £122,000 in seven weeks, we are now doing for £1,453. Therefore, Mr Speaker, if we had done it from 25th November to 9th January, it would have cost £10,000. The shortfall to the taxpayer, Mr Speaker, is £110,000 because the hon. Gentleman wanted to open a terminal for arrivals in time for the Election.

Mr Speaker, there are so many things that we could have done with that money that would have been better for the community. Forget our arguments about the cost of the terminal – just that cleaning cost. (Applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, then, having heard the hon. Member again, does he agree with me that he obliges me to change my mind: that, of the two options that I gave him before, making serious allegations against the management of JBS or not comparing apples with apples, when I told him that I would prefer to think that it was the second, I have got to change my mind, having heard him now. It has got to be first. He must be making serious allegations against the persons that he says are his ‘great friends’ because, Mr Speaker –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a point of order –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, no.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is not up to you to decide.

Mr Speaker: I have to listen to the point of order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has put that point before and I have made very clear that I am not making allegations against anyone at JBS. I have said the opposite. I specifically spelt it out.

He is not allowed, Mr Speaker, to put words into my mouth, in particular in respect of something as serious as saying that I am making an allegation against someone when I specifically told the House that I am not. If he wants to tell the House that I am lying, he can put a motion. I can tell him now what the result would be.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am telling the House that there are two possible explanations for what he is saying in it: (1) that he is making serious allegations against those who administer and issue the contract; or he is not comparing apples with apples, because he must know that I personally... I know that he is desperate to make this stick to me personally, but he must know that I personally neither negotiate nor award... (Interjections) nor find cleaners, and that what Ministers do is say to the Government’s company, ‘Get the air terminal clean,’ and if the person to whom the Government says ‘Get the air terminal clean’ chooses to do something as outrageous as he appears to think what they did is, then either they are incompetent – serious allegation – or, worse, even more serious allegation. It is not me or any other Minister that knew of, or agreed to, or brought about, or procured a situation, where something that he thinks should cost one-seventh of what it actually cost, actually cost seven times more than that, and because however many times he may, for political effect, repeat the allegation as if it was being an allegation made against me, he must know that I am responsible in the sense that I was responsible for everything that happened in the Government or under the Government, but that I am not directly the cause of that situation being the case, however politically responsible I may be for it as the head of the whole Government organisation, and as he continues to insist that this is some outrageous act, it can only be an outrageous act by those who perpetrated it, not by those who simply asked for the terminal to be clean and then find that it costs what the hon. Member thinks is outrageous.

2100 I have to say one more thing to the hon. Member.

Hon. Chief Minister: You have to answer the point of order.

2105 Hon. P R Caruana: I have to ask, yes, whether he will agree with me.

Mr Speaker: What?

Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.

2110 Hon. P R Caruana: I will convert it into a question, don't worry.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I thought the hon. Gentleman was going to reply to my point of order.

2115 Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Gentleman not agree –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: Look, Mr Speaker, I have sat here –

2120 Mr Speaker: No, no –

Hon. P R Caruana: As a point of order, I have sat here quietly listening to all the diatribe and allegations and bitterness that he has just uttered. I have not jumped up like a nervous jack-in-the-box trying to prevent him from uttering what he has done. He should do the same –

2125 Hon. G H Licudi: No.

Hon. P R Caruana: – and be man enough –

2130 A Member: You just ask the questions. We will say whatever we want.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I am asking a question, but he will not let me finish it, Mr Speaker. It takes so long because he tries to stop me asking it, (Interjection and laughter) because he does not want me to populate the question.

2135 Mr Speaker: Well –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker –

2140 Mr Speaker: Before the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition carries on –

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

2145 Mr Speaker: – a point of order has been raised –

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

Mr Speaker: – and I have to rule on that.

2150 I was waiting to hear the question. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Well, exactly. There has been a very long preamble but I am promised... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Since I am promised that a question is on its way, and right now... The question, I hope, will be phrased correctly, which will help me to overturn the point of order.

When I hear the question I will be in a better position to rule on the point of order.

2155

Hon. P R Caruana: I see, yes.

Well, Mr Speaker, the question is this... I will go straight to it without any preamble whatsoever.

Mr Speaker: Well, you have had the preamble already. (Laughter)

2160

Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member not agree that, thanks to the personal and careful interest taken by Ministers in the GSD Government in the execution of Government projects, nobody has had to suffer the consequences of the gross negligence that resulted from the careless execution by the previous GSLP Government of almost all of their projects?

2165

Hon. C A Bruzon: That is irrelevant.

Mr Speaker: Before the Chief Minister answers the question (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Yes, but dealing now with the point of order which the Hon. Chief Minister raised, is it now clear from the questioner that he is not attributing to the Chief Minister any blame on the –

2170

Hon. Chief Minister: Making an allegation.

Mr Speaker: – or any allegation on the members of GJBS, as that is the issue which the Hon. Leader of the Opposition started his question with and that is what caused the Chief Minister to rise.

2175

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I have said, and I have repeated after he has made the point of order, that the things that he is accusing me of can only mean one of two things, and it is his choice, and I refuse to withdraw one of the two choices. Facts are only capable of two explanations and I am entitled to identify what those two explanations are, Mr Speaker.

2180

He cannot say to me that I have perpetrated the most serious example of public financial dereliction that he has found, and expect me to accept that as if I was personally the perpetrator of the facts that he believes resulted in that dereliction, and when I say to him that it cannot possibly mean that unless you are saying this, he says ‘No, if you are saying that, you are making a serious allegation.’

2185

Mr Speaker, debate in Parliament is not possible. I am saying to him that, as he knows that I am not the person that agrees the price of the cleaning contract, he must either be making all the suggestions that he is making against me about the person who does allocate the cleaning contracts, or he agrees with me that he is not comparing like with like.

2190

Mr Speaker: The question has moved on since then.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that we have to deal with the hon. Gentleman as the punch-drunk clown he is, (Laughter) drunk on sour grapes that have made the wine –

2195

Hon. P R Caruana: That is unparliamentary language.

Hon. Chief Minister: As unparliamentary as calling somebody a ‘nervous jack-in-the-box’.

Mr Speaker: Order! (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

I am well aware of the –

2200

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, that is your view.

Mr Speaker: I am well aware of the Hon. Chief Minister’s desire to generally lower the tempo in this House and I am sure he will agree with me (Interjection by the Chief Minister) that the language ‘punch-drunk clown’ does not really help.

2205

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, it is not... On a point of order –

2210 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in that case –

Hon. P R Caruana: It is not a question of it not ‘helping’. It is a question of it being unparliamentary language. Unparliamentary language is not either just the use of the word ‘lie’ or any word which offends him which is used from the Opposition benches, which appears to be the emerging rule.

2215 The people of Gibraltar have elected me to the office of Chief Minister four times in a row, which is greater than the number of months that he has been in office for the first time. Unless he is insulting the people of Gibraltar by thinking that they are capable of repeatedly electing a clown into the highest office of the land, he is lying and misleading this House. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

2220 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is what he wants Parliament to become. It is clear to me, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman defines himself by his combative style and by his enemies. He can call me a nervous jack-in-the-box –

2225 Hon. P R Caruana: Like a nervous jack-in-the-box.

Hon. Chief Minister: – but I cannot call him a punch-drunk clown, in his estimation. Let’s move on from all of those things, Mr Speaker, and if ‘like’ is all it takes, then I am quite happy to say that he is just like a punch-drunk clown, but not really one. (Laughter)

2230 Mr Speaker, this is an important debate and we should be having it, if he wanted to have a debate, on the basis of a motion, but he is asking a question. Questions are about elucidating information. He does not like the information that he is getting. I am not making any allegation whatsoever against my friends in GJBS, Mr Speaker, but he wants it to be that I am doing so, so that he can wriggle off the hook that he made for himself.

2235 Does he think, Mr Speaker, that anyone in Gibraltar believes that he would not be responsible for determining exactly what was happening in that terminal? Does he think, Mr Speaker, that Gibraltar is a big enough place that nobody knew that he was going down there almost every day to make sure that it was perfect for his manifesto? Does he really think, Mr Speaker –

2240 Hon. P R Caruana: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, this is complete... On a point of order, he is accusing me of lying. I have told this House repeatedly (Interjection by the Chief Minister) that I am not aware of the contract.

2245 Is he saying, by suggesting to you that I used to go down to review the progress of works, that therefore I must be telling an untruth in this House when I say that I had no idea what the cleaning arrangements were or how much they cost? That is all he is doing on his feet right now: he is trying to suggest that it is not credible that I did not know what the cleaning costs or arrangements were and, since I have said, twice, that I can recall that that is the case, then he is simply accusing me of lying, Mr Speaker.

2250 I am very happy for Standing Orders to be binned. I have quite a thick skin and very broad shoulders and I do not mind what language is used in this House. The point that I am making is that he is the first one to leap up and complain whenever anybody uses a word against him. Either we are both allowed to use words or neither of us should use words. All I am complaining about is the situation in which only we are not allowed to use words by they are.

2255 Mr Speaker: Well, I do not believe there exists a situation where only one side is not allowed to use unparliamentary language. That applies to both sides.

If the hon. Member is referring to the remark of ‘punch-drunk clown’, I have ruled it is not a helpful remark in the context of the spirit in which we intend to conduct these proceedings.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, is it parliamentary or unparliamentary?

2260 Mr Speaker: It is no less and no more parliamentary than accusing somebody else of being like a jack-in-the-box. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana). I think we ought to play the game by the same rules. If one Member sees fit to accuse another of being like a jack-in-the-box, then being a punch-drunk clown is not far removed from a jack-in-the-box.

2265 Again, I do not condone and I do not wish to encourage the use of any language of that nature. Leaving aside the description ‘unparliamentary’, I know of no argument that is enhanced by hurling insults across the floor. I think if we can all work to that rule that... Let’s avoid language which is likely to inflame the situation, and I think we would all achieve a lot more.

2270 Talking about the way this debate has arisen, there was a question from the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition asking for cleaning costs. I have read the answer and I have heard the answer. The answer has been provided in a factual manner. Then, the Leader of the Opposition has referred to that answer as a misrepresentation in the first instance, and when that was challenged he used the word ‘distorts’ the representation of the facts.

2275 What the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has done is he has treated this question as a line of supplementary into a trial, if I may call it that, of his conduct of the cleaning costs. With respect, having done so, he can hardly complain if then the Chief Minister seeks to justify his answer.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am not complaining.

2280 Mr Speaker: Well, that is the way I understood it, with respect.

Hon. P R Caruana: He is the only one who is complaining.

2285 Mr Speaker: Well, no. The way I understood the line of debate – and I hope I have understood it correctly – is, it is the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition who then says it must mean either this or that. But then, if the Leader of the Opposition invites a conclusion, with respect, he must be willing to listen to the conclusion.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

2290 Hon. P R Caruana: As must he. He is the one who is [inaudible].

2295 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are also two potential conclusions from his position. Let me just put it this way, because the hon. Gentleman has wanted to open up the debate: I do not believe that there is any bitterness on this side of the House, because, look, we won the Election! There is actually a lot of happiness on this side of the House because we are now able to implement the manifesto that we think is best for Gibraltar.

That manifesto, Mr Speaker, I believe, is never going to result in £17,500 per week being spent on something that is still a building site, in order for us to be able to operate something there for the benefit of our electoral success, as the hon. Gentleman tried to do down at the airport.

2300 Let’s be very clear. It is not just that I am saying £122,000 in seven weeks – £17,500 a week – was spent, and he says... because he recognises, Mr Speaker... The hon. Gentleman recognises that this is a massive political hook onto which he has hooked himself by asking this question. It is a massive political negligence that he allowed – if he was not responsible for the cleaning contract – to happen under his watch. But there is an even bigger sign that he was responsible for massive overspends that have cost the community. I think he used to laugh, during the Election campaign, when I turned up at debates with my battered copy of the Chronicle when he first announced the terminal at £24 million, only to confirm, just before the Election, that it came in at €80 million – €80 million, not £24 million, Mr Speaker. The change, the order of magnitude of the increased costs is such, Mr Speaker, that anybody listening might be prepared to accept that the person who allowed a contract to build the terminal to slip from £24 million to €80 million is exactly the sort of Chief Minister that might have allowed cleaning for £17,500 a week, £122,000 in seven weeks, in order to be able to operate his building site terminal in time for the Election and show it off.

2310 But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman then says that he wants to talk about the problems that people have experienced in developments under the previous GSLP administration, compared to the absence of any problems whatsoever in his developments. You know, I thought he was actually connected to what was happening, but it became such an ivory tower, clearly, in Convent Place, that he did not hear, from what he tells us, the many complaints of the good people at Cumberland Terraces, that are coming to us even now to ask us to fix their homes; the complaints of the good people at Waterport Terraces who have problems in their homes; the complaints of the people in the Flat Bastion development that they did; the complaints of the elderly people in Bishop Canilla House.

2320 Look, Mr Speaker, I take it from him, although he has not said it, but it is implicit in what every Government does, that when a Government builds, it wants to build to the best quality and if there are problems, it is not because any Chief Minister or any Minister has wanted there to be water ingress, or has wanted there to be a problem, but he believes, Mr Speaker, that he is entitled to say of others, that they were negligent, but when someone raises the fact that even in the projects that he was in Government for the development of, there are problems, he does not like to hear it. Well, Mr Speaker, you know what? I think you are absolutely right. There is no point calling each other nervous jack-in-the-boxes or anything else, we are here to debate, in order to give people the information that they are entitled to have from their Government and which they are paid to elicit in questions and when it is appropriate to provide it, we provide it.

2325 We are not here to call each other names, but that is the politics of the Gentleman opposite, and I am grateful for your rulings and I hope that we will therefore – both of us – be able to stick to the business at hand.

2330 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2335 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, can the hon. the Chief Minister confirm that it has taken him seven weeks, or is it longer, for him to find out that there was this ‘outrageous’ cleaning contract, that had been entered into by GJBS?

2340 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman obviously was not listening to the debate and he decided that he wanted to intervene, because he needs to be relevant on the opposite side. If he looks back at my answer, he will see when we identified this contract and the fact that it changed, as from 9th January 2012, means that we would have identified the problem sooner. The 9th January to 9th December is four weeks, not seven and as he can understand, it is not always immediately possible to get all the information that one needs.

2345 He may be very interested to know that when one arrives at Convent Place, having been newly elected as the Chief Minister, an experience that he has not enjoyed, but at least not yet, I know he is very keen to have a go. One does not have a list of all the contracts and what they cost, so that one can quickly identify which to stop.

2350 Hon. D A Feetham: Tut, tut. The Hon. the Chief Minister is unduly spiky. I asked him a very simple question and he has gone on, on this tirade of those subtle insults, for which he is an expert.

2355 Let me just put this to him. If it has taken the Government four weeks to identify this outrageous contract, cleaning contract, that GJBS has entered into, does he not think that it is not unreasonable for a Government, bearing in mind that the airport terminal opened on 25th or 26th November, the General Election was on the 8th, so we are talking about two weeks, that in fact my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, may well be right, that he did not know and he did not identify that there was an outrageous cleaning contract entered into by JBS during that two-week period of time, in the same way as it has taken the hon. Gentleman four weeks in which to identify that it existed.

2360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not consider that ambition is an insult, so if I am accusing the hon. Gentleman of being ambitious in leading our community, I do not consider that I am insulting him, but you take it as you wish.

2365 In order not to appear too spiky, in order not to offend in any way, I will just answer his question in a very simple way: no, Mr Speaker, I do not agree that the person who was there and who ordered the opening of the terminal could not have known what this was going to cost. (Laughter)(Interjection Hon. P R Caruana)

2370 Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker. The hon. Gentleman is saying from a sedentary position that it is implicit in what I am saying that he is lying. As the hon. Gentleman knows (Interjections) parliamentary language requires never to say that one or the other is lying and to put a motion. It is very often implicit in the things that we say that we do not believe each other and he has spent the eight years that I was sitting over there more or less telling me that and sometimes going over the edge and saying I was lying and then withdrawing it, or never bringing the motion that he promised to bring.

Mr Speaker, I do not mind saying that I do not believe him. I do not believe that puts me in a position where I am making unparliamentary remarks.

2375 Mr Speaker: I was not going to rule on it, because I am not entitled to take into account remarks made from a sedentary position, sir.
Next question.

2380 Clerk: Question 226 –

Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member ought to know for the record that I did not know.
Nor am I accepting his interpretation of the facts and figures.

2385

Gibraltar postage stamps
Prior approval of HM the Queen's effigy

2390 Clerk: Question 226, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister confirm that the design of Gibraltar postage stamps bearing the effigy of Her Majesty the Queen requires the prior approval of Her Majesty obtained via the Convent and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office?

2395 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, that is correct.

2400 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, and is the hon. Member aware that, in respect of a postage stamp issue, a proposed postage stamp issue, that has obtained a degree of coverage and notoriety in the press, relating to the appearance on a joint stamp issue with the State of Israel, including a representation of the Tower of David in Jerusalem that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office indicated that the Palace's consent to that design would not be forthcoming?

2405 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, and I will go further.

I have seen a letter from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, from their offices across the road from where he used to sit and where I sit now, expressing that in terms which I think merited the reply that he caused to be sent.

2410 Hon. P R Caruana: Therefore, implicit in that very helpful answer, for which I am grateful to him, is that anybody who made any correspondence to the Gibraltar Chronicle that may, in ignorance of the facts, mischievously wish to create the impression that the refusal to proceed with the aforesaid issue with the aforesaid depiction of the Tower of David was somehow the policy decision of the Government of Gibraltar, would be mistaken?

2415 Hon. Chief Minister: This is not an issue on which there needs to be a party political difference, I agree.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am obliged to the hon. Member.

2420

Civil servants and staff of Government undertakings
Transfer details since 9th December 2011

2425 Clerk: Question 227, the Hon. P R Caruana.

2430 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister provide a list of (1) civil servants (2) GDC employees (3) Statutory Agency and Authority employees and Government company employees that have, since 9th December 2011, been transferred from the post that they occupied on 8th December 2011, giving a breakdown by entity, employee, post occupied on 8th December and post transferred to?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2435 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I now hand the hon. Gentleman a schedule with a list of civil servants and GDC employees that have been transferred. (See following page)

I think the hon. Gentleman will find that most of the moves are actually because whole Departments have changed nomenclature and perhaps changed office.

2440 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not going to detain the House by trying to analyse this list now and asking supplementaries based on it, but can he just assist me by telling me whether all the information sought in the question is provided? In other words, civil servants, GDC employees, Statutory Agency and Authority employees and Government company employees?

I do not see, at first blush, the nomenclature on the columns appear to relate to civil servants.

2445 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think there is something else I should have said, which is that it has been confirmed by the relevant Statutory Agencies and Authorities and Government companies that no transfers of employees have been effected since 9th December 2011, although there was a discussion about a post having been abolished, I think, yesterday.

2450 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, in relation to GDC employees, is the hon. Member confident that the answer he has given me is correct? There are no GDC employees – I do not think this is controversial information, but there are no GDC employees, for example, that have transferred from ministerial offices, which is perfectly legitimate but...

2455 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is the information I have been provided and I assume it is correct. I do not have control over this information.

Quadripartite talks with UK, Spain and Spanish local government Government position

Clerk: Question 228, the Hon. P R Caruana.

2465

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government will agree to take part in – let's see if I pronounce this correctly – quadripartite, I suppose – quadruple – I am not sure the word exists, actually, but it has been used in the press – quadripartite talks with the Governments of UK, Spain and another non-national tier of government in Spain?

2470

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is a position in which the Government has, and will continue to 2475 have, the Opposition's support.

Is the hon. Member aware that it has been an aspiration amongst parties in Spain for some time now, certainly before 8th December, to alter the architecture of the trilateral forum to make it non-trilateral and does he share the view which underpinned our holding the position which he has now described also to be theirs and does he hold it perhaps for the same reason, that to have symmetry on a quadrapite – on a quadripartite basis whereby the Gibraltar position and status is made symmetrical to the position of some regional or local Spanish entity, is to downgrade the status of Gibraltar to a position that would not be compatible with our international political rights and aspirations?

2485 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, sir and I think I have expressed that when I have been asked questions in the media since then. Sometimes those in the media ask the question and then wish a positive answer, do not print the whole answer that one gives when it is in the negative.

I think that, within this House, we are agreed on this issue.

2490

UK Overseas Territories Review
Submission of views by Gibraltar Government

2495 Clerk: Question 229, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether he or anyone else on behalf of the Gibraltar Government has submitted views or information in response to the United Kingdom's current Overseas Territories Review?

2500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, I wrote to Miss Jessica Irvine, the Head of the Iberian Team at the FCO, setting out a detailed response to the UK government's current Overseas Territories Review.

2505 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, in the spirit of openness and transparency, which he continually reminds us informs his approach to Government, is he willing to lay that document on the table of this House?

2510 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that when I have asked him to disclose correspondence, as he has had with the Foreign Secretary or with others, he has always said that he was inclined not to, and I am inclined to think that that was actually correct in respect of sharing information across the floor of the House.

2515 He has talked about 'laying on the table', which would, in any event, make the information public. I am quite happy to discuss with him what we said, but not lay it on the table. He will know that a lot of the issues were the issues that he and I have had an opportunity to talk about and which I think both of us agree should not necessarily be the issues that we ventilate across the floor of the House.

2520 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member acknowledge that he cannot at one and the same time say that he is better than we were in Government at transparency and accountability and then continually deny providing information on the basis that we used not to do it. Clearly, he thinks that we were worse than him. If he is no better than us, then we are no worse than him!

2525 Now, he can, of course, legitimately take the view – which I was not seeking to dismiss as a possibility, not knowing the nature of the content of the document – that it is inappropriate quite so recently after it was sent to make public inter-ministerial correspondence, and that might be, depending on the content of it, a perfectly sound judgement on his part.

But given that this letter must reflect the views, the policy, of this Government – which may, indeed, coincide with ours, and I would be surprised if it did not on many if not most issues – but given that, in effect, that letter contains a statement of the Government's policies on important constitutional bilateral relationship issues, does he not think that it is not really a confidential exchange of correspondence, but rather a 2530 communication by the Government of Gibraltar to the government of the United Kingdom of the policy position of the Gibraltar Government on a constitutional matter, which would make it, I think, legitimate to table in Parliament?

And, further, even if I cannot persuade him of that view, does he not consider that, indeed, the UK government may publish it, because the UK government has... As you know, there are Cabinet Office directives about the publication of things submitted to the UK government in response to consultation papers, which I believe are that the responses to government consultation processes are published and that he may find that the UK government will publish his letter, treating it not as a confidential exchange of correspondence, but as a response to a consultation process. In those circumstances, would it not be better for him to table it himself, as his own parliamentary act?

2540 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me start by saying that I do not accept that we are taking the same attitude to disclosure that the hon. Gentleman took when he was here. The fact that I have equated one item, a request of disclosure, to that attitude which he took does not necessarily mean that I accept that we are as bad as they were – but it is nice to know that he accepts that they were bad, Mr Speaker.

2545 The position, clearly, is that we are trying to provide as much disclosure as is possible of all Government information, because Government belongs to people. Mr Speaker, that is one thing.

Another thing is that we should be laying on the table, and making publicly available, every document that the Government creates and which we have cause to send to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on these issues: I am not saying that we are not going to make it available; I am saying that, at this stage, I think it is not right that it should become available.

2550 If it is going to become available in the United Kingdom as a result of Cabinet directives or as a result of the consultation process being open and, surprised as I might be that that is going to be the case, then certainly we would take the attitude that we should make it available as soon as possible to our people. I am not advised that that is the position at the moment.

2555 I am fully aware of Cabinet Office directives in respect of disclosure in the UK, which are very informative. Unfortunately, they do not lead to disclosure of documents and notes made about conversations that people may have had with Ministers about 10 years ago, which I am very interested in seeing, when they become publicly available.

2560 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member then complains that Parliament becomes aggressive!

I could not have asked a more innocuous set of questions in a less aggressive fashion, and he just could not resist the temptation to make insinuating allegations which have absolutely no connection – and he does this continually. In Spain, there is a phrase to describe the hon. Member: este tira la piedra y esconde la mano.

2565 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, although I do not recognise the accusation made by the hon. Gentleman, (Laughter and interjections) I provided an answer in respect of communications with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

2570 I know that he did not like it but, look here, Parliament is also about a bit of spice, isn't it?

Hon. P R Caruana: Think about whether you get nasty and then accuse others of getting nasty – that is all.

2575 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman is saying that there are issues about being nasty; I do not think there is anything nasty about my saying that I want to see notes of conversations that happened 10 years ago. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) If the hon. Member thinks that there is something nasty about that, it may be because he thinks there is something nasty in the notes.

2580 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member may think that everybody who listens to him is as thick as two short planks, but they are not as thick as two short planks and there cannot be anybody listening to this debate who has not understood him to imply that he thinks that there might be things recorded in telephone conversations between me and Peter Hain which are not consistent with the things that I have said publicly.

That is what he had in his mind. That is what he meant. It had nothing to do with what we are discussing.

2585 It is completely accusatorial and out of tone with the conversation that we were having and is monumental to his attitude in this House, which is that he lights the fuse and, when the bomb explodes and people react, then he accuses the reactors of being unpleasant, aggressive, and wanting to convert Parliament into a fracas. He is, in that respect, the causer of much of the aggression that results in this Parliament – except that he has not got the courage to admit to it and always tries to be the nice guy, even when he is not the nice guy.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think there was a question there; I think it was an accusation. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

At least it is true that the hon. Gentleman can never hide aggression. The hon. Gentleman has never been accused of being a nice guy, and we all know exactly what sort of parliamentary performer he is.

Lands Agreement with MOD Government implementation

2600

Clerk: Question 230, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government is implementing the latest Lands Agreement with the MOD?

2605

And I promise him that I am not on commission from the MOD on this question! (Interjection)

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. P R Caruana: And has the Government yet had the opportunity to decide whether, in respect of the various properties that are coming across at different intervals of time, which he may now be familiar with, whether it is the Government's intention to put those out for sale – which is how, when the Government did the deal, it was envisaged that, quid pro quo, the re-provisions would be funded?

2615

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in fact two residential properties transferred to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar (HM GoG) from MOD have already been advertised for tender, as the hon. Gentleman may have seen. Other properties will follow in the next few months, and the GoG will shortly proceed to invite applications for the appointment of a project manager and design of some of the works that have to be done, which will be financed through those sales.

2620

But I think the hon. Gentleman will know that it is necessary to ensure that the properties which come over and which are put out to tender achieve certain prices in order to enable the funding of the works to occur, and he will also know there is, in respect of very few of them, a call by some worthy organisations locally to use one or two for a particular purpose, so they may not all go out – all the residential properties – to tender in the analysis that we have seen.

2625

If the hon. Gentleman seems quizzical about that, there is, for example, one particular property which is being used for a purpose by the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP) – or was used for a particular purpose by the GDP, that the RGP may want to use that property for –

2630

Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, but not properties that have been... Residential properties are all being sold. I do not recall any conflict of demand for residential properties.

Certainly there are non-residential properties that people have asked to have use of, but he may be right, I just do not recall that any residential property is being competed for, for a non-residential use.

2635

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is one, maybe two, for a residential use – in other words, to put people for a period of time who need to be put there for a period of time – by an organisation. But it is really a very minor one or two. I think there was a letter for him, during the period of the campaign – although it seems to just have been a discussion earlier about one or two of these properties.

2640

Unveiling ceremony of plaque to Gibraltar Security Police Issue of invitations

Clerk: Question 231, the Hon. P R Caruana.

2645

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say who issued the invitations to the recent ceremony for the unveiling of a plaque in the lobby of Parliament to the memory of Gibraltar's Security Police officers who died in the wartime explosion in Tangiers?

2650

And if I could just be permitted to add, by way of comment, before the hon. Member answers, that since giving notice of this question, I have received an entirely satisfactory apology from the Superintendent of the Gibraltar Defence Police, which I intend to accept. So the purpose of the question... I think the question still has a purpose – which is not that.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2655

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe it was done by the Superintendent of the Gibraltar Defence Police. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar had no involvement whatsoever.

If it is of any assistance, I think the hon. Gentleman was right to point out publicly that his failure to attend was not intended by him or his party as any slight to the people who were being honoured and arose in the circumstances that he has already explained.

2660

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, of course, people are normally, and would normally – and should, indeed, normally – be free to invite or not invite members of the Government or members of the Opposition, as the case might be, to their events, and certainly, the Opposition claims no right to be invited to things in and around Gibraltar. That is entirely a matter in the gift and sentiment of the host of the event.

2665

It arises only on this occasion, would he agree with me, because the erection of that plaque is the erection of a plaque in the precincts of Parliament and therefore it being something that Parliament, through the Speaker, gave its agreement to do? Would the hon. Member agree with me that, to avoid the possibility of a repetition of any such inappropriateness in the future, that the House ought to consider the rule that if anybody is going to host an event within the precincts of Parliament, the invitation list should be submitted in advance to the Speaker, for him to consider whether, given that it is an event taking place in the precincts of Parliament, the Speaker considers that any issue arises as to inclusions or exclusions from the list?

2670

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have absolutely no difficulty with that suggestion.

2675

In fact, the hon. Gentleman will know, and I think it is right to disclose, that you consulted both with him and with me about whether it was appropriate to have such a plaque in this place and, if I may say so, I think, with respect, that was absolutely the right position for you to take and that, therefore, it was a surprise to me that he was not there when the time came for me to say a few words.

2680

I think that this occasion is the only occasion I can recall of an event being organised there by anybody other than the Mayor's Office, who are as good at ensuring that the people who need to be in the lobby are invited...

But I would have no difficulty whatsoever with what the hon. Gentleman has suggested being the case in the future in respect of any event to be organised in this place. This place is the Parliament and, despite our separate responsibilities in it and what our roles are, we are all Members of it.

Chief Minister's visit to UK
List of persons met

2690

Clerk: Question 232, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister provide a list of the persons, other than ministers and officials of the United Kingdom government, with whom he met during his visit to the United Kingdom between 22nd January and 27th January 2012 – Sunday to Friday – and state the purpose and subject matter

2695 of those meetings?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2700 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule with the information requested. He should note that, in respect of the third entry, there has been a spelling mistake: where it says 'cultural' it should say 'Gibraltar', and I think he will recognise...

ANSWER TO QUESTION 232 OF 2012

Maltese High Commissioner, Mr Joseph Zammit Tabona, courtesy call in advance of signing of TIEA,
Franco Cassar, Country Manager (Malta)
Norman Stone: BBC Scotland – potential for a Cultural TV Series
Iñigo Gurruchaga, La Vanguardia - Interview

Barry George/Andrew Smith (Music Industry) – potential investors
Adrian Bell – ex CBF re charity and potential investment
Chris Mitman (Investec) – financing options
Ana Garcia (Gibraltar Movie) – how to make film more readily available

John Bowell, Chairman & CEO, JCBA – offer of assistance re GHA procurement
Corbett & Co with Guy Stagnetto Jnr – re OHL litigation
Michael Beloff, QC - courtesy call
Jamie Trinidad - discussion re EUID
David Vaughn QC - courtesy call

2705 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, seeing the list of people that the hon. Member saw has reminded me to do something that I had meant to do at the beginning of today's sitting but forgot, which is to acknowledge the sad passing of Mr Joe Gaggero, in which I am sure everyone in the House will wish to join. He has been a leading citizen and businessman in this community and I am sure the whole House will wish to extend its condolences to his family.

Would he wish to associate with that before I proceed?

2710 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes. When I used to do that, he used to tell me that I should allow him to do it, but I am very happy for him to do so, because I think Joe Gaggero merits that sort of mention. It is absolutely right that we should remember today the contribution that he has made to Gibraltar life at every level, in particular in his entrepreneurial flair to Gibraltar's business life and how Gibraltar has been developed, from the days when Mr Gaggero might have started in business, during or just before the Second World War, to the Gibraltar that he leaves today.

2715 So I fully associate myself and my Government with those words.

2720 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can he confirm whether the visit to Mr Michael Beloff... It is down here as a courtesy but I cannot imagine that a busy QC does any courtesy calls. Is Mr Beloff advising the Government on any particular legal issue?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Beloff asked to see me, because I was in London, to pay me the courtesy of a call as a result of my being elected.

2725 I understand he advised his Government at some stage but, as I understand it, he is not presently advising the Government in any respect that I have been informed of.

2730 Hon. P R Caruana: I hope and expect that his visit with Mr Mitman touched upon possible sources of finance for another project that we discussed earlier – that they were interested in possible financing of power stations and things of that sort.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in fact, he would find that Mr Mitman wrote to me after the Election to say that financing in respect of that particular project was an issue that had been discussed and, when I was next in London, would I like to see him in respect of that or any future potential financing opportunities. I took the opportunity of meeting the man, to say hello, and so therefore, yes.

2735

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member able to identify, in generic terms, because I think I know what it is – the name sounds familiar – the Harvey Golding Architects proposed project. Is that one that requires a very significant amount of landscaping of an area around the centre of Gibraltar?

2740

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, but I am quite happy to tell him what it is, which is an area that would require a lot of landscaping to the south of Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, it depends where we have got centre or south.

2745

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, yes, I mean in the area of the Alameda Gardens.

Hon. P R Caruana: That is the centre, in my view. That is something that we had considered and... Okay.

2750

Mr Speaker, I will privately have a word with him about the third item on the list, in case it has anything to do with a proposal that was once put to us, but I will not do it across the floor of the House.

Clerk: With that, we come to the end of Answers to Oral Questions.
Answers to – 2755

Hon. P R Caruana: By the way, can I just say, Mr Speaker... Can I just say to the hon. Member... Can I just give the following indication to the hon. Member à propos a subject that we were discussing recently between us? If he is unable... If he wants to adjourn the House on this occasion to take legislation... I have not checked on the agenda what is the first date he can take the first Bill, but if that date is more than five days from today, we would be happy to confirm that he can safely do that without any danger that we might put down further questions.

2760

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is very helpful but, in any event, it is not necessary on this occasion.

2765

I am grateful for the indication for the future.

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Bus fleet Plans for replacement

75

Clerk: Question 233 of 2012, the Hon. S M Figueras.

80

Hon. S M Figueras: Good morning, Mr Speaker.
Can the Government confirm to this House whether there are any plans for the timely replacement of the current bus fleet as and when this becomes necessary?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

85 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. The Government is currently formulating a strategy for the replacement of the current bus fleet with more environmentally friendly vehicles.

The study is currently in its early stages and the Government will announce its programme when it is in a position to do so.

90 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for the answer.

Is the hon. Member able to provide us with a time estimate of when they are expecting to be in a position to publish details?

95 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, in reply to the hon. Gentleman's question, this would not be a decision taken solely by my Department. It would be a decision taken jointly between myself and the Minister for the Environment, Dr John Cortes, so it will be a question of working together on that.

100 We have already requested from the relevant officials the various options that can be put forward. I know that Dr John Cortes has also asked his officials to put forward their proposals, and we will be in a position to better provide a timeframe in due course, but not just yet.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Perhaps the Hon. Minister can also provide this House with details of the sort of vehicles, the [inaudible] indeed that they are looking at as options for the bus fleet here in Gibraltar?

105 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, those are the options that we are looking into and those are the ones that... what the hon. Gentleman has just asked: those are exactly the questions we have put to the officials, and those are the replies that we are waiting for.

110 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I anticipate that it is far too early for the Hon. Minister to give us an estimate of the costs envisaged for the project.

115 Free bus travel
Eligibility

Clerk: Question 234, the Hon. D J Bossino.

120 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise whether free bus travel will be exclusively available to Gibraltar ID card holders other than non-resident workers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

125 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. I can confirm that free bus travel will be exclusively available for residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards, other than non-resident workers on all bus routes operated by the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd, with the exception of Route 5.

130 Hon. D J Bossino: In relation to those residents of Gibraltar who do not hold Gibraltar ID cards, how does the Government propose to establish the residency requirement?

135 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is one of the matters that we are looking into. We have requested the relevant employee in the bus company to provide us with different alternatives. We will certainly be able to make an announcement on that before 1st May, when the free bus travel regime will commence.

Free bus travel
North Front route

140 Clerk: Question 235, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise whether bus travel is now free for pensioners travelling on the North Front route?

145 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, bus travel is not currently free for pensioners on Route 5.

150 Hon. D J Bossino: The reason why I ask this question is because, as I understand it, there is a manifesto commitment (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) to provide free bus travel for pensioners and can, therefore, the Minister give some sort of timeframe in which this will be implemented?

155 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is correct.
There is a manifesto commitment but, as the hon. Gentleman is aware, Route 5 is operated jointly with a private operator, Calypso, and therefore we could not proceed fairly to simply make free bus travel for pensioners on the Gibraltar Bus Company buses because, of course, that would have probably led to arguments of unfair competition from the private operator.

160 So we have already had two meetings with the private operator and we hope to be... We very much expect to be in a position to make an announcement, again before 1st May, when the free bus regime will come into effect.

Hon. D J Bossino: In relation to pensioners, will there also be a residency requirement?

165 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Free bus travel
Non-resident workers

170 Clerk: Question 236, the Hon. D J Bossino.

175 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise when the Government decided to make the bus service available on a free basis to non-resident workers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

180 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker.
The Government took the decision to make free bus travel exclusively available to residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards, and non-resident workers on all bus routes operated by the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd, with the exception of Route 5, at the meeting of Cabinet held on 13th February 2012.

185 The Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd will only issue the bus cards to those applicants that the Department of Social Security confirms to the company are completely up to date with their social insurance contributions. The Cabinet agreed not to make the announcement as to the position of non-resident workers until the Chief Minister had met with the Mayor of La Línea, whom he was scheduled to meet some 10 days later.

190 Consequently, at the meeting held on 24th February 2012, between the Hon. the Chief Minister and the Mayor of La Línea, the Chief Minister informed the Mayor that, in keeping with the positive relations between Gibraltar and La Línea that the Government is keen to promote, the Government had decided to extend this free service to cross-frontier workers on production of proof that they had a valid contract of employment registered with the ETB and that the payments in respect of social security are up to date.

Therefore, this will also serve to ensure that cross-frontier workers should appreciate the advantages of registering their employment in Gibraltar.

195 Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister will appreciate why I sometimes get nervous when a Government announcement is not preceded by a press statement and the usual attendant fanfare, with GBC interviews and the like. I find it surprising to say the least that Government took a decision, purposefully, to hold back that decision, and the announcement of that decision, for 11 days, between 13th February, when it was decided collectively and when it was announced to the press at the meeting of La Línea Mayor on 24th February. I can 200 already sense there is some ruffling of feathers there.

But can the Minister confirm that the first time this was publicly announced was at the press conference with the La Línea Mayor at the Chief Minister's Office on 24th February?

205 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, given that the decision not to make the announcement related to my desire to make, first of all, communication with the Mayor of La Línea, and then to announce it in the press conference after that, I think it is incumbent on me to rise to answer that supplementary.

In fact, Mr Speaker, the position is exactly as set out. I thought it was appropriate to speak to Miss Araujo face to face first and make the announcement at the press conference after the meeting with her. I think that was entirely the correct thing to do, with the attendant bells and whistles and fanfare in the press conference
210 thereafter. (Laughter)

Hon. D J Bossino: The reason why I strongly suspect that this announcement was made almost on the hoof, is because despite the party opposite now in Government always announcing over the last 15 years that they produce very detailed manifesto commitments, it is not set out in the GSLP's manifesto before the election as a potential Government commitment. All that the manifesto says is that:
215

'we will make bus transport free only for residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards.'

220 So is this not a case of the Chief Minister being all things to all men? (Interjection) For the Gibraltar public, he produces his nationalistic card, but then the first meeting he has with a Spanish politician – especially, a local politician across the way – he wants to make a positive sounding message to her. Is this not a case of being all things to all men?

225 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, (Interjection) it is not such a case. It is not such a case.

I know that the hon. Gentleman and all of his colleagues are grasping at straws and trying in every possible way to think of something which they might say in these early days of this refreshing and positive administration, that has finally cleared the decks of the 16 years of malfeasance that we have had to experience before.

230 But, Mr Speaker, let me be very clear to the hon. Gentleman: if everything that we are going to do in the next four years had to be set out in our manifesto, our manifesto would be even longer! It would be as long as a telephone directory!

The manifesto is only, Mr Speaker, the headlines of what this Government is going to achieve in the next four years. (Interjections) There is much more to come, Mr Speaker. And if every time that we hit the jackpot and we do the right thing, the hon. Members opposite are going to say that we are going to be all things to all men, well, Mr Speaker, they will be saying that for the next four years, because we intend to continue hitting the jackpot, we intend to continue doing the right thing and we intend to win the next election, too! (Applause)
235

240 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, questions should not be a pretext for a debate, but certainly answers seems to be a pretext for a party political broadcast. (Laughter and interjections)

Well, you know this is a fresh... the Chief Minister realises that this is a –

Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

245 Hon. D J Bossino: – fresh pair of hands and I have a fresh outlook to politics, but in fact it was not only in the Government manifesto where they did not announce this. When they had an opportunity on 18th

February, the Saturday Chronicle, again, they announce in headlines:

250 'Free buses for residents only.
As from 1st May 2012 free bus travel will be allowed on all routes, except route 5, for residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards.'

255 At that stage, at that stage, Mr Speaker, the Government had already announced collegiately, one assumes, to in fact make it available to non-resident Spanish workers. Why is it that they did not, when there was a public announcement, they did not take the opportunity of announcing this to the people at large in Gibraltar? (Interjection)

260 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, exactly for the reason that I gave when I first rose to answer his supplementary.

265 Mr Speaker, he is wrong. We are not making policy on the hoof. We did not decide to do this when I met Miss Araujo and I will tell him when he will know that he is wrong – and when he will, I hope, apologise to me. In twenty years' time, when the Minutes of the Cabinet are published for 13th February, (Laughter and Interjections) he will see that the decision was made then. He will buy me a coffee and he will say, 'I am sorry I doubted you.' (Interjections)

Clerk: Question –

270 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, no, that...

I will gladly buy him a coffee when we are both 60 years of age.

275 Mr Speaker, why is it again, when there is a further opportunity to announce this wonderful policy that the Government has come up with, re workers from La Línea and workers from Spain, on 6th March, in the Chronicle, post the meeting with Señora Araujo the Government says:

280 'From 1st May 2012, the bus travel in Gibraltar will be allowed on all routes except for number 5 for all residents of Gibraltar or those holding a Gibraltar ID card.'

285 Again, the nationalist card. Why is it he did not announce it, then, in the context of that press statement, Mr Speaker?

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful that he recognises that the nationalist card is mine and not his. (Laughter)

295 Mr Speaker, I have much more academic respect for the hon. Gentleman opposite when we were together in school than I have political respect for him in this House.

300 I have already answered the question, Mr Speaker. The decision was taken that we should have a conversation with Miss Araujo across a table and announce to her first, before announcing anything in the media.

305 As to how we make our announcements thereafter, well, Mr Speaker, I am delighted – if the hon. Gentleman wants to step down – to take him on as a person to assist us with drafting press releases but, until he does that, it is up to us to decide what goes in a press release and how we express it. I know they must be jealous because ours were obviously more successful in the past four years than theirs, because ours put us here and theirs put them there!

310 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member not recognise that this is not about winning jackpots or precisely when the decision was made or why he made it? Personally, I think if he wants to make a decision which is primarily of benefit to residents of La Línea, there is a certain logic in waiting until he is in La Línea to announce it. I might have made a similar decision. But doesn't he understand that the real issue here is not that at all? The real issue is that he has done the opposite of what he said in his manifesto that he would do. This is not about striking jackpots. It is not about where you announce it, or when you announce it, or even when you made the decision. The fact of the matter is that in his manifesto he commits to the electorate to introduce this only for residents of Gibraltar, and within a month or two he is doing it for people who are not residents of Gibraltar and, therefore, this is not about doing something which is not in the manifesto, because not everything that you do can be in your manifesto. Of course, governments are not limited to doing only what is in their manifesto, but normally there is a political price to pay when you say in your manifesto that you are going to do something and you do something different – you do the opposite of what you say in your manifesto.

Does the hon. Member not recognise that the use of the word ‘only’ in his manifesto and in his [inaudible] public statement would legitimately have led people to believe that this would not be available to non-residents and that, in fact, he has done the opposite of that? He has made it available for non residents.

By the way, I am not saying that I disagree with the decision. Simply that it is incumbent on the hon. Member to explain, publicly, not when he does something which is not in his manifesto, but when he does something which contradicts what he committed to in his manifesto.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, talk about wanting to be all things to all men: I am going to criticise what you have done and ask you questions about it, but I am not going to say that I am against it. The hon. Gentleman and the team opposite are making a spectacle of trying to be all things to all men.

Mr Speaker, the meeting was not in La Línea. This meeting was in Gibraltar, but as Miss Araujo is the representative of the people of La Línea, I thought it was appropriate to tell her, as I have said to the hon. Gentleman opposite.

Mr Speaker, what ill was the pledge in the manifesto trying to cure? I will explain to him, Mr Speaker, what ill it was trying to cure.

The decision made by his administration to allow free bus travel to all and sundry on our buses which meant, Mr Speaker, that the buses were being used almost as tour buses which meant, Mr Speaker, that tour guides were going on board buses and going round showing people the sites which meant, Mr Speaker, that buses had to carry the nonmenclature ‘full’ on the top and bus drivers were telling residents and others who wanted to use the bus, ‘Sorry, this bus is full. We are doing a tour.’

Well, Mr Speaker, that ill has been cured and the hon. Gentleman is right, we have gone further than our manifesto provides, and not just in respect of that clause, Mr Speaker. We will go further in respect of many others also.

Mr Speaker, what we have done we believe is the right thing to have done in the circumstances of introducing the new policy. We will defend it politically. If all the hon. Gentleman can do is to try and cross examine on the basis of one word here or one word there in a political document, as if it were a legal document, then we are not going to get anywhere.

Hon P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, it is not a question of going further. Does the hon. Member not accept that it is a question of doing the opposite and the word ‘only’ is not just a single word? When you say you are only going to do A, and then you do B and C, and B is the opposite of A, to then describe the use of the word ‘only’ as semantics is simply an unrealistic approach to political realities and political debate.

Mr Speaker, flowing from the answer that he has given, does the hon. Member not acknowledge that the ill that he thought was the case – that all and sundry coming from Spain were using our buses free – had, in fact, been cured by an arrangement that we had introduced to introduce the bus club card, which they have cancelled and which would have eliminated this problem?

My supplementary, therefore, is this: is the hon. Member satisfied, and has he taken legal advice which leaves him confidently of the view that EU rules permit him to charge one category of EU citizens for the use of buses and not others?

Hon. Chief Minister: Obviously, yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: Would the hon. Member be willing to share that privately with me outside of this House... that advice, sorry?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have absolutely no difficulty in the hon. Member responsible sharing that advice with the hon. Gentleman privately outside of this House.

Hon. P R Caruana: I would be very grateful, Mr Speaker, because I will then privately share with him the reason why I am asking him if he would privately share what he has now received with me.

Further, Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member acknowledge that... I think I have understood the Hon. Minister, and perhaps this supplementary is better addressed to him, that the criteria for when cross-frontier workers will be eligible for free buses includes amongst other things whether they are up to date with Social Insurance Contribution payments. Given that Social Insurance Contribution payments are paid by the employer and not by the employee and that if there are arrears of Social Insurance Contribution, given that this is withdrawn from the pay packet like PAYE and that this is administered entirely by the employer, has the hon. Member considered the implication of the employee's eligibility to what is a citizen's right and not a worker's right, namely free bus travel being, in effect, in the gift of the employer because if the employer chooses to fall into arrears with Social Insurance Contribution in respect of one or more employees, then that one or more employee will, according to what he has said this morning, have forfeit the right to free bus travel?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is an issue that we have considered together and that is why I think it is appropriate that I rise to deal with the question, for the simple reason that the hon. Gentleman is right. It is very often the case that employers are either in arrears by agreement, in the sense that they pay at the end of a particular period, say, two months instead of at the end of a month and there is some sort of understanding or they are in arrears, full stop and it would unfair to say that just because an employer is in arrears that the employees will not be able to take advantage of obtaining this permit.

Nonetheless, Mr Speaker, you would not expect us to say that employees will be able to have this bus pass whether or not they are in arrears of Social Security. What we are trying to do is to use this also as a secondary check to see exactly where people are and to promote the fact that the employee will be triggering that Social Security issues may be there and then we have to take a view. We are not going to prevent an individual who is properly registered in Gibraltar for employment from having a permit just because their employer may not be completely up to date.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, that is slightly more sensible in the sense that, first of all, I think it is a jolly good thing to have a greater number of checks on whether people are in good standing in the public administration in terms of that, and if access to a free public service provides the opportunity, I think that that is something worth exploring. But I think it should go no further, would the hon. Member agree, in terms of fairness that it should be a question of registration?

An employee has it in his gift to ensure that he is registered with the ETB as an employee. Thereafter, the rest of it is not in his gift. It is up to the public administration in respect of a registered employee of whom it therefore has notice to pursue the employer for payment of taxes. So the employee's eligibility to public bus service, would the hon. Member agree, should be conditional on him being registered, not on payment of tax, because the Government always has the means in respect of registered employees to pursue the employer?

The problem, which is where I put it to the hon. Member if what he proposes is sensible, is in respect of unregistered labour, where obviously you do not have the opportunity to pursue the employer and that is where it is sensible. I would ask the hon. Members to consider leaving it at registration, rather than up-to-date for Social Insurance Contribution.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that would be the substance of what we do, but the form of it must, I think, continue to be that people should be registered and up to date. He will know, Mr Speaker, from his own experience on this side of the House, that this manifests itself sometimes in respect of residents when people turn up for Healthcare, which they are otherwise entitled to, and they are sometimes told, 'Hang on a minute. You are not registered for Social Security or your Social Security payments are not up to date', and that is sometime a useful check. But the substance will be as the hon. Gentleman has described it.

Clerk: Question 237 –

Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Damon Bossino has a question.

Hon. D J Bossino: Just as a very minor point of clarification, perhaps the Minister for Transport can answer this question.

Presumably, it is open not only to Spanish non-resident workers, it is open to all nationalities, or is there any qualification there in relation to EU nationality?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, it is open to any nationality that is resident in Spain and working in Gibraltar. (Interjection)

EU nationality. Yes.

Hon P R Caruana: Anyone who comes to Gibraltar to [inaudible].

Hon. D J Bossino: So, yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: For the purpose of clarification. The hon. Gentleman has said those workers of Gibraltar resident in Spain, of whatever nationality...

It is possible there are people who are not necessarily resident in Spain who are registered here as workers and come in. They might fly in, because of particular arrangements with their employer, from London for particular periods of time. That person would also be entitled, if they are registered for employment here, to take the advantage of the service and it is whatever the nationality. It does not have to be a European nationality.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does it not have to be EU nationality?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, because it is based on registration and work in Gibraltar, not on nationality.

Hon. D J Bossino: In other words, a US national, flying from London, would benefit from that so long as he is registered to work in Gibraltar?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, it is slightly far fetched in the hon. Gentleman's example, but it is possible you could have a US resident working for a financial services institution in London who flies to Gibraltar once every two weeks and spends five days here, who is properly registered to work here, who, if he were interested in not using the GibiBikes and wanted to use the bus system, for example, would be entitled to. It is based on somebody working here and being registered to work here.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, presumably when the hon. Member said 'identity card' he was using that phrase loosely – not just a red card, which is the civilian registration card as well. So it is not just Gibraltar belongs?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is right.

Government of Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd Claim for unfair dismissal

Clerk: Question 237 of 2012, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port inform the House whether the Government or the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited received any legal advice before instructions were given to drop the defence of the unfair dismissal claim by Mr Sardeña against the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the answer is yes.

May I also add that, whereas the hon. Gentleman and I have had a debate on this in the press, we have been careful, I think, to steer clear from the merits or demerits of the case in question, and because the case is sub judice, any comments that I may make in respect of the merits are likely to impact on the case, so I would ask, therefore, that if he has any questions on the specifics of the case he asks me after the case is over, of course, and not whilst it is in trial.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can I just ask, is the case not already over, given the fact that the Gibraltar Bus Company has withdrawn the defence of the substantive case?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I know the hon. Gentleman likes to read my press statements because when I do not make any he does miss them and he does ask me about them in this House.

As my press statement makes clear, it was not fair to say that the case of Mr Sardeña was close to finishing on the basis that our information is that only the Bus Company presented its case and Mr Sardeña, as I understand, did not give evidence or call in any of his witnesses.

Hon. D J Bossino: The issue is not at what stage the case had reached; the issue is that the Gibraltar Bus Company have withdrawn the defence. (Interjection) Sorry? (Interjection) Precisely. Therefore, there was a concession, in effect, and therefore the case was compromised.

As to asking questions in relation to statements made outside the House, I think, as a Member of this Parliament, I am entitled to ask Government Ministers to make statements inside this House. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, is it sub judice, or isn't it? If the Gibraltar Bus Company has withdrawn the defence, then –

Mr Speaker: The Minister has said it is sub judice.

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, I am just trying to enquire –

Mr Speaker: No, but he has said it is sub judice.

Hon. D J Bossino: He may have said that, but I am just making enquiries in relation to that. If there has been, in effect, a concession, and therefore compromised a claim, then there is no claim.

Mr Speaker: I think if the Minister has said it is sub judice, I am not sure this Parliament is entitled to explore what the state of the proceedings is – is it or is it not sub judice. That is the position of the Minister: it is sub judice.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, sub judice or not, will the hon. Member confirm that the Government has withdrawn the defence so that the employer is now not defending itself against the claim?

It cannot be sub judice for parliamentary purposes and not sub judice for public purposes. (A Member: Exactly.) The Government has said publicly that it has instructed to withdraw the case, so will the hon. Member confirm that the position, therefore, is that the employer has withdrawn its defence in the claim against it by an employee and that therefore the employee is bound to win an undefended case?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. I hesitate to rise to give the hon. Gentleman any lessons in law. I know that he does not have much respect for my knowledge of the law, but I have plenty of respect for his, so I am sure that he can make up his mind for himself.

It is very clear, Mr Speaker, the Bus Company has already, as the hon. Gentleman has said, presented its defence. The Bus Company has now withdrawn that defence. The matter is still before the Industrial Tribunal.

There is a judge of the Industrial Tribunal appointed. We must leave it up to him to now decide the issue going forward. There are plenty of other issues which are still to be decided, judicially or quasi-judicially, and we should not, Mr Speaker, in my view, go any further in this House because there are rules in this House as to what we can talk about. There are no rules about what we can talk about outside and what announcements we make outside.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with respect, the hon. Member is being a touch disingenuous.

If there are issues that still require judicial determination, given that the hon. Members have used their governmental ministerial powers to instruct the directors of the company to withdraw the company's defence, does the hon. Member not agree that the natural consequence of a defendant withdrawing his defence is that the case against the defendant is bound to succeed – unless, of course, the claimant withdraws the claim, too – so that, unless the claimant withdraws the case, the only judicial questions that can remain to be answered are the question of damages or the question of costs?

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

525 As the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has said, there is a question of damages. That clearly is a pending proceeding. Therefore it is – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) No, with respect, it is a pending proceeding and therefore it is sub judice.

530 I have no other understanding of the word ‘sub judice’ in our parliamentary context. It is a pending matter. As the Hon. Leader has himself conceded, there may be a matter of damages pending. It is a pending proceeding.

Hon. P R Caruana: But we are not asking about that.

535 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I please only just add to what you have said: that although I will not rise to answer the question that the hon. Gentleman has put – in particular, given what Mr Speaker has rightly said, in my view – we will not accept any of the implicit aspects of his question.

Because the matter is sub judice, we do not want it to be read into the fact that I am not saying anything in answer to the question, that we are accepting any part of the question, if that is appropriate, Mr Speaker.

540 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Chief Minister why the original question by my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino, which asks about whether the Minister obtained legal advice before he took the steps that he took, why that impacts on the sub judice rule? Surely it does not.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think anybody has suggested that.

545 Mr Speaker: No. With respect again, a question was posed and the answer was ‘Yes, sir.’ So the answer was given to the question.

550 The question as it was posed did not give rise, in my view, to any sub judice issue, whether legal advice was taken, and the answer was given clearly, unequivocally, as yes, legal advice was taken. The line of questions since then has led me to conclude that the sub judice rule would be invoked.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes. Well, Mr Speaker, on a point of order, can we just spend a few moments on this so-called sub judice rule?

555 There is no rule to the effect that is being relied on. The sub judice rule does not mean that you cannot allude to matters that are sub judice, blanket; it means that you cannot allude to them in a manner which is prejudicial to the interests of the parties. They are very different things. (Interjection) Yes, but the Chair and some of the Members from across the floor have invoked, or have purported to invoke, the sub judice rule as if it meant that you could not even ‘mention the war’ because there was a case on. The sub judice rule, hon. Members will find at Standing Order 45.(4), and it reads:

560 ‘(4) References shall not be made to any matter on which a judicial decision is pending, in such a way as may prejudice the interests of the parties thereto.’

565 To ask the hon. Members to confirm in this House what they have already said publicly – namely that they have instructed the directors to withdraw the defence – cannot possibly be a reference that prejudices the interests of the parties hereto, and I think it is important, if the rights of the Opposition to hold the Government to account in this Parliament is going to be more restricted than the rules of debate in Government press releases allowing GBC, that the sub judice rule is properly understood, properly interpreted and properly adjudicated on from the Chair.

570 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may assist the House on this point of order, the hon. Gentleman is entirely wrong because there is a rule, 17.(1)(xiii), which deals specifically with Question Time as well, which talks about:

575 ‘a question shall not reflect on the decision of a court of law or to be so drafted as to be likely to prejudice a case under trial;’

– and of course, in our view, Mr Speaker, the employment tribunal is acting as a court of law.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, in respect of rule 45, where the hon. Gentleman talks about those issues and whether comment here should lead to something being said which might be prejudicial to the interests of any party, he has to understand, Mr Speaker – and I think his analysis has not extended to this – that, in this instance, we are not talking about a case where Mr A is suing Mr B and we are having a debate about it here. In this case, one of the parties is a publicly funded Government wholly-owned company so, therefore, Mr Speaker, we are one of the parties, or we represent one of the parties. The Bus Company is a wholly-owned Government company, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman knows. Therefore, having any further comment amounts to the shareholders' representatives in respect of one of the parties in that tribunal making comment about things that are happening, or may happen, in that tribunal, and that, Mr Speaker, is exactly why the sub judice rule, in our view, bites.

In any event, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman should know that we do not resile from our public press statements and, of course, we stand by them.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, my point of order has nothing to do with the discussion around this Sardeña case, nor about whether he is a shareholder or... If he is a shareholder, he should not be instructing directors. That is the first point that I would make. Shareholders should not instruct directors about how to conduct the affairs of the company. He cannot come to this House making a special case on the basis that they are shareholders.

Because they are shareholders of a company – it is a Government-owned company – they should be more, not less, accountable here, but that is the subject-matter of supplementaries. I am speaking to the Chair, Mr Speaker, on the question of my point of order, which is limited to the question of the reach of the sub judice rule, which struck me as being slightly exaggerated and being slightly abused in the way that it was being fielded in the discussion leading up to my point of order.

When I have done no more than read from Standing Order 45.(4), the hon. Member leaps to his feet to say the Leader of the Opposition is completely wrong because there is also a rule 17 so, of course, everybody is expecting him to read something which suggests, as he has just indicated, that the Leader of the Opposition is completely wrong. In fact, what he reads out is to suggest that the Leader of the Opposition is completely right, because even the one that he has just referred to, referring to questions, is in exactly the same vein:

‘a question shall not reflect on the decision of a court of law...’

– in other words, we will not stand up here asking questions about whether the judgment of a court is right or is wrong –

‘... or to be so drafted as to be likely to prejudice a case under trial;’

– which raises exactly the same considerations as:

‘... in such a way as may prejudice the interests of parties thereto.’

It is exactly the same both under 17 and under 45. There is no sub judice rule in this House which prevents Members from asking questions about matters which are in the courts. They may not ask questions or debate about matters which are sub judice in a way which will prejudice the outcome or the interests of the parties, depending on whether you read 17 or 45. All I am saying in my point of order is because this is a curtailing right on the freedom of debate, it should certainly not be interpreted any more widely than the ordinary meanings of the words used in Standing Orders. That is the sole point I am making in this point of order.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Justice.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member, in setting out the point of order originally, says that there is nothing in the sub judice rule which prevents the Opposition from asking simply whether the Government has withdrawn the defence. That is the way the point of order was formulated, and he referred to Standing Rules and said there is nothing in the rules which prevents that particular question. It is not that question that has been objected to. In fact, that question has been answered. What has been objected to by the Government is that the hon. Member has actually gone further than that original question. What he has then said is that the withdrawal of the defence will necessarily lead to a particular conclusion. So what he has attempted to do subsequently is to explore what the likely conclusions of the case will be. In other words, explore the possible conclusions of the case, a case which is live, a case which is pending, a case which is still 635 before the Industrial Tribunal, where the chairman of the Industrial Tribunal has to reconvene the case to consider precisely the matters that the hon. Member is raising in this House.

Therefore we say that the hon. Member is wrong. He is not entitled to consider issues which go to the conclusion of a case, where that case is live. And, therefore, his point of order is wrong, Mr Speaker.

640 Mr Speaker: I take the point the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has made –
Oh, sorry, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

645 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, just to add this. There is an inherent inconsistency here, between the position of the Government in public and the position of the Government in this House. Look, if the matter is sub judice and the sub judice rule is applicable outside this House, as well as inside this House... So if a matter is sub judice one should not be commenting about it outside this House.

650 What the hon. Members are trying to do is use the sub judice rule inappropriately, in my view, and effectively made public statements outside this House, which are unchallenged, unless they are responded to by us in a press release, but then shield themselves by using the same principle from being asked questions in this House. That is an inappropriate use, in my view, of the sub judice rule.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I will tell him why on that point, and this point of order – which is now dragging into a debate – he is completely wrong. Very simply because he needs to read exactly what we say and not what he would like us to have said publicly.

655 In none of the public comment we have made, have we made any comment in respect of the merits of this case at all and that will continue to be the position.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is not strictly true. Will the hon. Member acknowledge –

660 Hon. Chief Minister: That is what you said –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, it is not strictly true.

665 Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order. The hon. Gentleman made very clear at the last meeting of the House, when he was getting very hot under the collar, that not only could we now not say that either of us were liars, but now we could not even, in the lexicon of his understanding of the rules, we could not even say that what we were saying was ‘not true’ because that amounted to saying that one or the other of us was a liar. So I invite him to reconsider how he puts that part of his final, I guess, intervention on the point of order.

670 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it is not strictly true, what the hon. Member has said. It is not strictly true that the Government has not commented in public on the merits of the case. They have gone... they have said, for example, things such as the costs were exceeding the likely value or damages involved in the case. (Interjections)

675 Mr Speaker, that is more relevant to the sub judice rule than anything we have said in here and, indeed, I have a question later on in the Order Paper which addresses this point, for which I am very happy to wait for.

680 But, Mr Speaker, I am very keen not to conflate, despite what the Hon. the Minister for Justice has said. I am very keen not to conflate, whatever may be the correct application of the sub judice rule to particular aspects of the questioning that had been developing on the bus case, I am very keen to keep that separate from the point I am making on the point of order, which is isolated from any particular debate, which is simply to point out to this House that my understanding of the sub judice rule, which I have tried to support from a reading directly of Standing Orders, was not consistent with what was beginning to emerge in the run up, both from the Chair and from the floor, which tended to give the listener the impression that because the Minister said it was sub judice, therefore it was sub judice and, because the matter is before the courts, therefore it is sub judice and, therefore, it cannot be the subject matter of any... That is not what... I believe that is not what the Standing Order says.

685 Mr Speaker: You see I understand the essence of the Leader of the Opposition’s point of order is the terminology in the Standing Orders which referred to – and I quote the words:

690 '... in such a way as may prejudice the interests of parties thereto.'

695 That is the essence. Right. The mere fact that there is a pending proceeding is secondary. The main issue is the rule arises only if references may prejudice the interests of the parties thereto. Listening to this line of questioning, the first question asked whether legal advice had been obtained and the answer was clear, unequivocal, yes, sir. There were further questions arising there. We then reached a certain stage when the Minister said – or the Hon. Chief Minister said – that there were still pending matters for proceedings and that he regarded a further discussion would infringe the sub judice rules.

700 Sitting here where I am, I am not, other than my general knowledge of how legal proceedings proceed, I am aware that there is still a conclusion pending to that case, but I am not aware of other matters that might enable me to decide whether or not a discussion in this House may or may not prejudice the outcome of the pending matters. From that vantage point I have to accept that, if a Minister of the Crown stands up in this House and says, there are pending matters and that further discussion would infringe the sub judice rule, I would have to accept that as a fair and proper stance to take and call an end to the questions. I have no means of conducting an investigation right here and now as to whether or not a further discussion may prejudice the interests of the parties thereto, if I know that there is still a decision pending.

705 So, I would have to say that if the Minister for the Crown says – and I accept he will say it in good faith – that this is a matter which might infringe the sub judice rule, I will accept that.

710 Clerk: Question 238...

Hon. D J Bossino: I have further supplementaries, Mr Speaker. So on that basis –

Mr Speaker: As long as they do not infringe the sub judice rule.

715 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, this is the thing, I will ask the question and then, presumably, the Government Minister will say whether he can answer or not.

Mr Speaker: Yes. Well, certainly. Absolutely.

720 Hon. D J Bossino: Arising from the points of order discussion, I would ask the Minister for Transport whether the Gibraltar Bus Company will have any representation in the case from now on?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

725 Hon. D J Bossino: And presumably that representation will be in relation to the issue of damages – is that correct?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that is straying into the very debate that we have just had.

730 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, why, to ask the... The hon. Members have already said publicly – publicly – without fear of prejudice to their case, that they have instructed the directors of the bus company to withdraw the company's defence to the claim for unfair dismissal. Therefore, how can it possibly be prejudicial to the interests of the Crown – not even the Crown, to this company, the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd – for the hon. Member to be asked whether their representation is on the question of damages and costs? What else could it be on?

740 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are not going to stand up in this House and list what issues may or may not remain live for the tribunal to consider. That, in my view, is to stray well beyond the sub judice rule into litigating the issues in this Parliament.

Mr Speaker, I do not accept the hon. Gentleman's interpretation during the course of the point of order that, as the representatives of the public, who are the shareholder in the Bus Company, we should have no influence over what its directors do. That appears to be the hon. Gentleman's interpretation (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) of what the position is (Interjections) of what the hon. Gentleman's position is, now that he is over there, but not what it was like when he was over here! (Laughter) Given his view, I suggest that the 745 hon. Gentleman writes to the director of the Bus Company and asks him the questions.

Hon. P R Caruana: If you free him to answer them honestly, which I doubt.

750 Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. Chief Minister: To say, from a sedentary position, that a senior civil servant, who is now the director of this Bus Company would do anything but answer a question honestly, when posed by the Leader of the Opposition in writing is to, perhaps, think of the regime he used to rule over, rather than the one that we administer for people today. (Applause) (Interjection)

755 Hon. D J Bossino: Given what we still describe as a smokescreen reason of costs, can the Minister advise this House how that legal representation in the Industrial Tribunal claim is being held. In other words, are you instructing the same lawyers who you instructed in relation to the, or rather before you withdrew the claim, or is it separate legal representation, or is it in house, is it the AG's Chambers, can he answer that question, Mr Speaker?

760 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it would be the same solicitor that will be representing the Bus Company.

765 Hon. D J Bossino: Once again, the only substantive reply we have had in our debates in the press has been, as far as I am concerned, that there was a concern from the Government side in relation to costs, Mr Speaker. So, is the Minister satisfied that that issue is now resolved, despite the fact that you have the same representation which you claimed was the cause of the increase in costs.

770 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is again straying into the live issues. The issue of costs, although it is not an issue which is as live in industrial tribunal cases as it is in Supreme Court proceedings, because the jurisdiction of costs is not there, is relevant to all these issues and we are not going to get into discussing them.

775 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentlemen – and Lady – are keen to litigate this case in this Parliament, rather than allowing justice to take its course. We will not be drawn into that litigation. I do not know what it is that they have against Mr Sardeña, but as far as we are concerned, the matter is before the Industrial Tribunal and there it should be dealt with.

780 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is of that view, why did he not just allow the case to run its course and allow the case to be decided on the merits between the claimant and the company, (Applause) rather than instruct the directors of the Company to withdraw a perfectly good defence in respect of a claimant who had been convicted for fraud in this very Industrial Tribunal case (Applause) – and is a well-known activist in the GSLP?

785 Hon. Chief Minister: What a disgusting way, Mr Speaker, to bring this Parliament into disrepute, to try and have a trial here, by his standards, of a man who is before another tribunal still with a claim that he has pending, as a result of the vindictive manner in which the hon. Gentleman opposite dealt with someone who was initially his supporter, and saw the light, and decided to become our supporter!

790 It is incredible to see the lengths to which the hon. Gentleman will go to punish people who do not support him. We will not, in this House, litigate the Sardeña matter. The hon. Gentleman no longer controls the purse strings of the Bus Company, he is no longer the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, he can no longer instruct the defence in that matter. The Government has said publicly why and what it has done and that is the position that we defend. (Applause)

795 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, we are not interested in trying the Sardeña matter. We are interested in trying the hon. Members politically, for what we consider to be a political abuse of power, namely (Applause and interjections) a matter in which the current Minister for Employment represents Mr Sardeña in front of the Industrial Tribunal and the matter in which the current Chief Minister represents Mr Sardeña before the courts of Gibraltar. They then win political office and the first thing they do is instruct the Government owned company to withdraw the defence against their previous clients, in a way that exposes the company to a ruling 800 against it, where the merits are with the company and not with the claimant.

That is what we, what we are (Applause) holding the Government politically to account for. I am not interested in trials, Mr Speaker. If the hon. Members think that this matter is going to go away, that it is capable of going away simply because the hon. Member stands up in an over excitable mode and tries to suppress debate, the hon. Members had better think again. This matter is not going to go away!

805 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only person who has ever tried to suppress debate is the hon. Gentleman when he was here as Leader of the House. (Applause) He needs to know, Mr Speaker, that No. 6 Convent Place is no longer a 'star chamber', where he used to decide, as judge, jury and executioner, the fate of anybody who did not support him.

810 He needs to be reminded that the political abuse of power is to spend 16 years giving grace and favour and cash to your best political supporters, many of them related directly or tangentially to Ministers!

815 He needs to remember, Mr Speaker, that the biggest political abuse of power in the history of Gibraltar was the funding, by the taxpayer, of the weekly political manifesto of the hon. Gentleman opposite, which blurred the distinction between the party and the state to such an extent, that the good government of Gibraltar and the basic tenets of democracy were imperilled! That is why he is sitting there and we are sitting here. (Applause)

820 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member obviously does need to calm down. He is losing the plot, Mr Speaker.

I leave the hon. Member with two thoughts: firstly, it is no great shout to be proud about to have succeeded in unseating a government, that had suffered 15½ years of electoral attrition, by 280 votes! So every time the hon. Member announces, comfortably, that they have the confidence of the people of Gibraltar, please remember that they are probably the first party, the first Government in the political history of Gibraltar – the modern political history of Gibraltar, anyway, since after the AACR days – to have won their first term of office with less than 50% of the electoral vote.

825 The hon. Members do not enjoy the support of the majority of the electorate. (Interjections) The majority of the electorate...

830 Right. Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member... If the Hon. Mr. Speaker is going to let the Hon. Chief Minister embark on a diatribe that has nothing to do with the subject matter of what we were discussing at the time, then he should, in the interests of even-handed debate, allow some margin to the Opposition.

Will the hon. Member acknowledge – and this is the second thought that I would like to leave him with –

Mr Speaker: Question, perhaps?

835 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, 'will the hon. Member acknowledge...' normally suggest that a question follows in the next few words. I cannot imagine how you could add to the words 'will the hon. Member acknowledge' in a way that does not constitute a question.

840 Mr Speaker: Yes, but then the hon. –

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member –

Mr Speaker: Then the hon. Member did say [inaudible].

845 Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member acknowledge, since he has pointed out to this house that Mr Sardeña used to be a supporter of my party and no longer is, that the reason for that may be precisely that we were not willing to deploy grace and favour on who was, at the time, a political supporter of the Government and that we lost his support for that reason?

850 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, so much for settling down to the temperate marathon of four years of government.

Mr Speaker I want to tender an apology to you, on behalf of the Leader of the Opposition, because I think that he did not mean to take you on as he did when you asked him to ask a question. I think that he was, perhaps, himself a little over-excited.

855 Mr Speaker I do not acknowledge what the hon. Gentleman has suggested.

Mr Speaker: Next question, please

860 Clerk: Question 238

Mr Speaker: Order.
The Hon. Damon Bossino.

865 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am grateful, Mr Speaker.
The Chief Minister made an allusion to our school days and I must say that his performance right now reminds me of that – of a school debate.

Now this is an issue, Mr Speaker, which is of grave public concern and, as an Opposition MP and as a member of this Opposition, I think I am entitled to probe the Government in relation to issues which are not only of grave public concern because people come and talk to us about these issues but also because it has been the subject of very lively debate in the press.

870 [Technical interruption]

875 Now, if it is the subject of very lively debate in the press surely it ought to be the subject of a very lively question-and-answer session in this House, if we are going to respect the standing of this House in this community.

And the facts are these – and I would put this to the Minister for Transport – that the explanations he has given in relation to this matter, the decision being taken by the Government being informed by a cost cutting exercise, simply do not ring true when set against, Mr Speaker, when set against the other undeniable facts they have not engaged us in relation to these facts: which is that Mr Sardeña is a GSLP supporter; that both the Minister for Employment and the Chief Minister acted for him in one guise or another in relation to matters arising from that same claim; that Mr Sardeña was convicted of a conspiracy to defraud and the conviction was not overturned on appeal; there is then a win by the GSLP into government and, only after that, they instruct the directors of that company to withdraw the claim, so that Mr Sardeña, as claimant in those proceedings, is potentially entitled to claim the sky-is-the-limit damages – using the Minister for Employment's words in the last session, in this house.

880 So, set against those facts which they have not engaged us on, in the press, set against those – and we think undenied facts – the cost explanation, the cost reason, for the withdrawal of the claim simply, Mr Speaker, do not ring true. I put that to the Minister and I am raising this because it is a matter of grave concern for the public at large.

885 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no-one has done more to raise the standing of this House in our community than we who are sitting on this side. We have finally brought real parliamentary democracy to Gibraltar, monthly meetings of the House, enabling the hon. Gentleman – who I think never switched on the AM frequency of the radio in the time that he was not elected in this Parliament (Hon. D J Bossino: I did.) or, if he did, he was not paying much attention, and I hope he was not, because he should have been paying attention to the legal work for which he was being paid at the time! – in order, Mr Speaker, to allow the hon. Gentleman to have opportunities like this, to come to this House, to ask questions. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

900 But, Mr Speaker, I must say to him, having a lively debate is not to have a debate as children have in school; it is important that we have lively debates. It is important that the debates not be staid and boring. It is important, Mr Speaker, however, to listen during the course of a debate.

905 It is important Mr Speaker that your ruling on sub judice will be respected, as much by Members opposite as it must be by Members on this side of the House. The hon. Member's question now is to ask entirely about the merits – contrary to your ruling – and I am saying, Mr Speaker, that frankly, it beggars belief to hear an MP for the GSD complain that he does not have an opportunity to ask questions of a GSLP/Liberal Government. I put it to him, Mr Speaker, that he needs to recognise that, in the next four years, depending on when the election is called, there are likely to be 44 such meetings – more, Mr Speaker, than in the 16 years that the party whose manifesto he defended at the last General Election held!

I understand, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. Mr Bossano wants to make a point of order arising from the hon.

910 Gentleman's supplementary.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I did not say, as the hon. Member claimed, that the law, in the case of industrial tribunals, provides that, in claims for damages, the sky is the limit. That is not the case, and that is not what I have said.

915 The reality is – as he should know, because he goes to many of these tribunals himself – is that the tribunal for many, many years had a provision that the basic award – which is the award that is handed over to somebody, even if he has lost no money, as a result of a dismissal – should be at least £2,200, at the discretion of the Chairman, and that is the only change that has taken place: the basic award.

920 The compensation, which is for the loss sustained, is unchanged and that is still subjected, not to the sky, but to a maximum of four years of the minimum wage or two years of the actual salary, whichever is the lesser of the two.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does he have a point of order?

925 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the point of order is that he claimed that I had said something different. He said I had said the sky was the limit in claiming damages. That is not what I have said.

I have not given him the explanation before, that I am giving him now, but it is an explanation that he does not need from me, because he knows what the law is as well as I do, and he goes to tribunals the same as I have done.

930 Mr Speaker: It is a point of rectification, more likely, but –

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, but is it not the case that the effect is that what a successful claimant, as a result of the de-capping of the basic award, will now be the beneficiary of, is in effect a 'sky-is-the-limit' award, (Interjection) if the Minister for Employment wants to make a distinction between compensation and what is the basic award, yes, I understand that and I accept that.

940 But – I am maybe repeating myself – if you remove the cap from the basic award, then the effect of that is that the award in total, both arising from what the Chairman of the Tribunal may grant by way of basic award and what he may then grant by way of a compensatory award – two elements – will be that the award will be in effect, 'sky is the limit'. I have to correct the hon. Member: he did use those words specifically – and I am wondering whether he would concede that specifically – in relation to the basic award debate, question and answer session, that we had in the last session on 15th February.

945 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, there has not been a limit to the basic award until it was introduced by Mr Montiel as Minister for Labour, and in all the awards since 1974, the awards in respect of the basic, whatever the theoretical sky may be, have never been more than 10% or 20% above the £2,200 and, therefore, there is no... On the basis of experience of 30 years of the operation of the tribunal, the theoretical limit of the sky is, in fact, not reflected in reality.

950 The damages... which is what he said I had said, is not what I had said. That is the point I objected to. The damages are limited already in the law, as they have always been.

Mr Speaker: I think we are now in danger of straying into discussion of what the law on compensation is. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano)

955 Hon. D J Bossino: But I do not think he has necessarily addressed the points I made.

I have conceded that maybe I have expressed myself incorrectly, if I have referred to it as damages. But maybe if I refer to it... to replace the word 'damages' with the 'award', which will comprise both the compensatory elements, which he may describe as damages, and also the basic award... in respect of which, given that there has been a de-capping of it, there is a sky-is-the-limit potential award which can be awarded in relation to industrial claims.

960 This is the only point I was making and he said so at the last session of the House when he told... In answer to a question posed by my hon. Friend, Mr Danny Feetham, he said:

'Now it is clear that they –'

965 – referring to the chairmen of industrial tribunals –

‘– can give more. They can now sleep at night, comfortable in the idea that the sky is the limit and they can give workers as much money as they want.’

970 Those were the Hon. Minister for Employment’s words, and not mine.

Mr Speaker: But, anyway, I think we are now straying into the realms of the law on the compensatory element.

975 Hon. P R Caruana: The point of order is that he did not say it was the sky is the limit – but he did say it, obviously...

Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member, when he is sitting down, is saying something that is incorrect.

980 He said that I had stated that the sky was the limit for damages. The basic award is not in respect of any damage. The compensatory award is in respect of damage. The £2,200 basic award has the sky as the limit since we introduced it in this House in 1974, when it said ‘it shall be not less than’ and therefore it has always been that the sky was the limit, except for a very short period.

985 Therefore, the point that I am making is if he wants me to speculate as to what is likely to happen... well, I cannot speculate, but I do not expect that anything is going to happen now that we have restored the position to what was happening before it was taken away.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker –

990 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I would like to ask a supplementary of the Minister for Tourism.

995 He said – and I apologise, I had not heard him the first time round – that he had obtained legal advice. Can he tell this House whether that advice was from the Attorney General’s Chambers or from a law firm in the private sector?

Hon. N F Costa: It was a law firm from the private sector, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he identify that law firm?

1000 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it was done on a pro bono basis, so it was at no cost to the Government.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, whether it is pro bono or not is irrelevant. The advice has been given.

1005 He should know, as a lawyer, that they are as liable for advice given, whether they charge or not. Now, can he identify the firm that provided the advice?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the reason why I said it was pro bono was partly due to answer the charge that Mr Bossino made that I was concerned for cost.

1010 I am very concerned about cost, which is why I sought advice on a pro bono basis. I am perfectly aware that when I gave pro bono advice as a solicitor, I would be equally as negligent, if I provided negligent advice, and liable.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is he going to answer the question? Who is the firm? Who is...? Which firm gave the advice?

1015 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Verralls Solicitors.

Hon. D J Bossino: And who was acting for the Gibraltar Bus Company previously, if it was a different firm?

1020 Hon. N F Costa: I believe it was Triay & Triay.

Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, Verralls will now be acting for the Gibraltar Bus Company in the residue of the industrial tribunal claim?

1025 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I obtained the pro bono advice specifically on the question where we were at the point.

As I have already explained, Mr Mark Isola will be representing the Bus Company going forward.

1030 A Member: Is he a QC?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Mark Isola QC, yes.

Mr Speaker: I think we should go on to the next question.

1035

Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd
Chief Executive Officer

1040 Clerk: Question 238, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise whether the position of the Chief Executive Officer of Gibraltar Air Terminal Limited has been filled?

1045 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): No, sir.

1050 Hon. D J Bossino: Is there any intention of filling the post, Mr Speaker?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, we are currently considering the options.

Hon. D J Bossino: Which options is the Minister considering, if I may ask? (Interjection) Considering the options, I just want... (Interjection)

1055 We are here to scrutinise the Government and I would like an answer to that question.

Hon. N F Costa: You asked the question, and that was the answer – that we are considering the options whether to fill it, or not.

1060 Hon. D J Bossino: Oh, I see, whether simply to fill the post or not?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

1065

Nottingham Travel Trade and Commerce road show

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the cost to the Government of its participation at the Travel Trade and Commerce road show recently held in Nottingham, together with details of those who participated as part of the Government delegation, to include the cost of such participation?

1075

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Gentleman is set out in the schedule that I now hand over to him.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I have had a chance to read the schedule handed to me, kindly, by the Minister.

1085

I do not think he has answered one limb of the question, which is:

‘...with details of those who participated as part of the Government delegation...’

That information is not set out in the schedule he has handed over.

1090

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. In fact, I have just realized that the schedule does omit the persons who attended, but I do have the information here, so I can tell him that it was myself, Mr Nicky Guerrero and Mr Paul Martinez from Gibraltar.

At the event from the Gibraltar office were Mr Lerner, Miss World, Miss Kaiane Aldorino and Mr Ian Leyde. My apologies for that omission, Mr Speaker.

1095

Hon. D J Bossino: This arises from the press statement issued by the Government in relation to its attendance at this trade fair where they make somewhat of a song and dance about meetings with the airlines currently operating to Gibraltar and with bmibaby. Can the Minister report to this House how those negotiations, if I could put it in those terms, are progressing, and will he also confirm that, in fact, those contacts, if I could put it in those terms, had already been established by this party when it was on the other side of this House?

1100

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, yes, in the first part of the question, to answer my hon. Friend, I did have meetings with British Airways, with easyJet, with Monarch and with bmibaby. In respect of bmibaby, we in fact went to visit them at their offices, because of course we were discussing the inaugural flight to Gibraltar, the possibility of other routes etc. I met with the other air carriers at Gibraltar House in London. It is very early stages to say, but it is fair to say that we did discuss the possibilities of regional connectivity from different airports in London.

1105

1110 As the hon. Member knows, we are considering the entire tourism policy and the fact is that I am not straightaway a believer of the road travel show philosophy. My view is quickly coming to the conclusion that it is much more beneficial in terms of bringing business to Gibraltar of having one-to-one meetings and building personal relationships. So I held those meetings. They were preliminary introductory meetings where 1115 we did not actually get down to the nitty-gritty of discussing possible regional connectivity. I have already, obviously, stayed in touch through correspondence. We are planning a second series of meetings to make sure that there is that permanent liaison with the top people at those industries to ensure that when Gibraltar is discussed and there is the idea of having regional connectivity from any part of the UK, they know that they can contact the Minister or Mr Guerrero straight away to have that discussion.

1120 In answer to the second part of his question, I am afraid that I have to tell him that the air carriers were not very much aware of the incentive schemes that were available to be able to fly to Gibraltar and, in fact, without wishing to put down my predecessor who used to be responsible for tourism, they seemed to be delighted with the fact that we were making such efforts in making personal contact and they wished that that had been the case in the past, and that now, whenever there is the possibility of flying to Gibraltar, they know they can pick up the phone and call me personally.

1125 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am not sure whether the last bit of the Minister's reply is in fact wholly correct, and I suggest he is putting a spin to it which does not quite reflect reality.

As I understand it from speaking to his predecessor, Mr Holliday, I think the contact that he had with the top echelons, the chief executives of these companies, was in fact very good and very close, and in fact, as a result of his efforts, Mr Speaker, b-me-ibaby ... and I stand to be corrected but as I understand it, b-me-ibaby 1130 was already committed, (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) is already committed (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) to start flight operations to Gibraltar.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, as I understand it, that was Mr Britto, not Mr Holliday.

1135 Hon. D J Bossino: All I am saying is my information is coming from Mr Holliday and I can reveal that to the House without difficulty, because as I understand it, it was Mr Holliday who had the contacts with these airlines.

Can he confirm that b-me-i-baby, which is one of the airlines he mentions in his press statement is... b-me-i?

1140 Hon. N F Costa: bmi.

Hon. D J Bossino: bmi – sorry – is coming to Gibraltar in March, I believe it is.

1145 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I have already said yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: Though not as a result of any of his efforts. Is that the case? (Interjections) Maybe he can answer that particular question.

1150 Hon. N F Costa: Sorry?

Hon. D J Bossino: Is it not as a result, would he agree, of his efforts, but really of the predecessor in post?

1155 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that question rests on the untrue assumption that I have at any point said that the result where bmibaby is flying to Gibraltar was as a result of my efforts. I have never ever said that, because it just would have been a patent falsehood.

1160

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Heritage, culture, tourism and the environment
Government's co-ordinated approach; register of projects

1165

Clerk: Question 313, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1170

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Deputy Chief Minister advise where the register of projects, announced by the Government in connection with – this is a bit of a long question – the first inter-ministerial meeting to promote a co-ordinated approach to heritage, culture, tourism and the environment will be kept?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1175

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the register of projects will be kept electronically and access will be allowed to the relevant Departments.

Hon. D J Bossino: So, just to clarify, the register of projects will be available in the Convent?

1180

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: No. 6 Convent Place?

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: It will be kept electronically.

1185

Hon. D J Bossino: And therefore it is available to anybody who has an interest – to the public at large, if I can put it in those terms – is it not?

1190

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: It is available only to the Departments who are interested, who are taking part in the inter-ministerial committee. It is an internal committee and an internal register.

Hon. D J Bossino: Fine. So when the Government said, in its press, that a register of projects will be kept in order to be able to record progress on each of them, the checking up on progress, if I could put it in those terms, is for the various component parts of the group, as opposed to the public. Can he confirm that?

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is correct.

1200

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Heritage Action Committee
Meetings held since 9th December 2011

1205

Clerk: Question 240, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Heritage say how many times the Heritage Action Committee has met since 9th December 2011?

1210

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Heritage Action Committee has met on one occasion, on Thursday, 23rd February 2012.

1215

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Minister, as a result, does he intend to make available the recommendations and discussions held... sorry, the matters discussed by the Heritage Action Committee for perusal by interested bodies? Does he intend to make those available, perhaps online, like tends to be the trend with other entities?

1220 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, that was not discussed in the first meeting, but I am sure I will discuss it in the next meeting, and just to say to the Minister that at least the Heritage Action Committee now are given the option to meet bi-monthly, so that it is more regular, and therefore the flow of information will be more attainable to the Minister and the Members.

1225

Heritage Action Committee Membership

1230 Clerk: Question 241, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Heritage say who the current members of the Heritage Action Committee are?

1235 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, yes, the members of the Heritage Action Committee are as follows: myself, as Chairman; Prof. Clive Finlayson; Dr Geraldine Finlayson; Dr Darren Fa; Mr Mario Mosquera; Ms Claire Montado; Mr Nicky Guerrero; Mr Paul Origo; Mr Dennis Beiso; and Mr Carl Viagas.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker.

1245 Given that the Minister has answered by giving me the names, rather than the title of a particular position that that person might hold as an employee, are these individual members of the Heritage Action Committee on a personal basis or is it, for example, because... if we can quote, Mr Mosquera and Ms Montado happen to be, respectively, the Chair and the CEO of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, these are the same members that he had in his Committee. There has not been any change, except myself, so he should know who they are, but I will give it to him.

1250 Prof. Clive Finlayson is in the Heritage Department. Dr Geraldine Finlayson –

Hon. E J Reyes: I may save the Member some time. It is not quite what I am asking him.

1255 Two things. One is he is not purposely, but I think there is a slight error... They are not exactly the same members that were there when I was, but it does not matter, Minister. What I am trying to get at is are these individuals there as a result of ex officio, for example, because one of them happens to be the Chairperson of the Heritage Trust, and that is why they are invited to be a member, or is it because a particular person carries a particular wealth, knowledge or experience, and therefore they are appointed or invited to become a member on a personal holder basis? There is nothing hidden in there.

1260 I am trying to establish, should the Heritage Trust decide at its next annual general meeting to change the chair, does it follow from there that the new chairperson then automatically takes over without having to do anything different?

1265 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, because as far as I understand it, the Heritage Action Committee, which was formed by his party, actually invited people of the different sectors – and they are from different sectors. Mr Mario Mosquera happens to be the Chairman of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust, Ms Claire Montado is the CEO of the Heritage Trust, Mr Nicky Guerrero comes as part of the Tourism Board and he was probably not there before because there has been a difference, in that he is now back into the Tourism Board. Also, Mr Paul Origo because he is the Town Planner and he would probably, if he is absent... and in this case in this meeting he was absent, and Mr Paul Naughton-Rumbo attended, who is the Deputy Town Planner. Mr Dennis Beiso is the Archivist, so he came, I presume, as he originally did as the Archivist, and Mr Carl Viagas is Private Secretary of the CM.

So, yes, Mr Speaker, basically they are people who are in different positions and if they do change, I presume that the Action Committee will send all... the heritage staff, for example, will send to the Action Committee the right person.

1275

Jazz Festival Arrangements

1280

Clerk: Question 242, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture provide details of the organisational arrangements being made to hold a Jazz Festival in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Ministry of Culture is, indeed, organising an international Jazz Festival that will be held in the last week in June 2012.

1290

The Festival organisation is being co-ordinated by staff at the Ministry, with help and advice from the Gibraltar Jazz Society. There will also be collaboration with the Department of Education and schoolchildren will have the opportunity of attending jazz workshops during the morning being given by the international musicians.

The Ministry will shortly be inviting applications from local entities for the provision of sound and light, as well as a stage.

Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council
Meetings held since 9th December 2011

1300

Clerk: Question 243, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the dates when the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council and/or any of its sub-committees have met since 9th December 2011?

1305

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Sports Advisory Council met as a full Council on 24th January 2012. The sub-committee of the Sports Development Projects met on 15th January 2012.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.

The Minister might be aware that there has been a call by representatives of certain local sports organisations, asking for more openness in access to either attend or to look at the Minutes and so on of meetings of the Sports Advisory Council and all its sub-committees. Does the Minister have any views of whether he will accede to that request?

1315

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it has not come to my attention, that request, but I am sure that, within the next meeting, which we are having even more regularly than it used to happen, if that comes up... I even dare to say that I would even propose it myself.

1320

So I have no problem in being more open if the Committee wants, because it is up to the Committee, not up to me, but up to the Committee if they wanted to have it in public. I am open to have it public.

1325

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you.

I am not entirely clear what the Minister said, 'if the matter comes up'. The matter has been aired through the media as a proposal from a locally registered sporting association, who I think currently hold a seat within the Sports Advisory Council, so how can the matter come up?

The Minister does not seem to have been able to read that letter to the press that was published. Can he then say how on earth can these people put the matter as an item on the agenda?

Hon. S E Linares: If there is an association already, they have representation and they can represent themselves in the Advisory Council, anyway. I have not read the right letter. I must have been very busy in the office meeting people all day and, therefore, I have not had the chance to read that letter.

But, like I said, if that is the case, I have no problem whatsoever to even propose myself for these meetings to be public, to be open, so that everybody can listen to everything that is happening in this Committee which, I daresay, it is incredible that it has come out now when we are in Government. But, look, I am quite open to having open meetings, no problem.

Swimming pool emergency repairs
Details of cost

Clerk: Question 244, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure now provide details of the costs incurred to carry out the emergency repairs at the 25 metre swimming pool, as explained in answer to Question No. 121 of 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, the costs incurred to carry out the emergency repairs at the 25 metre swimming pool, as explained in answer to Question 121 of 2012, is £1,302.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, was the hon. Member, as a result of having carried out those repairs and so on... has he been able to advance on an issue that we both share, the long pending saga of the air treatment? Have we managed to make some better progress for the benefit of the pool users?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, absolutely. We have the CEO of the Sports and Leisure Authority has already identified what type of air treatment we are going to put. We have even put more budget this year, in order... or at least, I have put more budget because it has to be yet approved and, as we work, we put in budgets to see how much we can spend on different issues.

I can tell him that I have worked with the CEO of the Sports and Leisure Authority to see how we can not only do the air treatment, but a whole refurbishment of the pool and the poolside and all the pool areas, including the new pool.

Gibraltar Rugby Football Union Playing facilities

Clerk: Question 245, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure say what playing facilities are currently available to the Gibraltar Rugby Football Union?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar

Rugby Football Union has a total of 17½ hours of allocation available to them on a weekly basis, as follows: Westside School outside area, 1 hour; Bayside Sports Centre, pitch number two, 5½ hours; Bayside Sports Centre, archery area, 9 hours; Bayside Sports Centre, north junior pitch, 1 hour; Bayside Sports Centre, south junior pitch, 1 hour.

1385 Mr Speaker, I understand that this is not for competition, but only for training purposes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that.

1390 The reason why I am asking this to the Minister is I am taking it for granted that he is aware that the Gibraltar Rugby Football Union seem to be in quite an advanced and favourable position of being able to obtain membership of at least the European, if not the world, governing body, and therefore I think we both share the same thing. We have become victims of our own success in the promotion of sports and, therefore, there are now greater demands for use of facilities.

1395 Does the Hon. Minister have perhaps in mind some further provisions so that they may have at least a competitive type of pitch in order to progress in the game?

Hon. S E Linares: Absolutely, Mr Speaker.

1400 I have met with the Rugby fraternity, or at least the people who are the coach, the Chairman of the Rugby Football Union, a number of times. We are working very closely because we are looking at the short term because the short term is that, for now, we have not got a rugby pitch and therefore, because we have not at the moment got a rugby pitch, we have got to try and do sort of like a patch-up work.

1405 We are trying to negotiate with the Devil's Tower Camp to see how much we can use that extra for the rugby because the rugby could use that area at least for now because, in the medium to long term, we have already discussed with them about the development of the Europa Ground with cricket. So we are going to combine it with rugby and cricket and there might be some football, but at least when the development of the Europa area comes along, then the rugby fraternity will have a permanent ground to play in and, therefore, all... and I am hoping, as well, that they can bring even international tournaments to Gibraltar.

1410 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker. I am really pleased to see that the Minister tends to have the same approach and philosophy for the future as I also have in mind.

One thing, Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister know, or does he need to give it further thought in discussions with the Minister of Defence in order to be able to use the Devil's Tower Camp?

1415 Can I respectfully suggest to him that it might be more beneficial for sports persons that the allocations at Devil's Tower Camp are taken over by the Sports and Leisure Authority, who then, in turn, sublet to a particular association like, in this case, rugby, because it would allow us to develop, perhaps, a better partnership with the Ministry of Defence, rather than having bodies who then... individual sports associations then compete against each other to see who can get first... who can buy the PTI Devil's Tower Camp more drinks in order to compete for locations? I am saying this because I am offering myself to work together with the Hon. Minister for the development of sports, especially rugby, who I sincerely hope are successful in their application for international membership.

1420 Hon. S E Linares: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for the offer, which I am happy to take and have no problem in trying to work.

1425 On the Devil's Tower Camp, I can tell him that he is absolutely right. It is beneficial for the GSLA but they are a bit reluctant in giving that to the GSLA to control.

Thank you.

Hon. E J Reyes: Since we represent the shareholders, perhaps the directors there will also have to do what the shareholders want.

1430 Hon. S E Linares: Thank you.

1435

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority Board
Meetings held since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 246, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1440

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the dates when the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority Board have met since 9th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1445

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority Board will be meeting – it has not met yet – on 21st March 2012.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, the same there.

1450

Given that this is a board of directors who have to carry out business, as prescribed by law and so on, is the Minister considering holding these meetings in open or at least publishing the minutes and so on, on, the formal Board meetings for the future?

1455

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I repeat the same as before, that it would be up to the Board themselves to discuss it, the issue and, like I said, I personally do not have any problem with that. If they feel that they do not want to be in the public eye or do not want to publish for one reason or another, it is up to them, but I am quite open to that.

1460

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Families and Community Affairs Head 5-A expenditure

1465

Clerk: Question 247, the Hon. J J Netto.

1470

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government state what is the tentative expenditure figure as at the end of February 2012 for Head 5-A Families and Community Affairs and whether, given the rate of expenditure, there might be an overspend at the end of the financial year and, if so, by how much, and in which sub-heads?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1475

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Could the hon. Member at least explain what he means by no?

Hon. J J Bossano: I mean the answer to Question 247 is no.

Hon. J J Netto: Therefore meaning that he will not provide the information.

Hon. J J Bossano: Meaning that the information is not available to me at this point in time and, therefore, I cannot supply it to him.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not going to go regurgitating the same arguments that I did in February or January of this year, because that is in the record in Hansard, but as the hon. Member knows, what prompted this particular question was when he said, in the February meeting, that he used to ask similar questions of this particular nature in order to see whether the particular head had been exceeded or not. So, basically, this particular question has been modelled on the same basis as he said it before.

1490 But it seems to me that, even by trying to model my question on the same questions that he used to ask when he was in that position, he seems to be in a position that he is not willing to give the information. Is that the case?

1495 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, it is not the case that anything that he has said is true because, in fact, I have not asked at any time in any financial year in March for the figure at the end of the previous month, after a period of two weeks.

1500 The questions that I used to ask, which did not go into asking about the subheads, about which subhead had been exceeded, whether it was estimated that it was going to be an overspend, or any of those additional elements, was limited – if he cares to look back, because clearly he does not remember – to asking for the end of September, what had been spent in the first six months of the year. The answer that I normally got, if I asked for it in October, or November or December, was that it was too soon to give me the information and that I should wait until January.

1505 That is what I was referring to when I pointed him to how often the information was available previously. The answer was that it was available previously for a six-month period and it was then described as a ‘tentative’ figure which would change and it was then further conditioned by saying the figures for the first six months were not necessarily an indication of what was happening the whole year. Certainly, I have never been given – or asked for, or expected to get, for that matter – information within a fortnight of the time that the civil servants are working on it. This is information that we will get at the end of March, in order to start looking at the figures that we need to bring to the House in terms of a forecast out-turn. It is not information that I am asking for being provided for, although I would expect which could be... in fact, whatever tentative figures are produced today could change in a week’s time.

1510 Hon. J J Netto: Is the hon. Member saying, therefore, that he will be in a position by the end of March, if I ask a question in April, to give me the answer?

1515 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am not saying that I will be in a position at the end of March to give him the answer about February.

1520 What I am saying is that at the end of March we have to close the books. Therefore, it is only once the books have been closed, at the end of March, that we will have some idea whether there is going to be an overspend at the end of the financial year, because a bill can come in during February and be paid, or it may not come in during February and be paid and if it comes in during February, as the hon. Member knows, we operate cash accounts.

1525 So the books show, at the end of the day, what has been paid, as at the end of the financial year. It is only when that has happened that the controlling officers and the Treasury will start working out what are the forecast out-turns that will go into the book that we will bring to this House, which will show the proposed expenditure and the estimated out-turn. Therefore, the estimates that he is asking me for, in respect of February, I do not have, I have not asked for, and I do not think it is reasonable to provide at this stage.

1530 Hon. J J Netto: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1535 Of course, there are many hypothetical scenarios in terms of expenditure, which can occur at any moment in time in the financial year that may bring about an overspend on a particular head but, all things being equal, Mr Speaker, when I do stand up to ask for a forecast out-turn at a particular moment in time, of a particular month of the year, that information can be given with a caveat, of course, that things can change if unexpected expenditure will take place.

1540 It seems to me, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Member is not going to provide this kind of information, no matter in what form or shape I present a question. So, perhaps, in my supplementary question, which was going to be directed to the Chief Minister... but I notice that he is not here right now in the Chamber, so perhaps if I direct it to the Deputy Chief Minister, he may be able to discuss it later on with the Chief Minister.

1540 Mr Speaker, when we were in government during 16 years, very often the then Chief Minister used to offer the Leader of the Opposition the possibility of having a select committee – a public accounts select committee. In fact, he even went to the extent of saying that he would even place the Leader of the Opposition as chairman of the public accounts committee. Therefore, my supplementary question is that, given the parliamentary reforms that the Government is considering, will he not consider also having a select committee 1545 on public accounts?

At the end of the day, the line of questions which I am asking is money that we have all asked for – sorry – that we have all participated and voted for in the Appropriation Bill and it seems to me that the whole aim of asking this particular question is to scrutinise the Government in terms of public accounts. It seems to me that if we are moving forward to scrutinise the Government, we should adopt the same practices that, basically, were not just necessarily the House of Commons, but the Scottish Parliament, the Welsh Assembly and, no doubt, other jurisdictions, whether Jersey, Guernsey or the Isle of Man, also do have means available to all Members, whether they are on the Government side or the Opposition side, to be able to scrutinise the Government on public accounts. The only place I can think of unless, of course, I am mistaken, is Gibraltar.

We did offer to them when they were in Opposition: the hon. Member did not wish to take the offer forward. We on the Opposition benches would like to see, within the context of the parliamentary reform, whether we can have a select committee on public accounts so, at the very least, we know that this matter of looking at public accounts can be taken into account.

Will the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister take this proposal from the Opposition to the Government so that it can look into that in the context of parliamentary reform? Yes or no?

1560

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think the question, the supplementary, has any relevance to the original question.

Mr Speaker: It is not directly relevant, but it is up to the Minister, if he feels he wants to answer it.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member talks about the possibility of a select committee and the matter going forward.

As the hon. Member well knows, there is a Commission, which has been set up to advise and make recommendations, which will be debated in this Parliament. No doubt, the hon. Member will write to the Commission with his views, as to what parliamentary procedure should be adopted going forward and the Commission will, I am sure, take those views into account.

But there is a Commission that is looking into all these matters and that is the proper place to consider this.

Hon. J J Netto: With respect, Mr Speaker, it is not for me to inform the Commission on what the Opposition may or may not like, this is the place, this is the Parliament, where we actually raise matters to the Government and I am raising to the Government whether they can give some thought to the possibility of having a select committee on public accounts, which is the norm in most western democracies. I am putting it directly to the Government, not to the Commission. Will the Government consider that?

I remember, in one of my first questions, when we had the January session, which was on the question of looking at accessibility for disabled persons, access to public buildings, like in the question of Parliament, and the Hon. the Chief Minister stood up and said, 'Of course we will look into that, so that disabled people can have access to the particular Parliament.' So I do not see why, when I am asking directly a question to a member of the Government, that the Government cannot take it on board and look into the matter?

1585

Mr Speaker: Access to a public building like this House is something which the Government can deal with, without the need for a select committee or a commission, but the procedural matter which the hon. Member wishes the Government to look into, has been answered by the Minister for Justice as a matter which has been... or within the remit of the Electoral Commission, so it is a different issue.

1590

Hon. D A Feetham: May I, just in relation to that, add this, that my understanding from conversations certainly I have had together with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, with the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister, is that is not intended that the Opposition would make suggestions to the select committee on parliamentary reform, neither is it intended the Government would make suggestions to the select committee on parliamentary reform and that suggestions on this side of the House on parliamentary reform would be made on a bilateral basis. That is my understanding of discussions that we have had.

1595

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Opposition may or may not wish to make submissions but, certainly, the party that they belong to is free to make those submissions to the Commission, which they 1600 would then consider.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I please have an answer, if they wish to answer the question?

1605 Will the Government consider the possibility, within the process of parliamentary reform, to introduce a select committee on public accounts? Yes or no?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is pretending to be asking a supplementary to a question about five – Head 5A, Families and Community Affairs – about the expenditure up to February this year.

1610 I do not know what he thinks a public accounts committee would be doing, but he seems to have a notion that a public accounts committee would effectively do the role of the controlling officer of the head, because what is wrong with this question now and what was wrong with the question that he asked before, and what has never been asked in the 39 years that I have been here, is a breakdown of a head of expenditure, where it has payments to the Social Assistance Fund, contributions to the Statutory Benefits Fund, contributions to the Care Agency, additional contributions, general expenses for consumer affairs, electricity and water, telephone service, printing and stationery, Citizens' Advice Bureau, contracted services for inspections, office cleaning, 1615 personal emoluments, overtime, temporary assistance, pension contributions – now that is one head of expenditure.

If one were to go through this on a monthly basis, and debate it and if that was a role of a select committee of the House, or a public accounts committee of the House, they would be doing nothing else. This is the job that the Civil Service does.

1620 I do not know if they used to spend all the time doing this when they were in office, but certainly he spent all the time telling us in this House what the answers to all these questions was in terms of whether the estimate for the year have been exceeded or not exceeded in the first month, the second month, the third month, the fourth month, and so on throughout the year – which is what he wanted the last time – or in the eleventh month – which is what he wants the first time – but it is not the information that he is going to get 1625 from me. I do not think it is information that makes any sense, or is relevant because, in effect, we would be able to replace all the Civil Service with him, if he was so interested in doing that.

He used to accuse me of number crunching, but I think he takes the cake!

Disabled persons in long-term employment Withdrawal of Disability Allowance

1635 Clerk: Question 248, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Security say how many disabled persons in long-term employment or supported employment have received letters from the DSS to the effect that the Disability Allowance is being withdrawn?

1640 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as I indicated in answer to Question 127 of the last parliamentary session, 16 disabled persons were informed that their Disability Allowance would be reduced on a staggered basis.

1645 The Department of Social Security, following our exchanges, where he expressed concern that they would finish up worse off, has introduced a formula which guarantees that the first reduction is in the month of March, because in February they did not touch the allowance, because they had been paid the allowance at the beginning of the month and they had been paid the wages at the end. The first deduction is in March, that is 25% for people who are getting the higher rate of the allowance and 12.5% for people who are getting the 1650 lower rate. There will be three such deductions, so they will be left with 25% of the higher rate, or 73% of the lower rate, which will guarantee that the amount will be well above what they were getting before, which is what worried him.

I have taken it into account and I have asked Miss Sacramento to make sure that the formula does not lead to what he was worried about.

1655 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that particular information, but do I take it, just for my own satisfaction in my mind, that the whole process – because, obviously, I have seen a copy of the letter that has gone out to a recipient, that letter, and trying to match the content of that letter with the statement that he has just made, I seem to get the impression that what the Department may have done, is say ‘We are going to issue a letter to these particular disabled persons. Let’s get the file out, let’s see the details of the circumstances of that particular person and then we will act in accordance to the manner in which you have just described now.’

1660 But, of course, even in that particular process, there is also a concern in my mind, in the sense that when a person gets a Disability Allowance – the vast majority, with a very few exceptions – is when they are born. The Department collects all the medical certificates, all the information and then they take a determination whether the Disability Allowance is given or not given.

1665 That happens when the disabled child is born, but 15, 20, 25 years later, that particular disabled person is in the position of this particular person we are discussing right now, may find – and it is probably the case, given the nature of disabilities – that there may have been a deterioration of the condition or disability of the person, so what I am trying to match, if you like, is the file in the Department at the time when the disabled child was born may not match necessarily the circumstance of the disabled persons later on, 20 years later on.

1670 So could I now then ask the hon. Gentleman that, perhaps what is missing here is the possibility that, before issuing a letter, or even in issuing a letter to a disabled person, that at least the Department may say something to the effect of, say, however, if your circumstances have changed, please come along so that we can update our information, in case there are other circumstances that we need to take into account, just as I was saying before, in terms of equipment, maybe expensive services which may be expensive, I don’t know – things of that nature, generally speaking, to do with the necessities of disabled persons. I think that it would help both persons. It would help the Department to update the records, but it would also help the disabled person if he feels aggrieved that, perhaps, the conclusion or that decision has not taken into account any change or any worsening of disability of that person.

1675 Will the hon Member take that into account?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes Mr Speaker, I will certainly pass on his ideas and suggestions, so that the Department could see how they can give effect to what he thinks can be more helpful now. I am going to inform any suggestions that he has that there will be a benefit to those concerned.

1685 All I want to say is that, in fact, there are more than 16 people in the category – the 16 people were the people who are getting before either £450 because they were officially in a full time job or in full time training, as it was called then, or the £225 because they were supposedly working only 2 or 3 hours. So those are the 16, and those are the ones that are being replaced by either £912 or £456, which are the new rates.

All that we have done is to make sure, following his intervention last time, that those people are not finishing up worse off, when we intended was to better them. But I take on board his additional suggestions and I will certainly pass them on to the Department.

1690 Thank you.

1695 Persons in receipt of Social Assistance
Detailed breakdown

Clerk: Question 249 the Hon. J J Netto

1700 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, has the Minister for Social Security had the opportunity to ask his staff at the DSS to see if information with regard to persons receiving social assistance can be provided, broken down in groups of less than 3 months, 3 to 6, 6 to 12 months, 12 to 24 months, 2 to 10 years, sorry 2 to 10 years and over 10 years and if so can they be provided at the end of February 2012, if not then provide the information in the usual manner as before for the same dates.

1705 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the answer is ‘yes’, in terms that I have had the opportunity to ask the staff to see if they could do something about it, but I 1710 regret that the answer is 'no', in that the reply I have had is that they cannot, for the explanation that they gave the last time.

They say that if they... when they can tell me the number of people there are today if I ask for the information today, but the way the information is kept does not show how long they have been there. I imagine that it would mean that, if there are 554 in January, the 554 files in January can be looked at individually and there will be something there since they are limiting themselves to providing the breakdown, or providing the answer, from the information that they have in this Excel spreadsheet: all that they are able to give me is that.

1715 I suppose I can ask them if they can find the time to do a manual check of the 500 people but I cannot see them doing it any other way: it is not available electronically. So, on that basis, all I can do is update the information I gave him on the last occasion and I now pass the relevant information which shows the figures in January and the figures in February.

Answer to Question 249 of 2012

Persons in receipt of social assistance by age and gender in 2012

Month	Age						Total	Male	Female
	Under 18	18/25	26/35	36/45	46/60	Over 60
January	1	87	136	136	172	22	554	210	344
February	1	84	135	138	169	22	549	204	345

1725 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful but, as the information comes across, I think that we both recognise the fact that it would have been very useful if the system would have allowed to extract that particular information.

1730 We both recognise, even we both admit – our knowledge of IT is quite limited – the fact that a Microsoft Excel programme is very limited by nature, by being able to get this particular information. It may be the fact that the kind of information that we want to extract from an Excel programme is not possible at all. But could I ask the Minister, perhaps, whether the Department will consider, I don't know, investing some amount of money to have a database programme that may be able to extract this particular information without necessarily being disproportionate in the effect on the staff there? Will he consider that?

1735 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, frankly, Mr Speaker, my priority is to reduce the number of people in receipt of Social Assistance. I mean I am more interested in putting the effort into seeing what we can do, because I think we need to remember that something of the order of half the people here are considered to be employable. That is the information I have been given, right. In fact, something like a third of them register as unemployed, it is just that they have exhausted the thirteen weeks, so it may be that, if I am successful, as I hope I will be, in bringing this figure down, once it is smaller and we are then left with the people that are likely to be on Social Assistance for a number of reasons that make it very difficult to put into employment... I think we have got, for example... I think the hon. Member has got the figure of the age groups.

1740 I would say probably people that are getting Social Assistance over the age of 60, of whom there are only 22, would be people that may have been there a very long time and people that may not be... it may not be possible to put into employment. Clearly, those who are in the under 25 are the people who have probably come out of the labour market, exhausted the thirteen weeks and have not found a job. So those are the two extremes of the distribution of those on Social Assistance, and what I can promise him is that I will revisit this depending on how successful we are in bringing down.

1745 I think it would be a lengthy and complicated exercise with as many as 500 or 600 but I think if we had a smaller number we would probably be able to do what he wants.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think we both share the same objective, in the sense that, ultimately,

1755 what we want is to reduce, if possible, the number of people on Social Assistance and the other reason, in pursuing this particular question, is that, if we have the tools available to be able to examine this in more detail, then our minds can be focused more attentively as to why a particular group of people and certain ages may be finding difficulties in getting employment because they may have other circumstances which impedes them employment. He used the phrase 'unemployable' –

1760 Hon. J J Bossano: I used the opposite.

Hon. J J Netto: 'The opposite', which is not a phrase which I particularly like using at all.

Hon. J J Bossano: 'No, employable', I said.

1765 Hon. J J Netto: 'Employable' you used... I'm sorry, I misunderstood you, then.

I think there may be some people in very, very severe circumstances not being able to find employment, but I am sure, to some degree or other, some people could be trained to some type of employment, even if it may be supported employment of some kind.

1770 But, anyway, that is a discussion of a different order, and I am grateful that, at the end of the day, the Minister will take it back because, obviously, it is useful for the Government and it is useful for everyone.

Thank you very much.

1775 Gibraltarians registered unemployed
Numbers aged 60-64 and 65 and above

Clerk: Question 250, the Hon. J J Netto.

1780 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Employment state the number of Gibraltarians registered unemployed between the ages of 60 to 64, and 65 and over, broken down in periods of unemployment of up to 1 year, 2 years, 5 years, and 10 years or more?

1785 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of Gibraltarians 65 years and over registered unemployed is one. That one person has been up to one year registered.

1790 The number of Gibraltarians in the age range 60 to 64 registered unemployed up to one year, 10; up to two years, 10; up to five years, 10; and in excess of 10 years, 12.

1795 Gibraltar Development Corporation
Board meetings held since General Election

Clerk: Question 251, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1800 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many times the Board of the Gibraltar Development Corporation has met since the General Election?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1805 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): The number is none, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 252, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask a supplementary question to the question before?
Could the Hon. Minister say who are the members of the Board, please?

Hon. J J Bossano: I believe the information is published and I am told there is another question dealing with this. (Hon. J J Netto: Sorry?) I believe there is another question on this, (Interjection) but it is published, anyway – the information is public.

Future Job Strategy
Civil Service placements

Clerk: Question 252, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether any trainees under the Future Job Strategy scheme have been placed in Civil Service Departments to undertake their training or part of their training?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: How many, please?

Hon. J J Bossano: The number in Government Departments is 34 and in Agencies and Authorities is 41, making a total of 75.

Hon. D A Feetham: Do these trainees satisfy minimum entry requirements for the Civil Service, those that have been placed in Government Departments and do the others that have been placed in Agencies satisfy minimum entry requirements to those Agencies?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the bulk of the people are in the Departments and in the Agencies, where there under the previous VTS schemes so, out of the total, only 14 are people who come in in February as a result of the system that was introduced on 1st February.

The rest are people – the other 61 – that were there already. I do not know whether they used to have to have the requirements for joining the Civil Service, but the training that they are getting, and the training that they have been getting, was not on the basis that there would be a Civil Service job at the end of it.

So that is the answer.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask the Hon. Minister for Employment what training has been given to these particular persons?

Hon. J J Bossano: The nature of the training that is being given depends on the area... for example, there are two or three people who are with GBC, who were with GBC since before the last election. Whatever it is that they were being trained to do before the last election is what they are being trained to do now!

These people, in many instances, the feedback that we are getting is that the Departments, or even in the private sector, they were taken on because they were asked to take them on, on the basis that the experience that they were getting in doing administrative work, or whatever it was, would improve their prospects of employment – not that they were being trained on the basis that GBC had three vacancies and was going to take the three trainees. That is not the case and it was not the case before.

One of the things that is going to be happening, of course, is that to the extent... Remember that the bulk of the people that we have got in the Employment Training Company are the people who were previously in Bleak House, and shown as employees of Bleak House, deployed elsewhere.

To the extent that the people have been deployed in a place where the employer in the private sector is telling us, 'Well, look, really, I have got nothing for this person here – I thought I was doing the Government a favour, instead of the other way round' then what we are trying to do is put them in the public sector so that at least they are learning something and we are actually achieving some return on the money we are investing in their training. I think it is training that will stand them in good stead.

Therefore, that process is driven by people in the Department saying, look, I have got a backlog... for example, of... If I give a concrete example, so that the hon. Member will then get an idea of what this is about. The Social Security people have got a problem every time we have a number of people in the construction industry who have been laid off who are frontier workers, as happened recently. Those people who turned up asking for some EU paper that enables them, on the other side, to get paid unemployment benefit as a result of their employment record in Gibraltar, the Department has a problem in meeting that, and people obviously get very uptight, so they are saying, 'Is it possible to give me a trainee to help me clear this backlog to stop all these people queuing up here complaining?'

That kind of training is an ad hoc training and it is being done because we do not want to terminate the people that were already there. Therefore, the people who were already in the VTS will, if the scheme works as I want it to work, eventually finish up in doing dedicated training for a dedicated job. But I think the fact that they have been working, there were some half a dozen in the Tax Office, for example, who are still there; but it does not mean that there are six vacancies in the Tax Office that these people are going to fill and it was never the case.

I do not know, for example, in respect of the original thing, where the fact that the VTS people from Bleak House placed them in the Tax Office meant that only the ones who had five GCSEs could go there. That I do not know.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, clearly, whether it is work experience or training, it is better than doing nothing and I agree with the hon. Member that if the Government wants to encourage the private sector employers to support training programmes then the Government has got to be willing to participate as an employer and not exclude itself.

All that said, this was something that concerned us at the time when people started to be placed in Government Departments. Would the hon. Member acknowledge that there is a danger of and, therefore, will he agree to keep an eye on, the fact that if the Government is not careful about this it ends up as an informal preferential recruitment channel into the Civil Service generally, because if you have been a trainee – a 'placee', let's call them – for a number of years, you then have a huge advantage over other applicants, when there are vacancies in the Civil Service.

It is a very thin line between providing worthwhile training placements from which to do the public sector benefits, as well as the training on the one hand, and care needs to be taken that this does not become the equivalent of the housing pre-list and that, therefore, the people that have been doing this are obviously going to be more attractive candidates. Therefore, people who are not placed in the public service and are placed in the private sector see themselves at a disadvantage when public sector jobs come up – and no-one will want to accept a placement in the private sector. It just needs to be kept an eye on, I would ask him to consider, so that it does not acquire that folkloric, or worse, real significance.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I do agree that we need to be careful that that does not happen.

I have to tell him, Mr Speaker, that we do not expect that, beyond this year, we shall be having those kinds of numbers. It is just that there are two elements in this: one is that the ones that were already in the public sector are in the public sector because of not being able to move them to the private sector. Given that the ones that were in the private sector are now getting £912, in some cases the employer said, 'Look, really, you can take this person tomorrow, because I really have not got that much for him to do'. I remember one particular case – I do not know whether I have mentioned it to the House – the guy said, 'Look, the only training I have been able to give is to put these people to shredding, and now I have got nothing left to shred!'

So we are likely to see, I think, over the next few months, probably an increase of those in the public sector, simply because they have been shifted from the private sector, with the expectation that the move will be in the opposite direction at a later stage, because we do not want to terminate the VTS unit. I think it will be wrong to terminate it for the VTS people who are already there in January and to be taking people away who are not there in January.

So the answer to his question is that I agree entirely with the analysis that he has made. In fact, to the extent that we use the public sector, we would use them on specific targeted work which has got a beginning and an end, and therefore not on a long running basis.

1920 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he help us with this: how many of these 75 trainees are actually undertaking any form of structured training? That is the question that I asked. It was about training; it was not about work experience as such.

I am aware, in relation to a number of authorities, there were people who were placed on the VTS scheme, where really it amounted to work experience. But I am talking about training. I am just focusing on Government Departments. How many people in Government Departments are actually doing formal training, under the Future Job Strategy?

1925 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I think there were some people who were doing some business NVQ and those people were probably in the Treasury or the Tax Office and they probably are no more than half a dozen.

1930 But nothing has been changed in terms of what they are doing, other than the amount that they get paid. So, of the 61 that were already there, to the extent that any structured training was taking place before, it is still taking place. The answer is that I do not know to what extent. I think it is more a question of the training being that in their CV they can say we have worked in the Treasury or in the Accountant General's Department, or in the Tax Office or in the Tourist Office – they are spread all over the place.

1935 Except for those who may require sheltered employment and who have been there for a very long time, I think the rest, really, are there simply because it gives them an opportunity to work in an office environment. If we get a vacancy coming in that says, 'I want a receptionist', then we can say we have got a receptionist here that has been doing reception work in three different Government Departments, and therefore they have got the experience that they can go tomorrow into an office and start acting as a receptionist straightaway. I think it is no more than that.

1940 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I am not sure you need any specific training to do shredding or I do not know whether you need any specific training to be a receptionist. I really do not know.

1945 But was not the whole point of the Future Job Strategy to train people for a full time job in areas that were relevant to that full time job, with a guarantee of a full-time job at the end of it? Does he not accept that the way that these trainees are being dealt with is not in accordance with their stated policy and stated aim in accordance with the Future Job Strategy?

1950 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I accept that the stated policy that we have is not what they were doing before, with the 300 or 400 people. What I am telling him is that the bulk of the people who are there are not there because we believe that is what is ideal; they are there because that is where we found them 'parked' when we arrived!

1955 As we move them into the new system – for example, I can tell the hon. Member that there was a particular company that came to see me, in terms of the investment that they were planning to do and their requirements and their willingness to take on trainees and guarantee them employment. In that case, we were able to provide, from the people that were in the VTS, 10 people who were, in fact, university graduates. They were looking for university graduates.

So out of the 10 that we have, who were getting £450 and were spread in different Government Departments, eight were taken by this particular employer. That is what we hope will be happening with all of them – but it is not happening yet.

1960 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that your policy is different from ours. I accept that, but I am here to question you on your policy.

1965 What you have effectively done is you have effectively added to the numbers that are working within Government Departments by 14. Can I ask the hon. Member, where is the guarantee of a job at the end of that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I will tell the hon. Member: the answer to that is that the 14 that are in the scheme that are in the Government Departments – and there are going to be more of them – are the people who, under the policy that he had when he was in Government, he had placed in the private sector with no job guarantee.

1970 I wish I had been able to give 400 job guarantees the first day I arrived in office! Regrettably, it is not possible to do that, but I can guarantee him that the intention is that they will all – all, without exception – finish up in secure jobs at the end of proper training. That is what we are going to do, that is what we are starting to do, and that is not what has yet been completed. But it will certainly be completed.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when it starts getting a little bit controversial, it is almost as if the thought process of the hon. Member when he answers my questions is, 'That is a very good question. Now, let's see whether I can evade it'! That really is the way that the hon. Gentleman approaches the questions.

1980 Now, we certainly were never going to guarantee people jobs, because it is not possible to guarantee people jobs. That is our view! The hon. Members opposite, in their manifesto, said:

'Future Job Strategy: there will be from 1st February a new dedicated Training Strategy with a maximum of three years and a guaranteed full-time job on completion'

1985 Does he not accept that he was conning the electorate, when he made that commitment? (Applause and interjection)

1990 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer to that is the answer I gave him when he asked me a month ago: I accept that he is the expert in conning people, but I do not accept that he has got it right on this occasion. Therefore I reject his accusation and time will tell whether I was conning people before 8th December or he is trying to con them now! Time will tell who is right and who is wrong.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just one final supplementary on this subject.

1995 If you cannot find a job for these people – a permanent job for these trainees – will you undertake to this House to make good on your electoral promise and actually employ these people within the public service in a Government-owned company? (Interjection)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not accept that I am going to fail, and therefore I do not accept that I have to give him any undertakings.

2000 Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask one further supplementary question?

2005 In relation to the 75 trainees – well, if you can call them trainees – which are now being seconded in the Civil Service, how long will be the period for secondment within the Civil Service for these 75?

2010 Hon. J J Bossano: They are not being seconded to the Civil Service, in the sense that – (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) As I have told the hon. Member in my original answer, Mr Speaker, 61 of them were already there and 14 have entered new. They will be there until we have got a job for them in the private sector. We are not going to be sacking anybody from the Employment Company until we have got jobs for them.

Hon. J J Netto: Therefore, there is no prospect of some of them not getting a job in the private sector? They will remain placed in the Civil Service?

2015 Hon. J J Bossano: All these questions, Mr Speaker, are driven by the assumption that we are going to fail in achieving the targets we have set. (Interjections) So the answer to the hon. Member is – (Interjections)

2020 No, Mr Speaker, if every question assumes that if I set out to employ 50 people in a month, and I employ 49, what will I do with number 50? Well, the answer is that if I set out to employ everybody, then I assume that I am going to succeed, and if I do not succeed, then I will find a way of protecting them and ensuring they are continuing to be having an income. I will not do what was happening before, which is give people £450 a month for six or seven months – or two or three years – and then sack them, only that they could not say 'I have been sacked', because they were not employees....

2025 When they went to complain to an industrial tribunal, the previous administration argued in the tribunal that they had no protection in law because, in fact, they were... the tribunal did not have the jurisdiction to hear the case.

So the answer is that we are not going to be finding ourselves in that situation and we will not have the protection that they gave themselves when they did.

2030 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the position, then, that the Hon... is the position of the hon. Member this: that if you cannot engage these people in permanent employment in the private sector, they will remain in permanent training mode for the rest of their lives? Is that the position?

2035 Hon. J J Bossano: No, the position of this Member is, Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned I am not going to speculate about what will happen in the future on the assumption that I fail to achieve the targets I have set myself – which they would like me to, but I am not either going to give them that satisfaction, now or in the future.

2040 Future Job Strategy
Adult Nursing Diploma trainees

Clerk: Question 253, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2045 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state why the new arrangements in relation to the Future Job Strategy have not been extended to those people undertaking the adult nursing diploma?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2050 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as already stated in answer to Question 17/2012, the Future Job Strategy is being extended to those people undertaking the adult nursing diploma, once it is established if this is a more favourable option for them than what they are currently getting, or what they are in the process of getting.

2055 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, we certainly know of cases of people undertaking the nursing, adult nursing diploma, where they are still earning £400-and-something. Why is it that these people are not earning the £912 that everybody else is earning and that, effectively, as he has recognised, firstly, in his answer just a few moments ago, that he said in January was going to happen to these people?

2060 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I don't know of those people that he says he knows. If he tells me who they are, I will make sure that they get paid and that they get paid retrospectively. That's all I can tell you. I don't actually monitor each individual myself. I assume that the people who are providing me with the information have done their homework correctly.

2065 I can tell him that what they tell me is that there are some categories of people in adult training who would be getting a bursary or something from the Education Department, clearly not the £450 – a much higher sum – and that those people might actually be worse off, very much like what was happening when the hon. Member asked me about the people on the sheltered employment. So, we want to avoid giving people the £912 and then finding out that their net take home pay is less than what they would have got if they are getting a grant which, apparently, some of them are getting because of some relationship with Kingston. I think these are people who are possibly doing a level of qualification.

2070 There are two issues: one is whether Kingston would consider still being responsible for granting them the qualifications on the basis that they are employees, as opposed to students, which is more of a technicality. And the second one is the monetary effect. The answer is that nobody should be getting £450 any more, and should not have been getting it since 1st February. If the hon. Member passes me the details of those that he knows, I will make sure that it is put right.

2075 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, may I add, I am told by the representatives of these students undertaking the adult course that they have requested a meeting or think, apparently, they are expecting an answer back from your colleague, the Minister for Health, and we have come to this House six weeks after the new sort of rate, or allowances, should have been payable to them and they are none the wiser because the Minister has not, apparently, been able to reply to them.

2080 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the students in question wrote to me and asked me for a meeting and I am seeing people very very soon, and I am waiting to see them. Issues will not necessarily be purely on the question of remuneration, there could be other issues that they want to discuss with me and I am very keen to discuss it with them. I don't think this is relevant to the question that my colleague has answered.

There are issues, as my colleague has rightly said, a lot of them are students of Kingston University, and therefore there is a technicality as to whether that is consistent with them being in full-time employment and certainly because they receive a grant which is tax free, the sums have to guarantee that, as my colleague has said, their income is not reduced once they get the nine hundred and something, which will be taxable and so on. So this is something that we are looking at but, again, as the Hon Minister for Employment has said in no way will these students be prejudiced, and I will add my own personal guarantee to that of my colleague.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but it is not, the Hon Minister said that he is waiting to see them. I think from the students point of view it is that they are waiting to see the Minister, not the other way around.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I must... Sorry, Mr Speaker, I have seen hundreds of people till all hours of the evening and I am glad to do so because I actually enjoy doing it. The suggestion that has been made, that there is any kind of delay in my seeing anyone who wants to see me is preposterous and I am sure there are lots of people out there who will agree with that. If they want to see me they will see me as soon as I have... as soon as they want.

The question is that these are issues that have been dealt with, they have requested to see me and I immediately replied that I would be glad to do so and, for all I know, it is in my diary already, but there is absolutely... I completely reject any suggestion that there is any problem with seeing me at all. People see me more... I have probably seen more people in the last 3 months than my predecessors had seen probably in a year. (Several Members: Hear, Hear) (Applause)

Hon. E J Reyes: It still does not tackle the issue, Mr Speaker. These individuals, like those on the Vocational Training Scheme, were getting £450 a month. If it has become beneficial for those on the training scheme to move away from the tax free £450 into a new £912, taxable, then surely logic tells you it will also be beneficial for these individuals.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, whatever is beneficial is what is going to happen.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Danny Feetham.

Gibraltar General Construction Ltd Employment status of sacked workers

Clerk: Question 254, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many of the 14 resident workers sacked by Gibraltar General Construction Limited, a Government owned company, are now back in employment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this Question, together with 255 and 256.

Construction sector
Update on job losses

2140

Clerk: Question 255

2145

Hon D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many workers have lost their jobs in the construction sector since the answer to Question numbers 15 and 16 of 2012?

Construction sector
Employment status of sacked workers

2150

Clerk: Question 256.

2155

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many of the 31 resident workers identified by him as having been sacked by private construction companies in answer to Question number 16/2012, have now found employment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2160

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, three of the 14 persons have since been employed. The employment service records show that, since the answer to Questions 15 and 16/2012, the terminations of 287 contracts of employment in respect of the construction industry have been notified by employers. Six of the 31 resident workers given in the previous answer have now found employment.

2165

Hon. D A Feetham: Just repeat the last part I didn't quite catch that.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, 6 of the 31. [There was a long silence.]

Hon. D A Feetham: Do these figures include the redundancies made yesterday by Volker Stevin?

2170

Hon J J Bossano: No, these figures are based on the notifications up to Friday.

2175

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we accept that it is entirely right... that it is within the prerogative of the hon. Members opposite not to have continued with GSD construction projects. We also accept, obviously, that it is their prerogative to channel resources into their own projects, but does he not accept that the sudden ceasing of work on Government projects, at the end of last year/beginning of this year, is actually causing significant unemployment within the construction sector, is also placing construction companies in severe difficulties, and is also placing companies who depend on the construction sector into severe difficulty? Does he not accept that?

2180

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not accept any of the conclusions that the hon. Member has reached from the answers that I have given him.

2185

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, you may recall that when we were in Government – sorry, administration, I don't want to offend the Chief Minister – we came out, (Interjection) we came out with a policy in relation to the construction sector, whereby we were spreading the workload around public projects, spreading the workload around amongst construction companies, on condition that those companies then employ residents of Gibraltar from the unemployment, the long-term unemployment, list, or the unemployment list. What measures is the Government doing in order, or what measures is the Government proposing, in order to help construction companies and those operating within the construction sector?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, what is happening, in that respect, is that that policy which was announced in the budget – and which I welcomed from the Opposition – is being continued and expanded and 2195 monitored to a greater degree than it was before. We are now trying to make sure that, in fact, what was intended is happening, which I don't think was happening to a very large extent. In fact, you know from the breakdown by nationality of the people in these contracts, there were very, very few residents in many cases.

2200 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he lose any sleep at night, bearing in mind that he is the Minister for Employment that has actually presided over 250 redundancies up to January and now a further 287 redundancies of workers within this particular sector?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if I did I would have to lose less sleep than Mr Montiel because, in fact, in January and February last year the level of redundancies in the construction sector was 100 more than in January and February this year.

2205 Hon. D A Feetham: What is he doing... are there any specific measures that he is taking, other than a continuation of our policy?

2210 Quite frankly, bearing in mind that I have not seen any new projects that have been commenced by the hon. Members opposite, I do not see how that could have contributed in taking people off the unemployment list, but what extra measures is he, what different measures, is he taking in order to deal with these high levels of unemployment within the construction sector?

2215 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, obviously, the hon. Member, Mr Speaker, does not understand very much of the subject matter for which he is now responsible, because the unemployment that is going up is the unemployment in the Campo area, where 90% of these workers came from. That is to say, if we look at the actual figures of the people that are unemployed...

2220 For example, in one of his questions I have told him that three of the 14 have now found jobs. And I can tell him, because the number is small enough to be able to look at it in more detail that, in fact, four of the remaining 11 are unemployed and seven have not registered as looking for work. So he must not assume that every time there is a notification of a termination it means that there is a person registered as unemployed. As his colleague will tell him, what he used to tell me when I used to make that kind of mistake, that is to say, these are notices of termination received by the Department.

2225 The person whose employment has been terminated can register as unemployed if he is registered as having been employed with a Gibraltar address. Sometimes they do not appear, which suggests that perhaps the Gibraltar address was not a Gibraltar address after all. Those that do are a small proportion of the total. The advantage is that, with the scheme that they initiated and I am, in fact, expanding on, the priority will go to those who are here and have registered and not to those who have disappeared over the horizon.

2230 So, in effect, what is taking place now is that we will be seeing the effect of these changes. There were quite a lot of terminations, in fact, in October and November last year, which are in excess of the terminations that have taken place in January and February and they were because projects were coming to an end.

2235 So it is not that the size of the construction industry was growing until 8th December and started coming down on the 9th. That is not the correct interpretation of the information I am providing him with, if he cares to analyse it.

2240 The fact that there are terminations means that the notices have arrived telling us 'this person is no longer working for me'. It does not necessarily mean that the date of termination and the date of the arrival of the notice, you know... I do not know how long Volker Stevin will take to tell us that they have terminated contracts, but I can tell him that very few people actually keep to the seven days that the law says they should do it in and, as we know from previous discussions of speakers in the House, in some cases even the public sector. Last year we found it was months behind and there were people on the records of ETB who were no longer working there.

2245 So the answer is the level of unemployment amongst construction workers is not going up by anything that would reflect the level of reduction in employment levels that we are seeing, which are no different from what has been happening in the past in terms of the total figures. The total figures for October and November are higher than January and February this year. The total figures for January and February last year was that the figure in January was lower than this year but the figure in February was higher and, for the two months, a hundred more construction workers lost their jobs or were 'sacked', in his terminology, in the two months of last year compared to the two months of this year. So, in fact, less people are losing their jobs in these two months.

2250 Thirdly, within the machinery, within the staffing of the Employment Service, I had long ago an officer who was previously in the Construction Industry Training Centre whose job now is to identify the pool of construction workers amongst the unemployed or amongst people seeking employment who are interested in working in that industry. The whole idea is that, independent of the normal process of people being sent to jobs, if it is a construction job it goes to this person who has got a lot of experience of construction and can, therefore, do a better job in making sure that the people we send to the employer are people that the employer is more likely to accept. I think there was a tendency to send a lot of people and a lot of them were then sent back and the Employment Service said, 'Well, look, you are sending me people that cannot handle work on a building site.'

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, but there is a world of difference to a situation last year, where notices of termination were coming in but, in actual fact, employment within the construction industry in general was actually increasing because of the number of projects that were being undertaken, particularly in the public sector.

2265

What we face, what we now have, is a situation since they were elected into Government, whereby not only are we having very high levels of terminations of employment within the construction sector, but there are no jobs that are being created in this sector because you have frozen the Government projects that were a continuation of the projects that we were undertaking when we were in Government, and because you have also decreased the budget for GJBS from £6 million to £2 million.

2270

But, can he help me with this: out of the 287 notices of redundancies, how many of those are residents of Gibraltar?

Hon. J J Bossano: According to the returns from the employers, 60.

2275 Can I just say, Mr Speaker, in answer to all his preliminaries, first of all, I do not know where he gets the information that we would reduce £6 million from the budget of GJBS. GJBS does not have a budget that is reduced or increased. They do work for the Government. I can tell him, certainly, that the level of the construction industry of which he is so proud last year was on the basis that the Government spending, and the spending of Government companies, in projects done by the construction industry last year was of the order of £220 million.

2280 Four years ago, after the 2000 Election, the I & D Fund was running at £30 million or £40 million a year and it went from £40 million to £220 million. Does he really think that Gibraltar can spend £220 million indefinitely?

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I don't. No, I don't, actually. I don't think that. But if you bothered to listen to my original question, I do not dispute the fact that that could not have continued on indefinitely. Nor do I dispute that it is your prerogative to plough the money into whatever projects you want. Nor do I dispute that you have got the prerogative to actually stop projects.

2290 What I am saying is – and I am putting it to you – that the way you have dealt with this, the way that you have just simply put a stop to all these projects, that that has had a knock-on very severe effect on this particular sector and that is the reason why we are seeing all these notices of redundancies which are not being also replaced within the sector.

2295 But just coming to another supplementary, which is unrelated to that, out of the 287 there are 60 and, leftover from the figures that he gave me in January, are 36 residents who have not been employed. Does he not accept and agree with me that that is an unacceptably high level of unemployment in this particular sector of resident workers?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have to repeat that either the hon. Member does not understand, or he does not care, what answers he gets and continues saying the same thing.

2300 I have told him, as an example, that of the 14 that were originally terminated, only seven have emerged as seeking employment. Fifty per cent of the 14 have simply 'disappeared'. Of the remaining seven, four are registered as unemployed and three have been employed. I have no idea how many of the 60 that we have been told by employers... Remember that what we are relying on here is a termination of employment which says that company A has terminated the employment of 20 workers. We then look at the 20 workers, and when I say 'we', I mean the people that are employed in the service, look at the 20 workers to prepare this answer for me and they prepare a supplementary in case you wanted to know how many were residents, on the basis that I assumed he would ask me that supplementary...

The answer is that they found that, of the 10, the employer claims that three have a Gibraltar address. What we have found is that, in fact, the Gibraltar address may be just that... the Gibraltar address, but not that the unemployment is going up by the numbers of people that one would anticipate from the terminations.

To my knowledge, this is not a new phenomenon. They tell me that this is, in fact, something that is not abnormal and that, therefore, the fact that there are 200 people who lose their jobs, of whom 150 have got addresses in Spain and 50 have got addresses here, does not mean that over 50 that have got addresses here were actually living here and not that they were using other services, which required the Gibraltar address – because, in fact, the Employment Service does not actually go out and check that people are living where they say they are.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, he appears to be giving us all the excuses that he was criticising Mr Montiel, when he was on the benches opposite, was actually giving him explanations about unemployment figures, because what you appear to be saying in relation to the seven is this: these seven do not want employment and that is why they have not registered themselves in the ETB. So, by definition, what you have is people who do not want to work and when Mr Montiel used to make that precise point to him, he used to say, 'Well, hang on a minute. How could you possibly say that? These poor people.'

What is he doing in relation to those seven? Is his Department, for example, making enquiries as to whether those seven have just simply dropped out of, or have not registered, with the ETB? Because, for example, they may be depressed at the fact that they have lost their job or because the ETB is not listening to them, when they have perhaps gone back and attempted to sign on. Have you made any efforts in relation to those seven because you certainly criticised Mr Montiel when he gave the same answers to you?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, Mr Montiel did not give the same answer to me because he did not give me the level of information I am giving the hon. Member opposite and, therefore, I could not ask the supplementaries that he is asking.

Mr Montiel used to say about people not being interested in working, of the people who were registered... At no stage did Mr Montiel, or anybody else in the last 15 years, tell this House how many of the people who were losing their jobs in fact did not surface as seeking employment.

If the people that have terminated the employment and are entitled to come and register and collect unemployment benefit, having done it, I do not believe that it is because they are suffering from depression. I think a more probable explanation is that they are, probably, having finished work and knowing that they have got six months in which to register, going back home to Morocco, where they came from.

So, in fact, it is a fairly normal pattern that many Moroccans, who are entitled to 13-week unemployment benefit within 26 weeks, do not register and claim it immediately. So, in the case of the four, that seems to me a more logical explanation, but I have not sent anybody with a search party to try and hunt them down.

Future Job Strategy
Employment Training Company Ltd expenses

Clerk: Question 257, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state, since the last session of Parliament, how many employers have signed contracts under the Future Job Strategy, agreeing to refund the expenses incurred by Employment Training Company Limited in training that individual if he or she is not employed at the end of his training?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Five employers, as at the end of February.

2360 Hon. D A Feetham: Five employers in relation to five trainees?

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct. In nearly all the cases the employers have just one trainee here.

2365 Hon. D A Feetham: There are 450 people, trainees, that are within the Future Job Strategy scheme and I think, in answer to questions in January, he said that he wanted to increase the numbers to 800 / 900 during the course of the next financial year.

Does he not accept that, in the light of the very low numbers of employers that have signed these contracts, he is not able to guarantee these people jobs, as he promised in his manifesto?

2370 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the supplementary is the one that precedes the one about am I 'conning' them, so the answer to this supplementary is the answer that I gave to the previous supplementaries on the same subject.

2375 All I can tell him is that, in all these cases, we are dealing with people that were not initially expecting to be asked to give the jobs. That should not happen with the new ones that come into the scheme as we progress. The second thing is that, of course, he will see that his fears that everybody would sign because the commitment was not worth the paper it was written on does not seem to be shared by the employers, who do not seem to be so happy to sign as he thought they would be.

2380 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I have to say that if he judges a victory by the five employers that he has managed to persuade to sign his contracts, the Future Job Strategy as a concept is worse than I thought.

But what happens, Mr Speaker, what happens, in a situation where somebody, as there must be situations like that, of trainees that are already working with employers, that have been placed with employers, and those employers do not sign these contracts? What happens to that trainee in that placement?

2385 Hon. J J Bossano: Before I answer that question, Mr Speaker, that remark about the victory: I haven't said anything about any victory. What I was saying was that when he gave me what he described as friendly advice, and told me that I should insist not just that they give them a job, but that they have to sign for one year, it must be because his judgement was that they would all be willing to sign if there was no year, but that the year would make it more enforceable. I would, by his analysis, if I had followed his advice, it is possible
2390 that nobody would have signed, in which case he would have been able to accuse me of an even greater failure. So maybe that was what he was really after, and not friendly advice at all. (Laughter)

2395 Secondly, Mr Speaker, the position is that the trainees that are there are still the ones in February. The ETCL ones that have come in since are the ones that only completed... they came in during the month of February. Their one month is still not up and, therefore, and even some of the people, for example, of the original 70 that I identified, who said they were willing to sign the agreement, five have done so by 29th February. We hope that more will, but if it doesn't, what will happen will be that we will remove the trainee from them and put them with somebody else.

2400 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, because, does he not agree with me that, if he were to do otherwise, it would not be fair on the employers, the five employers, that have signed contracts?

Hon. J J Bossano: Precisely, yes. Of course, it would not be fair.

2405 Hon. D A Feetham: And he is still satisfied, even in the light of that, that he is going to be able to not only produce contracts of employment for 450 trainees but also for the 800/900, which is the number that he expects this to grow to during the next financial year?

2410 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, when the hon. Member has an opportunity to look at the Estimates of Expenditure for the forthcoming financial year he will see that reflected.

Mr Speaker: Would this be a convenient moment for our 10-minute recess?
This house is recessed for 10 minutes

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, only with this caveat, that it is my intention that the House should rise at 12.30, so if that is...

Mr Speaker: I will survive for 20 minutes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Very much obliged, Mr Speaker

Future Job Strategy
Government placements

Clerk: Question 258, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Minister for Employment in a position to state whether any trainee under the Future Job Strategy is being placed in a post, or used to cover anyone on maternity leave, in any Government Department, Authority or company?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I know of at least one.

Does he not agree with me on this, that the use of Future Job Strategy trainees to cover maternity leave would be wrong and also would not be supported by the Government?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the one that he knows about is the one that he mentioned in the last meeting of the House. We identified the individual, and the individual told us that her preferred option was to be in the job strategy, so we have kept her there at her request. I mean I was not going to take her off it simply because the hon. Member thought it was not a good idea. So I do not understand. Certainly it is, the ETB is not sending people to cover maternity leave.

If the Health Authority use this person that they intended to use anyway, having asked her before this scheme was in place, having asked an employment agency to send them somebody, the employment agency opened the vacancy in the ETB, the ETB sends somebody to the employment agency, the employment agency sends him to the Health Authority, who then pays the employee and the agency – and we selected this same person and send them to the Health Authority. So the Health Authority received the same person from two sources.

I did not know this until the hon. Member brought it to my attention the last time. I told him I would investigate. Having investigated – I have not spoken to the person myself and I do not know who she is – I got somebody from the Department, and they came back and told me that they have told her that she was able to leave the employment company, join the GHA as a supply maternity cover and she chose not to do that. She said she preferred to stay with the company and not do that. So we have not changed her because, you know... I am grateful to the hon. Member who brought this anomaly up, for to my attention, but I hope he accepts that we are not going to force her to go down the route that she does not want to go.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, absolutely, if we are talking about the same person absolutely not.

But is the answer, then, to my question, which was not about the individual itself, that the Government would not support the use of Future Job Strategy trainees to cover maternity leave within any Government Department, Authority or company?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I cannot say that the Government would support or not support it.

It is certainly not from the Employment Service: we are not providing maternity cover from the Employment Service, as such. That is not our role. If, in fact, somebody in some Department says, 'Well, I would like to have somebody sent as a trainee because I have got a lot of work to do,' I mean, it so happens that there is somebody on maternity there, before, during or after, and they do not take somebody to cover the maternity, in many of these areas... the complement is supposed to contain cover, in some cases.

2470 In budgets there is money to bring in somebody to cover maternity and, in other cases, in budgets there is no provision, so you cannot say in all cases there is an automatic amount of money that says, well, the complement of the place is built in on the premise that, on average, there will be so much sick leave, so much annual leave and so many maternity. Or there is a budget for temporary cover which, some people have it... In the Health Authority they have it and this is why the Health Authority was going to use the temporary cover provision which, last year, the Government moved to the Treasury because it was getting out of control.

2475 I think that was the explanation that was given to me by the Leader of the Opposition at the time in the budget when he... the temporary relief cover that was taken away from the Health Authority because it was getting out of hand, and it was controlled from the Treasury.

2480 Well, not every Department has such a pot of money, right, so what I cannot guarantee him is that, in a place where there is a trainee, there will never be a situation where somebody goes on maternity leave. But the trainee has not been sent there for that purpose and to cover that vacancy. That I can tell you.

2485 Hon. D A Feetham: But doesn't he agree with me that it is not an issue of money within the... It is not an issue of money or allocation to maternity leave, this is an issue of the hon. Gentleman having devised a strategy, the Future Job Strategy, which he says, and he still maintains, is a new training strategy in order to train individuals and, in the light of that, it is entirely wrong to be sending somebody, within a strategy that is designed to train that person for a full time job at the end of it, to cover for somebody on maternity leave.

2490 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I really do not know what I can do with the hon. Member when I give him the answers and he asked me the question as if I had not said anything! (Laughter). I have already told him. Yes, I did give him an answer.

2495 I told him specifically it is the Employment Services role not to provide maternity cover to Government Departments, agencies or Authorities. That is what I have told him. What I have said to him is what he cannot come tomorrow and say, 'Well, you send somebody to the Tax Office and now there is somebody on maternity leave, so that means the trainee is now doing the work that the people on maternity leave were doing.'

Hon. D A Feetham: That is not what I am getting at.

2500 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, if that is not what he is getting at then he has had his answer.

Future Job Strategy Details of placements

2505 Clerk: Question 259, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2510 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to the Future Job Strategy, please provide details of where each and every trainee has been placed and ordered to undertake their training under that strategy. For the avoidance of doubt, there is no need to identify the trainee by name.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment

2515 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): At 29th February, 255 trainees were placed in the private sector and 66 trainees in the public sector.

2520 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Gentleman not concerned by the high levels of trainees in the public sector, as compared to trainees in the private sector, bearing in mind that the whole point, my understanding of it and the explanations that he has given in this House, not during the General Election, but my understanding is that the aim is to place these people in full time employment in the private sector.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I think we have already dealt with that in answers to the previous 2525 questions, but I would repeat it to him. The 66 in the public sector are going to be going up because, of the 255, the more people we find say 'we are not going to give the guy a job', we are not going to have somebody in a private firm where the private sector does not really have anything to provide him in terms of work or skills, where the private firm thinks they are doing us a favour, where we are paying that person £912 so, rather than have him parked in a private firm, it is better to have him in the public sector because, at the moment, as he knows, only five have told us they are going to give the people a job.

2530 So that is covered by the answers I have already given him. The answer is that this is not a situation that we want to finish up with: this is a situation that we have today on 29th February.

2535 Hon. D A Feetham: Is it the position of the hon. Gentleman that none of the 259 will end up in full time employment in the public sector, or does he have, perhaps, an idea of how many – in his projections – trainees may end up being employed in the public sector?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the 255 are all in the private sector 2540 Hon. D A Feetham: In answer to the question originally, you said 259 in the public sector and 66 in the private sector. Have I understood that wrong.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, the other way around. There are 255 trainees placed in the private sector and 66 in the public.

2545 Hon. D A Feetham: That makes sense because, in fact, it would not have correlated with the figures that you have already given me.

Hon. J J Bossano: The same figures.

2550 Hon. D A Feetham: Exactly.

2555 But out of those 66 is there a number he has in mind of, because he must have, at some stage, sat down and said, looking at all these trainees – and I know there is a question in the order paper later on about the training skills audit – looking at the employment market in general, looking at all these trainees, looking at their profiles, these areas are the areas that, perhaps, we can find them employment within the private sector, but there might be some a number that may end up in the public sector? Has he done that analysis and, if he has done that analysis, does he have a figure – which I am not going to keep him to in the future – but does he have a figure of people that, perhaps, might end up in the public sector?

2560 Hon. J J Bossano: Of the 66, well, I think that probably most of the ones that are concerned in health training, because those people have a job guarantee. We are talking about, maybe, 20 of them.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Minister may already have said this whilst I was distracted, but the definition of private and public sector here is the one that we have traditionally become used to when we were in different places in this House, each of us.

2565 Hon. J J Bossano: All the Government companies would be in the public sector.

Hon. P R Caruana: Government companies, agencies, all statutory authorities are private and any and all.

2570 Hon. J J Bossano: Private is private.

Hon. P R Caruana: And AquaGib, which the Government has a minority shareholding in, does he know, offhand, where that one is categorised? You may need notice of the question.

2575 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I can tell the hon. Member that it is based on the definition that we include in the Employment Service report.

Hon. P R Caruana: So they are private sector.

Hon. J J Bossano: So, you know, if they are classified there as private, then in all the answers we will give, we will call them the same definition.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a supplementary question to the Hon. Minister for Employment?

Does he know, of the 259 trainees that will be placed in the private sector, how many, potentially, of those trainees could end up with a mutually recognised qualification at the end of the training period?

Hon. J J Bossano: At the moment the only people that we have got, as at 29th February, with a commitment that they will be employed, are people in the five employers that have got five employees – and they are not doing any training which has to do with obtaining a specified NVQ or any other kind of qualification. They are just being trained, because they were placed there beforehand. That is to say, these are people who have been, maybe, six months last year and we came in in December: their six-month period was due to end and I gave instructions to Bleak House not to terminate the training period for anybody, to let them all stay on and the five employers and the five employees that have been taken on so far, or there is a rigid commitment that they will be taken on, are all the ones that were there already...

So, of the 255, they are only doing training with a qualification at the end, if they were doing it already.

Hon. J J Netto: What I am trying to focus my question on is not necessarily... which is important, obviously, if a person, at the end of the training period, gets an offer of employment, but, leaving that aside, what I am trying to focus my mind is, of those 259 who are now being placed in the private sector, does he know how many of them will end up, potentially, if they fulfil the requirement of the training package with a mutually recognised qualification? That is what my question is aiming for.

Hon. J J Bossano: I think there is another question on that, but...

Future Job Strategy Length of contracts of employment

Clerk: Question 260, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to the Future Job Strategy, please state the length of the contracts of employment with Employment Training Company Limited of every trainee employed by that company under that Strategy. For the avoidance of doubt, there is no need to identify the trainee by name.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): All the trainees in the Employment Training Company have got a contract of employment for a maximum period up to the end of December 2012 and, therefore, the length of the time of the contracts now is on the basis that they all end in December, but it is not that we expect them all to be unemployed in January. In some cases it is written as a maximum, because an employer may be willing to take somebody on before December.

Hon. D A Feetham: And that includes, does it not, people who, for example, had training contracts with the Construction Centre that exceeded 11 months, that were for two or three months for the length of the period which they would end up with an NVQ qualification? Correct?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it includes them. The only thing that I want to point out is that they did not have contracts with Bleak House. They were receiving a payment from Bleak House, but it was not a contractual relationship. The contract that they had was with the Training Centre for the training. So the training was provided by one entity and the payment was provided by another. We have replaced the entity that pays. The entity that trains continues to provide the training, as contracted.

During the course of this year, there will be a number of changes, in order to – it will put everybody into the same system to start off within February but, for example, the people that are in sheltered employment 2635 will be moved to contracts that will give them permanent, open-ended contracts and not one-ended. The people who are training with specific dates will have their contracts adjusted so that the payment is linked to their continued period of training, but this has not happened yet.

2640 Hon. D A Feetham: So, in other words, those people that were on three-year contracts with the Training Centre, in order to obtain their NVQs, that have now been placed on 11-month contracts with Employment Training Company Ltd, what you are saying is that they will have their employment contracts with Employment Training Company Ltd extended for the three-year period that it takes to complete the NVQ? That is correct?

2645 Hon. J J Bossano: Not in all cases, because, of course, they are not all in the first year. We have got people in the first, second and third year. I think there are 40 that came into this year's intake and, therefore, their contract will have to be changed on the basis that it has to be linked to the continued attendance at the Centre. At the moment, the contract of employment with the employment company does nothing other than pay them a wage, instead of paying them £450.

2650 But, as we go through the system, we will then have, for example, of the people in the Construction Training Centre, we would have to do different contracts for the people who are about to finish this year, where it says 'up to 11 months', but they are not going to be up to 11 months in the company, because they will be completing their training and getting their level 3 NVQ later on this year.

2655 In the cases of the people in the second year, there is a different time period. In the cases of those who came in last year, which I believe was about 40, what they tell me from the Construction Training Centre is that there is generally quite a high level of wastage in the beginning, so we need to link to attendance and to performance the contracts where you do not have the situation where somebody walks out of a Training Centre tomorrow and there is still a contractual obligation to pay him £912 for the next two and a half years.

2660 Hon. D A Feetham: Just on that, are you saying that, effectively, what there is, the situation there is now, is a contract with the Employment Training Board, which is a contract of employment, where they are being paid, but then there is a separate contract with the Training Centre in respect of their training? Is that the position?

2665 Hon. J J Bossano: The position is that when they enter into the training programme, they enter the training programme which was to attend and to go to the Construction Training Centre and so forth for a period of time, to pass certain courses, to do it successfully before they can go up from year 1 to year 2. All that is unchanged. Right?

2670 In addition to that, they were with Bleak House shown as employees of Bleak House, on £415 a month, even though they did not have an employment contract and the law specifically excluded people on Government training schemes from being included in the definition of 'employee'. The Bleak House contract, for want of a better word, because it was not in the standard terms of employment that we have that say you are entitled to so much and with leave and sick leave and so forth, which they now have... That is what has replaced the Bleak House arrangement and that is no different, whether you are in the Training Centre, or in the Tax Office, or in the private sector. Everybody has got one standard terms of employment piece of paper and that is true of all of them.

2675 In the case of the people in the Construction Training Centre, the period ending in December was simply because, on 1st February, we took everybody that was there in January and gave them this new contract and registered them with the employment company and the contract says 'a contract is up to 11 months', so it was not a defined, closed contract, it was a contract with a maximum life of 11 months. It is those contracts, in the case of the construction trainees, that now has to be altered to fit whether you are in year 1, year 2, or year 3 and to put, in their case, conditions related to performance with their training, which does not exist in the places of others, because they are in a structured training programme, where the Construction Training Centre can say, look, you have failed level 1, you cannot go to do level 2.

2685 Hon. D A Feetham: Is there a risk here of a mismatch between the rights and duties of employer and employee, particularly the rights of employees in this kind of situation, in this way, that they are employed by Employment Training Company Ltd, but then they have got a separate contract, a training contract, with the Training Centre?

2690 Is he satisfied that employees are protected and, at the end of the day, the whole purpose of employing them by Employment Training Company Ltd was to give them employer/employee rights? Is he satisfied that those people are adequately protected in a situation whereby the Training Centre may terminate their training, which effectively means the end of the whole purpose of placing them there, in terms of, for example, had the company itself terminated, then the employee would have been able to claim unfair dismissal against the company whereas, if the Training Centre terminates that contract of employment, what would happen to the employee in that kind of situation?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Construction Training Centre does not employ them, so there is no –

Hon. D A Feetham: [Inaudible]

2700

Hon. J J Bossano: – contract of employment with the Training Centre, which the hon. Member...

If somebody is going to the college and the college says to him, you are being a nuisance in the classroom, go home, the guy's employment with the Employment Training Company does not cease, whether he is in a Construction Training Centre or doing any other course, but to the extent that there are people with different completion dates of their training, the employment contract has to adjust for the fact that what we cannot do is... there are people carrying on training, whose wages suddenly stop. Under the previous system their £450 was not tied to a period of payment, it was tied to a period of training. So if somebody was sent to do training in the private sector for six months on a six-month placement, then automatically, at the end of the placement, they came back and that was the end of the story.

With the new system, since what we have got is an employment contract, the employment contract has been done the same for everybody in the first month of February. As we progress, we have to improve that system so that the employment contracts relate, for example, if somebody is studying to be a nurse, and is in the nursing school and is getting not the £450, which the hon. Member told me earlier they are still getting, but £912, what we have to do is link the employment to the period they are going to be training because after the training there is a job guarantee, so the employment will end with the employment company and will start with the Gibraltar Health Authority.

In the case of people in the Construction Training Centre, there is no guarantee of employment at the moment but, clearly, from what I have told the hon. Member that we are already doing in having a dedicated section of the Employment Service, where what we have done, we have transferred to the Employment Service somebody who was in the Training Centre as an external assessor and therefore knows exactly what the training is that is going on. What we expect is that we will do what we think is something that is important and that is to ensure that the training is leading to employment. We may not be able to do it for the people who are coming out this year, because the timescale is too short, but we certainly want that to be happening for the people in year 2 and for the people in year 1, who finish in a year or 18 months' time and in three years' time. So when they come to the Construction Training Centre, we have already got an employer lined up for them. That will be done, partly because of the placements that we do in the interim.

2725

The reality of it is that we need to review the way the training is being provided, because some employers have already had meetings with me, telling me that the skills that we are imparting are not the skills that they require. Therefore, I think it has to be done in that way. So the whole idea is, in fact, to avoid a mismatch, that the hon. Member quoted. I have not been advised with anything that such a mismatch exists, but certainly it is not something we want to finish up with.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to 3 p.m. when we will continue with Question 314.

Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all hon. Members?
This House will adjourn to 3 p.m. this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 12.35 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

Gibraltar Power Station and distribution works Statement by the Hon. Chief Minister

10

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has yesterday served a Notice on ETDE SA and Volker Stevin Construction Europe BV, the Joint Venture parties in respect of the construction of the proposed new Gibraltar Power Station and distribution works. The Notice informs the Joint Venture parties that the Government has decided not to proceed with the proposal they have made for the development

15 of the new proposed Power Station at Lathbury Barracks.

The Government will make a full statement next week in order to fully inform the public of the Government's reasoning for this decision, the consequences of it and the alternatives by which we intend to ensure the secure continuity of electricity supply.

20 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, for the sake of – as a point of order – can we treat the Hon. the Chief Minister as having moved the suspension of Standing Orders?

The House is in Question Time. The making of statements comes much earlier on and I think the usual practice is, so that it looks right on Hansard and in the Minutes, for there to be a suspension of Standing Orders to allow the Minister to make a statement.

25 Mr Speaker: I am grateful to the Hon. Leader of the Opposition for pointing that out. Yes, I should have invited a suspension of Standing Orders, but it... Can we take it that the Hon. Chief Minister did move (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) and it has been approved by the House?

30 I am most grateful.

Clerk: Answers to Oral Questions continue.

35 Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

40 Brussels Process Whether 'dead and buried'

Clerk: Question 314/2012, the Hon. P R Caruana.

45 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister confirm that he agrees that the Brussels Process is 'dead and buried'?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

50 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir, but not just 'buried': it is also 'cremated', as far as the Members of this side of the House always have been, are, and will be, concerned.

In this respect, Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to Government Press Release 62/2012, of 26th January 2012, in respect of my meetings with Minister for Europe, the Rt Hon. David Lidington MP and Government Press Release 126/2012, of 22nd February 2012, in respect of the statements made by the Prime Minister, the Rt Hon. David Cameron MP.

60 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, given that the Brussels Process was, when it was not 'dead and buried', a bilateral Process between the United Kingdom and the Kingdom of Spain, when we say that it is 'dead and buried', we do not mean as far as we are concerned because it always... it has been for quite some time, as far as we are concerned through none participation.

65 What we mean is, and the essence of the question and what I am asking the hon. Member to agree with, is that it is 'dead and buried' as far as the UK is concerned, which is the position that we used to adopt when we were across the floor of this House, in reliance on the very same statement. It is true that there is a novelty now, in that the words have been uttered by the Prime Minister but the words that the government of the United Kingdom will not take part in any sovereignty negotiation or even discussion, unless the people of Gibraltar are content, dates back to the days of the new Constitution in 2007, and that that means, it certainly is helpful that the words have been found on the lips of a Prime Minister, as opposed to the lips of a Foreign Secretary, as it then was. But does the hon. Member agree with me that, since the Spanish Government says

70 that the Brussels Process is intrinsically about sovereignty and the UK government has said that they will not discuss or negotiate sovereignty unless Gibraltar is content, ergo the British Government must be saying that it will not take part in talks under the Brussels Process unless we are content and, therefore, it is 'dead and buried' not just as far as we are concerned – which has been the case for some time – but, indeed, as far as the UK government is concerned, that is the only natural meaning of those words that have been uttered now by 75 the Prime Minister, but previously by Foreign Secretaries...?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, sir, as the hon. Gentleman will know, as far as the Members of this side of the House are concerned, the agreement was stillborn in 1984, but certainly since the new wording came into the statements that are made by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and any relevant Minister and, recently by the Prime Minister, something which I know will be welcomed by all members of this 80 House. It is also, therefore, in our view the position of the United Kingdom that the agreement is de facto dead and buried because of the double lock mechanism, which means that Gibraltar will never agree to those talks going ahead.

Hon. P R Caruana: Precisely for that reason, Mr Speaker, and, of course, that this... Does he 85 acknowledge and agree with me that this has been said not now just by the Prime Minister and by Foreign Secretaries and Secretaries of State but, indeed, has been contained as a key point in successive addresses by the UK's representative at the United Nations in their annual addresses to the Fourth Committee, now for 4 or 5 years at least – I cannot remember when it started, I think it was 2007, it might have been 2006 – and that,
90 therefore, it is now the crystallised position and has been for some time of the UK government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will agree with him that the record will show when it started, when that position started, and it became the crystallised position of the United Kingdom, as he puts it. I am sure he will agree with me that it is the position that was taken by the party on this side of the House from the very moment that the agreement was announced in 1984.

95 Mr Speaker, I think it is also important to highlight that it is the position which HE the Governor put in this House when he opened this House in his capacity as the representative of Her Majesty the Queen, in this House, and that is the only position that will be acceptable to Members on both sides of the House, and that it is the death knell, not just of the 'dead and buried' Brussels Process but of any other Process that might propose any negotiations or discussions of sovereignty in any circumstances in which the people of Gibraltar 100 were not content with that.

105 Tourism, port, business, e-commerce and e-government advisory councils.
Government policy

Clerk: Question 315, the Hon. D J Bossino

110 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Government advise whether it intends to continue with the policy of receiving advice from the tourism, port, business, e-commerce and e-government advisory councils?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

115 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Hon. the Chief Minister advise whether the membership of these various councils have been set up?

120 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the tourism advisory council, the small business board, the port advisory council, the tourism advisory council and the small business board have all been, have either all been set up or are in the process of being set up, with dates fixed for the next meetings.

Hon. D J Bossino: The Hon. Chief Minister has mentioned the small business board and tourism advisory 125 councils twice, so that would leave out the business e-commerce and e-government advisory councils, which presumably have not been set up. If that is the implication of him leaving these out in the answer, does he have any indication as to when he thinks these will be set up?

130 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in respect of e-commerce and e-government he will know that those are areas of my responsibility, where I am working already with the internal apparatus of the Government to promote the Government's work in delivering the early stages of e-government.

E-commerce, of course, is not so much a Government initiative but enabling traders in Gibraltar to do business with the world and not just the Government doing business with its citizens.

135 I am delighted to tell him that I will be looking to the e-commerce and e-government advisory councils to provide advice on the issues that those who are representing there the relevant industries think it is appropriate for the Government to bear in mind when it is taking the necessary steps to advance where we are in respect of e-commerce and e-government but, at this stage, the work has to be done almost, if I may say so, infrastructurally, to put the Government in a position to be ready to do e-government and e-commerce. That is why that has not been a priority yet.

140 Hon. D J Bossino: I take it from that reply, just to make it fuller, is that at this stage he does not know. The Chief Minister would not be able to advise this House as to when he thinks he will be in a position to confirm that or to advise this House about the membership of these councils will be set up... it is too early to say.

145 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, only in this sense, Mr Speaker, that I do think that there is a call for advice at this stage, but I would anticipate that those boards, those councils, will be reconstituted before the budget session, for example.

Moroccans in Gibraltar Enhancement of rights

170

Clerk: Question 317, the Hon. J J Netto

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state what the Government plans to do in order to enhance the rights of Moroccans in Gibraltar?

175

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as soon as we were elected, we have commenced dealing with the problems experienced by Moroccan workers. We are working already on issues relating to visas to visit Gibraltar for pensioners, who come to collect pensions as well as for family members of those who work here. The process of dealing with naturalisation applications for all of those who have been here for more than 20 years and in good standing have all now been dealt with.

180

We are in contact with the relevant representatives of both their collective organisations, the MWA and the MCA and we have met with both since the election on a regular basis and we will continue to do so. We have also met with the operator of the ferry service and seek to work together on enhancing the service provided.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the information, but my question actually goes much further than the answer that has been provided by the hon. Member.

Can the Chief Minister, the Hon. Chief Minister, provide an indication, where does the Government think in relation to the rights of Moroccan workers for entitlement, for instance the minimum income guarantee? Does the Hon. Chief Minister think that the Government, in terms of enhancing their rights in the future, will allow Moroccans to be entitled to minimum income guarantee?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Moroccan Workers Association and the Moroccan Community Association have not raised that issue with me. It is an issue I would have to look into to understand whether the entitlement to minimum income guarantee is based on any qualifying criteria which might cause a problem.

The hon. Member should know that, in the process that was commenced by his government, in the period in the run up to the General Election, and after the General Election, most of the applications, if not all the applications, for naturalisation in respect of people who have been here for more than 20 years have been dealt with, and unless people were not in good standing then they have been dealt with positively so, therefore, there should be no issue in respect of entitlements which a British Citizen has, when resident in Gibraltar, being available to all of those Moroccan workers who have now been naturalised.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the fact that the Hon. Chief Minister seems to be indicating that he has given quite a lot of effort and time in terms of making, of continuing, the progress of naturalisations, which we indeed advocated for. My supplementary question is more in terms of the thinking of the Government in relation to a number of benefits in different forms which, at the moment, the Moroccans are not entitled to.

In relation to the minimum income guarantee, he might know, or may not be aware of that, in the past, one requirement was that when the Moroccans were being issued with a resident permit of a year, that seems to have been like the basis of saying you are not entitled. But the fact is that one of the things that we changed in our term of office is that now they are given five years' resident permit so, in relation to that, as far as the minimum income guarantee, does the hon. Member think that, when considering the natural progress of giving entitlement to Moroccans, a minimum income guarantee would be one of the things that the Government will be considering in order to allow them to get that benefit, in the same way as all other taxpayers and people who pay social insurance who are and who are residing in Gibraltar will be able to get it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would need notice of the question in respect of the minimum income guarantee for this reason: the minimum income guarantee was introduced by the hon. Members opposite when they were in government. I do not know the eligibility criteria off by heart of what the minimum income guarantee is, but the hon. Gentleman can rest assured that it has not changed since 8th December 2011. Therefore, if there was an issue with people being eligible for a minimum income guarantee, it must have arisen because they introduced it in a way that created the issue.

But what I want him to understand is that the process – which, as I said, commenced under the previous Administration, has continued and been completed under the current Administration – means that most, if not all, of the Moroccan workers who are resident in Gibraltar – and by that I mean those who have been resident for more than 20 years and are traditionally seen as those who came over during the closed frontier period – have had their applications for naturalisation dealt with and, unless they have not been in good standing – which means, namely, that they have been convicted of something or there have been issues with them perhaps being thought to be working illegally, etc – all of them have been dealt with positively. So we are dealing, principally now, with a group of people who are British citizens, or about to be British citizens, resident in Gibraltar. If there is a citizenship criterion in respect of any of those entitlements then, for most people, for that reason, they will have surmounted it already.

Hon. J J Netto: From recollection, my understanding is that one of the criterion for entitlement to the minimum income guarantee is that the people have to be in excess of one year resident... residency permit in Gibraltar, and of course, this is the one thing I just alluded to: we did change in order to give the Moroccans a five-year resident permit, as opposed to one year.

Therefore, the way I see it, given that those were the criteria that we set out to create, a minimum income guarantee, I would think logical enough to extend those rights to the Moroccan community in Gibraltar on the basis of the criteria for entitlement which we actually set out for the minimum income guarantee. It is on the basis of that that I am asking my question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me put it this way: if there is a problem with people being eligible – Moroccan workers being eligible – for the minimum income guarantee, it is a problem that would have been created before 8th December, not afterwards because, as far as I understand it, we have not changed any aspects of the permit of residence that is granted – so if it was granted for five years under them, it continues to be granted for five years under us.

Hon. J J Bossano: So why were they not getting the minimum income guarantee?

Hon. Chief Minister: Therefore, it may be that people were already... what he is saying to the House is that these Moroccan workers were eligible to get the minimum income guarantee before the Election, and that he is concerned that we should not have done anything after the Election, to stop them from getting it. That is not the case.

Whatever was the position before is the position now. If there was a discrimination – to use a word, I do not mean it negatively – there was a lack of entitlement under the previous Administration, the lack of entitlement continues today, but not because we have changed anything – only because it was there under the previous Administration. What I am saying to him is that many of those people who the hon. Gentleman refers to in respect of the one-year permit of residence going to five-year permits of residence, are very likely to now be – or be about to become – British passport holders.

If there is a group that is not covered by that, I am quite happy for the hon. Gentleman to indicate to me how that group is identified and why it is that they might have a lack of eligibility, which must be the same lack of eligibility that affected them, when he was in Government, and then we can have a discussion about that and I can see whether there is an issue there for the Government to deal with.

But, certainly, the qualifications for minimum income guarantee, I need notice of the question of, in order to be able to give him a specific answer.

Hon. J J Netto: Obviously, I can accept the fact that it is a particular type of question that the hon. Member might require notice of the question, in order to do a bit of homework in relation to giving me a more appropriate –

Hon. Chief Minister: Would the hon. Member give way? (Hon. J J Netto: Yes.)

If I could just say to him, I think I said it in the answer to my first supplementary, it is not an issue – this issue of the minimum income guarantee that either the MWA or the MCA have raised with me. That is why I am surprised to see him pursuing it, and I am happy to try and understand from him – not necessarily across the floor of the House – why he thinks that there was an issue there before 8th December, that might merit looking into now.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, as I was just about to say, I can appreciate that, obviously, I need to give notice of a question, or a very specific question, so that the hon. Member can inform himself so much better, so with regard to this particular line of supplementary, I will just simply put it on hold until another occasion.

But in relation to other issues which may affect Moroccans in Gibraltar – for instance, Community Care – will the Hon. Chief Minister look on the fact that, at the moment, Moroccans are not entitled to the Community Officer's wage between the age of 60 and 65, nor are they entitled to the household cost allowance and my supplementary question to him is that, in enhancing and progressing the rights of Moroccans in Gibraltar, whether he will look into this matter, in order to try and see whether Moroccans who do fall in that particular age group, between 60 and 65 and who, obviously, at the age of 65 may even get the old age pension, should be entitled as well to the Community Officer's wage and the household cost allowance after 65.

295 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position in respect of Community Care is as stated by Chief Ministers since that entity was created, that in this House, we are not really able to answer for the trustees and how they decide that household cost allowance should or should not be paid.

300 But if what he is telling me, Mr Speaker, given that I perceive there has been no change in the way that the trustees have decided to pay household cost allowances since we were elected – at least they have not made any public announcement which I have read to that effect – and what I have told him is that more members of the collective have been naturalised since 8th December, such that the exercise commenced before is now completed, I would have thought that if what he is telling me is that he has got a concern that there was a problem which he presided over when he was in Government, or he was concerned about, when he was in Government, I am happy for him to explain it to me because, as far as I am going to deal with this, household cost allowance and community care are not issues for which the Government is answerable in this House, but they are not either issues which are being raised with me by MWA or MCA.

305 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

310 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, is this an issue – the question of Moroccan rights that he discussed with the leadership of the Transport and General Workers' Union – I mean the UK leadership, when they were here earlier on this year?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

315 Hon. D A Feetham: And did they, Mr Speaker, impress upon him the need to further Moroccan rights in a way that they were urging us to deal with it when we were in Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker.

320 I tell you why I venture to say no, although of course I was not privy to the discussions that they had with the hon. Members when they were in Government, but the answer is no for this reason. They did not seek to impress anything upon me; they just told me how impressed they were with the way that we were dealing with things.

325 Hon. D A Feetham: So all the things that they were saying, that the leadership of Unite UK were saying that we had not done in relation to Moroccans that we ought to do, they never raised any of that with you at the beginning of January?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I was not privy to the conversations that the hon. Gentleman might have had with the leadership of Unite.

330 Hon. D A Feetham: In fact, the question of what they were urging upon us is public knowledge because my recollection is that they were here in Gibraltar; they came over, they had a public meeting in the John Mackintosh Hall, I believe in January of last year – certainly I think the beginning of last year – and were, in fact, threatening legal action because they said that we were not complying with Moroccans' EU rights and several other rights and they were threatening legal action against the Government. Was none of that raised with you at your meeting earlier on this year?

340 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I was not threatened with legal action; I was simply told that they were delighted with the way that we were dealing with the issues that were being brought to our attention.

Civil Partnerships Government plans for Command Paper

345 Clerk: Question 318, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state when the Government will be in a position to publish a Command Paper on Civil Partnerships?

350 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government expects to be in a position to publish a Command Paper on Civil Partnerships after the summer.

355 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government intend to deal with the question of civil partnerships just by focusing on homosexual couples or is the question of civil partnerships going to be open to other relationships, for example siblings? Will siblings be able to enter into a type of civil partnership, allowing for the transfer of rights as, indeed, will be allowed when one deals with civil partnership?

360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am confident that all of those matters will be clear when the Command Paper is published.

365 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government intend to go further than civil partnerships in this area, certainly in relation to homosexuals, and does the Government intend to, for example, follow the route taken by the United Kingdom government at the present moment, allowing marriage of gay couples?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave a few moments ago, and he will see what the position is when the Command Paper is issued.
Is he urging us to do so?

370 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am not inviting him to do so (Laughter and interjections), but certainly I am entitled to obviously ask – (Interjection and laughter) Certainly I am entitled to know what the Government's policy is, and it is not a very difficult question.

375 As a matter of policy, does the Government agree with the concept of allowing gay people to get married? Very simple.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the previous Administration did not have a policy of issuing Command Papers. We have a policy of issuing Command Papers and the Command Paper that we issue in respect of this matter will set out very clearly what our position will be and what the extent and ambit of the civil partnerships will be. I really cannot put it any further than that at this stage. I am not going to be falling into the trap of making up policy on the hoof.

385 Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely, but does he not agree with me that Command Papers are about advance publication of legislation and what I am asking him is clarification of what their policy is. It is not a difficult question. Is their policy, that they support gay marriages, or is it not?

The hon. Gentleman cannot continue on this particular issue to be all things to all men, which is what he is trying to do, by not pinning his colours clearly to the mast.

390 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman cannot do is to be so obviously transparent in the way that he pretends to be the champion of everyone who wants to advance a right whilst, at the same time, trying to avoid understanding the pressure that his party will put upon him.

395 Mr Speaker, it is this party that has said it will introduce civil partnerships. It is this party that has a Minister for Equality. It is this party that will be issuing a Command Paper before the summer, in order to deal with these issues. It is this party that is addressing the issue head on.

It is that party, Mr Speaker that did not even mention civil partnerships. It is that party, Mr Speaker, that has remained always of the view that there was no need to issue anything like a Command Paper because they went out to a different process of consultation. So be it, Mr Speaker. We have taken the view that we have stuck our colours to the mast clearly in our manifesto and our manifesto will be implemented in the timetable that is set out in it and where it is not set out in it, in the four-year term.

400 I have told him today, in answer to his question, there will be a Command Paper on this issue. In that Command Paper he will have the answers to his questions.

405 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I listened to what the hon. Gentleman has to say about this, but it was that party that clearly fluffed their lines when I presented a Private Members' Bill on the age of consent on the rights (Interjection) of homosexuals. (Hon. Chief Minister: Where is the question Mr Speaker?) But does he not accept – (Mr Speaker: There is a preamble there.)

410 Thank you very much, Mr Speaker. Does he not accept that the failure to answer questions on this particular issue, to give particulars of their policy on this particular issue is because the Government – and, in fact, when they were on the Opposition Benches – have a habit of sitting on the fence, of wanting to be Christians as well as Socialists, of wanting to hunt with the hounds and run with the hares. Is that not the case, Mr Speaker?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I recognise – (Interjection and laughter)

415 Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

Hon. Chief Minister: I recognise – (Interjection)

420 Mr Speaker: Order. Order. Order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not believe that one has to choose between being a Christian and being a Socialist and I commend to the hon. Member membership of the Christian Socialist movement, which has a chapter headed by the Hon. Mr Bruzon in Gibraltar.

425 Mr Speaker, this is nothing of the sort. This is the only party represented in this House that has stuck its colours to the mast on this issue. We are for civil partnerships. We are going to publish a Command Paper setting out how civil partnerships will be established in Gibraltar.

If he is so keen on the idea, Mr Speaker, can he tell us why it is that he did not manage to get civil partnerships included in the manifesto for his party?

430 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member agree with me that the debating of this issue around whether you are a Socialist or not has become irrelevant, following the announcement by the United Kingdom Conservative Party that they (Laughter) are going to introduce legislation for gay marriages – not a course of action, by the way, that I am recommending to him. (Laughter) I would earnestly recommend to him the opposite course of action.

435 Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member agree that there is a distinction between a Command Paper, which is an act preliminary to legislation, which is relevant to implementation of policy, and that simply saying that there is going to be a Command Paper is not an answer to the question? Well, alright, when it comes to legislation you will precede it with a Command Paper, which is very helpful. But now, today, does the Government have a policy on whether to allow – a policy, not legislative intent – is it the policy of the Government to allow gay marriages or not?

440 I suspect that he let slip the answer to that a few moments ago, when he said, 'I am not going to fall into the temptation of making policy on the hoof', which suggests that the answer to my question is, no, the Government does not yet have policy on the matter.

445 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can tell him that I have a view on the matter, but that is not a policy. The policy is in respect of civil partnerships and that is set out in our manifesto and fleshing that out in legislation is what the Command Paper will do.

I have a view, Mr Speaker, which I am very happy to share with him and it may or may not be the view that my colleagues have on this subject but, if it came to that, it may be that this would be an issue for a free vote. My view, Mr Speaker, is that – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

450 Well, Mr Speaker – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker: Order, order.

455 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, remember that the hon. Gentleman, from a sedentary position, raises an issue of a free vote. In that instance, we took the view that the issue was – and that which the Supreme Court took, and which the Hon. the then Minister for Justice also took – that this was not an issue of conscience. The equality of the age of consent was an issue of law and, therefore, free votes are not relevant there.

There is no law requiring governments to allow homosexual people to marry or not marry, and that is why the issue may be one of conscience and free vote and not of having to accept the case law of the European Court. My own view is that we should not have gay marriage in Gibraltar, that we should have civil partnerships.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to say that, at least on that issue, but I hope on many others, too, the hon. Member and I can agree: that is to say, the first half of the sentence. I'm not sure I am willing to join him on the second part, but I accept it is a separate issue. But I believe that and, certainly, it is my view, and I am not – as he has always pointed out that this is an issue that divides, issues of this sort, divide this party – but my personal view is that gay marriages should not be countenanced.

Homosexuals in Gibraltar Policy re discrimination

Clerk: Question 319, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Chief Minister believe that homosexuals in Gibraltar are discriminated against, and if so, what does his Government intend to do about it?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the first part of this question calls for an opinion, which in the Government's view, is contrary to Standing Order 17(1)(VII).

I will, nonetheless, remind the House of the fact that, contrary to the contentions advanced by the previous Administration in two cases, the Supreme Court made findings in respect of the case of the referral of the age of consent, and in the case of Rodriguez v Muscat which was in respect of Government tenancies, so that it is now established in law that there are certain discriminations affecting homosexuals in Gibraltar. We intend to end any such discrimination, where appropriate. I and the Minister for Equalities meet regularly with representatives of Gibraltar Gay Rights (GGR) in order to keep those issues under review.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, is the Government's position the position, in fact, that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister, held for a number of years, which was 'we will do whatever is our legal obligation but, in relation to this area, we are not going to go any further'. Is that the position of the Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: That is, self evidently, not the position Mr Speaker, because we have got our manifesto commitments to create civil partnerships, so he should really have thought that supplementary through.

What I am telling him is that I will not answer a question from him in this House, asking me what I believe, and I pointed out to him two instances recently, where the Supreme Court has actually specifically pointed out discriminations, and told him that we will deal with those. But simply by looking at our manifesto he would have known better than to ask such a supplementary.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, the supplementary arises from the answer that he has given me. If he doesn't want those kind of supplementaries then, perhaps, he should give more thought to the answers that he gives me in the first place.

You see, the hon. Gentleman appears to be equating, when I ask him 'does he believe that homosexuals in Gibraltar are discriminated against?', he seems to be equating that to 'discriminated against' in the legal sense. That is not the intention of the question. What I am asking is 'does he feel that there is discrimination against homosexuals?' There may well be no legal obligation in terms of ending a particular position but, nonetheless, it may well be, many people may see it, morally, as discrimination.

515 Now, surely the Government must have been able to, at the very least, formulate a view as to what areas of discrimination there are in relation to homosexuals in Gibraltar? Because, bear in mind, that not only in the last election, but also in the 2007 election and in the 2003 election, they were making promises to homosexuals in Gibraltar, in exchange for their votes. So has the Government given a thought to this particular issue?

520 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentlemen does not seem to be able to utter a phrase, in forming a supplementary, which I can agree with.

Look, Mr Speaker, the person who needs to give more thought to things is him. He has asked a question which, in our view, is clearly contrary to the Standing Orders. He has asked us whether we believe that there are discriminations: that is asking us for our opinion in respect of the discriminations and the rules talk about not being able to ask questions in respect of opinions.

525 So what I am saying is, I am not going to sit here, or stand here, and tell the hon. Gentleman what I believe and now, in his most recent supplementary, what I feel! Look, Mr Speaker, I am happy to discuss my feelings with many people, because I am quite an open hearted guy, but he and I are quite beyond the stage where we want to discuss our feelings, (Laughter) for each other or in any other way. (Laughter)

530 I am happy, Mr Speaker, to have questions asked about issues that seek information and where we can provide that information, but, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is asking me to give him an opinion. He has got an opinion about what discriminations there may be against homosexuals in Gibraltar. I have got an opinion about what those may be. They may, or may not, just be the ones that the Supreme Court have alluded to.

535 This is not the place to discuss issues of opinion, in Question Time. If he wants to raise those issues, there is a particular mechanism for him to do it, which is to bring a motion, and then we can discuss those issues in debate. A question should not be a pretext for debate either, Mr Speaker, so the issue for us is very simple. It is as set out in answer to the original question.

540 Mr Speaker: I think before the hon. Member poses a supplementary, may I clarify, in the light of the Hon. Chief Minister's response, my thought process when I read the question. I did have in mind the question that this is an expression of opinion, but I did, in my mind, distinguish between two possibilities. One is that using the word 'discrimination' as legal disabilities, which is what one aspect of the hon. questioner's question aimed at: the other element of 'discriminated' could be discrimination at a 'street level', if I put it that way. So because there were those two possibilities I allowed the question as it was. Anyway –

545 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. Can the Government at least, or the Chief Minister at least, inform us about this. Have the Government sat down and considered in what areas they wish to enhance the rights of homosexuals in Gibraltar, apart from the question of civil partnerships?

550 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the last sentence of the answer I gave him a few moments ago, which says that I and the Minister for Equalities meet regularly with representatives of GGR, in order to keep these issues under review and, therefore, the answer is, yes, as already answered.

Statutory Boards Replacement of members since 9th December 2011

560 Clerk: Question 320, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to each Statutory Board, can the Chief Minister provide a list of a) who has stood down, been asked to stand down or been sacked from that board since the 9th of December 2011, and b) who has replaced them?

565 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule with the list of individuals who have stood down, been asked to stand down, or been sacked from all Statutory Boards since the 9th December 2011. The list of anyone who replaced them is also provided. Only one person was asked to consider standing down in respect of the Prison board, that person refused to stand down, and therefore remains on the said board until such time as her appointment expires.

Mr Speaker, only 3 people have been sacked from any board, namely the persons who made up the board of the Gibraltar Development Corporation, Mr Caruana, Mr Holliday and Mr Netto, all of whom were sacked by the people on the 8th December 2011. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Is it people with a small 'p'?

580 Hon. Chief Minister: I must tell you I tend to use it with a large 'P'.

Mr Speaker: My script here says capital 'P', I wonder if some newspaper is involved in this.

585 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he help us with this? What does 'revoked' mean in brackets next to a number of names? And in relation to those people that have resigned, did they resign or were they pushed?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am minded to ask Mr Bossino to tell us whether he felt –

Hon. J J Bossino: Pushed.

590 Hon. Chief Minister: Pushed or otherwise. Because as he will see from the list, he was one of the people who resigned. I don't know whether any of the others felt this compunction to have resigned also. They might have thought that there was a conflict with their new parliamentary responsibilities and serving on those boards.

595 Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned, nobody has been pushed. The revocations, as I understand it, take place because the boards have been changed completely and there is going to be a different type of board. So, Mr Speaker, he won't find any evidence here of what he is looking for, which is this idea that we have been cutting heads, which is what he seems to want his politics to be about, even though it is not the reality.

600 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he just repeat what he said about the question of revoked; we didn't quite catch it on this side.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, some boards, for example, expired at the end of the Parliament, some of them came to an end in another way and, therefore, the whole board was undone and a new board put in its place. That is the position as has been explained to me.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, both posts are presently filled by GDC employees, who have been seconded to the relevant posts,
620

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the reason why I am asking and, when I did, I caught the Hon. Minister Costa's eye last month, in an attempt to remind him, and his attempt to intercede with the Chief Minister to correct the answer that he then gave last month, did not prove successful, from what I could see from here.

625 I asked last month about the number of people from GDC, Civil Service and Government companies that had been transferred or moved and the GDC was 'none' – from the GDC 'none'. We had in mind, in fact, these two posts, which is why I asked, informally across the floor, through eye glances, 'are you sure it's none'? Does he accept that these two ought to have been in the schedule last... they were not in these posts before the election and, therefore, they have been moved to those posts.

630 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I remember correctly, I believe that the question the hon. Gentleman posed specifically used the word 'transfer' and, because there has not been a transfer, they were not included in that schedule. These continue to be secondments, and these individuals continue to be on GDC terms and conditions.

635 Hon. P R Caruana: So these two officers... For example, the Personal Secretary of Minister Costa, when you say she was not, – it just happens to be a lady – she was not transferred, what do you mean by that? She wasn't there before, she came from somewhere else.

640 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I think that this is really a technical argument about what the word 'transfer' means. And the hon. Gentleman knows that a 'transfer' means a particular thing in Civil Service terms, and here there is no transfer, this person has been seconded to this post, though she has not been transferred. In any event, Mr Speaker –

645 Hon. J J Bossano: The post is still a Civil Service post.

Hon. Chief Minister: – the post is still a Civil Service post.

If the hon. Gentleman wants to just bear with me for a moment, he should also note that this particular officer was already, if I may say so, in the Tourism sphere of Government as GDC and, therefore, there has been no transfer out of a Department She has simply moved from the post she had in Tourism to another post in Tourism. She is a seconded GDC officer, she has not been transferred.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, when you say that this person was in the field of Tourism, can the hon. Member be more specific, and say what exactly this lady used to do before she became the Minister's Personal Assistant.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I would need notice of that question.

Hon. Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, to answer the question of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, whereas I am not sure of the exact title, I believe she was the Deputy Manager to the Manager at the Tourist Office in Casemates. She used to assist Ms Tiron and she used to offer VIP tours and assist in the managing of that office.

Consultant to the Government, Mr E Montado, CBE
Terms of engagement

Clerk: Question 322, the Hon. P R Caruana

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what are the terms of engagement of Mr E Montado, CBE, as a Consultant to the Government?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government approached Mr Ernest Montado, CBE, last month and asked him to provide advice and support, particularly in the transition period of the new Administration, in the establishment of internal processes, renewal of the Office of Chief Secretary and matters generally.

Mr Montado agreed, two weeks ago, to work for the Government; he will not be charging anything. Mr Montado informed me that he considered the opportunity of assisting my Government, as we have requested, a matter of duty in the public interest and not a chance for personal gain or remuneration. The appointment commences from 5th March 2012.

Given that Mr Montado has ongoing full-time work commitments in his private sector job, I wish to formally record in this Parliament my Government's appreciation for his willingness to dedicate extra time and effort to contribute to the business of the Government at no cost to the tax payer. I am sure that all Members will agree. (Applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: So, Mr Speaker, the position is that Mr Montado remains an employee of the law firm, Hassans, and that, from that position, he will, on a pro bono basis, be providing consultant work, be consulting for the Government, on the matters that he has listed, without fee.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: And what will his status be in terms of access to Government papers and will he have the status effectively of an unpaid civil servant, or will he have the status of an external consultant? What is his exact... how exactly does he fit into the public administration, in terms of the status of individual officers within it, their responsibilities and their... well, he knows what I mean by status and standing.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he will be a consultant to the Government at no remuneration. He will have such access to official documents as the current Chief Secretary considers is appropriate, with the caveat that he has been reminded by the current Chief Secretary – not that, I think, he needed reminding, but just as a matter of appropriate form – that he continues to be bound by the provisions of the Official Secrets Act during the period of consultancy, although it was, in any event, understood that that restriction applied to him, even beyond the period of his retirement – the date of his retirement in March 2007.

Hon. P R Caruana: And will his consultation role be limited to matters of Civil Service, public administration, in terms of the running of the organisation, or will it extend to matters of policy, and things of this sort? Or is he simply advising on Civil Service internal organisational/management issues or is he a consultant to the Government on policy, external, inward investment... you know, the substance of policy?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I said in my initial answer he will be consulting on the establishment on internal processes, and the development of the Office of the Chief Secretary, and how it interfaces with the Office of the Chief Minister, the renewal of the Office of the Chief Minister... of Chief Secretary and matters generally (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

It has been renewed in my shape, Mr Speaker!

And matters generally, and I am very happy, Mr Speaker, that that means that ‘matters generally’ will, of course, therefore, be able to include consulting on all matters, including issues of policy and issues of inward investment that the hon. Gentleman has alluded to, in particular issues relating to relationships that Gibraltar has beyond its shores, whether it be the United Kingdom, or Spain, or elsewhere.

I know he will want to agree with me, Mr Speaker, that Mr Montado is, no doubt, imminently, and perhaps uniquely, qualified in this respect, having served Chief Ministers since Sir Joshua Hassan.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I am sure you meant ‘eminently’ rather than ‘imminently’, but I am not called upon to agree or disagree with him, simply to remind the hon. Member, and to ask the hon. Member, whether he considers that the appointment of Mr Montado on consultant terms is consistent with the explicit and implicit criticism made by them of us when we used to re-engage civil servants on consultancy terms?

Now it is true that this is on a pro bono basis, which means that there are not issues of pay and pensions and things of that sort. Will the hon... Mr Speaker, the point I am expressing concerns as delicately as possible is on this business of his continued status as an employee of a particular law firm whilst, at the same time, consultant for the Government as an insider, to the Government on matters general, I mean I was not so much worried about the answer when he was limiting it to internal Civil Service organisational structures. If it strays, and indeed even if it got to foreign affairs in terms of relations with Spain and things of that sort, but as you know Mr Speaker there is a considerable amount of interaction between Number 6 and Government Departments, by law firms in general and by the law firm of which he is an employee in particular, being the largest law firm in Gibraltar, with the Government, and I am just questioning the range of his remit to see the extent to which others may rightly or wrongly fear that there is some perceived advantage of Hassans, in effect, having an insider, in terms of an insider consultant, within the Government, which only arises in the question of ‘generally’, not in the question of Civil Service matters.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not at all concerned about that. I will tell you why.

First of all, Mr Speaker, I am surprised at his reticence in wanting to share the Government’s enthusiasm that Mr Montado is eminently, or imminently, or otherwise, uniquely the best person qualified, given that he has served every Chief Minister since Sir Joshua Hassan. Now he has an opportunity, or I have an opportunity, that he should serve with me also, which is, in my view, an absolutely fantastic opportunity for the people of Gibraltar to harness his abilities.

Mr Speaker, he has somebody sitting to his right who is a partner of Hassans. I was a partner of Hassans when I was sitting there. We all understand, as does my hon. colleague, the Minister for Justice, what a conflict of interest is and how to deal with it, Mr Speaker: most of all, Ernest Montado, who has known the administration of Government from inside out, who will be able to spot a conflict of interest, perhaps quicker than most of us. But it will be the current Chief Secretary, Mr Gomez, who will be deploying his – Mr Montado’s – abilities as he thinks fit and I am sure that Mr Gomez also will be alive to the opportunities for conflict of interest and will ensure that they do not occur.

Mr Speaker, I am very confident that the issue that the hon. Gentleman has couched in terms which he knows are designed to be less than generous – in suggesting that a particular law firm might have an insider somewhere – are not issues that are going to be relevant at all in any way; especially given the standing of Ernest Montado who has, perhaps uniquely, also been Acting Deputy Governor and Acting Governor in different times that he has been in the administration, and Financial Secretary, wearing many hats, knowing always how to resolve the conflict of interest that might have arisen, never letting anyone down and always enjoying the confidence of everyone – or perhaps, given the reticence, I should say almost everyone that he has served and worked with.

Culture and Heritage Agency
'Anomalies and inconsistencies' in the structure

Clerk: Question 323, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Hon. Chief Minister say what were the 'anomalies and inconsistencies' in the structure of the Culture and Heritage Agency, and the staffing and other deficiencies that needed to be addressed that the Government has said were pointed out by the Principal Auditor?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the review of the structure of the Culture and Heritage Agency which the Principal Auditor carried out at the request of the Government was provided to the hon. the Minister for Culture on 23rd January 2012.

The review reflects that the hon. Member opposite determined himself, personally, the salaries that people should earn; that the hon. Member made direct appointments of people who had previously not been civil servants, or GDC employees, or employees of Knightsfield Holdings Limited, to posts in the Agency – that is to say, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member opposite made direct appointments into the public service, not as contract officers but as permanent and pensionable employees of individuals; that the collective agreement that created the Agency has not been signed; that the collective agreement does not contain the schedules with the job descriptions of the individuals in the Culture and Heritage Agency; and that the Government had not dealt with the reimbursement of expenses due to Knightsfield Holdings in respect of payments made prior to the creation of the Agency.

Hon. P R Caruana: All those are the reasons that prompted me to ask the question. Why, even if all those were true, would they be 'discrepancies'? First of all, why does the hon. Member think that engaging people as employees of the Culture and Heritage Agency, which is not a Civil Service, which is not a department of the Government... why he stands up in this House to say that it is a 'discrepancy' that the hon. Member opposite – referring to me – was, personally or otherwise, employing people directly into the Civil Service, when employees of the Culture and Heritage Agency are not civil servants. The Culture and Heritage Agency is a statutory corporation which employs people in its own right and are not civil servants. So I doubt very much whether the Principal Auditor pointed that out as a discrepancy. It is factually incorrect and, even if it were correct, it is not a 'discrepancy'.

The Act says how employees of the Agency should be appointed. They are not civil servants, they are not subject to the Public Service Commission, they are appointed by the people that the Act says they should be appointed by and that is how people were appointed, mostly, as I recall, people, civil servants who agreed to transfer – some of them, as I recall, chose not to transfer to the Agency and, therefore, would have been left behind. Why does the hon. Member consider that any of that is a 'discrepancy'?

The fact that they do not want to proceed with the Agency, or wanted to proceed with it in a different form, does not make the things that they disagreed with a 'discrepancy'. I would need to see the alleged report of the Principal Auditor to see, before I could believe that he had described any of those things as 'discrepancies' and, if by any chance, he had done so, given that he is an independent statutory authority, then I could, if I so chose, challenge the results of his findings. But I am certainly not accepting the unilateral and bland statement, without publication of the document, that this is either what the Principal Auditor has found, or indeed, that it is a 'discrepancy'.

Can I further ask the hon. Member why he describes as a 'discrepancy' in the structure of the Culture and Heritage Agency that the collective agreement establishing it has not been signed? The Agency is not signed. The Agency was not established by agreement, it was established by Act of this Parliament. I assume that he is referring to the agreement between the Agency and the Unions relating to labour issues, which have nothing to do with the structure of the Culture and Heritage Agency and all anomalies and inconsistencies in it. Does the hon. Member, therefore, agree that, intentionally or otherwise – if he allows me the opportunity to, I will assume unintentionally – by the use of the juxtaposition of concepts, such as ‘Principal Auditor’, ‘review’, ‘anomalies and inconsistencies’, he gives an impression – which he has certainly not been able to sustain by what he has said in this House today on this question – which are neither factually correct, nor were they correct, nor had they been correct, would they amount to ‘discrepancies’. They may be things which he would have done differently, which he does not agree with, but they are not ‘discrepancies’. I do not accept that I personally employed people into the Culture and Heritage Agency.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to accept that the juxtaposition of words in a Government press release do or do not do one thing or another unless, of course, the hon. Gentleman is offering to consult to my Government at no fee whatsoever, in which case I would be delighted to take him on, if he likes to draft press releases after he has foregone, or been done away with, on that side of the House.

Mr Speaker, the words ‘anomalies and inconsistencies’ are words chosen carefully. We have alluded today in this House to the things that we consider to be the anomalies and the inconsistencies, which the Principal Auditor has set out. It is very clear to us –

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, publish the report.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and he does not need to explain it to us that the collective agreement does not set up the Agency. The collective agreement is the agreement with the Union in respect of the transfer of individuals into the Agency and it is that which has not been signed.

Mr Speaker, the fact is that what the Principal Auditor has uncovered shows that the hon. Gentleman was employing people – and I said ‘public service’ – into the public service a dedo. In other words, he was choosing them for himself and bringing them in when he wanted.

Mr Speaker, in Spanish, that has another word that conveniently describes what happens when people are given jobs in that way. We have set out very clearly what the anomalies and the inconsistencies were. We consider them to have been important enough to have issued a statement. They are in a review carried out by the Principal Auditor and I think it is appropriate to have brought this to the public’s attention.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member publish the report of the Principal Auditor? After all, it appears to be highly critical of my Government and of me in particular, and I am the one who is calling for its publication. Will he lay on the table in this House a copy of the Principal Auditor’s report?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not that I am minded not to do so. I am happy to give him a copy of the report so that he can, if he wishes, present such defence to the public as he thinks is appropriate.

The concern I have about publication – and he will know that I was the one always pressing for publication of reports – is that this specific report actually identifies by name individuals, not by grade and their salaries, but I am happy to let him have it so he can construct his public position, in respect of that report with sight of it, as long as he agrees with me that the names of the individuals referred to in it should not be disclosed, either in his, or our, debate on the subject.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I agree, but does the hon. Member acknowledge – and I would be happy to receive it on those terms – that when I have asked him...

The Government’s press release said:

‘anomalies and inconsistency in the structure of the Culture and Heritage Agency and the staffing and other deficiencies that needed to be addressed.’

That was... and I have asked him, will the Chief Minister say what these anomalies and inconsistencies in these – and I have used the same language thereafter – what they actually were and he has said:

‘...discrepancies, the hon. Member made direct appointments and salaries... of civil servants or GDC employees.’

Well, Mr Speaker, my recollection of the matter is that these things were decided at a board meeting, in 870 which I had as much influence... (Interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, this is why I want to see the report, this is why I want to see... it is all very well for the hon. Members to bandy about the words 'The Principal Auditor' and others in an attempt to gain traction. I will see the report and I will certainly agree to respect the names... or not to name the names of the people and thereafter I reserve the right to deal with the contents of the report in whatever way I consider is effective to dispel any false impression that the Government's statement may 875 have made and which the answers he has given... he has given three examples today. He has said, collective agreement establishing the Agency not signed, well, now he accepts that the Agency was not established by an agreement. He has said that I was employing people directly as civil servants and GDC.

Hon. Chief Minister: Public servants.

880 Hon. P R Caruana: You said civil servants.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I said public servants.

Hon. P R Caruana: As employees of the Authority and that I was making... personally choosing the 885 salaries. Those are the three instances that he has given. (Interjections) Yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Will the hon. Member give way?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

890 Hon. Chief Minister: There is a substantive argument to be had here, but there is also this argument, that in what I have read out about the collective agreement, I have not said anywhere that that established the Agency. I do not know whether he misheard me, I said that the collective agreement has not yet been signed and that the collective agreement does not contain the schedules with the job descriptions of the individuals in the GCHA. I have not said the words 'collective agreement and establishment' anywhere.

895 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is he reading from his original answer?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, except it is all scribbled over.

900 Hon. P R Caruana: We will have to defer to Hansard. I am almost certain because I made a note of it:
'establishing an agency has not been...' (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: I will send across a photocopy of it.

905 Mr Speaker: If it is of any help, I have been following the answer read by the Hon. Chief Minister. It is exactly per the script I have in front of me and there was no reference to 'establishing' the Agency.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, and just in respect of the other issue that he was referring to, I have the 910 Government press release here.

The Government press release also does not say what the hon. Gentleman thinks it says, but it may be that he has got a copy of a report of the press release. The press release itself, which, as he knows, is available on the website is:

915 'This has confirmed that there were a number of anomalies and inconsistencies in the structure that was left behind by the previous Administration and has pointed out that a number of staffing and other issues need to be addressed.'

Mr Speaker, we think it is actually quite important, in respect of the collective agreement, that the job descriptions should be attached, because those are very important in respect of what it is that people are expected to do. So that is why we attach importance to that particular issue.

920 If I could just take one of the issues up that he mentioned in his final supplementary, he said that he reserved the right to deal with the report in any way that he felt appropriate. Of course, I accept that. He is free to do that, as long as it is within the earlier representation, that the names etc would not be disclosed.

Hon. P R Caruana: I accept.

Gibraltar Parliament website
Date when available

930

Clerk: Question 324, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I think I can almost withdraw this question. I think the Government, since I put this down, has put out a press release answering this question, has it not?

935

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): If he wants to ask if there is more information, then...
[Inaudible]

940

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes. The purpose of asking the question, which is one that I was hoping the hon. Member would agree with – and I am sure he does – is that it is quite important at the earliest opportunity for Parliament not to look like an extension of Government and that, therefore, the Parliament should have its own website and not gov.gi and that presumably is the fact. Since then, he has announced already that it is ready, that the website is ready and up and running and all that.

945

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful and I know that he must be a convert to that because, in the time that he was in Government, there was only one.

950

I know, Mr Speaker, that the whole House will want to thank the Clerk and the officers of this Parliament, together with the Government's IT and logistics department, for having delivered this positive change that is a manifesto commitment, but there are still further developments to come in the future as the website evolves to provide video of the proceedings of the Parliament and other functionality, such as e-mail addresses for each Member, that I think will make it easy for us also to distinguish when people are approaching us as Ministers, while other people are approaching us as Members of Parliament.

955

He will know, and I am sure will agree with me that, although a sterling job has been done of putting all the Hansards of the business of this House, since the last election, on line for all of us to be able, and the general members of the public to be able, to access, that we are seeking and, hopefully, very soon will be also having available all the Hansards that were already digitally available to all of us on CD on that website also, which I think goes back to 2002 or 2003. Thereafter, there is a process of digitisation in some way of the even earlier Hansards until we get back to 1969.

960

Hon. P R Caruana: He may be interested in knowing that there is now a local company that will scan all Hansards from printed form into searchable electronic form, which would allow the hon. Members to put all Hansards, going all the way back into the past, on the same website.

965

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that. I think that we are aware of that. He may also be interested in knowing that there is a particular charity that may be interested in contracting such entities to provide that service for nothing, for no cost to the Parliament, so that those are available as searchable documents for anyone who may want to come to look into the more historical aspects of what the business of this House has been.

970

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just as an issue that I identified yesterday it appears that there may be an issue, which I have already brought to the attention of party headquarters and asked that they liaise with the Department, in relation to the searchability of the latest versions of Hansards for the meetings we have had since the new session was opened by Mr Speaker. I found it impossible to actually search those documents electronically and I am merely raising the issue simply so that it may be looked at, at some point.

975

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may say so to the hon. Gentleman, although I am not here to give him advice, what he needs to do, is he needs to download the document: it then becomes searchable and, depending on which web browser one is using when you open the PDF document in a browsing page, you may or may not be able to search it.

980 If the hon. Gentlemen were to download that particular PDF – and it will take a few seconds to do so – then if he goes to ‘edit’ and ‘find’, he will then be able to put in any term that he might want to find, for example Figueras, and it will take him directly to it.

985 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister for his advice, even though he realised he did not need to give it to me. I can assure him that I have done everything that he has advised and I was just wondering whether, perhaps, there was a glitch in the new system of recording the proceedings here in this House.

Hon Chief Minister: Is the hon. Gentleman talking about the audio recording or the – 990 Hon. S M Figueras: No, the PDF download.

995 Hon Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am surprised at that because I have not had that problem, so it may be a glitch in some machine that he is using. But these are not necessarily issues that we need to tie the House up on. Let us take them offline, if I might suggest...

Mediterranean Hotel demolition Contractor carrying out work; cost

1000

Clerk: Question 325, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1005 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say which contractor is carrying out the demolition of the ex Mediterranean Hotel and at what cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1010 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the demolition of the ex Mediterranean Hotel building is being undertaken by GJBS as part of the works they are doing on site in respect of the maintenance of the site for the completion of the tunnel under the runway. The forecast outturn for this work is £706,721.

GSD Government Employees ‘Highly paid cushy jobs’

Clerk: Question 326, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1020 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister provide the list of names of the ‘large number of people’, who according to the Government were GSD supporters and were employed and kept by the previous GSD Government in highly paid cushy jobs.

1025 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

1030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no sir, for a simple reason: we will not engage with the hon. Gentleman’s attempt to have individual civil servants, employees of the GDC, or other public servants, named in this House, as his question requires. He knows, we know, and the public know, which of his supporters he ‘plugged in’ to these highly paid cushy jobs for his own partisan political reasons. But we will not allow him to turn this Parliament into a circus by pandering to his provocations.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Members answer is disgraceful (Laughter) and it is yet another example of his willingness to cast aspersions and then his unwillingness to make good on them. The hon. Member puts out a Government of Gibraltar press release in which he says that a large number of people who were GSD supporters were employed and kept by the previous GSD Government in 'highly paid cushy jobs' and when asked to identify such people which, contrary to what he has just said, do not exist he refuses to do so. And I tell him that he refuses to do so because they do not exist and not for the reason that he now gives as a pretext, after the event, in his usual typically cowardly self form.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only coward in this House is the man who has just sat down.

The fact is, Mr Speaker that we could spend the next four years fighting over the things he did wrong, and in many instances we shall have to continue to shine the cold light of day on some of the abuses that the hon. Gentleman perpetrated whilst he was in office. But to ask us to identify by name those people now, Mr Speaker, is to ask us in our view to break the rules of this House, to discuss individuals who are not here to defend themselves.

Mr Speaker, he knows that he did put people into highly paid cushy jobs, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) simply because they are –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, point of order. On a point of order, this is not acceptable.

He cannot continue to assert that I know that I put people personally into 'high paid cushy jobs' when I am telling him it is not true. He is, in effect, saying that I am lying. I am asking him to make good on his statement by identifying the people: he refuses to do so – I tell him because they do not exist – and he insists on repeating the allegation but without naming the people.

I say that he is a coward and that he is misleading public opinion. Such people do not exist. He must either withdraw or make good on his statement.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just on the point of order, not only am I not lying, and not only am I not a coward, it is transparently obvious that we have really put our finger in the wound on this issue. The hon. Gentleman knows just how vulnerable he is, on this particular abuse that he perpetrated whilst he was in Government.

Mr Speaker, it is absolutely incredible to hear Peter Caruana get up in Parliament and suggest that he was not the person who has given more jobs for more boys than any other Chief Minister in the history of Gibraltar. (Applause) Mr Speaker, his premiership will go down in history as one which, in particular towards the end, tilted completely towards partisan favour of those who were his supporters.

I am quite happy, when tempers are less frayed and we are having a cup of tea, to share the names with him, but I will not share them with him across the floor of this House, because I will not fall into the temptation of bringing the names of individuals who cannot defend themselves into this debate. But I will tell him one thing, when I give him the copy of the report from the Principal Auditor, he will see a couple of names there which might ring a bell!

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, he continues to do what the Gibraltar Chronicle, in a recent editorial, said was completely unacceptable in civilised democracy, which is trial by Government. He is a prime practitioner of trial by insinuation, trial by suggestions, trial by Government statement and trial by implications of all kinds.

When asked to make good on his very serious allegation, he continues to wriggle on the hook like a fish and refuses to say... look Mr Speaker, if I felt vulnerable as he alleges about the large number of people that he thinks I have employed into 'cushy jobs' because they were GSD supporters why on earth would I be raising the question and asking him to list them and raising the whole matter in Parliament, I tell him that there are no people who were put into highly paid cushy jobs because they were GSD supporters, The only thing I will admit is that because we were in office for so many years, we put 8,000 people in jobs (A Member: Hear, hear.) that did not have jobs before, Mr Speaker.

I will continue to hold him publicly to account for his refusal to make good on his statement, which is that he has made this allegation against the previous Chief Minister and the GSD Government, and he refuses to provide details of the alleged GSD supporters who were allegedly put in to, and kept, in highly paid 'cushy jobs' in the Government by the Chief Minister because they... That is a serious allegation of political nepotism, probably political corruption, which he will either make good or repeat outside of this House and answer for it.

1090 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman has taken leave of his senses. He started his question by saying that we have said it in a Government press release – so we have repeated it outside this House.

Mr Speaker, I almost pity the hon. Gentleman. He really is almost like the melting snowman, disappearing in stature politically before our very eyes in this House. Does he think that anybody is going to believe that he created 8,000 jobs? Everybody knows, Mr Speaker, that most of the jobs that he likes to boast about creating walk across the frontier every morning.

1095 Does he really expect that anybody is going to put any credence to the allegation that what is happening today, by the provision of complete and utter openness by this Government, amounts to ‘trial by Government’?

1100 Mr Speaker, trial by Government is what the hon. Gentleman did, or tried to do, against me in May last year, trying to impugn my fitness for the office that the people of Gibraltar determined I should hold on 8th December 2011. Trial by Government is what the hon. Gentleman has done to many people who he did not believe were his supporters, where he deployed the full force of the state against them, incurring such cost as may be required for him to triumph and sometimes even saying to people, ‘I will see you in the Privy Council’. Mr Speaker, I have only ever heard of one other person doing that before in history and that was Robert Maxwell, who was famous for saying to people, ‘I’ll sue you all the way up to the House of Lords and you will run out of money before I do’.

1105 Mr Speaker, I stand by everything my Government has said on this issue and the enchufes are over. (Applause)

1110 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, it may interest the hon. Member to know that, certainly, neither I nor anybody on this side of the House, or in this House, have changed their minds about the comments that were made about the very serious judgement issues that afflict and continue to afflict and affect the hon. Member in terms of the discharge of his professional duties, and time will tell whether those concerns were well founded or not, and I think as he said before that we would have to wait this morning for twenty years until, whatever, the context of Mr Bossino this morning twenty years until, time will tell whether those issues will come back to haunt anybody.

1115 Now Mr Speaker, I am not going to press further in this House except to say to the hon. Member, that presumably the GSD supporters in question, the large number of people who, according to the Government, were GSD supporters and employed and kept by the GSD Government in ‘highly paid cushy jobs’, and which I say do not exist. Can the hon. Member say whether these people that he claims do exist are still in highly paid cushy jobs, this large number of people in highly paid cushy jobs, are they still in those highly paid cushy jobs?

1125 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as to my ability to discharge my professional duties, we will see what time tells, not just about me but about others, because we remain of the same view about some of the Gentlemen sitting opposite, that they might remain in respect of us.

But, look, let us be very clear: they have got a conflicting mantra of opinion. One day they say that there is a GSD witch hunt and the next day they ask us whether we have maintained these highly paid GSD supporters in their jobs. Yes we have, Mr Speaker, because we haven’t cut off any heads!

1130 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see. So there are ‘highly paid cushy jobs’ in his Government, then, and they are all occupied by these GSD supporters that he alleges we shoehorned into these positions. That situation is going to continue, is it?

1135 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is no witch hunt. Therefore, people who have jobs will retain their jobs.

I will only tell him this: everyone I speak to within the machinery of Government is constantly reminding me of the freshness that there is now in the administration, how people are allowed to get on with their jobs, and how there is so much more work to do. So it may be that the ‘cushiness’ is over.

1140 Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker. The cushiness appears not to be over!

I am now very concerned that there are people in the Government who, in his view, were not just put in there by us, but kept by us: if they were kept by us, they are being kept by him now, in ‘highly paid cushy job’.

1145 The phrase ‘cushy’ means a job that is not really required, or is over remunerated or overvalued and, in the name of not cutting off heads – another joke – he is going to continue this situation indefinitely. Well, Mr Speaker, who does he expect will believe that there are GSD supporters who are so in with the GSD that they were ‘employed into and kept in highly paid cushy jobs’ in the Government, and that they will continue to be kept in these ‘highly paid cushy jobs’ by the hon. Members opposite? This is much more than the call of duty requires in terms of not cutting heads!

1150 If there are people in ‘cushy jobs’ in the Government, they have an obligation to the taxpayer – for which I am sure the Principal Auditor will be very interested – in not keeping them in such posts.

1155 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I note what the hon. Gentleman says, and I will regard it as licence to deal with anybody who I think has got a job that is not required or is over remunerated in a way that ensures the best outcome for the taxpayer, regardless of their political affiliations, but what we will not do is because of the improper way in which someone may have alighted upon a job now deal with them also improperly.

1160 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Members threatening tone and facial contortions is their real colours and he has let his mask slip. So what he said was, now that you have persuaded me not to carry on being a nice chap on this question, I will deal with this matter in the way in which these questions give me licence! His mask has slipped: this is his real instinct. (Members: Oh!)

1165 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, look, I mean the hon. Gentleman can make fun of my physical affliction today if he likes, but making fun of physical afflictions is not something I commend to him, because he might find that we have a joke at his expense. But I have got my Strepsils, and that is what is causing the tone of voice...

What I have said, Mr Speaker, remains, that we will not be in any way dealing with people who are now in the public service in a way that is the witch hunt that they would like to see us pursuing, in order to criticise us for it, and because it is not happening they are trying to pretend is occurring.

1170 Mr Speaker: There should be a question there.

1175 Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member understand or accept that there are few people in Gibraltar who do not believe they are engaged in a witch hunt? I mean, there are all number of people who have suddenly moved, gone, rolled the directors of the bus companies, you know, and this always gets trotted out as some consensual arrangement...

1180 Nobody in Gibraltar believes that the hon. Members have not engaged in a witch hunt. What everybody in Gibraltar believes is that they have conducted a witch hunt whilst, at the same time, saying all the right things, in other words, doing much of the opposite of what they have been saying. Does the hon. Member accept that there is scope for that view to be held in Gibraltar?

Hon Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, not only do I not accept it but the hon. Gentleman needs to know that, simply because he tries to use a particular turn of phrase, people will not be persuaded by what he is saying.

1185 He gets up and he says, ‘nobody in Gibraltar believes’, ‘everybody in Gibraltar believes’... Look. it may be, Mr Speaker, that he comes to this House and he thinks that he can get away with that. I can tell him all the people in Gibraltar who do not believe that, who approach me. And he can tell me the people in Gibraltar who approach him who, he might say, believe it or do not believe it, but he cannot speak, Mr Speaker, for ‘nobody in Gibraltar’ or ‘everyone in Gibraltar’, and, perhaps most importantly, Mr Speaker, thank goodness, he cannot speak for Gibraltar any more.

1190 Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1195 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Hon. the Chief Minister accept that all these references to the Principal Auditor might create the perception that you are, in fact, politicising the office of the Principal Auditor, and politicising it in a way that he is being asked to conduct GSLP or Government’s witch hunts? Does he not accept that that is a possible perception?

1200 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no question of the office of the Principal Auditor being politicised because the Government refers issues to him, and I think the hon. Gentleman does a very serious disservice to the public administration of Gibraltar, and to the office of the Principal Auditor in particular, by raising that particular issue in that particular way.

He is wrong, Mr Speaker, and it will not happen, because the Principal Auditor will not allow it to happen.

1205 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Principal Auditor is an independent constitutional postholder. If the Principal Auditor thought that anything that had happened under my Government, or the previous Government, or the Government before that, were somehow improper, he has not only the power but, indeed, the constitutional duty to investigate it and report on it. Yet, he has not done so.

1210 All of a sudden, the hon. Members arrive in office and then he issues a plethora of reports, all at the hon. Member's political request. Are the hon. Members suggesting that the Principal Auditors in the past have all been in dereliction of their duty?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is so far from the question that it is absolutely ridiculous that we should be pursuing this line but I am happy to take a supplementary.

1215 The fact is that the Principal Auditor, in his constitutional role, can only deal with the information that he has and he has never had access to this information. What we are doing is giving him the information so that he can look into it.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that we have in our manifesto, in particular, already on page 11, set out how we will change the legislation in order to give greater jurisdiction to the Principal Auditor, a jurisdiction which he has been asking for in Principal Auditor's reports for many years now.

1220 I do not believe that Principal Auditors before have been in dereliction of their duty: I think they have not been provided the information with which they could make the reports that they are making now that the information is being provided to them.

1225 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it seems to me that the hon. Member has no clue of how the Principal Auditor is constituted and what his powers are. He has said the Principal Auditor had never had access to information... the Principal Auditor, as a matter of his office, has statutory right of access to all Government information and documents in howsoever to do with the spending of public money, the raising of public money, the accounting of public money. Therefore, Mr Speaker, if the Principal Auditor had thought that any of this was the case he has, as he has done on value for money things, completely spontaneously in the past, he would have asked questions, made statements in his report on the Government accounts.

1230 The idea that the Principal Auditor does none of this for 16 years, not even in respect of the previous 8 years, before the last 16 years, and now, all of a sudden, along comes this new Government and the Principal Auditor is suddenly invited to conduct reviews which the hon. Members then publish the results of in press releases... well, Mr Speaker, the Principal Auditor is not an instrument in the hands of the Government!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, where is the question?

1240 Hon. P R Caruana: The question is, does not the hon. Member share my view that, if he asks the Principal Auditor to look into something, the Principal Auditor should be allowed, as a separate authority as he is, to announce the results of what he is looking into, not have the Principal Auditor, that is supposed to be independent, do an enquiry at the request of the Government and then the Government decides what treatment it gives it in a Government press release?

1245 Does he not understand that that exposes us all to the risk implicit in my hon. colleague, Minister Daniel Feetham's question, that there is a risk that the Principal Auditor will be seen as a political instrument in the hands of the Government for their political purposes, which would not be the case if they just referred matters to him, if they want to and let him conduct his investigations and announce the results in, presumably, his technical and non-political way? Does he not agree with that?

1250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no credence in what the hon. Gentleman is saying—no credence whatsoever.

Mr Speaker, nobody here speaks for the Principal Auditor. The Principal Auditor speaks for himself when he wants to and the fact that we are having this debate, frankly, in my view, leads us only down the path of it being possible to suggest that the hon. Members opposite are the ones impugning the independence of the Principal Auditor.

1255 Mr Speaker, is it that the hon. Gentleman has now chosen to ignore the practice in other democracies? Doesn't he know that the National Audit Office in the United Kingdom will issue reports, or not issue reports, as it wishes, but that Government and Opposition, and Members of Parliament in the United Kingdom, will have access to those reports and make press releases themselves, whether or not he has made press releases about it, whether the actual Audit Office has made press releases about it when they consider might be appropriate?

1260 We do not accept anything that the hon. Gentleman has said except this, Mr Speaker, that we understand that they find themselves in a very, very difficult bind because an independent constitutional authority like the Principal Auditor is making findings that they don't like, and they have to do everything possible to impugn the office and to impugn the independence of that office, because that is the only political corridor left open to them.

1265 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Principal Auditor has neither made any findings that we don't like, nor do we impugn him. We believe that the Government is the one impugning.

1270 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member condemns himself by his own words. Does he not agree with me that the example that he has cited in the United Kingdom is absolutely apposite. Members of the Opposition and members of the Government will, indeed, comment on reports and investigations and statements by the equivalent of the Principal Auditor that is probably called the National Audit Office, or the Auditor General, I think he is called in England, but only after he has made his investigation and he has published his report. The Director General of the National Audit Office does not – whether he conducts the investigation or the enquiry of his own motion, or at the Government's request or at the Opposition Member's request – does he not agree, he does not send his report to a Minister so that the Government then puts out a public release, commenting on the outcome before the man's report has been published by him? This is precisely the distinction that I am trying to draw.

1275 One thing is to comment or not comment on a report once it has been issued and another thing is that the only publication of the Principal Auditor's so-called reviews and investigations are not what he says but what the hon. Members choose to quote from what he says. Then the rest of mankind has got to take it at face value that this is not a selective, that this is not an inaccurate, that this is not... and therein lies the degree of politicisation. If the hon. Members want transparency, (Interjections) will he agree to allow the Principal Auditor to publish his own reports and to decide whether he conducts enquiries, or not, into whatever factual situation the hon. Member wants to put in front of him with their perfectly welcome... and, indeed, free to do, as we are.

1285 Mr Speaker: There was a question there from the very outset, albeit it took a long time to conclude.

1290 Hon Chief Minister: A very long time Mr Speaker.

It cannot be otherwise than the Principal Auditor only investigates things which he wants to investigate when they are brought to his attention by us, or by anybody else, or when they come to his attention by his own motion. Or is it that he thinks that we make the Principal Auditor investigate things? Is that what he is saying? That is plainly ridiculous, and that impugns the office of the Principal Auditor because it suggests that he is a tool in our hands, when he is not, Mr Speaker.

1295 We have given information to the Principal Auditor, which he has reviewed and he has prepared reports. Am I in the same Parliament I was in 20 minutes ago when I told the hon. Gentleman that I would give him a copy of the report and review carried out in respect of the Culture and Heritage Agency by the Principal Auditor? Am I in the same Parliament, Mr Speaker, because it appears that the hon. Gentlemen has wanted to forget that?

1300 Mr Speaker, if we give information to the Auditor and he decides it is appropriate to investigate and he does investigate and he does make a report, is he saying that the Government is not free to publicise the issues set out in the report? Well, that, Mr Speaker, if he is saying it, is plainly ridiculous – plainly ridiculous. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Because, Mr Speaker, if the Principal Auditor has felt it appropriate, in a review or a report he is asked to do by the Government, given his constitutional responsibilities, and he brings to the notice of the Government something which the Government believes should be brought to the attention of the public, the Government will do so, in particular because of our commitment to transparency and openness. If we can publish the reports, Mr Speaker, we will publish the reports, depending on how they are couched, and I have told the hon. Gentleman not half an hour ago that, in the instance of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency, we are unable to publish it because it contains such level of personal detail that it would be unfair to the people referred to in it to publish it.

That, Mr Speaker, will be the proper and open attitude of my Government as long as we are in office. He obviously thinks we have got it wrong, and he can spend the next four years trying to persuade people that his style of Government is right, and ours is wrong but, on this issue, Mr Speaker, we uphold the independence of the Principal Auditor. We think he is doing exactly the right thing in respect of the matters that we refer to him, we have a manifesto commitment to give him wider powers and, Mr Speaker, that is the right track to be on.

Hon P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with the greatest of respect to the hon. Member, it is he who distorts the status of the Principal Auditor, it is he who challenges its independence, as always saying one thing and doing the very opposite.

Look, Mr Speaker, it is not he or I who decide the status of the Principal Auditor. The status of the Principal Auditor is established in the constitution and the Principal Auditor is not an officer of the Government or a tool of the Government, he is an Officer of this House.

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely right.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, well, that is not consistent with what he has been saying. He has been an Officer of this House. The Principal Auditor, who is an independent constitutional authority should not report to the Government, he should act like an independent or statutory authority and publish his reports himself, (Interjections) not hand them surreptitiously to a Government Minister, for them to distort and abuse for political purpose. That is how it happens everywhere else in the democratic world.

We made the improvement of making the Principal Auditor, in the last Constitution, an Officer of this House. The House will have noticed that the accounts of Gibraltar and the Principal Auditor's report are no longer tabled in this House by the Minister for Finance, as they used to be. They are now tabled in this House directly by the Principal Auditor.

The Principal Auditor is an Officer of this House. He should answer to this House, he should respond to this House and the hon. Members should allow him to publish his own report and then we can all comment about it. The hon. Members opposite, as a Government – I would invite them to agree with me – should not commission reports from the Principal Auditors, receive them, keep the reports to themselves and then make two and a half line allusions to them in a Government press release. That is a direct assault on the independence and political non-involvement of the office of the Principal Auditor.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order, one moment.

I will allow the Hon. the Chief Minister to respond to that, but I think we have strayed from the question. The Hon. Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, distortion, distortion, distortion! He does not want to ask a supplementary about the issues as they are; he wants to ask a supplementary about the issues as he wants them to be.

Mr Speaker, I am not saying that the Principal Auditor reports to the Government. Of course, the Principal Auditor, as a constitutional officer, reports, not just to this Parliament, but to the public, because he has a public office. But when we ask him to do a review and he agrees to do a review for the Government, he sends the report to the Government. And, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman opposite's problem is this, the Principal Auditor feels comfortable with that because he has agreed to do it.

The Principal Auditor, who is the constitutional officer, who is responsible for his independence, feels comfortable with that, and has done so. And Mr Speaker, given the openness and given the transparency that we are committed to, we will publish those reports which he provides to us which we are able to publish.

Government adverts in Gibraltar newspapers
Whether 'political corruption'

1365

Clerk: Question 327, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1370

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say why he thinks that the placing of Government adverts by the previous GSD Government in the 7 Days newspaper was 'political corruption of the worst sort ever seen in the political history of Gibraltar' – he was probably away from Gibraltar that day – but advertisements placed by the GSLP Liberal Government in the newspaper owned by Mr Joe Garcia are not political corruption of the worst sort ever seen in the political history of Gibraltar?

1375

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the answer to this question is so obvious that we are surprised that the hon. Gentleman wants to embarrass himself by having us spell it out. But it has been an afternoon of that, anyway.

1380

Panorama has been a registered newspaper since 1977. It has received Government advertising since that date, but Panorama carries adverts from many other sources alongside Government adverts. Panorama has never been a free publication; it has always been available for sale. By continuing, for the past 100 days, to place Government notices in Panorama, the GSLP liberal Government is only continuing a process established by the AACR, the first GSLP Administration, and the hon. Gentleman's Government that, in particular, for the past 16 years... Mr Garcia, the editor of Panorama, is a recognised journalist in Gibraltar and internationally.

1385

The 7 Days, which started publication in about early 2006, was before the Election a free publication funded exclusively, or almost exclusively, by Government advertising, in almost equal measure to that provided to established daily publications like Panorama and the Gibraltar Chronicle, although the 7 Days was weekly. 7 Days received £156,000 of such advertising, even though the publishing company was struck off in 2010 and never registered for PAYE or Social Insurance purposes. It was still receiving massive amounts from his Government, despite his protestations that, in the case of the Vox newspaper, the withdrawal of advertising from that paper was due to arrears of payment of PAYE and Social Security. (A Member: Oh!)

1390

Mr Speaker, the sole editorial purpose of the 7 Days was to praise the previous Administration, and to denigrate the parties now in Government and, in particular, the Hon. Mr Bossano and/or myself – not that we cared, nor did it do the Members opposite much good. Indeed, I have it on good authority that the writers of the diatribe which that newspaper carried before the Election may very well have been some of the Members opposite, some of their now departed colleagues and some of their well-remunerated supporters. (Laughter)

1395

Indeed, Mr Speaker, the use of taxpayer's money to fund 7 Days, as if it were a weekly manifesto for the party opposite, imperilled the good government of Gibraltar and the basic tenet of democracy, that the assets of the state should never be used to advance the cause of the party in office. That, Mr Speaker, broke down under the GSD Administration so dramatically in the case of the funding of the 7 Days, with Government advertising, as one other daily newspaper put it at the time that the advertising costs of Chronicle, Panorama and 7 Days were published, let me just say this, people can make up their minds for themselves. (Applause)

1400

1405

Hon. P R Caruana: So, leaving to one side the sanctimonious diatribe with which the hon. Member has padded his speech, it all boils down to the fact that the Panorama has been going for longer, that is has one or two advertisers more, other than the Government, than the 7 Days newspaper and that it is free, as if free newspapers are somehow illegitimate, when free newspapers, without a cover price, that rely for their revenue on advertising is now more or less the common form rather than the exception.

1410

And that is the basis – oh, and that he alleges that a company that was previously the publisher was struck off and, presumably, replaced by some other publisher, and that he alleges, quite improperly, since he should not be making public statements about tax payers' individual tax matters, (Interjection) he is alleging that they did not pay PAYE – these are the reasons why one is the 'greatest act of political corruption' ever seen in the political history of Gibraltar, but the placing of advertisements in the newspaper owned by Mr. Joe Garcia who, as we all know, is the father of the Deputy Chief Minister –

1415

Mr Speaker: Order, Order. Order! Order! When this question was first posed I did bring to the hon.

Member's attention that, while it is permissible to refer to the name of the individual concerned, no reference should be made to relationships to Members of Parliament.

1420

Hon. P R Caruana: In the question I put.

Mr Speaker: Well, with respect, if it applies to the question – (Animated interjections)

1425

Hon. Chief Minister: This must a question too. [Inaudible]

Hon. P R Caruana: Does he not, given that he has said that the sole editorial purpose of the 7 Days was to praise the GSD, Mr Speaker... when has he ever read an anti- or a critical-of-the GSLP or Liberal party statement in the Panorama? It is even more sycophantic of the Government... is it not even more sycophantic of the Government than the 7 Days ever was of the previous Government?

1430

Mr Speaker, to my knowledge, no editor of the 7 Days newspaper ever stood for election as leader of the political party that is now one of the two political parties of the coalition that form the Government, but the editor, the owning editor, of this newspaper, has done precisely that. So we have a newspaper owned by a previous leader of one of the two parties in coalition, we have a newspaper in which the principal scribbler appears to be a gentleman who lives up the coast, by the name of Mr Eade, who appears to spend most of his days in the GSLP party headquarters, we have a newspaper that has never said anything critical of the GS...

1435

Well, I don't want to mislead the House, Mr Speaker, I do recall one infamous front page story, one (Interjections) one since 1977 (Repeated interjections)

1440

Hon. Chief Minister: Where is the question, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1445

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member recall? Does the hon. Member recall?

1450

Hon. Chief Minister: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, I do recall it and I am quite happy to refer to it later, anyway – but on a point of order, (Repeated interjections) the questions are taking so long that one might be persuaded to think that they are speeches, rather than questions.

1455

Mr Speaker: The point of order is well made.

Hon. P R Caruana: Look, Mr Speaker, as Chief Minister the hon. Member does not really have time to be the Deputy Speaker as well. He is constantly sending instructions up to the Chair to provide your... (Interjections)

1460

Mr Speaker is perfectly capable of making rulings spontaneously of his own motion without constantly being prompted to do so from the floor of this House which may give uninitiated listeners in this House the false impression that the Chief Minister is trying to manipulate the Chair in this House.

Mr Speaker is sitting in this House, (Interjections) he is listening –

1465

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, point of order, Mr Speaker.

That is, as the hon. Gentleman knows, one of the most pernicious accusations that anybody could make in any Parliament, not in respect of me but in respect of the perceived, in his view, ability for the Chair to be manipulated.

Mr Speaker, I do not consider you manipulable in any way.

1470

Hon. P R Caruana: He reminds me, if I could just say one more thing, Mr Speaker...

Mr Speaker: Just one more thing. (Laughter and interjections)

Just one more thing. Yes, do say one more thing and then I will –

1475 Hon. P R Caruana: I will, Mr Speaker. The perniciousness to which he refers is the same perniciousness as one sees on Saturday night, usually on Spanish television football channels, where you get footballers constantly trying to get the referee to show the yellow and the red card to some opposing player. It is as pernicious as that.

1480 That attempted manipulation can take many forms and the constant harassment to invite rulings is capable of being misinterpreted by uninitiated listeners as being an attempt by the floor, whether it is from him or from me, to prompt rulings from the Speaker. And all I am saying is that Mr Speaker is listening to the same debate as we all are, he is hearing the length of my questions, he is perfectly capable of calling me to order, without being invited to do so constantly by him. That is all I'm saying, and it seems to me a perfectly reasonable point.

1485 Mr Speaker: Okay, there are three points there.

First of all, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition did not suggest that the Hon. Chief Minister is manipulating me: so the uninitiated may falsely come to the conclusion of that, I think that was quite clear.

1490 Secondly, it is perfectly in order for any Member of this House (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) it is perfectly in order for any Member of this House to raise a point of order and draw to my attention the Standing Orders and it is then for me to rule on them.

Thirdly, I must confess I have been over indulgent in the length of the questions I have permitted. I would be very grateful if the Hon. Leader of the Opposition kept his questions short and sharp and to the point.

1495 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker and, I in turn, if the Hon. Speaker could indulge me, although he has got no need to, if he could call me to order for the excessive length of my questions of his own motion and not by invitation of the hon. Member.

1500 Mr Speaker: That might be frequently!

Hon. P R Caruana: Then I will keep... yes, but nevertheless, I would prefer it.

1505 Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member agree, therefore, with me, that this Government's pumping of Government advertising money into a newspaper such as I have described, edited and owned by the person that edits and owns it, being as it is exclusively sycophantic of the Government, never having made any critical statement of the GSLP as a party, or the Liberals, certainly since they have been in coalition, save this famous one with the headline: 'It would be a disastrous day for Gibraltar if any of these three got into office!' – and there were pictures of Mr Bossano, Mr Picardo and who was the other one, Mr Licudi.

1510 I thought it was very harsh on you, Mr Licudi, I have to say! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Will the hon. Member agree with me, that there is no more justification in the suggestion that the one is 'the greatest example of political corruption', than the other, that they are exactly the same? Both are newspapers, neither of which are owned or controlled by political parties, but they have their certain editorial line which, in the case of Panorama, does not disqualify them, apparently, from Government advertisements, so why should this New People fall into the category of 'corruption' when it is the same?

1515 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the headline was 'God Help us if these three ever get into Government!', so Mr Speaker, to say that that newspaper, that Panorama has never been critical of us is really quite something, which takes some believing.

1520 In fact much of what the hon. Gentleman is saying in respect of this question takes a lot of believing, and I say to the hon. Gentleman, he really is, Mr Speaker, in a canoe of diminishing credibility, in the Amazon, heading towards a waterfall without a paddle. He has no way back, and if he thinks that he can persuade anyone in Gibraltar that this Government is pumping money – pumping Government money – into Panorama, which is what he has said a moment ago, simply by continuing the practice of the past 35 years, of all Governments, of advertising in a newspaper that is recognised by everybody as one of the credible newspapers in Gibraltar, then he is not going to persuade anyone.

1525 I remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, I remind the hon. Gentleman,

Mr Speaker: Order, Order, Order. I can't hear...

1530 Hon. Chief Minister: I remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, of the answers he gave me in answer to supplementary questions arising from Question 798/2007, where he told us that the only newspapers he read were the Panorama and the Chronicle. So he himself recognises the credibility of Panorama but, Mr Speaker, to compare that to 7 Days really is to compare apples with pears. Is it that he does not know, or that he did not bother to have anyone check, that 7 Days Limited is the registered newspaper? It trades as 7 Days, and that is what the register of newspapers, which is available for public inspection, reflects. Is it that he does not know, Mr Speaker, or that he did not bother to check, when public money was being spent, that 7 Days limited was struck off by the Registrar of Companies in May 2010 and thereafter continued to receive the lion's share of payments?

1535 Mr Speaker, how is it that he can sit there and say that I should not be referring to the records of payments of anyone, when he went on television and said that he was going to stop the advertising in Vox, not because they happened to change their editorial line, which had, until then, been favouring his party and his Government, but because they were not up to date with their arrears in respect of PAYE and social security? Why is it that he could do that, but I cannot say that this company did not register for PAYE or Social Security? If the hon. Gentleman felt that Panorama was not a newspaper that should carry advertising of the Government, he had 16 years to stop it! We are continuing that practice which was established 35 years ago by the AACR.

1540 Mr Speaker, everybody in Gibraltar knows the reality of the story of the 7 Days. Everybody in Gibraltar knows what they tried to use it for before the Election and no amount of dissembling will get the hon. Gentleman out of the mistake he made, perhaps in a moment of madness, when he set down this question for answer in this Parliament.

1545 Hon P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member, I have to say to him, has got completely the wrong end of the stick!

1550 I do not think that the Panorama is an inappropriate newspaper for the Government's advertising to be carried. I think the opposite: I think it is eminently appropriate. It is as eminently appropriate as the 7 Days and both for the same reason, which is why we used to, whilst in Government, provide advertising in more or less similar measure to both.

1555 It is not that the Opposition believes that they are wrong to place advertisements in the Panorama. Does he not accept that what I have been saying is that it is as correct to place advertisements in the Panorama, as it was correct to place advertisements in the 7 Days because there is insufficient reasons to distinguish between placing advertisements in the two, and whatever distinctions he thinks he can come up with, certainly are not large enough to justify one being the 'greatest act of political corruption in the political history of Gibraltar', and the other being perfectly okay. The difference between one being the worst sort of 'political corruption ever seen in the history of Gibraltar', the difference between that, in the case of 7 Days and perfectly okay in the Panorama, according to him, is the fact that they have been going since 1977 etc etc and all the reasons that he has given.

1560 It is not that we think – will he accept what I have been saying, at least that I have been saying it, not that he will accept it – it is not the Opposition's position that they should not be placing advertisements in Panorama, they should be placing advertisements in Panorama and in the 7 Days, because the grounds for deciding that they are, it is appropriate for the Government to advertise in both is, in the Opposition's view, the same now as it was during the years that we were in office. The only reason why we did not place an advertisement – will the hon. Member at least acknowledge the chronology of this? – the only reason why we did not place advertisements in the New People was that the New People was outwardly, and declared to be, an internal organ of a political party, to the extent that, when the GSLP itself was in Government, for that reason they did not place an advertisement in the New People. What we did, actually, is the same as what he claims he is doing now with Panorama. We continued the practice of the Government from which we inherited office, which was not to place advertisements in Panorama, and we did not – I beg your pardon, in the New People, People as it was then called – we did not stop doing that.

1575 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept any of that.

1580 I have been, actually, I must say, Mr Speaker, quite prudent, quite prudent I think, and I commend myself for my prudence in my first answer and my original supplementary because the hon. Gentleman likes to talk about relationships in the course of his questions but, of course, there is another relationship which is relevant, a familial relationship between the editor of 7 Days and one of the individuals who was a Minister in his Cabinet and who is presently a Member of the Opposition. I put it no further than that because I do not think it is appropriate to, but there is a family relationship there, too.

1585

And the hon. Gentleman knows that, when we are talking about Panorama, we are talking about it being edited by a man who is the doyenne of journalists in Gibraltar, who is recognised in Gibraltar and outside of Gibraltar as an exemplary journalist, whether one agrees with him or not, and I will quite happily tell him, Mr Speaker, that we do not always happen to see eye to eye and we do not always enjoy what we read in Panorama, whether we were on that side of the House or on this side of the House, because that is the sort of publication that Panorama is, independent of any political influence.

1590

Mr Speaker, frankly the hon. Gentleman has given himself away. He has said that they would not place adverts in the New People because it was outwardly, and declared, a political organ of the GSLP, which I do not believe, but is it that he is saying – because that is, in effect, the practice that he has pursued – that, as long as you are covertly and undeclared the supporter of a political party, he felt it was appropriate for you to have political or, rather, Government advertising? That is the fact of what developed under his Administration, Mr Speaker. And he can argue it as much as he likes, but it was clear to everyone that the 7 Days before the Election, was a party political rag, bought and paid for and, very likely, exclusively written by the members opposite and/or their supporters. And that, Mr Speaker, as he likes to say, everybody in Gibraltar knows and nobody in Gibraltar would believe the opposite.

1600

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, just as everybody in Gibraltar/nobody in Gibraltar, does he accept, would believe that the Panorama is not a political rag in support of sycophantic of the GSLP Liberal party (Laughter). I mean, this Mr Eade character, never mind the rest of the newspaper, this Mr Eade character or whoever it was, I understand was practically working out of the GSLP offices and, frankly, his twice weekly scribblings was embarrassing to read, if I had been the hon. Member opposite. Completely sycophantic! (Interjection)

1605

Mr Speaker, no one has suggested that Governments should not place advertisements in newspapers which have a tendency or a leaning towards a particular party. When the Government, when the GSD Government continued to place advertisements in the Panorama newspaper, we did it in the knowledge that this was a newspaper that was hugely supportive of the GSLP Liberal alliance, for obvious reasons, never had a congratulatory word or anything good to say about the Government, but that was not enough. Governments cannot withhold advertisements and it does not become wrong to advertise simply because the newspaper is not pro-, might even be anti-, the Government of the day. The distinction is not whether it is pro- or anti-, the distinction is whether it is an internal organ of a political party, owned and controlled by a political party as an organ of a political party, which is what the New People was –

1610

Mr Speaker: I do think a question is now due.

1620

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: – and does the hon. Member not agree that neither the Panorama nor the 7 Days fall into that category of internal organs, however supportive they might be, one in the case of one and the other in the case of the other party?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, because people are not stupid despite the fact that the hon. Gentleman tries to treat them as if they were.

The hon. Gentleman is dancing on a pinhead, this question of internal organ says, in his lexicon, you can't have the chairman of a political party as editor of a newspaper, but you can have a close relative of somebody who is a Minister in my Government – in his Government – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) a close relative of somebody who is a Member of the Opposition with me – in his Opposition – and that doesn't matter, so all we do is we set up this nominee-ship (Interjections) of ownership. (Interjections)

1630

Mr Speaker: No, no. Order, order.

1635

Hon. P R Caruana: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. He cannot launch a tirade on the basis that I have said that you cannot put an advertisement in a newspaper which is edited by the chairman of a political party. I have said the opposite of that.

I have said nothing of the kind. I have said, indeed, that the Government continued to place advertisements in such a newspaper. It is not the political status of the chairman, or of the editor, it is the ownership and control of the newspaper by a political party which is the only consideration I have said disqualifies a newspaper from... Let him focus... He cannot put words in my mouth for the purpose of answering a statement that I have not made!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have interpreted his statements exactly like that, whether he likes it or not. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, he is wrong when he says that is the only criteria that he set up when he was here because he went on television and he said that his Government would stop advertising in Vox because Vox owed PAYE and Social Security. Despite the fact, Mr Speaker, that they had been advertising grandiosely in that publication, continually, previously to have had, when it had earlier, PAYE and Social Security issues also, but the only thing that had changed was that the editorial line went against him. So, Mr Speaker, he knows exactly what happened and the people know exactly what happened.

Mr Speaker, let us be very clear, he does not enjoy reading what Mr David Eade writes and he finds it embarrassing because Mr David Eade is the one that brought out that he had told Peter Hain that he was ready to do an Andorra-style solution. He does not like what David Eade writes because it embarrasses him by sticking its fingers into the truth that he likes to avoid. He has singled out Mr Eade on a number of occasions for criticism in this Parliament, although Mr Eade is not here to defend himself. And I am not going to go down the same road that he perniciously, continuously, goes down. All I am going to say is that the editor of the 7 Days – which is an English language newspaper, as he knows – does not speak English! And that, Mr Speaker, identifies immediately the reality of what was happening with the 7 Days, how it went to the very core of good government, how it affected the basic tenet of democracy, that they were using taxpayers' money to publish a weekly sycophantic manifesto, with a nominee in place to cover their pernicious writings.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, we are not going to carry on debating this.

The hon. Member's statements are absolutely disgraceful. What the fact that he says that, to do with the editor of the New People, of the 7 Days doesn't speak English have to do with the good governance of Gibraltar is not immediately obvious to us. The fact of the matter is, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Member is wrong when he says what he says about the Vox and the stopping of the Government... Government did not stop advertising in Vox because they changed their alliance or because they were in arrears of PAYE – there were lots of newspapers in arrears of PAYE. Government stopped advertising in Vox because they stopped paying PAYE, not because they were in arrears, because they adopted the position of not paying PAYE. That is why the Government stopped... in the day stopped paying... not because they were in arrears of PAYE, as the hon. Member now wishes to mischaracterise.

The fact of the matter is, Mr Speaker, that whatever the hon. Member... all I am asking him to agree with in my question, that he is seeking to erect... and continues with this pre-electoral gambit, that advertising by the GSD Government in the newspaper which he characterises as he has characterised – called the 7 Days – is the 'greatest act of political corruption that Gibraltar has ever known', but that advertising by this Government in the Panorama, despite all the connections, as we have characterised the Panorama – I am not going to repeat either of the two characterisations – that that is fine? And I am saying to him, will he agree with me, that there is no factual, or intellectual, or objective, basis for categorising the difference between the two newspapers, such as they might be – obviously, they are not identical – but the difference between the two newspapers in terms of the propriety of Government advertising in them, will he not agree that difference, whatever it might be, is not capable of amounting to the 'greatest political corruption of the worst sort in the political history of Gibraltar'?

Hon Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, and I particularly do not agree when he starts with the phrase that he loves so much, 'the fact of the matter is', as if everything that he were going to say thereafter were an empirical truth incapable of challenge.

I challenge what he has said for the reasons I have already explained, but I will give him one piece of free advice which he will say he will not take, but so be it. On this issue, stop digging because everyone can see through to the truth.

Hon P R Caruana: The hon. Member is right. I have no intention of taking his dodgy advice.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1695 Hon. Chief Minister: The only 'dodgy advice' that I have seen is some that was tendered by him in the time that he was in office, and perhaps we can have a word about that later.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1700 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker.

He has made a serious allegation against 7 Days of not paying Social Security payments, and so essentially an allegation of illegality. If that is the position, certainly we would condemn it from this side of the House. But is that statement based on the fact that he has made enquiries from, for example, the ETB as to whether the 7 Days actually employed anybody, or is it a conclusion he has reached from seeing that there had been no Social Insurance or Social Security payments by the 7 Days?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is information that has been provided to me voluntarily by people responsible for these registrations.

1710 Hon. D A Feetham: So what he is saying that there were employees of 7 Days Limited in respect of which identifiable employees – and bear in mind this is an allegation of illegality that the hon. Gentleman is making in this House and publicly – there are identifiable employees of 7 Days Limited, in respect of which there have been no payment to Social Security, no Social Security payments.

1715 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. What I am saying is that 7 Days was not registered for PAYE and Social Security. That is exactly what I have said, that is what I will continue to say. It is very serious indeed and the hon. Gentleman is right to highlight it, and I am glad that he chooses to join me in condemning it, that an entity that has received £156,000 of Government money, and which cannot write its own articles, which cannot put itself together in some way, which cannot just in some way do business in Gibraltar without registering for PAYE and Social Security – which, as he knows, are the requirements under the law – that has received £156,000 of Government money, should not be in good standing.

1720 It is particularly relevant, Mr Speaker, that the company that trades as 7 Days and publishes, therefore, the newspaper, the company that trades as 7 Days was struck off by the Registrar on 23rd May 2010 – this is publicly available information that I have obtained, not from Government sources, as he can imagine – and that there is a statement registered against the company, that the company does not have the authority to maintain a registered office at 6a Queensway, Gibraltar, and that this was filed on 21st August 2008 by the persons having control of the premises, with effect from 18th October 2007.

1725 So, Mr Speaker, there is also a reference as to the information in respect of the shareholder being untrue or incorrect. That is the level of seriousness of the issue affecting 7 Days.

1730 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, if there is any illegality perhaps he may want to refer that one, as well, to the Principal Auditor (Interjections) or even, indeed, to the Attorney General, if he thinks there has been some criminality involved in those particular circumstances.

1735 But, you see, I am troubled by this because, is he saying that he knows, for a fact, that 7 Days Limited actually had employees, because he must also know that the company could have, perhaps, structured its affairs in terms of having self employed contracts with people who, for instance, were editing or running the newspaper. I mean, I certainly don't know but he has made an allegation of illegality in respect of 7 Days in Parliament, and what I am trying to ascertain is whether that allegation of illegality is well founded, based on reasonable evidence and reasonable enquiries that the Hon. the Chief Minister, as Chief Minister of Gibraltar, is bound to make when he makes allegations of this nature.

1740 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister of Gibraltar has made the allegations with the information that has been provided to him, and has made a perfectly proper statement of fact in this House.

1745 The hon. Gentleman might like to know, and I am quite happy to give him a copy of the profile, that there isn't even a director registered in respect of 7 Days Limited, in the information available at Companies House. And perhaps he can explain to me how it is that a company can do business in Gibraltar without registering 1750 for Corporate Tax, for PAYE, or for Social Security. Of course, Mr Speaker, it is possible that there were people who were actually running this newspaper who were not employed by it. It might, for example, have been Ministers of the Crown at the time that it was doing what it was doing.

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to accept his invitation to put the information that we have available in respect of 7 Days to the Attorney General and shall be doing so after the meeting of this House.

1755 Hon. D A Feetham Would the hon. Gentleman withdraw the allegation that he has made, and the inference that he has made, that at the time, during the course of the last Parliament, that there were Ministers of the Crown in the employ of the 7 Days, because that is not true and, again, the hon. Gentleman is playing the man, not the ball, in the worst possible way and he has made a number of allegations during the course of the exchanges today, but certainly I would ask him to withdrawn that particular one.

1760 Hon. Chief Minister: Not only, Mr Speaker, do I not withdraw it, I did not make that allegation because Ministers of the Crown were not in the employ of 7 Days. That is not what Hansard will say that I said, but I do not resile for one moment from saying that Ministers of the Crown were involved in the running of the 7 Days and in its publication and in the writing of its articles. If he does not like it, Mr Speaker, well, there you go, but that is our position. We recognise more than one pen in the pernicious little articles that we read in that rag.

Clerk: Question –

1770 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, for a man that professes to want to play the ball and not the man, the hon. Gentleman has a habit of launching into very nasty two footed tackles. But, Mr Speaker, don't worry, I am not going to ask you to show the hon. Gentleman the red card, lest you become the latest victim of Madame Guillotine, unless you also lose your head in the process. (Interjection and applause)

1775 But, Mr Speaker, will the hon. Gentleman not make good on that statement and either put up or shut up and say to this House, who he believes was writing or running the 7 Days, and what is the evidence that he relies upon in support of that very serious allegation.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not a question of playing the ball and not the man, or playing the man and not the ball, I'm playing against the whole team!

1780 I am quite happy to tell them, as I have, that there was a number of them that were involved in writing the 7 Days. And I am quite happy to tell them, Mr Speaker, I believe it was him: I believe it was the then Chief Minister, Mr Caruana; I believe it was Mr Joe Holliday; and I believe it was some of their very highly paid supporters who are not present in this House and who were not Ministers at the time, so I won't mention. But I am quite happy to tell him outside who it was. I will give him a hint, he was a very highly paid legal officer by the initials of RB, with whom he used to have many lunches and I'm sure still does enjoy the odd bite.

1785 Look, Mr Speaker, they are entitled to write whatever it is that they want, in whatever newspaper it is that they want to write it. It can only be a serious allegation if he believes that the writings in that newspaper were, in fact, so dodgy and really quite so awful that he does not want to stand behind them. That is my view; he is not going to shake me from it. So there he goes.

1790 Mr Speaker: Point of Order. I must say that it is totally out of order to refer – to use the same analogy – to refer to the Speaker now as the football. We have had mention of to the uninitiated, there may be an erroneous perception of the Speaker being manipulated, you have heard reference to a deputy speaker you have heard reference to the Speaker being guillotined, with respect, the Speaker should not be used as a political football and used as an argument, if it serves to enhance an argument – I believe it does not – but, with respect, I would prefer it if the Speaker was not referred to as the football in this game. (Applause)

1795 Hon. D A Feetham: If you have taken offence I apologise for my comment. I have not referred to Mr Speaker as the football.

1800 Mr Speaker: No, as the guillotine! (Laughter and interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: I said that I was not going to ask you to show the hon. Gentleman the red card, lest you also receive a kiss from Madame Guillotine. It was meant light-heartedly.

1805 Mr Speaker: No offence has been taken. I am anxious to assert the position of the Speaker as an independent and neutral party in these proceedings.

Clerk: Question three hundred and...

1810 Mr Speaker: the Hon. Daniel Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, is the Hon. the Chief Minister, then – and I can say, before I ask my supplementary, that I have not written at all in the 7 Days, and whether the hon. Gentleman believes it or not is another matter – but is he going to deny that he was one of the principle scribes in the New People?

1815 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not here to answer questions –

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, you are.

1820 Hon. Chief Minister: – other than in respect of the time that I have been in office since 8th December so, Mr Speaker, frankly, if the hon. Gentleman wants to ask me questions about what I used to do in Opposition so I can give him a few tutorials on how to get here – I know he needs the help – I am quite happy to do so over a coffee. In fact, Mr Speaker, if he has finished with his supplementaries, this may be a convenient moment to have one. (Laughter)

1825 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, does the hon. Gentleman deny that he was the writer of the column, ‘Python’, in the New People for many years?

1830 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the column Python in the New People I think, unfortunately, stopped being published by that august newspaper way back in 2004, 2005, long before I am answerable for issues in this House. But I, too, would like to see it come back. (Interjection)

I would love to see the Python come back, Mr Speaker, so perhaps if the hon. Gentleman could have a word with him and convince him to go back to his desk and write a few more of those excellent articles (Laughter) that appeared in the New People in that time that would be, perhaps, a good thing. But I am not answerable in this House, Mr Speaker, for what happened in 2004.

Hon. P R Caruana: He is not answerable in this House for what he used to do so many years ago, but he is answerable in this House for not misleading it today here.

1840 He has referred to the Python in the third person – ‘perhaps we could invite the person to come back’ – thereby clearly implying that it was not him. Does he want an opportunity to clarify that he is not saying, in this House, that the Python was not him, as he has insinuated by reference to him in the third person.

1845 Mr Speaker: No, with respect, that question is out of order because, then, he is being obliged to, if he was, or is, the Python to confess he is the Python. (Laughter) Thus obliging him to do so. That question...

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with the greatest of respect, he has made a statement.

Mr Speaker: In the third person to maintain the neutral stance.

1850 Hon. P R Caruana: How does Mr Speaker know what motivated the hon. Member to make a statement?

Mr Speaker: With respect, with respect, I am not an idiot. (Laughter and applause) I will be 60 on my next birthday, and I can make out the sense of the question and the sense of the answer.

1855 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, none of us in this House are idiots, (Interjection by Mr Speaker) and the Hon. Mr Speaker is not the only one who is entitled to respect for the positions that they adopt. The fact that I have to bow to his rulings does not necessarily make him right and us wrong. (Interjection by Mr Speaker) It simply means that there is an arbitrator whose rulings have got to be accepted and that is his status in this House and none other.

1860

Mr Speaker, I invite the hon. Member, if he is willing to, to simply confirm whether or not he is saying in this House today, that he is not the Python. It is a very simple question.

Mr Speaker: I rule the question out of order.

1865

Hon. Chief Minister: I accept Mr Speaker's ruling on this issue.

Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry,

1870

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that may be a –

Hon. P R Caruana: I didn't hear what you said.

Hon. Chief Minister: I accept Mr Speakers ruling on this issue.

1875

Hon. P R Caruana: It's pretty dubious! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this may be a convenient moment to –

1880

Mr Speaker: I think it will be a convenient moment for us all to enjoy a bit of refreshment. We will recess for, say, 15 minutes.

The House adjourned at 5.35 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.55 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Government payments made to SP (Butchers) Limited in 2008 Investigation by Principal Auditor

Clerk: Question 328 the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, will the Chief Minister... can the Chief Minister say why the Government

5 thought it necessary or appropriate to ask the Principal Auditor to look into payments made by the Government in 2008 to SP (Butchers) Limited?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government identified the issue of the payments to SP (Butchers) as a result of pointed questions posed by the Gibraltar Chronicle on this matter.

As a result, it came to our attention that, apart from the acquisition of the units in and around the public market, a substantial amount was also paid, namely £220,000 in respect of the determination of a licence on the East Side. Because we could not find anyone in Government who could explain to us the value for money in paying £220,000 for a licence that could have been determined with a letter sent by e-mail for nothing, or by post for 10p, the matter has been referred to the Principal Auditor for his views.

20 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member acknowledge that the payments to SP (Butchers), which is a company originally owned by the father and now, I believe, by the wife of Mr Reyes, who was then Minister and is now a Member of the Opposition, and has been carrying on as a butchers in the Gibraltar markets for many, many decades... that the Opposition elicited the information of payments made by the Government to this company in a Parliamentary question in 2008, when they were then the Opposition and we were then in Government? Is he aware of that?

25 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe that is correct in respect of the payments relating to the market stalls but not the payments relating to the plot on the East Side.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, so the referral to the Principal Auditor then does not refer to the stalls in the market or, rather, better still, the sheds in the market?

30 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, other than that those were two connected transactions.

35 Hon. P R Caruana: Because, of course, you see, both the Principal Auditor and, indeed, the Opposition have had notice of those payments since 2008 and I was just wondering why, having asked the question and got the information in 2008, it takes them 4 years to decide that there is something suspicious worth investigating?

Certainly, the Principal Auditor, who audits the accounts of the Government and is aware of all the payments that are made using public funds, and certifies the account, and certifies the accounts of the Government and all its companies, he has never thought that there was anything untoward about any of these payments. Yet now, four years after there is evidence of pay... well, evidently, I presume, as publicly given in answer to a question, the hon. Members must know that, as part of the policy of exposing the city walls and... I beg your pardon?

40 Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman would give way... (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.)

45 Not the payment in respect of the licence on the East Side, Mr Speaker. That is the issue that I alluded to before.

Hon. P R Caruana: I hope that if the Principal Auditor needs any information it will be happily given to him, that these were connected transactions, because one part of the business was not viable without the other.

50 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am sure that if the Principal Auditor feels that he needs to speak to those who were involved in respect of the transactions he will do so.

My answer in respect of the question referred to the East Side aspect of it for a purpose, and to the fact that it was a licence that could have been determined by a letter for a purpose, because that is the issue that raised the value for money question for us.

55 Hon. P R Caruana: I see. It's a value for money issue.

Non-EU spouses of Gibraltarians
Issue of five-year residence permits

Clerk: Question 329, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say on what terms will five-year residence permits be automatically issued to non-EU spouses of Gibraltarians?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as has been the case until now for all EU citizens except Gibraltarians, ironically, five-year residence permits will be automatically issued to non-EU spouses of Gibraltarians under the following terms. That the relationship is genuine, that the marriage has to be valid and subsist through the period of the permit or permits and accommodation has to be suitable, and the tenancy has to be approved by a relevant landlord. This will end the discrimination against Gibraltarians in this sense Mr Speaker. I know the hon. Gentleman will recall that the way that the law was drafted, all EU citizens resident in Gibraltar, except Gibraltarians, have this right and Gibraltarians enjoyed it only for a period of six months for their spouses instead of five months and therefore by doing –

Hon. J J Bossano: Five years.

Hon. Chief Minister: – it in this way, we put Gibraltarians on the same footing as other EU nationals receiving or bringing their non-EU spouses.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member acknowledge that the rights of non-EU spouses of EU citizens in Gibraltar, in other words the other category in whose favour there was alleged discrimination compared to Gibraltar, that that was a matter of EU law and not something that was chosen, so EU law gives that right? But the EU legal right is linked to their status as workers in Gibraltar and to the fact that they hold jobs in Gibraltar, so it was not a right indefinitely for five years, it was forfeitable on loss of employment. That is the EU regime.

Now, by extending it to non-EU spouses of Gibraltarians – and we have had brief debates on this issue before in this House – where the practice was to do the permit for 6 months and, provided the marriage and the relationship subsisted because, of course, Mr Speaker, if there is a successful relationship, it doesn't matter whether it is 6 months, 6 years or 60 years, the longer the better, if it's based on...

The danger is, and this is what I would ask the hon. Member to keep under constant review, because we began to see an increase in the trend, especially on the basis of internet-based relationships, whereby this was just being used as a side door into Gibraltar and that, shortly after, the relationship would breakdown, thereby suggesting that one party to the relationship – obviously the non-Gibraltar party to the relationship – was using this, as has been the experience in England – and they have had to clamp down on it, too – as a means of gaining entry into Gibraltar. So the 6 month rule, as he will be aware, was 6 months but conditional upon the relationship persisting in terms of cohabitation, and I think I have correctly understood the hon. Member to say that they have attached the same conditions to the five year rule. So it is not five years, it is five years or if there is a break up, whichever is the shorter of the two. Obligated to him.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is correct and I am not suggesting that he changed the law of Gibraltar to discriminate against Gibraltarians. It is clear that the rules that gave greater rights to EU citizens came in through the EU legislative route.

There is one difference now, Mr Speaker, between Gibraltarians and non-Gibraltarians bringing their non-EU spouses. He has alluded to it but I am happy to sort of dwell on it, which is that, a Gibraltarian will not be required to be in employment for that right to kick in, but they will have the same condition attached to their spouse's work permit, namely that they have to remain in the relationship for the period of five years, subject to such review as it may be possible to do of those things.

It is as we debated when we were on opposite sides of each other, a very difficult issue to keep under review because it is not easy for the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, or for the Principal Immigration Officer to determine whether a marriage is genuine or not, and I am sure he has come across some fairly heartbreaking

115 cases, as I have already, and saw when I was Leader of the Opposition, of Gibraltarians who believe that they are in loving relationships, although the objective evidence suggests the contrary.

120 Taxpayers' payment to OEM
GSD agreed settlement of claims

Clerk: Question 330, the Hon P R Caruana.

125 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say on what basis the Government thinks that the GSD appears to have agreed that the taxpayer would pay nearly £7 million to OEM as full and final settlement of all claims?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

130 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, on the basis of the correspondence between his office and the liquidator of OEM, which discloses that, prior to the Election, a position had been reached which was agreeable to both those parties, with the previous Government proposing to make a payment of £6,977,738 to OEM's liquidator as full and final settlement of all claims.

135 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, he may have seen what I believe is a draft letter to that effect, but is he aware – and perhaps we ought to discuss this in a different forum, because they must make their own policy decision, about whether they think that these monies should be paid or not – that, although these discussions are with the liquidator, they are effectively for the benefit of the bank that funded the first stages of the project and it raises questions about the extent of the bloody nose that we are happy for that bank to suffer?

140 There are policy decisions for the Government to make, then, legitimate ones, and they could legitimately come to a different one to the one that we came. But this goes back to much longer than before the last Election. This goes back to a couple of years ago, or at least 18 months ago.

145 The reason why I ask on what basis is this: is he aware that the original commitment was that the Government would not wish to keep the benefit of value for work that had been done and paid from that source, and would return that money, provided that the costs of the project did not exceed the sale proceeds. In other words, the Government would not make a profit on the development and keep the financier of the first phase of it out of pocket.

150 There is a link between, and, certainly it is true that there was a – I cannot remember the exact timing – where the advice reaching me was that there was a profit. A letter was drafted, but I do not believe actually signed and sent – although I could be mistaken about that, I don't remember the exact details – and then it was countermanded, when the Financial Secretary discovered that, in fact, there was not a profit in that amount and that, therefore, the original term of the commitment of the Government, which was that it would be paid, provided that there was surplus in the proceeds of the sale over the final costs of the development, in fact that had not happened – that there was not that degree of surplus, or any degree of surplus.

155 This is why I ask whether the basis... It is just that the statement that I read from the Government leads me to believe that the Government – the new Government – thinks that there is a hard and fast commitment to make this payment. The hon. Members could certainly justify a decision to make that payment, on the grounds that, if they were interested and we could discuss privately or, equally, make a contrary decision, but there is no contractual commitment to pay the money.

160 That is the purpose of asking on what basis they think... His use of words leads me to believe that he thought there was an absolute commitment to make the payment. I assume that he will have discussed this matter with the Financial Secretary, who will share with him the content of the last two meetings I had with the Financial Secretary on this subject, which is where I left it and which is what raised the concern and the doubt, which is why we did not proceed with the payments.

165 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman rightly refers to our press release as saying that it appeared that there was an agreement and that we were not saying actually that there was an agreement.

170 Mr Speaker, I have no problem in informing the hon. Gentleman that I received a letter from the Liquidator of OEM on 17th January 2012. That letter says this – and I have got an extra copy of this, so I am quite happy to give him this at the end of this session –

175 ‘I have been in negotiation with the previous administration over a period of time and, prior to the recent elections, had reached a position which was agreeable to both parties, with the previous Government proposing to make a payment of the amount of £6,977,000 as full and final settlement of all claims.’

And what I have, Mr Speaker, is a draft letter, as he rightly says, sent to the Liquidator by his private secretary, saying:

180 ‘Please find attached a draft text of GoG’s letter to you. Please confirm that you are content to proceed on this basis. The Chief Minister has asked whether you would be able to come in tomorrow at 9.15 to finalise this matter.’

That was on 1st December, and the reply from the Liquidator, that very day, a few hours later, saying:

185 ‘I am pleased to confirm I have received the approval of the committee of inspection to agree to the terms set out in the Government’s draft letter.’

190 What we are saying, Mr Speaker, is that there appears to be an agreement, but not that there is an agreement, (Hon. P R Caruana: I see.) and I am very happy, Mr Speaker, to have the opportunity to talk to him about this.

We will, of course, make our own decision about whether there is an agreement and whether there should be an agreement and I will let him have a copy of this bundle of correspondence, which was sent to me by the Liquidator, just so that he understands that I have not had access to his correspondence files. The Liquidator has sent me a bundle of the exchanges of correspondence going back, I think, to the first exchange he had with him in, if he will allow me, sometime in early 2010.

200 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, I am very happy to give the hon. Member a full briefing – and he can make of it what he pleases, it is a large sum of money – explain to him the circumstances in which the Government took the view that it would be right to pay, that that draft letter was formulated on receipt of financial statistics, in relation to the OEM projects as a whole, that showed that the Government was in profit, which was the terms of the original letter of commitment with OEM, only to pay profit over in payment of the monies that they had invested, but not to make...

205 Now, since that letter was drafted – and this was in the last couple of days before the elections – news came up from the Finance Ministry, to the effect that, in fact, there had been a miscalculation of the accounting of the OEM projects – and that, in fact, there wasn’t the profit – all of this information is available to him: it is in the Finance Ministry, not in my D files – that there was, in fact, not the profit that the Government had been advised there was and that, therefore, the original commitment of the Government, which was to pay this money to the extent that there was profit... In other words, the Government’s original position was, when we took over this development, there had already been a few million pounds worth of work done, which had been funded effectively by Barclays Bank, and we said well, look, we are not going to pocket the benefit of that work for nothing, sell the properties, including the value of that, and keep the profit and then keep the bank – who were secured creditors of OEM – out of their money, whilst the Government counts the profit that it has made, in part relying on that inherited paid-for work. So, we agreed, in writing – and there should be letters which the Financial Secretary can make available. There, will be letters on the file, which commits the Government to pay. They are here ... I have not had the chance...

215 Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman will give way... those exchanges and the calculation of the 6-9-7-7 (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) is based on that premise, the agreement is based on that premise, and hence why we are saying appears to be...

220 Hon. P R Caruana: Alright, alright. Now, there is –

Hon. Chief Minister: Almost what the hon. Gentleman is saying – if he will indulge me – is that the Government said, ‘look, you can have a quantum meruit of the work done.’

225 Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely, so long as it can be paid for out of profit. Now, and indeed, we were sent up statements of account, which showed there was this degree of profit, that draft letter was issued on the basis of them, and then the financial statements were countermanded and the profit, in fact did not exist, for reasons of a mistaken calculation that had been made at technical level.

230 So the question now facing the new Government – as, indeed, it would have faced us, if we had been re-elected – is, do you, nevertheless, pay the Liquidator, in order to avoid the loss being suffered by the Bank, or do you take the view that, in fact, the circumstances of the payment have not materialised. Of course, the Liquidator has his own legal arguments, which are based on the terms of the licence agreements.

That is the situation, Mr Speaker, but it will require careful consideration by the hon. Members opposite.

235 Hon. Chief Minister: And those arguments, if the hon. Gentleman will permit me to say, were rejected in the correspondence, and it was only – I hesitate to say ex gratia – that the Government was agreeing to make the payment, but not based on the representations set out in the early correspondence from the Liquidator of what the claim of rights might have been.

240 Hon. P R Caruana: Correct. The Government's position was there is no claim of right in the circumstances that have happened under the licence agreements, but we will not enrich ourselves. In other words, the Government does not seek to benefit unfairly from profit made, selling assets part of which have been built with money provided by the party in question and that that would not be the case, provided that the Government could pay for it of the excess of sale proceeds over final building costs.

245 Initially, we were told that that difference existed, and we were then told that it did not exist. So the hon. Members now have a difficult policy decision. Certainly, I am happy to say privately to the hon. Member how I would have resolved that, had I been re-elected, but it's very much a question... The point of the question is simply to indicate to the hon. Member that I do not believe that, in the circumstances as they finally were shown to exist, there is a binding commitment on the part of the Government. Which is not to say that I don't think the Government should pay.

Hon. Chief Minister: Which is not to say what, sorry?

255 Hon. P R Caruana: Which is not to say, which is not to say that I do not think that the Government should pay, I think there are issues on both sides of that question which the hon. Members will have to weigh up for themselves, in terms of the relationship between Gibraltar and that organisation.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think that is the position as we understand it as well, that there is no finalised agreement, no executed, no enforceable agreement.

260 I did not appreciate the exact reasons why we had not got to the final stage, but I could see that there was an agreement to agree almost, but not a fixed agreement that the Liquidator might have been able to hold the Government of Gibraltar to.

265

Previous Government payments to Haymills and OEM Investigation by Principal Auditor.

270 Clerk: Question 331, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say why the Government considered it necessary or appropriate to ask the Principal Auditor to conduct what the Chief Minister calls a 'forensic audit' of payments made by the previous Government to Haymills and OEM, and what are the terms of reference?

275 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, because it was a manifesto commitment reflecting our consistent position since 2009.

280 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the word 'forensic' suggests investigative.

Now, the Principal Auditor, as the hon. Member knows, audits or procures others to audit, if he doesn't want to audit it themselves, the accounts of the Government and of all Government Companies and Agencies, and things of that sort. Does the hon. Member agree, that the Principal Auditor would have seen all the payments made, and that the use of the word 'forensic' as an adjective to the noun 'audit', adds nothing to the matter? The Principal Auditor has audited the accounts of the companies in question – accounts are a statement of expenditure and of revenue – and he will have seen all the payments in and out in respect of this scheme.

285 I accept that it was a manifesto commitment about which they made quite a lot of fuss, both in the run up to the Election and, indeed, earlier on. Does the hon. Member agree that the phrase 'forensic audit', alarmist and colourful as it is, adds nothing to the phrase 'audit of payments', which is what the Principal Auditor does habitually and as a matter of statutory obligation, anyway?

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, obviously not, because the choice of words was made, not considering that the word 'forensic' was simply there to be alarmist, but because it has another meaning, which is that it is a tracing of payments, not just an understanding of what payments have been made, which is what the Auditor will already have checked, in other words the Auditor, as part of his annual recurring work, looks at payments that the Government makes and decides whether they are appropriate or not.

295 We are asking now whether he will make a forensic audit – which he has agreed to do – and which, of course, as the hon. Gentleman will know, there is no in-house expertise to do it, it is very likely that he will have to procure the services of forensic auditors to have this work carried out, to understand and trace the payments and see what they were used for.

300 I know that the hon. Gentleman found himself in a difficult situation in respect of these matters, and I don't envy him. He was providing affordable housing, the developer that was providing it collapsed, and the constructors that were involved also collapsed. So it is not as if we are saying that the hon. Gentleman was embarked in an endeavour that was anything other than designed to better the lives of those who would become owners in the co-ownership regime, despite the fact that those buildings now, as constructed, have so many problems with them.

305 But we are very concerned about those payments which were made, in particular because the hon. Gentleman will know, when we were first having this exchange of press releases in 2009, when the issue arose, it had become apparent that, I think, Haymills, which is in liquidation, and one of the other companies, might have had great arrears of PAYE and Social Insurance and collapsed, in receipt of payments from the Government directly, without any regard to those PAYE and Social Security arrears, even with monies which would have been held in retention having been paid to them. Those are the issues that we want a forensic audit of, they are the issues that were the exchanges of press releases in August 2009.

310 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must believe that they were payments that were made, other than in relation to the construction of the projects, on architects' certificates. Is this what the hon. Member believes that they were, they were payments made from public funds that were not due to the contractor?

315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not believe or disbelieve anything, I just want to understand where that public money has gone. It may be that it has gone into a black hole, which is a company in liquidation. But the hon. Gentleman will recall that he did not just pay the amounts due, he also, well I say he, I mean the Government of which he was the chief political individual responsible, made payments even of the amounts retained, the 10% that would have usually been the retention amount which would have been paid a period after the completion of construction, were released to this company that was involved in the building and etc.

320 Now the hon. Gentleman will know that a number of entities which owe, or corporate entities, that owe PAYE or Social Security to the Government when they provide services to the Government, or when they receive payments that originate with the Government, have large amounts of those payments or the whole of those payments, retained by the Government, set off against the amounts due in respect of PAYE and Social Security and, in this instance, not only did that not happen, but the company went into liquidation owing many millions and received also the 10% retention, so those are really the principal headline issues, if there are any other issues I suppose the auditor will pick them up.

335 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh I see, so the hon. Member is not concerned about improper payments but whether the payments that were made were made in circumstances when they should have been made, as opposed to circumstances in which they should not have been made.

340 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker I do not know whether any payment was proper or improper, and I do not want to prejudge the outcome of the forensic audit. We will see what that says.

But, Mr Speaker, I think I have been pretty clear about what the concerns were, and our press releases, in particular, at the time which I have had cause to look at, and refresh my memory on as a result of his question, I thought were also pretty clear. We had the usual exchange, it was August, he didn't reply, but when he came back from holiday in October he told me to do my homework, you know, that sort of usual exchange that we used to have in public!

Those are the issues which led to the manifesto commitment and this is the implementation of that commitment.

350 Hon. P R Caruana: But does the hon. Member not accept that the Principal Auditor and, indeed, the accountant, the auditors of this, of these companies, audit and certify the accounts as being correct and the payments reflected in it as being due and payable, and have not qualified the accounts?

Apart from the political cut and thrust, which I am perfectly happy to submit to, as being political cut and thrust, I am just interested to know why the hon. Member particularly wants a forensic audit about this particular, as opposed to any of the... You know, the Government has made £4 or 5 hundred million worth of payments in capital projects over the last few years, and is just curious that the hon. Members get, sort of, excited about this one – unless they have a reason to think otherwise. I mean if there were something untoward, something that would justify a forensic audit, would the hon. Member not have expected the Principal Auditor to have raised the alarm already?

I mean, if the hon. Member is saying, well, did the Government release retention payments sooner than it should have, or did the Government make payments due under a construction contract without withholding, without deducting, things for unpaid PAYE and Social Security, well, I mean, those are issues in which there can be a multiplicity of views. But why does that require a forensic audit? The auditor of the company will tell you whether the Government made these payments and the Government's own accountant, internal, will tell you whether, at the time that the Government made these payments, the recipient was, or was not, in arrears of Social Insurance contributions.

All I am trying to understand... If the hon. Member says to me, look, this is what we said and this is what we are doing, I understand that – he is obviously keen to do what he said he was going to do. I am just interested, more technically than that, to understand why the hon. Member feels that the use of the word 'forensic' adds anything to the audit that the Principal Auditor presumably has already done, in respect of payments that go back this number of years.

375 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, for this reason... I mean, if he cares to go back to August and October, as I am suggesting that he should, he will see that that is exactly what we were saying – we need a forensic audit because these companies have gone into liquidation owing very many millions of pounds in terms of PAYE and Social Security.

Most of the companies that the hon. Gentleman dealt with – and I know that people say that, you know, it was the kiss of death towards the end, because Bruesa also I think had its own problems, after having dealt with his administration, but that was in Spain and not here.

380 In relation to Haymills, I think it is the only company – and when I say Haymills, it includes the wider family, I think Labour Hire was also a company involved in that – which was mentioned in the press releases, of a company exclusively in receipt of Government payments – and I say Government not knowing whether it was also GRP, which may have been why the Auditor may not have been able to look into these issues before, because it is a wholly owned company of the Government. These payments were being made into these companies and, at one stage, I think the hon. Gentleman was paying into the company £50,000 a month. He was almost becoming the paymaster of the company, in the sense that he was paying the payroll of the company in order to keep the developments going. As it turned out, when the liquidations came, that is what happened when GGCC was created – the men were transferred in and the hon. Gentleman (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) carried on making those payments on a monthly basis.

So, Mr Speaker, those are our concerns. I thought we had set them out very clearly, the hon. Gentleman 390 set out his position then, we said that when we were elected we would look into these things and have a forensic audit of what these payments were used for, and how it was that retention monies were paid out before construction was finished, let alone after the period post completion of construction and how it was that these companies were receiving payments, and not having applied to them the rules that the Tax Office tends to apply in respect of others.

395 I am happy to refresh his memory. The hon. Gentleman at the time said:

‘There is only one rule for tax defaulters, and its being applied across the board to everyone’

400 and we said, well, how can that be? Those were the issues in debate and live at the time. The relevant period is – if he wants to look it up – 14th October 2009, 18th August 2009, 7th August 2009, when these exchanges were being had by us in the press. That is exactly what we said we would do and what we are asking the Auditor to do.

405 Hon. P R Caruana: Would the hon. Member make available to the Opposition a copy of the terms of reference of this.

410 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, yes. I note that he asked for those terms of reference and that we haven’t actually set out what those were, we have simply not wanted to say to the Auditor you do things in a particular way or now that we have had the debate already about his independence, we have just said to him that we think there should be a forensic audit into these payments, it’s up to him how widely he goes or how narrowly he goes. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) He knows what our concerns are because those are the concerns set out publicly.

415 Hon. P R Caruana: Correct me if I’m wrong – I am relying on my memory now, I do not have it in front of me – does the Government’s last press release on the matter not make reference to the terms of reference?

420 I had a statement in front of me when I formulated the question. Perhaps it doesn’t. I think it says something about the terms of reference are being drawn up, or have been drawn up, or something like that? I think it says something to that effect, that the terms of reference have been or are being drawn up, or are now ready or something like that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have got the same here and it doesn’t mention terms of reference that I can see.

425 Hon. P R Caruana: If I come across it, I can write to him... [Inaudible] ...if they don’t exist, then they don’t exist...

430 Hon. Chief Minister: If such a press statement existed then it would be inaccurate, in the sense that when we have asked the Principal Auditor to do the audit, we have not wanted to restrict him to anything too wide or to anything too narrow. He is able, as we debated before, for all the reasons we were debating before, to take such steps as he wishes in that respect.

435 Mr Speaker, he would also be free to come back to us and say, having looked at this in some more detail, I do not think there is any need for a forensic audit because you are using the word ‘forensic’ in an alarmist way, again juxtaposing it to the other noun, but so be it, Mr Speaker. It is up to him. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

It is up to him. He may wish to say so publicly if he decides to do so. But the hon. Gentlemen can look at the press statements that I have referred him to and he can see what the logic was in what we were saying then.

Gibraltar Pensioners’ Association
Government policy on payments to retired private sector workers.

Clerk: Question 332, the Hon. P R Caruana.

445 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether it is the policy of the Government to make Government-funded payments to retired private sector workers with no occupational pension or only a small pension, as demanded by the Gibraltar Pensioners' Association?

450 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 333.

455

Gibraltar Pensioners' Association
Requests made to Government

460 Clerk: Question 333.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what requests were made of the Government by the Gibraltar Pensioners' Association at his recent meeting with them?

465 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, on 8th February this year I had the honour to receive the Gibraltar Pensioners Association at No. 6 Convent Place. I understand that the Association had been seeking a meeting since 2003 with the previous Chief Minister, but that the meeting had not been granted despite repeated requests in the intervening 8 years.

470 I have agreed to see the GPA quarterly to review progress on issues discussed, or any new matters they may wish to raise. The agenda items listed for discussion by the GPA were as follows:

1. recognition of this Association;
2. re-introduction of WOPS or similar arrangement to provide for a scheme for widows etc;
3. a pension scheme for the private sector;
- 475 4. entering the Double Taxation Agreement – Government requested to consider – I am just reading what the agenda was that they came with;
5. accelerate the introduction of the Freedom of Information Act;
6. review of certain medical matters to improve the present arrangements;
7. bus service, review certain routes, and;
- 480 8. any other business.

I discussed the issue of private sector pensions with the GPA and I am looking forward to meeting with the Private Sector Pensioners Association also. Other than payments made to all pensioners, public or private sector, on the basis of qualification for minimum income guarantee or for additional financial support designed to ensure that the standard of living of all pensioners keeps up with the growth in the economy, as provided for specifically in our manifesto, the Government has no policy to make Government funded payments to retired private sector workers with no occupational pension or only a small pension.

485 I must tell the hon. Gentleman that the Gibraltar Pensioners Association made no demand of me to the contrary. All the GPA sought to discuss with me was the introduction of a pension scheme for the private sector, which is something Members opposite will know is also being promoted by officers of Unite, especially given the changes being introduced in the United Kingdom to promote pensions schemes for the private sector.

490 I want to now take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to thank the Gibraltar Pensioners Association, the Gibraltar Senior Citizens Association and the Private Sector Pensioners Association for the hard work that they do in representing pensioners and the elderly in our community. I look forward to working with them in the next four years.

495 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, certainly the Gibraltar Pensioners Association had supported the Private Sector Pensioners Association in the latter's request and, on several occasions, the latter on several occasions came to see me.. They are a pretty determined group of people, who feel aggrieved that having 500 worked for private sector employers who did not provide an occupational pension for their employees, have now reached retirement age, have no occupational pension or a small one, and feel aggrieved that the Government has discriminated against them by abolishing tax on pension income, because they argue that this 505 benefits people that have a pension and is a double whammy to people who don't have a pension, because if you have got a pension you save the tax on it and if you don't have a pension because you pay no tax there is no tax to be exempted from.

Arguments to the effect that tax is something that you, that the Government takes from people's income and that exempting pensions from income tax is simply saying the State doesn't want a share of your income, is very different to discriminating against somebody who does not have a pension for reasons that are not the 510 fault of the State. And I was just wondering whether this issue had resuscitated itself, and whether, and what the policy of the Government was. Its implicit in his answer, that although he looks forward to working with them and congratulates them, has had the great honour to meet with them, that he, nevertheless it is not the policy of the Government at this time to, to, fill any vacuum of income caused by not having a private sector occupational pension, beyond the state pension, the minimum income and the mechanisms that already exist 515 to ensure a minimum income of elderly people.

Have I correctly understood that to have been the thrust of the answer?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, with the caveat that, as he knows, our manifesto contains a statement applicable to all pensioners about keeping them in line with the growth in our economy.

520 I have seen, Mr Speaker, a copy of the newsletter which the GPA itself put out, after their meeting with me. It was the quarterly meeting, and it says, about that meeting:

525 'other items raised by the Government in their manifesto, including the introduction of a pension scheme for the private sector, were similarly discussed. The question of a private sector pension has now been taken over by the newly formed Private Sector Pensioners Association, who have our support. As with our own claim –' – which is the WOPS Claim –

'– any arrangement should be in accordance with Government directives and legislation.

530 So that is the position that they themselves are putting to their own members.

Clerk: Question 334 –

535 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I'm sorry. I should add – and I should have added it by way of supplementary, I think it has fallen out of the first answer – that I had the honour of meeting the members of the GPA with the Minister for Social Services and Equality.

540 Legal action against Government
Policy on surrendering on grounds of costs.

Clerk: Question 334, the Hon. P R Caruana.

545 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether it is the policy of the Government to surrender to the claimant in every legal action in which the Government's legal costs might exceed the potential damages claimed against the Government, regardless of the merits of the claimant's case?

550 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government is not to spend money unnecessarily in defending cases where there is no issue of principle at stake, and where the cost of settlement is lower than the anticipated legal costs.

555 Hon. P R Caruana: So the answer to my question is, yes, provided that there is no issue of principle at stake. In other words if, if the costs might exceed the damages, they will surrender to the claimant, regardless of the merits of the claimant's case, provided that there is no issue of principle at stake. Is that what, I think that is what...

560

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the position is that the policy of the Government is not to spend money unnecessarily in defending cases where there is no issue of principle at stake and where the cost of settlement is lower than the anticipated legal costs.

565

Hon. P R Caruana: Correct. Well, that's just a way of saying yes. In other words, you will settle for a sum lower than the legal costs, regardless of the merits of the claimant's claim. Does the hon. Member not share my view, that this risks people launching into litigation against the Government, on the basis that they will get something by the application of this principle and that, by this principle, the Government is encouraging litigiousness, and that the Government ought not to send this signal? I specifically did not mention the case that we debated this morning although, obviously, it is the case that promotes the question, to try and separate it from the sort of emotional stuff attaching to that case – politically emotional stuff attaching to that case.

570

Would the hon. Member consider that there is a danger in the Government signalling that you can have something – launch a claim against the Government and we will pay you some figure less than what we would otherwise pay in legal fees – that this will cause a mushrooming of litigation against the Government and that the Government needs to be aware of this, and cautious, and perhaps moderate this signal?

575

Hon. Chief Minister: No Mr Speaker, for a very simple reason. It will be an issue of principle that somebody who had absolutely no meritorious claim against the Government should decide that they would claim against us, simply because they believe that we would settle.

580

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, but the hon. Member is sort of half provoking me to alluding to the earlier case.

Is the hon. Member saying that he thinks that there is merit in the employee's claim, in the previous claim, in all the circumstances that he now knows affected that case?

585

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in respect of the previous case that we debated, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers that he was getting then about the nature of that, or the state at which that case is.

Needless to say, Mr Speaker, I do not accept his interpretation. I do not think that there will be a flood of unmeritorious cases. If there is one unmeritorious case, then that will be an issue of principle, always, because if claims have no merit and they are brought against the Government simply because people believe that we are going to be a soft touch, that is going to be an issue of principle at stake.

590

But, Mr Speaker, when there are disputes, then he will know – perhaps, 16 years out of practice, he may have forgotten – that the best advice sometimes is for people to settle, and not litigate for the sake of litigating. Mr Speaker, I have the costs that the Government has incurred in some other cases, and, compared to the damages awarded in one particular case, which is not the one that we discussed this morning, it shows that the Government, in our view, made the wrong decision. For example, in one particular case, the Government's total legal costs were £62,333: the Government folded, in that case, at the last minute, and the compensation awarded was £48,000. (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) And that was the maximum award, as I understand it, at the time.

600

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member knows – and we don't want to get into that case again – (Laughter) the case folded, as he called it, the case folded, as he calls it, (Interjections) because the employer's witness would not come to the jurisdiction to take part in the proceedings. But, Mr Speaker, does the Government not understand, sticking to the generality of it, that, if there is an employee that sues his employer for unfair dismissal, the idea that, in those circumstances, the employer should pay compensation, when the employees merit has no claim, simply because it would cost more to defend the case, is a hugely dangerous precedent, which is not even put into practice by most private sector employers, who are usually more concerned to save unnecessary costs than governments deploying public funds. In other words, if you are sued by somebody for doing something that you think you were perfectly entitled to do, the idea that you pay him £48,000 in compensation, because to defend yourself against an unmeritorious claim would have cost you £62,000, is creating a charter for unmeritorious litigation against the Government and Government-owned companies.

605

That is the point that I am trying to make in this question as opposed to all this morning's questions, which were much more politically driven on the facts of that case.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman accepting that his questions were really exactly that, just politically driven. We could see through that, and now people who are listening will know that that is exactly why it was being done. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker, there is a large measure of agreement across the floor of the House. Of course, it would be a hugely dangerous precedent for Government to start settling claims that have absolutely no merit. Ergo, there is an issue of principle at stake in any such case.

Hon. P R Caruana: And therefore the Government thinks that there is merit in this particular case, but he does not want to say that because of the sub judice rule.

Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member just clarify and allow me one final supplementary, something that I was not quite clear on this morning. I am almost certain I understood the Hon. Minister to say, this morning, that the Gibraltar Bus Company was represented by Isola & Isola, Mr Mark Isola QC... (Interjections) No, Mr Mark Isola QC is with Isola & Isola, not with Triay, (Interjections) and that the advice to discontinue the case was issued by Verralls. (A Member: Correct.) Is that correct? So – even though Isola & Isola continued to represent the Bus Company in the conduct of that case, which I think was said this morning, that Mr Mark Isola continues to represent the Government – nevertheless, the Government withdrew the case, not on the advice of their solicitors acting in the case, but on the advice of a firm of solicitors that were not engaged – Verralls. I am just asking whether that was the correct understanding of what I heard this morning.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are not going to get into what the correct understanding is, or is not, of what was said this morning. What was said this morning was said this morning.

Mr Costa has confirmed in this House that the case was handled by Triay & Triay, when Mr Mark Isola was there. I don't think any part of the case has been active after Mr Mark Isola QC went to Isola & Isola, and that he obtained pro bono advice from Verralls in respect of a particular issue in respect of that case. We will not stray further in respect of that case because we believe, as we believed this morning, that there are sub judice issues there.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, you say that. Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman says a particular part of that case, but can he confirm that the advice was sought on whether to discontinue the defence of the claim, (Interjection by Hon. N F Costa) that that was the advice, because that was the original question that my hon. and learned friend, Mr Bossino, asked this morning? Is it in relation to that that Verralls advised?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government is not going to go further than it already has in respect of this matter. (Laughter)

And it is certainly not going to set out exactly what questions were asked of what lawyers at what time. Look, we have said what we have said; we believe that we should not be saying anything more. The hon. Gentlemen are enjoying baiting us in trying to get us to go further, but they are on a hiding to nothing. We are not going to say more. We think we have said enough already, as it is, in respect of this matter, which remains live before a tribunal in Gibraltar.

Consolidated Fund Increase in expenditure since 8th December 2011

Clerk: Question 335, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say by how much policies and measures introduced by them since 8th December 2011 have increased Consolidated Fund expenditure so far, up to the 29th February this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker I will answer this question together with Questions 336 to 340 and Question 342.

670

Government revenue and expenditure
Current figures as at 29th February 2012

675

Clerk: Question 336, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what has been the overall Government revenue and expenditure in the current financial year, as of 29th February 2012?

680

Aggregate Public Debt
Breakdown as at 29th February 2012

685

Clerk: Question 337, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister give a breakdown as of the 29th February 2012 of Aggregate Public Debt by bank loans and bank and each different issue of Government Debentures?

690

Aggregate Public Debt and Government cash reserves
Figures as at 29th February 2012

695

Clerk: Question 338.

Hon. P R Caruana: will the Chief Minister what was the Aggregate Public Debt and the Government cash reserves as at 29th February 2012?

700

Gibraltar Savings Bank
Debentures issued, 15th January to 29th February 2012

705

Clerk: Question 339.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say how much by nominal value has been issued in debentures or other debt security by the Gibraltar Savings Bank from 15th January 2012 to 29th February 2012 both inclusive?

710

Gibraltar Savings Bank
Government Debentures/Bonds purchased since 9th December 2011

715

Clerk: Question 340,

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister say whether the Gibraltar Savings Bank has purchased or subscribed to any Gibraltar Government Debentures or Bonds since the 9th December 2011 and, if so, how much and what were the terms of such debentures or bonds?

720

725

Corporation Tax
Amount collected as at 29th February 2012

Clerk: Question 342.

730

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say how much has been collected in corporation tax as of 29th of February this financial year (1), in respect of the current tax year, and (2) in total?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

735

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I hand the hon. Gentleman a schedule with information requested in respect of Questions 336, 337, 338, 339 and 342. He will know that many of those figures are tentative and that they will likely be changing quite considerably, as we get to the end of the financial year and the Treasury makes the adjustments it usually makes. (The Schedule is included at the end of the Question.)

740

Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 335, details of variances, i.e. any increases or decreases in expenditure, resulting from the policies and measures introduced by this Government since 8th December 2011, are not readily available at this stage. Any increases in Consolidated Fund expenditure, over and above that provided for in the approved estimates for this financial year – which, of course, commenced with them in office – will be reflected in a detailed statement, showing the reallocations which may be required from Head 15 in the approved estimates, where £7 million is provided for supplementary funding. Any further funding required will be reflected in the Supplementary Appropriation Bill.

745

In answer to Question 340, the Gibraltar Savings Bank has not purchased or subscribed to any Gibraltar Government debentures or bonds since 9th December 2011.

750

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, but surely the hon. Members must know which of their policies they have implemented, which has had the result of increasing current expenditure. For example, the Hon. the Minister for Employment told us, if not at the last, at the last but one meeting of this Parliament, that the cost of deploying the Future Job Strategy since February was – I can't remember the figure he said – £1 million a month...

755

Hon. J J Bossano: About £½ million a month.

760

Hon. P R Caruana: About half a million a month. I mean that's a ballpark figure, but that is a policy initiative that has clearly had an effect on increase, may have been offset by savings and capital expenditure through frozen projects but, fine, we understand that, consolidated funds.

Surely, the hon. Member must have a list of the policies that he has implemented in the last 98 days, or whatever it now is, that have had the effect of increasing public expenditure. I cannot believe that, given the concerns that he professes to have about the state of public finances, that he has introduced policies to increase them, without keeping a tally of things that he does which have the effect of increasing annual expenditure.

765

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, in fact, as he knows, these are things that will be provided for after the end of the financial year, when the actual expenditure figures have been finalised. And we have been there, really, for 98, 99 or 100 days and much of what we have done is to stop things which were being done by his administration, which is the criticism that we came under by his deputy this morning. Now, the actual spending in respect of our policies will commence when we start to see, for example, some of the capital projects in our manifesto going forward.

770

A lot of the spending that there may have been, in these 100 days, may have been preparatory but is not additional, in the sense that it is simply being done by officers already in the Government like, for example, the Chief Technical Officer is now looking at our projects rather than looking at the projects that he had responsibility for when he was Chief Minister.

775

780

So, Mr Speaker, I do not think it is possible to give him an answer like that, and it may be that there isn't any increase in Consolidated Fund expenditure, it may be that there is a decrease in Consolidated Fund expenditure, not in respect of projects, of course, but in respect of payments being made on an ongoing basis.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows that we would, of course, have a view ourselves of what we are spending, but the question was a very pointed one. It was asked of the Treasury, and the Treasury's view is that this cannot be provided at this stage, for this reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 342

Answer to Question 336

Tentative overall Revenue in the current financial year to 29th February 2012 stood at £404.9 million and tentative overall Expenditure stood at £351.6 million.

As at 29th February the Aggregate Public Debt stood at £519.6 million. The Cash Reserves on that date stood at £226.5 million.

CONTD ANSWER TO QUESTION 342

Answer to Question 339

The Gibraltar Savings Bank has issued the following Debentures and Bonds from the 15th January 2012 to the 29th February 2012:

	Total Issues
Monthly Income Debentures (Issued 17 January 2012)	£330,300
3-Year Fixed Maturity Monthly Income Debentures (1 February 2015)	£1,303,300
5-Year Fixed Maturity Monthly Income Debentures (1 February 2017)	£14,228,300
10-Year Accumulator Bonds	£553,800
	£16,415,700.00

ANSWER TO QUESTION 342

As at 29 February 2012, Corporation Tax collected in this financial year is as follows:

	£M
Years of assessment up to and including the penultimate year prior to the deemed cessation of trade under the 2010 Act	4.2
Year of assessment under the deemed cessation of trade under the 2010 Act (period from 1 July 2010 to 31 December 2010)	4.7
Accounting periods ending in 2011	20.5
Accounting periods ending in 2012	22.2
Accounting periods ending in 2013	1.1
	52.7

The above figures include tax collected from companies through two advance tax payments, one on 31 August 2011 and the other on 28 February 2012. The amount of tax collected at each of these is £20.2M and £13.6M respectively.

Given that the Government has recently introduced a moratorium on surcharges arising on payments on account until 31 March 2012, the Commissioner of Income Tax has confirmed that an additional amount of tax is still to be collected in respect of those taxpayers who have withheld payment until the expiry of the moratorium.

785

EU Policy of double non-taxation
Threat to economy

790

Clerk: Question 341, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the Government has considered whether an EU policy of double non-taxation would represent a threat to our economy?

795

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is aware of the press release issued by the EU Commission, by the Director General on Taxation and Customs Union, on 29th February 2012 in respect of what they call ‘tackling double non-taxation for fairer and more robust tax systems.’ A consultation paper was issued on the same date and responses have been requested by 30th May 2012.

It is important to point out that the purpose of this consultation is to contribute to the debate, to collect relevant information and to help the Commission to develop its thinking in this area. It also states that the document does not necessarily reflect the views of the European Commission and should not be interpreted as a commitment by the Commission to any official initiative in this area.

The consultation focuses on establishing factual examples of double non-taxation and mentions the potential harmful effects, in terms of fairness, of the tax systems and potential distortion of the internal market. This is effectively the opposite of double taxation, where tax is potentially paid twice, i.e. in this case, where tax is not paid in any country. An example of this may include a transfer pricing and unilateral advanced pricing arrangements, transactions with associated enterprises and/or countries with no, or extremely low, tax, debt financing of tax exempt income, such as the deductibility of interest on debt, with no corresponding tax on income, and the debt finances and different treatment of passive and active income.

The Government has not yet had the opportunity to peruse this consultation paper in detail. However, we will be paying close attention to this consultation and examining any possible ramifications for Gibraltar’s tax systems.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker, and therein lay the purpose of asking the question. I mean I assume the hon. Members have seen the statement and, indeed, the material available on the Commission website and all of that. But, to urge the Government to keep a close eye on this. Of course it is not the position of the Opposition that the Gibraltar Government is in a position to prevent any such EU initiative from gathering head, but I think it’s worth keeping a very close view on, because our experience was that unless we engage with the UK very early on in an EU debate on these issues, there came a time when the initiative had got too much momentum and the UK really could do nothing about it, even if it had been minded to. The purpose of this is that the Government should engage with the UK Treasury on this, find common ground with them on this question, with a view to trying to get the UK to adopt a position which most fully protects the Gibraltar macro-economic interest. Which is not easy, even if you do it on a timely basis, because the UK Treasury has its own agendas and its own national policies and they frequently do not coincide with our interests. But certainly if you don’t engage them on a timely basis, even if they are minded to adopt a supportive position, in defence of our interests, it could be too late. So would the hon. Member accept the need to engage with this, and this is really basement, this is the first statement that has emerged from the Commission on this question, and it’s, I think the answer to my question, the second part of my question, presumably is, yes, I think a policy of double non-taxation would be considerably challenging to our economic model, and it’s worth therefore engaging at the earliest opportunity in this. Would he agree with that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I note why the hon. Gentleman has put the question. I invite him, Mr Speaker, when he feels that there are issues like this which he needs to bring to our attention, to write to me also, even if he then also puts the question. He will get a reply and an acknowledgement within 14 days, and a substantial reply within 21 days thereafter. I guarantee that I won’t treat his letters like he treated mine!

And if he allows me, Mr Speaker, there are some parallels with the consultation process that the Commission has launched with the issues that are arising in the Code of Conduct Group discussions about our corporate taxation regime, which includes questions about dividends and royalties etc.

He will know that, at the time that he left office, that was an issue that was about to come on. It has come on; Gibraltar has already been before the Group. We have raised issues with the United Kingdom, as I know he was doing, to ensure that we had their support there as well. It is an issue where I think there will be a large measure of agreement across the floor of the House, as I am sure there is in respect of the proposals relating to what I call the Gaming Transaction Tax, where I know that he has been kept informed of what is happening.

I am quite happy to also keep him informed in respect of these issues, because these are really national issues that concern us all.

Hon. P R Caruana: Indeed they are, Mr Speaker, and I would be very happy to be of whatever assistance he feels I can be to him on the question of the Code of Conduct consultation group, because I do not know if he is aware, or if he has been shown correspondence relating to this at the time that we ran the draft Income Tax Act past the UK government.

They raised with us the issues that they thought were Code of Conduct sensitive and my recollection is – I'm not 100%: I would have to seek access to my files to refresh my memory – But my recollection is that we addressed each of the points that had been raised by the UK Treasury's EU tax department, in order to make the Tax Act Code friendly, including, he will remember, taking out of the Act the whole of the anti-avoidance provisions which, for some reason which we could never get our heads round, were thought, even though they were there to prevent tax fraud... There was a section, several sections, in it which, for some reasons which we couldn't ever fully understand, were thought to be Code unfriendly, even though they were there to make people not escape tax through anti-avoidance.

So, whilst, certainly, the UK never guaranteed that we would have no difficulty with the Code, certainly the Government took on board the UK's advice as to what the UK thought was –

Hon. Chief Minister: A compliance Act?

Hon. P R Caruana: – might have put the compliance of the Act in jeopardy under the Code criteria. I am certainly happy to seek access to my files – I think I am entitled to seek access to my old files – find the papers and perhaps then authorise that the hon. Member should have access to them, assuming that he has not already had access to them!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I have had access to, I think, is a summary of the exchanges that there were – I have not had access to the files themselves – and they have been useful in us preparing the officials who have attended in respect of the Code Group.

There are now questions, this is the process, which are in the process of being answered. I am very happy to have access to the correspondence of the hon. Gentleman, if he will allow me to have it, so I would be grateful if he could make those communications with the Chief Secretary – he can have access to his files according to the rules – and let me have copies of them himself or ensure that somebody else can. Of course, if he likes, Mr Montado could have a look at that file and prepare us something which he could share with him.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, the other source of very useful information for him are the group of professionals that supported the Government, two of them from Hassan's and another from some other firms of accountants. They will be of considerable assistance to the hon Member on this.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am obliged, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn until 10.30 tomorrow morning.

Mr Speaker: I now propose a question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 16th March 2012 at 10.30 a.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 16th March 2012 at 10.30 a.m. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against... Passed.

This house will now adjourn to Friday, 16th March 2012 at 10.30am.

The House adjourned at 7.03 p.m.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Future Job Strategy Incentives for employers

Clerk: Question 261/2012, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether any special or different measures

5 will be taken in order to incentivise employers to permanently employ anyone in sheltered employment under the Future Job Strategy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

10 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as was the case previously under the Vocational Training Scheme, there are no special or different measures in place currently to incentivise employers to permanently employ anyone in sheltered employment under the Future Job Strategy.

15 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he insisting that employers who take on board disabled people, under the sheltered employment scheme, sign Future Job Strategy contracts with Employment Training Company? And is he also insisting that those who are currently placed with those companies, that those companies sign those contracts?

20 Hon. J J Bossano: I believe I told the hon. Member last month, Mr Speaker, that everybody had been put into ETCL, simply because they were there in the vocational scheme originally, but that they were not going to remain permanently there and that the present system, which is that they have contracts that say, up to eleven months, will not apply to the people in this category, who will have a separate company that will employ them permanently. I believe I have already told him that.

25 Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer... I cannot remember that the hon. Gentleman has told me that, otherwise I would not have asked the question – and I do look through Hansard before formulating the questions.

30 But what he is saying is that, effectively, they are going to be employed by a separate company and that the employers, within which these individuals are placed, will not be required to sign a Future Job Strategy contract basically undertaking to employ them at the end of a period of time or, as an alternative, repaying the cost of their notional training.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.

35 I mean, some of the persons in this category have been five or six years already as vocational training scheme individuals on £400 a month so, you know, in effect they were not... the placement was having no responsibility for them, other than giving them something to do. That will continue to be the case in future, but it will not be done the way it was done: it will be done on the national minimum wage and go up as the national minimum wage goes up – but there will be a separate entity that will cater for supported employment.

40 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. Well, I commend that approach; it is clearly the correct approach.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

45 Hon. J J Netto: My supplementary question was... obviously, the question is directed to the Minister for Employment, and the Minister of Employment has given his answer. I just wonder whether, perhaps, the Minister for Social Services, within part of her remit, she is actually in discussions with perhaps some NGOs in order to try and see whether there are some viable plans to develop opportunities for disabled persons.

50 The reason why I am saying this is because I myself, although I was not the Minister for Employment in the last four years, I took it upon myself to have constant discussions to try and promote the uptake of opportunity for disabled persons. There was one scheme in particular, which I am happy to share the details with, with both the hon. Lady or even the Minister for Employment, which never took off through lack of time, which might have meant the opportunity for employment for disabled persons.

55 So I just was wondering whether, quite apart from the initiatives that the Hon. Minister for Employment may be taking, whether the Minister for Social Services is also in discussions with relevant NGO organisations, in order to try and get some particular ideas for the promotion of employment opportunities for disabled persons. Is that the case?

60 Mr Speaker: If the Minister is able to answer.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, even though I think it is irregular to ask a supplementary question to a different person (Mr Speaker: Yes.) to whom the original question is aimed, I am happy to answer that the case is yes, that I have already been in discussions and there are already plans afoot to develop a scheme for supported employment.

65 Having said that, Mr Speaker, I do not think it would be appropriate to continue answering supplementary questions. I have answered that on a one off, with a caveat that I started... Mr Speaker, the original question has not been addressed to me.

Training Schemes
Number introduced since General Election

75 Clerk: Question 262, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what new actual training schemes have been introduced since the last election by this Government?

80 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, other than the continuation of those that existed under the Vocational Training Scheme, such as Construction Training Centre, Gibdock, or the training of nursing assistants at GHA, for example, all other training since 1st February is new.

85 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, can you repeat the last part of that. I could not hear it

Hon. J J Bossano: I am saying that all other training, other than the ones I have identified that existed already, is new. All the training that is currently being provided, other than those that existed, is new training. It was not being done before.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but what is it?

95 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it is the training that is provided by an employer to fit the person for the job that the employer wants the person to do, so it is the training that is provided by the placement that the trainee is sent to. So if we send somebody to the telephone company, he is trained in the work that the telephone company will require of that person.

100 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not agree with me that that is not a new training scheme, that that is the position, a continuation of the position as it existed at the last General Election, and that is precisely what happened before the last General Election. There were a number of training schemes, one of them was the placement of people with different employers so they could undertake relevant training in the area where that employer operated. Is that not the case?

105 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, that is the theoretical case. The practical case is that the employers who have had this placement have told the Department and me since the Elections that they have no work for these people and that they really were taking them on at the request of Bleak House, on the basis that they were being, if you like, responsible employers by providing a niche for some people, so that it was better to have them in this placement than on the dole.

110 In practice, the fact that only five employers have actually so far said that they would take on five people shows that there has been no training directed to a job. There was no job at the end of the training.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, is it not the position... What you are really saying to this House is that it is a 115 betterment of what existed before, but there are no new training schemes that have been introduced by this Government, since the last Election. Is that not the case?

120 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the case is that, unlike the philosophy of the previous Minister for Employment, who used to tell us that it was a good thing to provide people with interminable doses of VTS Bleak House placements, on the basis that that improved their prospects of being employed by somebody – for which there is absolutely no evidence from the questions that I have asked in the Department and the information that I have been provided – it is now the case that it is not just an improvement, it is a different approach, where the placement only takes place if it is known that there will be a job.

125 The reason why we have not yet been able to move faster is because there were no jobs in the 300 people that were previously placed. Otherwise, they would all be working now and we would be dealing with more people. So the result is that we have replaced a completely false concept of training people for jobs which was, effectively, an attempt – by the previous administration – to mislead the public as to the numbers of unemployed, by one that is directed at getting people into work, and the training is provided to get people into work.

130 In the areas that training has been provided, like the Construction Training Centre, I am in discussion with employers to see what it is that has stopped them, until now, from taking on the people who come out of the Training Centre, because out of the 15 years, the figures that I have seen of people working in construction trades, out of 15 years of training is something of the order of 50 individuals, all of whom are in the public sector.

135 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman seems to be obsessed by my former Ministerial Colleague, Mr Montiel, and if it was not because I am professionally engaged to act on his behalf, I would make several comments in response to the comments that he has made. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano)

140 But, look, is the hon. Gentleman looking at, for example, something that I was personally involved in when I was Minister for Justice. During the last year or so of the last administration I was closely involved in employment matters myself, working very closely with Mr Montiel, and one of the things that we were looking at was scaffolding, for example. In Gibraltar this is conducted primarily by labour, by qualified scaffolders, that either come from the UK or come from... in fact, there were a lot from Poland. And one of the things that we were considering doing, and we would have done had we been elected into Government, would have been to use GJBS to train people in scaffolding. As I understand it, it requires people to be sent to the UK in order to do some examinations and obtain qualifications – part of it is done in the UK – and then, obviously, we would have a trained scaffolding pool of skills, here in Gibraltar, by people who are resident here in Gibraltar.

150 Now is he considering something like that, or anything else that is different to what was occurring on 9th December last year?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I am considering somethings that were not occurring before and one of them is what we need to do with the Construction Training Centre in order to produce craftsmen that will be able to find employment and be acceptable to employers.

155 I can tell the hon. Member I have also had discussions with people who employ, in the trade, electricians, who tell me that, as far as they are concerned, what they are looking for is City & Guilds qualifications and not NVQs and that, as long as we insist on producing NVQs they will not find employers recruiting the people that we produce. So the training is being reviewed on the basis that what we want to do is train people who do not just get a piece of paper that shows that they have satisfactorily completed the training, but get a piece of paper that actually is what the employers demand, and are able to do, on the practical side, the skills that are required for them in employment. That will include all the construction trades, including scaffolding.

160 But I have to tell him that one of the things the we have done, in order to assess that, is in fact set up, as I told him in the earlier questions yesterday, an individual formerly in the Training Centre, now in the ETB, whose job it is to provide the labour force for the construction industry whereas, previously, the position was that people from the construction industry would be sent to construction employers even though they had never had any previous involvement and possibly very little interest in entering in the, the whole thing has been shifted so that there is a far greater selection of employees in sending them to employers, instead of a random selection.

170 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept that he will be judged, certainly at the next Election – but he will be judged during the next four years – on results? And does he not also accept, and agree with me, that placing, so far, five individuals and having five individuals who have been guaranteed a job, bearing in mind the huge fanfare with which he rolled out this programme at the last election, does not bode well for the future, and so far does not represent a huge success in the implementation of his much vaunted Future Job Strategy scheme?

175 Mr Speaker: Does that not ring like a question that was asked yesterday – exactly the same question?

Hon. J J Bossano: I'll give him the same answer!

180 Mr Speaker: I seem to recall that question but, anyway.
Yes, the Hon. Minister.

185 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, it is true that the disastrous state in which the employment market was left by Mr Montiel and the Government, to which the hon. Member opposite belonged – and, clearly, he must share part of the blame as he has just told us now that he was also involved in what was happening in the labour market – means that the task is proving more difficult at the beginning than I anticipated, but I have not the remotest doubt that it will be a total success and that when people judge me, in three years and nine months, they will be very happy with the results. No doubt whatsoever!

190 Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

195 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am slightly confused and perhaps the Minister for Employment can try to enlighten me.

He said that, talking with the people in the electrical trade, they preferred trainees to have City & Guilds rather than NVQs. Can he please explain to me the difference, because I have a different interpretation to him.

200 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, all I can tell the hon. Member is what the people in the industry have told me.
They asked specifically for a meeting with me, they told me that, in fact, the MOD, for example, on MOD contracts insist that the qualifications for electricians should be City & Guilds. They say that, in the industry, City & Guilds is considered to be the 'brand' that has been there since time immemorial and the preferred option for official employers in the United Kingdom and that the industry here clearly will not recruit people with NVQs, if the client demands City & Guilds.

205 As far as we are concerned, I see no problem in shifting from one to the other, because I imagine that there isn't all that much difference in the content of what has to be learned. It is the same as if you said 'I have got a degree from Oxford or Cambridge and a degree from Southampton', they are still degrees and they ought to be the same, but employers don't treat them the same. That is the nature of the argument that they put to me.

210 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, so just to make certain we are both clear. NVQ is the level 1, 2, 3 whatever, that is the actual qualification. City & Guilds is the awarding body, so City & Guilds actually award NVQs.

215 What I think the Hon. Minister is trying to say now is that they would rather that the electrician had his
NVQ validated by City & Guilds, as opposed to, for example, EMTA, or whatever other awarding body [inaudible]. But City & Guilds and NVQs are actually one and the same. City & Guilds issue NVQs, which is what they do at the Construction Training Centre. The trainees learning, for example, carpentry are training at NVQ level 2, which gives them a qualified craftsman status in a certificate issued by City & Guilds, because that was the preferred awarding body.

220 So let us not... I think we both mean the same. City & Guilds and NVQs are not opposed. City & Guilds is one of the awarding bodies in respect of NVQ's.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, that is not how they explained it to me. All I can tell him is – 225 Hon. E J Reyes: If the hon. Member will give way. Then I suggest that he talks to the Director of Education, because they are wrong.

230 Hon. J J Bossano: I accept what the hon. Member is saying. All I am telling him is that the people that came to see me said 'Look, the NVQs are considered to be a less demanding qualification than the City & Guilds and that the MOD wants electricians to come –' (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, I am not making myself responsible for the accuracy of what I have been told. I am sharing the information with the hon. Member because he asked me to explain exactly what it was that the industry had put to me. And it is in response to that request from the industry... If an employer says to me 'Look, if you keep on producing people with NVQs we are not going to take them on, we want them to come with City & Guilds,' well, I then go back and say to the people that are doing the training, what do we need to do to make sure that they come out trained with a certificate that says City & Guilds.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker. I don't think I have succeeded in explaining myself.

240 City & Guilds is not a qualification. City & Guilds are an awarding body. The Hon. Minister was correct before in an example he was trying to give to clarify the situation: you can end up with a degree either from Canterbury University, like I got, or like the Chief Minister has from Oxford. Perhaps his is far more prestigious than mine. Understood. But what the employers cannot say is that I want a 'City & Guilds'. No, City & Guilds is just one of the awarding bodies, and the qualifications to be attained is an NVQ level whatever, in respect of electrical trade, welding, fabrication, mechanical trade.

245 The qualified craftsman status is achieved with an NVQ level 3, that is the standard and then there are certain awarding bodies of which, one of which I think they are expressing a desire, should be City & Guilds, I can go along with that because perhaps it is a more prestigious and more established awarding body. In respect of the construction trades, plumbing, carpentry, tiling and so on, their qualified craftsman status is actually attainable at NVQ level 2. The level 2 gives them a qualified craftsman status and a level 3, although possible, and I hope is still being offered for those who have the ability at the training centre is really something that is aspired to by those wishing to become foremen in the future. So I am not blaming the Minister, I am just trying to advise him, as a colleague that, with the best intentions in the world, he may be being slightly misled, and in a friendly way I advise him to contact the Director of Education, who can show you how the whole thing works, and the different awarding bodies for particular qualifications.

250 But a qualification is NVQ and then the employer wants to be... or wants to express a preference for City & Guilds validation, as opposed to one of the other awarding bodies. I want the Minister to make certain that, although he takes in good faith what is being said, he should perhaps ask his colleague, the Minister of Education, to get the Director... just to make sure that, for the benefit of trainees, that we give them the best product possible...

260 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and perhaps come properly prepared to the next Parliament because, in answer to my supplementary about new training schemes, he cited precisely that example as something new that he was doing, which obviously is not new, if what my friend, Mr Reyes, says is true.

265 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr. Speaker, if sharing with Members opposite information or requests that I have received from employers is judged by the Member opposite to be that I am not properly prepared then the answer will be no, obviously not, no.

270 You have asked me a supplementary and, in the supplementary, I have told you what an employer has told me. The employer has given me something that you claim is incorrect or misleading. In future, I can tell the hon. Member, when he asks me something I will not tell him what people tell me, because clearly that, in his judgement, makes me insufficiently prepared to deal with him, and the last thing I want to do in this House is not to be able to put him in his place constantly at every meeting, and I wouldn't want to be not sufficiently prepared to be able to do that.

275 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he, in the light of what has transpired in the last few moments... does he not agree with me that, therefore, the answer to my previous supplementary which was what new training schemes or skills is he promoting in his Department since the last General Election, the answer is none, because that is precisely the example that he gave. It is the wrong example and, therefore, will he not be man enough to admit that there are none. (Members: Oh!)

280 Hon. J J Bossano: If he wants to put to test whether I am manly enough to do then I don't think the Chamber is the place. But we have the ante-chamber, we can put that to the test any time the hon. Member wants to test my manliness!

285 Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned, if the hon. Member wants to have information and he wants me to say whether it shows that I am doing nothing and that I am not manly enough to admit it, then I can assure him that I am doing more in the three months than the previous administration did, at the very least, in the last four years and in all probability in the last fifteen years, and they were not man enough to come out and admit, in an election campaign, half the things they were doing and covering up.

290 When he came out with a statement in the Election campaign, saying it will cost £11 million to employ people who are seeking employment he was, in fact, admitting that he knew already that the numbers of people seeking work, if they were all given £10,000 each, would cost £11 million, notwithstanding the fact that we have had this constant misleading of Parliament and public by producing cooked and concocted and massaged figures year after year in budgets and in the figures presented to the House! (A Member: Hear, hear.) And will he not be manly enough to admit it? (A Member: Hear, hear.)

295 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman should really calm down. (Laughter) In his advanced years he really is going to blow a gasket (Interjections) if he continues down the vein that he habitually continues in these sessions.

Does he not accept that when I made my statement about the £11 million –

300 Mr Speaker: Order, Order. I think now that that remark, which was 'the £11 million issue' – I call it briefly that – was beyond the scope of this discussion. It was not properly brought into the discussion by the Hon. Minister, but when the Hon. Daniel Feetham invites the Hon. Minister to calm down, with respect, he did raise the tempo by accusing him of not being man enough. (Applause) Perhaps we can keep our questions away from personal epithets.

305 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and, of course, Mr Speaker will apply that across the board, no doubt.

Mr Speaker: Absolutely.

310 Hon. D A Feetham: I am absolutely certain about that, because yesterday the Chief Minister made a number of allegations. He made an allegation... I will be separately writing to Mr Speaker in relation to this.

Mr Speaker: Please do.

315 Hon. D A Feetham: He made an allegation of impropriety in relation to – he did not name – Members sitting on this side of the House, accused Members on this side of the House of writing in the 7 Days without a shred of evidence.

320 And let us not forget, Mr Speaker, that if we are to apply, for example, the rule that you must not call a Member of Parliament a liar, I do not see what the distinction is between calling a Member of Parliament a liar and accusing a Member of Parliament of impropriety or, without any shred of evidence, accusing them of writing anonymous articles in a newspaper. I hope that Mr Speaker also bears that in mind for future sessions of Parliament.

Mr Speaker: I certainly will.

325 I take on board the point the hon. Member makes and I would be grateful if he did write to me and I will address the issue. But in my defence, if I may say so, statements are made in this House by both sides and I have absolutely no means – or limited means – of knowing the veracity of statements, so it is very difficult for me to actually rule on the actual content of statements. My job here, I think, is to create an atmosphere where proper, meaningful debate can be had on the issues and if any statement is made which is not true there is a procedure whereby the matter can be dealt with on a motion, where we can carefully examine the real facts.

330 (Hon. D A Feetham: Yes.)

So I take on board that the hon. Member may well have a grievance in terms of the allegations of impropriety but, again, I hope he will appreciate that I have no means of knowing whether that is true or not true.

335 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes but, of course, Mr Speaker, you do have the means of actually saying to Members of Parliament, 'If you are going to make an allegation like that, produce the evidence.' What you cannot do is just simply make those kind of blank statements because there is, as I said, there is an inconsistency here. If I then stand up and say 'You're a liar', you would then call me to account for calling him a liar! (Interjection by Mr Speaker)

340 The hon. Gentleman has made allegations which are completely and utterly unfounded and, if we are, and I appreciate, Mr Speaker, that you are in a very difficult position. I accept that. I accept that, sometimes, Members of Parliament do not help your role in some of the comments that I make...

Mr Speaker: They make it impossible, actually.

345 Hon. D A Feetham: And I accept that.

But there has to be even-handedness in relation to how one deals with this particular issue because, of course, if those allegations are made we are inevitably going to stand up and call the hon. Members 'a liar', and then we are the ones who are called to account for calling them a liar – which is incongruous.

350 Mr Speaker: No, I take on board everything the hon. Member says and I do not disagree with him.

All I am saying is, as I say, when statements are made I have limited knowledge or resources to be able to judge, there and then, whether the statement is true or false. You must accept that. But I can judge when terminology, for example, 'a liar' is used. It is a different thing altogether. But I will take it on board and I will be grateful if the hon. Member would write to me, and I will address the issue, in a fair and even handed manner.

355 Can we proceed to the next Question.

360 Labour Market Skills Audit

Clerk: Question 263, the Hon. D A Feetham.

365 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the Government completed a full skills audit of the labour market??

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

370 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Minister on course to complete the full skills audit by the date set out in his manifesto, which I believe was April 2012?

375 Hon. J J Bossano: There are two elements, one is an assessment of the demand for skills which is being done through an analysis within the ETB, and then there is an assessment of the skills held by the resident population which will be done later in the year, taking advantage of the census.

So, in the census, we will have questions which will identify what the resident population skills map is. That, of course, is not the whole of the skills in the market because the skills in the market include 7,000 frontier workers.

380 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, can I just add to that. The hon. Member is slightly mistaken when he refers to the manifesto and says, and asks, whether the Government is on course to complete the skills audit by the date given in the manifesto, and the date he has given is 1st April. That is not, in fact, what the manifesto says. What the manifesto says is:

385 'a full skills audit of the labour market will be undertaken in the current financial year to prepare the final action plan of the Future Job Strategy, from April 2012.'

390 So the final action plan is going to be started from April 2012.

Hon. D A Feetham: I still do not see what the actual difference is. But, turning to more important matters than the date of the skills audit, will the skills audit also include an analysis of the skills required by employer, which seems to me to be a far more important aspect of, or an equally important, I should say, aspect of the aim of conducting a skill audit.

395 Hon. J J Bossano: I have already answered that, Mr Speaker. I have told him there are two sides, the supply and the demand.

400 The demand for skills is determined, as far as we are concerned, by the vacancies opened in the ETB. That is the source of the demand, people are opening jobs. And we can analyse the skills of the jobs that they are opening, and then there is the supply, from the resident population, which we would have had to do in some other way but since the census that should have taken place in 2011 did not take place in 2011 and has had to be deferred to 2012, and we are now in the process of setting that up, I have already spoken to the statistics office who will be including the questions that are required in order to establish the skills that exist in the resident population in October or September this year, when the Census takes place.

405 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understood him the first time about the vacancies opened in the ETB.

410 I don't think that just simply analysing the vacancies that are opened in the ETB will give him a full picture of the skills that employers think are necessary within the labour market. And could I urge upon him, and does he think that perhaps it is a good idea, to also conduct a survey, just apart from the question of the vacancies that have opened, but conduct a survey of employers in Gibraltar as to what are the skills that they believe are necessary within the labour market and can I urge upon him that approach.

415 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I imagine that no employer can give me that information, other than about his own business. (Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely.) So I mean if somebody... for example, there are 2,500 shop assistants in Gibraltar: I am not talking about whether the people that own the retail shops consider the shop assistants are skilled enough or need to be trained to achieve a certain level of skill. That is not what I am talking about, What I am talking about in the assessment is whether there is a demand for 2,500 shop assistants, or a demand for 2,500 carpenters, not the skill of the individual.

420 So the nature of the audit of the vacancies and of the supply is to establish what is the supply and demand for workers of a certain trade in a certain industry. The idea of talking to individual employers is something that will happen if we find resistance from employers in employing the people that we have got and the argument is they are not trained enough. That is part of the exercise that will be done in the context of whether we find the numbers signing up to employ the people that we can provide grows or does not grow. If it does not grow, and the reason is that they do not consider that our people have the skills it is an argument, of course, that we will have to analyse because they do not seem to have the same problem with skills with those who come across from the border.

430 Department of Employment
Ministerial involvement re job vacancies

Clerk: Question 264, the Hon. D A Feetham.

435 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please confirm whether job vacancies are held back by his Department and are not advertised until he personally vets notifications?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

440 Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, is he aware – knowing that he is aware, or so he says, of everything that happens in his Department, that he is all-knowing about what occurs in his Department – he is aware that, in fact, there are employers that are very concerned about the amount of time that it is taking for job vacancies to be advertised, from the point at which notification is received by the ETB? And does he not agree with me that that is a matter of concern, particularly, in fact, within, for example...

I notice that he is deep in conversation with the Minister for Justice. Perhaps he may want to – the Minister for Justice and for Gaming – listen to the question because it also concerns him, that, in relation, for example, to particular sectors like the gaming sector, which is already facing considerable difficulties from pressures in the United Kingdom that, we would not want to do anything that places obstacles and impediments in the way of these companies?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is, of course, not a matter for the hon. Member to direct me, or to suggest what I can do or cannot do on this side of the House.

The hon. Member mentions certain difficulties which, presumably, have come to him from the gaming sector. Those are not difficulties that have been brought to me as Minister for Gaming, or Minister with responsibility for gambling. One would have thought that if the industry had a particular issue with a particular Department and there is a Minister responsible for that particular industry that that issue would have been brought to my attention. It has not and, as far as I am aware, that issue simply does not exist.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Department usually sends candidates to vacancies within 24 to 48 hours of the vacancy being recorded with us.

I do not think that anybody has complained that that is too long! Of course, they may be complaining about the fact that they are no longer able to do what they used to do, when the hon. Member was in Government. I don't know whether he knew about it and agreed with it, but it had been going on for a considerable time, and that is that, notwithstanding requirements of the law, people used to fill the vacancy first and inform the Employment Service later. It was called 'passing through' by the officials in the Department, and apparently there was no political directive to tell them to do anything else about getting the law respected and implemented.

The 'passing through' is now non-existent. Everybody in the private sector and, indeed, in Government Departments, who were as guilty of this, have now accepted that they have to open the vacancy first because, otherwise, what we have is a situation where, in fact, individuals who go to the Department seeking employment are sent on a wild goose chase. They go round half of Gibraltar with lots of cards and all the places that they go to tell them the vacancy has been filled already.

That is the change that has taken place and that is a change that is a matter of policy. I am surprised that the previous administration allowed it to deteriorate to the extent that 9 out of every 10 jobs that were registered with the Department were, in fact, jobs that were not available to the people who were unemployed and that only one tenth of the jobs were.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, we are actually being told is that it is taking, in some cases, two weeks for adverts to come out from the time that they were notified and that, in fact, there are employers that are actually going to the ETB and asking why the advert has not come out promptly.

But can I ask him this – and I hope that he doesn't challenge me to a mano a mano in the lobby as a consequence of the question – but does he send notifications to GSLP headquarters to see whether some of his stormtroopers are employed in relation to some of these vacancies, thus causing delays in advertisement of the jobs. (Interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, as long as the hon. Member chooses to put into question my manliness, I will tell him that he can put it to the test any time he wants! (Mr Speaker: But he hasn't done so on this occasion.) If he wants a mano a mano, we will have a mano a mano.

I have no problem, and if he thinks I am too old to take him on, he can test that as well! And we will see who comes off better out of it.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have to tell the hon. Gentleman that he continues to be value for money! (Laughter)

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, he can tell me whatever he wants! But he should know me, having known me since he was a little boy, he should know me sufficiently to know that I am not actually joking. I am deadly serious. So he should take it seriously.

500 Let me say that if the hon. Member thinks that I am sending the vacancies to the stormtroopers – which were his stormtroopers in another age, when he used to consider it a matter of pride and not something to be ashamed of, as he does nowadays – then he has been misinformed by his henchmen, wherever they may be.

505 I can tell him that I was told that during the election campaign there was regular contact between Bleak House and the GSD headquarters precisely in order to infiltrate as many of their stormtroopers into the system before we got there, since they could see the way the wind was blowing, and, maybe, because he was doing it and his party was doing it, he must think that it is common practice.

Hon. D A Feetham: I do not know where the hon. Gentleman gets the information about my communications with Bleak House. I can assure him that there has been no communication, certainly, from me to Bleak House.

510 Has he had an opportunity – because I left him all the files – of going through all the files that I left him of people that had come to see me, some of whom were, in fact, his own supporters that we were trying to help prior to the General Election?

515 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, when I asked the civil servant that he used to have for the files, I was told there were no such files and they were never given to me. I was given a piece of paper with handwritten notes, and that is all the information that I have.

520 Those people I have checked in the ETB records to see whether they are employed or not and, if they are not employed, then we will, in fact, do everything we can to employ them, regardless of which political party they support, because the commitment of the Government is to employ all the people who are unemployed, irrespective of political affiliation. He will know that if he cares to look at the names of the people that go into employment because, in fact, there is no indication. We look at their skills and their ability and their suitability and it will make no difference which way people vote. They will find that I am 100% committed to getting a job for every single one of them.

525 Mr Speaker: Before we move to the next Question, again may I just point out there were two words used which I think are quite unnecessary: ‘stormtrooper’ on this side; ‘henchman’ on that side. Both of you know what the English language has to say about both those words.

Next Question.

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

535 Housing Waiting Lists Empty homes awaiting repairs

Clerk: Question 290, the Hon. E J Reyes.

540 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many homes are currently empty and awaiting repairs before they can be allocated to applicants on the Housing Waiting Lists?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

545 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, there are 149 flats currently empty and awaiting repairs before they can be allocated to applicants on the housing waiting lists.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Minister have some sort of indication of the target timespan when, perhaps, he would like to see these flats ready for allocation?

550 Hon. C A Bruzon: Not exactly, Mr Speaker.

I can inform the hon. Member that we do prepare these flats as quickly as possible and we have a system in place whereby the Housing Works Agency does part of the work and also private sector companies are employed to speed things up for us.

555 I can state in Parliament that we are improving the system and that more houses are becoming available on account of the efforts that we have put in since we came into Government.

560 Hon. E J Reyes: The Hon. Minister may need a bit more notice, but does he have some sort of indication of whether these are pre-war or post-war houses, or perhaps an indication of the percentage of which fall into which category?

565 Hon. C A Bruzon: As the hon. Member hinted, I do not have the facts at my disposal, but I can acknowledge in Parliament that many of the pre-war houses are in pretty poor shape and they do require a lot of refurbishment, both on the outside and within, so these will take a little longer to be prepared – to be made available, rather – but the post-war flats, which regrettably also experience an element of dampness, also require sometimes major refurbishment from within. So it is impossible to give you a time limit or timescale on this, but if you want to know how many of them are post-war and pre-war, I would be happy to provide the information, if you give me notice.

570 Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

575 Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask the Hon. Minister for Housing... I take on board the question of the difference between pre-war and post-war in relation to any refurbishment work that may be carried out – meaning that the pre-war, obviously, would, by nature, have more work involved – but in relation to the moment when the Housing Department at City Hall get the vacant keys and the process starts, whether the refurbishment is going to be taken either by the Housing Works Agency, or now, as the hon. Member has said, the private sector, does he have an indication as to the time it will take for at least work to start, because another thing would be how long it would take, depending on the condition of the house? At least does the Hon. Minister for Housing know the time between getting the keys, so that the process starts for the works to start? Does he have an indication of that, Mr Speaker?

585 Hon. C A Bruzon: Again, it is only an indication, because I do not have accurate facts at my disposal, but there are two dimensions to the process.

590 One process is called the cleaning-out process: when flats are made available, we get the keys, we go and inspect them and they need a good clean-out – old stuff that has been left there by the previous tenants. That, of course, could take just a matter of a couple of weeks or less. If there is an element of more serious internal refurbishment that is required, it could take a little longer – a month, two months – because there is an element that requires the drying up, the dampness to dry up, the skimming, the... I am not a technical person, so I cannot give you exact... use technical jargon, but it could take up to a month, maybe two.

595 As soon as we get the keys, our inspectors go and inspect the flats and the process is as fast as it can possibly be because we know that there are many applicants waiting for homes to be allocated to them.

600 Hon. J J Netto: I appreciate that, Mr Speaker and, of course, I am aware of how the process starts, in terms of cleaning first but, in relation to the work as far as refurbishment of flats is concerned, does the Housing Works Agency – I am only asking – have the first bite of the cherry, in the sense of saying, ‘We do the work, so long as we can do the work in a specified period of time,’ and if they do not do the work in a specified period of time, because they may have other works to do, then the work is taken off the Housing Works Agency and given to the private sector?

At the end of the day, what the Housing Minister wants is to be able to do the turnover and allocate the house. Is that the system in place?

605 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes. The first bite of the cherry, as the hon. Member implies, of course, goes to the employees of the Housing Works Agency and they have to give a commitment to undertake to achieve the task by specific dates. Of course, this will differ, depending on the enormity or the smallness of the jobs. That is why there is the bonus scheme and they are encouraged to work for that bonus, and therefore... That is what it is there for. At least that was the idea of the previous administration and we want it to work.

There is also the question of the private sector companies that we are using. That is when we are told by the people in charge of the Housing Works Agency that the jobs have to go out so that as many people as possible can be allocated homes in the shortest possible period of time. Then they come into play, but the first bite of the cherry goes to the employees of the Housing Works Agency, yes.

Hon. J J Netto: If I can pursue this a little bit further, Mr Speaker, I guess that what may be happening right now is that, because all the housing projects that the GSD Government had came to fruition, in the months that follow – probably in the 12 months that follow – there is going to be a huge increase of work to the Housing Works Agency, particularly people moving or who have moved already to all the different housing projects, leaving behind the flat they used to occupy in the current housing stock. So that means that the volume of work now in the Housing Works Agency is going to increase.

At the end of the day, what the Minister quite rightly is interested in is to do the turnover of the work so that the people on the waiting list continue to come down. So, is the Minister finding himself in a situation where the volume has increased so much at the moment, as a result of this example I have just given, and it is as a result of that that he is using the private sector? Is that the case, Mr Speaker?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the position is that the Government introduced an early-exit package, which has reduced the numbers of people working in the Housing Department by 47 initially. Subsequently, there are still, I think, 16 in the pipeline entitled to take the early-exit package. So the workforce of the Agency is down; it is not that the workload is up.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, notwithstanding what the Hon. the Minister for Employment has said, even when the workforce was much bigger – in fact, even if we go back to 1995, which was at the time of the GSLP Government, because obviously we came in in May 1996, when the workforce was even much bigger – there were cycles in the volume of work. It used to go up and down, regardless of the size of the workforce, and what I am saying at the moment is that what is happening... I guess what is happening right now is that the volume of work is increasing at the moment and it will be increasing for the next 12 months, simply as the result of all these people who have been moving into the new housing schemes that we provided. It takes a lead up time between the time they move out and the keys being given to them.

So, at the end of the day, what the Housing Minister wants is a quick turnover of the works to be done, and he might be using the private sector in order to drive the works much forward for the benefit of the people on the housing waiting list. That is what I was trying to get at in my supplementary question. So, formally, my supplementary question is: is he experiencing a surge of volume of work as a result of what I am saying and, in order to meet that work, he is using the private sector?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I am trying to understand what the hon. Member is saying. I think the work continues to be the same as it has always been.

Housing stock in Gibraltar consists of over 5,000 homes for rental. It has increased slightly, obviously, because we have had 490 that the other administration, rather late on in their 16-year term, provided, which was very good.

Obviously, he has to remember that we distinguish between our manifesto commitments to construct new homes and to refurbish homes as an ongoing thing, but we are talking about 149 empty flats, which was the question asked in the original Question. That Question I think I have answered, and I am not sure if I want to venture and attempt to answer the hon. Member to the extent that goes beyond the knowledge I have at the moment in connection with Question 290, basically.

You may ask another supplementary, if you wish to make it clearer.

Housing Waiting Lists Additional applicants since Q178/2012

Clerk: Question 291, the Hon. E J Reyes.

665 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many additional applicants, since the answer given to Question No. 178/2012, have been added to the Government's Housing Waiting Lists, giving a breakdown of their housing allocation requirements?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

670 The Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker.
A further 31 applicants have entered the housing waiting lists since the Answer given to Question 178/2012, and the breakdown is as follows: 1RKB, 21; 2RKB, 1; 3RKB, 2; 4RKB, 6; and 5RKB, 1.

675 Hon. E J Reyes: These, I take it, as a consequence, have been added to the pre-list?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker.

680 Homeless persons
Additional housing applicants since Q179/2012

Clerk: Question 292, the Hon. E J Reyes.

685 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state, since the answer given to Question No. 179/2012, how many new applications for housing from homeless persons have been received?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

690 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Since the answer given to Question 179/2012, no new applications for housing from homeless persons have been received.

695 Hon. E J Reyes: Therefore, Mr Speaker, the situation in respect of the homeless persons remains exactly the same at the figure of 25, as it was a month ago.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I would have to check with my staff but I hope that some of those 25 have already been allocated a house. I cannot be sure, so I would need notice of that question.

700 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you.

Mr Speaker, would the Minister try to, if possible, give me some sort of explanation, what priorities is it his policy to try to give to homeless persons, because he did explain to me, two meetings ago, that although they fall under the nomenclature of 'homeless', they are not necessarily sleeping out on the street.

705 I do now happen to know, and am personally aware of, a couple of cases of people who have no roof over their heads, and actually have to beg and borrow, sometimes, little vehicles in order to have a roof over their head at night time. So the Minister might want to enlighten us as to what sort of priority he is giving these people.

710 Hon. C A Bruzon: Well, some of these cases go to the Allocation Committee for their consideration, and then they will provide advice to the Minister as to how... with what speed we should proceed with some of these cases.

715 Hon. E J Reyes: And some of these cases, Mr Speaker, when they turn up at the Housing Department sort of desperate, they have no roof over their heads, they, for some reason or other, they don't seem to leave satisfied that a certain urgency is being allocated to their case. One particular applicant was explaining to me that, not blaming the Minister directly, but is perhaps a bit under the impression that the information is not being quite forwarded to the Minister of how desperate her own situation is. Is there some advice or otherwise that the Minister can offer, where this lady can, perhaps, get an opportunity to see him as soon as possible?

720 Hon. C A Bruzon: Absolutely. If the hon. Gentleman will be kind enough to give me her name in the ante-chamber, I will do my best to see her and help her.

Hon. E J Reyes: I really appreciate that, Mr Speaker.

725

Housing Allocations Committee Meetings since Q180/2012

730 Clerk: Question 293, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many times the Housing Allocation Committee has met since the answer provided to Question 180/2012?

735 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, since the answer provided to Question 180/2012, the Housing Allocation Committee has met three times.

740 Housing allocations since Q181/2012
Breakdown and assigning authority

Clerk: Question 294, the Hon. E J Reyes.

745 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many homes have been allocated since the answer to Question 181/2012, giving a breakdown of the size of home and indicating whether these have been assigned on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee or by any other authority?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

750 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, since the answer to Question 181/2012, a total of 31 homes have been allocated. Two of these were not assigned by the Housing Allocation Committee.

The breakdown is as follows: 2RKB, 9; 3RKB, 17; and 4RKB, 5.

755 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, under what authority, have... [Inaudible]
Sorry, Mr Speaker, if it is not on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee, by what authority have those two homes been allocated?

760 Hon. C A Bruzon: Let me remind the hon. Gentleman that I am the Housing Authority and, in fact, I allocate every single home, on the advice of the Allocation Committee.

These two incidents were exchanges of one [inaudible] flat to another. So the Allocation Committee did not have to be involved. It was a straightforward matter.

765 Maybe I should also explain that the Housing Allocation Committee comes into play, more than anything else, when there are elements where applicants have medical conditions, there are serious social issues and they provide advice to the Housing Ministry, so that we just simply look at these specific cases, and their assistance, of course, is invaluable. The process just carries on naturally, in terms of whose turn is it to have a house next.

770 I sit with my Housing Manager, and we look at the empty flats that are given to us – the keys to those empty flats – and we actually authorise and sign the allocation of every single home. The Housing Allocation Committee will then, at a later stage, be made aware of all the allocations that have taken place.

So the question that you have asked me two or three times is one that I myself am responsible for, because I used to ask the previous Government, but at the time I did not fully understand the procedure. So the reality is, Mr Speaker, that the Housing Allocation Committee will advise the Minister and the Authority and I do all the allocations myself. I have got to sign every single allocation.

Everything I do is also submitted to the Allocation Committee, so that they know exactly what is going on, but their advisory role comes into play mainly in what concerns medical cases, social cases, etc. There is a system in place and we follow that system. (Hon. E J Reyes: Yes.) Whoever is next on the list gets the next home.

Hon. E J Reyes: Basically, if I have understood it correctly, and I had always had that interpretation which the Minister now says he also sees but, in respect of two allocations that have been given, they were not necessarily on the recommendation there.

However, I am a bit confused – and I may have got this wrong, Mr Speaker – the Hon. Minister mentions that there was an exchange there, so it is not really a new allocation of a flat, but rather a person living in address A has moved on to address B and has therefore taken over a property but handed one back in, so it does not necessarily follow, then, that the number of applicants has been reduced. It remains the same; it is just that this person has been moved for reasons sometimes that a person may be considered by either the Housing Allocation Committee or by a Minister – and I think rightly so – you allow the person to move somewhere else, mainly connected with medical reasons, but it does not help to reduce the housing waiting list. (Interjection)

Hon. C A Bruzon: The Minister is, in a sense, right.

I was going to simply say that all the allocations have been made on the advice of the Allocation Committee, but I was asked to explain it in this way. That is why I have done it like that.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I –

Hon. J J Bossano: I would like to... Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is wrong in saying it does not reduce the waiting list.

It does reduce the waiting list by one, because that person may have been waiting for the house to become available, and the exchange means that he is no longer –

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I see.

Hon. J J Bossano: So there is one person less.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, let us say, if it is an exchange of a 2RKB for another 2RKB, we have had a case... It could be an exchange from a 2RKB to a 3RKB and, therefore, it does then remove an applicant who was a 2RKB tenant, applying for a 3RKB.

I am grateful for that clarification, yes.

Hon. S M Figueras: I think, Mr Speaker, sorry – just for purposes of clarification, the number of allocations that you referred to, how many were transfers by allocation versus allocations to people on the current list? I do not know whether – I cannot recall this as something that has been covered. If it has, I apologise but I did not quite get it.

Hon. C A Bruzon: The 31 homes that have been allocated have been allocated for people on the Housing Waiting List – period.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I just point out to the Hon. Minister for Housing that, in terms of allocation – in fact, he may have found himself already in this position – as far as the decanting is concerned the Minister might find himself, as I used to find myself on a few occasions, in a situation where the housing inspector would actually go out to inspect a particular flat – sometimes even a flat in the private sector – and submit a report on the basis of Health and Safety, whether the Health Inspector may find himself that there were electrical faults maybe endangering the lives of people or the structural building was in such a detrimental state and, on the basis of that report, if the Minister is satisfied that he has to take urgent action 830 and this is not something that he can wait for the next meeting of the Housing Allocation Committee, then the Minister, obviously, should act on the basis of putting Health and Safety before the normal procedure.

I do not know whether the Minister has already found himself in a situation like that but certainly it is something that you need to act very quickly. Has the Minister already found himself having to act in those circumstances on the basis of decanting?

835 Hon. C A Bruzon: The reality is that the hon. Member is right, there are situations whereby people – even elderly ladies...

I had a case, not so long ago, who lives in private rental accommodation in a fairly disgraceful state of affairs and, of course, we do our best to help them but then the system comes into play. The case goes to the Allocation Committee. She could well be placed in Social Category A or she will be placed on the homeless list. Therefore, we move as fast as possible to find an adequate home for her, or for him.

Clerk: Question –

845 Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker – ? Just something... I am sorry, I have only just noticed now.

Last Question Time, the Hon. Minister said that, the previous session, he had managed to allocate 36 new homes, and there were 40 offers that had been made that, hopefully, he was expecting.

Am I correct in assuming that these 31 that have been allocated are 31 who accepted of the 40? Because I do not know how to account for the figure. Is it 31 after those 40 offered, or these 31 could be from the 40 that were offered?

850 Hon. C A Bruzon: I have not got the exact answer. The 40, however, offered were obviously offers of allocation.

I know for a fact that just a handful did not accept. So it could well be that these 31 are the ones that have been allocated since the last question was asked, yes.

Housing tenants
Works completed since Q182/2012

860 Clerk: Question 295, the Hon. E J Reyes.

865 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants, since the answer given to Question 182/2012, have had their pending works completed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

870 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 296, 297 and 298.

Housing tenants
Additional works required since Q182/2012

875 Clerk: Question 296.

880 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants, since the answer given to Question 182/2012, have been added to the list requiring works to be done in their homes?

Housing Agency
Jobs completed since Q183/2012

Clerk: Question 297.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs, since the answer given to Question 183/2012, have been completed from the list requiring the attention of the Housing Agency?

895

Housing Agency
New jobs added to list since Q183/2012

Clerk: Question 298.

900

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many new jobs, since the answer given to Question 183/2012, have been added to the list requiring the attention of the Housing Agency?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

905

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 295, since the answer to Question 182/2012, a total of 88 tenants have had their pending works completed.

Since the answer given to Question 182/2012 – and now I am answering Question 296 – a total of 41 tenants have been added to the list requiring works to be done in their homes.

In answer to Question 297, since the answer given to Question 183/2012, 321 jobs have been completed from the list requiring the attention of the Housing Works Agency.

910

The answer to Question 298 reads as follows: since the answer given to Question 183/2012, a total of 47 new jobs have been added to the list requiring the attention of the Housing Works Agency.

915

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that information, Mr Speaker.

I do not know if it is correct, but would the Minister agree with me that we seem to be able now to be completing more jobs from one Question Time to another than the number of questions coming in. Am I correct in my simple mathematics?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, that is right.

920

Hon. E J Reyes: That augurs quite well for the Housing Works Agency and, if you have a chance, please congratulate them on my behalf.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

925

Housing Agency
New jobs contracted out since Q184/2012

930

Clerk: Question 299, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many new jobs have been contracted out, and to which companies, by the Housing Agency since the answer given to Question 184/2012?

935

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, the number of jobs contracted out by the Housing Works Agency, since the answer given to Question 184/2012, is 13, as follows: Gemini 940 Riteway Scaffolding Ltd, 6; Skybridge Ltd, 6; Health Safety and Environmental Consulting Ltd, 1. That makes a total of 13 jobs.

945 Hon. E J Reyes: An increase of? What was the [inaudible] numbers compared to last time? Any particular reason that the Minister may wish to enlighten us why, last time, only five had to be issued out and now 13?

Hon. C A Bruzon: The demand for jobs increased and more jobs were given out to these companies. That is a fairly straightforward answer, I think.

950 Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I did not quite phrase it properly. What type of jobs? Is it a particular nature because of major structural problems, or?

955 Hon. C A Bruzon: Without having the information in front of me, I would venture to suggest that these are to do with external jobs, because the Housing Works Agency – up to now, anyway – have been concentrating on internal refurbishment work. The concept that I want to introduce is for big jobs and small jobs, and if our boys cannot do the small jobs, the big ones, obviously, will go out to private contractors.

The important thing, as I keep saying, Mr Speaker, is that we have to provide as many homes for our people as possible and this is being done as we speak.

960 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am somewhat confused. In the figures that he has provided that 13 particular jobs are being put out to the private sector. Leaving aside the six works which is to do with scaffolding, the balance, was it works to do with that refurbishment, or was it works to do with some other kind, which not necessarily means work with flat refurbishment?

965 Hon. C A Bruzon: I really cannot answer that question, Mr Speaker. I would need notice. I am sorry.

970 Hon. J J Netto: Fair enough, Mr Speaker, given the comments that the hon. Gentleman just said, to the effect that the big jobs would go to the big contractors because, obviously, of the size of the work, the housing works, they may not be able to do it and the smaller jobs might be the type of work that the... Does he have any particular threshold, in terms of money, where it would determine what goes to the big contractors and what goes down to the small contractors? Does he have that in mind?

975 Hon. C A Bruzon: There are technical officers who will advise the Minister as to which jobs go to which company, or whether they will be handled by the Housing Works Agency and, as far as money is concerned, then I have not got the information available, Mr Speaker.

980 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am aware of that but, normally, as far as the technical officers, which he is referring to, they would have different thresholds. They would probably say, look, a job, which may cost from £5 to £1,000, we will give it to the self-employed person. A job that may cost between £1,000 and £10,000 may go to the small contractor that may employ 10 people, but a big job that costs £250,000 or £500,000 would go to the big contractors.

985 That is what I am asking the hon. Gentleman. Fair enough, he may not have the information available there with him, which is fair comment to say, but what I am trying to determine is, as far as his Department is concerned, where are the thresholds in terms of value for money in jobs, before deciding whether it goes to a big contractor or to a small contractor in the private sector.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the change has not yet been introduced of moving for a criterion of small and big. The original criterion that was introduced when the Agency was set up is the one that is still being applied, which is inside and outside.

990 I think the logic of inside and outside is that it is assumed that the inside jobs will require less resources and less manpower and the outside jobs will require more. But that is not necessarily so in every case. Consequently, it would be a question, once the new policy, that we have been discussing with the people concerned, is actually put into effect, that it will not just be a question of value, but a question of the pool of resources that we have.

995 For example, we have got a situation where the hon. Member must remember that, given that the opportunity to take the early exit was given to everybody, we are committed to respecting that agreement and continuing with it. It does mean that the mix of trades can, unintentionally, become unbalanced, simply because more people choose to go who are plumbers, and less people choose to go who are carpenters. So you could finish up where, not only have the numbers gone down, but the profile of the workforce has changed 1000 and, therefore, what the Agency can take on may not just be a question of the value of the job, but the size of the job, given the number of carpenters, or given the number of plumbers, or given the number of masons.
 So when we move from inside and outside to size, it will be that whether the job is an inside job or an outside job, they will tell us, look, if we can do a job inside a house and it is going to take ages, because we have only got three plumbers, then the logic is that we want to get the house ready quicker, we may need to go to a contractor. So it is not as straightforward as drawing a line and saying anything above this cost goes out 1005 and everything below it stays in.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I accept everything the hon. Gentleman has said, in terms of the availability of skills that may be available for the Housing Works Agency to do the job. Indeed, this is one of the areas, perhaps, from his employment angle, he may be able to look at, if there is a scale of certain skills to 1010 complement the needs of the Housing Works Agency.

Absolutely, but the Hon. the Minister for Housing, in his previous answer, from my hon. Colleague, Mr Reyes, when we were talking about allocation of flats, he was also talking in terms, not just of value for money for works that go outside, but he was also talking in terms of timing for the job to be done. Therefore, 1015 the only determination for putting the jobs, the way I understood it from him, was not just the size or the value of the work that would be going out, but also, if the work is registered to be done and never gets done, the implication of the comment that the Hon. Minister said before was, if the work does not get done, beyond a certain amount of time, then that will trigger giving the job to the private sector.

That is the implication of what the hon. Member was saying in terms of flat allocations. This is what I was trying to get at, not just in terms of size and money, but also in terms of timing, so that the work gets done.
 1020 Perhaps if he could clarify that, it would be very good.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I do not think I said, but if I did –

Hon. J J Netto: It was an implication.
 1025

Hon. C A Bruzon: – an implication, okay.

The aim – and I speak in general terms – because I cannot talk about thresholds or about how much money exactly has to be requested from a contractor before we do this or that. I am not... I have not been briefed on that. That is why I am trying to explain to the Member, that there are some of the supplementary questions for 1030 which I would need notice.

The reality is that we do our best to get – as soon as we get the keys handed over to us – our inspectors will inspect the flats. Then the decision will be made as to whether it is just an easy, clean-out job, or whether refurbishment has to be done in the flat and that is happening as we speak, in connection with the 149 flats that was in part of the answer I gave to the Hon. Mr Reyes.

Housing applicants living in Spain Creation of new waiting list since Q185/2012

1040

Clerk: Question 300, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm if, since his answer to Question No. 185/2012, he has opened a separate housing waiting list for applicants currently living in Spain and wishing to return home?
 1045

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1050 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): The simple answer is no, Mr Speaker.
Since the answer given to Question 185/2012 no separate housing waiting list has been opened for applicants currently living in Spain. I may add, as I think I mentioned last time, that the demand is, literally, very limited. One or two people have expressed an interest and I have got... I have made a note of that and my staff is aware of this. So we have not really opened an official list yet.

1055 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, although I do not disagree that the demand may be small, for those one, two or three people, for them it is a question of wishing to return home and not being entitled to go into the pre-list or any housing list proper and so on. So, for them, they are not interested in the numbers, but rather interested in the quality of life and they are expressing to me a desire to see this list open, as has been promised by the Members in their manifesto.

1060 Hon. C A Bruzon: I do take his point, Mr Speaker.
The reality is that there are, as the previous administration is well aware of, people who offer a local address. This is the reality, I think, both the previous administration and our administration is aware that there are people who wish to live in Gibraltar. It does not mean to say that I am forgetting them, or putting them to one side, certainly not, we are trying to advise them to go through a procedure, which is legal, we do not want people to lie, but if there are valid reasons why they have been forced to live in La Línea, or whatever, we keep them in mind and, whether or not there is a list, there are a number of people already on the housing waiting list who provide local addresses and we are trying to do our best to help them.

1070 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1075 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, given the fact that he now says that the demand from people living in Spain – Gibraltarians living in Spain – is very small and I think he mentioned a figure of one or two, will he not accept, therefore, that the criticisms that he levelled against my Government, that there were ‘scores of Gibraltarians’ forced to live in Spain, because we were not providing accommodation here in Gibraltar for them, was misplaced and was wrong?

Hon. C A Bruzon: No, Mr Speaker.

1080 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, how could he possibly justify the statement he has been making over the past four years about those ‘scores of individuals’ living in Spain, who could not find accommodation here in Gibraltar in the light of the statement that he has made a few moments ago that the demand is very small and there are only two individuals, that, in fact, have expressed a desire to come to Gibraltar from Spain, to the hon. Member?

1085 Hon. C A Bruzon: These one or two individuals, Mr Speaker, have approached us in connection with our manifesto commitment. It is as simple as that. They have read the manifesto, they are aware that we are opening a new list, and they have got in touch with Housing. That is all.

1090 By the way, I did not spend the four years criticising the GSD administration because they had ‘forced people to live in Spain’. The reality is that some of our Gibraltarian people had to go into Spain, because the GSD Government took much longer than they should have in the construction of rental homes for our people.

1095 Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to that last point, it gives me an opportunity of asking this supplementary. I thought I heard him say that the GSD had constructed 490, nearly 500, homes for rental and that that was very – I think he used the term ‘insignificant’ (A Member: Slight.) – a slight increase in the rental stock. Does he not accept that 490 rental flats over 5,000, if I may, I know that this question makes Mr Costa nervous, but he has an opportunity to – (Interjections)

1100 Mr Speaker: Order! Order?

Hon. N F Costa: On a point of order, I simply said that the number was 500 or 400 over 15 years. I was just making his question complete, that is all.

1105 Mr Speaker: Yes, well... Order!

That remark was made from a sedentary position. It should not have been made and any Member on his feet would be well advised to ignore remarks made from a sedentary position.

1110 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, will he not accept that, in fact, 490 over 5,000 is not an insignificant amount and will he not congratulate the previous administration for being the first administration (Interjections and applause) to construct Government rental homes since Varyl Begg Estate was constructed in the 1970s?

1115 Hon. C A Bruzon: I will certainly not congratulate the previous administration for only constructing 490 rental homes for our people.

Those 490 homes, Mr Speaker, that was a good thing and I have always acknowledged that in Parliament, I wish they had done that four, five or six years earlier to help the people on the waiting list. The reality is, Mr Speaker, that when those 492 flats were actually allocated, the housing waiting lists were not reduced by 492, because only 139 Government flats were made available to people on the waiting list because many of the people who moved from Government rental accommodation to those 490 new rental flats did not necessarily vacate rental accommodation. The lists were not reduced in the way that the GSD hoped they would. They were not reduced to the extent of 490. Only 139 flats were actually made available to people on the housing waiting list, Mr Speaker.

1125 Hon. D A Feetham: Given that he is critical of the fact that the GSD only constructed 490 rental homes during 16 years, will he also join me in condemning the hon. Member, the former Leader of the Opposition and Chief Minister for eight years here in Gibraltar, for constructing no rental homes when he was Chief Minister of Gibraltar. (Applause)

1130 Hon. N F Costa: That is inaccurate. That is not true. He knows it is not true.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I was not responsible for constructing homes. The Government was responsible for reducing, in eight years, the waiting list, under Ministers which he at the time supported.

1135 Hon. D A Feetham: I was in the UK at the time.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, yes, but I imagine you supported the Minister who was responsible for the estates – as he happens to be your dad! (Applause)

1140 Mr Speaker: Order.

1145 Hon. J J Bossano: And I think a magnificent job was done, which reduced the waiting list and which produced 50/50 home ownership at prices of £18,000 and £19,000 which, in fact, taking into account the tax breaks introduced by the GSLP administration, were practically at the level of rents. That is to say, people were moving from rented accommodation and getting an opportunity to buy 50% of a brand new house for very little more, in net terms, than they were already paying in rent and that meant that the waiting list was dramatically reduced. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1150 In 1996... (Applause) (Several Members: Hear, hear.) In 1996, the hon. Member will know that the party that existed then, to which he did not then belong and which then he used to criticise as much as we did, came in and actually allowed the waiting list to grow bigger and bigger and bigger (A Member: Shame!) and, eventually, when it was getting so big that it was going to sink them, they came up with this estate which they promised in one manifesto and then had to re-promise in the subsequent manifesto, (Interjection) before they finally completed it in a rush, at the last minute, having paid many millions of pounds over the original costs, when all the companies...

1155 So I think if we compare the eight years of the GSLP and the first eight years of the GSD, the comparison is that the first eight years of the GSD were lousy; and if we compare it with the second eight years, all that they managed to do in the 15 years is to put the [inaudible] the list which they inherited. All that they did was to re-house and re-accommodate and allocate property to people that they had allowed to go on to the list after 1996, and the figures today show that the list today is where it was in 1996, but not where it has been in

1160 between. So, fortunately, we are now able to continue what we started doing in 1988 and we will show, in three-and-a-half years' time, what it is possible to do with a Government that is committed, as the eight years before proved. (Applause)

Several Members: Hear, hear.

1165 Mr Speaker: Order. Order. Before the hon. Member carries on, I ought to remind the Hon. Minister it is not in order to refer to relationships in regard to any Member of this House. The reference to 'your dad' was not proper.

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1170 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker –

1175 Hon. J J Bossano: Can I just say that I intended no offence. I did it in the affectionate way (Laughter) that reflects the warmth of feeling that I have for a colleague who did such an excellent job in building those housing estates.

Mr Speaker: I am sure no offence was intended, but the rules... my distinguished predecessor ruled 15 or 16 years ago that, whilst it is proper to name persons by their proper name, it is not proper to refer to anyone by relationship.

1180 The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, I do not mind at all –

Mr Speaker: No, no.

1185 Hon. D A Feetham: – and let me tell the hon. Gentleman that my father shares exactly the same warmth for him as he shares for my father.

1190 My father was his best man at his wedding and I think that the hon. Gentleman was my father's best man at his wedding. But he should also recognise that, in my political career, I have shown more than once that I am my own man, that I am not my father's keeper and that simply because my father was a Minister in the GSLP Government, does not mean that I was born into that tradition, – because, clearly, I was born into that tradition – but that does not mean that I am bound to follow that tradition or, indeed, keep quiet and not express criticisms of him or his Government when I believe that it is justified. I will continue to do so, whether my father was a Minister in his Government or whether he was not.

1195 Now, Mr Speaker, does he not accept that it is the height of political hypocrisy for the hon. Member to have made the comment that he made a few moments ago, that there is not any demand from Gibraltarians resident in Spain and there are only two people who have approached him, when not only him but you yourself spent a considerable amount of time during the last four years criticising our administration precisely on those grounds? Now, either there was a huge demand then and there is no demand now, which is very odd indeed; or, alternatively, this really is a case of the height of political hypocrisy.

1200 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I am just as concerned about the 28 people who the GSD acknowledge were living in Spain as I am for the 1,500 Gibraltarians still waiting for housing, (Applause) which the other Government did not do as much as they should have, in their 16 years, to provide homes for those people.

1205 As Mr Bossano has just said, my colleague here, the housing waiting list was reduced to a mere 200 or 300 when their term in office regrettably finished in 1996. It has been being going up and up and up to a figure of about 1,680, which was when it reached the top a year or two ago. It was reduced slightly, yes, to 1,490 to 1,500. There were new rental homes made available, but the reality is that my criticism of the previous administration on the way in which they did not make adequate provision for the people on the waiting list, that criticism is as valid now as it was then.

1210 I have always acknowledged in Parliament that what they did in Bishop Canilla was good – 82 or 86 flats – but by 'always', I do not mean that I said it every single day, 24 hours a day. I did refer to this a couple of times, when the then Chief Minister reminded me that they had done 82 or 86 houses for rental. The reality is that they inherited Edinburgh House, handed over by the MoD. The reality also is that, in their 16 years in 1215 office, Mr Speaker, they did not do enough to cater for the demand of people on the waiting lists and that criticism from me, and I assume from all my colleagues, is still as valid now as it was then.

Clerk: Question 301, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1220 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister.

Hon. J J Bossano: The hon. Member opposite has made the mistake of inviting me to agree with him that the statement made by my hon. colleague was the height of hypocrisy. He should know how dangerous it is to tread on that ground. I will tell him what I consider to be the height of hypocrisy.

1225 I think it is the height of hypocrisy to have just heard him say that he is his own man, that the fact that the Hon. Mr Feetham was a colleague and a very close friend of mine, and continues to be a very close friend of mine and did a very good job, does not mean that he cannot criticise him, because he seems to have forgotten that the only reason that he came to Gibraltar – he told me in my face in my office when he was trying to persuade me to hand over the control of the GSLP to him – (Interjection) was that he was here to get rid of Mr Caruana for all the nasty things that they had said about Mr Feetham, and that he was not interested in coming back to Gibraltar, that he was not, in fact, a person with any political ambition and that the only reason why he thought I should do a secret pact with him and pretend I was still going to carry on in the leadership of the party was so that he could do what he claimed I could not do, which was, in fact, to rid Gibraltar of the GSD and of Mr Caruana!

1230 All that is evidence of what the height of hypocrisy means – not whether there are 28 people in La Línea or two.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, with respect, the hon. Gentleman has sidestepped the question.

1240 Now, look, if he wants to conduct a debate about Daniel Feetham, we will conduct a debate about Daniel Feetham. I do not recognise anything that he has actually said and it is a matter of public record. I wrote to him, saying to him that I was not going to be standing for election, asking the hon. Gentleman for a commitment that if he lost four elections in a row he should go. I shouldn't have even asked him for that because that is the only decent and credible thing for a leader in his position to have done, having lost four elections. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1245 But, Mr Speaker, is –

Mr Speaker: Order. Order.

May I just say, I think we are straying away from the question on housing. We are now straying into the realms of internal party politics, with which I do not believe most Members of the House are interested.

1250 Hon. J J Bossano: If there is a question, I am happy to answer.

Mr Speaker: Can we stick to the housing issue, please.

1255 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he avoiding the question? Is it not the height of political hypocrisy for the Minister for Housing to stand up in this House today, saying there is no demand of Gibraltarians living in Spain for housing in Gibraltar, having him constantly bleating on over the last four years that there were Gibraltarians living in Spain because of the actions of the GSD Government?

1260 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister of Employment.

1265 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member invites me to agree with a value judgment that he is making about what constitutes 'the height of hypocrisy'. Therefore, in order to determine whether this is the height of hypocrisy or what he was saying half an hour ago is the height of hypocrisy, in order to do justice to the question that he is putting to me, I have to say, well, look, he is a man who says, 'People should not think that because Mr Feetham senior was your best man and was in the –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, point of order.

You have already made a ruling in relation to this. I have accepted it and I have not carried on with the 1270 many points that I could make about the hon. Gentleman opposite. He insists on deviating the answer to the question about something that is completely and utterly irrelevant. I am prepared to have a debate with him about this.

1275 Mr Speaker: I take the point. Yes, the Hon. Minister is requested to focus his answer on the question about housing.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, you ruled that I could not talk about –

Mr Speaker: Internal party politics.

1280 Hon. J J Bossano: No, no.

No, Mr Speaker, you ruled, if you will excuse me (Mr Speaker: Certainly.) and I take a very careful note because I always obey a rule. You told me I could not say it was ‘his dad’. I am not saying it is his dad any more.

1285 Mr Speaker: I accept that.
No, the point is –

Hon. J J Bossano: So, therefore, I am talking about my Minister.

1290 My Minister, Mr Feetham senior, right, was a person who was at the receiving end of many, many accusations from the GSD and consequently –

Hon. D A Feetham: He was on the receiving end of many accusations, mostly from his own supporters!

1295 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

A Member: – and if he wants to continue –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1300 Hon. D A Feetham: If he wants to continue with this line (Mr Speaker: Order!) I will happily have this debate with him. (Mr Speaker: Order!) I have no problem at all.

Mr Speaker: Order! The Hon. Minister is in the middle of an answer.

1305 Hon. J J Bossano: He is asking me, Mr Speaker – and I do not know whether the rules permit that kind of question, but the question has been allowed – and the question is: do I agree with him that saying that there was a big demand from people living in Spain to live in Gibraltar, and now saying that there are only two who have actually come forward, is the height of hypocrisy?

1310 I am being invited by the hon. Member to express my view on whether that constitutes the height of hypocrisy and, therefore, by that invitation, I have to respond to say, ‘Well, look, I do not think this is the height of hypocrisy because what I think is the height of hypocrisy is the things that you do, and the things that you have done, and the fact that you said you had come to Gibraltar to clear up the unfair and unjust accusations against one of my Ministers, for which I was very grateful you wanted to do that. But now you are telling us that, in fact, you now agree with the people who did all those things to my Minister and that you agree with the views of the people who did it. That, I think, is the height of hypocrisy. That is my answer.

1315 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there has to be an element of fairness in relation to this. (Mr Speaker: Absolutely!) You have allowed him to make all of this and, really, I do not mind, because I do not mind having a debate on this and throwing back at him what he throws at me. But the reality is that, if we are to have proper, structured and effective proceedings of Parliament, then your rulings must be respected by both sides.

1320 Mr Speaker: Absolutely! There was no question, I think.

1325 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, can I ask you to clarify: is it not correct that the questions are supposed to be to obtain information and not opinions? (Mr Speaker: Absolutely!) Well, if he is asking me to agree what is the height of hypocrisy, he is asking me to express a value judgement and an opinion. Then the question should not be allowed and then none of this would happen.

1330 Mr Speaker: Yes, the question was an invitation to express a value judgement and an opinion which, in strict practice, should not be allowed. I did allow it, as there is a certain degree of latitude allowed in questions and the Minister and, indeed, well, both Ministers were given the opportunity to express their view on the matter, which we are, of course, listening to.

1335 The ruling I did make, was that, because the matter was straying from expressing value judgements on housing, I did not feel it appropriate to engage in, or bring up matters of internal party politics, because that would take the debate further from housing than ever before, so that was my way of seeing it and that is the way it should be conducted.

1340 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, because it is not the first time that he has done it. He has done it on a number of sessions. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) He appears to – I am addressing the Speaker, please may I be allowed the courtesy that I have allowed Mr Bossano when he has been making his points. It is a number of times that they have made these points and, in my respectful view, are attempting to shield from valid political criticism about comments or policies of the Government by, effectively, referring to my father and what I intended to do and what I intended not to do...

1345 I hope, Mr Speaker, that in the future – and I will have a debate with the hon. Gentleman about it and I do not mind having a debate – but, of course, what I do not want is a situation where, every time there is a political criticism, we then... the hon. Member launches into that kind of political diatribe, because that is really what it is, and Mr Speaker allows him to do so and does not, in fact, cut him short because, of course, if he makes comments like that, then we are bound, on this side of the House, to stand up and make other comments. That is not really the way that parliamentary proceedings ought to be conducted and it is not really what members of the public listening to question and answer expect from us as parliamentarians.

1350 The hon. Gentleman has, during the course of today, mentioned my father, mentioned conversations which did not happen between me and him in, I don't know when. He has invited me to the lobby to have fisticuffs with him and that is not the way parliamentary proceedings ought to be conducted.

1355 Mr Speaker: Can I just bring this debate to an end by making one clear ruling and I will enforce that very strictly henceforth: internal party politics – whichever party you are talking about, whatever the circumstances – is not a subject properly to be discussed in this forum. Parliament is not about internal party politics. That I think is very clear and we will all observe that henceforth, very strictly.

1360 The Hon. Charles Bruzon.

1365 Hon. C A Bruzon: As the original question was for me to answer, may I just make a comment in connection with supplementary remarks made by the Hon. Daniel Feetham, that the demand that I am referring to was not the demand for housing coming from people who have had to be housed in Spain because there was not sufficient rental homes in Gibraltar. The demand that I was talking about was the demand in connection with the list, that new list. That is all, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1370 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I know it was a while ago, but am I right in interpreting then that what the Hon. Minister for Housing is now saying is that every single applicant on the housing list, as it stands today, will be given a house within the current term of office?

1375 Hon. C A Bruzon: Not everybody who is on the housing waiting list today, Mr Speaker, but those who were on the housing waiting list, pre-list and list on 9th December. They have an assurance from us that they will be housed before the four term in office is completed.

Hon. E J Reyes: That, Mr Speaker, is a slight deviation from the manifesto commitment, because the manifesto commitment says that those who were on the housing list prior to election day will be allocated 1380 during their term of office and that those subsequently putting their names down will be allocated a house within a three-year period. So, a three-year period is less than what their term of office is left, therefore it should mean that everyone today on the housing list should be allocated within the term of office.

1385 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the assurance and commitment that we offer is that all the applicants on the waiting list as on 9th December will be allocated a home within the four term in office. After that, people who go on the list later on, will be allocated a home in three years, but we have to do the first part first. We have to complete the four-year commitment in connection with housing those people on the waiting list on 9th December.

1390 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, my understanding is slightly different. It says:

‘The supply of new homes will be kept under review in the light of applications received from 9th December onwards’,

1395 so an application submitted on 16th day of March is after 9th December. Full stop. Next sentence, still within the same paragraph:

‘Nobody in future will have to wait for more than three years to be rehoused.’

1400 Therefore, within three years of today’s date, if I become an applicant, I expect to get a home. Is that not correct, Mr Speaker?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman is confused, because he clearly has not read the paragraph that is above it:

1405 ‘Eliminating waiting list: Everyone on the housing waiting list and on the pre-list on 9th December, who has not received a letter allocating them a flat will also be rehoused before the next election, eliminating the existing waiting list and pre-list. The pre-waiting list will be eliminated.’

1410 In other words, everyone on the pre-list or the waiting list on the 9th will be allocated a house within this term of office and then the supply of new homes will be kept under review, in the light of applications received from the 9th onwards. So, if he does not understand that, it is because he does not understand reading plain English, I am sorry.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, then it is clear that my teachers did not teach me quite well. No, sir.

1415 Two separate paragraphs under two separate headings. One is ‘Elimination of waiting list’, which is what the hon. Member has said. New paragraph, new heading: ‘Waiting reduced to three years maximum.’ Tell me, sir, what do I not understand in English language? It says here, if I put my name down for housing after 9th December within three years I am going to get a house. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) Explain to me, Mr Speaker. (Applause)

1420 Hon. D A Feetham: May I also add to that, so I do not have to ask later on, he finished reading and did not read the sentence that said:

‘Nobody in future will have to wait more than three years to be rehoused.’

1425 Hon. N F Costa: That’s right!

Hon. D A Feetham: That is absolutely clear.

1430 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, that’s right.

But, Mr Speaker, I am sorry, they are making political mischief and they know it. It is very simple. A plain, ordinary reading of both paragraphs combined give the net result of the answer that the Hon. Mr Charles Bruzon has made.

The difficulty, of course, that Mr Charles Bruzon has is that he is a kind-hearted and polite gentleman, who does not give time to the ridiculous misinterpretations that they proffer for political, partisan reasons.

1435 The answer he gave is perfectly clear. I will read it again, so that it is perfectly clear for those who pretend to be able to read plain English, but clearly cannot for their own political mischief reasons.

1440 'Everyone on the housing list and on the pre-list on 9th December, who has not received a letter allocating them a flat, will be rehoused before the next election.

Everyone. Everyone. Everyone before the next election. All right, so that is a four-year mandate and then it eminently clearly says,

1445 'the supply of new homes will be kept under review from 9th December onwards, so that nobody in future –'

i.e. in respect of the new homes, as clearly stated, peradventure,

'will have to wait for more than three years to be rehoused',

1450 which may I also say, Mr Speaker, given the appalling and atrocious record of the GSD of creating an average of around 40 or 50 flats for rental a year over 16 years is a strong, solid... and I know the people of Gibraltar welcome this manifesto commitment. (Applause)

1455 Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman for his interpretation of what this manifesto actually says, you have to be a lawyer and you have to be an extremely bad lawyer at that. What you are saying is, that the sentence,

'nobody in future will have to wait for more than three years to be rehoused'

1460 is a reference to new homes. So what you are saying is that commitment only bites when you, on the other side of the House, decide to build new homes. It is the most ridiculous 'commitment', if that is the case, that I have ever heard and it is the most ridiculous commitment contained in this manifesto, far more ridiculous than the Future Job Strategy that Mr Bossano came up with at the last General Election.

1465 Does he not agree with me that the words, 'nobody in future will have to wait for more than three years to be rehoused' only is capable of one meaning and that is that no-one will have to wait more than three years to be rehoused?

Hon. N F Costa: As from 9th December.

1470 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, as from 9th December. I understand that [inaudible].

Hon. N F Costa: That is the answer. As from 9th December.

1475 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. N F Costa: If I am bad at interpreting, I am a bad lawyer...

1480 Let me remind the Minister about political hypocrisy, (Mr Speaker: Order!) when he came out in a party political broadcast saying that he was very worried about Gibraltarians having to live in Spain because of the GSD's appalling housing policies. How about that for political hypocrisy? (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Gentleman going to answer the question? (Interjections)

1485 Hon. N F Costa: Did he not make that statement in a party political broadcast?

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1490 Hon. D A Feetham: If the hon. Gentleman wants to ask the questions, perhaps he might be able to persuade all his colleagues to resign en masse and then come to this side of the House. Otherwise, it is us that ask the questions; you have to answer them.

Hon. N F Costa: Point of order, Mr Speaker. I am answering the fact that he said I was a bad lawyer –

1495 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. N F Costa: – the answer I have just given, if I was a bad lawyer, he has a bad memory!

1500 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not suggesting... the hon. Gentleman is a good personal friend of mine. Never would I suggest that the hon. Gentleman is a bad lawyer. (Interjections) And he knows that. (Interjections)

1505 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Would the hon. Members please listen...

Order! In this House none of us are lawyers. We are all Members of Parliament, so the accusation ‘good or bad lawyers’ is totally out of order and irrelevant. We are all Members of Parliament. Nobody is a lawyer here and, quite frankly, having listened to this discussion, we are both looking at the same document. I do not think we are going to get much further trying to analyse what the document says.

1510 I think both sides know what the document says. I think the people out there know what the document says and I do not think there is a call for any further interpretation of the document. Any further questions, yes, but not on the document, mainly the manifesto.

1515 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I think the question that was asked by my friend, Mr Reyes, was a question about Government policy in relation to housing, perhaps the Hon. the Minister for Housing, or indeed Mr Costa, if he is so keen to participate in the debate, might be prepared to answer, which is... Is it a commitment of the Government to rehouse anybody within three years? In other words, anybody that is on the list today is going to be rehoused within three years. Is that the commitment?

1520 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, in January I think we had a less heated debate, or question and answer session, with the Hon. Edwin Reyes, when he asked me about that and I said that weren’t we splitting hairs here, really?

1525 Let’s face it, the important thing, I suggested then, was that we provide as many houses for our people as is conceivably possible and that we have a serious commitment, whether it is three years, whether it is three years and nine months, whether it is four years and three months – and we failed a little bit, because we are three months late. The reality is that we have a serious commitment to provide as many houses as possible, and I pray to God there will be more than... that we do it as quickly as possible and as efficiently as possible, whether it is three years, whether it is four years.

1530 Mr Speaker, whatever interpretation we want to suggest, or want to give to the manifesto commitment, the commitment is, on an ongoing basis, to provide as many homes as possible for our people and reduce the housing waiting list as far as we possibly can.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1535 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you, Mr Speaker.

I think there are some areas there I would certainly agree, so in that agreement I was just trying to get a confirmation: what was the policy?

1540 I was trying to explain to the Hon. Minister, I took it that anyone who was on the housing list, pre-list or whatever type of list, before 9th December, the commitment was that they would be offered a home within a four-year period. I then added, for the clarification of what the electorate is asking me as well, those who put their names down on a subsequent date, meaning the future – and I used today’s date as an example – is it then not the case and is he still stuck to the commitment that, within a three-year period of putting your name down? Hypothetically, that I become an applicant today, within a three-year period it is his intention to offer me a home as well? That is simply what I was trying to get at.

1545 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the commitment is as set out in the manifesto. It is very clear and we intend to keep to that commitment and every other commitment in the manifesto. (Applause)

1550 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just for clarification purposes, is that what the commitment is, as my hon. Friend has requested?

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, Mr Speaker, it seems somewhat out of order for me to say, 'the commitment is what it is' and the hon. Member then gets up and says, 'Well, is that what the commitment is?' I have already said that it is and we stand by it.

1555 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, with respect, I do not agree with the hon. Member. My hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, has asked for a clarification of what the commitment is and he has been unable to give it. That was the simply the reason why I asked.

1560 Hon. G H Licudi: There was no inability to provide any clarification. The matter is absolutely crystal clear. It is as set out in our manifesto and we intend to commit to that and everything else.
If he wants me to repeat it 10 times, I will do so, but I can go no further than –

Mr Speaker: Please don't. Order.
1565 I think I have allowed sufficient opportunity for this particular information to be obtained. The answers have been provided. It may not be the answer which a particular questioner has sought, but that is the answer and we have to accept that, as far as this question goes.
The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1570 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I move that this House do now adjourn until half past three today.

Mr Speaker: Will that be convenient to all the hon. Members, adjourn until half past three this afternoon?

1575 Hon. C A Bruzon: Sorry, not to me, Mr Speaker.
Could you kindly, with the Deputy Chief Minister's permission, allow me to finish my answer.
Have I actually answered all the questions I had to because I cannot come back at half past three?

Mr Speaker: I have drawn a line at that last question.
1580 The way I see it there are still (Interjections) three... (Interjections) Order! Order!
There are three Questions still... (Interjections) Order!

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we will finish the Questions and then adjourn.

1585 Mr Speaker: Question 301, is it?

Management Companies of co-ownership housing estates
Meetings with Minister for Housing since Q186/2012

1590 Clerk: Question 301, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1595 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state if he has, since his answer to Question No. 186/2012, held meetings with any management companies of co-ownership housing estates in order to address the issue of increasing service charges and/or other concerns?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1600 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): No, Mr Speaker, I have not yet met with any management companies of co-ownership housing estates.

1605 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if I recall correctly, last month the hon. Member said that the meetings were imminent and then, in the Chamber, in order to help the Minister be better prepared for the meetings, I gave him an example of a letter showing how service charges were being increased, which is the main concern for these residents. Does the Minister expect to hold the meetings quite soon because the talk within these co-ownership housing estates is that it is taking quite a long time to get this matter started?

1610 Hon. C A Bruzon: What I am doing, Mr Speaker, is that I am meeting a number of representatives of housing estates – hundreds and hundreds of individuals – who want to see the Minister for Housing, and the reality is that I know that the Chief Minister is interested to be present at this meeting and, therefore – he is not in the House now – but I would suggest that... or if I could ask a rhetorical question... if the Member is speaking on behalf of a particular group, if they were to write to us, I am sure that we could give them a meeting as soon as we possibly can.

1615 Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, I am only speaking on behalf of the electorate and not of any particular group – certainly not. I do not pretend for a minute to speak on behalf of the group of the housing estate or the co-ownership housing estate in which I live. I have no such mandate, only a mandate on behalf of the electorate.

Varyl Begg Estate
Estimated completion date for works in communal areas

1625 Clerk: Question 302, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing give an estimated completion date for the works currently being undertaken in the communal areas at Varyl Begg Estate?

1630 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, a certificate of practical completion was issued on 27th February 2012.

1635 Hon. E J Reyes: Do I take it, then – and I am asking this question with a bit of ignorance – that all the works are now deemed as having been completed?

1640 Hon. C A Bruzon: My understanding, Mr Speaker, is that the works started by the previous administration have been completed. Obviously, it is an ongoing process and we intend to continue refurbishing not only this particular estate but all other Government estates.

1645 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, what I am trying to get at is that some of the residents of Varyl Begg Estate have expressed a bit of a concern that there seems to be Heras fencing and so on around and they do not quite see much work happening. Now that the better weather is coming along and refurbished play areas and the communal areas... they are a bit concerned that they may not be able to enjoy as much this area with young children because of the ongoing works. So is there a message that the Hon. Minister can send to those tenants of Varyl Begg Estate to assure them of the completion of those works?

1650 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am conscious of the concerns expressed by the Varyl Begg Association and I am constantly in touch with them and I have spoken to one individual only a few days ago about it and things will happen.

1655

Government Rental Estates
Reporting and replacing of fused light bulbs

Clerk: Question 303, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1660

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing explain what procedures are in place for the reporting of and replacement of fused light bulbs in all communal areas of Government Rental Estates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1665

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): For any fused light bulb problems in all the communal areas of Government Rental Estates the standard procedure is to report this to the Ministry for Housing Reporting Office. The work will then be tackled by our contractor engaged for this task.

1670

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, when he said to 'report' this, who is meant to do the reporting?

Hon. C A Bruzon: The reporting is made by whoever notices that there is a bulb broken in an estate.

Hon. E J Reyes: So it is upon the tenants of the estate to report this to the Housing Work Agency?

1675

Hon. C A Bruzon: I imagine so. If one of my men are driving through Varyl Begg Estate and they see that there are some lights broken or fused, I imagine that they would report it themselves.

1680

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I understand the hon. Member is trying to be helpful, but it is not a question of 'imagining'. One has to know clearly what the procedure is. I will give him an example of one which was expressed to me.

Since very early in this new year there seems to be a very good, or very substantial, number of fused light bulbs in Mid Harbour Estate, including the stairwell which has to be used when the lift is not working, and people are concerned that one or two, close to three months later, no-one seems to have fixed those light bulbs and the tenants are simply asking... well, you know, the onus is upon whom to report this and who is responsible to ensure that the works are done within a reasonable period of time, and certainly, two months on does not seem to be a reasonable period of time to have to wait for light bulbs to be replaced.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask, Mr Speaker, from the moment that a tenant makes a report in the Reporting Office in the City Hall, within the procedures that the reporting staff have, can the Minister judge whether there is a response time between the time reporting the fault and the time of execution of the works? Is that the case?

Hon. C A Bruzon: You have asked if I can judge and then you say, 'is that the case?'

1695

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry? What I am trying to get is, within the resources available within the Reporting Office, will the Minister – or, indeed, management for that matter – be able to print out a printout saying the day on which a tenant reported a bulb which was fused and the actual time that the bulb has been replaced with a new one? Is that resource available?

1700

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker, the computer keeps records of all the reports made to the Reporting Office and I am sure that if a bulb is broken and the report is made, it can appear on a printout if it is printed.

1705

Hon. J J Netto: Given that the resources are available, does the Minister for Housing have a judgement, an idea, what is a reasonable period of time that a tenant should wait for the bulb to be replaced?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, to be honest with the hon. Gentleman, I have got many, many more serious problems in connection with applicants for housing than worrying about a bulb; but, indeed, I take your point. I certainly do not wish our tenants to walk in the darkness when the sun sets and, therefore, these repairs should be done immediately, basically.

1710 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do, of course, realise that the Hon. Minister for Housing has a lot more serious problems, but let me tell him that if there is a particular person – as there is, and I know some people who are partially blind, and if a bulb is fused at night time that could be the cause of an accident – for that particular person that is an important thing.

1715 So whilst, obviously, the Minister for Housing has much more important things to do, the partially blind person is also an important person, who needs that bulb to be replaced. The point I am trying to get at is the Minister and the senior management, indeed, should have a target of accepting when it is reasonable that work should be done – in this case replacing bulbs which are fused – and going beyond that certain time, which is the response time, then the Minister and the management should take action to ensure that the work gets done. Is that the case, Mr Speaker?

1720 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I think I have already answered that, or partly answered that. The aim should be – and I have just taken over the Housing Department recently – that light bulbs should be replaced ASAP with the maximum possible speed, but I cannot say, ‘I will allow it to be like that for a whole month before I take action.’ No. It has to be done as soon as is conceivably humanly possible for the benefit of all the people that you have mentioned and for everybody.

1725 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am still none the wiser in my original question. I asked for an explanation of the procedures and I am still none the wiser. When a light bulb is fused, whose responsibility is it? Is it the tenants to report it to a particular Department or are there personnel within the Housing Agency that go and check this out so that these tenants can at least be informed and know what it is that they have to do?

1730 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am still none the wiser in my original question. I asked for an explanation of the procedures and I am still none the wiser. When a light bulb is fused, whose responsibility is it? Is it the tenants to report it to a particular Department or are there personnel within the Housing Agency that go and check this out so that these tenants can at least be informed and know what it is that they have to do?

1735 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, first of all, let me say that I have not heard of the problem in terms of my staff coming to me to say, ‘Minister, who is responsible for this or for that in terms of light bulbs?’

I do know that... I imagine, common sense tells me, that if a tenant spots that all of a sudden his area is dark because a light bulb is fused, then that tenant probably will report it. If that tenant does not, maybe others will or maybe our own people as they drive through the estate. As I said earlier, if they spot it, the likelihood is that they are not going to go driving through there at 11.00 p.m., so it would probably would depend on the tenants letting us know. That is all I can say to him at this point.

1740 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the Hon. Minister assure me that he will undertake... because I am informed by tenants, for example, the one I gave on Mid Harbour Estate, that some time during the month of January they reported fused light bulbs which rendered a certain degree of darkness that made it difficult for them to access their homes at night time, especially if, unfortunately, the lift was out of order and they had to walk up this dark stairwell. They have reported the matter at some stage during the month of January – I do not know the exact date – and in the middle of March the repairs have still not been undertaken.

1745 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is wrong and, as far as I can, I will avoid this happening in the future, Mr Speaker.

1750 Hon. E J Reyes: I am very grateful for the Minister agreeing that it is wrong and I take his personal assurance that this will be remedied as soon as possible, in some cases as a matter of urgency.

1755 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I move that this House now adjourn until half past three.

1760 Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members?
This House will adjourn until 3.30 p.m. this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 12.50 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.30 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Western Beach pollution problems Technical explanation

Clerk: Answers to Oral Questions continue.
Question 265/2012, the Hon. S M Figueras.

5 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, will the Minister with responsibility for the Environment provide details of the technical explanations received as to why previous solutions have not worked to solve the Western Beach problem as reportedly discussed at the Chief Minister's meeting with the La Línea Mayor, Ms Gemma Araujo?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, may I first apologise for my voice. I am suffering from a cold.

I will answer this Question together with Question 266.

15
Western Beach pollution problems
Discussions with Mayor of La Línea

20 Clerk: Question 266.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in light of the meeting held by the Chief Minister with the La Línea Mayor, Gemma Araujo, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether any agreement has been reached with the said Mayor in respect of progressing towards a solution to the Western Beach pollution issue?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

30 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the technical solution to this issue is that the illegally polluted discharges from the storm water drain should not discharge into the sea. In order for this to occur, La Línea needs to be able to invest in works to their system.

The poor state of the La Línea economy has made an investment of this nature almost impossible, even though the present Mayor would clearly like to be in a position to do so. Government has concluded that, under the circumstances, pursuing a solution with the regional authority, as was the previous administration's preference, will not lead to this.

35 It has, therefore, decided that it is Spain's central government that needs to be made responsible and pressed for a solution, and an official complaint will be lodged with the EU to this effect.

40 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his answer. However, he has failed to address the point of what technical solutions have not worked previous to this meeting.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The fact is that the technical solutions would be almost impossible in one respect, in the sense that they are illegal connections to the storm drain and the technical solution would be to cut off those illegal connections.

45 Also, any works which would have to be carried out to take the effluent from the point at which they enter the sea to a point far enough away where they would not cause contamination would be more costly than it appears the La Línea authorities are able to cost. Those are the solutions, of which one is very difficult because it is a question of illegal connections and, obviously, the costs that that will incur.

50 It is not for me to make excuses for the La Línea authorities; I am just reporting the facts.

Hon. S M Figueras: Just by way of an aside to this matter, I have been made aware in the last few days of what appears to be some works in the area of that storm drain. I wonder whether the Minister is aware of any action being taken at this time?

55 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I am not aware and if they have decided to progress any works then, obviously, we would welcome that, but that does not come to us officially. They may be works which are not related to that, even though they are in the area, but certainly I will endeavour to find out as soon as possible.

60 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just, in terms of information... the Government has also been made aware of those works.

65 They do not appear to be of the nature that would suggest that they are designed to deal with the problem, although they may be designed to deal with ancillary problems arising in that storm drain.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister for his participation in the answer.

I understand that this is a matter that has complicated cross-border – what is the word I am looking for? (Interjection) – dimensions to it. Thank you.

70 However, in January, we were told that the matter was being reviewed, that legal advice had been sought and then, in February, that the advice had been received and was being considered and would be considered – and I quote – ‘for a considerable length of time’.

75 Obviously now, in light of this meeting, and the decision that the Government appears to have taken in respect of the matter, would the Minister agree with me that it is now of the highest priority to pursue this complaint with the central government in Madrid, to try and progress the matter before the bathing season is upon us?

80 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, in 2010 – I was not a member of this Parliament, but I have checked Hansard in relation to my preparation for this Question – the then Government was not sure what the source of the pollution was. In 2011, when the issue was raised again by the then Opposition, it had become clear to them that it was pollution proceeding from this drain in the La Línea area, and the Government at the time was of the opinion that it had to proceed with discussion with the regional authority first, and then consider taking legal action.

85 I am aware, from my officials, that certain steps were taken, but they were made aware also that it was unlikely that the regional authorities were going to take any steps, and that is where it was left. When I came into my responsibilities for the environment, we wanted to confirm that those steps with the regional authorities were not going to get us anywhere, hence the discussions with the Mayor of La Línea and that was within two and a half months of our coming into office. Within about a month, we have now got all the documentation, all the data, updated.

90 I have seen the reports today and I am having a meeting with Mr Llamas next week, in order to make the complaint with the EU in the shortest possible time. It is, in fact, imminent.

95 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I commend the Hon. Minister for the action that is being taken in respect of this matter, which is obviously one of great concern to the community. Is he in a position, however, to say to this House whether he anticipates the problem will be solved in a specific timeframe, or is this simply just out of his hands and the community will be, unfortunately, without resolution in this matter for some time to come?

100 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I do not want to waste the Parliament’s time in looking for the precise quote, when a similar question was asked a year ago of the then Chief Minister, but it is unlikely that this will be resolved in a very short space of time.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for...

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister with responsibility for the Environment provide this House with details in relation to the ape population in Gibraltar, broken down by births, deaths and location over the last four years?

115 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand to him.

Barbary apes
Plans for dealing with problems

125

Clerk: Question 268, the Hon. S M Figueras.

130 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm what plans, if any, have been put in place by his Government, beyond what was already in place on the 8th December 2011, to deal with the issues faced on a daily basis by many members of the community arising from the size, distribution and behaviour of the Barbary ape population?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

135 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 269.

140

Barbary apes
Plans for population management and anticipated cost

Clerk: Question 269.

145 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment provide details of his Government's policy for the management of the Barbary ape population in Gibraltar, as well as further details of costs of the measures anticipated?

150 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no new systems have yet been introduced since December 2011, although contracted staff continue to attend when called. However, complaints in the past three months have been few.

The Government's policy for the future management of the Barbary Macaques is based on the Barbary 155 Macaque Management Plan, which was presented to the then Chief Minister in the autumn of 2009, but which was never agreed nor implemented by the then Government.

This plan was prepared by representatives of the Gibraltar Veterinary Clinic, the Gibraltar Ornithological and Natural History Society, and the Department of the Environment, with the involvement of the Gibraltar Tourist Board.

160 The plan will be updated and re-costed, following consultation with the team that prepared the plan and with Prof. Agustín Fuentes of Notre Dame University, Indiana, who is a world expert on Macaques and has worked in Gibraltar.

165 Prof. Fuentes is currently in the field in the Far East and will visit Gibraltar shortly. Once the plan has been updated, it will be made public. However, I can say that the main components will be improving the sites on the Upper Rock, increasing on-site supervision, observation and data collection, contraception and, as far as possible, exportation.

170 Hon. S M Figueras: In the context of the exportation of the apes, is the Minister able to confirm whether there are any willing entities which have been identified to receive any of the Barbary apes?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, in fact, there was an entity which, for possible commercial reasons, I will not name, but I am happy to give the information to the hon. Member outside this House.

175 There were approaches from one entity in the United Kingdom, which did not come to fruition, and we have re-engaged with them to see whether there are possibilities and the possibility of sending Macaques back to North Africa. Tunisia, possibly, now that the political situation there has changed, and Morocco, certainly, are still being considered and contacts are once again being made, with a view to the possibility of sending some of our surplus animals to North Africa.

180 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister able to commit to a period of time during which this may occur?

185 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, at this stage, I am not. It is a complex issue. Particularly in North Africa, there are many different levels of authorities there that have to be engaged, and at this point in time, it is too early. But I will share that information with this House as soon as anything is certain, because I think it is something which is in the interest of the whole community.

Hon. S M Figueras: Has the Hon. Minister managed to overcome the issues that the previous administration was facing in respect of the exportation – the practical aspects of the exportation of the apes?

190 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: This is a problem that I have personally been dealing with through several administrations, and the problems are not yet overcome.

195 The problems are several. I have no problem with sharing them with the House. One is the inability, or difficulty, of getting them through the land frontier, and the other is the fact that none of the airlines currently servicing Gibraltar will take animals on their flights. Therefore, one has to resort to either transport by sea, which could be very long and not satisfactory for animals in boxes, or chartering of aircraft, which are issues which obviously increase the cost of any such exportation.

In the discussions with the UK entity, it would be hoped that, perhaps, there could be co-funding. In the question of North Africa we have not got that far yet.

200 Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister confident, then, that the issues arising from the practical exportation of the apes are ones that will be overcome in due time?

205 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, inasmuch as when the present Minister was working in a non-governmental organisation, even though for a long time there was a lot of goodwill from the Government at the time, I was not personally in a position to move certain things that I hope, as a Minister, and with the backing of my colleagues in the Cabinet, I will be able to make some inroads. But, obviously, the proof of the pudding, as the saying goes, will be in the eating.

Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister able to confirm to this House whether or not – and I understand you 210 are in the early stages of discussing the matter with the UK entity in question – they are interested in sufficiently large numbers of the population, as would make a significant impact on the local population?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, they are.

215 The discussions, as far as I was involved with the previous administration, although mainly with the Hon. Mr Britto – who is not here in this Chamber any longer and is now lucky enough to have time to be on the stage, which is something I will not be doing for a while, I suspect – the intention was that they would take one group, initially, of up to 30 animals, followed by a second group of up to 30 animals and, quite frankly, if we were able to export two groups like that, the situation would be back to a very manageable level. So it would be useful if we could pull it off.

220 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I suspect that this House will be as close as we both get to the stage for some time to come!

I am grateful to the Minister for his answer.

225 In relation to the numbers, is the Government committed to a specific number in relation to the management of the population?

230 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, numbers will not necessarily solve the problem. The aim of successive Governments, ever since Prof. Bob Martin, then of Zurich University, now of Chicago Field Museum, carried out his survey some years ago, I forget the exact year, the recommendation was that 180 should be the maximum number and the number at the moment is about – give or take – five animals per group. It is not possible to be exact, you are always going to miss some, and I am referring to the schedule from the previous question – the number is now down to about 186.

235 But it is not just numbers, as such, because if you have one group of 30 animals, which are stable and they are on the Upper Rock, then that is not going to be a problem. You could have a smaller group of 10 or 15 animals that decide to roam, and then you are going to get a problem. So it is not just the absolute numbers, but the composition and their behaviour. Although the numbers are approximately what the scientists say we should have, the question is now where those numbers are and that is where the management issues come in.

240 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps you will indulge me just one question which may perhaps include an element of speculation and the Minister will decide whether or not he chooses to answer it.

If for any reason, practical, economical, or otherwise, the Government were unable to move on the process of exporting up to, say, 60 Barbary Macaques, how would the Government propose to deal with the population, as it grows, in the light of their stated position on culling?

245 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I think there was an argument about speculation earlier on in this session. I am not going to accept failure at this stage.

All I can do is confirm that we can control movements, we can control the problem of where the animals go to, without culling, and that would be our aim, if we could not export.

250 Controlling the way they – ‘control’ is a very strong word, you cannot really control a wild animal, but manage in such a way that the likelihood of them coming into contact with areas of human habitation would be reduced. We are not contemplating culling.

255 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the only reason why I asked the question is because, if their likeness on warning signs all over the Upper Rock is to be believed, the Barbary macaque is a dangerous wild animal and there have been stated instances of attacks on the human population which, of course, have been discussed in this House in previous sessions.

260 It is a concern, certainly from this side of the House – and I fully believe that it is shared across the floor – that incidents of that nature should be, as far as possible, a thing of the past and it is this side of the House’s position that the policy of not culling at all, no matter what, may lead us to a situation where it is not manageable. Hence the question, but I do completely concede that it involves speculation.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I have no problem in commenting on that. It is not the numbers, it is what the animals are doing, it is where they are, it is the interaction, it is the way people interact with them. It is normally people who cause the bites, not the animals. So what we have to control is the man-Barbary 265 macaque interface and the management plans that we are going to be introducing will tackle that, regardless of the numbers.

270 You can have one group of 20 monkeys and, if they are treated in the wrong way and they are in the wrong place, they are going to bite. I can say that there is scientific research, which I do not have here – I could, if I had had notice – which indicates that the percentage of bites in Gibraltar is the lowest of that in any population where monkeys and humans come together. That research, in fact, has been carried out by Prof. Fuentes, who will shortly be here on his way back from the Far East to advise us further.

275 Hon. S M Figueras: The plans for management, which the Hon. Minister has just referred to, is there a timescale on that?

280 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, we are starting our consultation process on the question of the Upper Rock management within the next two weeks and the question of the Barbary Macaques will be considered in tandem with the rest of the Upper Rock, so I think we would be able to have something in place within the next, maybe, three or four months. I am not going to be held to that timescale, but that is the timescale that I would like to see and the way I see it, as it is developing at the moment.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to enlighten this House, as to the kind of cost that the Government is contemplating is almost the ceiling in this matter?

285 The Hon. the Chief Minister did refer in a question in a session in 2009 to the fact that the then administration needed to take stock and invest a significant amount of money in this particular issue. Has the Minister or the Government taken a moment to consider where the ceiling might be in relation to those costs?

290 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I have an idea of the cost, but because it depends on which final model of management we follow and because I still think we could benefit from our external adviser, I do not feel I am in a position to offer any actual figure at this stage but, as soon as we have an idea, then, obviously I would be able to do so. I do not think it would be correct for me... It is too early a stage now to be able to commit myself to figures.

295 Hon. S M Figueras: If Mr Speaker will indulge me with one more supplementary on the matter – the Hon. the Chief Minister in this very House, some years ago, referred to having not been gutless for a long time and therefore not an avid beachgoer...

300 I am not gutless and have not been for as long as I can recall and if my gut ever had that loud a say in my life, I would scarcely leave the house. That said, I am an avid beachgoer and I am interested whether the Minister can enlighten us as to whether the complaints received, although low in number, have been in respect of the Catalan Bay area at all? (Interjection)

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it has been mooted, in fact only this morning to me, that the Barbary Macaques might well be members of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party because, since the Election, there have been remarkably few complaints.

305 I have seen them myself in the area of the Caleta Hotel and I have seen them myself in the Trafalgar cemetery area, but I have not had any direct complaints, bar possibly two.

310 Mr Feetham will be amused that they came to me via Facebook, (Laughter) of Barbary Macaques in built-up areas, but I would like to credit the people who manage them who, perhaps being former colleagues of mine, they are putting in an extra bit of work, or perhaps the Macaques are Party members, if not of the GSLP, maybe of the Liberals. (Interjections and laughter) I thought I would throw that in. But the complaints are certainly much lower than they have been.

315 Hon. S M Figueras: And just to bring the tone of the conversation right back to the seriousness with which, obviously, we consider the matter, is the Government content to stand by its policy not to cull, if that means the possibility of facing fatalities or injuries in future?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Government is content to stand by its policy of not culling, because we are not going to have a problem, once we have put in the proper management structures, which have not ever existed in Gibraltar.

320 Hon. S M Figueras: As long as that is a guarantee with somewhat more strength than the Future Job Strategy, thank you and I am very grateful. (Laughter)

Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker –

325 Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: The Hon. Minister, in his answer to Question 269, referred us back to the schedule he offered on 267.

330 When it says here ‘Year’ and it says, for example, 2011-12, and then 2012-13, are we talking about financial years or when does a year – is it 1st April like a financial year, or when would the year come in? I am a bit confused.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I think by looking up the last entry, the thing is that the young of the year are added to the total on 1st January.

335 Because they are born round about October and there are some deaths, we do not add – the contractors used to be me, but it isn’t me any longer – the contractors do not add – the numbers until, for example, 1st January, so in the case, for example... Let us look at the first one: we are talking about 2008, although the actual figures, when you tally up, would be on 1st January 2009, so the births were in 2008, but the number is added in 2009, so look at the first figure, rather than the last figure.

340 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister advise this House whether he is aware of what the nature of the complaints are? He has stated that there are few, but does he know what the nature of the complaints are?

345 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: They were not complaints as such, other than being advised that there were Macaques in built-up areas and people are often scared of them, but I have not... I cannot recall anything specific that has happened in the past of them getting into people’s houses.

I am not saying it has not happened, I am just saying that I have not been aware of any such complaints, but that does not mean it could not happen tomorrow or as I speak. Remember, we have not implemented the programme yet.

350 Clerk: Question 2...

Mr Speaker: Hon. Damon Bossino.

355 Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Which authority would normally be the authority that would be in receipt of those complaints? Can the Minister advise me what the position is?

360 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There have, in the past, as part of the management programme – we would like to streamline that – but in the past, phone calls could come in to the Royal Gibraltar Police, to officials of the Department of the Environment, to members of the macaque team of the Natural History Society, including myself personally, so there is a wide range of different sources of complaints, which would then all be channelled to the Department of the Environment. Those are the main sources.

We would like to have something like a hot line or something like that, but that would be part of the plan.

365 Hon. D J Bossino: The important issue I wanted to address from my question was that it would be channelled to your... to the Minister’s Department?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, indeed.

370 Hon. D J Bossino: If it has, then I am satisfied with that answer.

Hon. D A Feetham: There has been no-one referred to hospital, because of any incidents with Macaques? I do recall a letter from Ray Pilley, referring to a girl who had been badly injured as a consequence. There have been no incidents of that nature, has there?

375 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There may have been people who are bitten, who will normally go to the hospital and they keep a register. If any of the hon. Members wish to ask me, for a future occasion, how many bites there have been, but I do not have that information. (Interjection)

I am told that was before the Election, so obviously –

380 Hon. D J Bossino: What was? The incident? (Interjections)

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No. Nonetheless important. (Interjections)

385 Hon. S M Figueras: [Inaudible] ...Mr Speaker the management of the apes today. This is what we are discussing. [Inaudible] This is precisely why it is very important to have this discussion in this House.

Clerk: Question 2 –

390 Hon. G H Licudi: Just to dispel any notion or any misunderstanding, my recollection of the letter that the Hon. Mr Feetham has referred to was, in fact, in relation to a fictitious incident that he created simply to illustrate a particular point, but it was entirely fictitious.

395 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if I could assist the House and concur with what the Hon. the Minister is saying, I think that was just an introductory paragraph in Mr Pilley's letter, in order to create alarm, initially, and therefore create, I suspect – I have not spoken to the author – but to create the interest in what he was saying. I would agree with that.

So I am not sure he was referring to any specific incident, whether before or after the new dawn arrived.

400

Seagull population
Management and control policy

405 Clerk: Question 270, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Minister need not wince; I am not armed with a barrage of supplementaries on this one! (Laughter)

410 Can the Minister with responsibility for the Environment confirm the Government's policy in relation to the management and control of the seagull population?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

415 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Figueras can ask me as many supplementaries as he likes, but if my voice runs out before the Hon. Mrs Ellul has a chance to ask me any questions, then I might have to get somebody else to read my answers!

Mr Speaker, the existing year-round culling programme will continue with enhanced resources currently under discussion with the service providers.

420 Government inherited a four-year programme from the previous administration which is run by the UK's Food and Environment Research Agency (FERA). This is the last year in this programme, which has now been considerably streamlined and will factor in an element of handing over and training to the local operation, which will take over in full.

New technologies, which have proved very successful elsewhere, will also be introduced this year. The Government is committed for the long-term control and reduction of the gull population.

425 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to enlighten us in respect of the identity of the local operators who will be taking this matter on?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, the local operators who have been operating the Gull Control Unit for the last 15 years are the Gibraltar Ornithological and Natural History Society (GONHS).

430 Hon. S M Figueras: In respect to the cost, which has obviously been in the questioning, is the Minister able to assist us in respect of the anticipated cost moving forward of this operation versus perhaps what has gone before?

435 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I would have had to have notice to give you details of cost. I can pass them over to you outside the meeting if you like, but I do not have that information here.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, if he wants notice of the question, we will ask it in a month's time. It really is not contentious in any way.

440 But I have noticed in my walks in the Upper Rock that there appear to be a very large number of feral cats. I wonder what the Government proposes to do about feral cats (Laughter) and whether he thinks there is an impact, or a potential impact, on wildlife.

445 I think also that he and I have spoken in the past about the resident population of goats: what is the Government to do about the goats, because he knows that we have spoken, as well, in the past about the possible re-introduction of the Iberian ibex, (Laughter) which is not possible, unless something is done about the herd of domestic goats that are running wild in the Upper Rock.

Mr Speaker: I am not sure there is a connection between feral cats and goats and seagulls, but if the Minister wishes to – (Interjections)

450 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I fall into the temptation of giving a lecture on the wildlife of the Upper Rock, (Laughter) then we might be here for several days, let alone...!

I am happy to answer specific questions in future, but opening a discussion on those subjects, (Mr Speaker: Yes.) I think is...

455 But we can talk about it outside – the second person today who has offered your – (Interjection)

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mrs –

460 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain how is GONHS going to be taking over the service that was introduced by the UK? What measures will be taken – any new ones?

465 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Right, yes, there will be a considerable amount of training which, for the first time, has been organised by the people from FERA, the Food and Environment Research Agency, with the Control Unit here, with a view to, depending on the success, expanding the size of the Unit.

470 The question of new technologies, we will be trying and GONHS will be trained in this new technology, which is the use of lasers to disrupt gulls at their breeding colonies, which means they will abandon the nests. Then there will not be the number of young, which is obviously a problem, and eventually, if this is successful – it has been tried in the UK but never outside the UK, perhaps in the United States – then it may be possible to reduce the population of gulls without resorting to killing them directly, which would be the ideal situation.

475 Dementia and Alzheimer patients
Policy re care provision

Clerk: Question 271, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

480 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what the policy, in conjunction with the Care Agency is 'to further and adequately increase the overall provision for Dementia and Alzheimer patients' as outlined in their press release number 32 of 17th January 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

485 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Ministers with responsibility for Health, Social Services and the Care Agency have commissioned a multi-agency team, which will work in regular consultation with relevant non-governmental organisations and which will report by the end of the summer on a strategy to address the core needs of those with dementia.

490 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain if he has plans to boost the community health service and domiciliary care?

495 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is highly likely that the conclusions of this group, this multi-agency team – as I have declared in conversations and possibly even publicly – will be that the community will be well-benefited by increasing health care in the community, including domiciliary care.

I do not want to pre-empt the results, but I think it is very clear to those of us – both the Minister for Equality and Social Services and myself have discussed it at length – that it will, most likely, be necessary for us to take considerable steps in the community.

500 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware that the domiciliary care funding increased by about 400% over the last five years to £750,000? By how much does he envisage, or would like to see, the domiciliary care budget increase this year?

505 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, domiciliary care is handled by another ministry. I do not have insight – although we discuss regularly – obviously, I do not have insight into the proposed budgets and so on. I cannot answer that. All I can say is that we hope to be able to expand it, but I cannot go into figures at that stage. I do not have that information.

510

King George V Hospital
Breakdown of expenditure

515 Clerk: Question 272, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain how the £70,000 has been spent at the KGV Hospital, broken down by painting of the building, erection and hire of scaffolding and purchase of new equipment and furniture for the KGV?

520 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that information. Could the Minister extend a copy of that schedule to the Members opposite?

540

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you.

Royal Naval Hospital site
Explanation of plans

550

Clerk: Question 273, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what changes will be made to the former Royal Naval Hospital site and to the plans for the internal buildings of the new mental health hospital and of the new Alzheimer and Dementia hospital?

555

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as this is something in which my colleague, the Hon. Minister for Equality and Social Services, and I are working together, with your permission, we will answer this Question in two parts. (Mr Speaker: Yes.) My colleague will start on her side of the project, and I will continue on mine.

Mr Speaker: Certainly.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, with regard to the Alzheimer and Dementia Unit, as I have said in previous sessions of Parliament, a review of the initial proposed 80-bed facility for the site of the Royal Naval Hospital was commenced very shortly after this Government began in office. It was very evident that the facility fell short of UK minimum standards, even taking into account the conversion of existing buildings into this type of facility.

I can at this stage say that the number of beds will be reduced to incorporate communal facilities to allow residents accommodation in the facility to have quality of life. The final layout of the interior has not yet been finalised, as we are awaiting input from experts.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will now continue on my half. I have a little bit more because we have been able to proceed further on the mental health.

Regarding the Mental Health facility, the plans were incomplete and had not been approved by the professionals. The professional team has now reviewed all aspects and I was pleased to be able to sign off proper plans last month.

The area designated for Mental Health will be divided into three main zones: first is the Activity and Rehabilitation Centre zone, which will include a small garden area attached to the back of block D, the area will consist of activity for daily living, kitchen, assessment room, arts and crafts room, IT facilities room, bookable rooms for conducting groups, sitting room, quiet area and dining room.

Second, the Psychiatric Unit zone on the lower ground floor will consist of main entrance, reception security area, visitors' facilities, consisting of a visitation area, cafeteria offering sheltered employment facilities and seating area, multi-disciplinary team room, resource room, medical records storage room, clinical nurse manager's office, pharmacy department, disabled toilet facilities, technical services workshop, staff facilities, outpatient department, workshops, general stores, medical equipment stores, domestic equipment store and boiler room.

The upper ground floor, which will be for enduring mental health illness (EMI) and a Dementia unit, will consist of seven twin rooms with 14 beds... clearly, dining area, lounge/TV area, quiet rooms, male and female assisted bathrooms, male and female toilet and shower rooms, staff office, staff base, multi-disciplinary team room, clinic room, utilities sluice room, clean linen store, staff WC, food preparation room, dishwasher room, ward kitchenette and covered terrace.

On the first floor will be the Rehab Unit and the rehab apartments divided into two sections by a lobby. The first section with four twin-bedrooms, four single bedrooms, one high dependency bedroom with 13 beds, lounge/TV area, quiet room, assisted bathroom, male and female toilet and shower room, staff office, staff base, clinic room, utilities sluice room, clean linen store, staff toilet, ward kitchenette and covered terrace, including a dining area.

The second section of this floor will have the Psychiatric Intensive Care Unit, which will consist of three single rooms and en suite facilities, a staff base, two high dependency rooms, dining area, lounge/TV area, covered terrace area and also a self-contained multi-functional suite, composed of two single rooms, dining area, lounge/TV area, toilet and shower facilities.

And, finally, the external recreational area, which is still in the process of being designed; however, it will be a secure area divided into two sections, in order to be able to offer a safe environment to the various client groups. It will contain sheltered areas, a splash pool, an aviary, a one-on-one basketball court, exterior exercise equipment, group seating, picnic chair and table facilities.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker. Could we possibly have a copy of that. (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly.)

Could the Minister advise what additional costs these changes will incur?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have not got that information with me now. Again, I would need notice of that in order to be able to give you the specific details.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise what is different to the original plans that were there?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There were no plans that had been approved. They were working plans. They had not been finalised by the professionals. The main difference is that the rooms will, in fact, be bigger than had originally been planned.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he confirm whether there are going to be any additional costs because, of course, it is quite possible that you may actually change around internal layouts from what was originally envisaged, but there be no additional costs? Does he know whether there are going to be additional costs, without actually telling this House what that additional cost is?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The original costs have not ever been communicated to me, so I am not able to compare one with the other. So I am not able to answer that question. The original estimates cannot have been very accurate because the plans had not been finalised.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, that does not necessarily follow, but we will ask the question again in the future.

But what about the hon. Lady, can she tell us whether the change of plans that she envisages in relation to the areas that are within her responsibility will involve an increase in cost; and can she inform the House as to what those costs are?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I cannot inform the House as to the costs because the plans have not yet been finalised.

What I would speculate is that some cost would be incurred but, in proportionate terms, Mr Speaker, it would be desirable to incur some cost and have a better finished product than incur the tremendous cost that will be incurred, in any event, ending up with a product that will not be fit for purpose. At this stage, I am not able to provide any figures on costs because we do not have the plans, therefore we cannot calculate from there.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, could the hon. Lady advise who the proper consultants are who they have engaged in relation to advice on the Alzheimer's and Dementia Unit?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not have the name of the consultant. It is people in the Department who are liaising with this consultant. I know that they are people who were recommended to us by the local Alzheimer and Dementia Society, who gave us some contact details for the UK Association and they recommended us with some names. I am not sure who, from the list of names has been selected, but I am happy for the question to be asked on the next occasion.

If I were to have notice of the question, Mr Speaker, I would be happy to answer it.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Lady, the Minister for Social Services... because she said that, in the new plans for the Dementia and Alzheimer Hospital the number of beds will come down from 80, but what she did not say was to what number will the new plans cater for. Does she have that figure available?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, that is because I do not know because I am waiting for the final plans to be confirmed by the specialists in the UK.

What we have identified, as I explained, Mr Speaker, in the last session of Parliament, was that initially the plan was for a 66-bed unit. That was changed four times, eventually going up to a 90 something bed unit and then going back down to 80, which was the sort of structure that I saw when I went to visit the unit in my second day in office and which I was told by the local people that would not be fit of purpose. I gave plenty of detail as to that on the last occasion and, in fact, I have asked for the costs of the consequences of having changed the plans four times by the previous administration and I am actually waiting for those figures.

But the answer is that there is no final plan for the interior yet because we are waiting for the feedback.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I can accept that there are no final plans, in terms of final plans being the exact minutiae of details of work that needs to be done, but the hon. Lady does not need final plans in a construction project to be able to tell us, and for her to know now, what the number of beds would be.

The hon. Lady says, for instance, that the previous Government changed its mind four times: she should be congratulating the GSD Government for only changing its mind four times (Laughter) because, if the hon. Lady knew anything about the construction industry, she would know that, with any particular construction project, the Government normally changes it mind many times, architects change their minds many times, engineers change their mind many times and the actual contractor involved in the works changes his mind. So it is a matter of record that we only changed four times.

Leaving that aside, it is not credible for the hon. Lady to stand up saying that she needs final plans to know what the final numbers of beds is because we knew, in the four times that she was mentioning, the number of beds that were going to be available with our final plans – that is the reality of the construction industry.

So will the hon. Lady not try and get the information as to what will be the final number of beds, regardless of having final plans?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, once I have the cost to the taxpayer of those four changes, then people can decide whether to congratulate the previous administration for those changes. (Laughter) I suspect not, because I suspect, given the information... (Interjection) Well, given the information that I have, Mr Speaker, the reasons for changing the plans was motivated by increasing the number of beds, having no regard to the needs of the patients.

Mr Speaker, what we have done, in principle, is revert to the initial plans that the architects prepared for the previous administration, which was for a 66-bed unit. What we are waiting for is for the experts to tell us whether the layout is acceptable or not, because it may be very well, Mr Speaker, for us to have a room where we want to fit a bed but then, if the hoist or the armchair or the wardrobe do not fit into the room, then the plans cannot be finalised. I therefore cannot say whether I can have one room with one bed or it may be better to have a bigger room with two beds, in which case there is a difference in the number of rooms and, ultimately, there will be a difference in the number of beds available.

The answer, Mr Speaker, is that until we have the final professional advice, I cannot answer the question. All I can say is that, at the moment, we have reverted to the initial 66-bed plan.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain their idea behind developing extra buildings to serve as sheltered accommodation for patients with long-term mental illness? Will this also be done in conjunction with the plans for the new mental health hospital?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Are you referring to something specifically in what –

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: In the... No, no, sorry.
In your manifesto commitment as part of the new mental health facility.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Can you refer me exactly to... I am sure I know –

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: It says:

‘Extra buildings to serve as sheltered accommodation for patients with long-term mental illness...’

on page 29, the second to last sentence. Sorry, no.

‘We are committed to the completion of a new KGV facility and will also develop extra buildings to serve as sheltered accommodation for patients with long-term mental illness in a position to look after themselves.’

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There are additional buildings on that site, but whether that will fulfil all the requirements of the community, we are hoping that the exercise that I have heard referred to earlier on another question as we develop the Dementia strategy, then we will identify what those requirements will be. They could be somewhere else.

Consultants' contract
Update on progress

730

Clerk: Question 274, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

735

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health state at what stage he is at in relation to the Consultants' contract and when does he envisage it will be finalised and signed as per their manifesto commitment 'to resolve the issue of the Consultants' contracts in the shortest time possible'?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

740

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the consultants' contract was first drafted in 2004 and, by December 2011, had arrived at version 19B. The GHA has now updated the draft and will very soon be in active negotiations with its consultant doctors. The consultants have been kept aware of the situation through regular meetings.

745

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am obliged for that, Mr Speaker.
Can the Minister explain if the starting point at resolving the consultants' contract impasse is draft contract 19B?

750

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, that was the finishing point of the last administration. Ours is the new contract draft 1, which incorporates some of the things that were being negotiated at the time, together with other issues which we feel would be to our mutual benefit but, obviously, before the start of negotiation, I am not going to be able to reveal those publicly.

755

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain if he we will be considering including a recruitment and retainment allowance within the contract?

760

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I do not feel that I should go specifically into items of a contract just before we are going to negotiate them with a consultant body. I do not think it would be in our interest, or in the interest of the consultants, that we should start discussing this in public.

765

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but perhaps the Minister could, in general terms, give an indication of what aspects of the contract will be standardised across all the consultants and which ones will be variable, if possible?

770

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Different consultants will have different disciplines in which they will work. Some of them will have a number of consultants in the same field and some of them may have rarely one, possibly two consultants. So, obviously, when it comes to cover, and so on, there may be different conditions, but I do not want to be drawn into giving away a negotiating position because, as I said before, I do not think this would be fair on the process, as it is in everybody's interest that the consultants should have a contract which is acceptable to them and acceptable to the Government so they can stop worrying about that and get on with doing the work that we want them to do for the community.

775

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that.
One final supplementary question, Mr Speaker. Did you state when you envisaged the contract would be finalised and if the process has already started in earnest?

780

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The draft contract is now ready and we hope to be starting negotiation within a number of weeks only.

Hospital meals
Update on improvements

785

Clerk: Question 275, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

790

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what the new arrangements for hospital meals will be, as per their manifesto commitment to 'make alternative arrangements to improve the delivery of meals and consequently their quality'?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

795

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a proposal presented by the catering department to revert to bulk meals service at St Bernard's Hospital has been approved and initial discussions have taken place in order to phase in this service. This has already been introduced as a highly successful trial at the newly opened Calpe Ward.

800

A feasibility study to relocate the catering facility to St Bernard's Hospital has also been commissioned and is progressing well. This project will encompass the introduction of bulk food distribution.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain why there was a problem with the provision of meals in St Bernard's Hospital?

805

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, at this point I would like to congratulate the catering staff of St Bernard's Hospital. They have always been very concerned that hospital meals have not had a good name, despite their excellent professionalism. They have a catering manager who is extremely highly qualified and extremely competent and a very dedicated staff, but the method by which the food was delivered to the wards meant that all their efforts could well be spoilt in the process. The problem is with the plating system, in that the food is prepared in the kitchen and is then put onto plates and put into trolleys and then carried by van in two stages to St Bernard's Hospital and then, from there, wheeled into the wards. So, by the end of the process, the food was no longer as fresh as it had been when prepared and, therefore, that was a problem.

810

By bulk food, we are referring to the way in which the food is prepared in larger containers and then served at the point of consumption. Therefore, the quality of the food, which is very high, will actually be high on point of delivery whereas, in the process at this point in time, it does lose because of the system that is in operation.

815

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain, then, where the kitchens will be sited within the Hospital and what will be happening to the existing catering facility on the North Mole?

820

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we are carrying out an exercise at the moment with a team of the Health Authority and the support of Technical Services. A number of alternative locations within the Hospital are being considered. I am not able now to say exactly where. It will not affect any of the existing facilities, in the sense that we are not moving anybody out to move a kitchen in. There is spare room available in and adjacent to the building.

825

As to what would happen at the North Mole, I am not in a position to say that because, frankly, I do not know.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Minister have an idea what the cost of this initiative will amount to at this stage?

830

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, we are engaging with the catering department, as I have said, with management of the Hospital and with Technical Services. They now know the surface area that they require, the different sections that they require and so on, but because the site is not exactly... although we have a fair idea of where it will go, we are not yet at the point of knowing exactly how much it will cost. I think that we will be able to know... I think, again, it is a matter of weeks before we know that.

835

The discussions are well on their way.

Gibraltar Health Authority
General Medical Council registration

Clerk: Question 276, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain how their policy on ensuring all GHA doctors are GMC registered will work?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have met with the Medical Registration Board and we are working together in drafting new legislation to encompass this. We have also taken steps to meet with GMC representatives to explore details of how we can establish a system. I will be able to report further once these discussions have taken place.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but could the Minister give us an indication of how he will be outsourcing to the GMC the assessment of doctors in Gibraltar to practice? Is there some initial idea of how the GMC could become Gibraltar's regulatory body in practice?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Not yet, Mr Speaker.

We have only very recently – I met with the Board, I think it was about two weeks ago – made contact with the GMC. I need to discuss it with the Medical Registration Board and we have now sent out... we have made contact now with a view to meeting with them and discussing with them but, obviously we have to be professional enough to await our discussions before I say anything publicly because they will have their views, we will have ours. I am confident that we will be able to marry the two and come up with a way of meeting our manifesto commitment to the satisfaction not just of the doctors, but also of the Health Service of the community as a whole, which needs to be confident that the doctors are properly regulated.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, this is a policy move I do support, to ensure that all doctors practising in Gibraltar should be, and are, GMC registered.

Can the Minister explain if all doctors practising in Gibraltar, including in the private sector, will also require GMC registration and yearly re-registration?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Again, I cannot speak for the GMC, but certainly the intention I think that the community, as a whole, should be confident that all doctors practising in Gibraltar, both within the Health Authority and outside, are properly regulated to the standards of the GMC. So I think that, on this one, we agree.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And, finally, Mr Speaker, what will now be the role of the Gibraltar Medical Registration Board, which is chaired by the Director of Public Health? Will its role change or will it be taking on any of the GMC's roles?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: We will have to await the discussions of the GMC before I am able to reply to that question. We are just initiating contact. We need to see how we will work and I just do not know. Hopefully, in a couple of months' time, if you ask me again, I will have some indication.

Surgical services Day surgery

Clerk: Question 277, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain their manifesto commitment, outlined on their Health page, under 'Day Surgery', of: we will be 'looking into operating a day case unit for surgical services’?

895 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, ‘looking into operating a day case unit for surgical services’ will entail reviewing all aspects of day surgery within the GHA so that we can optimise the use of resources available within theatres and look at opportunities in widening the range of treatments provided on this basis. We plan to look into all aspects that relate to this service and this includes facilities, management of the unit, operational procedures, activity, current practices and quality measures.

The aim is to expand the Day Surgery Service as much as possible, without the need for overnight admission.

905 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in the Hon. Minister’s answer to my Written Question number 69/2012, the Minister stated that the Day Case Surgery Clinic was first introduced by the GHA on 24th February 2005.

910 Was the Minister not aware that a Day Case Surgery Service had already been in existence for these last six years, when his party was writing their manifesto?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The sad thing is that the Day Surgery facilities are not operating to the extent that, certainly, I would like or to the extent that I think would benefit the community. The Day Surgery system is not functioning as one would like.

915 I had the pleasure of visiting a Day Surgery Unit in Salisbury General Hospital a couple of weeks ago in order to discuss and look into the way they work there and it is likely that maybe even as much as 80% of the kind of surgery we do at St Bernard’s Hospital could, if the facilities and the culture were right, be carried out by Day Surgery, which has various benefits, including the fact that beds are more available overnight for emergency admissions and the fact that people spend less time in hospital and more time at home. So it has got the benefit across the board.

920 We have to do a lot of work yet to get our Day Surgery facilities working at full throttle and that is what we intend to do by tackling the matters that I referred to in my original answer.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister not aware that there is a difference between a Day Surgery Unit, that, in their view is not working, and there not being one at all? (Hon. D A Feetham: Hear, hear.)

925 How will the Minister improve on the so-called ‘deficient Day Surgery Service’ that exists at present which, in his answer to my question 69, 160 patients had benefited and used this service within less than a month?

930 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There is a difference between a Unit that is not working and none at all. It depends on how much or how little it is working.

935 What I am saying is that there is a huge potential for developing Day Surgery, which is not being fulfilled at the moment and which we want to work at improving. This will require looking into all sorts of things, including the staff that we have available, including the fact that they are geared up to Day Surgery and the whole management of the Unit.

Therefore, I think that the judgement should come once we have taken on this initiative. It may work better or it may work less well, but I am confident that, if we put in the necessary resources, we will be able to increase the number of patients who are operated on in St Bernard’s without having to stay overnight.

940 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that you are looking into ways of improving the service, but does the Hon. Minister not concede that the service was in existence (A Member: Yes, absolutely.) while you were writing your manifesto and that, surely, you would not be sending 160 patients to use a service that is not working correctly?

945 Hon. D A Feetham: Hear, hear.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I did not write the manifesto. I was not in politics at the time so I cannot really answer her comment.

All I can say is that... (Interjections) I was not in the College yet, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I revert to my original answer and explanation. The potential for Day Surgery in Gibraltar is very great. It is under-utilised and therefore we have to work hard to achieve it and that is really all I have to say on the matter.

EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

New teaching posts Recruitment

Clerk: Question 278, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education explain the process by which the 47 new teaching posts will be filled and if any will be recruited to fill 'retired' posts or specialist advisory roles within the Department of Education?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the process started in December 2011, when head teachers were asked to produce a report on whole school needs. This included staffing requirements.

The consultation process continued with the Advisory Service of the Department of Education visiting individual schools to discuss staffing issues with head teachers. The result of the exercise have helped to inform the Department of Education as to how and where the 47 new teaching posts should be allocated.

The vacancies have been advertised in an official notice advising prospective applicants that interviews would commence on Monday, 2nd April 2012. Successful applicants will be in post for the start of the 2012-13 academic year. Any teaching posts left vacant due to retirement will be covered by the recruitment of teachers over and above these 47 new posts, in keeping with the Government's manifesto commitment of increasing the current teacher complement of 333 to 380.

In other words, the 47 new posts will not be used to cover retirements. Any retirements that occur between now and the end of this academic year, or the start of the following academic year, will be recruited by new posts over and above the 47.

It is anticipated that at least three of the 47 new posts will go towards the Behaviour Education Support Team which, to date, has been staffed predominantly by supply teachers.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.
Can the Minister advise if any of these 47 vacancies are to be used as Classroom Aides positions?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, there is a separate question on the Order Paper in relation to Classroom Aides, but these are teachers, not Classroom Aides. That is a totally separate exercise that is being done in relation to Classroom Aides.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise what the Government's optimum maximum number of children in classes at each level of the education system will be, where a number of these new teaching posts will be placed to achieve these optimum class sizes?

Hon. G H Licudi: Is the hon. Member asking what the class sizes will be or how many of the 47 will be used to achieve that?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: The size. I appreciate that, perhaps, I should have given notice for this.

1005 Hon. G H Licudi: What I can say is that that is a matter that I am in discussion with the advisers at the Department of Education and the Director of Education in relation to the recruitment process of the 47 new teachers.

1010 I am undertaking an exercise whereby I have visited all schools, in fact, except for Varyl Begg Nursery, which is the only Government school that I have not visited yet. I have visited all schools to see for myself the question of classroom sizes and to talk to head teachers about that. That is an ongoing process, which I am in the process of discussing with the Education authorities.

Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Minister, so I can understand him fully, after assessing staffing requirements with the head teachers, is he aware of where these posts are going to be filled in by these 47 new recruits?

1015 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, the exercise that has been done was done in conjunction with head teachers, taking into account their needs. Following discussions with the head teachers, tentative provisions have been made in respect of the numbers to be allocated to each school, so that exercise has been done.

1020 Special educational needs
Additional resources for schools

Clerk: Question 279, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1025 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, as per the manifesto commitment to start within three months of taking office, can the Minister for Education explain at what stage his Department is in relation to carrying out a review to identify what additional resources are required in each school for children with special educational needs?

1030 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1035 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 280/2012.

1040 Special educational needs
Classroom Aides

Clerk: Question 280.

1045 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us if the Government is going to increase the number of Classroom Aides as part of their resourcing and support of children with special educational needs?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1050 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government's manifesto commitment was to identify – starting within three months of taking office – what additional resources are required for special educational needs for children in each school. I can confirm that this review was started in December 2011.

1055 All head teachers have been consulted in relation to the additional resources for special educational needs that they may require. These include staffing, environmental adaptations and equipment.

The data received is now being processed. The review has already identified a need for extra Classroom Aides. As an immediate step, 15 part-time Classroom Aides – in other words, 15 Classroom Aides who currently work part-time – who have asked to be considered for full-time employment, will be made full-time as from April 2012. This will have the immediate effect of increasing the overall support available for children with special educational needs. The effect, in fact, is an increase by 7½ Classroom Aides immediately.

The engagement of further Classroom Aides is currently being considered, because the process is ongoing, having received the data and information and the requests from the different schools. I can also confirm that the supply lists for Classroom Aides is in the process of being repopulated. Applicants have already been interviewed and they should be available to provide cover shortly.

I should explain that the problem we found was that, just before the Election, the supply list for Classroom Aides has essentially been exhausted, because the people on the supply list have been taken on for permanent employment. Therefore it was not possible, when Classroom Aides were off sick, or had engagements, to get supply Classroom Aides to come in to do that temporary cover. I understand that the previous administration was in the process of advertising, or had advertised, for that supply list. We have continued that process; interviews have been taking place and the successful applicants to go on the list will go on the list shortly and will be available to provide cover.

The Department of Education and the Care Agency are also working together on collating data with reference to pupils with disabilities. The aim here is to look at the future needs of young people and children, as they progress through the education system and on into the adult world.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that.

Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware that a full review of Classroom Aides was conducted by the former Director of Education just before the Election? I am not sure if you are using that Report – he submitted new salary scales, job descriptions and made recommendations – whether that review has been looked at and is being implemented as part of the plan of making 15 part-time Aides full-time?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, the answer I have given is in relation to the review in respect of additional resources, which is something separate from reviewing the contract and the terms of engagement of Classroom Aides.

This is something that I started in December 2012 with a face-to-face meeting with all head teachers and asked them specifically for their requirements, both in respect of staffing, so that we could do the exercise for the 47 teachers, and also in respect of special educational needs, as well as other matters, such as maintenance and buildings and all those matters were discussed.

I asked for the teachers to produce, essentially, a wish list of what they would like for their schools. Having received that, that was the data that was collated. It was immediately identified that there was a need for additional Classroom Aides. Therefore, a decision was taken to engage those Classroom Aides who currently were in the system, working part-time, who wanted to go full-time, to engage them full-time and we are considering what further resources are required, in addition to making available supply Classroom Aides.

As a separate exercise, we are looking at the contracts and terms and conditions and we expect that that process will be ready when the Classroom Aides are made full-time in April, so that the terms of engagement can be standardised for all Classroom Aides.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can I suggest to the Hon. Minister that, perhaps, he asks the previous Director of Education to show you the work that had already been done, so that you do not have to duplicate it? Just to, perhaps, facilitate that.

Mr Speaker, can the Minister answer how gifted children will be helped? Does he have an idea of what extra resources, or work they will receive that is already over and above the differentiation of current work that is being done and any extra work that is already given to them within the classroom?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is a matter that is also being looked at. Primarily, as the hon. Lady has identified, the matter is tackled through differentiation. Not everybody that is in the same class receives the same work and takes the same homework home.

Pupils are differentiated, not just by being placed in bands in separate classes, depending on ability, but also within the same classroom there is differentiation that occurs. It is a matter that I have discussed with head teachers. I am informed, and am satisfied, that differentiation is working well, but we are looking at what additional help can be given, but the main process by which that is achieved, is through differentiation and it is actually working.
