Mr Speaker, it is clear to everyone – although clearly it was patently obvious that successive GSD Port Ministers were blind to the reality – that the very physical fabric of the port requires continuous maintenance, in order to sustain safe access for vehicles and pedestrians alike. Only on Friday, Mr Speaker, Captain Roy Stanbrook wrote to me, after which I attended the port, as a result of damage to culverts due to the lack of maintenance of the physical port infrastructure.

As recently announced therefore, Mr Speaker, this Government has embarked on a programme of resurfacing roads and walkways within the port, as well as repairs and refurbishment to the Detached Mole, Mr Speaker, in order to make it safe for all those people who land there, and of course at different times there may be quite a few, including the large numbers of fishing enthusiasts who use the facility for leisure purposes, such as the annual angling competition. In this respect, toilet facilities are already installed and first aid facilities are being provided.

As this House is also aware, Mr Speaker, modified procedures have now been developed and agreed between the Port and the Gibraltar Federation of Sea Anglers to enable access for resident fishermen to the port when it is safe and practical to do so.

Further still, Mr Speaker, a programme of augmentation and replacement of the Oil Spill Response Programme necessary to protect the marine environment is also in progress to ensure that we are always able to meet the challenge, should there be an oil spill. At this juncture, Mr Speaker, I must associate myself with the comments made by the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment, Dr. John Cortes, when he, in this House, thanked publicly the staff of both the Gibraltar Port Authority and the Department of the Environment for their impeccable professionalism and unwavering and around the clock dedication in tackling the oil spill, which they successfully contained.

As a result of the issues encountered during the recent oil spill, a full review, Mr Speaker, of the Oil Spill Contingency Plan, including pollution equipment stock levels together with their suitability for use in the Gibraltar environment will be carried out, with special regard to the changing environmental sensitivities, including protected areas and species. The Captain of the Port in conjunction with the Gibraltar Maritime Administration are putting together recommendations for the Cabinet to consider.

Mr Speaker, whilst not referring specifically to the circumstances that took place in Gibraltar on making this particular comment, it did become clear to myself and to the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, that there is a lack of sufficient criminal penalties for pollution offences and therefore a complete absence of criminal and effective deterrence. Whereas the Government recognises and supports the importance of bunkering to Gibraltar's economy, it must also be equally conscious of its environmental responsibilities and Gibraltar must send a strong unequivocal and clear message that it will not accept criminally irresponsible operators. A proposed change to Port Rules will therefore bring the criminal penalties in Gibraltar in line with those in the United Kingdom for pollution offences, effectively increasing the maximum penalty from £2,000 to £250,000, Mr Speaker – (Applause) not just a [inaudible] environmental filter, but in fact a real one.

As the port launches become older, they are becoming more expensive to maintain. As a result, the work of specifying the requirements for a new port launch is also underway.

As with all of my areas of responsibility, work continues to engage with stakeholders of the port. The Gibraltar Port Operators' Association, the Bunker Forum and engagement with leisure interests are all examples of the strategy of engagement being pursued.

It is also important to note, Mr Speaker, in particular to the Hon. Mr Figueras, that senior officials of the GPA and the Department of the Environment meet and liaise regularly with the Environmental Safety Group and any other persons wishing to come to discuss any concerns with them, to discuss environmental issues relating to port related operations.

As the House is also aware, a project is underway to provide a sufficient number of berths to accommodate the boats of all boat owners – the long, long suffering boat owners as you say, Mr Speaker – as well as those currently on the waiting list. Detailed investigations have commenced and an inter-ministerial committee is driving this project forward.

The port building Mr Speaker, has also suffered a lack of structured investment over the years, resulting in accommodation which is barely fit for the purpose of running a 21st-century port. Work is therefore underway to specify the requirements for a new port building.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to the Gibraltar Maritime Administration. It is well known that the general down turn in the world economy has had an impact on both the volume and value of the maritime trade.

The fallout from this has been that some companies have ceased trading, but we are happy to say, Mr Speaker, that in many cases the vessels have not been sold on to other companies and, in the main, continue to operate under the Gibraltar flag.

Overall though, the number of ships on the Gibraltar Ship Register has fallen by 3% from 316 to 306, but there was an increase in overall gross tonnage from 2.12 million in April 2011 to 2.37 million in April 2012, and the mean average age of the fleet fell from 11 to 9 years. This means the fleet is getting younger and the change of the fleet size is towards larger ships. The reduction in the age of the fleet also indicates, Mr Speaker, the confidence the owners place in these new and larger ships on the Gibraltar register in these difficult trading conditions.

The difficult trading conditions, Mr Speaker, that I have mentioned that have affected the international community, have required careful management of both the technical and administrative resources available to the GMA. The resignation of some surveyors, Mr Speaker, and the significant delay in replacing those surveyors in 2011 resulted in some changes to the way audits and surveys had to be carried out. Whilst more tasks have had to be delegated to the classification society, increased monitoring of these organisations was introduced to ensure the overall quality of the fleet did not decline. The owners and operators of ships which were not performing to the standards expected of Gibraltar registered ships were monitored, and in two instances, the ships were removed from the register.

Mr Speaker, it is to maintain the position of the GMA and to increase the size of the Gibraltar fleet at a time when under the GSD it started to dip, I approved two targeted promotional visits with local representatives, this year. For the first time, Mr Speaker, a visit was made to Norway to meet both existing owners and possible new owners. The existing owners expressed their satisfaction of the service provided by the GMA and there have been several enquiries from companies that did not have ships registered in Gibraltar.

Following the yearly visit to Germany to meet existing clients and possible new ones, the GMA were invited by the German Ship Owners, along with six other EU flags, to a two-day seminar during Easter week. This allowed, Mr Speaker, the GMA to make two major presentations and, more importantly, Mr Speaker, meet many ship owners and operators on a face-to-face basis.

The visit, Mr Speaker, is pursuant to this Government's policy philosophy of establishing continuous personal contacts to attract investment to and in Gibraltar, and although it is still early days, several new German companies have transferred new, much larger ships, to the GMA. The schedule over the next 12 months, Mr Speaker, indicates up to 35 new ships, totalling over 700,000 gross tonnes will be registered with the GMA.

The latter, Mr Speaker – barely little time of being in office – represents a 30% increase in the size of the fleet and many of these ships are larger units of over 50,000 gross tonnes. Already a schedule of changes of flag is arranged, stretching into 2013. This has meant much more work for the GMA, Mr Speaker, as inevitably all new business that comes to Gibraltar will entail. But to facilitate this schedule, and to improve the service to the clients, and also a first, a surveyor has been stationed in Hamburg; another surveyor is now in Hong Kong, who already undertake work on behalf of the GMA.

Mr Speaker, it is also to be noted that the Seafarers' section issued nearly 2,000 Endorsements to Officers serving on Gibraltar-registered ships. This is an important aspect of maintaining the safety and maritime protection standards expected on board the ships of the fleet. The Provisional Endorsements, which are issued on line, is normally completed within 24 hours. The stated service standard for the full term Endorsement is two to three weeks but it is usually completed, Mr Speaker, within eight days for online applications, which is an additional service introduced just a few months ago, Mr Speaker, and has been very welcomed by our customers worldwide.

Further still, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Yacht Registry is now an integral part of the GMA and during the year the number of yachts on the register has continued to increase and the drive to enter the Mega Yacht market has continued, but this is, at the moment, a difficult market to gain an initial toe-hold. Discussions with other interested parties were held during the year and in this connection, I had great pleasure in opening the first Gibraltar Yacht Seminar in Ocean Village. At the seminar, the GMA issued an open invitation to all parties interested in the area of the maritime world to a meeting, to take place this month, to discuss how best to market Gibraltar.

In this respect, Mr Speaker, and to further facilitate and improve the services of the Gibraltar Yacht Registry, I promulgated two Legal Notices: numbers 30 and 41 of this year. The first of these, Mr Speaker – the Location of the Office of the Registrar of Pleasure Yachts – formally recorded the move of the GYR into the GMA premises. The second – the Gibraltar Merchant Shipping (Pleasure Yachts) Regulations – provides that the Marine Administrator may impose conditions for registration on pleasure yachts of 24 metres or over intended to be used for charter. This amendment, Mr Speaker, enables the registration now in Gibraltar of the commonly called super-yachts for the first time.

The House will also have taken due note of the Budget measures announced by the Hon. the Chief Minister yesterday, to stimulate the use of 'super-yacht' vessels by reclassifying these and therefore not 1375 subjecting them to any import duty; and reducing import duty on vessels under 18 metres of length from 12% to 6%.

Mr Speaker, following on from my responsibilities for the Port and the Gibraltar Maritime Administration, it makes sense to discuss the cruising industry, as a port related and maritime operation.

1380 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may, with the leave of the House, ask the Minister to pause there, so that we might adjourn, for those of us who wish to attend the tribute in the Supreme Court, until 12.30 – I think that is convenient.

1385 Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to hon. Members? This House will adjourn until 12.30.

The House adjourned at 11.47 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 12.30 p.m.

1390 Appropriation Act 2012
Debate continued

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, with your permission, I will continue with the cruise industry.

1395 Mr Speaker, the entire House no doubt appreciates the indisputable importance of the cruising industry to the economy of Gibraltar. Everyone will agree, Mr Speaker, of the vitally critical economic activity generated by cruise lines and cruise passengers disembarking at Gibraltar's port. The relevance of cruising, Mr Speaker, is not simply limited to the direct expenditure in retail, as important as that is, but also to the other services that Gibraltar operators can offer, such as bunkers and the whole gamut of chandlery and other maritime services.

1400 It is against this backdrop, Mr Speaker, that we find that, in 2011, Gibraltar received 186 calls, in comparison to the 238 calls in 2009 and 174 calls in 2010, with 303,759 passengers. This year, Mr Speaker, the figure is anticipated to dip again slightly from 2011, with 177 calls currently booked, with an anticipated drop in passenger figures to approximately 305,000. It is against these facts, Mr Speaker, that this House and the whole of Gibraltar have had to endure to date the hard faced comments by the Hon.
1405 Mr Bossino that we are to follow the so-called 'success story' of the GSD' on tourism.

Mr Speaker, one really has to have, for the reasons that I will now further illustrate, la cara dura – and there really is no English equivalent to this fantastic Spanish expression – to have done nothing to recover the position in the drop in calls from 2009 and yet pretend that things are on the up and up and, to top the hypocrisy, thanks to them.

1410 Mr Speaker, let me elucidate, mainly for the benefit of the hon. Gentleman opposite and his contributions in this House, that the figure of cruise calls for 2012 has gone up by seven from what we inherited in December 2011, as a result of this Government's philosophy of pursuing personal contacts and structuring continuous and fluid communication with the decision makers in the cruise industry.

1415 Mr Speaker, you would think that sirens and alarm bells would have gone off in my predecessor's office, when cruise calls went down in 2010 from 2009 by no less than 64 calls, Mr Speaker, 64 calls and the response from the GSD Administration at the time was to do nothing, other than to continue to spend tens of thousands of pounds on a stand, once a year, that the figures clearly showed actually translated in a loss of business to Gibraltar. We were led to believe, Mr Speaker, that Gibraltar had never been better! It is indeed a testament to the wisdom of Gibraltarians that they knew that it was time not 'to keep trusting', (A Member: Hear, hear.) to borrow yet another of the most politically misconceived slogans in Gibraltar's modern political history. Is that not, Mr Speaker, the 'big lie' that the Leader of the Opposition referred to?

1425 Political considerations aside, Mr Speaker, and when we look at the reality and the facts of cruising, we must consider the infrastructure currently and presently enjoyed in Gibraltar which is, firstly, the Western Arm, which, the House is aware, is a major entry point for visitors to Gibraltar. Including crew – not just passengers – an estimated half a million people arrived last year by cruise ship. In the 16 years of its operation, following a decision by the last GSLP Administration to convert a warehouse into the Cruise Terminal, the facility has successfully handled over 2.5 million passengers.

1430 As the House is aware, Mr Speaker, and as a result of the initiative of the Government, the derelict Ice Box Building has now been demolished and remedial re-surfacing works are currently underway, while the whole area is being spruced up, including tiling of an important area where visitors regularly frequent. Further, Mr Speaker, the Government is considering a number of infrastructural options on how best to develop our cruising facilities.

1435 And indeed, Mr Speaker, in following what I am sure now the Leader of the Opposition would agree was an unfortunate attack to take in talking about the 'big lie', one is forced to wonder why, if cruise passenger arrivals are so much higher than visitors by air, the previous Government did not strategise on how to maximise the potential for cruises, rather than spend 74 million euros – and rising – on an unnecessarily extravagant and politically driven, air terminal.

1440 As the House knows Mr Speaker, in March I visited for two days, prior to what is known as a Seatrade Cruise Convention. Meetings were held with executives of Royal Caribbean, Azamara Club Cruises, Prestige Cruise Holdings – which owns both Regent Seven Seas Cruises and Oceania Cruises, and Silversea Cruises. I also met Giora Israel, the Senior Vice President, Global Port Development, for Carnival Corporation, which owns 10 cruise lines, including P&O, Costa, Cunard and Holland American Line.

1445 And of course, Mr Speaker, the purpose of all of these meetings is precisely that: to establish the personal line of communication between the Gibraltar Government and the Gibraltar Tourist Board and the senior executives whose companies account for the greater part of our cruise business. So the House is aware, Mr Speaker, in 2013, vessels owned by Carnival Corporation alone – the Senior Vice President of which I met – will account for 45% of the anticipated total of calls here and 55% of the expected number of passengers. I was able to brief Carnival, Mr Speaker, on the Government's policies in respect of tourism and the port, as well as on other matters of mutual interest. It therefore gives me great personal satisfaction to note, Mr Speaker, in this House, that we will shortly be receiving Mr Israel to Gibraltar to progress further various cruise-related issues. It should be noted, Mr Speaker, that the visit of Mr Israel is even more importing when one considers the international backdrop and in particular, the social unrest in a number of Mediterranean countries, including Greece and Syria, which has dampened the demand for cruises in the region by North Americans and therefore highlighting the need to have this personal contact with persons that decide where their ships call.

1455 In addition to this, Mr Speaker, the Government will now endeavour to hold quarterly meetings with cruise lines in the UK. Unlike the previous Administration, who clearly did not undertake the efforts to establish personal contacts, the Government has instigated contacts with all major cruise lines in the UK. The initiative will hopefully remedy the significant decrease in calls Gibraltar suffered since 2009, very much to the detriment of our Main Street traders and tourism operators in general. The first of these quarterly meetings, Mr Speaker, was held last week in the United Kingdom. I met with eight of the major cruise line directors and port and itinerary managers, with a view to continue the new Government's marketing drive to attract new cruise business to Gibraltar and to establish closer working relationships with senior cruise line management.

1460 It is important to note, Mr Speaker, that these cruise lines all cater to the British market, which is the largest source market for cruise passengers in Europe, with 1.7 million residents purchasing cruises in 2011, which is almost a 5% increase over 2010.

1470 During the course of these meetings, senior management and senior itinerary planning and shore excursion decision makers provided their feedback on Gibraltar. Gibraltar, of course, can use such feedback to its benefit in developing the services and the facilities provided to cruise ships and their passengers. The Government firmly believes that one-to-one meetings with representatives of the industry are the most effective way, Mr Speaker, in which to increase awareness about the products and services Gibraltar has to offer. It is also, Mr Speaker, the best way to advise these top executives of all pertinent tourism and port issues that will affect their decision as to whether or not to call to Gibraltar.

1475 It is clear to us, Mr Speaker, having visited both Miami and the UK, that the drop in calls to Gibraltar are directly due to the complete absence and lack in the past of communication between the Government and the cruise lines.

1480 Mr Speaker, in the light of all that I have said so far, there really cannot be any other reasonable, credible, more cogent explanation, given that calls to Gibraltar have reduced dramatically at a time when Europeans are booking more cruises than ever. In 2011, Mr Speaker, there was an increase in 9% of European residents booking cruises and yet a drop in calls to Gibraltar. The fact, Mr Speaker, that Gibraltar will see the return of the French Pullmantur product, as well as four newly scheduled calls from Azamara the same year we held meetings, is a testament to what personal contacts will achieve.

1485 Another major discussion point with the cruise lines was that of introducing Gibraltar as a possible turnaround port in the future. Incentive packages in this regard were also discussed in major detail. Due to the business relationships we have developed, Gibraltar will now be increasingly used in cruise line publications and catalogues. This will also put Gibraltar in the limelight of cruise passengers.

1490 Amongst all of this, Mr Speaker, one cannot escape the reality that spending by cruise lines on fuel has increased by 157% in the last six years alone. Throughout all of our discussions, therefore, it was made absolutely clear to us by senior executives that the cost of fuel is, and will continue to be, at the heart of the decision-making processes in respect of itineraries. Due to Gibraltar's strategic geographical location and the efficient and competitively priced bunkering services, we are strategically well placed in this respect.

1495 As I have also mentioned in the past, Mr Speaker, these one-to-one meetings are an essential first step in establishing the contacts so that Gibraltar is fresh in the minds of the senior executives. These first meetings mean nothing without follow-ups and therefore, Mr Speaker, we now have institutional structures that meet regularly to make sure that the various discussion points that are mooted during our meetings are, in fact, followed up regularly.

Mr Speaker, inextricably linked to my duties in the port and cruising is of course tourism.

In this financial year, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar House will continue to be an important part of the Gibraltar Tourist Board's marketing activities. This is because, Mr Speaker, the UK is Gibraltar's principal source market, so most of the marketing and advertising activity will be co-ordinated with Gibraltar House.

It will include attendance at selective major travel industry events, as well as Gibraltar-specific trade and consumer roadshows. The roadshows are organised primarily in cities that are close to the airports that operate flights to Gibraltar. Our plan for this year includes events in north-west England and the Midlands.

In order to increase capacity on existing air routes, we should also look into organised activities in the Heathrow, Gatwick and Luton catchment areas.

One of the Government's initiatives for increasing visitor numbers is the setting-up of events that will attract niche-markets to Gibraltar, Mr Speaker. Gibraltar House is working with the Gibraltar Tourist Board on various projects and we expect to make at least one important announcement during the next few months.

This year, Gibraltar House will continue its active presence on social media through the Gibraltar Tourist Board's Facebook page and Twitter feeds. The number of followers on both media continues to grow. These include industry professionals from travel agencies and tour operators who follow Gibraltar for updates on events in Gibraltar and product improvements. The social media activities will complement the new platforms that we are currently developing and to which I will make reference later in this speech.

This year, Mr Speaker, we will continue with our product briefings for travel agents. This has proved to be a worthwhile initiative, at which our UK sales manager visits travel agencies to train their sales staff on Gibraltar as a holiday destination. The close co-operation between the Gibraltar Tourist Board in Gibraltar and Gibraltar House will continue, through a series of weekly meetings, so as to ensure that the momentum of our marketing campaign and our new initiatives is not lost.

Mr Speaker, on becoming Minister for Tourism, professionals in every single operator with whom I have met, without one single exception, have noted to me their disappointment with the lack of understanding of the previous Administration in relation to this vital economic activity. This is not me saying so, Mr Speaker, but professionals of tourism and these comments are recorded for posterity in the minutes of meetings, some of which – I must deliciously confess, having gladly commented to the hon. Gentleman opposite – in reply to an answer to one of his questions. It is in relation to tourism, Mr Speaker that the hon. Gentleman opposite has made some of his most remarkable statements which I shall refer to shortly.

It is in order, Mr Speaker, that the Gibraltar public can separate the previous Administration's words, and to copy the hon. Lady's statements about 'grand statements' and 'spin', let me tell the Gentleman and the Lady opposite what 'spin' truly is, certainly in relation to the areas of tourism, because this Budget will immediately show the importance that we as a Government attach to tourism, and the lack of importance, despite the grand statements that the hon. Lady referred to previously, showed in their lack of investment in Tourism.

The Government, Mr Speaker, will begin, with this Budget, real and much needed investment in the product and in the first instance to the existing visitor attractions. These sites will, in the short-term, be refurbished to bring desperately crucial and long overdue improvements and will be followed by a longer-term policy to create a truly memorable visitor experience, Mr Speaker, because the aim of the long-term plan has to be that when a visitor visits Gibraltar, be it a leisure visitor, or a business tourist, that they will want to come to Gibraltar again. It is not good enough to simply feed people into Gibraltar, spend money here and then go. We want to recapture people and want people to come back. That is where the long-term policy of this Government is going, Mr Speaker.

As the House knows, the Government is engaged in an intense consultation process with the industry, through the GTB, to make important changes to what should be one of the most important revenue generators to our economy. Government, Mr Speaker, would like to see greater investment and participation of the private sector in the development of tourism. It is in order to encourage our private operators to invest in their own product with confidence and to show them that this Government wants to fully realise and unlock the potential of our tourism sector, that this Government will initiate that much-needed investment programme on the tourist sites and the visitor attractions, which will represent in one Budget a quantitative and qualitative leap in investment.

Mr Speaker, the substantial figure of £1 million has been allocated in this financial year alone for this task. This allocation, Mr Speaker, is more than the previous Government allocated in total in the last five financial years. I say 'allocated', because even though it was allocated, it was not necessarily spent, so if we went on money actually spent, it was even less.

The allocated funds are scheduled to be spent this financial year Mr Speaker, on various projects which will include the provision, firstly, of absolutely needed new toilets at various locations, the refurbishment of existing facilities, improvements to St Michael's Cave and the Great Siege Tunnels and other works.

1565 As a Government, Mr Speaker, we have identified improvements we would like to carry out within the financial year. We are already involved in receiving feedback from current stakeholders and we will be inviting representations from the general public, as I have asked them today, and in particular, from the Tourism Advisory Council, on which projects should be prioritised. The Government would ideally like to issue tender notices for these projects to be issued in the next six to eight weeks, to make sure that we start work straight away, Mr Speaker.

1570 The Government will invest on some infrastructure works at the beaches for the next season. What we will not do, Mr Speaker, is to spend almost a million pounds of taxpayers' money in replenishment of sand at beaches without structures that prevent the sand from disappearing a few months later! It is only in the fanciful world of the GSD, Mr Speaker, that an Administration just before Election time, decides 'Well, let's throw away money', with an absolute cavalier disregard to taxpayers' money and how hard it is to earn, patently for electoral considerations, without an iota of forward planning – yes, an absence of forward planning because Mr Speaker, you do not need to have a GCSE or a rudimentary understanding of engineering that if you need to replenish sand on a beach, it is because the wave action is taking it away, so you had better make really sure that there are structures in place, so that the sand is not washed away.

1580 But no, Mr Speaker, £900,000 later, sand in, sand out. Thank you, GSD – Gibraltar has never been better! (Laughter)

1585 Mr Speaker, in any case, this year the GTB embarked on a full programme of works to the beaches, as I outlined in the last Question Time of this House, with the additional innovations. Examples of such innovations include weekly cleaning of all beaches from 1st February; laying of walkways at all beaches from mid-May; the purchase of new lifeguard boats; and the employment of senior lifeguards.

1590 Further, Mr Speaker, it does give me great pleasure to announce in this House that the Government has focused on restoring a full complement to the GTB and has restructured the team to enhance the responsive approach of the Board in attracting visitors to Gibraltar. The Government has restructured the management team to offer an effective and timely implementation of Government policies and business opportunities.

1595 This brings me, Mr Speaker, to the importance of effectively marketing Gibraltar in a cost-effective manner and one where we measure the success or otherwise of the strategy by results and not by fancy spinned articles or fancy words.

1600 Mr Speaker, with the GTB, the Government has set out to create personal relationships with key decision makers in the tourism industry. This framework ensures that these individuals are always fully aware of the opportunities available to them and their companies or organisations in Gibraltar. In this way, the Government actively seeks inward investment in the tourism industry and gives the sector the importance it deserves.

1605 And, as the House will know, the GTB is engaged in developing a new interactive web platform that will work more effectively in marketing Gibraltar in a modern, vibrant and dynamic way – the full details of which, Mr Speaker, will be announced within this calendar year.

1610 Undoubtedly, the internet has changed the way in which tourism destinations sell and promote their products. The Government will improve and enhance the online tools available to promote Gibraltar and use this channel to keep the tourism industry abreast of all that is happening. In furtherance of employing new marketing tools, the Government will introduce Wi-Fi hotspots at the most important locations visited by tourists. These will enable the independent visitor and indeed all others, to download applications that are available about Gibraltar and to browse the internet for information.

1615 Further, two applications on Gibraltar have recently been launched which are very useful tools for the independent visitor to use when planning a visit to Gibraltar and as a guide when they are here. These are private sector initiatives, Mr Speaker, which we very much welcome and my Ministry is encouraging and which the GTB is providing advice on content.

1620 Pursuant to our manifesto commitment of marketing in an intelligent, targeted and cost-effective manner, the Government will review the levels of attendance at trade fairs and exhibitions and will decide whether or not to continue to participate in some of these events and, if so, which ones. Even if we do attend conferences, though, Mr Speaker, our participation must be much more focused and results driven. By creating activities and opportunities for the industry partners and visitors to the exhibitions, we will make these events work harder for Gibraltar. This year, Mr Speaker, will be the first time I attend the World Travel Market and like with the Miami Cruise Convention, we will investigate to determine whether such an event does offer value for money. It is essential that more focus is given to driving niche market tourism and developing the products and services for this sector.

Gibraltar's history, heritage and natural assets are an advantage when trying to place the Rock among its competitors in this market. Event-led tourism, Mr Speaker, is becoming more important with tourists now looking for reasons for which to travel to a destination. The Chess Festival in Gibraltar is a perfect example and the Government will work to attract similar events to Gibraltar.

In co-operation with my colleagues at the Ministry of Culture, the Government has already set up events such as what can undoubtedly be described, Mr Speaker, as the excellent Gibraltar Jazz Festival and we work hard to promote this and other events, which we hope will become annual events targeted during seasons where hotel occupancy is low.

The GTB, in co-operation with the tourism industry partners, will actively pursue the meetings and incentive market. Mr Speaker, Gibraltar currently has facilities and services for the small to medium-sized meeting and conference market and we will explore more opportunities in this field. With a range of unique products, the Rock can also place itself firmly in the incentive travel sector.

And it is, Mr Speaker, in a bid to open up tourism markets, that the Government has set up a visa waiver scheme that will enable Gibraltar based tour operators to offer day trip excursions to non-EU nationals, commencing with Russian and Chinese tourists, as part of an organised tour. The Gibraltar based tour operators will have to adhere to certain conditions set out by the Borders and Coastguard Agency, which will ensure the repatriation of any visitors, if this becomes necessary.

I turn now, Mr Speaker, to the airlines. As we have seen recently, the airline industry has had its share of turmoil, in what is, in any case, Mr Speaker, an inherently and habitually changeable industry. These changes have affected Gibraltar. We have seen easyJet take a commercial decision to discontinue services from Liverpool to Gibraltar and the cessation of services by bmibaby from East Midlands Airport, due to the takeover of the parent company.

Mr Speaker, at this juncture, I find that I must pause to make a special reference to my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino's statements in respect of BMI services. The House will recall – I certainly do, as does the public – that Mr Bossino saw fit to issue a press statement to say that the bmibaby service was and I quote: 'secured by the GSD Government'.

The Hon. Mr Bossino goes on to describe this as and I quote:

'an unprecedented success story of the aviation industry under the previous administration.'

Mr Bossino issued this statement, Mr Speaker, after I had expressly told him in this House that the Government had never said, nor would it ever say, that we had secured the bmibaby service, because it would be – and I quote myself – 'a patent falsehood'.

The hon. Gentleman further says that the GSD caused this jamboree of extra flights, notwithstanding the incontrovertible reality that for the majority of the time under the GSD, there were, in fact, less air links to and from Gibraltar than there had been in 1996.

Mr Speaker, why let facts and figures get in the way of transparently self-serving statements?

The press release is even more unfortunate for the hon. Gentleman opposite, given that the Hon. Mr Bossino clearly forgot the costly fiascos of the GSD, to include the Regional Air Lines flight to Casablanca and, more recently, Andalus Airlines. The press statement, Mr Speaker, is further spectacularly unmeritorious in disingenuously attempting to justify the expenditure of 74 million euros – and rising – by the addition of bmibaby. Mr Speaker, one would be moved to laughter at the callow, baseless and politically self-serving statements, if it were not quite so serious that a Government project should overrun by 50 million euros and rising.

In any case, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Bossino says all of this on Tuesday, 10th April and on Friday, 13th April – very unlucky for some, Mr Speaker – the press reports the takeover of bmibaby, a story, Mr Speaker, that all of us who kept quite a close eye on this company unfortunately knew may well happen. This made the statements by the Hon. Mr Bossino even more surprising.

You would think that, even if he did not know then, at that point, Mr Speaker, Mr Bossino would cease the pointless vindication that it was the GSD that clinched the deal with BMI. No, Mr Speaker, because let's remember that no-one here had said that we had brought bmibaby, but he still felt that a second press statement had to be issued, to repeat exactly the same things. And, of course, Mr Speaker, shortly following the second statement to vindicate what had already been said in the first, it is unfortunate that Gibraltar and the world finds out that bmibaby ceases operation to Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, you could not make these things up!

If I were to adopt the hollow and entirely opportunistic statements of the hon. Gentleman opposite, I would now accuse the administration of not having done their due diligence properly, of not seeking air connectivity with another airlines – but of course, Mr Speaker, I, as politically responsible, will not make those statements and will allow the hon. Gentleman opposite to continue to play party politics, whilst we work very hard for the people of Gibraltar. (Several Members: Hear hear!) (Applause) After all, Mr Speaker, who am I to submit the hon. Gentleman opposite into sanity and common sense?

Indeed, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to report that it is directly as a result of our hands-on, working round the clock philosophy that we were not only able to secure that services from the north-west of the UK have been sustained by Monarch Airlines, boosting capacity from Manchester, in the shortest period of time, Mr Speaker, but that connections from the Midlands will not be lost, as today, Mr Speaker, I can today confirm that Monarch Airlines will operate from this region as announced, as from next summer, and we expect the airline to make a statement on this shortly.

Services from Heathrow, Gatwick and Luton continue all year round providing capacity to the south-east of the United Kingdom. We continue, Mr Speaker, at every possible meeting, to push for increased capacity on routes from the UK and for more regional services from the UK, and I am confident that these will materialise.

We are also pursuing the possibility of connections from other destinations in Europe. Airline planning, I am told, Mr Speaker, happens several seasons in advance – notwithstanding what I have just said that this Government was able to actually obtain additional services in record time – and decisions and announcements on the start of new routes do take some time to come forward.

Among other initiatives this Government has taken is the setting up of inter-ministerial meetings to promote a co-ordinated approach to heritage, culture, tourism and environmental matters, including the Upper Rock. The Government attaches a high level of importance to these matters, which it believes are inextricably linked. This is part of the Government's manifesto commitment to conduct certain important projects through inter-ministerial committees.

Also, Mr Speaker, I have set up an expanded Tourism Advisory Council. The Council has now met on two occasions this year, on 11th April and 31st May, and will also be meeting again this month. By far, Mr Speaker, the most consistent theme in respect of feedback from the Council has been the need to stop talking about it and to actually really invest in Gibraltar's tourism product and the sites, and embrace on-line marketing tools. It is because, Mr Speaker, that we do actually listen and action what our professionals and the people on the ground tell us, that we have done precisely that in this, our first Budget.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to another of my Ministerial responsibilities, which is Commercial Affairs.

In line with yet another manifesto commitment, I have been appointed as Minister with responsibility for small businesses. The first order of business, Mr Speaker, was therefore to establish effective communication with businesses to encourage entrepreneurship. To nurture this, Mr Speaker, a Small Business Board that I chair has been set up and, like the Tourism Advisory Council, we meet regularly. It has been set, Mr Speaker, to help and foster development and continually review the needs of small businesses. But much more important focus than that, Mr Speaker, is the opportunity for the Small Business Board to actually make recommendations that I can then put to the Government for the Cabinet to consider and report back to them, so that main street traders and people with a vested interest in business can actually have a direct door to Government.

In addition to this, Mr Speaker, a Business Support Unit has been set up within my Ministry and the aim of the Unit is to offer help and advice to businesses that have either relocated to Gibraltar or have already set up in Gibraltar but require nurturing. The unit is currently being resourced and should be operating in the very near future.

Further, Mr Speaker, it is clear now that a complete review and overhaul is necessary and is currently underway in respect of consumer related legislation. This is in response to calls from both the Chamber of Commerce and the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses (GFSB), that current legislation, in particular the Trade Licensing Act, should be reviewed. It is my intention, once this review is completed, Mr Speaker and subject to the recommendations received, to establish an Office of Fair Trading that will encompass the existing consumer protection. The aim is to protect consumers from traders which are unscrupulous and it is anticipated that the legislative framework will be ready to be presented to Parliament within one calendar year.

In the interim, whilst this review is underway, computerisation of the procedures of the Trade Licensing Authority will commence shortly. It is the intention to make the whole process more user-friendly.

Further, Mr Speaker; I am delighted to announce in this House that a Bill is now ready to provide for two additional members of the Trade Licensing Authority, whilst the review is undertaken, to be appointed after consulting the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses. This, Mr Speaker, corrects a historical discrepancy and rightly recognises the rightful place of the GFSB as a vital umbrella organisation for small and medium-sized enterprises.

I now turn, Mr Speaker, to another responsibility which affects all of us, which is transport. Indeed, Mr Speaker, I am happy to note that the Government continues to meet its manifesto commitments in the transport sector, very much it would appear, to the utter dismay of the Hon. Mr Figueras, given yesterday's Budget contribution.

Within weeks, Mr Speaker – and I am delighted to be able to tell the Hon. Mr Bossino this – a route was put in place to take passengers from Market Place to Both Worlds. This was to meet the self-evident 1745 demand of a sector of our community, those that live in the area and especially the elderly resident of Both Worlds, who did not have adequate public transport and had been neglected by the previous Administration. This is not to mention, Mr Speaker, the fact that it was also the GSD that removed parking for residents.

1750 You see, Mr Speaker, how we can justifiably highlight the shortcomings of the previous Administration and show that we govern at the same time. How we can criticise and govern simultaneously? I know that the Hon. Mr Bossino, will take particular delight when I tell him that the route has been operating now very successfully, since we instituted it two weeks after being elected.

1755 But Mr Speaker, in what has become the hon. Gentleman's opposite characteristic political opportunism, he issues no less than two press releases to criticise the start of the bus route – all of this, Mr Speaker, whilst there were letters from residents of Both Worlds – long-suffering residents of Both Worlds – without transport to their place of residence, writing letters to the press thanking the Government for correcting the unfair situation created by the GSD.

1760 Mr Speaker, even the former Director of the Gibraltar Bus Company, in an extensive interview to the Panorama acknowledges the benefit of the route! Never in the modern history of Gibraltar has a newly elected MP been mentioned in so many letters, in such a short space of time for its position on a question of policy.

1765 Another manifesto commitment that has also been met is the revision of the 'club card' system that had been established by the previous Administration. As from 1st May of this year, Mr Speaker, bus transport has been free, on routes 1 to 4, only for residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards and other approved identification documents. These include of course, MoD personnel posted in Gibraltar and their registered dependants.

1770 And much, it did appear at the time, to the chagrin of the Hon. Mr Bossino – but then, Mr Speaker, we are used in this side of the House to the Hon. Mr Bossino complain about everything; he has to say something at Question Time! – cross-frontier workers will also be entitled to free bus travel on production of proof that they have a valid contract of employment and that they are up to date with their taxes. As previously noted, Mr Speaker, this system has the beauty of ensuring compliance with the employment laws and that taxes and social insurance are paid.

1775 Like the truly responsive Government that we are, Mr Speaker, the Government constantly monitors the routes that are operated and facilities provided, to ensure that they meet the demands of the bus users. Only recently, a new request bus stop has been introduced at the junction of Prince Edward's Road with Castle Road and Flat Bastion Road to service the Upper Town. In addition, and after listening to the concerns of the neighbours, a bus shelter has been scheduled to be erected at the top of Tank Ramp.

1780 Further, Mr Speaker, as the House will know, the large buses that are operated by the Gibraltar Bus Company are now around nine years old and are powered by old technology engines that are not as efficient as those being produced now. In fact, the cost of maintaining these buses is now running at approximately £30,000 per month and has cost the taxpayer, since 2005, around £1.5 million. The spending of continually repairing the old bus fleet, Mr Speaker, is clearly unsustainable and the Government is committed to reducing the running costs of the Company as much as possible, without of course affecting the valuable service to the community that the Company currently provides.

1785 It is a damning indictment, Mr Speaker that the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited should have cost the taxpayer approximately £2.3 million in one year alone – not 'headlines', Mr Speaker as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said in a GBC call-in, but actual and dreadful accounting facts.

1790 The Government is committed to replacing the bus fleet – I am sure that the Hon. Mr Figueras will now be delighted, because he mentioned it yesterday – with environmentally friendly buses that will reduce emissions and are more in line with our environmental policies, Mr Speaker. In this respect, I am delighted to announce – once again, to Mr Figueras – that the Government has today issued a tender for the bus fleet replacement. I am sure he will now pore and read the wonderful things that are stated therein, Mr Speaker.

1795 But I will tell him now anyway: as part of its sustainable development and Euro 2020 objectives, we are inviting tenders for the supply of midi-sized eco-friendly buses. The successful tenderer will be responsible for the delivery of 18 to 20 eco-friendly buses. Very importantly, Mr Speaker, the successful tenderer will also be responsible for the training of the staff at the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited and any other staff associated with the operation and maintenance of the buses and would further be expected, crucially, given the figures I have just announced, provide an after-sales supply of spares for repairs, maintenance, and servicing of the vehicles.

1800 The Government is seeking to procure high quality, competitively priced, low carbon emitting vehicles capable of journeying the existing and any future routes, except for those routes serviced by the mini-sized buses servicing the upper town area, whilst complying with all relevant Gibraltar and EU laws governing traffic and transport issues.

1805 Mr Speaker, our commitments in transport do not stop there. I will carry on for the benefit of Mr Figueras.

I am also delighted to announce today, changes to the current routes operated by the Gibraltar Bus Company, all of this in seven months, Mr Speaker, and he thought we had done very little. This has been done in consultation with the public and taking into account the many complaints and representations that have been received, the new routes have been designed in an effort to improve the service that is currently being offered and to meet the complaints received.

I must further point out, Mr Speaker, that the new routes are not set in stone. We will constantly be monitoring them and if the public have any comments, they can, as they have done over the last seven months, either come to meet me personally or write to me by e-mail.

In the first place, Mr Speaker, I can announce that negotiations have been successfully concluded with the other company that operates Route No. 5, the frontier route, to introduce free bus travel for pensioners on this route. This meets, Mr Speaker, another manifesto commitment.

On enabling this private operator at this juncture to exclusively service Route No. 5, the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd has been able to redeploy the buses currently used in that route to improve the service, but in addition, Calypso Transport Limited has agreed to carry all pensioners that are resident in Gibraltar free of charge. It is envisaged that free bus travel for resident old age pensioners in the route will commence on 1st August of this year.

The improvements to which I refer, Mr Speaker, will see an additional bus used on Route 2 to increase the passenger carrying capacity of this route. Route 4 will have its frequency increased by the addition of two extra buses to operate the route. This will mean that although the frequency will still be 20 minutes, the extra buses will provide greater passenger carrying capacity.

Further, Routes 3 and 4 have been revised to offer a more efficient and effective service that should address the concerns by residents of the South District travelling into town and to the hospital. It is also the intention to further improve Route 7, the Mount Alvernia route, by increasing the length of its route and frequency. This is a longer-term project, Mr Speaker, that I am discussing with my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Services and Equality, Miss Sacramento.

All the changes that I have mentioned, Mr Speaker, have already been approved by the Transport Commission and the necessary administrative procedures are currently being carried out to give effect. It is intended that all of these new changes will come into effect by the end of August at the very latest.

Now, of course, the public will be informed of all the changes through the media as usual.

In addition Mr Speaker – there is more for the Hon. Mr Figueras – the Government is also working to introduce a bus tracking system and a pilot scheme is currently working in a test environment. This is a web-based system that will enable users, via their computers, to see the bus routes and the location of any bus on a route on a real-time basis.

Mr Speaker, moving on from buses to taxis, a lot has been said, especially during this Election campaign, about the service of taxi drivers and the need to ensure a fully serviced city service. I am therefore glad to advise this House, Mr Speaker, they are more than just words or threats by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition in the last General Election campaign; I am in fact meeting regularly and working with the Gibraltar Taxi Association to improve the service available to the community as a whole.

With this in mind, Mr Speaker, the Government is assisting the GTA with the replacement of its current infrastructure, including taxi meters. The new system will include GPS technology incorporated into the taxi meter which will enable the nearest taxi to be dispatched after a telephone request. This will ensure that response times are shorter and the service maximised and improved.

The GTA, Mr Speaker, is firmly committed with the Government, to improve the city service that is being provided to ensure that we have a public transport service that the whole of Gibraltar can be proud of. Plans are being finalised to deploy Transport Inspectors, and the role of the Transport Inspector, Mr Speaker, will be to ensure that all public transport operators, buses, taxis, coaches, all of them deliver a service that is up to standard and meets the expectations of the general public. The officers will be appointed under the Transport Act and will have, amongst other powers, the ability to issue on-the-spot fines to public transport operators who do not comply with the law.

I now turn, Mr Speaker, to one of those ‘vision things’ that had, and still have, the habit of going so horribly wrong under the GSD and at which the Hon. Mr Figueras will metaphorically ‘tap dance’ – the GibiBikes.

Mr Speaker, whereas I had finished the Budget address earlier this week and I was quite happy with it, after hearing the startling remarks of the hon. Gentleman opposite, I had just to go back to the office and re-write this part of my speech! It just appears Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman either did not hear what I told him in answer to a question, or did listen to me but decided to ignore everything that I told him.

But given that he seems to have forgotten what I told him, or had heard what I said and ignored it anyway, and given that he raised the issue again in public, let me remind him what happens, what are the perilous consequences when you use capital money and you rush a project purely and exclusively for electoral purposes – because if the hon. Gentleman opposite is telling me that a programme that starts on

Let me also remind him now, so that he knows that this Government actually cares once money is spent, how we continue to use it. Let me remind him what I told him in answer to Question 352 of this year. At that date, there were five stations down, damaged locks, sparsity of bikes at peak hours; stations out of action and other problems. Stations at City Hall; Orange Bastion; Europort, having to be restarted manually several times during the day because they were breaking down. At the Frontier, of a potential 45 locks available to clients, only 12. Bike availability, from a maximum of 130, 18 are locked, 31 have their anti-tilt tags broken and there are no spares to repair them; 12 require spares to make them roadworthy; 22 are in reserve, but these may have problems with their anti-tilt mechanisms, which leaves 47 bikes available to our client-base of 419.

It seems pretty rushed and desperate to me, Mr Speaker, and this so ballyhooed ‘paradigm shift’, trumpeted by the Hon. Mr Figueras in respect of transport – à la GSD, Mr Speaker – can only translate into ‘money is no object, stupid; there’s an Election! Let’s just throw money at the problem.’

Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Mr Figueras were politically honest, and he is telling us that his Government gave importance to transport, then an urban bike renewal scheme would have been phased through a first, second, third or fourth term of office, not a few days before the Election is called. So let him not talk to us, Mr Speaker, of paradigm shifts, when it is this Government that has an environmental filter and has been shown in all policy announcements made today, Mr Speaker.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, by any objective standard, the Government is clearly prioritising investment in the right places – in the Port; in the GMA; in Tourism; in Public Transport and Commercial Affairs – that will maximise the creation opportunities for Gibraltar. Not only that, Mr Speaker, but from the outset, all Members of this Government have been accessible to everyone – to all who have sought to meet with us. Within weeks, we have demolished, Mr Speaker, whether they believe it or not, the veils of secrecy of Government and opened our Parliamentary and Government processes.

The Hon. Mr Figueras clearly does not remember that when I was a Member of the Opposition, I only had maybe two or three chances to question the Government, where he has had many opportunities, month after month, only after seven months of Government by this Administration, Mr Speaker.

Moreover, it gives me great pleasure to say that over the last seven months, I have been able to rely on the friendship, the advice and the support, Mr Speaker, of every single one of my Ministerial colleagues and I very much look forward to continue to work together for the benefit of our community.

No longer, Mr Speaker, do Gibraltarians have to endure the consequences of an overly centralised system of Government, where one man kept an iron grip on all projects that Government had to deliver.

I take this opportunity Mr Speaker to thank the staff of the Gibraltar Parliament for their kind attention and their patience.

I take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to note and to thank you personally for your own conscientious rigour and also patience, in presiding over our sometimes quite heated and tumultuous debates in this House and publicly record, Mr Speaker, my own personal opinion of the unfailing fairness reflected in all of your rulings. I, for one Mr Speaker, learnt a lot on reading your various statements from the Chair, in Hansard, in preparation for my various Budget addresses.

I also wish to thank all of my officials in my different areas of responsibility, in my Private Office, the GTB, the GPA, the GMA, the Department of Transport and the officials in the Bus Company, for their tireless hard work and dedication and for enduring my not infrequent requests at all hours with such good cheer and sheer determination to achieve the Government’s goals. It is entirely true to say, Mr Speaker, that it would be impossible to have done so much in so little time without their unflinching support, hard work and determination.

(Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, after that political and literary tour de force, it is my pleasure to move that the House do now adjourn to 3.30 this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members?
This House will adjourn until 3.30 p.m. this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 1.21 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.30 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GIBRALTAR PARLIAMENT

AFTERNOON/EVENING SESSION: 3.30 p.m. – 8.45 p.m.

Gibraltar, Tuesday, 10th July 2012

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.30 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. H K Budhrani QC in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: M L Farrell Esq RD in attendance]

Order of the Day

Debate continued

Clerk: Budget speeches continue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

5 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, at the top of the agenda of my Department is the reduction in the current levels of unemployment amongst Gibraltarians and other Gibraltar residents – unemployment which is much, much higher than we had been led to believe, and which for the past 15 years, previous GSD Ministers for Employment and the Chief Minister of the time claimed did not exist.

10 Before I explain what has been achieved in the first six months from December 2011 to May 2012, and what I hope will be achievable in the rest of the current financial year, I need to remind the House of the influx of ever increasing numbers of frontier workers virtually every year from 1996 until the 2011 Budget. In that Budget, there was an apparent huge U-turn in policy. The policy of welcoming frontier workers, which had featured for 15 years in the Budgets from 1996 to 2011, was abandoned. A U-turn that I welcomed, the announcement that cleaning companies and building firms with Government contracts were to be required to engage Gibraltarians and other residents, instead of frontier workers, in order to fulfil their Government contracts – this was something that was being introduced for the first time. Previously we had been told: (a) that it could not be done; and (b) that it was not needed because there was no unemployment or because those that were unemployed did not want to accept that type of work.

I reminded the Chief Minister then of how his requirement that Government cleaning companies should remove frontier workers from Government offices and replace them with local, which I supported and continue to give effect to, would have been considered by him before 2011 to be a ‘pseudo-nationalistic and racist policy of the worst kind’ to use his own words. I said last year that it was good news that the Government finally was doing something to require construction companies that get public contracts to provide employment opportunities to Gibraltarians and other residents, but reminded the House that the statistics of the last 15 years showed a declining Gibraltarian participation in the industry and that instead of acting to address the issue, the GSD response had been to accuse me of manipulating the statistics.

So let us look at the statistics.

Mr Speaker, the Employment Survey Report 2011, which I have tabled at this meeting, on page 7, Table 24, shows the number of frontier workers identified by their employers as at October 2011. This figure is 7,589 compared to 6,329 in 2010, and if the previous Government is to be believed, the real figure is probably higher. The figure at 7,589 is 1,260 higher than a year earlier in October 2010. In one single year, the increase in frontier workers at 1,260 exceeds the whole increase that took place from the time the frontier opened until the May 1996 Election. That 11-year increase, by comparison, was a total of 1,048.

This influx of frontier workers last year was after the Government had announced the policy of priority for Gibraltarians and other residents in the 2011 Budget. The U-turn that I had welcomed in fact was no such U-turn at all, but simply paying lip service to putting local residents first because it was an Election year and the results of who was getting the jobs would only be known after the Elections.

In the same year that the massive increase took place, we saw an increase in the number of resident workers on the dole, and in those excluded from the unemployment figures by increasing the waiting list for a place on the £400-a-month, so-called Vocational Training Schemes and by the extra numbers joining the schemes in the run-up to the Elections.

Let me say, Mr Speaker, that the increasing reliance on an inflow of frontier workers is not a recent phenomenon brought about by the 2011 pre-Election construction boom. On the contrary, it started the moment the GSD came in, in 1996. By April 1996, as I have shown, the total build-up over 11 years of open frontier was 1,048 frontier workers. By October 1996, it had grown to 1,153, an extra 105 in six months. By April 1997 to 1,242, a further increase of 89 – a total of 194 in the first year of the GSD, followed by relentless year-to-year increases culminating in the all-time record of 1,260 extra frontier workers in the last year of the GSD.

That process is now ended. In future, we shall see no further increases in frontier workers, unless and until we have exhausted all our own resident supply of jobseekers. This is not what has happened under the GSD.

In their first year from May 1996 to April 1997, the total number of jobs in the economy was up by 20. The number of frontier workers in employment increased by 194 and the Gibraltarians in employment fell by 118. So in the very first year, Gibraltarians lost jobs and frontier workers gained them – a story repeated almost every year and denied almost every year, though the figures speak for themselves.

The total number of jobs at over 22,000 is not the same as the total number of persons in employment. This, as I mentioned last year, was especially relevant in the case of persons engaged by Community Care Limited as Community Officers. I pointed out last year that the numbers in this category was of the order of 700. The effect of including them as employees was to inflate the number of Gibraltarians in employment, since those concerned, according to the charity, were not employees, were not paid for work done, and an Industrial Tribunal accepted this position. The survey questionnaire therefore no longer includes these persons as part-time employees.

For the record, since the GSD has previously argued that their treatment in the past has always been the same, I want to remind the House that when originally included they consisted of people from the unemployed register, who had exhausted their 13-week Unemployment Benefit, were over 60 years old and were engaged on the National Minimum Wage by the charity and required to be available to do up to 80 hours of community service a month and that they totalled some 50 individuals.

The system introduced a few years ago altered the Community Officer position allowing him to hold a full-time job in addition to his role in the charity, which meant that the individuals were already included 75 in the number of full-time employees and therefore counted twice. In looking at whether we are providing job opportunities for our own people, it is to the level of full-time jobs that we should look.

Although in 2011 the number of full-time jobs increased by 1,679, a mere 77 jobs were taken up by Gibraltarians, compared to the 927 filled by Spanish nationals at a time when the locals registered with the ETB as unemployed was higher than in earlier years.

80 Indeed, the four-year record of the last administration from 2007 to 2011 is even worse. A total of 2,383 extra full-time jobs, of which 1,048 were filled by Spanish nationals whilst the number of Gibraltarians in employment actually fell below the level of 2007. There were less Gibraltarians in full-time employment in 2011 than in 2007 and 1,548 more Spanish nationals. So much for the success of the last term of office of the GSD.

85 Given that Gibraltarians in full-time employment in April 1996 was 8,164, what we have is a 15-year period when full-time jobs grew by 7,749, out of which a mere 380 went to Gibraltarians. Three hundred and eighty in 15 years, Mr Speaker, an average of 25 jobs a year for our own people out of an average of 560 jobs a year.

90 I anticipate, Mr Speaker, that full-time employment in the economy will, from now on, provide jobs for Gibraltarians and other residents and that the Employment Surveys will reflect this situation at an ever increasing level. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

This influx, encouraged and welcomed by the GSD Government, has not just taken over large areas of the private sector, but also in the public sector we have seen its effects. The most obvious area to tackle to reverse this trend in the immediate future is the construction industry. It is one area in which we have to provide employment opportunities for our people.

95 In the Budget of 2010, the Government said there were more Gibraltarians in employment in this industry than in 1996, whilst at the same time saying that there was a Gibraltarian psychosis that a construction industry job was not one where Gibraltarians would want to work. Not true. Neither of these statements made in 2010 were true, Mr Speaker.

100 The position in 2011 compared to 1996 is as follows. In May 1996, there were 758 construction workers out of a total workforce of 1,461. In 2011, Gibraltarians in the sector had dropped to 687, even though the number of jobs has risen to 3,276. The ratio of Gibraltarians in our construction industry in 1996 was 61%, compared to 11% Spanish nationals, and in 2011 the proportions were reversed, with 21% of jobs filled by Gibraltarians against 51% by Spanish nationals.

105 I have no doubt that in the next three-and-a-half years the position will change dramatically and I expect to be able to report on the progress in this respect in next year's Budget.

110 In a year when the Government provided almost all the work for the construction sector and told Parliament it was making such contracts, subject to using local labour, the figures shows that the truth was the very opposite of what we were told. Our people on the dole and our money flowing out of our economy. That is what was happening in the construction industry in 2011. The very opposite of what we were told in the Budget.

115 I can tell Members opposite that the policy that they announced, but failed to carry out, is being implemented now. (A Member: Hear, hear.) I have no doubt that this year's survey in October 2012 will show record numbers of Gibraltarians in the industry giving the lie to the previous excuse that locals did not want to be construction workers. Indeed, if the Government believed this to be the case, why spend millions over 15 years running a Construction Training Centre to give youngsters construction skills qualifications which, according to them, qualified Gibraltarians for jobs that they did not want to do?

120 The reality is that there are very few of those who have graduated from the Construction Training Centre in the 15 years who have got jobs in the industry today. An exercise carried out by the ETB staff last December to identify the current occupation of graduates of the Construction Training Centre found that there was only one individual in private sector employment in the trade that he had learned after 15 years. So is this evidence of people refusing to take such jobs? I do not accept that this is the case.

125 As I have told this House in the past, the complaints I have had whilst in Opposition was that our lads on the building sites were treated as a minority as if they were the outsiders. This disgraceful state of affairs, rather than being a matter for concern when I raised it here, to the GSD was a matter of pride. The then Chief Minister, in 2009, boasted that there were 946 Spanish nationals employed in the construction sector alone and that the Government was delighted to be providing increasing numbers of frontier workers from the Spanish hinterland with job opportunities.

130 Indeed, he was so proud of this that he even went so far as to say that the actual numbers were much higher than the officially recorded 3,341 for 2009, as if knowing there was illegal unregistered labour from across the border and doing nothing about it was something to be proud of. But I am not surprised that that is how the Government felt about unregistered labour, as I will explain later on.

135 The former Minister for Employment, poor chap, was singing from a different hymn sheet and telling us that he was encouraging employers in the industry to increase their local labour and not rely on cross-border workers. I warned him last year of the risk he was taking in wanting to reduce the number of frontier workers that was the source of such delight to the former Chief Minister, who by all accounts did not have many other things that delighted him.

Little did I know, Mr Speaker, how prophetic my warning was, and later in the year he paid the price and was deselected as a candidate. Maybe his keenness to return to the ETB and work for me as my civil servant is because he knows that I am doing what he would have liked to do, but was not allowed.

Mr Speaker, another aspect of this influx of frontier workers is the effect on the Social Security Fund. Spanish frontier workers, or at least those who profess to speak on their behalf, seem to think that they are paying much more in than they get back. This is not the case as there is a recurrent deficit in the fund of £10 million, which grows every year.

The Social Security Fund as it stands is not viable. I have raised this issue many times from the Opposition benches. The hundreds of workers who pass through our economy and contribute to the Fund whilst here will one day become pensioners and create a future liability for Gibraltar greater than the one feared by the GSD Government as a result of the Civil Service Final Salary Pension Scheme.

I regret it has not been possible to move on this issue, so as to limit the liability at least and ensure that it does not continue to grow into the future. There is a manifesto commitment to act on this and I am still hopeful that it will be possible to bring in the new arrangements during this financial year.

There has, however, been progress on a number of other areas which are my responsibility and which we are committed to. The commitment on employment of putting residents first is well underway and producing results with the main area targeted to date being the construction sector.

The minimum wage is being increased in line with inflation and this will be done annually. The effect of this increase will impact on the pay of those currently engaged by the Employment Training Company as a result of the implementation of the Future Job Strategy as from the 1st February, as provided in the manifesto.

The Graduate Research and Development Company will also reflect this increase, as will the dedicated Supported Employment Company which starts this month and provides indefinite contracts of employment for those previously on fixed contracts with the Employment Training Company, as I stated in answer to a question in a previous meeting.

The Disability Allowance will go up with inflation this month and the intention is that Social Security Pensions and the Minimum Income Guarantee level will also go up every year in line with inflation in the second quarter of the financial year.

On the Industrial Tribunal front, the commitment to restore the discretion of the Tribunals to provide a basic award higher than £2,200, as used to be the case since 1992, has now been implemented. The intended reform of the Tribunal machinery to speed up the process has regrettably not yet taken place, but it is my intention to make sure it takes place in this financial year.

The bullying at work legislation and the protection for whistleblowing has already been announced and will also therefore be in place this year.

The commitment on Workers' Day additional public holiday and the restoration of 1st May as Labour Day is already in place.

The action on illegal labour is ongoing. Labour Inspectors are continuing to investigate all cases of suspected illegal labour and also conduct random inspections. One early issue that I discovered in this context was the failure on the part of many Government Departments and other bodies to comply with the law in respect of registering vacancies, terms of engagements, or notices of termination. It seems that under the previous Government, this was not considered important and Departments have for years been acting as if the law did not apply to them. This is quite extraordinary considering that it was the GSD Government who brought in on-the-spot heavy fines against employers for such failures, which of course means that employees are illegally employed if the Employment Services does not have a record of them.

The requirement of the law is now being enforced, especially in the public sector, and many Departments have been fined as a result. Such fines will come out of their budget and Controlling Officers need to be aware of their responsibility to hold managers to account.

It may seem irrelevant since the money comes out from one area of the Government to another, but I believe it is important that the Government sets an example in complying with the law if it is attaching so much importance that it imposes hefty fines on private employers who fail to comply.

The other element that was rife in both the public and private sector was an established practice, which the GSD Ministers apparently condoned, of so-called 'passing through' of vacancies. As much as 90% of the vacancies registered with the Employment Service did not exist, particularly in the area of frontier workers and all those jobs had been filled before the vacancy was notified. The vacancies were then posted on the board and many jobseekers had the frustrating experience of being sent to employers where the jobs were non-existent because they had already been filled.

This had a number of negative effects, as well as being illegal. It meant unemployed persons lost all confidence in the system and in the people manning the Employment Service and stopped turning up to seek employment through the Service, and that Employment officials were not able to do their jobs properly and help resident workers into work.

Action was taken early on to curb this practice, which has been considerably reduced, but not yet eliminated. To this end, the Department is committed to ensuring that the requirements of the law are fully complied with by both the public and the private sectors. Employment registration procedures are being looked at in line with the commitment to produce a one-stop shop and the idea is that registration and notification requirements should be done electronically so as to reduce the delays to the business community and so that there is no excuse for failure to comply.

As regards the Future Job Strategy, as I have mentioned in the past in answers to questions, the take-up in the first five months was five partnership agreements, even though it was strictly speaking not required in the first 30 days. By the end of April, this had increased to 29 and by June there are some 100 employer partnership agreements covering 120 employees. There are still some 80 odd VTS placements from before December 2011 with the private sector, which are waiting redeployment to areas of training linked to employment.

Clearly, I would have liked to have achieved much more, but I am grateful to those 100-plus employers who support the new system and call on others in the private sector to come forward and follow their example. There is still a long way to go, Mr Speaker, but I expect the numbers to grow steadily during this year. The provision in the Estimates for the three Government companies funded under this head of expenditure is £12 million.

In providing funds from the proceeds of import duty to the registered charity Community Care Limited, the provision in the Estimates shows a slight increase – I believe it is from £16 million to £16.7 million. This is on the premise that Community Care will continue with its existing structure as it has been until now. As was mentioned by the Chief Minister in his opening remarks, the commitment is to increase funding substantially, but before we proceed down this route, we are open to the alternative the previous Government has been claiming to have had in the pipeline since 2009. We have not had sight of any such system being prepared or in any pipeline ready to implement either before or after the General Election. We therefore call on the Opposition to produce the option they have before committing further public funds to the present system.

This request caused the Leader of the Opposition much amusement in the opening of this meeting. I hope it is an indication that he intends to put his proposals in writing, though it is difficult to see how any such proposals can be implemented without seeing the light of day.

The need to ensure a local supply of future job applicants is linked to my responsibilities for training and inward investment. Having identified initially the construction sector as an area where the resident workforce is in a minority, we are now engaged in a limited exercise for assessing the skills pattern of the existing industry and the age, nationality and residence breakdown.

This will be supplemented next year, when the 2012 Census results become available, and it will provide a skills audit of the resident population because new questions are being included this year to produce that information. This will be used in order to plan the future skills mix for this industry and at the same time we are looking at ways of increasing the availability of construction skills training to cater for much higher numbers than in the past.

The first six months of my Department has been concentrated on ensuring that employers give priority to resident workers in respect of the existing demand for labour. There has been an improvement with the ratio of resident labour on the increase, but more needs to be done to reduce unemployment levels. As we progress on this, the next stage this year in the process will therefore be a greater emphasis on training and more time and resources directed to attracting new activities and job creation.

Finally, I will just add in response the point raised by the Hon. Mr Reyes, that the person that he identified as having been selected to be the CEO of the Agency was selected a couple of months before the Elections, apparently because he had been involved in setting the Agency up in the negotiations with the Chief Minister. After the Election, the Agency analysed the cost structure that it had inherited and decided that the cost of this post increased the overheads and that it was an expense that could be avoided, and in the public interest to do so. Therefore the individual was offered, and has accepted, returning to his previous position as Deputy Manager of the Construction Training Centre on his previous pay and conditions.

I cannot see what the hon. Member opposite thinks there is wrong in the Government doing that. I would have thought it was perfectly legitimate. If they decided to promote somebody two months before an Election, for us to question whether the job is needed and if we come to the conclusion that it is not, that we keep him in employment doing what he was doing for the whole of his life in the Government until two months before the Election.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have the honour of having Shadow responsibilities for the Civil Service, the Public Sector as a whole, Political, Democratic and Civic Reform, Financial Services, Gaming, Justice and Employment.

Mr Speaker, the Government has only been in office for seven months and we have been careful during that time to allow the Government enough time to develop their own policies for continued success in areas that are extremely important to Gibraltar and that have already enjoyed considerable success during our tenure in office, areas such as financial services and gaming. In financial services, for example, I note from Minister Licudi's speech to the accounting fraternity, and indeed, to this House yesterday, that their policy is very much a continuation of our own policy, and that is very welcome indeed.

It is this party that successfully repositioned the Finance Centre as a compliant, reputable and white listed 'onshore' European Finance Centre, with sustained quality growth and development, and a commitment to the high standards of regulation, probity and safe practice established over the last decade needs to continue. In addition, what we believe the Government needs to do is not only to continue to develop existing business areas, such as insurance, funds and private client work, but to identify new ones.

As a person who practises in the area and co-drafted the Collective Investment (Experienced Investor) Regulations in 2005, and indeed had set up about 40% of EIFs before I became a Government Minister in 2007, I welcome the recent amendments to those Regulations and we need to continue to legislate for changing needs of existing business areas.

But we also need to identify new products and service areas, identify, pursue and develop links with new country, but safe markets, consider and pursue Double Taxation Agreements where these are deemed desirable, and ensure that relevant Government Departments properly and effectively support the Finance Centre and interact with it in a timely and efficient manner.

In this regard, we also welcome the introduction of QROPS legislation, which I say, without trying to be partisan, was drafted by the GSD when in Government and which could not have been implemented in Gibraltar without the conclusion of successful negotiations with the UK Treasury by my hon. and learned Friend, the Leader of the Opposition. Above all, we need to continue to listen to the professionals whose knowledge of their business and the markets in which they operate or want to operate is all important.

Mr Speaker, it is still early days, but if the Government does all that then the Opposition will be supportive of it. I am encouraged by what I heard yesterday by the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services, which amounts, in my respectful view, to an acceptance that we should not try and fix what is not broken and it is very much a continuation of the very successful formula that we applied when we were in Government.

Mr Speaker, turning to gaming: gaming is a very important sector of our economy. It employs around 2,200 people. From the Estimates we can see that gaming tax and gaming licences alone bring the Government £12 million in revenue. When added to receipts from PAYE, £16 million, and corporate tax relating to the sector, £18 million, the figure is well in excess of £40 million.

Those receipts of revenue help fund capital projects, investment in our health, caring and social services. They allow the Government to reduce the burden of taxation for thousands of families, which we believe must be the aim of every government. It is also a sector that has a positive knock-on effect on other sectors of the economy: the housing sector, leisure, retail, office, cleaning services and indirectly on employment in these areas.

It is symptomatic of the dire economic situation facing the European nation states today that the United Kingdom, which has thus far championed free trade and has no tradition of state monopolies in the gaming area, should seek to jump on the money-grab bandwagon by proposing to tax bets placed by residents of the United Kingdom with gaming companies outside it. The Opposition will, of course, be supportive of any efforts by the Government to meet this challenge. If it is consulted, or our help is sought, the Opposition will park party politics and provide any help that it can; if we are not, we wish the Government every success in meeting this challenge. It is after all their watch and they are entitled to seek their own counsel. It is not, of course, the first time that Gibraltar or a Gibraltar Government and the industry have faced substantial challenges in this sector.

In 2000, Gordon Brown abolished betting duty. It saw the return to the UK of some operators; but within a few years those same operators had returned to Gibraltar. In 2005, the sector faced a substantial challenge from the US. The then Government, under the stewardship of my hon. and learned Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, worked very hard to ensure that the local industry thrived and developed.

By being responsive to industry needs, flexible, discerning of who we allowed in, emphasising quality over quantity, and underpinned by high regulatory standards, the sector went from strength to strength and we ended up attracting the remaining large UK operators to this jurisdiction. Today, Gibraltar is recognised as the leading jurisdiction in this area for blue-chip gaming operators. We hope that the current Government can continue with that success under their own stewardship.

The Government, Mr Speaker, should do nothing at the moment that may tip the balance in favour of those companies leaving Gibraltar. I have recently been critical of the Government in the way it has handled the fishing dispute and its potential knock-on effect on boardroom decisions as to whether to stay or leave Gibraltar. Even if the UK goes ahead with its decision to tax bets at the point of consumption, the cost and the hassle of relocation back to the United Kingdom and the other advantages in the sector militate against any kind of significant exodus from Gibraltar; but these may be very finely balanced decisions indeed. We do not need ill-advised announcements on Facebook which plunge Gibraltar into an unnecessary crisis, which the Government then attempts to solve by allowing those same fishermen to fish with nets anyway. The gaming industry, Mr Speaker, and Gibraltar does not need it.

Mr Speaker, that is all I intended to say on the fishing dispute in this Budget speech, because despite exchanges across the floor of this House, we have tried to give them the space necessary in order to take Gibraltar out of the current crisis; but I am afraid that it is impossible for me not to refer to the statements made yesterday by the Hon. the Minister for the Environment.

Mr Speaker, of all the speeches delivered yesterday, his speech was the best advert and the best proof of the recurrent criticism on this side of the House during this Budget session that the Government is still in Opposition mode. It took the Minister a full 50 minutes, 50 minutes before he moved on from talking about the GSD Government to talking about what his Ministries were going to do for Gibraltar during the next four years. But it was his irresponsible criticism that it was the 1999 Fishing Agreement that triggered off Spain listing British Gibraltar territorial waters as a Site of Community Importance (SCI) over a decade later that raised eyebrows on this side of the House.

Mr Speaker, he may be new to this House, but he is certainly adapting well to the type of cynical political manipulation which the party opposite made its political trademark over the last decade. (Applause) The reality is that there is no link whatsoever between the 1999 Fishing Agreement – that did nothing more than return the enforcement of the Nature Protection Act to the way it had been enforced from 1991 to 1996 when his erstwhile leader, Joe Bossano, was Chief Minister of Gibraltar and Spain's listing of part of British Gibraltar territorial waters as an SCI. But, Mr Speaker, if anyone has triggered anything, it is the hon. Member with his ill-advised comments on Facebook.

The Government was elected on 8th December 2011. There were no problems with the way in which the Nature Protection Act was being enforced by the RGP until Mr Cortes, in answer to a complaint made by someone on Facebook that nothing appeared to have changed since the Government got elected, announced, and I quote:

'The Government does NOT support the 1999 Agreement and has given a direction to this effect to the RGP. I have already taken this up.'

So much, Mr Speaker, for Government giving no directions to the RGP in the way the Nature Protection Act is enforced. It is that announcement without careful thought that triggered the current crisis, converting it from a fishing issue to an issue concerning British Gibraltar territorial waters. Despite its seriousness, it reminds me, Mr Speaker, of the immortal words of Hardy to Laurel in the TV films Laurel and Hardy: 'Well, here's another fine mess you've gotten me into.' (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, we accept that the Government has every right not to follow the policy of our Government and to replace the 1999 Agreement with something else. I conceded in this House, and so has my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, that there is more than one way to skin a cat. If the Government had made an early statement in this Parliament carefully setting out its strategy, I believe the issue would have been handled in a different way and the Opposition would have been able to provide its own input and hopefully support any action planned by the Government.

During Parliamentary questions, the Chief Minister sought to palm off Minister Cortes' comments as not being an 'announcement' and that the Government did not need to make an 'announcement' because everyone concerned should have read the GSLP manifesto. This is an incredible statement to make when, with virtually every single Government press release, the Government announces the completion of yet another Government manifesto commitment.

Only this morning, the Hon. the Minister for Culture gleefully in this House said that they were now serving up at Casemates bigger and better calentitas, and that was another manifesto commitment. (Laughter and interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, most of these, when analysed carefully, do not amount to more than a row of beans, or a row of calentitas; but on the Fishing Agreement, which with a hostile newly elected PP Government in Spain was important for Gibraltar beyond any environmental concern, we should all have assumed that the manifesto commitment had been complied with, without any announcement either in Parliament or outside it.

Mr Speaker, everything that the Government is doing now, it could have done in December or January of this year. All the meetings with the fishermen, all the meetings with Mayors of the Campo, the experts, they could have held after making an early announcement in this House, which set a reasonable period of time within which to reach an agreement. In the meantime, the Government could and should have retained the status quo.

The reality is that for all the bravado, there have been no arrests, no more reporting for process than in the past and we are now told that the Government is working towards a situation where the law is going to be changed for the Spanish fishermen to be able to fish with EU compliant nets. It now, rightly or wrongly – rightly or wrongly – looks as if the Government is changing the law (Interjection) because of pressure from Spain. That is the legacy of the Hon. the Minister for the Environment which he has left this community in his first seven months as a Minister and I simply do not understand how he, of all people, can talk of triggering an adverse situation for Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, turning to Justice. Few can deny that we have made huge strides in the justice system over the last four years. (Interjection) The cornerstone of our policy was the construction of a new Prison and the construction of magnificent new Law Courts which have nothing to envy the best courthouses in the United Kingdom.

Mr Speaker, the New People, the mouthpiece of the party opposite, recently bemoaned the cost of the Law Courts, the apparent luxury in which members of staff now operate, and that we, the GSD, had gone ‘overboard’. It concluded by saying, and I quote:

‘The dignity and professionalism of our justice system is reflected by its work and by the judiciary, it does not need to be adorned by glitter.’

Well, Mr Speaker, when the President of the Courts recently, on the occasion of the visit of the Earl and Countess of Wessex, partly credited the magnificent Law Courts to, and I quote:

I half expected the Minister to raise his hand and say, ‘My lord, it is not my vision. We believe it is all terribly expensive and adorned with glitter.’ The reality is that the Law Courts are an investment for now and the future and will serve this community for the best part of a century; and yes, it was a ‘vision thing’ and we are very proud of it. (Applause)

Added to that, we also saw, during the last four years, a huge amount of legislative reform to modernise the way business is conducted in our courts, by the Police and by prosecutors, and in this regard we note the commitment announced yesterday of the Government to commence the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act and the Crimes Act in October of this year.

Our Criminal Offences Act and our Criminal Procedure Act are woefully out of date and patently unfit for purpose. I quite understand that the Government may wish to make some amendments to the two new statutes, but that really does not justify the delay that we have seen and continue to see with the commencement of both Acts. The reality is that the real cause of the delay is the muddle that the Government got itself into in relation to the age of consent. Our criminal justice system is still paying the price for the party opposite wanting to be all things to all men; wanting to be progressive socialists on the one hand, and also Christian socialists, as the Chief Minister described themselves during the General Election, on the other; of wanting to appeal to the gay lobby and the evangelicals at the same time.

The reality, Mr Speaker, is that once the Supreme Court made its decision effectively lowering the age of consent to 16 for homosexuals on constitutional grounds, even those on this side of the House with reservations based on conscience accepted that decision and voted in favour of the Crimes Act. Once the Supreme Court made its decision, the issue ceased to be one of equalisation. The issue was whether it was justified to increase the age of consent, which had stood at 16 over 200 years, to 17 or 18. The Hon. the Minister for Justice made that concession yesterday during the course of his speech, but that is something that I have been reminding this House and saying, both inside this House and also outside this House, for the last two years.

In the most cynical, Mr Speaker, example of the hon. Members opposite wanting to be all things to all men, since their now infamous ‘yes, no, maybe, vote your conscience’ debacle on the new Constitution, they abstained on the Bill and delayed the commencement of the Act because they said that they wanted to consult. Let us be clear about it. What they wanted was not to offend anyone prior to a General Election – that is what they did not want to do. Anyone analysing the situation could have predicted the results announced by the Hon. the Minister for Justice yesterday that the Government would leave the age of consent where it is. The consultation exercise was nothing more than a smokescreen to justify the parties’ opposite cynical political ploy of not alienating anyone before the last General Election.

The result, Mr Speaker, is that we continue to have on our statute books today provisions referring to intercourse between idiots, imbeciles and defectives. (Interjection) We continue to have laws where rape can only be committed on a woman, where girls are afforded greater protection than boys, where an indecent assault on a boy is only two years maximum sentence, where an indecent assault on a girl under the age of 13 is five years, and over that age is two years, and where there is no offence of grooming or proper offences governing abuses by carers in positions of duty in relation to children and the disabled. In this day and age, Mr Speaker, that shames our criminal justice system.

The hon. Members opposite are proud of their Apple Macs and their iPads and of continuously demonstrating how modern Government has suddenly become; but they should also know that in this modern day and age children need protection from predators on the internet. Grooming of children on the internet by predators is as much a reality as their iPads and Apple Macs and tweets and Facebook. It is that protection that parents want.

Under the Crimes Act, grooming is an offence punishable with a maximum of 10 years' imprisonment. So are offences by those in a position of authority or care in relation to vulnerable children or the disabled. The rape of any child is punishable with life imprisonment and rape can be committed in ways which are not catered for by our present legislation. The sexual assault of a child carries with it a maximum of 14, not two years as at present, and rape can be committed on any person of whatever gender.

By delaying the implementation of these Bills, or the Act I should say, because of the age of consent issue, we have risked allowing a paedophile who gets caught ending up with a wholly inadequate sentence. It may make a difference to a child or a family of an abused child; it may make a difference to others acting as a deterrent in the future. I have tried not to politicise this issue over the last seven months and I believe, Mr Speaker, that out of all of the Members opposite, if anyone can continue with our constructive legacy in this area, the Hon. Member, Mr Licudi, can. (Interjection) But, the way in which the party opposite has manipulated the age of consent issue, despite the potential consequences, is nothing short of shameful. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, we are also now at a stage where with all the improvements we have seen in the justice system since 2007, there can no longer be any more excuses for delays in criminal cases, or indeed civil cases. I know that significant inroads were made, and indeed continue to be made into the backlog of criminal cases. It would help if long committals became a thing of the past through the commencement of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, but the delays being experienced by civil practitioners in the listing of quite simple applications is not justified, particularly after all the resources that have been ploughed and continue to be ploughed by the Government into the Court Service.

Applications should be listed within a reasonable time and I welcome the announcement made yesterday by the Minister in this respect, but cases should also be heard within a reasonable time. Telephone calls and messages should be answered within a reasonable period of time. I know from my own time as a Minister that there are very good people indeed within the Court Service, but I also know from a short few months in practice and from talking to practitioners, that there is very significant frustration by practitioners in these areas. (Interjections)

The Court Service has been in a state of flux over the last few years with so much going on. The Court building, however, Mr Speaker, has now been completed and it would be a terrible shame if we did not improve in these areas. I give the hon. Gentleman notice that after the first anniversary of election into Government later on this year, these issues will be issues that we will focus on at Question Time. By then there would have been sufficient bedding time, and in the words of the former President of the Courts on the occasion of the inauguration of the Supreme Court in March of last year, 'there cannot be any more excuses'.

The Hon. Minister can count on me for whatever assistance or confidential advice he may want from me (Laughter) in relation to any improvements in the system. Yesterday, Mr Speaker, he congratulated the Hon. the Chief Justice on being made a bencher in the United Kingdom. I associate myself entirely with the comments of the Hon. Minister.

I also take this opportunity, and hopefully those on that side will associate themselves with my own comments, to congratulate Sir Murray Stuart-Smith on his recent, well deserved award, by Her Majesty, for services rendered to the legal system here in Gibraltar.

Finally, on justice, in relation to Legal Aid, we simply do not agree with the recent legislative changes made by the Government which help a handful of defendants in one fraud case. The Hon. Minister for Justice conceded, in answer to a question I posed barely two months ago, that there were also non-fraud cases which are exceptionally difficult and complex. In the premises, the logic for extending the recent Legal Aid rules to exceptionally difficult and complex non-fraud cases is, in my respectful view, unanswerable. Why the Government has chosen to assist a handful of defendants in a fraud case, only they know, but it is certainly not the right and it is certainly not the fair thing for them to do. We urge the Government to therefore do the right thing and extend those rules.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to employment matters and I turn to employment matters with some trepidation. Every political criticism that I have made to the Hon. Minister for Employment has been met with a degree of personalisation that is quite irrelevant, Mr Speaker, to the debate, and in my view demeans this Parliament. Some of the points made against me are true; some of the points are not so true. It is certainly true that my father and the hon. Member go back a long, long way and that their joint achievements are rightly a source of pride for him, for my father, for the hon. Member and, indeed, members of my family. I cannot remember ever wearing short pants, either when I was 10, or I hasten to add, at all (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) but I do concede that I used to follow the hon. Member and my father around absorbing everything he said. Given his feistiness at 73, he probably could take me in a mano a mano in the anteroom of this Chamber. I would rather, I have to say, take on George Foreman in the Rumble in the Jungle than take the hon. Gentleman on in a fisticuffs in the anteroom of this Parliament.

But, Mr Speaker, the Future Job Strategy is still fundamentally misconceived, both in its planning and also in its execution and it is definitely the biggest political U-turn in political history, and I will be implacable in saying so, despite the attempts by the hon. the Member opposite to personalise the debate, peppered with references to my family every time I make that very valid political point, either in this House or outside it. But I will do so, Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister suggested during the opening of this Parliament, by playing the ball and not the man, and I will allow both the Chief Minister and also his erstwhile leader to play the man.

In their manifesto they promised, and I quote:

‘There will be from 1st February a new dedicated training strategy with a maximum of 3 years and a guaranteed full-time job on completion [...] covered by a contract of employment with a wholly owned Government company. These new arrangements are open to all registered unemployed persons, all vocational trainees, all school leavers and residents on casual and supply terms...’

It will be recalled that young people were encouraged to attend GSLP headquarters during the General Election to sign up to the scheme. Mr Speaker, both myself and also Elliot Phillips, the spokesman for the PDP at the time, spent an hour debating on public television with the Hon. the Minister – now the Minister for Justice, Mr Licudi – arguing how guaranteeing employment for 1,100 people in a Government-owned company was ruinous, radical in the Soviet sense, and impossible. That Members opposite were guaranteeing permanent employment in a Government-owned company was also the way the commitment was interpreted by many young people in Gibraltar, who gave notice to their employers in the private sector during the Election campaign, because the GSLP were going to employ them in the public sector.

It is simply not credible to say, as the Government suggested now, after they had bagged the votes of people, that they never guaranteed a job in the public sector in a Government-owned company and that the guarantee was limited to the private sector. It is one of the most cynical political manoeuvres I have seen performed ever.

We now find, Mr Speaker, that in reality, firstly, there is no new training scheme as suggested in the manifesto, just the same training schemes that were there before the Election, which my hon. Friend, Mr Montiel presided over when he was a Government Minister. In many cases no ‘dedicated training’ is being delivered at all and trainees are just collecting their £750, but nothing is done to prepare them for the future. Mr Speaker, it is not about paying people more; it is about training them for a job and for the future.

Secondly, no one is guaranteed a job in a Government-owned company after their training.

Thirdly, the private sector is expected to take on trainees and ‘guarantee’ them a job by signing a contract with the Government repaying the cost of training if they are not taken on permanently – an unattractive proposition for the majority of employers. If this had been made clear at Election time, Mr Speaker, people would have seen through the scheme.

Fourthly, only a selected very few unemployed have been allowed onto the Future Job Strategy Scheme – most of them, Mr Speaker, people who had already been trainees on 8th December and ceased to become trainees during the course of their tenure in office. The vast majority of the unemployed have not been allowed onto the scheme as promised in their manifesto.

Fifthly, even if the unemployed are allowed onto the scheme, it will be by invitation only, not by right, because there would be a need for an employer willing to train that individual and sign a contract that ‘guarantees’, and I use the term loosely, that individual with a full-time job at the end of his or her training.

Mr Speaker, increasing the pay of trainees is obviously popular and we welcome it, but it does not provide trainees with the long-term job security, it does not prepare them for the future and it is a big concern, certainly on this side of the House, that people may be expected to remain as ‘trainees’ on the minimum wage in perpetuity, or sacked if they cannot be placed in permanent jobs. In this regard, we note that only 11-month contracts are issued and we wait to see – we wait to see – how many people are provided with worthwhile jobs and where.

And to boot, the position of the Hon. the Minister for Employment continuously shifts on this issue, almost on a monthly basis. In January of this year, the hon. Member told me that despite the clear manifesto pledge, the unemployed would not be allowed onto the scheme until the summer. A month ago, he told me a few unemployed had been allowed onto the scheme. We are very happy, Mr Speaker, for that very lucky minority. Whether they were chosen ‘a dedo’ – a term used by the Chief Minister on a number of occasions in this House – from those who signed up to the scheme at Election time at GSLP headquarters, or not, the reality is that they have not kept to their promise to the unemployed.

At a recent debate on ‘Viewpoint’, the hon. Member said that unemployment would be eradicated by the end of this year. We hope, Mr Speaker, that he succeeds in that enterprise for the sake of all those people on the unemployment list who were promised a job on the minimum wage in a Government-owned company at Election time.

The Future Job Strategy and the Public Service: what we will watch out for, Mr Speaker, is the dumbing down of the entrance requirement to the Public Service. One thing is guaranteeing trainees a job in a Government-owned company; quite another is to dumb down the entrance requirements to the public sector in order to save the hon. Member’s political bacon, because he has to place all these trainees whom he promised a job and guaranteed a job at Election time.

We note that the hon. Member said in answers to my questions that he personally believed that if you are good enough, you should be allowed into the Public Service, whatever the entrance requirements. When pushed on whether that was Government policy he said – oddly, as he is accountable only for Government policy – that that was his personal view, but would not be drawn on Government policy.

When I asked Mr Linares that very same question in respect of cadets who were placed in the Culture Department, he would not be drawn either, and just referred me to the answer provided by Minister Bossano – although I note that in an unguarded moment, the Minister for Culture did say that placing cadets within Government Departments was designed to give them, and I quote, ‘an edge’ when the time came for them to apply for those vacancies that arose within those Departments.

Mr Speaker, the entry requirements to the Public Service cannot be dumbed down in order to make up for an ill-conceived Future Job Strategy policy. It is also hugely unfair on the people who were not trainees on 8th December 2011 and will not be provided with a level playing field when they try to improve their situation in life.

Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, is a small place and there are already reports coming to us from concerned applicants in respect of four Information Officer posts recently advertised within the GDC. It appears 290 people applied for these vacancies, together with two other vacancies as Coach Park Attendant and in Accounts. Dozens of people were interviewed.

The information that we have from the dissatisfied is that the Board apparently selected four candidates and that the Minister for Employment has insisted that three cadets from the Future Job Strategy be employed on 11-month contracts instead, because all the successful candidates were already employed in the private sector. That cannot, Mr Speaker, be right, and we condemn it in the strongest possible terms. (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

Young people who are already employed should not be the victims of ‘undeliverable’ promises made by the Government at Election time in respect of the Future Job Strategy. They are also entitled to better themselves and seek opportunities for development and progression. These are not isolated examples, and it appears, despite denials from that side of the House, that there is a systematic attempt to ensure Future Job Strategy cadets get preferential access to the public sector at the expense of those already employed in the private sector. Mr Speaker, I know that there have been representations made to the Hon. the Chief Minister in this regard and I sincerely hope that the Hon. the Chief Minister gets to grips with this situation and reins in his colleague, the Hon. the Minister for Employment.

I turn to unemployment. Mr Speaker, during my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition’s tenure as Chief Minister, the number of jobs in Gibraltar went up from 12,975 to 22,247, an increase 9,272 new jobs, or 71% and a record number of Gibraltarians in jobs. Mr Speaker, unemployment last year was less than 2% and the economy created 500 new jobs in the last financial year alone, that we were solely responsible for.

The Hon. the Minister for Employment has on a number of occasions stated that unemployment was not 421 last year – he has repeated it during the speech today – when we were in Government, but closer to 1,100 because the figure of 421 did not take into account VTS and other trainees or Community Service officers. Mr Speaker, this is a cynical manipulation of the concept of what constitutes an unemployed as one is likely to see. We disagree fundamentally with the notion that if someone is being trained, he is unemployed.

The definition of ‘unemployed’ is internationally agreed and recommended by the International Labour Organisation (ILO) an agency of the United Nations, and he should know, and I am sure that he knows, that people on Government-supported training schemes are counted as being employed for the purpose of the definition of ‘unemployed’.

Mr Speaker, in relation to Community Service officers, that he says we should have been regarding as unemployed, well, Mr Speaker, we are treating Community Service officers, or we treated Community Service officers as exactly the same, in exactly the same way as they treated it, or he treated it when he was Chief Minister for 8 years.

Mr Speaker, one of the best indicators of whether there are more or less people in employment today is by references to applications received for Unemployment Benefit in the first six months of this year. According to those figures published on the Government website, there were 435 applicants for Unemployment Benefit in those six months and 364 applications approved, compared to 359 applications received for the same period last year and 319 approved. There is therefore an increase in those applying for Unemployment Benefit of some 21% and an increase in those approved to receive Unemployment Benefit of 14% for the same period this year compared to last year. These cannot, of course, Mr Speaker, be Spanish workers, because they will apply and receive Unemployment Benefit on the other side of the border. These are people who are resident here in Gibraltar.

In addition, Mr Speaker, the unemployment figures have always been calculated in the same way and, as I pointed out recently to him in a 'Viewpoint' debate, during his eight years as Chief Minister the average yearly unemployment figure never went below 456 in 1995. In other words, the lowest average was 456 in 1995 when he was Chief Minister and the highest during those eight years was 789 in 1993. During the time that the Leader of the Opposition was Chief Minister, the lowest average was 313 in 2000 and the highest average was 483 in 1997, the year after he took over from the Minister for Employment as Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the 421 unemployed that there were last year at Election time has to, of course, be measured in the context of a far larger economy and a far larger labour market. Four hundred and twenty-one unemployed last year is far more respectable than the figure of 483 in the last year when he was Chief Minister and presided over a far smaller labour market.

Mr Speaker, we have already expressed concern (Interjection) that within a month of being elected, well over 300 workers in the construction sector were made redundant, of which 45 were resident workers. This does not take into account redundancies in areas related to the construction sector. The Minister for Employment says this compares with other years. It is, however, obvious that we are seeing more people applying and receiving Unemployment Benefit.

We also continue to express concern in relation to the construction sector and the effect that the sudden freeze placed by the Government on construction work as soon as they got elected has had and continues to have on that sector and related sectors. That freeze could have been phased over a period of time and it is simply not good enough, Mr Speaker, for the Minister for Employment to say to me, in answers to questions, that the strong will survive and those that are not will not. It is not true to say, Mr Speaker, as he has said today during the course of his speech, that we had ignored the sector.

Mr Speaker, there were very worthwhile training schemes being undertaken by the construction sector and, as he well knows, all of those who completed those courses always found a job in the construction sector. Indeed, Mr Speaker, I can tell you from my own experience as Minister for Justice, that in the last year that we were in office, my Ministry alone managed to place 47 individuals within the construction sector using the Government's Construction Scheme.

Mr Speaker, I also need to go off-piste, off my speech, to answer some of the points that the Hon. the Minister for Employment made in relation to foreign labour. He said in his usual pseudo nationalistic and, in my view, misconceived discourse, the same discourse that he has pronounced for the last four years, that there were battalions of foreign workers that were coming into Gibraltar, displacing Gibraltarian workers from jobs that they could have had. Mr Speaker, any starting point for this debate, if we are to have a serious debate, has to be in the context that Gibraltar is part of the European Union, that we cannot prevent anybody from coming here to Gibraltar as long as they are nationals of the European Union and competing openly and fairly in the labour market. We cannot, in addition, prevent companies, if they so choose, from employing anyone they choose as long as they are EU nationals. But, Mr Speaker, even setting the debate into its proper context – [Technical interference] and resumed its sitting at 4.55 p.m.*

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Even the machines are tired of this, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I was placing into its proper context the point made by the Employment Minister about battalions of foreign workers coming to Gibraltar and taking jobs from Gibraltarians.

Mr Speaker, but the reality is that, since 1996, the economy has provided or has created over 9,000 extra jobs. Well, Mr Speaker, there ain't 9,000 Gibraltarians and have never been 9,000 Gibraltarians unemployed in Gibraltar! The reality is that, if we have had an economy that has grown by over 300% during that period, that economic growth has actually been serviced, as was inevitable, by indeed a large element of foreign labour. Those 9,000 jobs needed to be, Mr Speaker, in our view, foreign labour because, of course, there were not enough Gibraltarians to actually service that economic growth. But, Mr Speaker, if one actually looks at the unemployment figures for that same period, the lowest that the unemployment figures ever reached, when the Hon. the Minister for Employment, Mr Bossano, was Chief Minister, was 331 during the last two months of his term in office – that is the lowest that unemployment ever got to, the monthly unemployment figures.

The lowest monthly unemployment figures when the GSD were in office was in 2000 when the figure reached 280. In other words, unemployment figures have never fallen below 280 in Gibraltar in the history of when statistics were produced in Gibraltar showing unemployment figures. In that context, when you look at that figure of around 300, unemployment figures that have always existed in Gibraltar, and you then compare it to the unemployment figures last year, for example, of 421, the maximum that the Hon. Minister can actually criticise, or the extent of his criticism, is that there were 121 people that the foreign labour was taking jobs from Gibraltarians, because the reality is that there has always been in the economy a figure of around 300 unemployed, Mr Speaker.

But, Mr Speaker, it is very worrying indeed to hear the Hon. the Minister for Employment talk in the terms that he has spoken today during the course of his speech in relation to foreign labour. I know, as the hon. Lady to my left, and also the Hon. Mr Netto will say during the course of his speech later on, that there is an attempt at wholesale culling of Spanish labour from the public and private sector in Gibraltar. I include the private sector because we know that there have been employers that have been told, 'Either you replace your Spanish labour with Gibraltarian labour or you ain't getting any contracts from the Government.'

Mr Speaker, it is in the current climate foolhardy for the Government to allow and the Chief Minister to allow his Minister for Employment to undertake a policy of that nature, because it really is going to lead Gibraltar to more conflict with our neighbours in the future. I ask the Hon. the Chief Minister, Mr Speaker, to again rein in his Minister for Employment and to take control of a situation that could possibly get out of hand in the future.

Having said all that, Mr Speaker, I accept these are early days and I wish the Hon. the Minister for Employment all the luck in the world in wiping out unemployment in Gibraltar by the end of the year, as he said to me in a recent 'Viewpoint' programme, or indeed, by the end of his four-year term.

I turn to the Gibraltar Development Corporation. It is certainly true that the GSD Government's policy in respect of the GDC was that everyone would be offered the opportunity to be appointed to the Civil Service and that our preference would have been for everyone to sign the acceptance of that transfer sent to them in October 2011. Some did and some didn't. The ring-fence arrangements were intended to apply to GDC posts, or former GDC posts transferred to the Civil Service, as a group.

The GSLP Government decided to change these ring-fencing arrangements and narrow them down, so that those who remained in the Civil Service would only be able to apply for promotion within former GDC posts now transferred to the Civil Service and for those who decided to return to the GDC to be able to apply for promotions only within posts which were GDC posts. They gave employees six weeks within which to accept; less, if you take into account the fact that Minister Bossano explained the changes, not at the time of the Election but in a meeting in the John Mackintosh Hall weeks later.

Unite the Union at the time took the view that this amounted to a unilateral variation of these employees' contracts and asked for an extra two weeks. Two weeks, Mr Speaker, for its members to consider the proposal. That request for an extension was rejected by the Government, despite concerns expressed in correspondence to both the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister that employees were being forced to make a choice under duress.

Indeed, in the letter written on behalf of Unite, dated 27th January 2012, copied to the Chief Minister, the point was made and I quote:

'Many of these members feel that they have been bullied into making an abrupt decision and go forward in an atmosphere of uncertainty, distrust and fear.'

Mr Speaker, to make employees feel that way after barely a month in office must be some kind of record. The Government is entitled to change policy, but to give people a few weeks to make a decision as to whether to stay in the Civil Service or move to the GDC or vice versa, despite very real concerns that their terms were being unilaterally altered, is not reasonable. To allow employees to continue in an atmosphere of 'uncertainty, distrust and fear' is wholly unacceptable and irresponsible. It is surprising, to say the least, that the Chief Minister did not respond to that letter, despite agreeing with me at the last Question Time that any conduct that makes employees feel that way ought to be condemned in the strongest possible terms.

We note that the Chief Minister is to meet GDC employees and their representatives soon and we urge him to right the wrongs of the last few months. We need to grasp the bull by the horns on this issue. We cannot allow, or he cannot allow his Minister of Employment to do so. From answers to questions in this Parliament and his failure to attend Unite functions, or even functions organised by the Government and Unite together, such as the May Day Rally, it must be obvious to him that relations between his Minister for Employment and Unite are not what they should be. It is not normal for a Minister for Employment, with responsibility for the GDC, to refuse to meet Unite or any union, whether he or the Chief Minister have responsibility for industrial relations.

Turning to Parliamentary reform: it will be recalled that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition brought a motion last year for significant Parliamentary reform. The differences between this side of the House and the Members opposite was minimal. It centred mostly or almost entirely on the issue of backbenchers. We were in favour of backbenchers and the hon. Members opposite were against.

We repeat our position. We do not believe that there can be meaningful reform of the Parliamentary system of Government and Opposition without the creation of backbenchers on both sides of this House. The Government has advance notice that this is a critical issue for us, as it was last year when we debated the matter.

Mr Speaker, Mr Garcia, during his own contribution during his speech alluded – and I was not during the course of my speech – alluded to the fact that that there were now more meetings of the House, and that how could we criticise the way in which they answer questions. And he said this:

‘We have had to endure... They don’t know what we have had to endure when we were in Opposition.’

Well, Mr Speaker, I would like to remind Mr Garcia – though I do not know whether he was in fact... well, he was not in fact a Member of this House – that when Peter Cumming was a Member of this House, the Hon. Joe Bossano refused to answer questions because he did not agree with his position on Spain, Mr Speaker! (Interjections) So how on earth he can say to this House or to the newly elected Members on this side, ‘they don’t know what we have had to endure’, is beyond me.

Mr Speaker, there may be more meetings of the House, but the hon. Members opposite have to answer questions in a meaningful way and they cannot have it both ways. They cannot on the one hand say, ‘We are not answering any questions because the question relates to our manifesto or to a press release or to something we said when we were in Opposition.’ And then, when we ask a question about something within their Government responsibility, they answer it by reference to a press release issued in 2006, identified only by the year and by the number.

Mr Speaker, we also urge the Government to accelerate plans to televise the proceedings of GBC. We need to let the public see for themselves what goes on in this place. It is important. I think that in fact, Mr Speaker, the quicker we do so, the quicker we will eliminate from this House some of the excesses that we have seen over recent months, including an invitation, of course, by a Member opposite to me to go to the anteroom of this Parliament to sort matters out.

Hon. Chief Minister: I think that is the one thing that [inaudible] (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has also asked me to respond to some of the spokesmen on that side of the House, sweeping up, so to speak, on areas that perhaps were missed by Members on this side of the House. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, I start with Dr. Cortes. Mr Speaker, Dr. Cortes has, in my respectful view, become the master of the faux pas and the unfortunate statement or the unfortunate announcement, as the case may be. He said during the course of his speech, ‘We have a Waste Disposal Report that no one knows what to do with, or no one knows what to do about it.’ Well, Mr Speaker, it sure beats building an incinerator that cost millions, that was too big, that was never used and no one, Mr Speaker, knows what to do with it.

Mr Speaker, Mr Bruzon conceded that capital, he said, and I quote:

‘Capital projects had taken place during the GSD years.’

But he said that this has come at the expense of Glacis, Laguna and Moorish Castle Estates, and he also said that although Waterport Terraces and Mid Harbour Estates were good estates, others such as the ex-OEM Project were suffering from defects which would, in his words, and I quote:

That is the term that he used, ‘millions of pounds to fix’. Well, Mr Speaker, in my view, the hon. Member is walking on thin ice indeed, because I can see for my part that although the estates on the land reclamation were huge motors for the economy in the late 1980s and early 1990s and did go a long way to deal with a chronic housing problem at the time – I make that concession – we are still, Mr Speaker, living the consequences of shoddy work undertaken at the time and that certainly did cost millions and is still costing millions of taxpayers’ money.

But, Mr Speaker, I would have thought that the hon. Member would have learned the lessons of some of the statements that he has made and about overstating his case or shamefacedly exaggerating his case for political gain, because, Mr Speaker, for the last four years he spent in this House arguing and condemning the Government, the GSD Government, for all those battalions of Gibraltarians that were living in Spain and could not afford to buy property here in Gibraltar, only during his first session of Parliament as a Government Minister to concede and to abandon the manifesto commitment of setting up a list for those people because, in his words, there was no demand and only two people had shown an interest.

Well, Mr Speaker, I look forward to the Hon. the Chief Minister's reply so that he could identify in the Estimate books where provision is made for all those millions of pounds that we are now going to be spending in relation to the OEM Project because of defects, because of course, what the hon. Members opposite cannot do is make an outrageous allegation that it is going to cost millions of pounds to fix those defects and then not properly draw attention to the Budget book – after all, it is Budget time – and see where provision is made for those defects.

But, Mr Speaker, if he has spoken to anyone who lives in any of those estates, I do not understand how he can justify making those comments. Beautification at Laguna, the renewal of playgrounds at Laguna, the sheds, the solving of the perennial parking problem in that estate, the renewal of lifts at Glacis, major roof repairs in that estate. Does he not know that he is misleading the people of Gibraltar when he is making statements of that nature?

But, Mr Speaker, what I was absolutely astonished at, absolutely astonished, was to hear him say, I think, his point number four:

'I am going to be talking about the building of co-ownership and homes for rental.'

Then when he came to talking substantively about his point four, he said:

'I am not going to say anything about it, because there is an imminent press release that we are going to be issuing.'

Well, Mr Speaker, here I thought during the hours of sitting down listening to all the hon. Members opposite, that Budget time was precisely for that, to make announcements of this nature. But the reality, Mr Speaker, is that there has been an inconsistency between the statement made by the Chief Minister to this House during the course of his own speech, and the Hon. the Minister for Housing, because whereas the Chief Minister only made a commitment or alluded to a commitment during his speech about building affordable homes – in other words, homes for sale – he said absolutely nothing about homes for rental. So I look forward, Mr Speaker, to reading the press release when, indeed, it is issued.

Mr Speaker, I want to finally just simply say this in response to Mr Bruzon, that they are – despite my concessions before about all of the things that they did well – the only party in the political history of Gibraltar never to have built a single flat, a single house, single accommodation on rental for Gibraltarians in the history of Gibraltar. (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, to conclude, in many areas under my responsibility the Opposition has attempted to provide the Government with the space necessary to get on with the job during the first seven months of its term in office. We have no desire to be destructive for the sake of making political capital. However, we have seen a quite cynical U-turn on manifesto promises, such as the Future Job Strategy – promises that they must have known they could never keep when elected into Government.

We have seen a Government still in Opposition mode, more intent on trashing the GSD's record than getting on with the job. Not a session of parliamentary Question Time goes by without the Minister for Employment referring to his predecessor Luis Montiel. His attempts to inflate unemployment figures, even when he dealt with those figures on exactly the same basis when he was Chief Minister, just echoes the way the Government unnecessarily keeps the old airport terminal operational for its cynical political purposes (A Member: Hear, hear.) at Gibraltar's expense, or the way they continually trash public finances, both in Gibraltar and shamefully, shamefully on Spanish TV as the Chief Minister has done, simply because they know it is not possible for them to pay for every single promise that they made at Election time.

Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister, Mr Costa, Mr Linares, all went at length criticising the expenditure on the Leisure Centre and the Bus Company, but I did not hear a single one of them stand up in this House honestly and actually tell the people of Gibraltar, 'Look here, these two assets are losing money for the people of Gibraltar. This is what we are going to do about it.' Because if they are truly losing money and it is so bad for Gibraltar, well let them say they are closing them down or tell the people of Gibraltar how they are going to deal with it?

It is simply not good enough, Mr Speaker, for them to continuously refer to these entities losing money, but then they do not come clean about what they are going to do when they are in Government. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, they can fool some of the people some of the time, but not all of the people all of the time. As they move into their four-year term, more and more people will want to cash in their chips of promises made to them at Election time. At some stage, the excuses will dry up and there will be a heavy political price for them to pay. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, finally, may I add my voice to the voice of both the Deputy Chief Minister and also my learned friend, Mr Costa, in relation to Mr Speaker. Mr Speaker, I have only been a Member of this Parliament for four years, but I have hugely enjoyed my time here and I have always found you to be fair and consistent.

Mr Speaker, I also add in relation to... Mr Speaker, this is a point for Members opposite, that I hope that the Inquiry in relation to the disgraceful way in which the tax affairs of Mr Speaker were leaked to the press, that that Inquiry reaches fruition, that that Inquiry is a good thorough Inquiry and that the conclusions of the Inquiry are also made public.

(Applause)

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker on that note, may I suggest a cup of tea?

Mr Speaker: Is it convenient for the House to recess for about 10 minutes for refreshments? This House will recess for 10 minutes for refreshments.

The House adjourned at 5.20 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.35 p.m.

Clerk: Budget Speeches continue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, in the same way as my fellow Ministers, it is with great honour that I deliver this, my first Budget speech. I am truly humbled to be where I am today and very fortunate to have been allocated a portfolio comprising Social Care and Equality, both very challenging areas and very rewarding if we get it right – and get them right we will, Mr Speaker, because the people who will benefit from this are the most vulnerable or those who can be at a disadvantage and they deserve to have a Government that gives these issues priority.

Mr Speaker, I believe that a society is measured by the way that it treats its most vulnerable. We all saw how the previous Administration gave priority to pharaonic construction and expensive projects, not forgetting our luxury state-of-the-art toilets, as opposed to dealing with pressing social matters. The electorate voted for change, and change they got. Changes have already been made and significant improvements will be seen by the time that I address you again in the next Budget. The time has come to redress the balance and address the shortfalls that the community has inherited from the previous Administration.

Turning to the Care Agency, Mr Speaker: the Care Agency is a statutory body that deals with Social Services, including drug rehabilitation, disability services and elderly care. The Care Agency is a monster that appeared overnight in the summer of 2009, amalgamating the Social Services Agency, the Elderly Care Agency and Bruce's Farm, which had previously been run by the New Hope Trust, with no proper direction or proper structure. To those in management, it ended up being an uncontrollable beast that could not be tamed and in the end, slayed the tamer.

That the situation is not worse is a credit to the staff whose vocation and hard work have kept the Agency afloat and it is they who have suffered from the lack of support and direction from the previous Government. As with so many other things, Mr Speaker, it was all just a facade: scratch the surface and it was patently clear how superficial the changes were.

To put it bluntly, Mr Speaker, the management structure of the Care Agency is awful, and management will agree. In fact, the majority of the employees feel that because of the lack of structure and consultation in the amalgamation process, the situation is actually worse.

Social Services' employees felt alienated by management as there was the feeling that management did not understand the nature of the work that they do and team leaders were rarely involved in the decision-making process or with policies. The general feeling, when I speak to employees from Social Services, for example, is that one afternoon they left work at their office at the Social Services Agency and the following day they returned to work at the Care Agency, without knowing what exactly had happened overnight and without being consulted. Well, those who were able to return to work that is. Let us not forget the employees at St Bernadette's Resource Centre who were locked out for trying to assert

Even now, management is still trying to make sense of things because of the disjointed and haphazard way that both agencies were amalgamated overnight without consultation. There has been no smooth transition or homogenisation of policies even now, and, in many cases, employees' contracts have not even been legally transferred.

There are also issues within the Care Agency, such as irregular recruitment of staff and direct appointments being made without jobs being advertised. There are inconsistent job descriptions and requirements for various posts, and indeed, very irregularly, there is even a job description of a member of staff where he was required to report directly to the Minister, instead of the Chief Executive. In fact, there has not yet been a proper amalgamation of the two agencies, in mind, in spirit or in law. Indeed, most employees who were employed prior to the merger still consider themselves to be employed by either Social Services or Elderly Care.

Bruce's Farm was forgotten in terms of integration and management structure, perhaps because it is hidden up the Rock, out of sight and out of mind, Mr Speaker.

More emphasis was given to the refurbishment of the administration building at Johnstone's Passage than to the integration of staff. You will recall, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. Mr Netto in his Budget speech last year made reference to the fact that the office at Johnstone's Passage had had a total refurbishment. Like so many other things done by the GSD, so much importance was given to aesthetics. What a shame that investing in management structure and proper working systems was not given the same importance.

One of the greatest shocks that I discovered was that the salaries team at the Care Agency prepare salaries by hand using the antiquated Kalamazoo system. When I was told this, I genuinely thought it was a joke; regrettably, it was not. The Care Agency employs over 500 staff and the salaries of nursing staff and care workers are complicated to prepare because of the many different types of allowances that are paid. The stress that having to undertake this manual exercise causes staff each time that they prepare payroll is immeasurable, and has been expressed to me vociferously.

A new salaries computer programme was not commissioned until the end of March 2011, during the last term of the GSD. Its implementation has now been given priority under this Administration and finally training on the programme will commence this week. It is unforgivable that this should not have been done before.

Training is an essential component in Social Care. Hitherto, training across the Agency has not been focused on the individual Departmental needs. This is essential when the gamut of service users within the Agency is so diverse. The majority of the care workers do not have basic qualifications. They are the front-line staff of the service, and work with children in care, some of whom have behavioural issues, children with disabilities, adults with disabilities and the elderly in residential care.

Of course, there has been training in the past, but going forward, the Care Agency has now set up a team which is dedicated to driving the training and development programme forward and making it more robust, more relevant and more frequent, so that people undergo training as soon as they join the Agency. We have increased the resources in order to be able to focus on training and have introduced a new post, that of a Training Co-ordinator, to oversee the training and a further growth post of a 30-hour training assistant. In addition, we have also supported this new training team with an administrative post.

The Generic Core Training Programme has gone from running three times in the whole of last year to currently being in its fourth programme for 2012, and with two further training sessions planned as a minimum this year, and the aim is to develop the Programme further.

Furthermore, a Training Strategy Group within the Care Agency has been formed recently. The group is made up of employees from most Departments and at different levels, and they are tasked with identifying the training needs throughout the different Departments of the Agency. The group will also work together towards developing a rolling training programme that will give trainees the opportunity to gain a rounded experience within a Health and Social Care setting. At the end of this training, the trainees will have acquired experience in several areas and provide them with a good grounding to apply for posts.

Furthermore, we consider it important that staff should be able to attain qualifications in their field of work and be supported in doing so. Mr Speaker, while there is no doubt that in the majority of cases care staff have a vocation, it is also important that their role is more professionalised and there be accreditation. NVQ training was promised by the previous Administration, but it has been suspended for a long time now. We are determined to give staff the opportunity of gaining this qualification and the training group has identified a new Level 2 NVQ Diploma in Health and Social Care. This qualification will be covering more diverse subjects than the previous NVQ qualification.

In order to deliver this new course, the Care Agency is working towards developing the necessary requirements to do so. This qualification will be offered to as many people as possible and the requirements for the provision of the Level 3 NVQ Diploma are also under consideration.

In addition, Mr Speaker, the Care Agency Training Strategy Group is also focusing on the specialist training requirements identified by managers in each Department and sourcing the training to meet these.

Training is the foundation of a good service and it is an area that will continue to expand in order to meet the ever-changing needs and requirements for an organisation of the Care Agency's importance. We will also work together with the GHA School of Health Studies where necessary.

Historically, Mr Speaker, the Care Agency has worked in isolation with very little communication with other Government Departments. In fact, unbelievably, there has even been little communication between different Departments within the Agency. Given that there is such a tremendous amount of overlap with other Departments, such as Health, in particular occupational therapy, Education and Housing, very good inter-agency working relationships have been formed recently where people from the different Departments have been working with the Care Agency on a variety of projects in an unprecedented manner, resulting in a holistic approach and in a better end product. Unfortunately, due to the problems caused by the lack of planning and provision of resources by the former Administration, the Care Agency is an organisation that has lost all credibility externally and a lot of the staff who work within it have felt demoralised for a long time. Social Care is an important area of responsibility and a lot of attention needs to be dedicated so that its work can be of value and its employees also feel valued.

As against the previous year's budget, the budget for the Care Agency will increase this year by just short of £3 million, slightly less than double last year's increase of £1.7 million. The focus of this increase, in staffing terms, will be much needed key growth posts in Social Services, in the addition of two social workers, more nurses, more care workers, more physiotherapists and increasing the complement in the training department.

There is also a significant increase in the recurrent expenditure in elderly care as a result of the opening of Calpe Ward in February 2012. Furthermore, and more importantly, there will be a substantial increase in the provision of domiciliary care in the community to the tune of £550,000 and I will expand on this in further detail a little later on. There will be an increase in the services provided by Social Care, so not only will this offer support to more people who need it, but as a consequence, it will also in turn increase job opportunities.

To be clear, Mr Speaker, this budget increase is not about throwing money into the service for the sake of it; it is about real investment in key positions, expanding the complement to take the service forward and therefore improving the product that we are tasked to deliver. This Budget reflects a socially just community that invests its prosperity back into the poorer and more vulnerable sectors of society.

Mr Speaker, in respect of Social Services it is abundantly clear at all times, be it in child protection or adult services, that they are continually working on a reactive basis which results in not enough work being done on prevention and Outreach. This we have already addressed. Following an immediate review of the service, in order to alleviate the situation in the short-term, there will be two social worker growth posts in very important fields and an additional administrative post so that social workers can dedicate more time to social work. A further review of the service continues.

One of the growth posts will be dedicated to child protection. This additional resource will permit social workers to undertake much needed Outreach work in the community. It is important to do this work and identify children who may be at risk as it is important to know the cases that ought to be on the Social Services radar. It is only if this team is adequately resourced and staffed that they are able to do this.

The second growth post will be for a social worker who will be dedicated to working in the field of disabilities. It is no secret that for this Government, disability is a priority and this will be the first time that there will be a full-time social worker post specifically devoted to disabilities. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The new social worker will support the person with a disability and their family from birth through to adulthood. This will ensure that the specific needs of the person can be identified and met throughout their life.

This person would, where necessary, be the link with Dr. Giraldi Home, St Bernadette's Resource Centre, the Department of Education, the Employment Service and the GHA. This has been a gap in the services to this vulnerable group of people that this Government is committed to ensuring will be met by effective inter-agency work and clear planning.

Significantly, Mr Speaker, St Bernadette's have recently devised a protocol to work with the private sector in relation to the employment of service users. The Care Agency will also work closely with the Ministry for Employment in relation to supported employment. Social workers and care workers, who are the back bone of the service, will be supported by this Government in the important job that they do.

Mr Speaker, the Children Act 2009 was passed in Gibraltar with little consultation with the legal profession or other stakeholders in the field. As such, there are aspects of it which are impractical. There are parts of the Act which are simply unworkable as the necessary subsidiary legislation and regulations have not been introduced, even though the primary legislation has been in force for over two years. A review of the Act needs to be undertaken. It is significant to note that although my predecessor was involved with this piece of legislation, his own Department, Social Services, was not made aware of the law coming into force, as I recall at the time in conversation with social workers telling me that they were not aware.

Another gap in the Children Act is that it introduces a responsibility for the Care Agency to provide a panel of guardians ad litem, but nothing has been done about this and this has caused problems. No regulations or mechanisms, nor any panel has been created since the Act came into force three years ago.

Another glaring omission in the Children Act is the lack of provision for a secure unit for children with challenging behaviour. I am referring to the power contained in section 25 of the Children Act in the UK. This provision was actually included in the early drafts of the legislation, but subsequently removed because of the consequential expenses and the implications of the provision. For the previous Administration, an injection of funds to assist a child was not considered important.

It has become clear that this power is indeed necessary and this Government will back this up with the necessary financial resources. Work in introducing this provision into the legislation has already commenced, but more importantly, so has work on the supporting regulations and planning the resources and infrastructure within the Care Agency to be able to deliver the best treatment and support for children who display challenging behaviour. There will be a full review of the Children Act to identify the gaps in the legislation.

In relation to the adult team at Social Services, Mr Speaker, they deal with a lot of vulnerable adults and are now able to work better given the improved relationship, both within the Care Agency and other Departments, and particularly as a result of the reform of the Elderly Care Services. When we took office, Mr Speaker, there was a backlog of Social Services reports for matters considered by the Housing Allocation Committee. This was already addressed some months ago and there is no longer any backlog.

Mr Speaker, the Court Service team is managed by the Adult team and we recognise that the implementation of the Crimes Act will increase duties and pressures on the service and this is being reviewed.

The current Disability Service within Social Services is comprised of the Residential Service at Dr. Giraldi and St Bernadette's Resource Centre. It is intended that the service be expanded to have more resources for the disabled in the community and to develop the service at St Bernadette's for it to be a proper resource centre.

The complement of staff at St Bernadette's was recently increased by four care workers. This figure does not appear in the Estimates, as the requirement arose after the Estimates were prepared and this cost will be drawn from supplementary funding.

Despite what was purported this morning, Mr Speaker, it is not the case that different Government Departments worked together, and particularly not in the field of disability. This is obvious in relation to transfers from St Martin's School to St Bernadette's. It is this Government that has set about preparing a protocol to ensure a smooth transition to avoid problems with transfers from being repeated in the future.

Social Services has this year had a tremendous input with other Government Departments to ensure that there is integration of people with disabilities. A lot of work has already been done at the Elderly and Disabled Pool, which ironically, Mr Speaker, could not be used by people with disabilities because the hoists had not been maintained for years and could not be used. Furthermore, Mr Speaker, this year we have improved the GASA site by enabling access to the sea by the disabled and we have recently installed a hoist.

A final point on how this Government assists those with disabilities: yesterday, we heard the Hon. the Chief Minister announce various tax benefits for the disabled, including an increase in Disability Benefit. I refer to another manifesto commitment on disability, which is to considerably increase the £30,000 budget for orthopaedic equipment. Mr Speaker, given that this is a demand-led expenditure item, the amount voted will be supplemented from the Supplementary Vote as and when required to meet the demand.

Mr Speaker, although there has recently been an improvement within Social Services, it is not at the standard that it should be, but we cannot change everything overnight. I am convinced that if an Ofsted inspection were to have been carried out on 8th December, no doubt the service would have failed. We are now working very hard to bring the service to a compliant standard.

In relation to drug rehabilitation, Mr Speaker, the GSD would have you believe that they had a magnificent Drugs Strategy, but let me make one thing clear, there was no Drug Strategy for rehabilitation in Gibraltar under the previous Administration. There was a glossy document published in 2003, but it is nothing more than just words on a page, as in practice very little has been done to implement it. The Strategy establishes a Drugs Reference Group. This was constituted in December 2005; but alas, like the Drugs Advisory Council, it stopped functioning as a group soon thereafter.

Furthermore, the Strategy states that it is a five-year plan and was to be reviewed in 2008. It was never reviewed. It appears that the glossy booklet was shelved after its launch, never to be seen again, and this seems to illustrate the previous Government's attitude to tackling the local drug problem: out of sight, out of mind.

At the moment, Mr Speaker, the only Drug Service that is provided by the Government is the residential service at Bruce's Farm with aftercare. This is a three-month programme where service users, once admitted, are not permitted to leave the premises until the programme is completed. Mr Speaker, there is no rule that says that the 12-step programme can only be done in a strict residential setting. There is just no logic to only having a residential service available as a rehabilitation service, particularly one where the prohibitive manner in which it operates is likely to discourage addicts with jobs and families from taking it up. It is clear from the figures that this residential model – the only model made available by the previous Government – by itself does not meet the needs of our community. In fact, it does not even touch the tip of the iceberg.

The statistics speak for themselves, Mr Speaker. There have been approximately 25 admissions a year for the past three years. This is an average of two admissions a month. Not all service users who are admitted go on to complete the three-month programme. The average of those who do complete it is around 15 a year. While effective for a lot of people who have completed the programme, and those who do have nothing but praise for all the staff involved in delivering the service, this restrictive approach is not enough.

On the basis of those statistics, Mr Speaker, and the limited number of people making use of the service, one would be forgiven for thinking that there is no drug problem in Gibraltar. The truth, of course, is the contrary. It cannot be denied that there is a massive drug problem in Gibraltar and certainly that it affects more than 25 people a year. The denial of this reality by the previous Government is unforgivable and a concerted effort to implement its own strategy over the years would, no doubt, have alleviated the problem for many individuals and their families.

I will illustrate the tragedy of the situation in relation to drug rehabilitation in real figures. Very shortly after taking office, I visited Bruce's Farm and there were two service users there. The following week towards mid December, there was only one person in drug rehab. The recurring cost of running Bruce's Farm at the time was more than £½ million a year; in fact, it was over £620,000, Mr Speaker. The number of staff employed at Bruce's Farm will be the same, regardless of whether there are two or 20 service users. For it to be empty at this huge running cost is a crime in itself, as the money could have been redirected elsewhere in order to help more people with drug problems. Bruce's Farm can safely take up to 12 or 14 residents, so it is our aim to be able to maximise the use of the resources available.

Since January 2012, the number of residents has increased and has consistently hovered between four and six. It is clear to our Government that Bruce's Farm, as a purely residential model, does not meet the needs of our community and other options need to be considered. This was obvious to me as soon as I reviewed the statistics I have just illustrated, and we have already commenced to provide a Drug Rehabilitation Service in the community by deploying one of the Bruce's Farm counsellors to see people who, because of their circumstances, cannot commit to a period of residential rehabilitation. This has no impact on the treatment delivered at Bruce's Farm.

Already, this simple action of refocusing the service, at no additional cost, has meant that there are more cases being seen in the community than there currently are at Bruce's Farm. It is promising that this is giving extremely positive results already. The indicators are that a community based model would be more effective and expanding this service further is being explored. There also has to be more Outreach support and focus on awareness and prevention, as well as greater support during aftercare to help recovering addicts reintegrate into the community.

Recently, another of the Bruce's Farm counsellors has commenced working with the therapeutic team at Social Services and work has commenced undertaking Outreach work with children and young people. The team is also working on developing a more robust programme of drug awareness, particularly in schools with young people for the coming year. It is essential that there be a complete review of the Drug Rehabilitation Service and the resources that ought to be made available. This will be done in consultation with experts and partner agencies, and most importantly, there will be the inclusion of stakeholders.

I have been fortunate to have had many in-depth conversations with recovering addicts and members of Narcotics Anonymous who have approached me since taking office and this has provided me with an understanding and deep insight into the situation. The input from former addicts is the final piece of the puzzle in getting it right and it is important that we, as a Government, work with voluntary groups, such as Narcotics Anonymous, Alcoholics Anonymous and Families Anonymous, so as to get the full picture.

In short, Mr Speaker, the previous Government's Drug Strategy was nothing more than a myth, not to say a waste of money, because not enough people have been able to access the service. Drugs is one of the biggest problems that we face as a community and our Government recognises that it is also one of the most important things that we need to get right.

Turning to Elderly Care, Mr Speaker, there will be a complete overhaul of the Elderly Care system in Gibraltar. The aim is to have a holistic approach to Elderly Care, with co-ordination and support from different Departments, in order to ensure that there are no vulnerable adults in our community. Changes have already begun in the way that elderly people are admitted into the service. Previously, elderly care had very little co-ordination, even within the Care Agency itself. There was the waiting list for Mount Alvernia, the waiting list for Domiciliary Care, the waiting list for the Elderly Day Centres and the Register of Vulnerable Adults. Each list was held and managed by different individuals with little or no communication between them. In fact, Mount Alvernia staff were not permitted to make the Mount Alvernia waiting list available to the adult team at Social Services, even though they are different Departments within the same Agency. Our aim is to have one list for the elderly, whether it be for residential services or day services: there will be one point of entry and the person will be assessed as to their needs. There will then be co-ordination in order to provide the best service for that individual and a dedicated team has been put together to undertake these assessments.

Mr Speaker, when we took office, there was a waiting list for Mount Alvernia of over 580 people. The criteria for admission depended on the date that that person had applied, so essentially the person who had been waiting the longest would be at the top of the list, regardless of whether there were other people on the list with a more urgent need for admission. Mr Speaker, this resulted in a situation which was grossly unfair and verging on the ridiculous, in that you could potentially have a fit 70-year-old at the top of the list, because they had applied to be admitted on their 60th birthday, 10 years earlier, and yet have a person in their 90s with dementia, who was only registered a year earlier, at the bottom of the list. It does not take a genius to work out that the latter would never make it to the top of the list, if there were 500 people in front of them. (Interjection)

The artificiality of the waiting list also meant that staff would dedicate a lot of their time calling people whose names were at the top of the list, even though there was no real reason for them to be admitted into residential care. Invariably, on a lot of occasions those people at the top of the list felt fine and did not want to be admitted, so not only was this system grossly unfair, but this exercise of phoning round has for a long time been a waste of manpower. While this policy may have made sense years ago, when there were few people waiting to be admitted to Mount Alvernia, at the time when it was run by the Mackintosh Trust, it is a fact that the need for residential care has increased tremendously over the years, and indeed, it will continue to increase, as we all now living longer.

However, Mr Speaker, while that admission policy may have been what the previous Government inherited from the Mackintosh Trust when they took it over in 2000, they had 11 years in which to change it and adapt it to meet the requirements of today's society. Instead, they consciously sought not to do so, even when the waiting list exceeded 500 people.

To make matters worse, Mr Speaker, what is even more surprising is that the Care Agency Board had been advocating that the waiting list be prioritised on a needs basis, as opposed to the date of application, and had been requesting that the previous Government change this unfair policy, but it ignored the advice of its own Board.

Mr Speaker, this morning we heard the Hon. Mrs Ellul-Hammond say that the GHA Board is where all authority lies. Regrettably, the previous Government took the complete opposite view of the Care Agency Board and totally disregarded it. As a result of this Government's change in the admission policy, we have identified a list of people who are in urgent need of admission into residential care. These people will therefore be given priority as soon as beds become available, and in the meantime are assisted by being offered domiciliary care or respite care.

Since having introduced the criteria in January this year, 30 people have been identified as having urgent need of residential care; of these, 17 have already been admitted and the remaining 13 have been offered respite or domiciliary care. This figure does not include those who have passed away during this time.

This shows, Mr Speaker, that the right people have been admitted first. That, Mr Speaker, is how our Government looks after our vulnerable elderly community, by giving priority to the most vulnerable. Had this decision not been taken, then a lot of those identified as vulnerable and in urgent need of admission would still be very low on the list, Mr Speaker, and probably would never had made it to the top.

Insofar as domiciliary care, this is a vital aspect in the package of care available to elderly people. With the assistance of Home Help, people can remain in their homes and be independent for longer, and in many cases this is the preferred option to them than going into residential care. This Government has already increased the level of domiciliary care that is being provided in the community, both in terms of the number of people it is made available to, as well as increasing the number of hours available to previous recipients. This year we will invest a further £550,000 in this regard, so that it can be made available to more people. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

Mr Speaker, upon taking office we discovered that there was a waiting list for domiciliary care in excess of 300 applicants. Some of these applications dated as far back as 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2009. As with the waiting list for Mount Alvernia, we have commenced undertaking assessments of the needs of the people on the list in order to identify who would need it the most and therefore prioritise them. We will be assessing those who are still with us, Mr Speaker, as regrettably some have passed away while they were waiting.

As of 8th December 2011, 98 people were in receipt of domiciliary care, of a total of 925.5 hours a week. This figure represents all domiciliary care for elderly, adults and children. At present, there are 124 people in receipt of domiciliary care, and there is a total of 1,500 hours being provided. This means that there has been a total of 26 new people receiving domiciliary care and this figure includes 10 cases where the provision of domiciliary care has enabled the person to be discharged from hospital. There are also people who previously received a maximum of two hours domiciliary care a day and assessments showed that they required more hours.

1250 In summary, there has been a 27% increase in the number of recipients and a 58% increase in funding in the provision of domiciliary care. This means an overall increase of 42.5%, Mr Speaker.

1255 One of the priorities in allocating domiciliary care has been to people who have been medically discharged from hospital wards, but are unable to go home without domiciliary care, either because they live by themselves or the person living with them could not assist in their care. This resulted in people blocking medical beds in hospital unnecessarily. Previously, funding was rarely made available for this purpose. Very early into our term of office, the Minister for Health was made acutely aware of the tremendous problem with bed shortages in the hospital and, as he has already explained, had swift action not been taken to alleviate the problem, there would have been a real crisis in hospital. Immediately, the GHA and the Care Agency set up a joint hospital discharge team in order to work on a solution to the problem and free up beds, both by identifying people suitable for admission to Calpe Ward and by discharging others home in a safe manner. Even though this was a strategy that GHA bed management had been advocating for a long time, it had not happened.

1260 GHA bed management will refer people, who have been medically discharged to the Care Agency team for assessment on the level of domiciliary care that would be required. At the same time, the matter is also referred to the GHA's occupational therapy team, who will also work on the assessment of aid or modifications that may be required to the person's flat to enable a safe return. This is yet another example of unprecedented collaboration and sharing of information between two Government agencies in order to achieve the best result, and regardless of what the hon. Lady opposite may want to make you believe, Mr Speaker, this working together is an absolute first.

1270 In fact, the feedback from GHA management is that this level of working together is much more conducive to dealing with patient issues. At present, the provision of domiciliary care is subcontracted to the private sector following contractual arrangements entered into by the GSD Administration. Mr Speaker, we have met with that agency and renegotiated the costs that Government is charged to a price that is lower than that which was previously agreed, making it cheaper and thereby enabling more hours to be provided.

1275 Another of this Government's initiatives has been to significantly increase the complement of physiotherapists at the Care Agency. Physiotherapy is an essential part of the package in improving the mobility and quality of life of residents; this is evidenced by the work that has already been done. We recognise that under the previous Administration the level of residential care has outgrown the level of physiotherapy needs provided, especially given the satellite residential care that is now available in addition to Mount Alvernia at the Jewish Home, John Cochrane Ward and also Calpe Ward.

1280 Turning to Mount Alvernia, Mr Speaker, the building is in a very tired and sorry state. An audit of necessary works is being undertaken with a view to making improvements, including the dilapidated balconies which are currently being propped up by the scaffolding that has been there for the past 10 years. At my last visit, I was shown the staff area for the kitchen employees and the facility, in its current condition, is almost inhumane – it is literally a cupboard underneath the stairs. Staff who work so hard are entitled to be treated with more dignity.

1285 What has already commenced is the preparation for the installation of air conditioning in the building following representations made by staff. This was agreed to immediately and I am glad that it was brought to my attention. I last visited Mount Alvernia a couple of weeks ago and the place was already incredibly warm, so I can only imagine how tiring it must be for staff who work in these conditions at the height of summer, given the amount of physical work that they do on a daily basis, and particularly since they cannot open the windows due to the scaffolding. What a shame that this was not undertaken before, given that the cost is relatively low, given the benefit to both residents and staff.

1290 There has been an increase to staff at Mount Alvernia this year, following an initial review of the service. This year, as I have mentioned, will see the recruitment of additional physiotherapy staff and one person has already commenced on a part-time basis. Recently, following representations by staff and the union, an additional registered nurse was added to the fourth floor at Mount Alvernia, given that this is the floor allocated to residents with complex needs and it was felt that additional support was required. This figure will not appear in the Budget because the request was made after the Budget was prepared. Again, it will be taken from the Supplementary Vote.

1295 Other recent improvements to Mount Alvernia include the introduction of a security guard at night. This will, no doubt, give the residents and their families piece of mind.

1300 Another excellent initiative that has been introduced recently, and which users of Mount Alvernia have been crying out for, for a long time, is a dedicated shuttle bus service. I have to thank my friend and colleague, the Hon. Mr Costa, for the addition of route number 7 to the Gibraltar Bus Company, which he added so promptly following representations, and it has been a remarkable improvement for people who visit Mount Alvernia. Initially it started running on the hour, but soon after that was changed and the bus leaves Mount Alvernia every 30 minutes.

1310 Mr Speaker, there will be a refurbishment of the Jewish Home, which is very much needed. It is dilapidated to the point of becoming hazardous in areas. In November 2011, an emergency floor was opened for an additional four beds to alleviate the bed shortage problem in the GHA, resulting in staff losing their communal area. The home has now exceeded its full capacity.

1315 In addition, there have been long-standing problems with the electrics at the home, to the extent that it has been hazardous for a while for a long time. As soon as I was notified that this was a pending issue, the Care Agency called upon the Electricity Authority to advise, and the premises have now been made safe.

Another example as to why a refurbishment is required, Mr Speaker, is due to some works having been undertaken some years ago. One of the bathrooms was refurbished, but to a layout which is totally inadequate, as the bath was fitted against the wall instead of in the centre of the room and as a result a hoist cannot be used. This means that the bathroom cannot be used and only one bathroom is operational and given the number of residents, this causes problems and delays. The staff working at the Jewish Home feel completely demoralised because of their working environment. The refurbishment works at the Jewish Home will be undertaken in consultation with the Jewish community, with whom I have already met and have agreed to meet on a quarterly basis to discuss matters.

1325 In relation to Calpe Ward, Mr Speaker, by early January 2012 the bed management crisis became apparent to my friend and colleague, the Minister for Health, Dr. John Cortes. He has already explained in his own Budget address the extent of the crisis with bed occupancy levels. What we heard this morning, Mr Speaker, was nothing more than a complete fallacy that the opening of Calpe Ward had no impact on bed occupancy levels. That it did relieve the bed shortage problems, Mr Speaker, is a fact, and it is not circumstantial as they would have you believe. Let me explain the situation, Mr Speaker.

1330 Bed occupancy on the wards at the GHA was at 115%. This means that extra beds had been placed on each ward in order to be able to cater for the bed shortage, resulting in having 34 beds instead of 30 on each ward. However, there was no increase in staff. As a result of Calpe Ward and the domiciliary care initiative, bed occupancy has fallen from 115% to 100% since February. (Applause) Bed numbers have now gone back to 30 and this allows a better quality of care to be given to the patients. Mr Speaker, this is evidence that we are a Government of substance and not a Government of spin, as they say.

1335 Dr. Cortes opened up Calpe Ward, a ward that has never been used in the GHA other than for elective surgery, when it was used once in the period of 2005 to 2006 for a period of 11 weeks for knee surgery, and it has never been used again. It was open to be run by the Care Agency in the same way that it runs John Cochrane Ward in order to alleviate the bed shortage problem. This decision was taken as an emergency measure. Calpe Ward provides 18 residential elderly care beds.

1340 Let us not forget, Mr Speaker, that Calpe Ward has always been closed. Therefore, it has always been available to the GSD to have opened it up for the same purpose that we have done, instead of just adding four beds to the Jewish Home in November 2011. (Interjection)

1345 Calpe Ward was opened at the end of February 2012 and this was made possible by the sheer hard work and excellent team work of both the GHA and the Care Agency (A Member: Hear, hear.) who collaborated very closely, for the first time, in order to make it possible for Calpe Ward to be opened in record time. The Care Agency staff requirements for Calpe Ward are eight registered nurses and 18 care workers. The Care Agency's costs of running Calpe Ward this financial year will be £746,590, of which £635,346 is staffing by way of personal emoluments, wage related allowances and social insurance. This is a significant factor in this year's budget increase.

1350 Mr Speaker, on my second day in office, I visited the old Royal Naval Hospital site and the building due to house a residential unit for Alzheimer's and dementia sufferers. I was shocked at what I saw. I was shown a room, which I assumed was a holding room or a storage room, but was appalled when I was told that it was a resident's room. The next logical question for me was whether there has been any specialist professional or clinical input into the design of the interior layout and I was informed that there had not. To compound matters, the Care Agency management informed me that they no longer had any real input into the design and layout.

1360 Mr Speaker, let me start by providing some background into the residential unit. The initial plans for this building, in April 2010, was that it was to take 58 beds for dementia and eight beds for young physically disabled people. This was then changed in March 2011, where the bed capacity was changed to 80, losing the beds for the physically disabled. In April 2011, the bed capacity was again increased to 90.

Concerns were expressed by management at the Care Agency and the bed numbers reverted to 80, and these were the plans that the contractors were working towards when we took office.

At first blush, to me, as a lay person, the layout of the site did not appear to be fit for purpose. For example, not only did we take issue with the room sizes, not a single room in all of the facility had an ensuite bathroom, not even for infection control. There were insufficient recreational and dining areas and the showers were inadequate, to name but a few concerns.

The inappropriateness of the layout has been confirmed to us by a UK civil engineer specialising in dementia design, who the Government has contracted as a consultant in the design of the unit. The consultant has already visited Gibraltar three times and is in the process of finalising the revised plans for the unit to a facility which will now be fit for purpose, bearing in mind the constraints of the building. The facility will now provide a standard of care for its residents more closely designed with best practice. What was apparent to us, and will be apparent to anyone who reads the report, once it is completed, is that for the previous Administration this was not about people; to them it was just a numbers game.

Mr Speaker, this Government recognises the importance of completing the works to this facility; however, this will not be done at the expense of the quality of the living conditions for the residents. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Although the previous Administration initially announced that this facility would be ready by October 2011, and later by March 2012, the reality is that even on their own plans, it would still not have been ready as at the outset the contractor informed me that, all being well, the completion was envisaged toward the end of the summer 2012. The proposed changes will, of course, result in delay, although we have tried to minimise this by redeploying staff to continue works on the exterior of the building and other sites at the RNH, including the mental hospital, and although we have not yet received the final plans, it is envisaged that the facility will be ready for completion by the end of next year.

In addition to the residential facility, the services available to people with Alzheimer's and dementia will be complemented by a Day Centre; whereas the previous Government proposed to have a small unit at the end of the garden of the residential facility for this purpose, we will refurbish Block F at the RNH site specifically for this purpose. The Day Centre will be able to provide a day facility for an average of up to 60 clients a day.

The Day Centre is a pivotal piece of the services available to people with dementia, who do not yet require residential care, as they will be looked after while their family members are at work and this will enable them to remain in the community longer. The GHA and the Care Agency have been working jointly and closely in developing a strategy for dementia and the running of the Day Centre and the team have advised the design team.

Mr Speaker, this morning the Hon. Mrs Ellul-Hammond implied that our commitments are to finish the GSD plans and she listed, among other things, the Mental Health and Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospitals, plans for the Debilitating Unit and the Elderly Day Centre. Let me say that it is and was always planned to have an Alzheimer's and Dementia Residential Unit, never a hospital. Given its advanced stage and the amount of public funds already invested in it, it would be foolish not to do so; but what a shame that we will have to do so much work to make it fit for purpose.

Insofar as the Day Centre, it was to be an Alzheimer's and Dementia Day Centre, but a very small one. The one that we would build, Mr Speaker, is completely different and an improved model, and as for the plan for the Debilitating Unit, what plans, Mr Speaker? Initially, there were plans for eight beds within the residential unit of the Alzheimer's and Dementia Residential Unit – these were scrapped. The possibility of a Unit was explored at Block F, but there were no real plans for this and no works were ever commenced by the previous Administration.

So, Mr Speaker, the answer is that these projects will continue because the investment has already commenced. That is not to say that they will be completed in the same way as the GSD envisaged. I assure you, Mr Speaker, that they will be better.

The Day Centres for the Elderly – I mean ordinary Day Centres, not specialist Day Centres for people with Alzheimer's – are currently run from the morning until approximately two o'clock. They are run by Social Services every day at different locations: Governor's Parade, Albert Risso and the South District Senior Citizens' Club. The purpose of this is to provide a safe and stimulating environment for people living in the community and who otherwise would have little or no company during the day. Breakfast and lunch is provided at these centres, as well as a range of different activities. This Government, as part of its overall strategy of Elderly Care wishes to enhance the service that is provided and extend it so that more people may make use of it.

We intend to have a purpose-built Day Centre at Waterport Terraces, which comprises two commercial units on the ground floor. Although these units had been earmarked by the previous Government, there were no plans or proposals and the units have been empty since the estate was completed a number of years ago. It is envisaged that this Day Centre will take up to 25 people a day and it will offer a range of activities and social interaction to stimulate the users and help them remain independent and living at home for longer. In some cases, it will reduce the need for domiciliary care during those hours.

The Day Centre will be run on the same principle that it is currently run, although services will be enhanced because of the size of the location. It is also envisaged that it will open until five o'clock in the afternoon. By offering the facility to more people, it will eradicate the current waiting list for Day Centres.

1435 Mr Speaker, I now turn my attention to the Ministry for Equality. This Government has introduced a Ministry for Equality, and for the first time there will be a Ministry dedicated to upholding equality and human rights and addressing all forms of discrimination, and these issues will be prioritised. Equality is at the heart of this Government, as it affects so many people and cuts across so many sectors of society. We believe that it is fundamental that we have a fair society.

1440 Mr Speaker, equality is an integral part of our Government commitment and it will be embedded in everything that we do as a Government. Equality is about equal treatment and equal opportunity; it is about reducing disadvantages and bringing down barriers to build a fair society. It is not about giving certain groups an advantage, but rather to remove the disadvantage. (Two Members: Hear, hear.)

1445 Mr Speaker, the complement to my Ministry has been increased by an additional four staff, with a view to having the people in these additional posts help me deliver this Government's agenda on equality. With regard to disability, we will expand on the existing legislative framework. We will introduce the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Disabled. Work on this has already commenced and lawyers have already been instructed to review the legislation. Work has also already commenced on setting up a Disability Register so that we are able to have the proper statistical information available. We have also met with the Disability Society and the Down's Syndrome Support Group, GHITA and other groups and individuals, and have also established a working relationship with them looking at issues that affect people with disabilities.

1450 Mr Speaker, turning now to issues of gay rights. First I would say that it seems that the previous Government did not recognise that gay people have rights. They spent a lot of public funds fighting cases where gay people tried to assert them. In contrast, Mr Speaker, our Government recognises these rights and we have already embarked on the drafting of Civil Partnership legislation and hope that an advanced draft of this important piece of legislation will be ready by the autumn. The Civil Partnership legislation was introduced in the UK in 2004 and it is about time that Gibraltar caught up.

1460 But issues are not tackled simply by legislation or creating more bureaucracy. Legislation is only part of the approach and we need to take it further. It is about policy awareness, promoting good practice and engaging with groups. As a Government, we will work with people and with organisations. We have already met with a gay rights group GGR and have agreed to meet at regular intervals throughout the year, in order to discuss policy issues as well as to enable discussions in relation to issues that affect their membership.

1465 This Government is committed to set up an Equal Opportunities Commission. This organisation will be responsible for being a regulator and an advisor and will promote equal treatment. In the meantime, this work will be undertaken by the Citizens' Advice Bureau, as provided for in the Equal Opportunities Act.

1470 Mr Speaker, this morning I have been accused of offering no hope or inspiration to the women of Gibraltar who are looking for their voice to be heard (A Member: Shame.) and for equality policies, on the basis of a selective quote from a GBC interview that I gave, in which the hon. Lady opposite... who is actually not opposite – she is not present in the Chamber, Mr Speaker – has chosen to decontextualise and distort what I said for political effect. (A Member: Shame.) (Two Members: Hear, hear.) Mr Speaker, I stand by what I said in that interview, as well as what I said in my Chronicle article on International Women's Day, in particular that it remains a laudable objective that there should be a time where International Women's Day no longer exists, because it means that we are no longer thinking of people in gender terms. (A Member: Hear, hear.) It seems, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Lady completely misunderstands the concept of equality for women.

1480 Mr Speaker, I see that the hon. Lady has just returned. Let me start again, Mr Speaker.

A Member: You wish to repeat it.

1485 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, let me repeat it, Mr Speaker, because it seems that the hon. Lady completely misunderstands the concept of equality for women given the arguments that she has presented are circular and contradictory. Equality is not about favouring women over men for jobs, nor providing women with an advantage by offering them jobs merely to fulfil an equalities quota. Equality is about providing a level playing field to everyone without any disadvantage thereafter. I firmly believe that it is a question of selecting the best person for the job. (Two Members: Hear, hear.)

1490 What women should be fighting for is meritocracy, where it matters not whether you are male or female and where you are assessed purely on merit, talent and skills. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) My job as Minister for Equality is to ensure that discrimination does not exist and it is important that we have the proper mechanism to address it and that there be redress when it does. It will be a sad day for women,

Mr Speaker, when they get jobs based on their gender, and I would like to think, Mr Speaker, that I have been elected to Government on the basis of my ability, as have all of my other fellow Ministers, on the basis of being the best people for the job. (Applause)

Turning to civic rights, Mr Speaker, another area of my portfolio, and let me start with Consumer Affairs. The Office of Consumer Affairs will continue to be run in the same manner this year, but with a view to it forming part of the Office of Fair Trading for the next financial year, which will then come under the responsibility of the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, my colleague the Hon. Mr Costa. One of the main complaints regarding the current model of the Department is that it does not have any enforcement powers. Since 10th May 2012, it now has some limited enforcement powers in relation to certain timeshare and holiday products. I am advised that this is an area in particular that has been a long-standing problem for the Department, as it frequently receives complaints of this nature, but is powerless to act.

This Government has recently published the Timeshare Act 1997 (Amendment) Regulations 2012. These Regulations transposed a European Directive on the protection of consumers in respect of certain aspects of timeshare, long-term holiday product, resale and exchange contracts. In particular, the Regulations impose greater consumer protection, such as providing the 14-day right of withdrawal, the right to certain pre-contractual information and the prohibition of advance payment during the period where the right of withdrawal exists.

The Act will now apply to an entity that is pursuing commercial or professional activities in Gibraltar, irrespective of where the property in question is located, thus closing the loophole that rendered enforcement ineffective. The Act has given teeth to the guise of the Consumer Officer. For enforcement purposes, the Consumer Officer is able to compel the production of documents relating to the trader's business, and seize them or detain them. Notwithstanding the fact that this has been an area of concern locally for a long time, the Directive has been the subject of infraction proceedings that have been instituted on 25th November 2011, as the Directive should have been imposed as far back as 23rd February 2011.

Regarding the Citizens' Advice Bureau, Mr Speaker, it continues to provide valuable advice and support in the community and next year will see its 10th anniversary. Since 2007, it has been tasked by statute with the responsibility for the promotion of equal treatment of all without discrimination. Once the Equal Opportunities Commission is set up, the latter will take over this function. Until then, the Citizens' Advice Bureau will continue to promote and advise on issues of discrimination. The issue of resources and training in this regard would be open to review.

Finally, Mr Speaker, the Ombudsman's office. This is not a Government office, Mr Speaker. Its role is to keep public services in check. Its remit will now expand to also deal with complaints against the GHA. I have a financial responsibility for the Ombudsman, Mr Speaker, and that is where my input ends. The Office of the Ombudsman will soon be undergoing an evaluation of its impact in the community, at the request of Dr. Kirkham under the auspices of the University of Sheffield. This review is welcomed by the Ombudsman and it is possible that the study may provide a road map for the future direction of the office.

As an aside, Mr Speaker, I am happy to report that the Office of the Ombudsman advises that the number of complaints it has received from January 2012 to May 2012 are significantly lower than previously received. There is a table that has been provided to me, Mr Speaker, from the Ombudsman's office showing the number of complaints for the same period in 2010, 2011 and 2012. For example, Mr Speaker, for the month of January 2010, there were 40 complaints; in 2011 there were 35; and in 2012 there were six. In total, Mr Speaker, the complaints against Government officers between the period of January and May 2010 were 189; for that period in 2011 were 149; and in 2012, Mr Speaker, they are only 83.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I am also responsible for families and children, minority issues, women's issues and general community issues. I am excited about having recently taken responsibility for working with the Gibraltar Clubhouse Project. Although this is an organisation that is at a very early stage, it has a lot of potential, as do its members and those who are so enthusiastically driving this initiative forward. The Project has this year been mentioned in the International Handbook and is also in the Clubhouse global directory. There is a lot of work to be done by that organisation, but I am confident that they will succeed.

I meet regularly with a lot of charities and organisations from the third sector. We will not underestimate the importance of listening to and working closely with such groups in order to be alive to the issues that affect them.

Mr Speaker, I feel that a lot has been accomplished in the last seven months, but a lot more has to be done because so bad is the damage caused by the inaction and years of neglect on these vital services, that it will take time for us to bring the service back from the brink. The people in Gibraltar have been let down by the previous Administration and it is my personal promise that I will deliver my mandate and I very much look forward to implementing a Social Care Service that we can all be proud of.

Finally, Mr Speaker – (Laughter) one more finally – 1555 A Member: Three times!

1560 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – I would like to thank the employees of both the Care Agency and those who fall under my Ministerial responsibilities who have given me tremendous support since I took office, especially my PA, the acting Chief Executive of the Care Agency who had this most difficult job almost thrust upon her, very shortly before I, myself, began, as well as the members of the management team who have been working so closely with me during this time of transition to them, which perhaps has been particularly difficult, given the reforms that have already been made and are proposed, given the way that the Departments have been run historically.

1565 Thank you, Mr Speaker.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

1570 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I remember that first accompanied walk towards my Ministerial office at Joshua Hassan House from No. 6 Convent Place on 12th December after the last General Election. Here, I sat, still engulfed in awe at the whole situation, with the relevant heads of Department, to be briefed on the various Ministries that I would become responsible for. I remember clearly the dichotomy of feeling that came through, the sombre and yet hopeful and expecting underlying vibes that things would be very different from then on.

1575 The same rang true throughout the different Departments, where it became clear that the senior staff had had very little involvement in decision making. Their professional opinions had generally not been consulted. Their morale was low and they felt that they had been made to become unimportant. Staff complements within Technical Services had been depleted to low levels as the vast majority of all then Government projects were at the control of No. 6. Most works had been outsourced, regardless of cost and regardless of the potential savings that could have been achieved by using the skilled and professional staff that existed within this Technical Department. Instead, they had been left, almost forgotten by the previous Administration.

1580 It is the intention of this Government to change this, and staff are now finding themselves leading in various projects and although hard-worked, they genuinely appear happy to be of value. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1585 Mr Speaker, the actual inherited staff complement in Technical Services reflects a total of eight vacancies that remain unfilled, seven of which are senior, middle and junior technical grades, and essential if this Department can be expected to run efficiently once again. This reflects a staff complement 15% less of the approved non-industrial complement. Naturally, the Department had been working in certain areas and during the previous financial year, the Department had been involved in a number of projects including coastal protection and rock fall protection, as well as works in relation to their defined responsibilities, such as highways maintenance.

1590 Mr Speaker, this coming year, Technical Services has been tasked with developing and delivering various manifesto commitments involving coastal works projects, such as the beach protection works at Sandy Bay and Catalan Bay, as well as improvement works at Camp Bay and Rosia Bay. All of these are aimed at improving the condition of the beaches and bathing facilities as they currently suffer the detrimental effects of storms. It is clearly evident, as it should have been then, that without these works, maintaining sand on our beaches is simply not possible. The loss of sand, as to be expected, the dredging of which was evidently carried out in a rushed manner and without adequate beach protection measures, surely this was simply a last minute measure to ensure that bathers could at least bathe in the summer preceding an all important General Election, regardless of whether the sand would remain, as in the case of Sandy Bay, or engulf its users in plumes of dirty dust resembling that of a building site, as is presently the case in Catalan Bay.

1600 Mr Speaker, it will fall on this Government to put these things right, and works to correct all these deficiencies will commence within the next financial year.

1605 Technical Services have already started work to construct an area of reclaimed land adjacent to Western Beach, which will presently serve as a car park for beach goers. The slipway providing leisure access to the sea for small watercraft is being temporarily relocated for this bathing season, and presently facilities are being looked into in order to provide a permanent slipway for next year's bathing season so that the community may gain access to this natural leisure resource.

1610 Turning now to cliff stabilisation and rockfall protection projects: during the coming year, works will be carried out to areas affected by rock falls as part of the Government's Cliff Stabilisation and Rockfall Protection Programme. The clearing of the rockfall protection bund at William's Way will be the main project for the year. The area in question suffered a major rock fall and landslide a few years ago, and even though the bund did its job at the time, it now needs to be cleared to fully restore the retention capacity of this protection measure.

The Highways Maintenance Programme has proceeded with ongoing repairs of roads, footpaths and retaining walls. The Department balances the need to maintain the road network against allowing vehicles to circulate, with works to critical areas being undertaken during weekends and public holidays in order to minimise inconvenience to the public. Road closures for works are avoided during peak times wherever possible, and after hours and weekend work is the default condition imposed on contractors.

The new Road Maintenance Programme has already started with the most recent works being the resurfacing of sections of Prince Edward's Road and Rosia Road, both of which were badly deteriorated, as well as a stretch of Windmill Hill Road along what is a tourist entry route just before it reaches the Upper Rock Nature Reserve. Other areas will follow during the year. Funding is being provided for the purchase of equipment that will expand the ability for maintenance works to trenches, potholes and so on, to be carried out after hours using hot asphalt. At present, this material has to be imported from Spain, and as it is temperature dependent, its use late in the day to avoid disruption of traffic is restricted, by the working hours for commercial importation on the Spanish side.

Technical Services prepares a highways maintenance programme working within its yearly budgetary allocation, but the general state of repair, or should I say disrepair, of our existing roads needs to be addressed. This requires significant investment, which has been lacking for a good number of years. In fact, it can safely be said that our roads are suffering from years of neglect. It is the intention of this Government to accelerate the annual planned works on our roads. To this end, a comprehensive resurfacing programme is being prepared with the aim of fully tackling the condition of many of our major roads over the next three years.

Mr Speaker, work has already started on identifying a solution to the long-standing problem of loss of sand from between the paving stone joints along Main Street and other pedestrianised areas in town, such as Irish Town. Not only is this a source of complaint from the public and a potential source of accidents, especially for users of high-heeled shoes, but it also leads to the silting up of drains and sewers, which is where the sand eventually ends up. Once a satisfactory solution is identified, works will begin to permanently address this situation as per our manifesto commitment.

Moving on to sewers. Immediately upon coming into office, the Government was faced with a problem involving the collapse of a section of the main sewer along Line Wall Road, which caused a blockage and raw sewage overflows into harbour waters. I remember visiting the area the following day after the Election with my colleague, the Hon. John Cortes. Technical Services' Sewers Infrastructure Section worked tirelessly to resolve the immediate problem to clear the blockage and restore flows, a task complicated by both the depth involved and the location. Other works were subsequently undertaken and completed so as to prevent further collapses from occurring in the immediate area.

The state of Gibraltar's main sewer and storm-water drainage networks is a matter of great concern to this Government and this has arisen from a total lack of sufficient investment and neglect in this unseen, yet essential aspect of our infrastructure over the past 16 years.

To this end, the Department is in the process of developing a works plan to address this with a view to rehabilitating these networks in the short to medium term; funding has been sought for this purpose. Furthermore, Mr Speaker, projects to provide flood prevention measures at Wellington Front and Fish Market Road will be started during the year. Both of these areas have traditionally suffered from flooding problems during periods of concentrated heavy rainfall and this will be a thing of the past when the projects are completed. Funding is being provided for the purchase of equipment that will expand the Sewer Infrastructure Section's operational ability to inspect and maintain the sewerage system.

Mr Speaker, in this essential Department, this Administration inherited a work complement with seven important posts unfilled, reflecting 33% less personnel out of an approved complement of 21.

Mr Speaker, this is also the case for the Garage and Workshop, where funding for new equipment is also being provided. This entity was yet another, I was greatly shocked to learn about. Once again, morale was low and the staff complement had been left to decline. Nevertheless, the keen and professional staff continued to provide a service to maintain the fleet of Government vehicles, including the refuse collection vehicles, despite suffering from an acute lack of resources.

The situation within the Garage and Workshop is also under review, given the previous Administration's hurried signing of the Collective Agreement a few weeks before the Election, which placed them in a Government-owned company as an interim measure, one that would allow them to receive a 12% pay increase, plus an increase salary scale of two spinal points. All of this was at the expense of accepting that no further recruitment would be considered, except that out of every two persons who retired naturally, only one would be recruited. This would in essence mean the demise of the Garage and Workshop over time and the intention would have been to outsource all works to the private sector, even if this meant an increase in Government expenditure.

This hurried agreement, surely for electoral gain, has led to massive discontent within other sectors of the industrial Civil Service as peers now rightly seek to reap similar financial conditions and legitimate equality regardless of the long-term consequences that these may have on the future of the relevant Departments.

1680 Presently, the Garage and Workshop has 14 vacancies in key posts out of the approved industrial complement of 37. This equates to 38%, without including the potential loss of up to five senior key players within this Department seeking an early exit package agreed in principle, but not put in place as time ran out before the Election. This will also fall on this Government to find a solution to, if this is at all possible, under the very difficult conditions set by the GSD Government.

1685 Mr Speaker, design work to install fire hydrants and provide telecommunications coverage inside Dudley Ward tunnel, both of which are manifesto commitments, and both of which should have been done at the time the works to reopen the tunnel were carried out, have also been started. The actual works are programmed to be undertaken this financial year.

1690 This brings me to a major manifesto commitment in the form of a new Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan. Technical Services will be instrumental in co-ordinating and developing this over the coming months in conjunction with the Ministries for Public Transport and the Environment. This new plan will provide a comprehensive understanding of the existing traffic, transport and parking situation, in both quantitative and qualitative terms. It will then analyse and evaluate potential options for changing and improving these with a view to encouraging behavioural change and a shift in modal transport towards more sustainable alternatives.

1695 Mr Speaker, as can be seen, Technical Services Department will this coming financial year continue to deliver on their defined responsibilities, maintaining public infrastructure and continue supporting and providing technical input across the board throughout all relevant Government Ministries and Departments, in order to deliver on the Government's extensive and comprehensive programmes.

1700 Turning now to the Department of Traffic, Parking and Transport: Mr Speaker, I will now consider matters affecting my other Ministries, as I said the Department of Traffic, Parking and Transport, excluding Public Transport, the latter of which falls under the remit of my colleague the Hon. Neil Costa. The Government's manifesto commitment regarding the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan to further address Gibraltar's parking and traffic issues is well underway as previously touched upon.

1705 It is this Government's policy that such important issues as these need to be carefully and meticulously examined and expert local opinion is deemed an invaluable aspect of this. To this end, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has embarked upon a very detailed review of the present traffic, parking and transport situation, and by way of cross-Ministerial and Departmental input, has chosen to seek and consult the opinion and feedback of not only the leading and key figures within the transport network in Gibraltar, but also those whose livelihoods depend on our reduced network of roads, together with the general public, who patiently endure the situation on our roads on a daily basis.

1710 Consulted parties have been appreciative and pleasantly surprised that this Government would actually choose to seek and take their humble opinions and feedback. In this way, Government may now start to really understand the complexities and how these affect the entire spectrum of the community.

1715 A tender has already been issued and we are now at an advanced stage in assessing and finally choosing a suitable consultant to help guide the inter-Ministerial Departments in providing a serious, sustainable and effective Traffic, Parking and Transport Plan, which is hoped will see real improvements to the lives of its road users, residents and pedestrians at large. The Trafalgar Interchange is proof that the previous Administration did not research this project sufficiently enough and appeared to have rushed the project, without giving due care and attention to the many pedestrians that frequently access the area and find this area difficult, if not dangerous to navigate. This area will be given priority, once the Sustainable Traffic, Parking and Transport Plan commences.

1720 Mr Speaker, a study was carried out, post-Election, into the usage of the large multi-storey car park in Devil's Tower Road, and this confirmed the general perception that the building was underutilised and making a financial loss. In this regard, Gibraltar Car Parks Limited is now optimising the car park at Devil's Tower Road and is now offering parking facilities for larger motorcycles over 500cc at this facility. Furthermore, a large area of this car park, together with the multi-storey car park by Regal House is now being used by local wholesale car dealers to store their export vehicles. In this way, Gibraltar Car Parks Limited is maximising its return on these installations, which would otherwise have been left under used, having cost the taxpayer millions of pounds.

1730 As part of this Government's preliminary assessment of parking facilities in Gibraltar, car parks are constantly being monitored in order to allow maximum usage, and hence benefit to users at different times of the year. This was seen at the Coach Park over the last Christmas period and also within school car parks during the summer period when staff are away on holiday.

1735 Post-Election, this Administration took the decision to push ahead with the three car parks at Arengo's Palace, Governor's Parade, in the vicinity of the once iconic Theatre Royal and Engineer's Lane, embarked upon by the previous Administration, as these were already at an advanced stage in their construction. The new Government's environmental concerns were reflected, including important environmental modifications, namely the provision of a brown roof with all the environmental benefits associated with it and further modifications that will help improve access to residents of the Upper Town within the latter.

Mr Speaker, with a view to increasing efficiency, all HEOs, until recently under Gibraltar Car Parks Limited, were seconded to the Royal Gibraltar Police as of the beginning of June. The role of the HEOs will be extended to cover litter control, dog fouling duties, beach duty, oversize vehicle escort and aiding the RGP with general traffic duties and management. The HEOs are also being deployed to manage the frontier queues on both the exit to Spain and the second loop by the East Gate, an area prepared by this Administration in an effort to improve our vehicle holding capacity.

In keeping with international road markings, which are standard throughout EU countries, all previous 'Blue Zones' have now been properly marked out as 'Red Zones'. (A Member: Hear, hear.) This was a common cause of complaint, especially by foreign visitors who had been caught out on numerous occasions due to this anomaly in road marking convention. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has also made provisions for taxis to be able to stop within an area of the Red Zone demarcated for the sole purpose of enabling passengers to get into or alight from the vehicle.

Mr Speaker, it is this Government's intention to assess and review the previous Government's policy for disabled parking bays, and will be considering meaningful changes to the issuing of Disabled Blue Badges and the rules for their usage as the current criterion used is incoherent, unfair to users and very difficult to police and control.

Mr Speaker, another manifesto commitment, and in response to concerned parties, was the introduction of Regulations which enforced the legal requirement for riders of motorcycles and mopeds in Gibraltar to wear appropriate protective headgear. These Regulations provide that all motorcycle helmets used in Gibraltar must not be of the half helmet or novelty helmet model type. Additionally, all helmets allowed must be, or equivalent, to the British, the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe Standard, or comply with any standard accepted by a member of the European Economic Area which offers a level of safety and protection equivalent to the British Standard. Government expects this initiative will go a long way in reducing the number of serious head and facial injuries sustained as a result of motorcycle accidents and thus improve safety to motorbike users on our roads. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause) The positive feedback received across the board has been overwhelming and the common perception being that this simple change in regulation was long overdue.

Furthermore, as part of Government's awareness on road safety, the Department of Transport is putting in place administrative and practical procedures for the introduction of Compulsory Basic Training (CBT). This will consist of a preliminary course which must be completed by people wishing to ride a motorcycle or moped before riding on the road. This course will be introduced as soon as practically possible as a means of reducing accidents on roads caused by inexperienced riders, and will include aspects of riding both on and off-road with a qualified instructor approved by Government. This approach to learning will help candidates to gain a better knowledge and understanding of driving in preparation for the off-road module of the motorcycle test. This will also help to ensure that new motorcyclists gain the right skills and experience before riding bigger bikes. The CBT will be provided by the Department of Transport at no cost to the general public.

Mr Speaker, administrative and practical procedures are also well underway for the replacement, for new drivers, of our existing driving licence, for a new photo card driving licence. An agreement for the card format has finally been reached between the United Kingdom and Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and we are confident that the EU Directive deadline of 19th January 2013 will be met. Besides, negotiations – which are long overdue as no serious attempt to make headway on this issue was made by the previous Administration – are presently taking place between Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) to supply our professional lorry and bus drivers with tachograph cards. This will allow our drivers, driving throughout Europe, to legally and accurately record their activities, retain their own records and produce them on demand to transport authorities throughout Europe. This will thus put an end to the unfair competition being faced by our transport undertakings locally and drivers from across the Border.

Mr Speaker, as part of our E-Government initiative, the introduction of a revised computerised theory test is in progress. This approach to learning will help candidates to gain a better knowledge and understanding of driving theory, which will help them respond to the actual practical test. It will allow candidates to take the tests on basic theory of driving, advanced theory of driving and riding via a computerised environment. This offers three multiple choice user-friendly, efficient and convenient touch-screen terminals so that candidates can answer the test questions by 'touching' the selected answer. Like the present oral tests, provisions have been made to allow this to be taken in most languages.

Another manifesto commitment aimed to help tackle and reduce unemployment has been the introduction of training to assist applicants wishing to undertake the new Driver Certificate of Professional Competence for bus and lorry theory tests. This joint multi-Ministerial initiative, including the Ministry for Employment, will positively help reduce unemployment and train our resident workforce by empowering persons, who felt that changes in EU legislation had made the test process difficult, to be able to confidently sit their theory and practical tests. This will help persons gain a further valuable qualification, which can be useful when trying to achieve employment. This initiative will also enable current drivers to drive professionally throughout Gibraltar and the rest of Europe. This training will be undertaken by the Department of Transport and is designed to improve the knowledge and skills of professional bus and lorry drivers.

Mr Speaker, an additional joint initiative between the Ministries for Transport and Traffic to positively enhance our public service sector is the deployment of Transport Inspectors. This plan recognises the requirement to examine equipment and procedures to ensure that road haulage and public transport systems are adhered to and conform to the relevant legislation. Government is confident that this initiative will have a substantial impact on the improvement of road transport services available to the transport undertakings and community as a whole. In order to reflect a more effective and efficient forum for the general public seeking improvements to traffic matters, an innovative Traffic Commission has been appointed which ensures input from the Ministry of the Environment.

This Traffic Commission is conducting regular monthly meetings, something unheard of in the past, and has cleared a backlog of matters referred to it in a short period of time. This, hence, accelerates the time taken between application, a decision being taken, and action. Moreover, the process for implementing requests, once approved, has been re-engineered for the completion of works. This improved working practice will improve the performance of the Commission in the execution of its duties and as previously stated, will reflect a more effective and efficient forum for the general public seeking improvements to traffic matters. I would like to take this opportunity to thank the hard-working members of the Commission who, without their energy, this improved working practice would not have been possible.

Finally, other initiatives to improve Traffic and Transport throughout Gibraltar as a whole are being considered and will be announced in the near future.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to Health and Safety. Mr Speaker, Occupational Health and Safety has been left on the back burner for many years; once again, yet another fine example of a severely depleted, demotivated and neglected Department. It is this Government's intention to reverse this trend and has embarked on putting right what has been neglected for so many years: the Health and Safety Inspectorate.

For this reason, and for the first time, the Government has included Health and Safety as part of a Ministerial portfolio in its own right. This rightly suggests the importance that this Government attributes to the Health and Safety of its workforce and community at large to help keep it as safe as reasonably possible through awareness and adequate inspection and supervision of the workplace. To achieve this, it is essential that we provide an efficient and well-resourced Health and Safety Inspectorate as the enforcing authority, with the adequate and effective statutory tools.

We have also identified the need to strike a balance between enforcement, preventive investigation and other activities, such as providing advice, and to exercise a proactive and modern approach to reach out to all stakeholders. This would require influencing human behaviour by changing employers' and employees' attitudes by providing practical information and promoting standards. We need to cultivate a positive Health and Safety culture by raising awareness on the legislation among businesses, recommending standards, practices and guidance, and harmonising them throughout the industries.

Mr Speaker, the Health and Safety Inspectorate should not only be seen as an instrument of retribution, but rather as a source of valuable advisory service and a partner in assisting employers and employees to fulfil their legal obligations. To achieve these objectives, the Principal Factories Inspector has been tasked to prepare a comprehensive report into the potential restructure of the Health and Safety Inspectorate, so as to submit this as a blueprint for the Government to consider.

As a first step in the right direction, we have addressed the lack of resources within the Department, which have only seen two Factory Inspectors within the Department since the retirement of the previous Principal Health and Safety Inspector some years back. As a temporary measure the Government has increased the human resources in the Health and Safety Inspectorate, twofold. Finally, in collaboration with other organisations, we will be organising the European Health and Safety Week in October this year.

Mr Speaker, as per our Government's policy, Ministries with common and overlapping interests are working together to achieve common aims and objectives in order to improve previous Government policy or to achieve manifesto commitments. To this end, the Departments that I am responsible for have been involved in a number of projects for other Ministries.

Technical Services is developing the design for the Commonwealth Park Project and the refurbishment of the GASA Sea Bathing Pavilion for this current bathing season and will be assisting in the future GASA Sea Bathing Pavilion Project.

The Department has also been a key player in the technical advice regarding the procurement of the intended replacement of the bus fleet and the review and potential replacement of the fleet of staff car vehicles for more environmentally friendly vehicles.

The Department has also provided staff in order to carry out the Government's manifesto commitment of conducting an Annual Health and Safety Audit of each school in Gibraltar, led by the Ministry for Education.

The Department of Vehicle Licensing and Transport have also been working with the Ministry for Employment to help train persons wishing to learn new skills by way of bus and lorry training.

The Health and Safety Department have conducted reviews of various Government facilities including the hospital kitchens and the GSLA Swimming Pool following the collapse of the ventilation system.

Mr Speaker, it is evident that things have changed, but it will be finally up to the electorate to decide and judge for themselves whether they want that change. I sincerely believe that this Government, one that I am proud to form part of, is pushing forward in a joint, collegiate and positive manner.

Mr Speaker, I would like to conclude my contribution to this Budget session by sincerely thanking all members of staff and Heads of Departments who have helped me in my work and made my job so much easier to carry out. All members of staff have received me with open arms and I have been genuinely made to feel at home in such a short period of time, since 9th December.

In particular, I would like to thank my personal Ministerial staff, who have been key in guaranteeing that I perform my duties to the best of my ability. I sincerely hope that I may continue this work with the unrelenting help and effort afforded to me by all.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I think I have drawn the short straw, being the penultimate speaker today.

Mr Speaker, it is an honour for me to rise and make my contribution on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill in this House as my maiden speech. This has been a year of 40th anniversaries in this House. A less known 40th anniversary has been the fact that the Chief Minister and I celebrated our 40th birthdays earlier this year. Another historical coincidence has been that we each gave our first Budget speeches within seven months from being elected to this Parliament. Within nine years, he rose to the dizzy heights of the highest democratically elected office in the land.

I do not know what my own personal future will bring (Interjection) but what I do know is that I will endeavour, to the greatest of my ability to keep the Government in check throughout my time in Opposition. I am sure I speak on behalf of all my Opposition colleagues when I say that the new splendour of his position will not dissuade us one bit from watching with cool vigilance his Government's every move.

The Leader of the Opposition, Mr Speaker, has entrusted me with shadowing the Tourism, Transport, Port and Traffic portfolios. These are portfolios which, in many respects, go to the heart of our economic well-being and therefore prosperity as a community. Tourism and the Port have traditionally, and quite properly, been considered the main pillars, or as the Hon. Minister for Employment used to prefer to call them, 'sectors' of our economy.

Given the fact also that my party has only until recently been in office for almost 16 years, I think it is important at this juncture to recite the GSD record in some of these areas. I say this in particular because lamentably our record has been the subject of a systematic, scurrilous and vicious campaign by the new Government which, in my view, has at its core the complete annihilation of what was, to all objective observers, a veritable success story, and only because the prosperous, successful and vibrant Gibraltar we left is not politically convenient to our opponents. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

I will address this House on this theme further, but at this stage I would simply say that the party's opposite attitude is a reflection of a vacuous programme for Government.

I feel very comfortable indeed, Mr Speaker, standing in this House representing the GSD record and will now seek to make a case by reference to some statistical information which show why the GSD's four consecutive terms in office proved to be such a huge success in the Tourism sphere.

Despite his failed attempt at denigrating our record (Interjection) the Hon. Minister for Tourism knows deep down inside that he has a very hard act to follow. Tourism has long been identified as one of the biggest contributors to our economy, Mr Speaker; indeed, it was identified as such by my party when in Government and therefore it has enjoyed an unprecedented level of investment over the four terms, with the result that Gibraltar's economy has enjoyed increased levels of tourist expenditure.

On any perusal of the Tourism Survey Report of 2011, which was only recently been laid before this House, the only conclusion that any reasonable observer can come to is that Gibraltar has done very well indeed. For example, the overall expenditure by tourists in 2001 stood at £145.31 million, and in 2011, last year, the year closed at £279.41 million – an increase, Mr Speaker, of £134.1 million. That 10-year period saw a year-on-year increase and all of this in the context of one of the most acute world economic downturns in 80 years.

- 1925 The overall number of visitor arrivals increased by 3.6% in 2011, compared to 2010. Sea and air arrivals also increased by 7.1% and 25.4% respectively, or an increase from 328,000 to 351,000 in respect of visitors by sea, and an increase from 131,147 to 164,000 of visitors by air.
- 1930 In cruising, that huge success story that has seen the massive turn around in the fortunes of this industry for Gibraltar, there has also been an increase in passenger arrivals in percentage terms from 2010 to 2011 of 7.2%, or in visitor numbers, from 303,000 to 325,000. If a month-on-month comparison is undertaken, we can see in starker terms how successful this sector has in fact been.
- 1935 Let us take months which are traditionally leaner in terms of tourist arrivals. In January, for example, we have seen how visitor numbers via cruise liners jump from 2,000 in 2010 to about 10,000 in 2011, a 407.3% increase. A very buoyant and encouraging increase can also be seen in December, with an increase from 5,400 to 13,000, a 140.4% increase. Comparisons can now also be made between the most recent figures in 2012 with those of the preceding 12 years. The most recent figures take us to the month of May.
- 1940 Here, too, I am happy to make the comparative exercise. The figures as at May, since 2004, show increases year on year, other than a dip in 2010, with the 2012 figures representing more than double the 2004 figures or even the 2000 figures, from 48,685 in 2000 or 40,402 in 2004 to 101,545 in at the same time in 2012, which in itself represents an increase from 100,915 last year.
- 1945 What the official figures do not show are the cruise numbers which, given the general move in the industry to improve service, tend to be higher than they used to be, so that in some cases we are looking at crew numbers amounting to almost half of the passenger numbers. This is the reality which stares the Members' opposite in the face and because they cannot bring themselves to admit it, they have little alternative but to invent their own parallel universe of woes and disaster. (Several Members: Hear, hear.)
- 1950 Insofar as the numbers of vessels calling at Gibraltar is concerned, the Minister claimed that there has been a decreasing number of calls. He claims that there has been a significant loss of calls by ships. At one level, Mr Speaker, this would be worrying if the effect of this was a decrease in number of passengers, and therefore visitors to Gibraltar, who spend their money here; but he cannot make this point, however much he would want to, because, as I have already been able to show, the numbers have in fact been significantly on the increase. I am therefore not sure what economic impact, given the figures, the supposed significant drop in call numbers can have had on the industry, if the numbers of passengers have so clearly and undeniably gone up.
- 1955 The Minister in one breath bombards me with statistics which suggest that there is a drop in the number of cruise liners; yet, in another, admits that ships have got bigger and that that fact accounts for the increase in passengers. He has no compunction, Mr Speaker, in having a dig at the previous Government, and yet welcomes with all the fanfare – in fact, in exactly the same way as we used to do it – the arrival, for example, of the Serenade of the Seas, (A Member: Hear, hear.) one of those horrible large vessels, which results in increased passenger arrivals and in this case with capacity of 2,490 passengers; the arrival of which, incidentally, was secured by his predecessor – on his own admission in this House – given that bookings for the berth took place on 9th March 2011.
- 1960 But pausing there for one moment, Mr Speaker, the Minister cannot really make his charge that there has been a significant loss of calls good, because the figures suggest otherwise. Over the last 10 years, the average number of calls up to May is 55.8. As at May 2012, we are in excess of the average already, at 61 calls. So the Minister should choose his words wisely before he employs them.
- 1965 Incidentally, just to drive home the point that even a lower number of calls does not result in less visitors, in 2008, when we had a bumper year all round, 70 calls, which represented the highest number over the previous 13 years, brought 78,531 passengers, whilst the 61 calls up to this year has already brought 101,545 passengers. All the indications are that the cruising market is expanding and we, on this side of the House, will scrutinise the Government's every step over the next three-and-a-half years to ensure that Gibraltar continues to share in the success.
- 1970 But, Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I will continue to disappoint. Let us look at visitor arrivals by air and of those who stayed in Gibraltar, just for the sake of choosing a figure, as opposed to 'in transit', the total number increased from 52,420 to 64,739 in 2010 and 2011 respectively. I gave the figures in percentage terms earlier. In monthly comparisons, one sees the biggest hike in numbers in April, from 3,400 in 2010 to about 5,200 in 2011 – a 53.9% increase. The second biggest increase is between July 2010 to July 2011 of 44.6%.
- 1975 I am glad to report to the House – and it is odd that one needs to do this from the Opposition benches, Mr Speaker, given that the Government has failed to do so – that there were increases in each of the months of 2010 when compared with 2011. The total number of visitor arrivals by air also increased between 2010 and 2011 from 131,000 to 164,000 – a 25.4% increase, as reported earlier, and also a mere 511 passengers shy from the peak level in 2008.
- 1980 By land, too, the latest statistics published by the Government online shows that there has been an increase in the number of land frontier visitor arrivals year on year, without fail, since 2000. In 2000, the land frontier visitor arrivals stood at 70,310 and at 114,246 in 2011. If one does a snapshot and compares the figures between the position up to and including March 2012 and the same point in time in previous years, that would indicate that we will this year surpass all previous years.
- 1985

1990 As at 7th May the figure up to and including March is 26,628, an increase from the same point in time last year of 923, or an increase of 10,895 from 2000.

1995 In relation to hotels as well, Gibraltar has equally not fared badly at all when the statistics, as contained in the Hotel Occupancy Survey of 2011, are reviewed. Here we see how there has been consolidation in both the room and sleeper occupancy figures at around the 60% and 50% mark respectively. That is the reflection of the reality which is out there, in terms of the statistics, and a far cry from the reality which the Government and the Minister, in his school playground childish manner, tries to persuade this House is the contrary view.

2000 I am on record in this House as having welcomed and congratulated my opposite number for giving Tourism the priority position it deserves. But you see, Mr Speaker, success has to be built on strong foundations and the statistics I have been through show what can be done if this area of Government policy is handled carefully and intelligently – but I dare say that I am not encouraged by what I see.

2005 We cannot forget the context in which the party opposite was elected into office. They were in Opposition for 15 years and during most of those years, the now Deputy Chief Minister subjected the former Government to a vicious and sustained attack on Tourism. Almost like Chinese torture, he would incessantly twist the reality of the boom which Gibraltar was enjoying for his own party's political ends and paint a false picture of doom and gloom in every Budget speech he delivered in this House.

2010 But let us for one moment assume that the then Opposition really believed what they were saying. In those circumstances, is it not reasonable to have expected them to have deployed all the wonderful things that they would have done had they been given a chance by the electorate in the previous 15 years, and hit the ground running? Not surprisingly, it has not materialised.

I say 'not surprisingly' because when challenged by the former Minister, Mr Holliday, to come up with what they would have done if in Government, he was never taken up on the offer. I now very much suspect that the reason for this is because they had no alternative plan at all, and I quote, Mr Speaker, from Hansard, what Mr Holliday prophetically said in last year's Budget session:

2015 (Interjection and laughter)

2020 'Last year I challenged Opposition Members the Hon Dr. Garcia, the Hon Mr Picardo and the Hon Mr Licudi to come up with their own policy statements and strategies regarding aviation, cruising, GBC and transport. It is no surprise, that none of the Opposition Members have come forward with any proposals, in any one of these issues, during the last year. Perhaps, the intention of the GSLP/Liberal Alliance, if ever elected into power' – and this is the prophetic bit –

2025 'is to try and build on this Government's excellent initiatives and policy strategies, which not only work but have brought substantial stability and prosperity to Gibraltar.'

2030 What have the present Government come up with in terms of initiatives? More talking shops and more consulting with the industry, and I do not for one moment deny the value in consultation; but whether it is in the welcoming of Royal Caribbean cruise liners, setting up of maps and map dispensers or new airlines, the Government has been rolling out what are purely and simply GSD initiatives.

2035 We welcome them, but the only point I am making, Mr Speaker, is that seven months in – after 15 years of intense criticism – the electorate reasonably would have expected more, much more; but the reason why the people are not getting more is because a lot had already been done and what was not 'broke' should really not be fixed. The sad and, worse still, reprehensible thing is that they unscrupulously led the electorate down the garden path on this issue, as with so many others.

2040 In relation to the Upper Rock, we have seen how there is a big gulf between electoral promise in the manifesto and what happens in reality. Instead of all of us enjoying the benefit of what they described as an 'immediate commencement' of a programme to refurbish the Upper Rock Nature Reserve, what we have seen is the commencement of nothing other than a talking shop. In what is quickly becoming a hallmark of this Government, they seem incapable of taking decisions, or at least the correct decisions, because they know that when a decision is made in Government, you will always have to disappoint someone, somewhere along the way, and this is something that they find very difficult to do. (Interjections and laughter)

2045 This is what we have seen in relation to the Upper Rock. Here the hon. Members simply talk of the challenge that it is to balance the amenity value – whatever that is – of users on the one hand with the commercial value for other users who rely on the Upper Rock for their livelihood; but we get not even an inkling of their thoughts on the matter, other than that they will set up some signs and do something with some water tanks.

This is the case, Mr Speaker, because they dread the day when they will have to tell the tour operators, the taxi drivers or the environmental lobby on which side they are really on. They no longer have the luxury of taking the middle road. They either need to turn left or need to turn right.

Who are they going to favour, Mr Speaker, and who are they going to disappoint? The environmental lobby? The taxi drivers, perhaps? Because the reality is they will not be able to please everybody all of the time and we await on this side of the House with bated breath for a decision in this area.

I deal with Port issues next, given the considerable interplay that exists between this area of policy and Tourism. Indeed, I have touched upon the cruise industry in the context of Tourism because it of course straddles the Port and Tourism areas. The Port is another important engine of our economy and it was very early on identified as such by the first GSD Government. The changes which were carried out at the Port were revolutionary and laid the foundation stones for the success which was to come thereafter.

Again, one only needs to review the statistics to show how the statements I have just made are in fact supported by the hard facts. The 'Actual' Consolidated Fund Revenue for 2010-2011 was in total about £6.2 million, with the 'Forecast Outturn' figure for 2011-2012 being £6.7 million and the 'Estimate' for 2012-2013 set now at £6.5 million. There were also overall increases in 'Receipts', according to the Accounts of the Gibraltar Port Authority for financial years ended 2007, 2008 and 2009, which were recently laid before this House. These comprise items such as 'Tonnage Dues', 'Berthing Charges' and 'Bunkering Charges'. Year on year again, Mr Speaker, the figures increase from £1.4 million to £1.8 million to £2 million, if one excludes the Government's contribution.

We now have, according to the latest Report, which was I think laid before the House yesterday by the Hon. Minister... looking at a figure of £5 million. If a direct comparison is made with the position up until May 2011 with May 2012, both the numbers of ships calling for bunkering and cargo are up: 2,400 to about 2,500 in respect of bunkering and 63 to 81 in respect of cargo. Ships calling for repairs are slightly down from 56 to 54.

However, we know anecdotally that Gibdock is doing very well. The overall figure in terms of the number of ships calling to Gibraltar is 10,350 in 2011, slightly lower than 2010, but higher than 2009, which in itself saw the highest number of ships calling to Gibraltar, according to the figures I have available, which are from 1989. The bunker volume statistics also show the volumes maintaining themselves at 4.2 million tonnes and to put that last figure into some perspective, we were looking at 2.1 million tonnes, literally half that amount, in 1997.

The figures, therefore, Mr Speaker, speak for themselves and show the vastly improved Port which we left before we left office last year. In relation to this area of responsibility, I also want to ensure, as best as I can from the Opposition benches, that the numbers keep on going up and that this activity continues to be a source of income for our economy.

Even in these early days, however, I am already concerned about certain developments which are still salvageable.

We have witnessed how the post of Director of Maritime Affairs is vacant after the departure of Mr Tony Davis to No. 6. The former Director was immensely useful in the marketing context and was in fact dedicated to this activity having an in-depth knowledge of the – in particular – cruising market. He knows many top level executives of the cruising companies on a first names basis and it is clear that my opposite number also saw the valuable contribution which Mr Davis can bring, given that he formed part of the Gibraltar delegation which went to the UK recently, visiting, amongst others, cruise operators. We would encourage the Government from this side of the House to ensure that somebody with Mr Davis' qualifications and experience is appointed to fill the now vacant post.

Also, in relation to the Port, we have seen how seven months into their term of office we have, as yet, no appointment of the Deputy Marine Officer. This is something which I would much rather have seen developing at a quicker pace, given the crucial operational importance that this post has to the proper functioning of the Port, and I take this further opportunity, for the sake of the proper functioning of the Port, to encourage the Minister to make every possible effort to ensure that the post is filled without further delay and that the successful applicant be suitably qualified with a Master Mariner's Certificate, in order to allow him to properly deputise for the Captain, as and when he is not available.

It recently, Mr Speaker, came to my attention that the Minister for Tourism did not attend the Posedonia 2012 Shipping Exhibition, which took place between 4th and 8th June. This is, to put it mildly, lamentable on the Government's part and puts into perspective the Minister's criticisms – which we take this opportunity to completely refute – of lack of follow-up after meetings with executives by the former Administration and his philosophy of pursuing, as he terms it, face-to-face meetings.

Of course, the latter philosophy was also shared by the previous Administration and although apparently adopted by the hon. Member opposite, he fails completely to put it into practice, when an opportunity is given to him to attend one of the most important shipping exhibitions available to the industry.

This Exhibition is attended by the major players in the industry including, but not exclusively relating to cruising. The Gibraltar contingent normally comprises representatives from the whole range of Port-related services which are provided in Gibraltar, such as the Port Registry, Ship Repair Yard, the Port Authority, etc. My party's involvement in Government was that this delegation required high-level support in the form of the Minister for the Port himself, who attended personally. It appears from this Minister's non-attendance that he does not attach the same level of importance to this Exhibition, and if this is in fact the case, he ignores Posedonia to Gibraltar's peril.

The GSD in Government, Mr Speaker, was committed to proceeding with the project to build a new cruise terminal. This included extending the facilities so that four ships could be accommodated at any given time. The plan was also to provide for turnaround and long-term stay. These plans were the result of extensive discussions with cruise companies which operate in Gibraltar, whose views were very much taken on board.

This, Mr Speaker, requires forward planning, which is what my party did when in Government. We planned for what the industry would bring and require in the medium to long term in, for example, accommodation of larger vessels. It is therefore not clear to us why this project has not been proceeded with given its obvious benefits to the cruise industry in Gibraltar. If the Government is truly committed to the cruising industry, we would encourage and recommend that it proceed with the terminal without delay.

I am truly concerned for the Member opposite, Mr Costa, because he must really believe his own party propaganda in relation to the arrival of the 'New Dawn'. He cannot really believe – à la Disneyland – that owners of large vessels, for example, are all of a sudden to express confidence in Gibraltar only because they won the last Elections and assumed office on 9th December. He must see – because I rate him – that the possibility of new investors coming to Gibraltar, given his short tenure, must be in very large measure as a result of the very firm foundations which we left and not because of his recent discovery of the value of face-to-face meetings. If he does not, then he is simply naïve and not credible.

I now turn to my other area of responsibility, Transport. Under the Transport Head, Mr Speaker, I have very little alternative unfortunately but to raise in this House the unsavoury matter of the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited and the treatment by the Government of Mr Sardeña's Industrial Tribunal claim. (Interjections) I say, Mr Speaker, that I have little alternative because I would not be honouring my duty to the electorate, who gave me a seat in this House as an Opposition MP, if I failed to address head-on the 'elephant in the room' issue which hampers this area of responsibility.

It is also with considerable regret that I have to occupy time in this House to deal with this issue, because I would much rather deal with the substance of transportation which is so crucial to the quality of life in this community and our economic success.

The facts surrounding this case have been the subject of considerable press coverage and I would limit myself to recanting what has already been said in the press, and in this House, and I will do so in as neutral terms as possible. I say 'neutrally', Mr Speaker, because there really is no necessity for political punch to go into the presentation of the facts, because the facts simply speak for themselves.

The first fact, Mr Speaker, is that Mr Sardeña brought a claim for unfair dismissal against the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited, a Government-owned company. The second fact is that Mr Sardeña was represented in the Industrial Tribunal by Mr Bossano, the former leader of the GSLP and now the Hon. Minister for Employment. Thirdly, Mr Speaker, the Company defends itself throughout the proceedings, on independent legal advice, against the claim. Fourthly, during the course of the trial – we say almost at the end, but I am willing to concede that it was halfway through – the case stopped. The reason for this is that Mr Sardeña is charged criminally with fraud.

The significance of this – if I pause here for a moment – is that these facts are very closely linked to the facts before the Industrial Tribunal Chairman. There has been no denial of this point, which we have made openly in the press, by the Government.

Fifthly, importantly and significantly for the Tribunal claim, Mr Sardeña is found guilty of fraud. He then appeals against the conviction, but fails. The now Chief Minister represented him at the appeal. This shows further evidence, if such were needed, of the very close link between Mr Sardeña and the GSLP leadership.

Then on 8th December 2011, we have the arrival, Mr Speaker, of the 'New Dawn' and the Members opposite secure power. Instead of the case proceeding to a conclusion, in an act of clear political manipulation, (Two Members: Hear, hear.) the Gibraltar Bus Company is instructed, not by its Board, not by its Directors, but by its shareholder, the new Gibraltar Government, to withdraw the defence. The directors of the Bus Company refuse and are dismissed.

This action is taken in circumstances where the Bus Company had, on the face of the facts as we know them on this side of the House, every conceivable chance of succeeding. When asked whether the Minister for Transport had received legal advice, he eventually said in this House, after much squirming, that the advice had been received not by the lawyer who had been representing the Bus Company all along (Interjection) but by his own firm, Verralls, and for free.

The Government Minister who had originally said in the press that he had reviewed the papers on the case himself, then said in this House, after much questioning from this side of the House, that he had taken legal advice and from the firm with which he continues to be employed.

2175 Even, Mr Speaker, if this interpretation of the facts is incorrect, or this presentation of the facts is incorrect or otherwise has been inaccurately presented, surely what you do not do as a party to litigation is first withdraw the defence and then try and agree a settlement; usually, and sensibly, as all of us who practise or have practised in law will know, is it the other way round.

2180 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): What about the –

Hon. D J Bossino: We now know –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

2185 Hon. D J Bossino: – that public statements – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

2190 Hon. D J Bossino: Obviously, the Chief Minister (Interjections) is getting excited by it – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! The Hon. Member is –

2195 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

We now know from public statements made by the Government that this remarkable and astonishing chronology of events was informed by a desire to exercise the full might of Governmental power in their hands in support of the position which they had adopted in Opposition, namely that Mr Sardeña had a ‘legitimate case for unfair dismissal’. This they described as an ‘adoption of a position’, which they claimed that people had voted for when they chose their new Government. That explanation is, with respect to the Members opposite, simply unsustainable and a weak, I would say, wholly unsuccessful attempt at white-washing their decision with democratic and political legitimacy. When has it ever been argued by a political party that a view adopted in respect of a case in which they are not even litigants should somehow be adopted as Government policy on the basis that their view, which was never explained or expressed in public – certainly not during the Election campaign and I do not think even before then – should have received a mandate at the polls? It does not wash and it never will. (Applause)

2200 In light of these facts – (Interjection) Well, then, fine. Wait for the Inquiry.

2205 In light of these facts, it is simply not plausible for the Government to hide behind the cost-cutting smokescreen which they conveniently set up for themselves – an excuse, which in the context of the facts of the case, does simply not ring true.

2210 The Chronicle, in the editorial of 20th April, stated, and I quote:

‘The decision not to resist an action and to settle cannot be argued solely on cost grounds. The whole of the administration of justice could otherwise often be seen as an excessive burden.’

2215 The Government now faces having to pay out what could be a huge amount of money (Interjections) in compensation. Within just over a month of holding the keys to No. 6, the Minister for Employment changed the rules so that the basic award which successful claimants are entitled to is no longer the subject of a statutory cap. Mr Sardeña will be entitled to – using the Minister for Employment’s own words in this House – a ‘sky’s the limit’ award.

2220 I repeat the accusation in this House now, which we made in our first statement to the press, which is that the Government’s decision is at best ill thought out and irrational, and at worst a manifestation of signs which amount to political corruption. (Interjection) Not one of their public statements, after this party’s first pronouncement on this matter, assuages any of our concerns. We look forward to the independent public inquiry on the matter, but we will be keeping a very close eye –

Procedural Re allegation of ‘political corruption’

2230 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I hesitate to rise to make a Point of Order, but I think it is important that this debate has been handled, by all parties who have made interventions to date, at least within the rules of the House.

An allegation of 'political corruption' should be made on motion, Mr Speaker, in my view. I do not think it is appropriate to make an allegation of corruption without putting a motion. It is tantamount to suggesting, Mr Speaker, that there has been abuse of position on this side of the House and I think...

All I would do, Mr Speaker, is ask the hon. Gentleman, invite him, to bring a motion if he wants to make that point, or at least withdraw that word and put it in any other way.

Mr Speaker: I hope the Members will bear with me while I quickly afresh my reading of... Well, there is Standing Order 45, paragraph (6):

'No Member shall impute improper motives to any other Member.'

That is one which might be considered. Then there is also 45(12):

'The conduct of...'

– and then it names a number of entities –

'members of the Parliament [...] shall not be raised except upon a specific substantive motion moved for that purpose;'

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think Erskine May may actually help us, or the modern version may help us more.

But look, this is a debate where we say a lot of things about each other and it is right that we should and we should be free to do so, Mr Speaker. I will have something to say about the things that the Leader of the Opposition has said and the way that he characterised some of the things that were said during the Election, when he used the 'L' word. This is a debate where we allow ourselves to say a lot, but an allegation of 'political corruption' in my view, Mr Speaker, offends the Rules of the House and I think the hon. Member can put the point he is making in many other ways.

I think if he wants to make that point, I invite him to bring a motion to do so and we will debate his view that there is 'political corruption'; but I would ask him to withdraw it and to continue with his speech in other terms.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that in fact the term 'political corruption', which is, effectively, levelled against the Government as a whole, and the criticism, really, is of the Government as an entity, actually falls within paragraph 45(6) about imputing improper motive to any other Member, or alternatively under paragraph (12), about the conduct of Her Majesty, Members of the Royal Family, the Governor, Members of Parliament.

At the end of the day, the Hon. Mr Bossino is making a political point. He is not making a specific allegation against any individual Minister. He is making a political point, a quite valid political point, in our view, against the Government as a whole.

Now, I do not see a reason why the Hon. Mr Bossino should withdraw the point that he has made. He has made it. It may well be, in fact, that a motion is brought because as we indicated a number of months ago we want to make more use of motions, and certainly this is an area where we may indeed bring a motion so there can be a debate between this side of the House and that side of the House on this particular issue, but I do not see that the hon. Member has transgressed in any way, shape or form, the rules. In actual fact, if you were to pick him up in relation to this, quite frankly one wonders whether half the Members of Parliament would be transgressing in relation to these particular rules and I urge the Hon. Mr Speaker to be cautious in terms of how he interprets these particular rules.

But, as I say, he has made the allegation. We do not think that in fact there is a transgression, and he is moving on with the point. We may in fact bring a motion later on in the year.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I can just reply to that point.

The hon. Gentleman needs to be careful with defending anything for the sake of defending it. If he wants to bring a motion to allege corruption against this Government, and if he thinks that that word is something that is defensible and that it is right that it should be bandied across the floor of this House, well, Mr Speaker, he defends that to his peril, because if that is the sort of language that the Members opposite think is Parliamentary language, they have been in Government for 16 years, and we have issued press statements and made references to things that have gone on and we have avoided, in this House, talking about corruption.

But, if they want to 'pull that string', Mr Speaker, there are ways of characterising behaviour and ways of characterising behaviour, and if we go down the road of agreeing that alleging corruption against each other is acceptable in this Parliament – and 'corruption', Mr Speaker, is a criminal offence, and 'political corruption' is a criminal offence because it is corruption in office – then that allegation of a 2295 criminal offence, Mr Speaker, is not something that is going to run only in one direction and the hon. Gentleman needs to know the language that he is using.

2300 'Political corruption' is specifically provided for in the Criminal Offences Act: it is the corruption of an individual in public office. That is what 'political corruption' is. Now if he wants to say that he is not making an allegation of an offence and that that is not what the word 'corruption' means, then he, as a lawyer, needs to understand what it is exactly that he is invoking under the provisions of the Criminal Offences Act.

Mr Speaker: And I think –

2305 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, may I dare to... I do not agree with that.

Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible] you don't!

2310 Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say, no, I do not. I do not agree with that.

No one is accusing anybody on that side of the House of corruption in the criminal sense. Mr Speaker, there is absolutely no difference between my hon. Friend saying 'political corruption', and the Hon. the Chief Minister actually accusing us on this side of the House, when we were in Government, of choosing people and employing them a dedo. That is what he was saying. Well, look, it is another way of saying what my learned friend and hon. Friend, Mr Bossino has actually said.

2315 Mr Speaker, it is an accusation that the hon. Member, Mr Bossino, has made outside of this House, but there is no allegation of corruption in the criminal sense or in the financial sense made against the Government. It is a political criticism – that is what he is making. He has made it. He is moving on. It may well be that we bring a motion in the future and, quite frankly, I think that at this stage in the evening, we should get on with the Members' speeches.

2320 Mr Speaker: But does the hon. – ?

2325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, may I just share with the House the definition in the dictionary – not in the law if he does not want to go down that road – of the word 'corruption'? It is 'dishonest or fraudulent conduct by those in power, typically involving bribery.' Dishonest or fraudulent conduct, Mr Speaker.

2330 If they are not alleging dishonesty, if they are not alleging fraudulent conduct, if they are not saying that there is an offence under the Criminal Offences Act which deals with corruption in public office, then, Mr Speaker, it is very simple: he does not use the word 'corruption'. But if he uses the word 'corruption' for the effect that that word has, he has to stand by it and say that he means that we have acted fraudulently, that we have acted dishonestly or that we have acted in breach of the Criminal Offences Act. If he does not mean that – and I believe, Mr Speaker, that he does not mean – well then he needs to say that he means something else and he needs to use another word. (Interjections)

2335 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is not the intention of my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino, to describe anybody as being dishonest or subject to bribery or anything else. He prefixed the term with the word 'political' – 'political corruption'. In fact, he should know – and I know that he has done some defamation in the past because I know that he has been on the other side in cases that I have perhaps been involved in when we were in different firms – the distinction is, if you call somebody 'dishonest' – or a politician 'dishonest' – that may well be defamatory; but when you say that person is 'politically dishonest', clearly what you are doing is actually making or criticising somebody in a political context. That is the reality.

2340 Nobody is calling anybody on that side of the House, either 'dishonest' or taking backhanders, or subject to corruption, or anything like it. It is a 'political criticism', that is all, and I hope that the hon. Gentleman accepts that and he allows the Hon. Mr Bossino to get on with his maiden speech.

2345 Hon. Chief Minister: I see. So the argument is that he said 'corruption', but he did not mean it.

2350 Well, look, Mr Speaker (Interjection) in that context, if that is a withdrawal by the Hon. the putative Leader of the Opposition (Interjection) – 'putative', it is a prefix, like 'political': it means 'not really' (Laughter) – of the word 'corruption', then look, Mr Speaker, I am prepared to accept that he did not know what he meant and he therefore does not mean 'dishonest', does not mean 'fraudulent', does not mean 'corrupt', and therefore that is not the allegation made.

2355 I would like to see what it is that is being said, when the word 'corruption' is used, if it is not the dictionary definition and it is not the definition in law. It may mean 'very pleasant' in the lexicon of what he means, but the word 'corruption' has a meaning and as long as he does not mean what he says, then I am quite happy for him to withdraw it.

Mr Speaker: I think I want to hear what the Hon. Damon Bossino wants to say before I make a Ruling, if I have to make a Ruling.

2360 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Point of Order is that I am being asked to present a motion to this House to make the allegation of corruption, and it seems that we have developed from that... well, of corruption, I think was the point – I think we have developed from that point.

2365 Simply to add what my hon. and learned friend has just said, Mr Feetham, which is that this is the allegation which has been made by this party in public statements to the press. The whole of Gibraltar has heard and read that allegation being made publicly. I am not sure why, when all I was doing – and I said so when I prefixed, by way of introduction, before I launched into the summary of the facts of the case – was simply recanting what we had said, and in fact more what we had said publicly in the press, and I am surprised that the Chief Minister should want to muzzle me using technical arguments for simply restating what has been said in public in this House.

2370 Mr Speaker: Yes, but with respect, what is said outside this House does not necessarily make it Parliamentary language in this House, and vice versa. What is said in this House, you can get away with; but the fact that it has been said outside this House and nobody has taken issue outside this House, does not make it Parliamentary in this House.

2375 I am not ruling that it is unparliamentary, but that is the point I am making. (Interjections)
The Hon. the Minister for Justice.

2380 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the point that you make is clearly right. Whatever may be said outside the House, the hon. Members may have to answer outside the House, whether in press releases, in the press or in another forum; but where a matter is repeated, and the fact that it is repeated in this House, does not make that language Parliamentary.

2385 May I assist – (Mr Speaker: Please.) thank you, Mr Speaker – by referring to Erskine May? It is in fact an old edition, it is the 19th edition, at page 429, under the heading, ‘Allegations against Members’, and it says:

2390 ‘Good temper and moderation are the characteristics of parliamentary language. Parliamentary language is never more desirable than when a Member is canvassing the opinions and conduct of his opponents in debate. The same right to plain, courteous treatment in debate is due alike in both Houses of Parliament; and abusive language, and imputations of falsehood, uttered by Members of the House of Commons or the House of Lords have usually been met by the immediate intervention of the Chair to compel the withdrawal of the offensive words or, in default, the punishment by suspension. It will also be useful to give examples here of expressions which are unparliamentary and call for prompt interference. These may be classified as follows:’

2395 There is a list, and the first one on the list is the ‘imputation of false or unavowed motives’.

The hon. Members talk of corruption and they do not mean corruption in a dishonest way, they do not mean corruption in a criminal way. They talk of ‘political corruption’. That must necessarily go to the motives of a decision which... The hon. Member has not just imputed in respect of the whole Government, because the hon. Member opposite has singled out the Hon. Mr Costa as having been the maker of a particular decision and the criticism is levelled primarily at him; but it is, in any event, an imputation of a motive to the whole Government, if not to the hon. Member. It is undoubtedly, I would suggest, Mr Speaker, an imputation of a false or unavowed motive to either the hon. Member himself, or the whole of the Government, in accusing the Government or the Member of ‘political corruption’ – it cannot be interpreted in any other way.

2405 Therefore, according to the provisions of Erskine May, which are there for our guidance, it calls for immediate intervention by the Chair and a call for a withdrawal of the language or, in default, suspension. We are not calling, clearly, for the suspension of the Member; (Interjection by Mr Speaker) we are simply proposing that if the hon. Member wants to make that suggestion, he should simply bring a motion. Certainly, he should not be able to make that point and use that language in the course of debate.

2410 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Speaker should be very, very careful indeed about the course of action that you are invited to undertake. (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) This is not an allegation against any Minister; it is an allegation against the Government as a whole, but it is a ‘political criticism’.

2415 Mr Speaker, it is a novel concept that if this side of the House questions the political motives of the Government on the benches opposite, that that somehow is unparliamentary language or is something that entitles anyone to call for censure of somebody on this side of the House. Look, we would all be censured, because we are constantly calling into question the political motives, both us on their side, and them on our side!

2420 The reality of the situation is that if he had used the term ‘political dishonesty’, well, what? Nobody would have said anything. He has used the term ‘political corruption’; it means exactly the same thing – nothing more, nothing less. (Interjection) This issue – (Interjection)

Hon. G H Licudi: [Inaudible] what does it mean? What is it intended to mean?

2425 Hon. D A Feetham: It is calling your political motives into question – absolutely! (Interjections) Your political motives. (Interjections) No, the term, Mr Speaker, ‘improper motive’ cannot possibly extend to calling into question somebody’s political motives or somebody’s political decisions. It cannot – otherwise we would be completely hampered in doing our duty, not only on our side of the House, but also them on their side of the House. ‘Improper motive’ does not go to that; it goes to something other than that, Mr Speaker. (Interjections) I would invite Mr Speaker to be cautious about this, because the reality is that what we do not want is a Ruling from the Chair on something like this that turns out clearly to be wrong.

2435 The hon. Member has made the statement. He says that in future he might well bring a motion – in fact, I have already said that we want to make more use of motions in the future – and he is moving on with his speech. The hon. Gentlemen opposite should perhaps be less thin-skinned about criticisms levelled against them, and the Hon. the Chief Minister is going to have plenty of time to respond. No doubt he will have a field day on Thursday responding to the hon. Gentleman and everybody else! (Laughter and interjection by Mr Speaker) (A Member: Absolutely) And you should allow the hon. Gentleman to continue with making his speech.

2440 Mr Speaker: I think we must move away from the point. The passage which the Hon. the Minister for Justice has cited from Erskine May in fact reflects what 45(6) and 45(12) says. The reason why I did not promptly intervene, as the passage suggests I should have, is the use of the words ‘political corruption’, in the context of what was said by the hon. Member, did not read to me as unparliamentary; however, now on closer examination of...

2445 Before I go to that, the point about 45(6), which talks of ‘no Member shall impute improper motives to any other Member’, I do not take the view that imputing any ‘political’ motive – leaving aside the word ‘corruption’ – any ‘political’ motive is an ‘improper’ motive because all of you here are politicians. You are all motivated by political considerations. To impute any ‘political’ motive is not ‘improper’. Now, as I say, not using the word ‘corruption’ in this particular context, but we have tolerated in this House ‘political hypocrisy’, ‘political...’ (Interjections) No, no, sorry, the words ‘political hypocrisy’! The question is, do we tolerate the words ‘political corruption’? (Interjections) Yes, ‘hypocrisy’ is a milder form of criticism of any person than the word ‘corruption’ is – that is my line of thinking.

2455 Because I see the seriousness with which the matter has been raised and dealt with, (Interjection) I would ask the hon. Member, is he willing to rephrase that particular part of his passage – to save me going back and having to write out a Ruling for Thursday morning? I am sure the hon. Member can rephrase it and in a manner, I think, which would take the offence out of the situation. (Interjection)

2460 At first glance, in the context, I did not take the view it was unparliamentary; but now that the question has been raised, would the Member repeat the passage (Laughter and interjections) stopping before the offensive words?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, should the repetition include the ‘C’ word (Mr Speaker: No, no.) (Laughter and interjections) which has clearly so offended the Members opposite?

2465 Mr Speaker: No, I do not think we wish to compound the offence.

Hon. D J Bossino: I cannot even remember where I was, to be honest. (Interjection and laughter) Just bear with me.

2470 Mr Speaker: It was not that far back.

Hon. D J Bossino: No, no.

Hon. G H Licudi: Start with your last line. (Interjections)

2475 A Member: Take it from the top.

Hon. D J Bossino: Oh yes, here we are:

‘I repeat the accusation’

2480 – which and I am quoting from my speech, Mr Speaker –

‘which we made in our first statement to the press which is that the Government’s decision is at best ill thought out and irrational, and at worst a manifestation of signs which amount to political [...]’

2485 (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker: Yes, exactly, in that context, I did not see it as unparliamentary, the way it was phrased; but the use of the word which is now under consideration can understandably give rise to offence.

2490 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Hon. the Chief Minister accept ‘political dishonesty’ instead of ‘political corruption’?

Hon. Chief Minister: This is not a negotiation, Mr Speaker. (Interjections) This is very simple.

2495 Mr Speaker, either that is I think very easily rephrased and we carry on, or my speech on Thursday starts with that ‘C’ word and ends with that ‘C’ word.

Mr Speaker: Well, hopefully –

2500 Hon. Chief Minister: And then the temperature, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: No, no, no!

Hon. Chief Minister: – the temperature will really rise in this place.

2505 Mr Speaker: I see that offence has been taken. Is the hon. Member willing to rephrase it or withdraw it, otherwise I will have to make a Ruling first thing on Thursday morning and we take it from there?

2510 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am not sure how I can, other than replacing the word ‘corruption’ in deference to the sensitivity of the Government opposite, (Interjection) and simply replace it with the word ‘dishonesty’, if the ‘corruption’ word is so vulgar to be able to pronounced in this House.

But simply to say, the preamble... I have not had the benefit of reading the particular provision cited from Erskine May by the Hon. Minister for Justice, and one likes to read these things.

2515 Mr Speaker: Anyway, having taken –

Hon. D J Bossino: The preamble just says apparently, according to the Minister, that the debate in the House should be conducted in good temper and moderation and I think that both those adjectives apply to me. (Laughter and interjections)

2520 Mr Speaker: Well, I think... Anyway, (Interjections) I will make a formal Ruling first thing on Thursday morning on the terminology.
Please do carry on.

2530 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, we look forward to the independent public inquiry on the matter – I think I may have already covered this point – but we will be keeping a very close eye as to the conduct of that Inquiry in practice.

Already in relation to the Inquiry, Mr Speaker, we have seen worrying signals that it may develop into another anti-GSD witch hunt, and I refer to the Government’s statement to the press that the Inquiry will go into, and I quote:

‘...certain aspects of the Sardenña case’.

In the same editorial I referred to earlier, the Chronicle raises this issue and states that:

2540 ‘Government still needs to explain what it means by “certain aspects.”’

We have endeavoured at all times to keep to the facts in our treatment of this case and not enter into the name calling and party bickering which has plagued Gibraltar politics for so long, but this has been difficult, (Interjection) given the negative and hostile attitude displayed by the other side on what is such a sensitive issue.

Of course we know that the reason for this is that the Government has been intent all along in deflecting attention from the obvious difficulty it is in. Attack, in this case has, in their view, given them the best form of defence.

I now move on to Transport policy generally, the Members opposite will be glad to know. Whether it be the airport or the tunnel under the runway, I would encourage the Government to quickly understand the importance of the linkage between good transport connections and a successful economy. The Chief Minister will be glad to hear that in an article which appears in the website of the Member of Parliament for South Shields, Mr David Milliband, a fellow socialist of his, he states that, and I quote:

'It's crucial to understand that successful regions are ones which are connected to the rest of the world. Whether hard connections – like transport, airport development and fast broadband, or soft connections – like student visas for Higher Education. Investment to ensure that these connections exist is crucial.'

It is this connection which was perfectly understood by the GSD in Government. We appreciated that central to our ability to enter into the next stage of our economic development was the importance of proper investment in our airport terminal, combined with maximisation of its use – a use which had been liberated by the ability to now connect to many destinations other than the UK. This Government now has at its disposal a new airport terminal, which any self-respecting and advanced society can be truly proud of and we wish it every success into the future. They are on record as having stated, almost begrudgingly, that:

'We have to try and make it work'.

I encourage them to do so for the benefit of us all and I can assure the people of Gibraltar that I will do everything within my power as an Opposition MP to ensure that they, on that side of the House, do everything in their power to make it work.

In relation to the tunnel, we have in the past rehearsed the supreme advantage in having a dual carriageway under the runway. We have always identified this scheme as advantageous to Gibraltar as a means of eliminating very significant traffic delays and disruption caused by the need to interrupt vehicular traffic on the takeoff or landing of aircraft on the airfield. The tunnel is also a hugely useful and attractive supporting infrastructure to the new terminal.

I need only but refer to a letter which appeared in the Gibraltar Chronicle edition of 30th June, which states, and I quote:

'I am aware that matters concerning the new airport terminal have become party political issues, but I express these views outside of local politics and only in support of Gibraltar. [...] The new terminal building is noticed'

– and I am not quoting the full letter –

'by every visitor to Gibraltar. Visitors by air naturally, but it is also the first and last building in Gib for land visitors. I can't imagine cruise visitors not noticing it from the siege Tunnel or Princess Caroline Battery.

Every day the old terminal remains in use says to the world that Gibraltar cannot finish or organise anything. Gibraltar needs to project cutting edge ability and confidence – everything that is lacking in continuing to use an overcrowded, under-resourced old terminal that is no longer fit for purpose. How is a wheelchair bound user supposed to get a snack, for example?

Complete the tunnel under the east end of the runway. I hear of contamination issues. The world copes with nuclear waste. How bad can this be that it cannot be dealt with? Dig the trench and sink the road! Enough party politics! Finish this project which has huge implications for the quality of life in, and the international image projected of Gibraltar.'

My advice to the new Government would be on a similar vein to that of the author of this letter which is: put your party political prejudices to one side, swallow your party political pride and continue with these GSD projects which are so crucial to the continuing progress of our economy and therefore of our political survival as a community.

If the Chief Minister's aim has always been to 'get us up to a level of a Singapore, Hong Kong etc', as he stated recently in a Chronicle interview, then he should 'smell the coffee' and make the transport/communications link with a successful economy soon; but I am not hopeful, Mr Speaker, because it seems that the small-minded parochial nature under which they laboured in the Opposition benches, continues to shackle them in Government, judging by the Deputy Chief Minister's contribution on the airport this morning... or perhaps yesterday. I have lost track of time now. He continues to be intent on a political assassination of my Leader and the GSD. (Interjection) Instead of updating this House in his area of responsibility, which is Civil Aviation, with the future plans he has for the Airport, all he can do is look back and continue in Opposition mode. He is the Deputy Leader of the Government and he should behave as such.

2610 But if I could deal just briefly with the contracts for airport handling services which has been the subject of comment in this House and in the press, and I would say this, Mr Speaker, the whole procedure was the subject of an EU tender process and the rest of the Government should know that the appropriateness, or otherwise, to sign or not to sign a contract during the period that the Government is in caretaker mode is a decision taken with no ministerial involvement and it is right that it should be so

So aspersions that they wish to attach to the chronology that somehow it was dodgy, that we rushed the signing on the eve of the Election, is wholly misplaced and an 'own goal', I am afraid. This community should not forget that when they were last in Government, they entered into privatisation contracts which tied the Gibraltar Government for 20 years at a period of time that they were a caretaker Government.

Mr Speaker, I now deal with our public transportation system. Here we see, once again, this obsession with denigrating everything which is GSD. One would have forgiven the Members opposite for behaving that way – however objectionable to us on this side of the House – whilst in Opposition. But, in just the same way that they have, falsely and without justification, admonished us for behaving as if we were still in the Government benches, I admonish and condemn them for behaving as if they were still in Opposition.

People have given them a mandate to govern. Well, do just that and govern. Unfortunately for Gibraltar, and rather bizarrely, they see their role in Government different to that of all western democracies, as they see it as a means of holding the Opposition to account – they are on record as having stated that.

2630

This party in Government had the political will and courage to grasp the particular nettle that was Gibraltar's fledgling and antiquated bus service with its competing private interests and simply lack of service. The new fleet of buses provided a service which was unprecedented in Gibraltar and is an initiative that we as a party are proud of. Providing a high quality and free bus service costs money and we took the decision that that cost would be a cost to the public purse; but you see, that is the decision which we were happy to make because the effect of that was that people were given a choice to use a decent, efficient, safe and first class service which I can vouch for as a user myself. (A Member: Hear, hear.) A choice, Mr Speaker, incidentally, which more and more people are exercising, if the statistics are looked at.

If a comparison is made between January and May 2011 with January and May 2012, there is a total increase from 847,000 to 986,000 in passenger numbers – that is an increase of almost 140,000 passengers.

Mr Speaker, the other side have complained about the cost of the bus company and how this is a net contributor to the allegedly strained public finances, but what alternative do they propose? As a responsible Government, they should be less concerned about mounting an attack on everything GSD, in order to buy political security in return, and more concerned about coming up with solutions to the problems which they have themselves – not us – identified as problems of gigantic proportions. Are they proposing to charge for the service? Are they proposing that a private venture takes over which will in turn, more than likely, charge for the service? How do they propose to ensure that the buses are up to scratch in terms of the service, the state they are in, safety and efficiency? These are the questions which will require answers, if the criticism is that the service is a drain on the public purse and that the taxpayer should not foot the bill. If that is their view, then spell it out.

If their ideology, as the champagne socialists that they are, is shrink Government, then let them have the courage of their convictions and look at the people, who they promised so much to at the last Election, in the eye, and tell them that they now have to pay for the service.

2655

Of course, all the actions of the Government in fact point the other way. At the time of the Election, they promised the electorate in true nationalistic style that, and I quote:

2660 'We will make bus transport free only for residents of Gibraltar and those holding Gibraltar ID cards.'

They repeated that same claim on numerous occasions in the press, without once qualifying the use of the word 'only', until it was announced to the Spanish press at the press conference at No. 6 in February 2012, that this free 'Residents of Gibraltar only' public service would, in fact, be made available to Spanish workers on the grounds that they are taxpayers.

Quite apart from the 'all things to all men' charge, which very quickly comes to mind, Mr Speaker, it really runs counter to the massive concern expressed of the financial hole, which they claim is the public bus service. If that is the case, the last thing you do is to make it free at all, or if you promise to make it free to residents, also make it free to, not only Spanish workers, but any worker in Gibraltar. The inherent inconsistency of the Government's position in this speaks volumes of their lack of principle, focus and vision and of their incapability of showing true signs of governing.

Once again, in the context of the bus card, we again see how that party's only role in life seems to be to propose anything which runs counter to anything which the GSD did. Without giving any reasoning, the GSLP in its manifesto said that they did not agree with the GSD 'club card' system, which was a perfectly good and effective system. The GSD 'club card' system addressed the abuse which was being encountered when tourist agencies were selling the fact that Gibraltar provided free buses, with the result that genuine users were competing for the significantly limited space available. It addressed this issue by imposing an administrative burden which, in effect, resulted in the tourist paying for the service.

What do we have now? Well, they seem to have gone full circle and adopted the GSD bus card, in terms of its form, except that it is accompanied by a hugely complicated system of eligibility, which I strongly suspect is open to abuse and, in any event, purports to end up, I think less successfully than our system, with a result which we in Government managed to achieve in the first place. Free use for bona fide users of the service and no use for the abusers of the system.

It is an obvious fact, of course, that as time goes by, the buses get older and thought has to be given to replacement. It is not true, Mr Speaker, that the Government was not forward planning. The opposite is in fact the case, given that a programme to replace the buses was very much in hand and options as to what was required to affect the change were being considered going forward before the last General Election.

But I note that my opposite number, the Minister for Transport, said this morning that he is looking at the replacement of the fleet and he can rest assured that I will be quizzing him further on this in the upcoming sessions of the House. (Interjection) What should not be allowed to happen is to allow the current fleet to deteriorate. The anecdotal evidence that we are receiving is that the air-conditioning systems are not functional and some seats are broken. Only this morning, Mr Speaker, I was told that elderly people are having to stand in overcrowded buses with the danger that that entails and the electronic signage system, which shows the number of the bus at the front section, does not work on some of the buses.

Why are the buses being allowed to deteriorate? Has the Government not itself 'tested the market' – which is what they criticised us for not doing – as to whether the maintenance service could be cheaper? I am sure there is a reasonable explanation for allowing the buses to go down the tubes as they are doing and it is not just a malicious and vindictive way of ensuring that another GSD project is assigned to the rubbish bin. I certainly hope that there is such an explanation because the people who will suffer the consequences of such unforgivable action would be our community.

Finally, in relation to the buses, I am frankly astounded that five months after the former directors of the bus company were dismissed, no new replacement has been found. It is shameful on the part of the Government that they should allow a company responsible for our public transport system to be without a corporate head for so long.

The GibiBikes Scheme, Mr Speaker: this Scheme was introduced by the previous Administration, having been identified as one of the important features of its Transport Plan. The current Government takes – as I have already outlined in relation to all GSD projects – a negative and dim view of the Scheme by relishing on the clear teething problems which it faced. This House should not lose sight of the fact that this project was a pioneering one for Gibraltar and there were bound to be issues.

I am glad, however, to see from replies given by the Minister for Transport, Mr Costa, at the last question-and-answer session, that matters are moving in the right direction, insofar as the discussions with the company supplying the equipment are concerned, and that the contractor is currently mobilising to finalise the project.

We are confident, on this side of the House, that if the political will exists, the project can succeed. In this context, it is very encouraging indeed that the further roll-out of the Scheme, which in effect means that the other bike stations are installed and made operational, will result in a more attractive system and therefore greater usage, which in turn will result in a lessening of vehicular traffic and decongesting of our roads. The previous Government was willing to make the necessary investment, because it took the view that it was worth it. We did not have the privilege of seeing Gibraltar's first ever urban bike scheme come to a fruitful conclusion, but from these benches, Mr Speaker, we sincerely hope that it reaps the benefits it was designed to reap.

On traffic, no one can deny that the previous GSD Administration, throughout its four terms in office, made huge strides forward. Whether you look at the substantial increase in the provision of free parking – something which was anathema to the previous GSLP Administrations – new roads, widening of roads, enhancing road safety, new roundabouts, free bus service in new buses, the urban bikes scheme, there is no denying, Mr Speaker, that the last Government made a serious and, in my view, successful attempt at tackling Gibraltar's traffic problem.

This party published Gibraltar's first ever Plan in April 2010, following extensive public consultation. The Plan rightly sets out the projects which had been completed during the course of the previous GSD

Governments and then set out a game plan of what was to happen over the following years. What is wholly unclear to me, sitting on this side of the House, is why the Government seems to have decided to put the Plan to one side and then start the process again. Again, is this nothing other than that the poor Plan was always doomed to failure on the grounds that it was nothing other than a GSD inspired plan?

2735 The Government is entitled to have its own view on life, but unless you have a plan of your own which is the 'bee's knees', then it makes little sense to me to start the ball rolling again. By all means review matters, develop what was there, and come up with something that we had not thought before; but to ignore what was there, is that a good way to address the issue? With traffic, there will always be new issues and challenges coming up which face any community, particularly a small, successful one which 2740 has very limited space as this one, but does everything have to be subjected to the party political test? Indeed, the Chief Minister is on record in this House as having said that the Parking and Traffic Plan – for that read the GSD's – 'is a thing in constant motion'. Was that a moment's lapse perhaps?

2745 What is clear is that the new GSLP Traffic Plan is increasingly being used as the excuse behind which the Government hides behind when asked traffic related questions. It is almost always, 'Well, we will have to wait and see what the new Plan brings.' Again, here I ask them to get on with it and govern for the good of all.

I am equally bemused, Mr Speaker, as to the replies which I have received from the Government on this question. Again, from this vantage point, and judging by the answers I am getting from the Minister for Traffic, it really does look like a dog's dinner and he does not know whether he is coming or going.

2750 Again, here there is lack of focus, vision or indeed a plan. They first announced that the consultation exercise commenced on 11th January to end on 30th January. He was of the view and he is on record in this House as saying that this two-and-a-half week period provided sufficient time for a proper consultation. When I asked him at the first session, in what was a rather – and the Chief Minister may recall – lively exchange, whether they had in fact identified who the 'interested parties', which they had themselves identified from the press statement were, and who they said were going to be the beneficiaries of the consultation exercise by the Government. I sensed, Mr Speaker, at the time that the reality was that there were no 'interested parties' as such, but that the wording was the result of poor drafting. In other words, a copy and paste job from the party's electoral manifesto.

I therefore offered as a possible way out for the Government whether they in fact meant the public at large. It came as a complete surprise when the arrogant reply came from the Chief Minister that I was not to propose answers and that there were people that had been identified and that a full answer would be given at the end of the consultation period – i.e. post 30th January. It came as a further surprise when after all that the Minister then tells me at the following session of the House in February that the interested parties were the general public after all. When I put to the Minister that the Chief Minister had told me in fact that there were people who had been identified by the Government and that those interested parties would be consulted by them, he tells me, poker faced – this is the Minister – that the Government have not identified these parties and that it was completely left open to the general public; but the story, Mr Speaker, does not end there.

In the February session, the Minister then announced that the public consultation exercise had been completed and that the data collated was being analysed and a summary spreadsheet of all the findings was being prepared. When asked in March for details of the findings following the consultation exercise, I was told that in fact the public consultation exercise had not quite finished, describing it as 'fluid' and that it was not until a User and Trip Survey had been carried out that these could be made public.

Then, lo and behold, on 11th May before the following session of Parliament, the Government advertised for tender the consultancy services in respect of a sustainable traffic, transport and parking plan. The Minister advised this House in the June session that the successful applicant will be required to assist the Government in the development of a new sustainable, transport and parking plan. Part of the services to be provided would be, in fact, the carrying out of the User and Trip Survey. It is very telling, Mr Speaker, that no mention in any of the previous sessions of the House or, indeed, in the press had been made of the possibility that the Government would be going out to the private sector for assistance in relation to the formulation of the Plan.

In summary, all of this already shows that the Minister and his Government have no plan of action – it acts without vision and is simply out of its depth. Mr Speaker, this embryo Government is showing already that they have no plan of their own – generally I mean, not in relation to traffic. They are devoid of any ideas. They are so visionless as to where they want to take and develop Gibraltar that they can do nothing other than get a kick out of delving into the books and pathetically rubbing their hands collectively with glee, when they stumble across what they consider to be evidence of unreasonable financial expenditure, as another stick with which to hit the previous Government.

The people of this community deserve better and they will soon learn that the people of this community will expect better. This behaviour is nothing other than symptomatic of a party which, despite languishing in the Opposition benches for almost 16 years, had in fact run out of ideas. Any political and objective observer will tell you that this is normally the effect of a party which has run out of steam after exercising power for a long period of time, but not one in Opposition. I suppose, Mr Speaker, that that is the reason why they were rejected by the electorate on four occasions in a row.

2790

2795

This rather strange and bizarre behaviour is also symptomatic of the obvious fact that the party opposite still cannot understand that they are in Government and behave, on their own admission, as if they were in Opposition. Indeed, and I quote the Chronicle again, in its editorial today, (Interjections) where they say:

2800

‘The Opposition Leader, Peter Caruana’s advice to the Government’

– obviously –

2805

‘to “look forward and get on with the job” has to be right.’

2810

The party opposite used a policy of seduction to win votes where money was no obstacle – an attitude which was inherently contradictory to the position they adopted with regards to public debt. The Chief Minister may have used his own mellifluous eloquence to get him past the winning line on the last occasion, but in the process, Mr Speaker, he has created a tiger by promising what he knows he cannot deliver and he will end up inside this.

Many who voted for them on 8th December on the promise of a ‘New Dawn’ are seeing, with the greatest of regret, how the ‘New Dawn’ is being perpetually afflicted by a dense and menacing Levanter cloud. Roll on 2015!

2820

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, after those final compliments from the hon. Gentleman, he will see I have sent him a document to look at. I do not think anyone can bear it any more, and I therefore move, Mr Speaker, that the House do now adjourn to 9.00 a.m. – and I am sorry it is going to have to be 9.00 a.m. – on Thursday, when the Hon. Mr Netto will be the final speaker on the Bill, before I reply.

2825

Hon. J J Netto: Thursday?

2830

Hon. Chief Minister: Thursday at 9.00 a.m.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there is not going to be any debate on the adjournment – (Laughter and interjections)

2835

Mr Speaker, may I also remind you, you said that you were preparing a Ruling for Thursday. May I remind you that, in fact, my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino did actually substitute the word ‘corruption’ for ‘dishonesty’ – ‘political dishonesty’ – during the course of the – (Interjection) Absolutely, we do not resile from anything that we have said. We do not believe that anything that he has said is any way, shape or form either in breach of the Rules or improper, but in the spirit of trying to move on, the hon. Member did in fact substitute the word ‘corruption’ for ‘dishonesty’.

2840

Mr Speaker: [Inaudible] I invited him to substitute... Sorry, the hon...

2845

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, we have handed over a copy of a further extract to the hon. Member from Erskine May. It is an appendix of unparliamentary expressions – it is on page 445 – and I hand up a copy, just for your guidance.

Mr Speaker: Thank you. Does that appear there?

Hon. G H Licudi: It includes the word ‘corrupt’, ‘corruption’ and also includes the word ‘dishonest’, and clearly, the whole issue depends on the context in which the word is used.

We do not believe that where language is unparliamentary, the matter can simply be saved by adding the prefix ‘political’, otherwise any sort of language would be available to be used in this House and we –

A Member: Including ‘dog’...? (Laughter and interjections)

2855 Hon. G H Licudi: I leave it to you to consider. (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not sure the word political ‘dog’ actually... where that is actually going to go! (Interjections and laughter)

2860 Mr Speaker, there is absolutely – (Interjections) It just does not even get beyond first base. Of course the word ‘dishonest’ can be in its context unparliamentary, but the words ‘politically dishonest’ in the context used by Mr Bossino cannot possibly be unparliamentary or in breach of Standing Orders, and here we are wasting our time and wasting Mr Speaker’s time with a Ruling for Thursday!

2865 Mr Speaker: It is not a waste of my time. I am sure I am going to learn something as I go along. When I invited the hon. Member to substitute the word, I had ‘political shenanigans’, something like that in my mind. (Interjections and laughter)

Anyway, I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 12th July 2012 at 9.00 a.m.

2870 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 12th July 2012 at 9.00 a.m.

Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.

This House will adjourn until Thursday, 12th July 2012 at 9.00 a.m.

Ruling by The Speaker Use of the phrase ‘political corruption’

5 Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Thursday, 12th July 2012.

Mr Speaker: At the end of a long day on Tuesday I did say that I would deliver a ruling this morning. I am glad the hon. Member is back: I thought I would have to rule in his absence.

10 In the course of his speech during the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, the Hon. Damon Bossino said, when referring to the Government’s involvement in the Sardeña matter before the Industrial Tribunal, and I quote him:

‘I repeat the accusation that we made in our first statement to the press, which is that the Government’s decision is at best ill thought out and at worst a manifestation of signs which amounts to political corruption. Not one of their public statements, after this party's first pronouncement on this matter, assuages our concerns.'

The Hon. the Chief Minister challenged the use by the hon. Member of the phrase 'political corruption' as offending against Standing Order 45 sub-paragraph (6), which reads:

'No Member should impute improper motives to any other Member' and sub-paragraph(12), which reads:

'the conduct of Members of the Parliament shall not be raised except upon a specific substantive motion moved for that purpose'.

Erskine May at page 444 of the 24th edition – which is the 2011 edition – contains some useful commentary on personal allusions and unparliamentary expressions:

'A good temper and moderation are the characteristics of Parliamentary language. Parliamentary language is never more desirable than when a Member is canvassing the opinions and conduct of his opponents in debate.'

It continues at page 445:

'Expressions which are unparliamentary and call for prompt interference include:
1. The imputation of false or unavowed motives', and at 4.

'Abusive, insulting language of a nature likely to create disorder.'

The Speaker has said, in this connection, that whether a word should be regarded as unparliamentary depends on the context in which it is used. Expressions are still unparliamentary even when based on a quotation from elsewhere.

In the course of the debate that followed on the Point of Order my attention was drawn to the appendix of unparliamentary expressions contained at page 445 of an earlier edition of Erskine May which reads:

'From time to time the Chair has intervened to deal with the use of certain expressions in debate which in the context in which they were used were abusive or insulting and of a nature to cause disorder' and lists some of those expressions, among which appear the words 'corrupt' and 'corruption'.

It goes on to state:

'It must however be emphasised not only that the list is not exhaustive but also that the permissibility of some of them would depend upon the sense and temper in which they were used.'

That appendix has not found its way into the 24th edition but, insofar as those words and expressions listed therein continue to be in use in common parlance, I am happy to be guided by it.

From the context in which that phrase was used I understood the hon. Member to allege nothing more than a 'misuse of political power' and, for that reason, I did not intervene to compel the withdrawal of the offending words. If the hon. Member will now confirm that that was the sense in which the expression was used by him then I will have been vindicated in my original assessment of his intent.

Hon. D J Bossino: I do, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Thank you very much.

This ruling is based entirely on my view of the sense in which the words were used, and I must stress that it is generally not permissible for hon. Members to bandy about words such as 'corrupt' or 'corruption' in the proceedings of this House. Nor does the addition of the adjective 'political' make words or expressions which would otherwise be unparliamentary, palatable.

Hon. Members elected to this House are well able to, and must, therefore, strive to articulate their views and arguments without resorting to insulting or abusive language, particularly in pre-prepared speeches to the drafting of which clearly much time and thought will have been devoted.

I conclude by re-iterating the view I have previously expressed in this House that I know of no argument that has been enhanced by insults or abuse.

75 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, may I address the Chair on Mr Speaker's ruling, for which we are grateful.

Mr Speaker has indicated, if I have correctly understood him, that he does not think that the addition of the adjective 'political' makes any difference. With respect, Mr Speaker –

80 Mr Speaker: Not any difference, more palatable.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, with respect, it goes – and I would ask the Chair to consider that – actually, it goes to the very root of the distinction that he himself has made, as to acceptable and unacceptability of my colleagues' strand.

85 There are two sorts of corruption; corruption where money changes hands and improper payments are made and received – that is not political corruption, that is financial corruption. Political corruption – and therefore you put the adjective in front of it, 'political', to make it clear that you do not mean the other one – by adding the word 'political' corruption to the front of it, you are making it clear that you are not alleging that the politician has charged a fee for or that money has changed hands but rather that you mean precisely abuse of political power. If you simply use the word corruption it is open to both interpretations because corruption can either be abuse of power to help your friends, with or without the passage of money, or it can mean, as politicians – happily not in Gibraltar but elsewhere in the world – appear to do, to charge money for the exercise of power. So, I want to make it clear that, both in our parliamentary and our extra-parliamentary statement, we have always meant 'abuse of power', which is why we added the adjective 'corruption', as opposed to leaving the adjective 'corruption' out.

Mr Speaker: 'Political'.

100 Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry, political corruption. I meant to say that.

Having made that clear, Mr Speaker, there is one issue on which you may enjoy expressing your view before you vacate the Chair, and that is this, because it has arisen both in the context of this issue and the previous one, when a four letter word beginning with the letter 'L' was used. There is a sort of folkloric view in this House, often heard – I think, in fact it was heard on the lips of the Chief Minister when this incident took place, I was not in the House to hear it myself – that, to do that, you have got to bring a substantive motion. There is a view, long-held amongst parliamentarians in Gibraltar, that what you cannot say outside of a substantive motion, you can say if you make it the subject matter of a substantive motion.

Mr Speaker will be aware that when I have tried that in the past he has taken the same view of the use on the language in the substantive motion that he had when he objected to its use outside the context of a substantive motion, which leaves this Parliament, and I suppose all Parliaments in which that rule applies if, indeed, it is the correct rule, with the conundrum if there is a Government or an Opposition Member who has lied in the House, or if there is a Government or, for that matter, an Opposition Member in the context of cash for questions or whatever, that is guilty of corruption, is there no way that the Parliament of a country can be the place where its own members and where its executive can actually be held to account for possible corruption and possible lying? That can only be done on the street, [inaudible] it can be done everywhere except in the Parliament.

I do not profess to be an expert on Erskine May. My view has always been that proceedings in this Parliament historically have never been with a rule book in the hand – there has always been a fair amount of latitude. But this is important because it does raise the question of whether Oppositions have a duty to expose governmental corruption or, indeed, Members on the other side a duty to expose Opposition Members' corruption or abuse of position and, if so, whether it has to be done outside of this House or whether we have to tiptoe around an allegation of lying or corruption, describing all its ingredients, so that people sitting there will know what we mean but without actually using the word, because it is the word and not the concept that is important.

125 I really would appreciate the views on that, but on a considered basis. Mr Speaker does not have to reply now.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I can just start with the first issue. Of course we accept your ruling, and I am very grateful that you have taken the time to make a considered ruling on this issue, which I think is important, although my hon. learned friend had actually changed the word in his speech during the course of the intervention that we had on Friday, and went back and re-phrased it as ‘political dishonesty’ he will recall, as Hansard will show.

So, Mr Speaker thank you, nonetheless, for that ruling.

Taking the issue that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has raised that simply by characterising corruption as political corruption one moves it away from the suggestion of impropriety and that –

Hon. P R Caruana: Not impropriety, financial impropriety.

Hon. Chief Minister: – at least from the concept of financial impropriety, Mr Speaker – I think is wholly wrong, for this reason. He was not in the House to hear the debate that we had on this issue but the offence under the Criminal Offences Act of ‘corruption’ is corruption in public office and it does not have to be financially motivated specifically. So, therefore, Mr Speaker, the offence is ‘political corruption’. In other words, somebody who holds a political office, who allows themselves to do something in exchange for something which need not be cash... so, therefore, Mr Speaker, I think in relation to the issue of adding the word ‘political’ in front of the word corruption – I do not think it cures the ill.

It has been the case – and we all know that it has been the case, if we have been in this House for some time – but by adding the word ‘political’ in front of other words to describe behaviour like, for example, ‘political dishonesty’ that we talked about and settled on, on Tuesday, ‘political hypocrisy’ that we have often had bandied around the floor of the House, we are saying to each other ‘You are representing two points of view which are inconsistent in your political discourse.’ But, Mr Speaker, to move from that to saying that ‘political corruption’ is an acceptable turn of phrase I think is a major leap forward and I would ask you to resist that attempt to water down your Ruling – which I think, rightly, looks at the temper and manner in which the corruption word itself, without any preface, is used, rather than trying to find a way where it might stealthily be used in every debate going forward.

Mr Speaker, finally, I think that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition fails to understand what Standing Orders provide. Standing Order 45 (12), which you referred us to earlier, actually says that issues relating to conduct shall not be raised, and it has traditionally been on that rule that the issue of the ‘L’ word has settled, other than by substantive motion.

Now, Mr Speaker, when it comes to the motion, and having had the honour to be a Member on the Opposite benches for seven or eight years, I have been threatened by the hon. Member with a substantive motion on the ‘L’ word I think on more occasions than most, and I take that as a badge of honour. He never brought the motion – I did not realise it was because you told him he should not bring it perhaps in the terms that he might have most enjoyed – but I do recall that, in this debate last year, there was a motion brought against me and you interfered, rightly, to temper the wording of that.

Now, Mr Speaker, it is of course, in the hands of this Parliament to determine whether a Member has been ‘corrupt’, or whether a Member has ‘lied’ to the House. Of course it is, Mr Speaker. But it is the language that is used in the process of determining that, that the rules deal with and, therefore, Mr Speaker, because somebody may have said something which is an untruth does not mean that we cannot have a motion that deals with that in parliamentary language. And the parliamentary language, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman well knows, is that a Member has ‘misled the House’, and there are more words thought of in the dictionary than just the word ‘lie’ in order to be able to express that and to reach a conclusion in this House – and I sincerely trust that it will never be necessary for us to enter into such a motion – either originating from the Opposition benches, or originating from the Government benches, because what we must do is at least accept that none of us here are here to be corrupt, or are here to mislead the House, even if we have differences of opinion as to what behaviour constitutes ‘misleading the public’. But if we were to have such an instance, Mr Speaker, the mechanisms are there in Standing Orders to do it, and all that you from the Chair ask is that we do that in temperate, parliamentary language.

Mr Speaker: I will certainly take up the Hon. Leader of the Opposition’s invitation to consider these matters on an academic basis, as opposed to any particular issue which remains pending before the House today. Probably while I am sunning myself at one of our beaches during the summer months, I will contemplate my navel and come up with something.

But on the question of the word 'lie', if I may confess, only about six weeks ago the Speaker of the House of Commons ruled that the use of the word was permissible – which I disagree with – in the context of a motion which was then before the House in connection with the conduct of the Culture Secretary in the United Kingdom but, again, I disagree with that. But I will bear in mind what I have been invited to do and will, hopefully, come up with something wise.

Hon. P R Caruana: Although, Mr Speaker, the precedent set at Westminster cannot be inviolable when it suits and – (The Speaker: No, no!) – not to be followed when it does not.

Mr Speaker: No, with respect, I do not consider myself, as Speaker of this House, to be bound slavishly by everything that emanates from Westminster. We look to Westminster for guidance. They are a far more experienced Parliament than we are, so I will always be guided by anyone wiser than I am. But, as I say, I reserve the right to say I disagree with [inaudible] your ruling...

Mr Speaker: Can we move on to the Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, It is a pleasure and an honour to deliver my seventeenth Budget address to this House.

This time it will be the first occasion that I do so as a member of the Opposition. In giving my address, I am conscious of the fact that this is the first Budget presented by the new Government, a Government that has not yet completed one year in office and that it needs more time to implement its own policies. I have therefore tried to be responsible in my assessment and criticism of the Government in relation to its performance within my areas of responsibilities – social security, social services and health and safety.

Mr Speaker, in this year's presentation of the Estimates Book, we see that Head 5, in the Estimates Book for 2011-12, comprising Social Security, the Care Agency and a number of other organisations providing services to the community, has now been split into two different Heads in the Estimates Book for 2012-13. One is the new Head 26, dealing with Social Security matters and the other one is Head 16, which deals with the Care Agency and the various other organisations providing services to the community. To be able to properly analyse the expenditure that covers the same services provided to all groups of people today against the previous expenditure in 2011-12, I need to add the Estimates shown for 2012-13 of £36,108,000 in Head 26, with the Estimate of £21,481,000 in Head 16. This gives me a total of £57,589,000 against the Forecast Outturn of £53,509,000, a figure which is obtainable on page 95 of the new Estimates Book. This represents an increase of 7.6%, in money terms, over a period in which the Index of Retail Prices percent has been 3%. Therefore, after adjusting for inflation, we see an increase of 4.5% in real terms.

In order to compare like for like, the financial provision made by the GSLP/Liberal Government against that provided by the GSD Government, I have repeated the same exercise for the figures in the 2011-12 Budget, using the same parameters and the actual expenditure for 2011-12 was £48,142,547 against the Forecast Outturn of £53,509,000. This represented an increase of 11.2% in money terms over a period in which the Index of Retail Prices percent was 3.7%, thereby representing an increase in real terms, after adjusting for inflation, of 7.2%.

Mr Speaker, what these figures show us is that the rate of growth for the Budget sought in this Appropriation Bill, dealing with the overall services of what can generically be termed as the 'welfare state' in a loose sense, was greater with a GSD Government than under a GSLP/Liberal Government; in fact 2.7% greater. This, Mr Speaker, at a time when the state of the economy has never been better and where revenue over expenditure in the Government coffers has never been greater, thanks to the previous GSD Government. This brings into question all the comments made by the hon. Members opposite, when in Opposition and at the time of the General Election, that the GSD Government had never invested in the welfare state and that all the money available to the previous Government only went into grand projects like the magnificent new airport terminal. Given that we were chastised by the Hon. Neil Costa – who I notice is not here in the Chamber – during the previous term of office, for what he used to say was 'inadequate funding', and now that the new Minister for Social Services uses the mantra that these services are woefully under-resourced, why then have they not used this golden opportunity to put right such under-resourcing at a time when they can afford to do so, thanks to the economic prosperity inherited from the outgoing GSD Government? The answer, Mr Speaker, is because it was a pack of lies then by the Members opposite.

Mr Speaker, The Minister for Equality, in her contribution to the Appropriation Bill, stated that by having a Minister dedicated for the first time to equality issues that this was an important step taken by this new Government. She also stated that this will mean that 'vulnerable people will be given priority'. Seconds later, almost in the same sentence, she went on, in her now inimitable and unnecessarily high-handed style, to spew a barrage of unfounded allegations that, I had tried to change the Classroom Aides' conditions of employment unilaterally at St. Bernadette's Occupational Centre.

Mr Speaker, her personalised criticism is not something that I am concerned about, but for the hon. Lady to say that 'priority will be given to vulnerable people', and then, almost in the same sentence, misconstrue the facts surrounding the dispute at St. Bernadette's is quite another and I am not going to let her get away with it. The hon. Lady also needs to be consistent with her own statement and not be all things to all men.

Mr Speaker, the dispute at St Bernadette's was about some Classroom Aides deciding not to carry out their full duties within their job description and, as a consequence of that unilateral action by them, to disregard their duties to disabled persons, which brought about a negative effect on the services provided to vulnerable people. No one's contract was changed unilaterally. Now, let's be clear, I don't make apologies for the fact that, as Minister for Disability, I placed the interest of disabled persons before the unreasonable position taken by some employees, notwithstanding the fact that I have continued to be a trade union member since the age of fifteen and an old-fashioned socialist.

What the hon. Lady cannot say, on the one hand, is that vulnerable people come first, but then criticise me for doing exactly that. Her position is not just contradictory, but shows the venom of her political inclination towards character assassination. And, for the record, in relation to the suspension without pay, it wasn't once, it was twice, and if I was placed in the same position again, I would do it again, and again because, for me, vulnerable people come first. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Despite the fanfare of the Minister for Equality about how she will now be the saviour of minority groups, how come she has not once in her speech mentioned the plight of Moroccan workers? Is it because she may think that they cannot vote at General Elections, or is it because she doesn't care at all? It is quite shameful that the new Minister for Equality does not have on her radar screen the interest and welfare of Moroccan workers, most of which have lived in Gibraltar for 40 years.

In this regard, I do appreciate, however, that the Chief Minister is on a bind here, because on the one hand he has indicated to me that he is willing to make significant progress on the issues raised by me but, on the other, he has to contend with his Minister for Social Security who has been, is, and continues to be, totally against giving Moroccans equal treatment on benefits that that they have directly or indirectly contributed to. That said, the Chief Minister cannot sit on the fence permanently without deciding what to do. Either he comes on the side of moral obligation towards the Moroccans, or he adopts the traditional stand of his Minister. If he takes the moral stand, he will certainly have me congratulating him for his principles, but if he chooses to ignore this issue, he can rest assured there will be those, like me, that will continue to fight for a principled cause.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady, the Minister, charged with responsibility with women's issues, went on to lecture my hon. friend, Mrs Ellul-Hammond – as if my colleague needed a lecture from her – on why the Government will not pursue positive discrimination policies for women within the Government or society. Mr Speaker, neither my hon. friend nor, indeed, the GSD, is advocating positive discrimination policies. What she was talking about was positive action that the Government needs to pursue to give women a greater voice and role.

Just to give the hon. Lady an example of a very successful GSD Government policy on positive action for women, was the abundance of professional continual development courses for Civil Servants. As a result of this sustained 16 year investment, today we see many women Civil Servants in middle and higher management posts that did not exist under the last GSLP Government, which never took any positive action for women or, indeed, for the Civil Service either. Well, when I come to think about it, not only did they not do anything but they tried to decimate the Civil Service. The then Hon. socialist Chief Minister tried to privatise it, and I am glad to say that, thanks to my efforts in this matter, I successfully thwarted such right-wing policies of the then socialist Chief Minister. So, for a Minister with responsibility for women's issues not to know the difference between positive action and positive discrimination shows that it is all talk and no substance in this Government.

As my hon. friend, Mrs Ellul-Hammond, said, thanks to the GSD's commitment to social equality and social justice, the 15 years of a GSD Government has addressed much better the balance towards a more meritocratic society. The GSD helped close the gap between men and women through the introduction of social policies, such as maternity grants and equalisation of pension rights; the support of working parents, the school lunches and family-friendly hours; and encouraging upward social mobility for women through training within the public sector.

We now seek a concerted effort to positively encourage more women to participate in bodies linked to influencing policy-making; and the introduction of further meritocratic policies, such as equality legislation. And even today, it is pathetic for a so-called socialist Government to wait for a European Directive in order to implement paternity leave in the private sector. If they were real socialists, they would have the boldness to do it right now. They even have the very successful legislation on maternity leave, brought about by the GSD Government, as a tool to emulate and implement the paternity leave, or is it that they need outside consultants, as with the Hon. Minister Cortes, to tell them how to do it?

As expected, the Minister for Social Services has claimed that, thanks to this new Government, they have brought about a 'new dawn' in which they will put right the necessary resources that are needed to provide adequate services to vulnerable people, and this will be manifested by the increase in expenditure and staff, as shown in the Estimates Book. Well, it certainly is a new dawn of glitter and press release spin, but one that lacks substance and honesty to state the enormous improvements brought about by successive GSD Governments in the field of Social Services. (Some Members: Hear, hear.)

I will take the 'Hear, hear' and the chance to have a bit of water.

As far as the expenditure argument is concerned, let us not forget that when we came into Government in May 1996, the budget we inherited from the outgoing GSLP Government for Social Services, and the Elderly was £1,870,000. Today the forecast outturn for recurrent expenditure for the financial year 2011-2012 is £17,991,000. This is an increase of 962% in money terms and an increase of 673% in real terms, after adjusting for inflation. Therefore, on this count alone, if the hon. Lady, the Minister for Social Services, thinks that we have not invested enough then, when compared to the pittance that existed under a GSLP Government, surely she will have the honesty to condemn her political mentors between 1988-96 in the field of Social Services and the Elderly as woefully under-resourced.

The problem with Members opposite is that they don't know, or keep to the text, of the things that they state in their manifesto. Take, for instance, the example of 'Orthopaedic Equipment' on page 82 of their manifesto. It states,

'The budget for orthopaedic equipment is presently just £30,000 and this will be increased considerably'.

Well, given the remark, I quickly went to see how much this sub-head was going to be increased by, so I dashed to the Estimates Book, went to Head 26 – 'Social Security' – down to sub-head 2 – 'Other Charges' – (2) (b) 'Home Help', and what do I see? I see that the Estimate for 2011-12 was £30,000, the Forecast Outturn is £30,000 and the new Estimate for 2012-13 is – wait for it. Any guesses from the Government benches? £30,000!

So, I then looked at (2) (c) – 'Contingencies' – and what do I see? I see that the Estimate for 2011-12 was £35,000, the Forecast Outturn is £35,000 and the new Estimate is – wait for it. Any guesses from the Government benches? £35,000! So, what can we conclude? Either at the time of the Elections they did not know what they were talking about, or they said one thing at Election time and now they are doing another.

Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Social Services told us, in her Budget address, that the expenditure for orthopaedic equipment will be supplemented further by viring from other Heads or sub-heads, as and when this is necessary during the new financial year. Well, Mr Speaker, what I tell her is: 'Welcome to the real world of politics', because this is precisely what I did in some years in which the demand for further equipment surpassed the expenditure allocated under this sub-head. So she is saying she would do exactly what I did despite all those criticisms when they were in Opposition. Or perhaps it suddenly dawned on the hon. Lady when preparing her speech that her party in Opposition used to criticise me on this issue, realised that I would expose the inconsistency and hypocrisy on the part of the new Government and, at the last minute, sought to justify it. Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady needs to understand that she can't have 'el pan mantecado por los dos lados'. Either she criticises both the GSD and the GSLP/Liberal Government, or she acknowledges that when her colleagues criticised the GSD Government this was without any substance in truth? So which one of the two is it? She needs to answer that question.

Again, Mr Speaker, in relation to the recruitment of extra staff, as shown in the new Estimate Book, the hon. Lady has claimed that this shows how woefully inadequate human resources were under a GSD Government in order to provide services to vulnerable people. Again, the hon. Lady needs to do the same exercise as stated before and have the honesty to state that personnel employed by the previous GSLP Government was a tiny, tiny fraction of the figures that we have today, making the Care Agency today the third biggest Government organisation after the GHA and Education, a colossal increase by the GSD Government. The employment of an extra 35 Care Workers and Social Care Workers, welcome as it is, is a small amount compared to increases in our time. Here, as elsewhere, in the Opposition political discourse during this Budget session there is an inherent contradiction; there is no money in the coffers because of the large public debt, but we have the money to employ an extra 35 workers. Could it be that, thankfully, our economy and the state of public finances are so good that it allows us to increase numbers?

Again, Mr Speaker, in her Budget address, the Minister for Social Services stated 'we have created a new post of Training Officer'. Well, Mr Speaker, this is not true: the hon. Lady obviously doesn't know what she is talking about. The fact that we can see in the Estimate Book for this new financial year a new post of Training Officer, does not mean that she took the decision to have a Training Officer dedicated to pursue training issues in the Care Agency. Mr Speaker, the post and the person leading the training started in my period in Government, as a direct result of my decision, as Minister, to continue to develop further more dedicated training courses throughout the Care Agency. This is a fact, and for the hon. Lady to claim credit for something that she should know was my decision, and not hers, shows a level of political immaturity which she needs to quickly snap out of. What she should do is go back to her office, get the right information, and apologise to Parliament at the first possible opportunity.

Also, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has stated that the coming into fruition of the Alzheimer's and Dementia Hospital and the Day Centre Facilities would further provide more job opportunities. Indeed, the completion of these ongoing GSD initiatives would have meant that whoever was returned to Government would have had to increase the number of jobs, even if we continue to witness today further delays in the opening of these facilities. It should be noted from the Estimate Book within the Improvement and Development Fund (IDF), sub-head (g) – 'Old Naval Hospital Conversion and Refurbishment Works', that there is a Forecast Outturn of £9,911,000 of works done, with a new Estimate for 2012-13 of £1 million to complete. It is obvious that, despite her attempt to rubbish what has already been done, the project is virtually complete. One hopes that, with the bulk of the works now done, we don't witness further delays and there is no attempt to claim credit for another GSD project.

Whilst talking of delays, Mr Speaker, we have a situation in which already the new independent living for the elderly at the old St. Bernard's Hospital has been completed since this last April, as stated by the Minister for Housing in Parliament, the Government has not yet opened up the facilities, thereby unnecessarily compounding the number of elderly people waiting for a place at Mount Alvernia, or by having some elderly people bed-blocking at St. Bernard Hospital, for social reasons, as opposed to medical ones. What has happened since April is that there is a tug of war between the Minister for Housing and the Minister for Social Services. The Minister for Housing quite rightly has understood from the beginning the concept behind the refurbishment, which is to provide able-bodied independent elderly persons with the accommodation it has been intended from the beginning of this project, whilst the Minister for Social Services is intent to modify the concept behind it and alter the facilities on the basis that the refurbishment is not fit for elderly persons with disability or mobility problems. This she wants to do in order to politicise the refurbishment with spurious argument that the refurbishment is not fit for purpose.

Frankly, it is a scandal that the Minister for Social Services should put petty party politics before the interests of the elderly. What the Government needs to do is to spend less time drafting press releases and getting on with finalising these GSD projects, whether this is the airport terminal, the tunnel, the power station, the Alzheimer's & Dementia Hospital or the independent living accommodation for the elderly in the old St. Bernard's Hospital, (Members: Hear, hear.) thereby bringing huge, huge benefits to the people of Gibraltar. This Government needs to come out of Opposition mode, and get on with governing Gibraltar! (Interjections).

The problem with the current policies with regard to Social Services and the Elderly is that there isn't any clear coherent policy at all. What we have is a continuation of GSD policies – even though they are constantly rubbing them – but when it comes to specifying their own policies, as stated in their manifesto, they lack detail. So far they have continued with the Alzheimer's & Dementia Hospital, although at a sluggish pace; they have pledged to set up the Day Care Centre advocated by the GSD; they have increased Domiciliary Care funding, as has been the case under the GSD Government; they have continued the GSD Training Programme for the Care Agency – even though the hon. Lady refuses to provide me with a copy – continued with the programmes and services for Looked After Children, the Elderly, the Disabled and those with a substance abuse condition. Yes, there has been a tweak here or there but, despite the rhetoric of political distortion, nothing fundamental has changed.

On the fundamentals, the new Government is running services very much on the successful GSD formula, and the enormous amount of funding we put in place. Even the new announced policies of moving the current Day Centres for the Elderly to Waterport Terraces – which was the projected policy of the GSD, if re-elected – and, indeed, the changes to the admission policy for Mount Alvernia, one in which the GSD Government had already discussed and agreed to change upon being re-elected. So I am glad that someone, somewhere, is passing on to the Minister for Social Services the plans we had if we had got re-elected, and that she then uses these as announcements as if it were their policies. At the end of the day, we both work in the interest of Gibraltar.

On the other hand, Mr Speaker, with regard to the GSLP/Liberal policies on Social Services and the Elderly, we notice the following. When I have asked in Parliament, ‘when will the Disability Action Plan be introduced?’, the Hon. Minister for Social Services stated, ‘We are meeting all representative organisations. Once this process is complete we will be in a position to assess the content of the plan’. When I asked the Minister, ‘What features will the programme of life planning for disabled persons have and when will they implement this manifesto commitment?’ she said, ‘Yes, the Government is in the process of identifying individuals with disability.’ Well, one wonders Mr Speaker, whether it’s going to take the hon. Lady four years to identify who, and where, the disabled people are. I dare advise the hon. Lady that, by calling a meeting to her office of senior management of the Care Agency, Social Security, Health Authority, Education and Employment, by the end of the meeting, which should last not more than an hour, she will know who and where the disabled people are, and without the need of an iPad or a Mac Apple.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Apple Mac!

Hon. J J Netto: Apple Mac, sorry. I am grateful to the Chief Minister for that.

Mr Speaker, when I asked the Government ‘When will they transpose the UN Convention on the Rights of Disabled Persons?’, the answer was, ‘It’s not done yet, but we are working on it’.

When I asked, ‘What employment grants will be made available to disabled persons in order to optimise supported employment?’, the answer was a predictable one: ‘We are meeting all representative organisations. Once this process is complete, we will be in a position to assess the content of the plan and provide a cost’.

So far, Mr Speaker, the only quick and decisive action taken at the start of this term of office, with regard to disabled persons, has been to withdraw the Disability Allowance to disabled persons in employment. Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister, in his address, announced that disabled persons in employment will no longer have their Disability Allowance removed from them completely, as was the case before. Instead, the Disability Allowance will be removed on a staggered basis, and 25% of it will remain payable indefinitely and will not be removed. The truth is that when the Minister for Social Security gave instruction to the Department to remove the allowance to disabled persons in employment he did not have any inclination or willingness then of taking into account the personal circumstances of disabled persons.

The measure announced to preserve 25% is a direct result of my intervention in this House when I said that, before doing this, they should look into the specific personal circumstances of each individual person, given that many need to purchase either specialised equipment, or medical services, or both, and to remove the allowance was unjust. Therefore, I am pleased that my direct intervention has proved effective in changing their ill-thought policy at the time, even if they choose not to acknowledge my contribution. It is no wonder that the Chief Minister, in his address, did say this goes beyond their manifesto commitment. And it is incorrect to state, as the Chief Minister stated, that the Disability Allowance used to be removed before in the period of the GSD Government. The fact is that, notwithstanding the administrative system in place we, the GSD, chose not to remove the allowance.

Mr Speaker, yet whilst this goes on, the Government is about to lose a golden opportunity with regard to sustainable employment opportunities for the disabled. Last week, actually two weeks ago now, the Government placed a tender for the provision and operation of a portable/prefabricated kiosk at the children’s park at the Westside promenade. What I would suggest to the Government is to freeze the tender process and, instead, look into the opportunity, as it exist in many parts of the world, whereby disabled persons can organise themselves into either charitable organisations or co-operatives in order to provide a service to the community, with the profits being re-invested for the development of further sustainable employment for disabled persons. Mr Speaker, the variety and extent of services that can be provided in the services of a kiosk could generate the kind of occupational activities that are necessary for some disabled persons to feel rewarded and motivated, and if the example works, then it can be extended to other places in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, if I can quickly just stop there: I would really like the Chief Minister or perhaps the Deputy Chief Minister, who looks into the question of tenders, to really look into this matter, even if it is a simple moratorium on that particular tender notice, in order to allow them to have the opportunity to look at my consideration. I am more than willing, if he wants to, for me to bring on a private note my suggestion, my view. I think it is a golden opportunity. It can create sustainable employment for disabled persons and if he can put just a mark on his notes and consider the matter I would be extremely grateful, not for me but at least for disabled people.

Mr Speaker, moving on, the most astounding remark made by the Minister for Social Services in her contribution on Tuesday was when she said and I quote, ‘the Children Act was passed with little consultation with interested parties and that the proposed legislation was not placed for consultation within Social Services’. Well, Mr Speaker, one wonders the depths of disingenuousness that the hon. Lady is prepared to sink to. The fact is that nothing could be further from the truth. Mr Speaker, the facts are that, in this matter, the GSD Government issued a White Paper annexing the draft Children Bill, with a narrative explaining the proposed draft and that this went out to NGOs, the legal profession, the management of the Care Agency, and all other relevant stakeholders. When it went out to consultation we considered the various comments and included some in amendments. The process took months. It was an unprecedented level of consultation. And doesn’t the hon. Lady not know either, from her own practice in family law, that the Ministry for Justice and my own Ministry then, prior to the issuing of the White Paper, constituted a working committee composed of senior management of the Care Agency, the legal profession and NGOs, which lasted for 2 years in the elaboration of the Children Act. Mr Speaker, there was at the time considerable interest in the media, depicting press statements and media coverage of the work of the committee. Perhaps the hon. Lady was not living in Gibraltar at the time. (Laughter) Mr Speaker, if this is not consulting, as the hon. Lady is claiming, then we need to redefine the meaning of the word ‘consultation’.

The issue here is that the hon. Lady has a pathological inclination to rubbish everything that the GSD Government has done, and in order to achieve this objective, anything goes, so long as the political untruth uttered is repeated often enough for the next four years. Her comments do not stand up anywhere near to the facts. As a lawyer, she should know better. Whether the hon. Lady likes it or not, the GSD Government does have a most impressive record for having achieved enormous improvements for all vulnerable groups in Gibraltar, and certainly a much better record than the awful legacy we inherited from the GSLP Government. (Members: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, before moving to the subject of the elderly, there is one Government policy that worries me in the Care Agency. This is the introduction of the 11-month contract, which does have serious implications for the quality of service to Care Agency service-users and for our relationship with our neighbours on the other side of the frontier. There is no doubt that the introduction of this policy has been forced into the Care Agency by the Minister for Employment.

This policy is designed for the purpose of applying unwanted and excessive pressure to British and Spanish employees, so as to pave the way for getting rid of them and then employing unemployed Gibraltarians. This policy worries me on several counts. The fact that the Minister for Employment is driving, behind the scenes, such a move against hard-working and conscientious employees will mean that the Agency will be put under pressure to maintain the high standard that has been the hallmark of services to all service-users. It is no wonder that a petition by the family of service-users is already taking place. This policy can also have a double whammy effect, in that employees made redundant by the Care Agency, as a result of the actions of the Minister for Employment, will inevitably result in press comments on the other side of the frontier, thereby exacerbating the hostile climate that now exists as a result of the Government’s bad handling of the fishermen’s dispute. If this occurs, the Minister for Employment will have to share responsibility for a deterioration of relations across the frontier, something he obviously never cared or bothered about.

Mr Speaker, all things being equal at the time that a new vacancy arises, we would all agree that a Gibraltarian should get the job, but what the Hon. Mr. Bossano is pursuing is a very different matter. He is forcing good employees, in existing jobs, to 11-month contracts, with a view of replacing them by locals, regardless of whether they are suitable or not. This is un-socialist, it is anti-trade union, and probably illegal. Already such a plan has produced one victim. As a result of trying to impose the 11-month contract to the Nursing Co-ordinator, Mrs Lynne Cowen, she has decided to return to the UK and plans are already afoot to have her position filled with a charge nurse of the GHA by direct appointment a dedo. The whole episode, Mr Speaker, has the hallmark of devaluing the service in the Care Agency, demoralising the staff, unnecessarily worrying the families of service-users, and increasing conflict across the frontier between ordinary working people. (A Member: Hear, hear.) It is therefore necessary for the Chief Minister to show leadership in his Government and put a stop to the antics of his Employment Minister before things get out of hand.

Moving on to matters to do with Housing, but only in relation to the elderly and disabled, I have to say that again the policy of the new Government is very much to continue with the success of GSD policies of the past, but the pace in which they are going about doing this is starting to concern me.

Already, I have stated that the independent living accommodation block for the elderly at the old St. Bernard Hospital has been finished since this last April and, instead of getting on to offer these facilities to the elderly, the place remains closed as a result of the dispute between the two Ministers mentioned: a tragedy for the elderly people in need for this facility! Perhaps the most astonishing remark given in Parliament by the Housing Minister was when I asked the Hon. Minister what new housing provisions will be made available for disabled persons and their families by the new Government? The answer was to say that they will continue with the policy of allocating ground floor flats in the Government housing stock, plus when the new affordable housing blocks emerge, this will allow disabled persons and their families to live satisfactorily therein. Well, upon hearing this, I thought to myself, where on earth has the new Housing Minister been living for the last 16 years! Why then give the impression, as they did in their manifesto, that additional and specific housing properties was going to be built by the GSLP/Liberal Government for disabled persons and their families? Again Mr Speaker, a question of all things to all men, without the slightest intention of doing anything about it.

On another question early in the New Year, Mr Speaker, I asked the Hon. Minister for Housing, whether the new Government will continue the GSD programme of lift installations, and whether they would use the rest of the previous financial year to prepare the tender documents for lift installations so as to commence early in the new financial year 2012-13. The answer by the Minister to both questions was 'yes.' Therefore, Mr Speaker, when I received the draft Estimates Book I searched the pages for the Improvement & Development Fund, Head 102 – 'Projects' 5(w) and, thankfully, I see listed the heading, 'Government Lifts'. Then I move my eyes across to see the estimate provided and, to my astonishment and bewilderment, I see the figure of £50,000. Now, Mr Speaker, I am not a Quantity Surveyor, but from my own experience at the time when I was the Housing Minister, I can tell that the average price for the construction of a shaft, and placing the lift with its appliances and machinery used to cost £75,000. Given the number of years that I have now left Housing I would not be surprised if the average cost could oscillate between £100,000 to £150,000 just for one lift – or even more. Therefore, with the provision of £50,000 for the financial year 2012-13, the Government will not be able to start fulfilling its Election pledges, even if they have the pretty pictures to show the different Tenants Associations.

Would the Minister for Housing not acknowledge that when, at the time of the Election, when they distributed leaflets telling voters that they could be trusted with their promises, that this has turned out not to be true? And when they promised the tenants of Laguna Estate, 'Vote for us and we will immediately start construction of the lifts after the Election, it was simply a pack of lies in order to get their vote by false pretences. And does the Government not understand that, by delaying, or not carrying out, the very successful GSD rolling programme of lift installation, all it means is that the quality of life of the elderly and the disabled is being constrained and devalued by the inactions of this Government?

Mr Speaker, another GSLP/Liberal manifesto promise with regard to the elderly is to build another block of flats, like the very successful ones the GSD did in Bishop Canilla and Albert Risso Houses. Yet again, when I look into the Estimate Book, I see a token amount of £100,000 for 'New Housing Projects' in Head 102 – 'Projects'. I heard nothing from the Minister for Housing or the Chief Minister on this. Building 1,400 affordable homes is well and good but we need to continue building rental homes and homes for our elderly, too, and I hope that in the announcement that the Minister for Housing quite curiously said that he would make imminently that they say something about this, too. I say 'curiously' because, like my colleague the Hon. Mr. Feetham, I thought Budget time was all about making such announcements. Between Mr. Cortes making announcements on Facebook and the hon. Member saying that housing projects will be announced in a press release shortly, I am beginning to wonder what Parliament is for.

The other area of importance with regards to services by the Housing Ministry to the elderly, and those with regard to a disability or medical condition, refers to the response time in prioritising such works in Government flats. At the beginning of this term of office, I asked the Minister for Housing for the amount of outstanding conversions of showers from baths and the time it would take to do the work. The answer from the Minister at the time was that there were 66 and that the works would be done in three months, something that at the time I thought was too bold for an answer, taking into account that this aspect of work only forms one part of the overall context of works by the Housing Works Agency. Now, of course, we know that not all the outstanding works have been done and there remains some still waiting beyond the three month deadline given by the Minister.

More recently, in fact at the last sitting of Parliament, I asked both the Minister for Health and the Minister for Housing if they could provide me with the number of outstanding works to be done in Government flats, arising from reports by the Occupational Therapy Department. Given that the answer provided by both differed, I had the inconvenience to ask the Minister for an explanation as to why the two figures given were different. Instead of providing a sensible explanation, or deferring the answer until they could seek clarification from their respective civil servants on this issue, I was subjected to a torrent of vitriol by the Minister for Health and the Minister for Social Services for having had the temerity of having asked for an explanation.

We witness the spectacle of the Minister for Health talking about 'heights of hypocrisy' and the Minister for Social Services, who could not wait to have her moment of glory, saying that quote 'on one occasion a person had even died as a result of waiting for the works to be done'. Unquote. The hon. Lady felt compelled to try and score what she thought was a knockout political point, regardless of the fact that, only 30 seconds earlier, the Minister for Health had conceded that, unfortunately, delays do occur with these types of work, either because the equipment sought has to come from abroad or because of delays in the execution of the works.

Whilst I will deal in one moment with the 'heights of hypocrisy' for the benefit of the 'new kid on the block', does the hon. Lady, the Minister for Social Services not realise that even if it were true that, in one case, unfortunately, somebody might have died before the works were done, her comments raise the question of how many other people would have died between 1988-1996 when the 'so-called' socialist government did not even provide, or thought of having, a sub-head for those unfortunate persons who could not afford the equipment or the work. And if this whole issue is such a tragedy for Members opposite, given that in their manifesto they stated that they were going to increase the Fund considerably, why then in the Estimate Book does it show the same amount as was the case when the GSD was in Government? Mr Speaker, hypocrisy, hypocrisy, hypocrisy. (Interjections)

What this whole episode highlights is that, despite the much proclaimed fanfare of a collegiate Government that is always in constant e-communication through their iPads, what it shows is that the left hand doesn't know what the right hand is doing! Hence the vitriolic attack against me for exposing the myth. One can always suggest to the hon. Members opposite that to improve communications further between Ministers they should get in touch with companies in the Silicon Valley in California in order for them to obtain the latest technology in holograms. This would allow the hon. Members of the Government not just to be in touch electronically, but also to have a three dimensional image of themselves in virtual reality in order to get their act together. One drawback for the people of Gibraltar, in case the Government would be thinking of projecting their images into people's living rooms, is that it will have serious adverse health risks to them which will require additional funding for the GHA for counselling therapies due to Government spin and fantasy.

Mr Speaker, the Minister for Health took offence in Question 548/2012 because I was seeking to find an answer to the different figures being produced by different members of the Government. Instead of providing an adequate answer as to whether such outstanding works would be done in this financial year, he conveniently digressed away from the question by saying that it was the height of hypocrisy by the GSD to accuse the new Government of delays in the execution of the works.

Mr Speaker: I should remind the hon. Member he is using the word 'hypocrisy'. It is one of the words on the glossary of words not permitted.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I prefix it with 'political', then?

Mr Speaker: I beg your pardon?

Hon. J J Netto: Can I prefix it with 'political', then?

625

Mr Speaker: Anyway, I should remind Members it is not acceptable.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, this is what he said.

Mr Speaker: I know but, previously, it was used –

Hon. J J Netto: I am quoting what he said.

635

Mr Speaker: I know, but I am taking up the point from the point where the hon. Member used the word 'hypocrisy' and, for good measure, repeated it twice more, so it is three times as unacceptable.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, one wonders –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a Point of Order. You actually said earlier, in the course of the ruling, that the fact one was quoting from a source did not in any way, either, exempt the words.

Hon. J J Netto: He can say it, but I cannot. Is that what you are saying?

Mr Speaker: No the point made (Laughter), the point made by the Hon. Chief Minister and that I have already made in my ruling is the fact that when you are quoting someone else does not make it more palatable here.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, one very much welcomes an exposition of the word that he said and that I am not saying now – (Laughter)

655

Hon. J J Netto: For the benefit of Members of this House and for the benefit of members of the public, in this tabulation of examples, we can compare the delays of carrying out O.T. works in Government flats, against the fact that the Socialist Government – of which he is now one – never provided for any money, or resources, to do this kind of work between 1988- 1996.

660

Perhaps the fact that, after the construction of Dr. Giraldi Home it stayed closed for two years because, in the words of the then socialist Chief Minister, 'employing professional people would be too expensive'; or rejecting a plea from the Board of Governors of Mount Alvernia to have an increase to the GSLP Government subvention was denied by the socialist Government when, at the time, most occupational activities at Mount Alvernia were carried out free by the Friends of Mount Alvernia, or that the building was closed by two thirds because it needed money for refurbishment; or the fact that hundreds and hundreds of elderly persons did not have either income at all, or very little, and it took a GSD caring government to introduce the Minimum Income Guarantee...

665

Mr Speaker. the truth is that I could go on and on... so if the Hon. Minister has a desire to speak of the things which I cannot say, but he said it, that is fine with me, but let's keep the argument empirical and not theatrical. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

670

Mr Speaker, another example where the left hand does not know what the right hand is doing in Government is in relation of the close collaboration that should exist between the Care Agency and the Employment Service. At the beginning of this term of Parliament I asked how many Looked After Children were in training programmes. The Minister for Employment answered – although I should say in a supplementary question – that there had been a lack of communication between both Agencies, which had resulted in the Care Agency not passing the details of the then seven juveniles affected by this, and that this would be rectified immediately. Today, some seven months later, there continue to be at least five Looked After Children still awaiting a work placement in order to start learning the importance of training in occupational skills in order to set such juveniles on a strong path for the future. This lack of communication and effort shown by both Agencies is worrying, as the Care Agency does have parental responsibility for the welfare of any Looked After Child. Any further delays in actually delivering such opportunities will have a detrimental effect on the juveniles at a time which is crucial in their lifetime development as a person. I do sincerely hope, that by the time I ask this question again, which will be in a couple of weeks time, the matter will have been finally resolved.

Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister in his inaugural Budget address alluded once more to the fact that the previous GSLP Government did a wonderful job when they introduced the Standard Minimum Wage, well ahead of the UK Government. However, given the manner upon which they did it, which was so disgraceful, I feel obliged to put the record straight once and for all. To the extent that the Standard Minimum Wage was introduced in 1989, this is certainly correct but, given the incomplete story of this GSLP Government initiative, I will take the trouble to complete the picture, so that ordinary people can draw a proper conclusion from a very 'un-socialist' piece of legislation at the time.

In August 1989, the GSLP Government introduced the Standard Minimum Wage Order in Gibraltar for weekly paid employees only. The only discernible reason for restricting the Standard Minimum Wage generally was that, at this time, the Administrative Assistants' hourly rate of pay was £1.68 for a 16 year old person, £1.82 for a 17 year old person, £2.22 for an 18 year old person and £2.36 for a 19 year old person. This, obviously, was less than the hourly rate of pay for the newly introduced Minimum Wage of £2.50. Therefore, the GSLP Government designed a Minimum Wage Order in which the GSLP Government as an employer could use the deliberate loophole of not applying the Minimum Wage to its own employees because Administrative Assistants were paid monthly. So we had a so-called socialist Government deciding, as an employer, to keep its own Administrative Assistants below the Minimum Wage. Quite shameful and, to boot, when private sector employers found out, at the time, that by transferring their weekly paid employees to monthly paid, they could pay less than the hourly rate of the Minimum Wage, we witnessed a movement to circumscribe the legislation, thereby negating the Minimum Wage concept as a living wage. Mr Speaker, to borrow a popular phrase from the Hon. Mr Costa, 'Shame' on the socialist Government of 1988-96. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, It took a GSD Government to close the deliberate loophole created by the GSLP Government, thus making all employers in Gibraltar comply with the minimum wage both in the private and public sector for weekly and monthly paid employees. This was set as from the age of 16 thereby, closing all the deliberate loopholes of the so-called socialist Government. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, in terms of the big issues, to keep an on-going eye within the Social Security Department – the reform to the Social Insurance that the Minister has alluded to in previous Question and Answer sessions in Parliament – it remains to be seen how the details of such proposed reforms, inasmuch as future funding liabilities is concerned, and inasmuch as the benefits to be drawn by current and future recipients, develop. One hopes that, despite indicating this matter in his address, he will give plenty of advance notice of any changes, not just to Parliament, on such an important and fundamental issue, but also to the social partners in the Trade Unions and the business organisations about the general principles behind the reform and the details of such, so that people can be better informed of what is likely to affect them now and in the future in such an important area of our lives.

Mr Speaker, the Government in their manifesto, talked about legislating in order to protect people fully from discrimination. Although one feels that this is yet one more commitment that has been kicked into the long grass, what the Government can do, as I was doing as Minister for Social Security in the short term, is to continue to update antiquated and discriminatory legislation within Social Security matters. At the moment, for instance, same sex couples are not taken into account for the purpose of certain benefits, such as Unemployment Benefits, Social Assistance, Minimum Income Guarantee, etc. Changes to the existing rules can be done quickly and promptly without having to wait for the completion of a review of all current legislation. Indeed, they might also wish to review how benefits affect common-law partners, too. This is something that can be done within the next six months if the will is there.

Mr Speaker, moving on to my last area of shadow responsibility, which is Health and Safety, well, Members will remember that, whilst talking of Social Services, I stated that the Government lacked a coherent policy at all. However, with regard to health and safety, we don't even have an idea of an idea in terms of what to do. This however is a pity, because when I went to the IOSH inauguration in the John Mackintosh Hall earlier this year, the Minister did inspire me at the time when, in his speech, he did say, 'the problem with Health and Safety practices is that it is very reactive and not proactive'. So when I heard the Minister say that, I thought to myself, well, here is a man who knows what to do and is going to make a big difference in showing how to overcome them. Unfortunately, Mr Speaker my expectation was short-lived. The only glimmer of hope so far is that the Minister has indicated to me that the Government might employ some more Factory Inspectors, although this is not shown in the new Estimate Book. That said, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Health & Safety's contribution to the Budget Address sadly lacked vision, enthusiasm and knowledge of the issues that need addressing.

Mr Speaker, month after month when I ask my questions about which industry groups have been targeted for inspections, the practical totality has been to the construction industry. There seems to be no desire, willingness or concern about using the existing resources available to spread more evenly across the whole spectrum of all industry groups, giving the same treatment for inspections across the whole breadth of the legislation that they need to monitor. It is as if the Government is signalling to all other industry groups, other than the construction industry, 'Do whatever you like, legal or not, because the policy of the Government is to turn a blind eye.'

But it gets worse, Mr Speaker. The whole episode of the KGV Hospital shows how the Government prefers to abandon common sense rather than allow good practices to prevail. Instead of accepting that the trainees on the scaffold had been unsupervised for many days, and that good practice for trainees would have meant wearing hard hats, it automatically rejected all of this simply to give an erroneous image that the Government never gets anything wrong. Well, what trainees need is to be supervised and taught in order to avoid potential hazards, and to be supervised in order that they may learn a trade and to wear hard hats so that good standards are instilled on the youngsters, thereby avoiding future accidents.

Mr Speaker, for the last six months I have been asking the Minister for the statistics in relation to 2011. At first the Minister told the House that his ministry had bought a new software programme and that, by April, the figures would be available. Then, when I asked the question again, he told me that there had been some difficulties with the new software programme, but he would be in a position to give me the data soon. Today, I still have not got the data and the Minister just has not got a clue as to when the data will be available. Lately, as seen in the last session of Parliament, the answers given to my questions do not even provide a clear and precise breakdown of the information requested. What we are witnessing is that, as time passes, instead of improving the systems and procedures inherited, we are actually going backwards.

Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Minister for Health & Safety sincerely wishes to have a proactive policy for health and safety, then he could well start by looking at my policies, at the policies that I developed between 1996-2000. In that period, I constituted a Health & Safety Advisory Council with specialised practitioners who used to advise me, as Minister, for the development of Government policy. We started doing Codes of Practice in order to self-regulate specific industry groups or activities, we held annual health and safety seminars in which large numbers of organisations and trade unions participated, and we applied a holistic approach to health and safety legislation across the whole spectrum of industry groups.

In a nutshell, there are three pillars for a proactive approach to health and safety. The first, up-to-date legislation. Two; proper monitoring and enforcement across the whole spectrum of all industry groups; and, thirdly, ongoing training and awareness to all industry groups and social partners.

I really hope that I may have given the hon. Member some food for thought in the development of proactive policies on health and safety as, otherwise, we are never going to get this show on the road.

In summary, Mr Speaker, I can conclude that, so far into the term of the new Government, in relation to spending into the 'Welfare State', the rate of growth has been less than last year's budget of the GSD, after adjusting for inflation, down by 2.7%.

The new facilities for the elderly at the old St. Bernard's Hospital remain closed, despite the facilities being ready for use, as a result of a dispute by the Minister for Social Services, who is more intent to score cheap political points than improving the services available for the elderly.

The Government is not honouring its pledges with regard to the disabled and the elderly, and is lowering the standard of services in the Care Agency as a result of the introduction of the 11-month contract.

Finally, on health and safety, the Government just has not got a clue on how to develop any positive ideas and, instead, feels content to just plod along and dig its head in the sand.

Mr Speaker, as always in my Budget addresses, I would like to give my sincere thanks to the staff at the Department of Social Security, and the Care Agency for their hard work and dedication to the services they provide to the community. Also, in my new role as an Opposition Member, to all the staff in Parliament for their guidance and help in adjusting to my new role. Without their help, my work would certainly have been much more difficult.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Applause.)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that might be a convenient moment to break for five minutes before I reply.

790 Mr Speaker: The House will recess for five minutes.

The House recessed at 10.20 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 10.30 a.m.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

795 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, two long days of speeches!
Ministers have put a massive amount of detail into the public domain about the progress of a new Government, seven months in, and also what will happen for the next 12 months.

800 Mr Speaker, before I carry on, I think it is appropriate, at this juncture, to congratulate all the novice speakers in this debate, on both sides of the House – but, really, one might have expected a lot more from the Members on the Opposition benches. The Government feels that there has been so little substance raised in the speeches of the hon. Members opposite that one might as well simply get up and commend the Bill to the House because there is very little relating to the Estimates that has been raised at all.

None of them, in my view, have done any meaningful analysis of any of the numbers in the Estimates Book: not really until this morning from Mr Netto, any comment about expenditures up or down.

805 Nothing really at all, Mr Speaker, on the massively important import duty reductions that we have delivered to Main Street, to stimulate the retail distributive trade.

Not a peep, Mr Speaker – not a peep – about the changes that take the lowest paid out of taxation this year, and next year even more.

No comment, Mr Speaker, on the increases in the minimum wage.

810 Mr Speaker, I did not hear a dickybird from the other side about the fact that we are taking pension income outside of the computation for taxation. Not a dickybird, Mr Speaker! Well, at least Mr Figueras acknowledged the new Government's very positive approach to the environment, by our reduction of import duties on hybrid vehicles to 2% - a flat rate of 2% and a very generous system of cash-backs that is introduced for the first time in this Budget.

815 So, instead of comment on any of those issues, congratulations, perhaps, to the Government for such a well-balanced Budget, Mr Speaker, (A Member: Hear, hear.) what did we get, instead? A re-run of all the arguments from the Election that they lost and then, Mr Speaker, something quite novel, which was a team reading of the Hansard between January and June. They all read very well, but that was all it was! It was us being treated to the arguments pre-8th December and what it is they have asked questions about and promoted debate at Question Time, which is not about debates, on the issues that they have raised.

820 Well, Mr Speaker, I remember when the Hon. now the Leader of the Opposition used to rule the roost on this side of the House, he used to tell the hon. Lady, Miss Montegriffo, who I had the pleasure of being in this House with – for reasons that I will come to later, when she was here is important – in this debate he used to say to her that she simply spent her Budget speech regurgitating her press releases and questions from previous sessions. And I recall, Mr Speaker, at one stage he said that was cumulative and, actually, she had been in Parliament for many years and, by the time she left, she did speak for quite a while.

825 But what a humiliation, Mr Speaker! What an utter humiliation, to now see him and his whole team do exactly the same thing. Exactly the same thing. Except, of course, without Miss Montegriffo's innate political flare and panache. I almost felt for him, Mr Speaker – and my feelings of empathy grew as I heard him rely on an argument, not from 8th December 2011, not from this Election, but from an Election 40 years ago – from the 1972 Election.

830 Mr Speaker, 1972 is the year when Mr Bossano was first elected to this Parliament, it is the year when Mr Bossino and I were born! What currency and argument from the 1972 'Big Lie' Election – well, actually, you know what, Mr Speaker, perhaps it is because 1972 is the year that I was born, the arguments struck a chord with me: the 'Big Lie' Election. I found myself, for once, in 'man bites dog' category: I actually agreed with him. I think there was a lot to be said in characterising the Election of 2011 as a 'Big Lie' Election because, you see, Mr Speaker, in the same way as Sir Joshua had seen off the 'Big Lie', so had we. So had we.

835 In 1972, the electorate saw through a big lie. That was his argument when he made it on Monday. Well, Mr Speaker, if the analogy is appropriate, then the electorate saw through a collection of big lies in 2011. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Does he not want to hear it? Sir Joshua won in 1972. We won in 2011. The ‘Big Lie’, as he characterised it – and this is his argument, not mine – must, therefore, have been on the lips of the incumbent. And if the analogy, Mr Speaker, is to be seen through, then the ‘big lies’, if that is analogous to 2011, must have been on the lips of the incumbent and that is him. He was the incumbent in 2011.

Well, Mr Speaker, at least in 1972 there was only one alleged lie. You see, in 2011, in the analysis of the hon. Gentleman, there was more than one ‘big lie’ at the Election. He took a complete scattergun approach at what he says were our ‘lies’ at the Election. He said, Mr Speaker, that debt was actually what he always expected it would have been in 2011, that our manifesto is unaffordable, and he said, Mr Speaker – repeatedly – from the moment of this Budget debate, if not before, up to and including Election Day, that we, and in particular I, were unfit to govern.

Well, Mr Speaker, just like in 1972, the lies that he said then were on the lips of the incumbent were seen through by the electorate. We know that the public chose the right team for Government and the right manifesto for the future of our nation. What we did not all know was that the hon. Gentleman would find it quite so difficult to get over, that, seven months later, he is still trying to make the same arguments that the electorate saw through, that he is still going on about it.

Mr Speaker, he was Chief Minister for 16 years. I think the public will have forgiven him for having raised the same arguments that he tried to raise in the General Election at the Ceremonial Opening of the House. The man has been there for 16 years: twenty one days after losing an Election, he still wants to continue fighting it. I do not think it was a particularly elegant address at the ceremonial opening but I think the public might have forgiven him for it.

But, Mr Speaker, in the seven months that there have been between now and the Election I thought he was starting to realise that his role in this place now is to ask questions and he less frequently breaks out into soliloquies, into chiefly soliloquies, that you have to pull him back from. One would have thought that, by now, by the Budget debate, we would all know what our roles are in this new world order. But he gets up, Mr Speaker, and tells us that we have to snap out of Opposition mode and stop rubbishing his ‘golden legacy’.

Well, Mr Speaker, he needs to snap out of it. Why is it that he has put himself in a position where he is going to invite me to explain the hollow ‘golden legacy’ to all and sundry. Has he taken leave of his political senses? Does he not realise it is going to be worse for him in the long run to make allegations of that sort?

The reason why we sometimes have to criticise what happened before 8th December 2011 is because there is important material that has to be put into the public domain. And the reason he wants us to stop doing that is because he knows that there is a lot that, justifiably, will not stand up to scrutiny when it is put out in the public domain. In fact, Mr Speaker, he made a list of the things that we had said about events pre-8th December 2011 and he enumerated the excellent press releases that have been issued by the Government dealing with all of those issues.

But did he tell us what the counter-arguments were? Have they replied to all of those press releases? Where are, Mr Speaker, the detailed explanations? Where are the rebuttals to all of those arguments? Nowhere.

Mr Speaker, we had to say to the public, who are entitled to know, that pretty pictures in the GSD manifesto were paid for by the taxpayer. I thought it was bad enough that they were using taxpayers’ money to fund their campaign in Seven Days. (Hon. N F Costa: Shame!) Pictures in their party political manifesto paid for by the taxpayer and yet we have not heard a word either of explanation or apology from the opposite benches. They have just made a list of the things that they would rather we did not say.

Mr Speaker, on the Culture and Heritage Agency, where we had a debate across the floor of this House, where I gave him the Principal Auditor’s Report, he has said twice in Question Time that he is going to deal with all the criticisms that the Auditor made, that I raised in the course of those debates. Mr Speaker, nothing has been said to date. Nothing! Either the bold assertion that ‘everything was done properly’ but no descending to particulars. Well why, Mr Speaker – why is that the case? Well, it is simple, because there are no good explanations for the many issues that we have raised and the hon. Gentleman, taking something out of the most basic 2.0 Rulebook, as it is known in modern parlance, on how to manage the press, do not want to go into a political argument that they know they cannot win.

Just for a moment moving on to something that Mr Bossino talked about – editorials in one particular local newspaper – let me assure him, Mr Speaker, that for the Government to put into the public domain information relating to the things that the previous administration did is not trial by media. Trial by media, Mr Speaker, was the sustained attack on me and on my colleagues, and on me in particular, which was funded and orchestrated from No. 6, Convent Place, when the party he now sits on the opposite benches with was in power. That was improper use of Government resources. That could properly be referred to using the word that he used, then withdrew, and which you have, quite rightly, said we should not bandy lightly across the floor of this House. £150,000 of taxpayers' money spent on GSD propaganda to attempt – attempt – trial by media against members of the now Government, then the Opposition.

Well, Mr Speaker, they used to say that Seven Days was not a taxpayer-funded political rag but, if any proof were needed of what Seven Days was, vide the fact that the said publication is no longer in print, once the taxpayers' subsidy was choked off and proper democratic accountability re-established as from 9th December 2011 – that new dawn, Mr Speaker, the sun of which so burns their eyes... So, Mr Speaker, when Mr Bossino makes the mistake of making a reference to the 'c' word, I warn him not to develop that theme too much or it may come back to haunt his colleagues who were previously in Government, in the months and years to come, to the massive political benefit of the current Government.

But what rudderless and leaderless Opposition they have become and what an interesting role my old classmate, Mr Bossino, is now playing in it. Mr Speaker, can you imagine, last year, anyone in the GSD delivering a speech in flat contradiction of the political theory of the then Chief Minister, now Leader of the Opposition. Never, Mr Speaker. In fact, I would less fancy the chances last year of a GSD Minister who went off-Caruana-message than I might have fancied my own, actually taking him on from where he is sitting today. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Laughter)

But I won, when I did take him on and yet, this year, Mr Speaker, hardly seven months after he lost power, he is already being challenged on core GSD messages – but not by his Deputy, the one who sees himself as the shoe-in for his job. No, but none other than by, Mr Bossino, whose address was totally contrary to the GSD dogma on what our Election programme is. And if it was not enough that he said it in this House, I congratulate him, Mr Speaker, for sticking to the message and saying it last night in his snippet, or sound-bite, on GBC's Newswatch.

Well, Mr Speaker, we know that the GSD approach – it is a political approach, it is up to them – is to develop a theme and stick with it, even if it does not work: if you say it often enough, you hope that that will stick. It is the media world in which the Leader of the Opposition was brought up in the mid 90's. It used to work then. I do not think it works now, with so much disparate social media etc, but it used to work then, when there were two or three television channels and the odd newspaper that everyone would read. Repeat it, repeat it, repeat it... and it will stick, whether it is true or not, whether it is realistic or not.

Last year the theme was 'Picardo is this, Picardo is that' – it does not matter that it would not stick – and, this year, Mr Speaker you can see those themes developing. One does not have to be a rocket scientist to observe what one's political opponent is trying to do. So, Mr Speaker, everything we do is a U-turn – even though we said we were going to do it and it is set out in our manifesto! All we are trying to be is 'all things to all men', and just because we get on with people, Mr Speaker, we talk to them and we do not tell everyone what it is that they have to do and impose our will on them – 'all things to all men.'

Importantly, Mr Speaker, and this is why this is relevant to this analysis, the GSD dogma, in seven out of eight speeches – sorry, six out of seven speeches – Mr Netto went on for so long I thought it was almost two, that is value for money for you – the thread is that we promised too much at election time, that our manifesto was too full and we cannot afford to deliver on our manifesto commitments. And that, Mr Speaker, is why we are talking about the problems of public finance – as an excuse, a door the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said, through which I will walk whenever I want to cry off any of the manifesto commitments that we cannot then fund – not because the money is not there but because we did not cost our manifesto properly. That is the thread and it has been constant since the ceremonial opening of this House.

Well, Mr Speaker, imagine my surprise when, off-message, stage left, I heard Mr Bossino say yesterday in this House, and on GBC, that we have actually an empty, vacuous programme for government. So, six out of seven say we have got too much to do, we cannot afford it and one out of seven says 'That is why you are spending so much time criticising what we did, because you have got nothing to do, nothing to be getting on with, there is nothing in your programme.' Well, somebody is standing out from those benches, Mr Speaker! I commend him for taking that line, even though, of course, both lines are completely wrong. Our programme, which people have rightly chosen, is the fullest, most ambitious, most properly costed and deliverable programme that Gibraltar has ever selected at a General Election! (Applause) (A Member: Hear, hear.)

But could it be that somebody is actually going to challenge Mr Caruana before he finally goes? Well, Mr Speaker, it may be that it is Mr Bossino. I guess that, for both of us, life really does begin at forty! (Laughter) What happens on the Opposition benches is a matter entirely for them. I am not going to get involved in their leadership issues, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition used to so enjoy doing when he was Chief Minister and, look, I know that a kiss from this side of the House to anybody there in respect of the leadership is probably a kiss of death so I have no intention of pressing my lips to anybody's flesh across the way.

What is clear, and it is becoming clearer beyond peradventure, is that there really is not, on substance, other than on spin – on substance – a unified message coming from those benches any more. So, some of them, Mr Speaker, say that we have too much to do and we cannot afford it. Others say that we have nothing to do except act like an Opposition. Well, Mr Speaker, look, hapless, divided and rudderless – hapless, divided and rudderless – that is what the Opposition has become in the seven months since they lost the throne of office.

In fact, Mr Speaker, it is neither of those because, if hon. Members opposite had bothered to actually listen to the speeches to which they had already carefully crafted replies, they would have realised, actually, quite how advanced we are on delivery of the manifesto which the people chose in December. How, Mr Speaker? We have actually re-committed ourselves to delivery of the manifesto commitments. I have not walked through the door that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition suggested I was purporting to prepare to walk through, and what we are sure of is that we will deliver on these manifesto commitments without having to walk through the trapdoor that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition was setting for us.

Mr Speaker, perhaps that is why they so fear the press releases of Dr. Garcia when he sets out more and more fully completed, entirely delivered and honoured, manifesto commitments already in just seven months. They must hate it every time those lists with hundreds of completed commitments hit the news racks. Our political success is the salt to the fresh wound of their electoral failure.

One of the main things that we are already delivering on is the reduction of our nation's debt. I have already shown, in my first intervention, that this year – in this financial year – we will be reducing gross debt by one eighth, that is, Mr Speaker, from £518 million, down £68 million to £450 million, bang on track to deliver the 50% reduction in gross debt that is set out in our manifesto.

Could they at least not have said that, although they believe that we should be reducing, if we want to reduce anything, net debt, could they at least not have said, 'Well, look, your manifesto says you are going to reduce gross debt by half – one eighth in your first four years – if you continue to deliver, it will be four-eighths in four years, ie. half: you are on track to deliver that which we believe you should not deliver but, chapeau, you are on track? No. Well, I suppose, Mr Speaker, it is a novel concept because, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was incumbent Chief Minister, said during the course of the General Election debates and, in particular, one interview on radio, for them their manifesto is an expression of hopes and wishes, not a binding commitment with the people, as it is for us. I guess that is why it does not matter to them that we are delivering on what we promised. It has never been relevant to them.

Why is it that we have to deliver on debt reduction as a priority? Well, because, Mr Speaker, whatever he may say now, the hon. Gentleman knows that debt has got too high in the spending frenzy that he embarked on in order to try to get himself re-elected. I guess that is what happens when a tired administration tries to spend its way back into power.

But what demonstrates all that, Mr Speaker, in financial and accounting terms – which is what this debate should always be about – is the stunning statistic that I disclosed during the course of my intervention on the Second Reading to move the Bill. I told the House then – and I feel I have got to repeat it because it is essential that the hon. Members opposite understand why we make this argument – they spent more on capital projects in the last two years of the last Parliament than they had in the 13 previous years since 1996. They spend more in two pre-election years than they ever had before. It is an absolute political scandal, Mr Speaker.

But it is worth analysing how the debt grew, in gross and net terms, under the hon. Members when they were in government and, Mr Speaker, of course the figures I am going to refer to are all the figures provided to me by the Treasury and the Ministry for Finance.

Also, Mr Speaker, it is worth noting, and I will do this analysis at the same time, how it is that that growth in gross public debt and net debt is completely contrary to what the hon. Gentleman used to say were the 'golden rules' of his economics. In this debate, Mr Speaker, before your time and before my time, in 2001 the hon. Gentleman explained that the fourth of what he then called his four economic policy objectives was this; that capital should be invested, whilst maintaining reserves at a prudent level, whilst maintaining public debt at a prudent level and using mainly budgetary surpluses to finance capital investments and thus ensuring that we do not raise public debt significantly or substantially and thus avoid mortgaging future generations with things we do today.

He did not say then, Mr Speaker, whether the raising of debt etc. that he was against was in cash terms, in ratio terms, or as a percentage of GDP, but it is really not relevant that he did not say that because, before the hon. Gentleman was possessed by the desire to build a Pharaonic project like the air terminal, which has mortgaged to it, in our view, Mr Speaker, many generations of Gibraltarians and hypothecated to it the many other projects that should have come before such a lavish air terminal, he said more about the 'golden rules'.

In 2003 he re-visited his 'golden rulebook' and there he was specific about what he meant in respect of his fourth rule. The fourth golden rule, as explained to this House in 2003, was a prudent, conservative – that word does suit him – policy of public finances that will curtail public borrowing and maximise public reserves. Curtail public borrowing: well, in 2003, before I was elected, in that Budget debate the Hon. the then Chief Minister gave himself, as he was wont to do in these debates, a glowing report for having complied with his four 'golden' economic policy rules.

That year, Mr Speaker, the position was that gross debt was £78 million on a borrowing limit of £100 million. It was actually the Hon. Mr Feetham, the leader, then, as he was, of a third party, who spent much of the 2003 campaign criticising that level of debt. Incidentally, Mr Speaker, Mr Feetham was then also proposing the introduction of capital gains tax, raising the tax of Category 2 citizens by 50% and calling the Theatre Royal – which the hon. Gentleman used to call 'his vision' – a white elephant. Well, what can I say! (A Member: A lot.)

Anyway, I just pause there, Mr Speaker, to tell the hon. Gentleman that I have in my office a painting by the excellent Gibraltarian painter, Karl Ullger, of the Theatre Royal as it used to be: it does not belong to the Ministry of Culture, it belongs to me. It is from my personal collection, and I hang it in 6 Convent Place to remember always the dangers and folly of Chief Ministerial visions and where they can take us – almost £10 million down a visionless black hole. I suppose Mr Feetham and I still agree on some things! Perhaps more than one might air in this debate.

Well, Mr Speaker, let's cut forward from that glowing report he gave himself in 2003 to last year, to 8th December, in fact to 7th December – the evening of 7th December – when he and I had the pleasure of debating at the leader's debate with Mr Azopardi. Then he said something that caught Mr Azopardi, Mr Neish and myself completely unawares. The whole Election campaign had been predicated on the gross debt of £480 million but, on that day, the hon. Gentleman let the stink bomb down in the studio that, actually, gross debt was closer to £520 million!

The hon. Gentleman last year in this debate – surprise, surprise – also gave himself a glowing pre-Election report, much as he had done in 2003. But in 2003 his glowing report was based on having complied with the 'golden rule' that was to curtail public debt. In 2011, the glowing report ignores the fourth 'golden rule' and gives himself a glowing report, despite gross debt having rocketed.

Well, Mr Speaker, bang goes another GSD myth. The 'golden rule' had been smelted to dust. The once economic policy objective, the curtailing of public borrowing, was now a rotting, forgotten footnote to Gibraltar's economic history. Borrowing had rocketed. Prudence was banished to her room, and debt was the financial drug of choice. The principle that we should not mortgage future generations was hypothecated to the lure of spending one's way back into office.

Goodbye, golden rules! Therefore, Mr Speaker, when the analysis continues we will demonstrate goodbye to the myth of the 'golden legacy'. In fact, Mr Speaker, if Mr Feetham, who is the one who usually enunciates the vein, the spin of U-turn – he is the one who talks about the U-turn, that is his mantra – wants to know what a U-turn looks like, he should learn from his fading leader's tossing and turning on debt.

If the public want to see a U-turn, Mr Speaker, all they need to do is look at the 'golden rule' of 2003 and the Estimates Book of 2011/2012. That is a U-turn and the rest, as they say in Spanish, es historia. But then – Mr Feetham may not want to hear it – anybody who goes from being the putative leader of the GSLP to becoming the putative next leader of the GSD does not need the hon. Gentleman to teach him what a U-turn is. I guess that he has his tongue firmly on his cheek when he says that we want to be all things to all men. But I must say, Mr Speaker, I guess that going from anti-GSD putative leader of the GSLP to being anti-GSLP putative leader of the GSD is a little bit like a military march, 'Left, right, left, right'. So much so, Mr Speaker, that now every time that I watch one of the splendid parades that the Royal Gibraltar Regiment put on and I see them march off to the refrain of the Sergeant Major's, 'Left, right, left, right', I am always put in mind of the hon. Gentleman going from the GSLP to the GSD!

Mr Speaker, when the Hon. Leader of the Opposition was first elected as Chief Minister in 1996 he also made great play of the fact, in that first Budget debate, that he was going to ensure, then in respect of companies, that all Government expenditure was reflected in the Estimates. He said, in his first Budget

1060 speech, that the book had been restructured for that purpose and this brought clarity at last to the public accounts of Gibraltar. Well, Mr Speaker, how that attitude changed. Another U-turn: so many millions of 1065 recurrent company losses were parked off-balance sheet by the hon. Member that one can only conclude that that must have been designed, as his lustre as a political leader faded, to try and artificially boost numbers to reflect a better economic performance than was the case in pre-election years. Indeed, Mr Speaker, keeping those losses out might have produced a much larger surplus every year but it would not be a real surplus at all.
It would have been, as it was, a surplus born from that discipline of economics that he used to cry off so much. It would have been, Mr Speaker, a surplus of voodoo economics – voodoo economics – that he decried so often and then gorged himself on in the final years of his stewardship of our public finances.

Let us face it, Mr Speaker, even in the simple grocery example that he gave of accounts, you have always got to factor in all your recurrent expenditure before arriving at your net cash surplus position. And he is 1070 wrong, and in my view, he knows that he is wrong when he says that we have included in the £28 million amounts which amount to capital before we make the deduction on the surplus. He says, Mr Speaker, that we are including there not just recurrent expenses but capital expenditure. It does not, Mr Speaker. The £28 million does not include a penny of capital expenditure. All of it is recurrent. All of it is recurrent and, 1075 therefore, is rightly applied to the calculation before determining what is left over, ie. the surplus. Every single amount deducted is a recurrent, continuing cost, not a capital cost.

I told him where the capital costs of the company losses would be met from, from the I&D. There is no secret in that at all, and it does not affect his surplus. So, Mr Speaker, when he makes an argument that we included, in the £28 million deduction, some capital elements, he is wrong. And unless he has completely 1080 forgotten everything that he knew on 7th December, before we both met our fate at the polls, he knows that what he is saying is not true, and I am left, Mr Speaker, with the view that there can only be one conclusion, as a result. That is that he is setting out to mislead the general public.

Mr Speaker, we now also know the figures for unemployment given to us last year were not correct. Mr Bossano gave us the detail of that. But I guess it sounded good, in an Election year, to pretend that unemployment was down. It sounded good to say, when you are going to the polls, ‘remember there are less 1085 unemployed’, but it was not true, Mr Speaker. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I assume that there was a hidden meaning when the then Minister of Employment under the hon. Gentleman came to this Parliament, brought us the Employment Survey and you said, when he tabled it that, it was ‘ordered to lie’. I have not quite picked up how easy it is to use the ‘L’ word in this House!

The reality, Mr Speaker, was that there were many more unemployed. And it was given away by the Hon.
1090 Mr Feetham in the course of the pre-Election debates when he said he had calculated what the Future Job Strategy would cost. Well, of course, it did not make sense, based on what his interpretation of what the Future Job Strategy was and the numbers of unemployed that there were, but he was bandying about the figures that he was bandying about. Mr Bossano has told us the reality of that in this debate, Mr Speaker. The 1095 Employment Survey this year is ordered to inform the public of reality, and not to lie, and we have the good news, in the course of this Budget debate that, each month now, Mr Speaker, there are more Gibraltarians in employment in our economy. Exactly the trend that we want to see, but apparently a huge disappointment to the hon. Members opposite, who are Members for el campo de Gibraltar more than they are the Members for the local resident unemployed.

In fact, it was interesting to hear the Hon. Mr Feetham talk about our obligations under the European 1100 Treaty. He will know that I have given the same answer in this House about what the Treaty of Rome says but, Mr Speaker, I did not perceive that that was an attack by Mr Feetham on the policy of the Government. I concede that, in saying what he said, he was not attacking Mr Bossano, he was not looking for a mano a mano with anyone on this side of the House, Mr Speaker. This was all part of a wider political plan, because it 1105 seemed to me, Mr Speaker, that that remark about Gibraltar, and Gibraltar’s obligations under the EU Treaty etc., was a carefully aimed dagger at the heart of the person who stood up in this House and said that the Government was implementing a new plan to ensure that, in cleaning and in construction companies, no Government contract would be given to any company that did not henceforth employ as many Gibraltarians as possible (Applause) and he said it, Mr Speaker, with the support of those of us who were then sitting where he 1110 sits now. But it was none other than the Hon. the now the Leader of the Opposition, then the Chief Minister, who made that speech.

So, Mr Speaker, when Mr Feetham now appears to take a contrary position and Mr Netto takes a contrary position and starts talking about the need to create employment opportunities for people in the campo, I appreciate that this is another manifestation of the rudderless and leaderless Opposition that we now face and, 1115 of course, in that very clear and pointed contradiction to that policy enunciated by the hon. Gentleman when he was Chief Minister, perhaps a first step towards the heart that makes those statements. Or, Mr Speaker, another U-turn.

1120 One year a GSD leader says 'we will favour local residents for employment'. Another year – almost 365 days to the day – a previously anti-GSD GSLP member, putative GSLP leader, now anti-GSLP, putative GSD leader says the opposite. Well, thank goodness, Mr Speaker, that we are committed, as the hon. Gentleman said he was last year to, first and foremost, reducing local resident unemployment and that this party is the party delivering on all its commitments and Joe Bossano is in charge of that and is doing a magnificent job implementing the policy that the Hon. the now Leader of the Opposition enunciated from this place last year. Thank goodness, Mr Speaker, that this rudderless, almost leaderless Opposition did not win the Election and that we did and are delivering beyond expectation.

1125 Another one of our commitments is that we will not be putting up utility charges. We thought, Mr Speaker, having heard the hon. Gentleman in last year's debate, that that would mean that it would stick post the 3% increase in electricity charges that he announced to the House last year. Imagine our joy when we found that, in fact, we could go further and, because the 3% had not yet been introduced, we could, in effect, stick to where we are and therefore reverse the 3% increase that the hon. Gentleman had announced last year!

1130 But, look, I agree, talking about electricity that, if possible, the power station going forward should not be an issue of division. We all agree that something needs to be done as quickly and as reasonably as possible about our three existing, ageing facilities and their location. But why is it so urgent, Mr Speaker? Because we have had 'power station' from most of them: 'power station, power station, quick – tunnel, power station.' Well, Mr Speaker why is it so urgent? Why is it that the Government has been here for seven months, even when it was here for two months, for three months, for four months, for five months, for six months, was being told: 'Power station, it is urgent. You have got to do it quickly: power station, urgent. Do it now.' Mr Speaker, is it, perhaps, because they did nothing about it in 16 years? Or, at the very least, in the past nine years when they were in possession of the PB Power Report that told them, in 2003, that by 2010 we would all be suffering power cuts because of the state of Waterport Power Station?

1140 Mr Speaker, if they were told in 2003 that something had to be done and by the time we were elected in 2011 – almost 2012 – nothing had been done, could they at least, when they urge us to do something about the power station, put their hands up and say 'please act quickly, because we didn't?' Is that not at least the politically honest, mature approach to take if we are going to be non-partisan about this?

1145 Mr Speaker, 2003 to 2011, December 2011, almost 2012, is two Parliaments – two Parliaments – and, as I will tell Mr Figueras later when I deal with his intervention, in that period of eight years he will not be able to rely with many of the excuses that he referred to in the course of his intervention as to why progress had not been made.

1150 Mr Speaker we have been here seven months – they had 96 months to do something about it! And moreover, Mr Speaker, I am going to give you an exclusive today: you, Mr Speaker, and just the people within these four walls and anybody who might be listening – just between you, me and the microphone – the thing that was not said by the hon. Members during the General Election campaign that they have tried to re-run in argument in the past 48 hours of debate of this House, is that when they finally did something about it, in the dying months of the ancien regime, what they signed up to but did not tell anyone during the Election campaign... because they wanted to be all things to all men, which is what they say when we do not say something during an Election campaign. Do they say it because they want to be all things for all men? So, therefore, what is good for the goose is good for the Opposition gander. What they did not say in the Election campaign about their new power station was that, in order to finance it, the document that they were going to sign for financing would commit Gibraltar to increased electricity charges by 5% every year for 20 years! (A Member: Shame, shame!) (Applause)

1160 Mr Speaker, if they did believe in transparent and open Government, if they did believe that during a General Election campaign one has to explain all the nuances of every potential policy, if they did believe that finances were not too high, or debt was not too high, why did they not tell us that, actually, for the power station they would have increased the cost of electricity by 100% over the 20 year period and that the party opposite them, in the General Election campaign, were saying zero electricity rises. That is the choice, in fact, facing the public on 7th December but hidden from them by the hon. Members. So they kept that pretty quiet during the General Election campaign, Mr Speaker.

1165 Let me turn now to one particular aspect of what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said about public debt. And I promise, Mr Speaker, that I am not going to keep him three and a half hours, like he used to keep 1170 us. I am just going to do a little bit more of analysis. As I have said before, when we first arrived in office there was barely £20 million left for Gibraltar to spend. We had not yet been brought our first and very convivial cup of tea at No. 6 Convent Place when the highest official at the Treasury put before us a 1175 resolution. A resolution, Mr Speaker, that was necessary to go beyond the £20 million because the borrowing limit was going to be reached and, therefore, we needed to come to this House to seek further funding and £20 million in December, with four months left to run of the financial year, was not very much! Especially given the millions of pounds committed to GSD capital projects still to be incurred!

We were advised, Mr Speaker, given the rate of burn – cash burn on these projects – ‘You have got to go to the House as quickly as possible with this resolution, in order to be able to exceed the current legal limits on debts’. Mr Speaker, I almost fell backwards. Not out of concern, because I know that with the people that 1180 I have in my team, with cash I have no problem. This party will comply with its obligations to reduce debt and to increase the GDP. But, Mr Speaker, what was it that I said in what I regard to be my famous, not infamous, Facebook podcast? That we were reaching the limit on debt, we were reaching the limit on debt and this could not go on and, Mr Speaker, I have it on good authority that the campaign that the hon. Gentleman ran against that podcast was actually something he had promised all the people around him would be one of the things that would win them the Election – Picardo’s mistakes in the Facebook podcast.

1185 One of the themes of the Election was how high debt was, and one of the themes of the podcast, the famous, successful – obviously we won the Election – podcast, was that we were reaching the limit on debt. I was told repeatedly in this House, I faced a motion on it, Mr Speaker, and I arrive at No. 6 Convent Place, I have not yet sat down, they have not brought me my cup of Earl Grey, (Laughter) and the highest official in the Treasury tells me: ‘You had better quickly go to Parliament and get this resolution approved because you 1190 are going to hit the limit on debt.’

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman brought the motion on the Facebook podcast, spent six months rubbishing me and it and, in his first intervention in the Ceremonial Opening, disclosed to us, by what he said about the resolution and what he has said about it 48 hours ago, that he knew exactly as much as the officials 1195 at the Treasury knew about those numbers and about the need to come with a resolution to this House to get further funding because, otherwise, we were going to hit the limit on debt. QED, Mr Speaker! He knew that the limit on debt was going to be exceeded and that it required, therefore, an action of this House, either by change of law or workarounds of the law, as provided for in the existing legislation, to exceed the limit set out in the law. And he actually offered us, Mr Speaker, very generously, his support, should we bring such a resolution to the House and he repeated it again in this debate that he would have done that.

1200 Mr Speaker, does he think we are going to fall for a trap like that? To borrow more when we have promised to borrow less? But what does this mean in respect of the central arguments that he put? Given that he wants to re-run the General Election campaign, let us re-run it, Mr Speaker, but let us re-run it with all the information on the table – with all the information on the table. That argument was clearly, objectively, only 1205 capable of resolution – if you will excuse the pun – in favour of the argument put by us that we were about to hit the limit on debt. And once you hit the limit you either come to this House and change the law as to how the formula calculates debt or you change the provisions of maximum debt by a resolution of this House.

So, Mr Speaker, despite the bluster and the eloquence, for which I have always had the maximum respect, we were right and he admits it, whilst pretending not to. That means that the hon. Gentleman is actually 1210 himself what he called me in the last debate, on these Estimates a year ago. He Mr Speaker – and I am using his words – is the ‘political con artist’. He admits the crime, Mr Speaker, in the same sentence as he pleads not guilty. ‘The debt is not too high, you are not going to reach the limit, there is nothing to worry about.
Come to the House with a resolution and you will be fine!’ Mr Speaker, why come to the House with a resolution to go beyond the limit if we are not going to hit it? His argument, Mr Speaker, does not admit of any intellectual rigour once all the facts are on the table.

1215 Mr Speaker, in his analysis now, in this debate, he said that Mr Bossano, when he was Chief Minister, was more bullish about debt levels in 1996 than I am now in respect of the ratio to GDP. He even went back to, I think, one of the debates in 1988. Well, Mr Speaker, if he wants to look at what Joe Bossano’s attitude was in 1996 to debt then we also have to look at what his attitude to debt was in 1996. You see, in 1996, net debt
1220 was zero, and he says that the appropriate measure of debt is not gross debt, it is net debt. Net debt was zero.
There was a gross debt of £83 million, £60 million of reserves in Community Care and other reserves. I reminded him last year, Mr Speaker, on that gross debt of £83 million, on a GDP of £327 million, he said that the level of debt, his party said that the level of debt was ‘a millstone round the necks of Gibraltarians’. That was the campaign. ‘Gibraltar is bankrupt. £83 million of debt. Gross debt is a millstone round the necks of 1225 Gibraltarians.’ That was his attitude to debt in 1996, and yet now, Mr Speaker, he calls the ‘golden legacy’ of £520 million of gross debt on a GDP of £1 billion perfectly manageable.

1230 Because he does not like what we are doing, when looking at the recurrent side of the book, by bringing in all the recurrent expenditures from his companies, he says – headline grabber, spin artist of the mid 90’s that he is – ‘You are cooking the books!’ Well, Mr Speaker, if by applying all the recurrent expenditure properly, and without capital, to all the recurrent income, before calculating the surplus, we are cooking the books, well, then, Mr Speaker he is a veritable Nigella Lawson without pouting lips. He is a Jamie Oliver without the Cockney twang. His forked economic analysis is worthy of a number of Michelin stars, but only for the creative aspect to his accounting. Mr Speaker, saying that we are ‘cooking the books’ is a very serious allegation, which suggests that, in seven short months after the cup of Earl Grey, we have been able to persuade the Financial Secretary, the Accountant General and everyone in their Departments to re-state expenditure in an inappropriate manner. How dare he impute such professional breaches to people who also served him so loyally for so many years.

1240 Mr Speaker, at least he had the decency to say, after the Election, on a number of occasions, including in this debate, that they would have increased the legal debt limit for the power station and the tunnel, although he never made any remarks about how they were going to pay for the power station eventually.

1245 Mr Speaker, there again, looking at the ‘big lies’ of the Election campaign – another admission! A power station and the tunnel would have been paid for with further public debt. Well, Mr Speaker, I am vindicated. I went round the estates saying that if the hon. Members won the Election they would finance their manifesto with D.E.B.T – debt. We were right, we were right! So, thank goodness, Mr Speaker, that Gibraltar was not captured again by the GSD and escaped the asphyxiation of debt and borrowing that we would have been subjected to if they had pulled the wool over people’s eyes and people had not, as they did in 1972, seen through the ‘big lies’ that were presented to them by the incumbent at the General Election.

1250 On another occasion, Mr Speaker, he said that we were bringing in items of capital expenditure against recurrent expenditure or against recurrent income, something which I told him is not the case, but he said that we are mixing apples and pears in that respect. Well, look, Mr Speaker, by analogy he must have made a veritable fruit salad of the Government’s finances. He has changed the layout of the Estimates Book, in the 16 years that he has been in Government, more than anyone has ever before. He has changed the legal definition of net debt twice, he has really messed it up so much, Mr Speaker, that it is impossible to follow the Book from year to year and he finally got himself caught up in the mix on 8th December, and I think will never politically recover from that.

1255 I recall that, on this debate, on every occasion that I have been in this House, he used the opportunity to tell Mr Bossano that he felt that leaders around the world who lost political elections should immediately resign and make way. I believe, Mr Speaker, that I am now echoed in putting the same thing to him by at least two Members of the Opposition benches. But, Mr Speaker, he is still a master at least of spin, or at least attempted master, if much diminished, but nonetheless a master of that dark art of spin. He said the GSD have left Gibraltar, or ‘a Gibraltar’, that shines when contrasted to the rest of the EU. Their hands must have hurt, Mr Speaker, from the amount of banging that they did on the table, but what sparse ambition for our nation. How can they clap and hail the fact that we are doing well, compared to Spain or Greece, or the rest of the EU? If he had said ‘With growth rates beyond Hong Kong and Singapore I leave you a golden legacy’, they should have bled their hands in banging the table. But to compare us to Spain, to Greece, to the EU that is suffering, and to cause on his own benches such fervour really shows what little ambition they have for where our nation should be and how we should be performing economically.

1270 Mr Speaker, in that context, and given the ‘golden legacy’, and the ‘golden rules’ and how well they have done, one would have thought that they would have they seen themselves as clearly to be returned to office on 9th December, as they announced constantly whenever they could, so why, Mr Speaker, why sign contracts 24 hours before the Election? A week and a half before the Election? Why the frenzy of signatures if you are so assured because you have done such a great job? Surely there is no need to insure oneself, or the people one has been doing business with, against an impossible eventuality of an Election lost?

1275 There were many contracts signed just before the Election. Some of them were signed as contract extensions on 30th November, committing the Government, already in the middle of a General Election campaign, already as caretakers, to millions of pounds of expenditure: some of it in respect of consultancy fees, payable, in some instances, in almost hundreds of thousands of pounds a month! And again, without tender, and signed by the person who used to sit outside his door when he was the incumbent at No. 6 Convent Place. In some months up to £120,000 of expenditure committed to on 30th November. The Hon.

1280 Mr Bossino said, in respect of a press release on that subject issued by the Government ‘Well, the GSLP did it, too, so what are you complaining about?’

1285 Well, Mr Speaker, in what was undoubtedly, I must say, the most eloquent of all the speeches from the Opposition benches, even including the Hon. Mr Caruana’s lacklustre contribution this evening... but Mr Bossino needs to look at what the Constitution says now and what it said before 2006. Given that one of the ‘golden legacies’ that they claim they have left Gibraltar and us is the new Constitution, one would have thought that each of the Members would be able to recite some of their most operative sections by rote. Does he not remember how we were taught to learn Chaucer and recite it at the drop of a hat? Can he not recall section 45 (9) of the Constitution? Does he not know that it was not there in 1996 and it was included in 2006 at the insistence of the then Chief Minister? And does he not know, Mr Speaker, that that clause since 2006 prohibits a Government, once an Election has been called, from committing the Government of Gibraltar to expenditure? Is he saying, Mr Speaker, that if it is done by a wholly owned Government company, the Constitution does not apply? Is that the rule, as they interpret it? Is he saying, Mr Speaker, that if the director of that Government company sits outside the door of the then Chief Minister, closer than his secretary, and commits the Government to expenditure through a company, contrary to the rule in the Constitution, that that is alright? Mr Bossino should know, Mr Speaker, in my view, that eloquence will not be enough to put him in the place that he appears to be gunning for. He needs to be more careful, Mr Speaker, when he spits into the air next time.

1295 The hon. Gentleman says, of course, that we should not be going back to that point, we should only be looking forward, but they spent most of the time that I was in Opposition in debates of this sort, talking to us about what happened between 1988 and 1996. In fact, Mr Bossino today talked about – or when he gave his speech – what had happened in 1996 when he talked about agreements signed during a General Election campaign. So they do not want us to talk about what happened before 8th December but they want to be able to talk about what happened before 1996.

1300 One of the ‘golden legacies’ that they like to talk about, Mr Speaker, is the on-line gaming industry that we have been bequeathed. There are two types of politicians – those who say the world started ‘when I was elected’ and those who say ‘I will build on and fix, where necessary, what was there before’. In the Budget speeches that I have read, in particular the Budget speeches of May 1996, which were the first when the hon. Members were in power, he will see that there were members of the then GSD who acknowledged what the GSLP had done before the date of the Election and said they would build on it, people of the temperance of Mr Azopardi and people of the temperance of Mr Montegriffo. There was one Member, who moved the Bill, who pretended that the world had started the day that the GSD was elected, or otherwise, Mr Speaker, would he not have acknowledged that the remote gaming industry already existed before 1996, that the first licence was granted by the Hon. the then Chief Minister, Mr Bossano, before 1996, to Ladbrokes, that, in those days, that vision was in the GSLP?

1310 Look, I am quite happy to admit that it was developed by the GSD since then. Because I am not one of those politicians, Mr Speaker, who believes that the world started on 9th December 2011. We have identified what we said was wrong on 8th December and what we will fix, but Gibraltar did not start then. Neither did it start when they were elected in 1996. But I commend to Mr Bossino and to anybody else who may be on the Opposition benches a read through the contributions of his present leader in this debate to see how it is possible to move Genesis forward from the Garden of Eden to the Mackintosh Hall on the day that the GSD were elected in 1996 and to say that Rome was not built in a day, will make him quiver when he sees the way that the hon. Members opposite pretended that everything started with them.

1315 Another ‘golden legacy’, Mr Speaker, in the list of ‘golden legacies’ – I am starting to think that Odyssey should be contacted to try and find these golden coins that nobody can locate – was company tax down by three quarters – a ‘golden legacy’. Mr Speaker, that was not by choice, that was with a gun to the head because the hon. Members’ first plan in respect of corporation tax was to reduce all companies to zero and it was despite the first ‘state aid’ gun to the head, only with a second ‘state aid’ gun to the head that that would not be acceptable that they moved to the 10% plan. So things which one does with a gun to one’s head, one really should not then claim, three years later, is one’s ‘golden legacy’. But I could see how things were going and how badly things were developing for the Leader of the Opposition when he claimed for himself one other ‘golden legacy’ – the bus shelters! If I had not been sitting, I would have fallen from a standing position! What a legacy, Mr Speaker! For a man who has portrayed himself, and persuaded others to portray himself, as a political giant of Gibraltar, to claim the bus stops! Mr Speaker, even I could argue that he has better legacies than the bus stops... He is a very good interior decorator, Mr Speaker. No. 6 looks very good indeed.

1335 'A stable and secure Gibraltar' – a stable, secure and prosperous Gibraltar, that is the legacy. Wow, 'stable and secure' with the world in the worst credit crisis in which it is in and 'prosperous' with half a billion pounds of debt, £20 million to spend in the final quarter and the Financial Secretary saying to you 'there is a paper you need to take to the House quickly': not even he can believe that porky.

1340 The world did not start on 9th December and we will build on what we believe is there that is worth building on and we will fix the things that were there that we believe need fixing and we will do new things, but we will do it, Mr Speaker, with a much more prudent approach to debt and a much healthier approach to employing local residents.

1345 Mr Speaker, talking of legacies, the GSLP did leave an excellent legacy to us in 1996. And yet, despite my very carefully worded invitation about Community Care, not even a peep from the hon. Gentleman as to what his proposals might have been that he referred to during the course of the earlier interventions that I alluded to in my intervention. Not even a 'I will tell you privately'. So, Mr Speaker, I think it is possible now for listeners – and I hope, in the future, readers – to realise that what the hon. Gentleman said before in 2010 and in 2011 that he was going to replace Community Care with an alternative system which would be future proof and would mean nobody would suffer any loss, he had no alternative system, he was speaking with forked tongue firmly in cheek on this, and on so much else, to the electorate.

1350 Mr Figueras, who I consider to be a close personal friend, said that Ministers' speeches on this side of the House were like Opposition speeches, not Ministerial speeches, because we referred back to what had happened seven months before instead of only looking forward to what was going to happen in the future. Well, Mr Bossino says nothing is going to happen in the future because there is nothing in our manifesto... But the hon. Gentleman, if he is going to be a politician, needs to engage some time in understanding the place in which he comes to do gladiatorial political battle. He needs to read some of the Hansards of what it was that his hon. predecessors for the GSD used to do as Ministers.

1355 There was not one Government speech whilst I was in this House as an Opposition Member between 2003 and 2011, that did not say, 'Mr Speaker, between 1988 and 1996...', 'between 1988 and 1996'... It was constant. I still hear it. Mr Netto, who now should be giving an Opposition speech, gives the same speech from the Opposition benches in relation to the GSLP, as he used to give from the Government benches. So before spitting up in the air, the Hon. Mr Figueras should do a bit more reading to understand that if he is trying to – with that device – ridicule these Ministers, he is ridiculing those Ministers who used to do the same thing when they were here.

1360 Mr Speaker, it is one thing to do it seven months after you are elected. When you are dealing with a Book that, in great measure, represents – as I said when I started – eight months of income and expenditure under them and four months under us, it is perfectly justifiable, when you talk about the whole year, to talk about what happened before you were elected, because the year includes parts and months when one was not elected. But, Mr Speaker, his party – and therefore he must agree that it was right because he stood with them based on that record – used to do it sixteen years after the GSLP had gone into Opposition. And he said, I guess not taking his cue from those who say that we only need to look forward, he said on planning, 'How can you take the position you take, given what the GSLP did in respect of the Dockyard Gates?' – I think that was in 1989 – and I am not going to say which was the Minister responsible, or who was the Minister responsible. He opens himself and, unfortunately, his Leader to a retort which is not pleasant, which is to say 'Look, actually, I was in school when the gates to the Dockyard were destroyed. I don't know what was behind that, but I was in Parliament and in politics when the Rosia Tanks were destroyed (Members: Hear, Hear.) (Applause) on their watch – the tanks from which Victory victualled herself before going to Trafalgar... and he is going to come to this House to talk about planning and heritage.

1370 And then he said, Mr Speaker 'They are sitting there, although they have the slimmest of victories in the polls'. That was a theme that trickled through all of those benches. Well, Mr Speaker, you know what, I used to say that, too. I used to say that, too, and I suppose it is not a bad thing that nobody enjoys massive majorities, although when you use the term 'majority' you need to be careful, in our Parliament, not to seem not to understand the fact that there are three more here than there, which is quite a big majority, given that, before, the majority used to be one, and one is talking in electoral percentage terms.

1380 The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition used to say, when he was Chief Minister – and I used to goad him, he might remember – 'You got in by a whisker over four hundred votes'. 'So what', he used to say, 'I am here, you are there: the people have chosen.' So, look, Mr Speaker, if it was the 'slimmest of majorities' he and I need to take only one cue together from that, which is slim – we have to accept that we are here and they are there.

1390 And ‘Government projects are not going to planning, as you said they would,’ he said. Well, Mr Speaker, look, the position has been made clear to him so often that I am going to assume that, despite the fact that he has got ears, he can’t hear. Government projects are already going for guidance to the DPC. The position going forward has been made clear by the Deputy Chief Minister. Unless there is a security reason, things do go for guidance to the DPC already. ‘But’, he said, ‘you have got to ensure, as a Government, that you lead, that you build, that you do what the community needs. You have to build airports...’ Well, we are going to have to build airports and that is a reason, apparently, why Governments should not go to the DPC because you have got to build airports, you have got to get on with it.

1395 Mr Speaker, does he never listen to the British news? Has he never read a British newspaper? Does he know what the potential for one runway to be built at Heathrow is causing, in terms of analysis in the United Kingdom? The number of processes through which an application for a new runway at Heathrow will have to go through, or the opening of a new runway at Gatwick, or the creation of an airport in the Thames Estuary? Does he know that? Does he know that, or is it that he pretends not to know it and therefore suggests that, in our community, our citizens should have less rights than those in the United Kingdom who might have an airport, to take his example, built next to them?

1400 That is why, Mr Speaker, he has been told, repeatedly, that absent security concerns, urgency concerns, safety concerns, all the things that Dr. Garcia told him, this Government will be going for opinions to the DPC and fulfilling our wider manifesto commitments in respect of the DPC but I guess, Mr Speaker, that is not what he wanted to hear. What we say is never going to affect the fact that they want to say something which may be contrary to reality.

1405 ‘Paralysis on the power station’, said the newly elected Minister for the Environment and I thought that this was one of the many jokes that he and I have shared over the years which I enjoy so much. Paralysis on the power station: Mr Speaker I am not going to tell him again when the problems with the existing facilities were first identified and the failures of his Party in respect of that. But, I will tell him this, I will tell him this: the arguments deployed to justify the delay from the moment that the GSD was told that Waterport Power Station was no longer going to be viable after 2010 are not, cannot, enjoy play from 2003. There was no residential development near Lathbury that could have injuncted the Government in 2003. There was no financial crisis that might have made it impossible to secure financing in 2003. All of those excuses deployed in this debate, and before, by the hon. Members have played only, if one accepts that his Party delayed the necessary steps to build a new facility until there was already a residential facility close to Lathbury and there was already a financial crisis.

1410 Then he said ‘all these environmentalists’ on the Government benches, what are they doing creating double car parking in the town area, I suppose influenced by the very laudable ‘In town without my car’ campaign. Look, Mr Speaker, there are people who live in town and they also deserve a place to park, or is it that GSD policy is to develop car parks in residential areas outside of the town area, but never to provide for people in the town area. We believe, Mr Speaker, that if we needed more parking in the area of NOP because there is a need to provide also for people who live in the town area but, that’s alright, they all know now that he does not believe that they deserve a place to park. And, anyway, they say they still can’t believe that Commonwealth Park will happen and all the rest of it. He will see, Mr Speaker, when he walks along the grassy byways and highways of Commonwealth Park.

1415 He said that the World War II fortifications demolished was ‘a scandal’, that this showed that we were not committed to the Government being subjected to the planning process. Well, Mr Speaker, is it that he doesn’t know, despite being told repeatedly in this House that this was a GSD-approved project that was already ongoing when we were elected, or is it that he is saying ‘Get on with things, but even if they were things that were started before you were elected and started by my Party, now you take them to the Development and Planning Process and stop them half way through’? Is that what he is saying? That has no logic at all and I am just going to assume, Mr Speaker, that he did not have time to clear his speech with those more senior on the Opposition benches, who might have pointed out to him that he was actually going to commit “political hara-kiri of his credibility by taking that position.

1420 But he went further than that, Mr Speaker. On that issue he says: ‘When I was told that they had demolished the World War II walls, I could not believe my luck’. Those were his words! Those were his words. ‘I could not believe my luck’. Well, Mr Speaker, it shows he really didn’t care about the World War II wall. It is an admission that he is a political opportunist, that all he wants to do is to rubbish, rubbish, rubbish. He doesn’t care about the wall, he cares about the argument he is going to build because the wall had 1445 been demolished, without thinking, of course, that it was his Party that started the project and decided to demolish the wall.

1450 There was a bit that I heard – I forget – I think it was during the course of the last Question Time, where people were expressing concern that World War II veterans had not been consulted in the demolition of this wall. Of course, concern expressed by the Party that ordered the demolition of the walls, but now faux concern that World War II veterans had not been consulted on the demolition of the walls. So, Mr Speaker, how can we juxtapose that faux concern with ‘I couldn’t believe my luck when I heard the news that that the World War II walls had been demolished’. I will put it down to this. It is his first Budget debate. All he cared about was writing a speech to fill an hour: when he has made public statements all he cared about was writing a press release to fill a column, writing, though, Mr Speaker – and I say this in political terms, never in personal terms, I hope – his own political obituary because he has displayed in this first substantive debate, where he had an opportunity to wow us and perhaps even take a putative step towards the leadership of his Party, that all he has displayed is cynical – (Laughter) don’t worry, I am going to sponsor Jaime Netto, as well, (Laughter) – cynical opportunism and cack-handedness by disclosing his feelings of glee. I honestly, honestly, expected better. I really think that we are not getting bang for our £25,000 of his Opposition salary.

1460 And then he said, Mr Speaker, look at what has happened in one establishment at the beach. No planning permission in respect of something refused by the previous administration. Well, he also needs to check his law. Temporary Erections – amusing though that may sound! (Laughter) – do not require planning consents. It is only permanent structures that require planning consents. What that establishment required, as a consent, was landlord’s consent. Nothing to do with the DPC. The Government, as landlord, allows people to do things on property, as head lessor, or doesn’t allow it. That is the control that Government has. Government, as landlord, has given consent for things to happen there but, Mr Speaker, he should be very careful, in my view, not to push too hard on the door of the treatment meted out to that particular establishment last year, and in years before, by his Party when they were in office, because he might find, Mr Speaker, that that actually opens the door to bigger problems than he bargained for. Perhaps, next time, he should have his speech checked by one of the more senior members of his Party before he gives it because, then, he went on to say, 1470 ‘The GSLP, in Government, when they were last in Government, they did not have a Ministry for the Environment: we created it’. Wrong! You need to check these things. Of course there was a Ministry for the Environment in 1996 and the argument is so contradictory, Mr Speaker, because, on the one hand, he says you don’t care about the environment... Doesn’t he know that there was a Ministry for the Environment? Doesn’t he know that the Upper Rock Nature Reserve was created by the GSLP? (A Member: Hear, hear.) 1475 Doesn’t he know that there was no culling of apes before 1996? Doesn’t he know, Mr Speaker, despite the constant references to it in this place and in the press, that the Nature Protection Act was made in 1991? Did he miss that? Wasn’t he saying that Mr Cortes cares too much about the environment and that is why he is hard-headed? And now he says ‘Ah, but you are the Party that doesn’t care about the environment’. Where is the logic, Mr Speaker?

1480 It is not difficult. Come on, at least to deliver a speech that is internally logical. But he says that caring for the environment, in effect, may be bad for the economy. Mr Speaker, wrong again. Caring for the environment actually creates many economic opportunities – many – not least in Tourism. Look at my Budget measures and how those may stimulate some businesses and do well for the environment, as well. And I know, Mr Speaker, that what it is with Commonwealth Park is actually a quite genuine and quite proper, I think, political fear that when this magnificent park is developed in the centre of our city – and I very much hope he comes and enjoys it, and he parks his hybrid or his electric car in one of the car parks – that that will be such a magnificent facility that the people of Gibraltar will (a) always thank those who did it and (b) never forgive those who opposed it.

1490 I think that what happened here, you see, Mr Speaker, is that Mr Figueras really had nothing to say about the excellent and exemplary manner in which Dr. Cortes is running the Environment Ministry. ‘Mr Environment’, now Minister for the Environment. So with nothing to say, Mr Figueras, like the others, decided to run a critique of our Election campaign and our Election strategy, which was so successful, and had nothing other than that to say – I can understand that representing the Party that took five years, five years, to prepare an Environmental Charter – that it was drafting a Charter, that it was looking at ‘the detail of every word’, that this was going to be ‘a Charter for Gibraltar’, but then came up with a Charter which was one word different from the Overseas Territories Environmental Charter that had been there for ten years. 1495 What can he say on the environment? Even the penguins in the Antarctic Territory beat us to the Environmental Charter. Well, look, Mr Speaker, I think his speech on the environment was really a much better contribution, or would have been a much better contribution to the comedy channel than it was to the debate on these Estimates: 'Commonwealth Park is just a pretty picture for their manifesto'.

No. But, look, if it was, at least we paid for it! We didn't rely on everybody's tax pennies to fund the pretty pictures in our manifesto. If it is just a pretty picture, at least we paid for it. And he seems to be against planting more trees. I mean he must be the only person represented in a Parliament with a responsibility for the environment, who is against planting more trees. Against – I just couldn't get it. Is this actually happening? I suppose, Mr Speaker, I couldn't believe my luck... A person with parliamentary responsibility for the environment saying that there should be less trees. I mean, where is he living, Mr Speaker? Planet Clarkson? Was he in Top Gear mode when he said he would insult Dr. Cortes by calling him a tree-hugger? Mr Speaker, to Mr Cortes, to me, to every Member on these benches, a tree-hugger is a compliment, not an insult. Please feel free, petrol head!

Anyway, I thought he was wrong, though, Mr Speaker. I thought he was wrong to then take on Dr. Cortes for having used a ministerial car. As I told him afterwards, but I think it is important to put it on the record, the reason Dr. Cortes has had to use a ministerial car is because he had a broken leg from which he has not yet fully recovered and he cannot walk certain distances and, for that reason, he uses a car. But always for longer distances, as I understand it, than the Hon. Mr Reyes who, as he will recall, I had cause to criticise last year in this debate for having used a car – a ministerial car – to take him from National Day concert at the coach park to his home at Harbour Views. The Hon. Minister explained that he had been to other functions that evening and that is why he had the car. Fair enough, Mr Speaker, but look, if he was then going to go home after the concert, one would have thought, given the sort of concern that the Hon. the Member for Planet Top Gear has now put, one would have expected that Mr Reyes would have wanted to walk home the short distance between the coach park and his home and relieved us of the burden of overtime for the chauffeur.

Mr Speaker, I mean honestly, despite my deep personal affection for him – and that will endure despite our political differences – I am sorry to say that, in political terms, he is becoming just an unfunny comedian who really needs to ensure he doesn't lose the day job. He said, as well, that I had rightly been taken on for saying that culling of apes was 'killing' of apes, for using that sort of language in respect of that matter. Well, Mr Speaker, can somebody please tell me what 'culling' means, because the last time I checked it meant killing and he says that I should not have used that argument when I was talking about the apes, because that was inflammatory. If that is the case, if when they were setting out to kill apes – which they called 'culling' because culling means killing – I should not have used the killing word, I should have used the culling word because, otherwise, I was being emotive and over dramatic. Well, then, Mr Speaker, he needs to tell his colleagues, Mrs Hammond and Mr Feetham, that they should certainly not use the culling word in respect of whether people are in employment or out of employment. Because culling meant killing a year ago and it means killing today. And if it was over-dramatic to use the word culling to describe killing, which is what it means, then how unnecessarily over-dramatic is it to use the word culling to describe whether somebody gets a job or doesn't get a job?

Anyway, Mr Speaker, that policy of culling, which he commends to Dr. Cortes as the right thing to do because it was their policy, their policy of killing mammals – which was their policy and he now appears to be so proud of – doesn't he know that, because of the pressure I put, and others with me, from the International Primate Protection League etc., they stopped it. Does he know that, Mr Speaker? Doesn't he know, Mr Speaker, when he makes his political argument that the population of Macaques in 1996 was lower than the population of Macaques in 2011? So, Mr Speaker, who is he trying to kid? He can't make a monkey out of us; he is making a monkey out of himself with those arguments.

So, on all of those issues, Mr Speaker, on an increasing population of Macaques, on a delay on building a power station, on all of those issues, when he complains, when he wants to understand what went wrong, when he wants to press, let him press and ask and look to the side, and not forward, because the fault lies on the benches opposite, not here. He said, Mr Speaker, that we haven't progressed enough in respect of alternative energy because the hon. Gentleman, Mr Cortes, has an adverse, hostile, reaction to wind turbines affecting birds. Well, that is actually a view that I and all the other Members here responsible for the governmental environmental filter may share in some respects, and may be resolved in some other respects, as technology changes. If there is not a wind turbine in Gibraltar today, in July 2012, it is not because Dr. Cortes has stopped it, it is because Mr Caruana wouldn't allow them before 8th December 2011. So look to your left to ask the question.

Alternative energy should be a priority, I agree. Look at the answer that Ernest Britto gave me – if you do your research on this issue – when talking in this House about the GSD's commitment to alternative energy in 1555 the 2007 manifesto, where he admitted that they had done nothing and not enough and they were going to miss their own targets. That's why, Mr Speaker, we agree with him: alternative energy is just not a priority now, it should have been a priority before.

1560 So look left and ask the question why has nothing been done for sixteen years. The 'bad old GSLP', he says: well, Mr Speaker, look, there is as much good and bad old GSLP here as there is there these days, so perhaps he should also look left to his next putative leader if wants to make those arguments – an infection of course Mr Speaker, that doesn't affect Mr Bossino, given that he and I were together with Mr Garcia in another Party at the time. But, anyway, Mr Speaker, in that alleged vein of the old GSLP 'spectre' that they like to raise – not the 'good old GSLP', the 'bad old GSLP' – in that vein, Mr Reyes said that people are saying – faceless people – that only party supporters of the GSLP will be appointed to middle and top management in the Civil Service under us. Where has he been? Do they believe that people will simply forget what happened in the last twelve months of their reign, because that is how appropriately one can describe the manner that Government was run before. Actually, what has happened since 8th December, but which is ignored by Mr Reyes for the purposes of putting together the speech that he obviously quickly needed to scribble to deliver, is that we have released the Civil Service to start filling vacancies for itself, with the PSC, with nobody being told who gets appointed to where, with nobody being appointed a dedo. Who is it that we are going to forget who was made Grade V in the GSD a dedo? Or was then made a Civil Servant a dedo? Who was appointed to the Culture and Heritage Agency a dedo? Whose salary was fixed a pluma. That's not just us saying it, Mr Speaker. It is not us. It is the Principal Auditor saying those things, Mr Speaker. They want to raise a spectre, Mr Speaker, an image. Well, that's their spin of things going wrong and heads being cut off. But, Mr Speaker, it can't stick, and it won't stick because, if there is one cardinal rule in politics, criticism has to be based on reality, not fantasy. Otherwise it does not stick.

1570 Well, Mr Speaker, we come to that part of the debate where I felt I had to rise to make a Point of Order. In what was otherwise, in terms of delivery only, an excellent maiden speech, on which I congratulate my old classmate, Mr Bossino, he marred the whole debate and his contribution, by a massive wobble on the use of the 'C' word – the word corruption – which Mr Speaker said we should not be using in Parliamentary language. Clearly, Mr Speaker, something designed to grab headlines. It was designed to grab a headline in their press release: it grabbed a headline. It was designed to grab a headline here: it grabbed a Point of Order and a Ruling. But, look, I am very grateful to the hon. Members, in the course of their wobble, for having admitted that when they put the eye catching word 'corruption' in their press releases and when they used it in this House, although I hope that, given Mr Speaker's Ruling, we won't be going down that route, they don't actually mean 'corruption', they just mean not so nice. So, the headline that said 'political corruption' meant political behaviour that was not so nice.

1585 Hon. P R Caruana: Now that is not true. No, Mr Speaker, that is not true. That is... What he has just said is simply not representative of what we have expressed in this House. We meant corruption, in the context that we used it, which the Speaker has ruled not to be out of order. I do not see why he is re-inventing what anyone who has been sitting in this House still remembers.

1590 Mr Speaker: I think we reached a conclusion that the hon. Member who used the word accepted that it was really intended to mean 'a misuse of political power'. I think that was the final conclusion.

1595 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes and, on that basis, the use of the word was not out of order. That was your Ruling.

1600 Mr Speaker: Because of the context, yes.

A Member: Exactly.

1605 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, he needs to read what his deputy/putative Leader said during the course of the debate and what the wobble actually was - because he was not here at the time - and then he will see exactly why I have said what I have said. It doesn't relate to this morning, it relates to late on Tuesday.

So thank you for having clarified, late on Tuesday, that 'corruption' does not mean corruption because, Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to have a debate on corruption, if he wants and I hope that we don't ever have to go 1610 down that route in this Parliament because if misuse of political office is what corruption means, then, Mr Speaker, we are going to have a lot of fun analysing again, how much was paid to Seven Days for what period, how much was paid to what law firm for what period, how much was paid to what individual lawyer for what period and what that individual lawyer might have been paid for in that period. Not least, Mr Speaker, what taxpayers' money may have been used for, including funding pictures in party political manifestos.

1615 But, Mr Speaker, on the Sardeña case, he said 'It is totally improper of you to have dropped a defence and then negotiate a settlement. That is the evidence of what you are doing wrong. That is the evidence of how badly you are behaving. That shows that you have misused your public political office.' Mr Speaker, dropping the defence and then allowing the Industrial Tribunal to come up with the compensation is exactly – 1620 exactly – what the GSD did in Government in respect of the other Industrial Tribunal case, Joanna Hernandez. They did it, Mr Speaker, so all of the things that he has said ab initio of that political 'C' word is exactly what his current Leader did in respect of another Industrial Tribunal case. Again, Mr Speaker, next time check it out before you spit up into the air.

Mr Bossino, who was developing this concept of how the economy had grown under the GSD – he said it again last night – this 'golden legacy' that we must not vanquish. But let's do a bit of maths here, you know.
1625 They don't want us to go back to before 8th December, but they want to constantly go back to before 8th December. Well, let's go back to 1996, which they used to enjoy doing so much. The rise in GDP between 1988 and 1996 amounts to an average rise in GDP of 14.6% per year. That is worth banging on the table.

The rise in GDP in the sixteen years between 1996 and 2011, on average per year, is 11.5% – that is a whole quarter down. A whole quarter down. So if I was to accept the hon. Gentleman's argument that we have had a 'golden legacy' – which for the reasons I have carefully gone through, I have shown him is an unsustainable argument – if I was to accept that, at least on GDP, he should have the confidence to get up and say, 'You are right. The golden legacy was the GSLP golden legacy on growth of GDP between 1988 and 1996.'

He should go further, Mr Speaker, and say the golden legacy in respect of reserves was the GSLP golden legacy because, when you look at reserves compared to borrowing, and you include the £60m in Community Care, that was a golden legacy compared to £520m of debt in an economy of one billion.
1635

And when it comes to the quality of democracy, Mr Speaker – look, this is a bruising debate, it always is – but the level of communication that there now is between the Leader of the Opposition and the Chief Minister, the information that Members have about when Parliament is going to meet, the attempt to accommodate them as much as possible which I think has been seen from the attitude the Government has taken to this debate in particular, the opportunities for Questions, the opportunities for motions, that, Mr Speaker, has just been transformed since 8th December.

Despite how well that may be going, elderly people have to stand on the bus, he said. At least we were spared, Mr Speaker, fifteen questions on the bus timetable, which is how he started in January but we will put that down to a learning curve. Elderly people have to stand on the bus. Well, Mr Speaker, I agree with the hon. Gentleman that should not happen. Whenever there is an elderly person standing on the bus, there is something wrong. We have got to make sure that either a younger person gets up and lets them sit down or that we have better systems to ensure that elderly people do not stand on the bus. We need to ensure that there are not broken seats, but we have been here for seven months, they have been there for sixteen years. Their buses are nine years old, eight years and six months old, the day they left office, with broken seats.

So, Mr Speaker, taking all those things into consideration I assume that his speech in that respect was a slap in the face to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. An intended slap in the face, another step, perhaps, towards the Chair it appears he is so interested in slyly taking. Because, wasn't it, Mr Speaker, under the old GSD administration that elderly people were not just standing on the bus, elderly people were left standing at the bus stop, not the ones that protected you from the sun, the ones before them, because the buses were full of tourists because they were free for everyone. What a disaster, Mr Speaker. (Applause)
1655

He is right. (Applause) He is right, slyly and coyly as he does, to slap his Leader in the face for having done that. Well done, Mr Bossino, and I extract from what you said, what you wanted extracted and deliver it in that way for you.

My concern for the elderly, Mr Speaker – that, obviously, does not apply to the elderly at Both Worlds (Laughter) – there is a concern for the elderly in other geographical areas, I assume. But, look, I am delighted, Mr Speaker, that the elderly at Both Worlds are considered by this side of the House and, therefore, also have their service. He also complained that, for five months, the bus company had been without directors. Five 1665 months the bus company had been without directors. It cannot be, this is bad for governance, bad for governance. Right, okay. I extract from what he said, Mr Speaker, rightly and coyly and slyly, another slap in the face for his Leader and I am happy, because he has obviously got vested interests, that I should be the one to deliver it but look, it is fine. (Laughter) He and I are obviously understanding each other because wasn't it, Mr Speaker, not the Gibraltar Bus Company, GBC, but the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation, GBC, that was without a General Manager, or a CEO, for almost four years under the previous administration.

If it is bad for governance for GBC, the bus company, to have not had a CEO for five months, what did it do for governance at the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation, GBC, for it not to have a General Manager or a CEO for four years and defending that in this House, as they were. So, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman wants me to say those things, I can appreciate, from his speech, but he is not foolish enough to have said those things, without understanding the consequences of the argument and he wants me to deliver that slap in the face to his present Leader and I do, not with pleasure, because I don't think that politics should be about slaps in the face. But, Mr Speaker, GBC, the broadcasting company, was without a General Manager through a General Election campaign, and we have said how dangerous that was, we have maintained that we think that that was dangerous and that, in our view, did serious damage to governance at GBC.

1680 Having said that, Mr Speaker, I am going beyond GBC. If he says five months for a vacancy is too long, he needs to understand that not just at GBC, but throughout the Civil Service, his Party in Government, his Leader – I was going to say previous Leader, excuse me, his Leader, mustn't pre-empt anything – left hundreds of vacancies open in the Civil Service, in the Development Corporation, in Agencies, hundreds open and that is why we have had to unblock promotions.

1685 So if leaving a vacancy open is bad for governance, as he says, and he is clever enough to have understood these things, then he must also be saying to me, deliver another slap in the face to the man who led the previous administration and tolerated that. And I reluctantly accept his invitation to do so and realise that he is clever enough to have said all of those things, knowing that it would result in that. Because the other alternative, Mr Speaker, is that he has said those things without thinking of the political consequences, without putting them in the political context and would have been very foolish to do so. And out of respect for the fact that we come from the same alma mater and in the same year, I will believe, and wish to believe, that he actually was much more politically astute than that. But then, Mr Speaker, he describes the mild mannered and temperate Deputy Chief Minister, who would not hurt a fly because he is such buena gente, Mr Speaker, as 'vicious' (Laughter) – as vicious. Mr Speaker, he does not understand 'vicious'. He does not.

1695 By addressing these arguments that they have put, and not them, I am being a pussycat compared to what the mover of this Bill in this House was like last year. If he wants to see viciousness, Mr Speaker, he needs to see the hon. Gentleman with the venom on the tip of his fangs wringing for my neck last year. If he wants to see political annihilation, he needs to see a Party that stood here and didn't just go to play the man instead of the ball, which might have been bad enough, they went to play the man, his personal life, his political life and his professional life, all as part of the cynical attempt to save themselves from electoral defeat. I commend to the hon. Gentleman a reading of the last debate in this House, in particular his current Leader's Reply. I actually enjoyed it as a study in psychology.

1700 And then, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Netto called Miss Sacramento, this morning, a 'character assassin'. A character assassin! Come on! I mean, I will keep saying this, you have got to hang your political argument on a hook of reality. All Samantha Sacramento has done since she was, rightly, elected to this House by the people of Gibraltar, who deposited their trust in her and us, is work hard to sort out the mess that she found at the Social Services Agency, and well done for what she has done to date. (Applause). But 'character assassination, viciousness and annihilation', Mr Speaker, come on! Mr Bossino and Mr Netto – and Mr Netto was here – Mr Bossino at least should read the Hansard.

1710 Never, Mr Speaker, never whilst I am Chief Minister will there be a Budget session of Parliament like the one last year. Never ever, because the then Chief Minister approached it with such personal animosity towards the then Leader of the Opposition, with such attempts to denigrate me, personally and professionally, that I believe that the office of Chief Minister was brought into disrepute and the people of Gibraltar delivered their verdict on who was, and was not, fit to be Chief Minister on 8th December, 2011. (Applause)

1715 And we are talking of Tourism, Mr Speaker and, again, I know that he has been very sly and very politically astute by saying that we are wrong to have made no investment - despite our promises - in the Upper Rock in the past seven months. I once again pick up his request that I should slap in the face his current Leader for the sixteen years of under-investment in the Upper Rock. But, Mr Speaker, next time – it is getting 1720 tiresome – next time he wants to deliver a political slap to the GSD, can he please stand up and do so himself. I have already been put in a position where I have to deliver three: can he please – because I know he thinks and he realizes that this is going to be the consequence of saying stuff like that about the Upper Rock – can he please deliver the next slap himself. It might do him good; it might raise his profile in the Party.

1725 Then Mr Feetham said that the GSLP had built nothing for rental for people who are on the housing waiting lists in the 80's to 90's. Look, Mr Speaker, again you see you test an argument and you apply pressure to an argument by looking at the facts that underlie it. We might not have built as much housing for rental as they did, we might not have developed an estate, but housing for rental we did develop as part of the existing estates. So if you want to be taken seriously, and an anti-GSD putative Leader of the GSLP, now anti-GSLP putative Leader of the GSD, must want to be taken seriously, at least initially by his Party and then by the electorate, you have got to get your facts right.

1730 Then he said all this business about employment: 'I myself put 47 people in employment in construction when I was Minister for Justice'. Mr Speaker, he was talking about putting Gibraltarians in employment and then he said that that was contrary to EU law. He said the more that this is talked about, the more it imperils Gibraltar because you are employing Gibraltarians at the expense of Spaniards – and then promptly continues talking about it and he is the only one who is talking about it! But, Mr Speaker, it is transparently clear that he does not care about imperilling Gibraltar. All he cares about is that he should become Chief Minister at some stage in his life and that, Mr Speaker, means that, first, he wants the chair to the left of him and then he wants the chair opposite him. That's all that matters. (Interjection)

1735 That's all that matters. And he will accuse the Government, Mr Speaker, of any falsehood or of any failure that he thinks will get him closer to assisting him in that agenda. But let me take one point, Mr Speaker, because, again, you see I don't think these arguments have been thought through. If he put 47 people in employment in the construction industry in Gibraltar in the last few months that he was Minister for Justice, what the bleeding heck was the Minister for Employment doing? That Minister for Employment that he represents in another capacity and is saying to us we should take on to do a job that obviously he, when he was a ministerial colleague didn't believe that he could do. But, of course, Mr Speaker he did not care about young people until a few weeks or months before the General Election. Because he says to us, we don't want people languishing as trainees on the minimum wage. We don't want people languishing as trainees on the minimum wage.

1740 Mr Speaker, how can they say that with any shred of political credibility, when they allowed those same young people to languish in their scheme at half the minimum wage. (Applause) It beggars belief, Mr Speaker. I assume what he is saying to this House is that he is maintaining the position he had before the General Election, that the Future Job Strategy is not affordable and that what he is saying by saying we do not want them languishing as trainees on the minimum wage is that he wants us to take them back and cut their pay in half. It is not going to happen, Mr Speaker. But the level of political hypocrisy is just staggering. Political hypocrisy –

1755 Hon. P R Caruana: The word hypocrisy can now be used.

Hon. Chief Minister: With the epithet political.

1760 Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry, if the epithet is political, [inaudible] applies to the Opposition.

Mr Speaker: No, I have not ruled against the Opposition using that phrase.

1765 Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible]

Hon. Chief Minister: But, Mr Speaker, look –

Mr Speaker: No. Political hypocrisy, I have not ruled against the Opposition for its use.

1770 Hon. P R Caruana: The word 'hypocrisy' has been referred to this morning as being on the list of forbidden words.

Mr Speaker: Yes, but –

1775 Hon. P R Caruana: Putting the word ‘political’ in front of it is thought to be unsuccessful in sanitizing it.

Hon. Chief Minister: And so, Mr Speaker, despite the nervousness on the Opposition benches, I have to go on and say to the hon. Gentleman you have got to be very careful with what you say, unless Mr Feetham is also engaged in this astute game, which is to criticize things done by my predecessor – his current Party Leader – in a manner that then he knows is going to result in my getting up and slapping his current Party Leader around the political face because of the things he used to do. I think Mr Bossino is astute enough to pick that up. I didn’t think he was, but I will give him the benefit of the doubt.

1780 ‘Don’t dumb down entry into the Civil Service’, he said. Well, Mr Speaker, doesn’t he know, in respect of the public sector, that the ones who dumbed it down the most are them, when they were in Government. Given that people were taken into the public sector who have absolutely none of the qualifications that one was always required to have to enter into the public sector, some with no qualifications at all, some of them even without speaking English because they are not local residents – incredible, Mr Speaker. It is incredible! It beggars political belief.

1785 And then, Mr Speaker, he has this game where he tries to characterise Mr Bossano as the person baiting him to go downstairs and he talks about the mano a mano. Why does he make me get up in this House and say that people are not stupid and that when they read Hansard, they will see that the phrase, mano a mano, is only on his lips, that he comes up with the terminology of the mano a mano. He baits, he cajoles, he tries, he swings and then he says, ‘Ah, you challenge me to a mano a mano.’ How cheap, Mr Speaker, to bait the Father of the House, a man thirty years his senior. But I guess that is what ends up with debates being personalised and petty.

1790 And they criticise, Mr Speaker, our Future Job Strategy and how that might have had an effect in the Election campaign and Mr Bossano has explained how well that is going. And they say it was an Election bribe. Well, Mr Speaker, clearly it was not, but what is coming across from this re-running of the General Election campaign is actually quite a convoluted chapeau from the Opposition benches, because what they have done is say ‘This is what you did for the General Election campaign: this is what you did and this is how you did it.’ Of course, what they don’t say is – ‘and you won. Well done’. So thank you for the compliment, we take it in the spirit in which it was not intended.

1800 So he said, Mr Speaker, in respect of one particular thing on the age of consent and the Criminal Offences Act, ‘we have got to protect our young people. We have got to stop internet paedophiles from grooming young people in Gibraltar.’ All of the things that everybody would agree with, Mr Speaker, because that is where he likes to be, on the ground where he is all things to all men. That is where he feels more comfortable. And he presses the Hon. the Minister of Justice, who has other responsibilities, and does such a fantastic job in all of them, for not having transposed the Criminal Offences Act version that is now available into law already in the seven months that he has been there. And he says he will give us a year, otherwise he will be ‘hard on our heels’. I can feel the rabbits trembling already, Mr Speaker.

1810 He was in Government for four years and I am not going to say that his arrival on those benches is what was the final dénouement of the GSD because that is much more convoluted than that. But, in those four years, he had time to draft a law, bring it to Parliament and make it law – and he didn’t do that. Four years! Four years of internet paedophiles not being subject to the punishment that they should be, subject etc. Now we are here seven months and we should have done it already, otherwise it is all our fault. Doesn’t he remember, Mr Speaker, that I had to put questions and a motion on this issue? Mr Speaker, doesn’t he remember that he was here for four years with the power to bring a Bill and get it passed and just suspend one or two sections, if necessary. If he had a shred of real concern in respect of any of the matters that he highlighted, he would have acted, instead of meekly keeping quiet, as he did when he was told to shut up and sit down by his then Leader.

1815 Then he says to us, Mr Speaker, on that and on other issues, ‘I have always tried not to politicise issues. I want to work for the good of Gibraltar.’ But, Mr Speaker, again these things have to be hung on a hook of reality.

1820 Does he think for one minute that we, or people outside this place, are stupid enough not to see through his faux pretense at constructive politics? Doesn’t he think, Mr Speaker, that people now know him and his political style well enough to know that the only thing he is interested in working for is not Gibraltar, it is P.O.W.E.R., Mr Speaker, and I don’t mean the station. All he is interested in is in pretending to depoliticise issues in order to get closer to the chairs that he craves. Well, he still doesn’t appear to understand the difference between an announcement and a restatement. All this banging on about Facebook, saying things

1830 which Mr Cortes did not even put on Facebook, about directions to police etc. etc. He just doesn't care, Mr. Speaker, that what he is saying is picked up in Madrid – the Partido Popular comment in the Spanish press about the fact that they are siding with them on the '99 Agreement. He does not care because it has never been about Gibraltar and Gibraltar's widest interest. Never! It has always been about becoming Chief Minister.

1835 Mr Speaker, advice was given, or comment was made, in respect of Macbeth's own ambition, which in that Scottish play was said to have 'o'er leaped' itself and fallen on itself. I commend to him, Mr Speaker, more reading of Shakespearian tragedy and less watching of Laurel and Hardy, if he wants to make a serious contribution to debates like this, because his quotes were from a Laurel and Hardy episode rather than from the Bard. Bless you. And he becomes, in this House, an advocate for the same argument as Mr Margallo, for the same argument as Mr Landaluce, for the same argument that Mr Masa put in the Spanish press. Well, look, I suppose they have to be represented. They have to be represented. Whatever it does for our community, it has to be represented here in some way.

1840 Mr Speaker, this is the politics that does so little for our community, but the politics of substance, the politics that really is designed to deliver for our people, that, Mr Speaker, is the politics that Joe Bossano has represented for forty years and I want to pause for a moment, Mr Speaker, to embarrass him again, and congratulate him on his 40th intervention in this debate. (Applause)

1845 It is relevant because, of course, Mrs Hammond was talking about 'culling' of Spanish workers and we had that issue with the word 'culling' and whether it was killing or not. It is really, Mr Speaker, quite unfair to use that argument to describe the work that Joe Bossano is doing to get more Gibraltarians into employment. But, Mr Speaker, I am afraid I have to say to Mrs Hammond that her contributions will also be tested and the quality of them will be tested by checking them against empirical data to analyse whether what she is saying stands up to scrutiny or was wrong. And I am sorry to say to her that, on a simple reading of her speech, it falls at the first hurdle.

1850 I agree with her that the more women there are in this House, the better. But, Mr Speaker, it is not true to say that, on this occasion, Parliament has more women than ever in it, one on each side of the House. That is what she said – she can check her speech and if she likes I will read it for her. Since the year 2000 and until the year 2007, Mr Speaker, there were two women in this House, one on either side of the House, Miss Marie Montegriffo, with whom I had the pleasure of serving as a Member of the Opposition, and Mrs Yvette Del Agua, who appears to have quickly slipped out of her memory now that the people rejected her in the Election campaign. So Mr Speaker, everything else that she has said has to be seen in the context of the fact that she got something as simple as that wrong. As simple as that. And it is not difficult to check that, because one of the magnificent reforms that we made shortly after being elected and which Dr. Garcia led, was the creation of a Parliament website, Parliament.gi and there, Mr Speaker, I was able to confirm myself my recollection by checking the results of the 2000 and 2003 General Elections.

1860 So, Mr Speaker, Mrs Hammond, who I welcome to this House as much as I welcome all the other novices who have contributed to this debate, needs to understand that there needs to be rigour in checking one's facts before coming to this House with argument. Mr Speaker, Mrs Hammond also said that Dr. Cortes has visited the UK on three occasions. It appears from Dr. Cortes' diary, which we checked in order to make sure that we are not getting this wrong, that he has only been to the United Kingdom on two occasions to deal with these issues: one to deal with GHA matters and one with environmental matters, but we stand to be corrected, if Mrs Hammond, who said that he had been there on three occasions, to build her argument about how he was going off to take advice, if she can substantiate that there were, in fact, three occasions.

1870 And she said, Mr Speaker, that the NHS has been characterized as seriously dysfunctional, that Dr. Cortes refuses to listen to experienced professionals in the GHA who might help him ensure the GHA doesn't go down that route. Well, in fact, Mr Speaker, Dr. Cortes has consulted more than any previous Minister of a GSD administration. Some people are saying to Dr. Cortes – the professionals – 'Wow, it is the first time I have ever been in the Minister's office: thank you for listening to me.' One very high ranking member of the management of the GHA, perhaps the most high ranking except for the Minister, has said to the Minister, that he has listened more to anyone than ever before and that he puts in more hours than any Minister ever before.

1875 She said that the Board was not meeting often enough with the Minister. Well, in fact, it has met more already with the Minister that it met with the previous Minister. In some years there were no meetings of the Board, or one only in one year.

1880 The Board, Mr Speaker, had concerns before 8th December about KGV but nothing was done so the Board was not listened to. Now it is listened to and quickly action taken on KGV. She does not like the policy of openness and of holding meetings in the open, but doesn't she know, Mr Speaker, that that is the 1885 way that similar Boards meet now elsewhere in the European Union. But at least I respect the fact that she stands up and says that she is against transparency, she is against openness and she wants to move back to secret meetings of the Board of the GHA.

1890 Mr Speaker, I met with consultants before the General Election and I have had meetings with various consultants after the General Election, so has the Minister. Mr Speaker, they have been kept aware of exactly what discussions and proposals are being maintained in respect of their contracts, and have had more information, and have had more debate and made more progress in respect of their contracts in seven months with this administration than in sixteen years with the previous administration. And, Mr Speaker, in respect of her arguments about what a fantastic GHA they left us – another ‘golden legacy’ – and the record that she talked about, doesn’t she know, Mr Speaker – or perhaps she is the most politically astute of all, and really wants this slap in the face delivered to the now departed Leader of the Opposition – that, since 2006, there have been recommendations for urgent action to develop a dementia facility and nothing was done about it and Gibraltar, therefore, now has a serious problem with elderly people who cannot be cared for at home and for whom there is no space in a medical hospital.

1900 Mr Speaker, Mr Netto this morning I also congratulate for having made what I considered to have been his most animated intervention in the time that I have been in this House. He said that the Minister of Social Services had said nothing about Moroccan workers, he never mentioned them. Well, Mr Speaker, the time I have been there on those benches I don’t recall serious mention of the plight of Moroccan workers at all by the hon. Member, or any Member here. Is it, Mr Speaker, that he forgot about them for sixteen years and has remembered about them now because it sounds good? Well, I will tell him what, the policy conference of Unite was very clear about how they felt about the treatment of Moroccan workers before 8th December and very happy about what has happened since then. But there, Mr Speaker, and not for political gain, I know that what he is doing is setting his Leader up because he knows the problems that he created for them.

1905 And then he went on to talk, Mr Speaker, about the disability allowance. I didn’t hear him talk about the increase in the disability allowance. I didn’t hear him talk about the fact that disabled people are being taken out of taxation. I didn’t hear him talk about the plans there are for disabled people to have sheltered, indefinite future-proofed employment going forward. I didn’t hear him talk about the fact that they are going to earn a lot more and they are on the minimum wage. None of that. Just ‘you shouldn’t take the disability allowance from them at all’. Well, Mr Speaker, the disability allowance was removed entirely from a disabled person before 8th December if they went into employment – entirely.

1910 And after 8th December it is removed on a staggered basis but 25% always remains payable. And when they go into employment, instead of earning half the minimum wage, they earn the full minimum wage and because they are disabled people, all of that – the minimum wage full amount and the disability allowance – which might take them into taxation, depending on how the disability allowance and the minimum wage rises, is exempted from a tax computation. And they are massively better off as a result. I didn’t hear him talk about any of that but I heard him talk about a hologram. Maybe, Mr Speaker, it is one of the things we could create with a Mac Apple in the future! (Laughter).

1915 He said that we should create holograms of ourselves. (Laughter) No need, Mr Speaker. We are all perfectly comfortable in our own skins. But one of the things I am going to pursue, as a result of his intervention, is the creation of a hologram of the Member who used to stand here in these debates and the feeding into the hologram of the Hansard, so that when we do televise – not just on GBC, as the Hon. Mr Feetham suggested – but in every media, making available a feed from this Parliament to all newspapers, to all broadcast media, to all internet facilities, maybe one of the things we should be re-running are the episodes going back, as well as current, so that people – or rather, as that Seven Days used to put on its front page so often – ‘Lest we forget’.

1920 Well, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Mr Reyes said that people were having their heads cut off, as I said before, but it has no credibility. Have they forgotten, when he talks about senior people only being promoted if they were members of the GSLP, have they forgotten – or is it that Mr Reyes also wants me to give his Leader a slap in the face ? – the enchufes that went on in the twelve months before the General Election, let alone sixteen years? Have they forgotten that, Mr Speaker? I don’t think they have. It is just that for pensioners, for workers, for the business community, for the disabled, for young families, this has been not just a good Budget, it has been an excellent Budget.

1925 But, Mr Speaker, for the Opposition, this has been a very bad Budget indeed. No imagination, no analysis, just a re-run of the General Election arguments, which they lost. But, Mr Speaker, I want to thank them for not having done better. They are, single-handedly, embarked on a process to guarantee us the public

- 1940 support in increasing numbers at the next General Election. Please, Lady and Gentlemen, do keep it up.
- 1940 My concern, Mr Speaker, is to see what little value for money the Opposition are giving to the people of Gibraltar. I mean, what a poor performance, what an inability to co-ordinate to sing from one hymn sheet. There are so many factions by the end of my analysis, Mr Speaker, I really don't know who is going to be the next Leader of the Opposition. But in that context, as I started, Mr Speaker, I realise, that when we put our minds to it, how much we can agree on.
- 1945 For the reasons I have already gone through in detail – excruciating detail for them, I know – it was a 'Big Lie' Election. The lie that employment was about four hundred, the lie that debt was under control, the lie that we had healthy cash reserves, when it was almost running out at £20m, lies that are uncovered now. A 'golden legacy', Mr Speaker? Unemployment at over 1,000, housing over 1,600 people on the waiting list, four times what they inherited when the best Housing Minister Gibraltar had ever had, Pepe Baldachino, left office in 1996, and a debt, Mr Speaker, of over half a billion pounds. A 'golden legacy' much like the 'golden rules', abandoned, smelted, rotting.
- 1950 And on democracy, Mr Speaker, on democracy, that we were failing in not coming to this House and giving full answers etc. And Mr Feetham saying that it is 'terrible', in public statements, that we would not read our press releases of 2006 to him and would not read our manifesto: we would just refer them to him.
- 1955 Wasn't he here, Mr Speaker, when I asked a written question and an oral question that the Hon. the then Chief Minister and Leader of the House felt were similar and decided that he was not going to answer the oral one and I could have the written one and, therefore, prevented us from having a debate on the issue.
- 1960 Mr Speaker, we have delivered a development and planning process that is more open than ever, a Parliament that is more open than ever, a timetable which they can use to plan their professional lives around their political responsibility but they say, Mr Speaker, that everybody wanted monthly meetings. Well, Mr Speaker, I take once more, finally before I sit down, the opportunity that Mr Feetham gives me, either because he is too stupid to realise that I am going to do it, or because he is very astute indeed and wants me to do it, to say that the fault that we did not have monthly meetings of this Parliament for the previous sixteen years was of the current Leader of the Opposition.
- 1965 Mr Speaker, they have called me many things in the past year but I am certain that politics are about substance. It is about what people really see, it is about reality and it is not about making an issue where there is none. And I would invite them, Mr Speaker, in particular all of those – and I have lost count of how many there are now on those Opposition benches who want to be Leaders of their Party – to become Leader of the Opposition, to have a chance to take a jump at the chair in which I now sit, to understand that, despite how much they denigrate me – and I am not one to sing my own trumpet – I am actually the most successful Leader of the Opposition ever, having held the post only for seven and a half months before elevating myself, thanks to the confidence of the people of Gibraltar, to the post of Chief Minister. So, perhaps, instead of so much denigration, a bit of study of how we did it. (Laughter)
- 1970 Mr Speaker, this is not an austerity Budget, it is a Budget of common sense and prudence. This is not a Budget crafted pretending we are in splendid isolation from the rest of the world, but a Budget for the less well off, for the disabled and for business. And nothing that has been said by the Members opposite has addressed that careful calibration that we have done to deliver on all fronts and implement the best manifesto Gibraltar has ever seen.
- 1975 Nothing that has been said so much as dents the public's confidence that this Government is clearly on track to deliver. Nothing, Mr Speaker, to deter me from once again commending this Bill to the House. (Applause)
- 1980 And I move Mr Speaker that we now adjourn for a good lunch.
- 1985 Mr Speaker: May I suggest that I put the question to conclude. It will only take five seconds, I hope. I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st day of March 2013 be read a second time.
- Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.
- 1990 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I now move the House do adjourn until 2.30 p.m. this afternoon.
- Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members?
- Members agreed.*

Mr Speaker: This House will adjourn until 2.30 p.m. this afternoon.

Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Act 2012
Second Reading approved

Clerk: The Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Act 2012.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this is a very short Bill. It simply amends section 9 of the Magistrates' Court Act, so that for the word 'seventy' there is substituted the word 'seventy-two'.

The effect of this is that magistrates – lay magistrates – who sit on the Bench as Justices of the Peace will not be required to automatically go on the supplemental list and therefore retire from the Bench at the age of 70; this will happen at the age of 72.

This Bill comes about, Mr Speaker, as a result of representations made by the Gibraltar Magistrates' Association. They felt that causing Justices of the Peace to retire when they reach the age of 70, in their words, 'causes a loss of valuable knowledge and expertise to the judiciary, given the experience lay magistrates can bring significant depth to the Bench' and they felt it was not in the interests of the judiciary.

Having canvassed the views of the Chief Justice and the Judicial Services Commission and also of my hon. colleague, Mr Cortes, who was himself an active Justice of the Peace, just before the Elections, we have come to the conclusion that it is right to increase the age from 70 to 72, in line with judges in any event. But it will be, of course, up to the Bench to decide in respect of any particular person whether they are fit and active to continue sitting until that age.

That is the simple purpose of this Bill, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, we will be supporting the Bill. It is a sensible move. I have always felt myself that there is an inherent contradiction in the way that we allow, for example, Court of Appeal judges to sit here in Gibraltar, and some of them are obviously over 70 years old and yet we force lay magistrates to retire at the age of 70, so certainly we feel it is a sensible move. It will provide the justice system with a valuable resource – people who are experienced – for an extra two years, and we will be supporting the Bill.

Mr Speaker, may I also take this opportunity, perhaps, to ask – I did not hear it from the Chief Minister in his reply – the hon. Gentleman whether he wants to associate himself with my words yesterday in relation to the honour awarded by Her Majesty to the President of the Gibraltar Courts?

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo) Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to rise to deal with that point.

The hon. Gentleman is right, he said those things in the course of his intervention and I was dealing with the politics of his intervention in the Appropriation Bill and did not associate myself and the Government with that honour, which I now do and I am happy to do.

75 Sir Murray Stuart-Smith has been associated with Gibraltar in the Court of Appeal and as the first Head of the Judiciary in Gibraltar after the legislative changes that were voted for by this House. The hon. Gentleman knows that we did not agree with the structure of that, but that is not to denigrate from the job that Sir Murray did, when he was in Gibraltar, when he associated himself with Gibraltar for the benefit in the end of the jurisdiction.

80 Mr Speaker: I do not suppose the mover of the Bill should add anything?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, simply to say that we are grateful for the support of the Opposition on this matter. It is going to bring matters in line at the age of 72 and hon. Members in line with that initiative.

85 Hon. Members will see that there is another Bill in the Order Paper, which is not going to be taken today, which amends the Supreme Court Act, which essentially does the same for lay assessors.

There will in fact be a slight amendment to the Bill, for which I will give notice, but it will not affect that particular part, so that everybody that sits on the Judiciary will have a common age of 72.

90 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Magistrates' Court Act be read a second time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

95 Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Act 2012
Committee Stage and Third Reading agreed to be taken the same day

Clerk: The Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Act 2012.

100 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

105 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (It was agreed.)

190 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker... Mr Chairman, I beg your pardon.

195 EU format passports and Identity Resident Cards, the increase in expenditure: I presume that the new format of ID cards will presumably make them more difficult to actually forge – what about the EU format passports?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman looks at (2)(b), that is the EU format passport and he will see that there is an increase in expenditure from the forecast outturn.

200 What happens there usually, as I understand it – and in fact not from my time in Government, but from my time in Opposition, when we used to query this issue – when you see an amount of about a quarter of a million being spent, that is usually stock being brought in of passport books and those are the EU format passport books; and then the Identity and Residence Card which is what the hon. Gentleman has identified, which is the potential change in the way that those cards are dealt with to avoid the problems with forgery etc.

Mr Chairman: Head 11, Civil Aviation, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

230 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, I note that under 'Other Charges', (1)(d), there is a reference there to Aviation Security and there seems to be a bit of a jump from the actual expenditure to, I think, it is the estimated column of about £78,000. Is that on account of the 40 new employees being employed by the Borders Agency or not?

235 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): The expenditure on the Borders Agency is on page 165, so that is something else.

240 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, if I can assist, I think... Mr Chairman, I have a note here taken from the Deputy Chief Minister's address on Monday, where I think you were going to employ a dedicated quality control officer – maybe it has got to do with that.

245 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Chairman. I am told the increase in the salary of Mr Gonçalves, that salary is to be included with salaries at the top and this time it has been included at the bottom. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano) Because they are consultants, that is right.

Hon. Chief Minister: Created by the hon. Members opposite, before 8th December. (Interjection)

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

250 Clerk: Head 12, Town Planning and Building Control, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 12, Town Planning and Building Control, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

- 255 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.
- Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.
- 260 Clerk: Head 13, Health, subhead 2, Other Charges.
- Mr Chairman: Head 13, Health, subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.
- Clerk: Head 14, Environment, subhead 1, Payroll.
- 265 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, in relation to the Ministry on payroll, it has been transferred to Technical Services. Perhaps the hon. Gentleman can explain, can just confirm what we suspect, which is that because he is in two Ministries, the Ministry staff has been reallocated too?
- 270 A Member: We can't hear.
- Hon. S M Figueras: In relation to the Ministry of the Environment, can he just confirm what we suspect is that, given that he is in two Ministries, Health and Environment, that they have just been transferred to Technical Services for better use? It is just that the Head is now under Technical Services, as per the note.
- 275 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, that has got less to do with anything related to the Department, but what I told the hon. Members when I presented the Bill at the First and Second Readings, the way that the Book has been reorganised, so that it flows better in a particular way.
- 280 So if the hon. Gentleman looks at what I said, that is why he would have seen actually, a moment ago, when we were considering Town Planning, that Town Planning had moved from the Enterprise Head. Previously, they were grouped in a different way; now they are grouped in a way that we hope will be easier to follow in future years, so you will not have the instance of Heads disappearing and that is the rejigging of Heads which I talked about and which was done principally by the Financial Secretary, in the way that he felt it was easiest to understand the Book, now and going forward.
- 285 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the clarification.
- Mr Chairman: Head 14, Environment, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.
- 290 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.
- Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman just a couple of questions in relation to this. In relation to subhead (3) and Apes Management, the forecast outturn was £42,000 versus an estimate of zero and now a new estimate of zero – perhaps, and I do know that the Management Plan is being reviewed – but perhaps the hon. Gentleman could provide just a little more information in relation to that particular anomaly?
- 295 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Sorry, in respect to what exactly?
- 300 Hon. S M Figueras: Under 'Other Charges', subhead (3).
- Clerk: Subhead 2(3).
- Hon. S M Figueras: Subhead 2(3), yes – (a) and then 'Apes Management'.
- 305 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Ah yes. No. It is elsewhere... (Interjections)
- Hon. S M Figueras: Como que está elsewhere? No, no... There are two instances of Apes Management: (f) is also there, but it is also listed under (a).
- 310 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Chairman, this is because these employees have now become civil servants and therefore they appear elsewhere under the salaries. They were former GDC who opted to join the Civil Service and it is purely a shifting of the sum from one place to the other. It is not that anybody has disappeared and it is not at all related to the Management Plan.
- 315 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful.

Then further down, at (f) where the hon. Gentleman first pointed on the mention of the Apes Management, there is an extra provision of £20,000 also. Is this as a result of the consultation and the redrafting, the recosting of the Barbary Apes Management Plan?

320 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: This is in advance of that so that there will be funds available to be able to initiate the programme, but it does not consider whether that will encompass everything.

325 Since clearly the new Plan would not start at the beginning of a financial year, we would not expect a full 12 months' worth and therefore there is a token plus amount there in anticipation of the Management Plan.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful and, Mr Chairman, just one other point on that and that is under (h) Control of Seagulls – there is a reference to GONHS and then 'Other Contract'. There is a forecast outturn of £103,000 and an estimate of £110,000. We have discussed in the House that the FERA contract was now complete. Perhaps the hon. Gentleman could clarify a little bit on that?

330 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, the FERA contract is complete, but was completed during this financial year and, therefore, part of the £110,000, I am not exactly sure how much, but it is possibly about £70,000, but I do not have the information here.

335 But part of that £110,000 is in order to be able to pay for the FERA contract last year, which ended a few weeks ago, in this financial year.

Hon. S M Figueras: Grateful, Mr Chairman.

340 Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 15, Housing – Administration, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 15, Housing – Administration, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

345 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, for the sake of clarity, under subhead (2)(j), it says Government Rental Estates and there is an estimate of £1 million there. Is the Hon. Minister able to enlighten anything in what actually refers to Government Rental Estates – expenditure in respect of what?

350 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): That is (2)(j)?

Hon. E J Reyes: Subhead 2(2)(j), yes .

355 Hon. C A Bruzon: And what does the hon. Member wish to know?

Hon. E J Reyes: It says Government Rental Estates are making a new provision for £1 million – £1 million to go towards what? Is it repairs, is it – ?

360 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, exactly that: it is a provision for the works.

Hon. E J Reyes: For repair works or 365 Hon. C A Bruzon: Maintenance, repairs for all Government Estates that are currently contracted out, particularly to GJBS.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Chairman.

370 Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I, Mr Chairman, ask: is that £1 million also in respect of the cladding of the three estates that he mentioned during the course of his speech? (Interjection) No? It would be I&D.

375 A Member: Yes.

Clerk: Head 16, Family and Community Affairs, subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes Mr Chairman, if I may, obviously this is a new Ministry for Family and Community Affairs and on page 59, we have the new structure that will support the Ministry. So we have the SEO, the HEO, the EOs, the Personal Secretary and the Administrative Assistant. What, perhaps, I would like, if it is possible, from the hon. Lady, the Minister whether she can enlighten me as to these which are new posts, which ones are already filled or which ones are still empty or which ones are occupied on an acting basis, perhaps?

If we can go quickly, perhaps... The SEO post which is at the top of the Ministry, has that been filled at the moment or not?

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Chairman, there is only one person in the office, the former HEO, who is acting SEO.

Hon. J J Netto: So therefore all the other posts are not filled at the moment (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No.) – something that will eventually go through. Okay.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Okay, that is fine, Mr Speaker.

Mr Chairman: Head 16, Family and Community Affairs, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I may, on Other Charges – over on the next page, item (6) Equality, could the hon. Lady perhaps enlighten us what this new expenditure will be for?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, that is a figure estimated in particular for the setting-up of the Equal Opportunities Commission.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 17, Education, subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, can I refer the Hon. Minister to the previous page of the Establishment figures, under 'Head Office'. I note there is an increase of three Executive Officers. Are these the one for Bayside, one for Westside, or are they all for... and the other one for Head Office?

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): These ones include those two: the one for Bayside and the one for Westside. There is an increase in the complement in Education of an additional Executive Officer. That person previously came under Training, but now we have split Education and Training, and Training comes under the Ministry of Employment; but we have retained some responsibilities in the Department of Education for professional training rather than vocational training and therefore there is one post which now comes under Education which previously came under Training.

Mr Chairman, given that we are on the Establishment, can I just correct one figure, simply for the record, otherwise the wrong impression might be given.

Under the College of Education, where we see Teachers, we see last year there were 20 and this year, it suggests 18 and that could suggest a reduction in the complement of teachers. That is in fact incorrect. The correct figure should be 20 also for this year.

The corresponding decrease would come under Schools, where it says Teachers, where all the schools are global in terms of the number of teachers, that would come down to 344.

But I can in fact say, Mr Speaker, that as a result of a staffing exercise that has been done, the figure for the complement will increase, although it does not need to be changed here. It will increase in September and it will in fact be 23 teachers in the College and the number under Schools will clearly come down, but that is for September.

But for the moment, I wanted to correct that and show that there is no decrease in complement and it is in fact 20, as at 1st April 2012.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful to the Hon. Minister, because in fact I was going to ask him about that.

I have another couple of questions on Payroll. If I can refer the Hon. Minister to page 64, under 'Temporary Assistance', (d)(I) Specialists: there is a reduction of £264,000 in the estimate. Can he explain why this reduction?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker. I am in fact very pleased that there is a reduction in this figure. This figure is what was used, £440,000-odd was used for supply teachers and it was under this Head that the supplies that were on permanent supply were paid.

Now of course they are no longer permanent supply. We have, as I have announced on a number of occasions, increased dramatically the complement of teachers. Therefore we expect a reduction in the need for supply workers and consequently that figure has fallen.

I am very grateful for the opportunity to explain that.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And Mr Chairman, further down under Temporary Assistance, there seems to be a new subhead (V), Prison Enterprise, £11,000. Could the Hon. Minister perhaps elaborate on that a little further?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker. There is a need, from time to time, to send a teacher, a supply teacher, possibly a retired teacher to the Prison In particular, whenever there is a juvenile in prison, we do not want to neglect their educational needs. In fact I did say in my Budget address, I seem to recall, that we are making provision for education in the Prison and that is what that is intended to cover, either for the payment of the supply worker or, if we use a retired teacher as we have been using this last term, for example, when there has been a juvenile in prison, that will be taken from that Head.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is in addition to the teacher that has been teaching up there, I think it is once or twice a week, over the last x number of years? So it is in addition to that?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, this is in particular in relation to juveniles and sending someone specifically for the juvenile, apart from, clearly, the hon. Member is referring to where there is a classroom facility in the Prison and there is education imparted to those people who are either in remand or are convicted prisoners and that will clearly continue.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, under Training, (g) Salaries, can the Hon. Minister explain: the £53,000 relates to which particular training post?

Hon. G H Licudi: As I explained earlier, in relation to the establishment, the Executive Officer and we are envisaging, there is also an Administrative Officer that will be part of the complement for Training so those two salaries are included there.

Mr Chairman: Head 17, Education, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, Mr Chairman, with respect to Scholarships and (b) Discretionary, as part of the £478,000, there is an estimate of £110,000 for new scholarships and grants and £52,000 for tuition fees. If the Government's policy is to stop the discretionary scholarships, should this not be under the heading or subheading of mandatory scholarships?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Chairman. The discretionary award has not been completely eradicated. What Government has done is extend the mandatory scholarship provisions, in particular for people who want to do a masters and post graduates, but there are people who want to do other types of courses.

For example, someone who has not wanted to go for teaching and then wants to do a PGCE, they ask for a discretionary award. Someone who wants to do a conversion course, having done a degree and maybe wants to do a conversion course to Law, that would come under the discretionary award.

So you will see that the amount has been reduced because, as I explained during my Budget speech in fact, a fifth of the 70 applications for discretionary awards that there were this year, 49 were considered mandatory and therefore came under the other Head, but there is still going to be an ongoing requirement and we have still made a substantial provision, even though we have extended the mandatory scheme, we have still provided for a substantial amount in order to meet these other ones that need discretionary awards.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, under subhead 9, Trainee Nurseries, this token figure of £1,000, is there a likelihood of it increasing?

Hon. G H Licudi: Possibly, Mr Speaker. What we have done is created the subhead and put a token amount there. The hon. Member is aware of the Government's commitment in respect of a free nursery education option for children just before the mandatory school age. I know there is going to be a question on that at another time, but that is simply creating a token provision. In the event that that is needed, going forward, then we will increase the amount that is required.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just go back to the answer that you gave earlier? Do I take it then that the Government policy is that, in relation to masters and doctorates, those are subject to a mandatory award, but if somebody, for example, wants to become a school teacher, where the decision as to whether the Government funds that year that teachers will do – that extra year after your degree that teachers will do in the UK; or indeed, for example, if you do a law degree, and you then want to go off and do the Bar, or do the Law Society exams, that those will be discretionary?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, on neither account. Perhaps I might need to explain this issue of the teacher... the PGCE, in particular.

Where the extra year, or the additional studies that are required, are part of the professional qualification that is required, in order to be able to embark on a career, so that where somebody does a law degree, for example, and then wants to do the bar or the vocational course with the (A Member: LPC.) LPC for solicitors, that will clearly be included as part of the award and is considered mandatory.

In the same way, where somebody wants to be a teacher and indicates they want to do a degree and then go on to do a PGCE, that is always included; but where somebody does something else and then decides to do a PGCE, traditionally that has been considered part of the discretionary award and applications may well be made for that. But not where somebody indicates from the outset that they want to be a teacher: that will clearly be funded from the mandatory base.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, just one final question under Other Charges. Under subhead (10), Training and Development Courses, is this a new subhead for which £600,000 has been estimated? And perhaps he could explain further what this money will be for.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, as I explained earlier, we have now split Education and Training, and separated Training to a different Department; but the Department of Education has kept responsibility for training, primarily within the Civil Service, for professional training within the Service, so this is a new provision that is made but previously came under the general Head of 'Training' both for vocational and professional, which was managed within the same Department. But given that part of the responsibility has now gone to the Ministry of Employment, we have retained an element of responsibility and therefore need funds for that training, in particular professional development for the Civil Service.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am sorry, in fact I do have one final question, Mr Chairman. Under subhead (11), Contribution to Gibraltar, GDC Staff Services, there is a figure of £53,000. Is this the same one that was for the training officer on the previous page under Training Salaries or what education post is that in relation to? Subhead (11).

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, we are trying to find out the precise information in fact.

The position is that, previously under Training, there was a contribution to GDC staff services. If the hon. Member looks at page 66, towards the bottom of the page, under 'Other Charges', there is £376,000.

As I have said, we are retaining in the Education Department some part of the training and one of the officers is a GDC officer, so that covers a salary for that purpose.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman is that the office I referred to on page 63, just before the summary, where the Establishment has been listed, it says 'Gibraltar Development Corporation Staff' and for this year is a provision for one? So that must be corresponding to that one.

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman. The hon. Member is absolutely right.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 18, Policing, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 18, Policing, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Head 19, Financial Services, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

570 Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill –

Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to that, the same point as the hon. Lady, so the contribution to the Gibraltar Development Corporation staff services, £250,000, that then relates back to the three GDC employees, £250,000?

575 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, those are employees in the finance centre who are GDC employees.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

580 Clerk: Head 20, Prison, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 20, Prison, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 21, Gibraltar Law Courts, subhead 1, Payroll.

590 Mr Chairman: Head 21, Gibraltar Law Courts, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

595 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Chairman, the provision of £60,000 is the security that the hon. Gentleman referred to during the course of his speech, so that is the estimate of the cost of the security service for the Courts?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes that is correct, that is the amount that the Courts Service has requested for the service that they want to provide through security guards.

600 Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 22, Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, subhead 2, Other Charges.

605 Mr Chairman: Head 22, Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, the £230,000, Briefing Out – Specialist Matters: can he explain why there is a significant jump in the briefing out of specialist matters? I think I have got an idea, but I would just like the hon. Gentleman to confirm it.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, there is an ongoing case on which Counsel from London is engaged, which requires specialist advice.

620 Hon. D A Feetham: So it is one case?

625 Hon. G H Licudi: There is one case which will clearly require a certain amount of funds; but this is the estimate for the general funds needed for the whole year – maybe for other matters as well. But the increase from what we have had this year to what we expect next year is accounted for, primarily because of that particular case.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

630 Clerk: Head 24, Legislation Support Unit, subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, can we go back to Establishment?

635 Mr Chairman: Certainly, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: I see 'Law Drafter' and there is an increase from two to four. Is that because the law drafting complement is going to be increased, or is it because there is a shift from, say, the EUID onto here or is the intention to recruit two extra drafters?

640 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, that is precisely because of an increase in the complement with additional drafters engaged. The process is almost complete. I would have hoped that the drafters would have been engaged already.

It does not represent a reduction in the EUID drafters; in fact on the contrary, we are also increasing the complement of drafters in the EUID by another two.

645 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I think it is very much needed.

Mr Chairman: Head 24 –

650 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, one more?

Mr Chairman: Yes, of course.

655 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Gentleman just explain in the light of that, there are two more bodies and yet one looks at Payroll over the page, the actual payroll comes down from £356,000 forecast outturn to £296,000. I know that part of that is because of the £44,000 relating to the Industrial Tribunal, that is moving to Employment, presumably.

660 But of course, even taking that into account, one would have expected a higher payroll figure, bearing in mind that you are recruiting two law drafters and if I know something about what is paid to law drafters, one would have expected actually to see an increase on the forecast outturn.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, the complement has been increased. The law drafters are not actually in place at the moment. Therefore we are not incurring at the moment, the expense of – 665 Hon. D A Feetham: So it is an estimate?

Hon. G H Licudi: It is an estimate and it really depends on the time that the law drafters are engaged. It may well be that that... It is as the hon. Member says, just an estimate and it may well be that that increases when we come to the forecast outturn for next year.

670 I will also say that the post of Senior Officer, although the complement is currently vacant and therefore that expense is not being incurred, so that will probably be taken into account.

Mr Chairman: Head 24, Legislation Support Unit, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

675 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

680 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, Printing and Stationery goes down from the forecast outturn of £210,000 to £130,000. Is that because the Government has taken a policy decision in perhaps not contracting out some of the stationery and printing, for example in relation to some of the Bills, but rather sending them by electronic means to lawyers and accountancy firms, etc?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, as the hon. Member well knows, he was rather busy producing Bills last year, a few of them really quite substantial. That happened last year and that is why the forecast 685 outturn went up so much from an estimate of £93,000 to a forecast outturn of £210,000, but we considered that that was extraordinary expenditure which is not likely to be repeated year on year.

What we have in fact done is increase the estimate from last year's estimate, but it does not take into account the very substantial Bills and legislation that the hon. Member brought to Parliament last year.

690 Hon. D A Feetham: So it is due to the wonderful work the Ministry of Justice did last year!

A Member: Hear, hear!

695 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, all that work, like the Insolvency Act, the Crimes Act, the Legal Aid and everything that they drafted, but they never implemented.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead 2(2)(c) – GHA Complaints – Independent Review Panel – is the £30,000 sum there for a continuation of the GHA Complaints Review Panel? Because it is not under appendix A for the Public Services Ombudsman. If he could clarify this?

700 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Sorry, the clarification that – ?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, it is the same, it has remained there, as it did last year, so does that mean it continues as it was?

705 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Chairman, the complaints system is under review, but we do not have dates for the implementation of the review, so it was logical that the existing provision should remain, because the system remains as is until it is reviewed. That is the only reason why it is there. There is no implication that it will remain beyond this financial year.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 27, Employment and Labour, subhead 1, Payroll.

730 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, although really it is a Health and Safety question but unfortunately it falls within Head 27, which is Employment. If we look at page 96, where we have the Establishment figures and we look at the top level, Employment and Labour, half way through the middle, we see Health and Safety Officer III, one and Health and Safety Officer IV, two.

735 What I would like to know, if it is possible, by the Minister for Health and Safety, in relation first of all to the Health and Safety Officer III, whether the person carrying out those functions at the moment is on an acting basis or on a permanent basis.

Also in relation to the Health and Safety Officer IV, for which we have two and two – two for 2011-12 and two for 2012-13 – one at least is in post. I would like to know if the other is a vacancy which is outstanding or if perhaps someone is filling that particular extra post?

740 Perhaps, if the hon. Member, the Minister for Health and Safety could provide some information.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): The vacancy for the Health and Safety Officer III, that vacancy has not been filled. Obviously that will be put right, that vacancy will have to be...

745

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes. In the course of this year.

750 Hon. P J Balban: During the course of this year.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that. That answers one of my two questions which is relation to Health and Safety Officer III.

755 But, in relation to Health and Safety Officer IV, to the best of my recollections, I know that there is one in post, but what I do not know, given that we have two here, whether there is an outstanding vacancy to be filled later on during the course of the financial year or perhaps whether somebody is actually acting in that post already.

760 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, there has actually been no change in this, from the past. We have two persons in the Department, one of whom is covering the vacancy for the third, for Officer III. That is how it has been for quite a while, since the previous Head of Department retired, quite a few years ago.

Hon. J J Netto: So just for the sake of confirmation, the answer is yes to my question? Yes.

765 Can I also ask, because I do recall some months back – quite a few months back – at question and answer sessions, that I had seen some other people within the Civil Service which had been drafted in to support the factory inspectors and the hon. Member actually confirmed that. I think that he actually classified him under a different name. I have got the face of the chap, but I cannot remember the name, which is immaterial. But those particular persons, who are assisting currently the two factory inspectors, I do not see them here. Is it because they are in a different – ?

770 Hon. J J Bossano: Because they were short of staff, Mr Chairman, what has happened is that we have given them support from another Department, so that instead of the two inspectors having to go to one place, there is an inspector and somebody to help the inspector, as it were, who has been sworn in and so forth, to comply with the law, which allows each one of the two inspectors to work independently of the other. Before they had to go both to the one situation, because we were told one could not go alone.

775 The people who are providing the support are people who are already in the Service and are in another Department, but have got qualifications related to safety, but have not worked as Health and Safety Inspectors and not in this complement and are not being paid as such.

780 Hon. J J Netto: So do I take it then that those two particular persons are civil servants and their figures are reflected in another Head? Is it the Housing Works Agency?

785 Hon. J J Bossano: That is right. The effect of being able to give them that back-up is that they are able to handle more work because each one of the qualified persons can go on his own with somebody to assist him, whereas before the two went together.

Mr Chairman: Head 27, Employment and Labour, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

790 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, on Payroll: number (1) Salaries, you have an actual 2010-11 of £338,000, then it jumps to £870,000 estimate and a forecast of £846,000 and then it comes down to £410,000. Is that GDC related, the decrease from £846,000 to the £410,000?

795 Hon. J J Bossano: There is no reduction anywhere that is GDC related, because what has happened is that in the provision originally, in last year's Budget, the people who moved from the GDC to the Civil Service were not included. Had they all decided to stay, then all their pay would have appeared under 'Personal Emoluments'. Given that a lot of the people in the employment are in the GDC it appears under 'Other Charges'. But it is not that there is a decline because people have been removed from the £846,000.

800 If the hon. Member looks at the numbers in employment, he will see, on page 96, that the numbers from last year and from this year have not changed, because change is whether some people are shown as being in the GDC, where you have got 48 instead of 20. Part of that is the fact that there were people in training, in Bleak House, in the ERDF all of whom are now in employment. So you have got –

805 Hon. D A Feetham: Is there any explanation for the decrease from £846,000 to £410,000?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I need to find out exactly how the £846,000 was actually made up...

Apparently, Mr Chairman, the £846,000 was put there at the time when it was thought they were all moving into the Civil Service.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is exactly what I thought – that it is GDC related.

Hon. J J Bossano: So in fact, yes, but it is not GDC that... They were erroneously included in the Civil Service, because the £874,000 did not include GDC.

So the drop should have happened in the forecast outturn, not in this year's estimate. There were people who were being added there from the GDC who eventually decided not to stay in the Civil Service and came back to the GDC and therefore –

Hon. D A Feetham: That is what I thought was the explanation, yes.

Hon. J J Bossano: – the £846,000 is in fact an overstatement, because not coming out meant that it was treated... They were supposed to have been moved in April, even though the decision was not taken until October. In October, after the Elections, a number of them were given the option and most of the people in the Labour Department decided to stay with the GDC.

That figure should have been corrected, so the drop should have been reflected in the £846,000, and not in this financial year. That is the explanation of the figures.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand exactly – there is a difference of opinion in relation to what happened, but I understand what the figure relates to! That is what I thought.

Mr Chairman: Are we content to move to Other Charges now, yes?

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, on Other Charges –

Clerk: No, not yet – we are not there yet. Sorry about that.

Mr Chairman: No, I did rule, so to speak, that subhead 1, Payroll stood part of the Bill, when the Hon. Daniel Feetham asked for the question.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, thank you.

On Other Charges, 2(2)(d), which is 'Health and Safety Programme', we have a small amount of £1,000 in the new estimate, just the same as it was in the forecast outturn and indeed as it was in the previous estimate for the last year. For my own benefit, given that I am going through a learning curve, when we talk about 'Programme', what programmes are we talking about? Is it that it is a payment for a licence of a programme, perhaps that the factory inspector may be affiliated to the HSE in the UK? Could the Hon. the Minister for Health and Safety please clarify for my benefit?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, like the amount voted last year in the Budget and the outturn, I think there is a sum that the Health and Safety Unit has to meet all running expenses of the work they have to do. There is no breakdown for last year. It is not broken down into £1,000 made up of x pounds for so and so. It is a figure that they ask for as part of the running expenses. That is how it was last year and we simply repeated the amount, because they asked for the same money as they had asked for the previous budget.

Hon. J J Netto: So for the sake of clarification, running expenses as opposed to paying a licence for a programme to have accessibility to data, the UK, HSE –

Hon. J J Bossano: There is no indication in the breakdown of last year that it was used for anything specific, other than on whatever running expenses they may need to meet. Therefore when it was included in this year's Budget, it was included on the same basis as in last year's Budget without identified items of expenditure.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, the reason why I ask this really is because the Hon. Minister for Health and Safety, in much earlier question and answer sessions, did say they had purchased a new programme in order to be able to input the day-to-day information that inspectors actually carried out. So I thought that perhaps there was a connection between the software programme that the hon. Member, the Minister for Health and Safety was talking about and this figure here.

870 So there is no connection at all – is that the case?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, if that were the case and this were for a new item, it would mean effectively that we have cut down £1,000 from last year's Budget. This is simply a repetition of the amount of money that they got last year, which they have used for odd expenses.

875 If there is something new this year which was not there last year, it would require additional funding.

Hon. J J Netto: I accept that. So if that is the case, the expenditure for the new software programme that the Hon. Minister for Health and Safety stated in the House some months ago, where is that reflected then?

Hon. P J Balban: At present, nothing has been spent on a software programme because we have been acquiring trial versions of certain programmes. No programme as yet has satisfied the demands and the needs for statistical analysis so no programme has been selected yet.

885 Hon. J J Netto: I accept that, but obviously your Department must have purchased a programme?

Hon. J J Bossano: It is possible to obtain, from the people that specialise in providing these things, trials that work for a while and then stop working after which you have to buy. At the moment, they are still exploring different alternatives for which we have not paid so far, and if I can stretch it for the 12 months, we will not pay for it. (Laughter)

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Chairman – Other Charges, paragraph (3)(b), the £11 million, that is provision for the Future Job Strategy – £11,149,000? Is that so?
'Additional Contribution' under 'Gibraltar Development Corporation', number (3).

Hon. J J Bossano: The footnote shows the money on page 153.

900 Hon. D A Feetham: If you go to... it does not actually explain it. What it says is it is a transfer from... It is receipts from the Consolidated Fund.

Hon. J J Bossano: And the payment from the Consolidated Fund to the GDC on page 153 is included in the expenditure of the Fund which, of course, includes the 'Government Financed' which this year amounts to over £12 million. The contributions from the Consolidated Fund that go to pages 153 to 154 –

Hon. D A Feetham: Page 153, yes, I have got it: £1,300,000 –

Hon. J J Bossano: – as payment.

910

Hon. D A Feetham: – and the... but that relates to the Future Job Strategy?

Hon. J J Bossano: It is related to it, but not necessarily that the amount that is going to be spent on the Jobs Strategy is just from there, because remember that this includes funding from the EU for some of the costs of the persons that are in that training. So therefore, you have got, in pages 153 and 154 –

Hon. D A Feetham: I see that.

Hon. J J Bossano: – the money that is spent, on the expenditure side, and if the hon. Member looks at the top of Appendix B, on the Receipts, he will see that there is a contribution from Head 27, Employment which is the contribution that is paid, £11,149,000.

920

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but I can see that the... So effectively what you are saying to me is that the £12 million – the £1,364,000 plus the £11,149,000 – does relate to the Future Job Strategy, but may be used for something else?

925

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am saying that the Future Job Strategy will cost more than that, because in addition to the money that we are putting in, we will be getting EU funding.

Hon. D A Feetham: But that is at number (21), Other Recurrent Expenditure: you have EU Projects, Government Financed, £5,661,000; Planned European Structural Funds – again, exactly the same amount.

Hon. J J Bossano: If the hon. Member looks at the actual expenditure in 2010-11, which was £1½ million, that is what used to be provided as an additional contribution from the Employment Head to the VTS. That is now £11,149,000.

935

So the subhead (3)(b) is the same subhead (3)(b) that existed in 2010-11, which was then £1½ million. The actual –

Hon. D A Feetham: That is salary, isn't it? Those are the salaries?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, these are operational expenses. Salaries are subhead 1. This is Other Charges. The cost of the people in the Jobs Strategy is independent of the cost of the employees of the GDC. The cost of the employees of the GDC is shown on page 153 as Salaries in the Employment field.

So if the hon. Member looks at the amount the GDC receives, he will see that the £11,149,000 is at the top of Appendix B on page 153 –

Hon. D A Feetham: Page 153, yes, I have got it.

Hon. J J Bossano: – and that is the same money that is being shown as going out of one end –

950

Hon. D A Feetham: It is the question I have asked before.

Hon. J J Bossano: – and coming in at the other.

If the hon. Member says, 'Well, where is that money being spent?' then that money is being spent partly in the payment to individuals in training and partly for the salaries of the GDC employees. (Hon. D A Feetham: Right.) It comes to more than £11.1 million –

955

Hon. D A Feetham: Because you are dealing with both.

Hon. J J Bossano: – because it gets supplemented by EU funding.

Hon. D A Feetham: And hence the £5.6 million at page 154.

But both figures together, that includes the estimated costs of what it is going to cost over a year to actually pay the trainees, which was estimated by the hon. Member in his speech at about £11 million.

965

Hon. J J Bossano: About £12 million.

Hon. D A Feetham: £12 million, alright.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

970

Clerk: Head 28, Statistics Office, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 28, Statistics Office, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

975

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with respect to subhead 2(1)(e), Statistical Surveys, is this £186,000 in relation to the Census?

980

A Member: [Inaudible.]

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 29, Port and Shipping, subhead 1, Payroll.

985

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, under the previous page, where we have a reduction in the number of GDC staff from 10 to two, a reduction of eight, can the Hon. Minister give us an explanation as to why that is the case?

The overall reduction is seven, because you employ one extra AO and it goes from three to four. But there is a substantial reduction in GDC employees.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Chairman, there is no reduction in the number of bodies that are in the Public Service. It is just that out of 164, approximately half of them stopped being GDC employees and 995 opted to become civil servants and therefore they disappear from Other Charges and appear in Personal Emoluments.

I do not know the exact distribution of the people that are no longer in the GDC, obviously, but the total, or that was there a year ago, is the same total that is there this year – except that initially they were all GDC; at one stage during the year, it was intended they should all be civil servants and therefore they would all have disappeared; and then eventually we finish up with a situation of about 50:50.

1000 So in different Departments... The bulk of the GDC is in Employment and Tourism and in other parts of the Public Service, you will find one or two people who retained GDC status, even though the majority chose not to.

There is at the bottom a drop of seven and that can only be because the seven are now somewhere else.

1005 On the page overhead, there is a footnote, Mr Chairman, showing where they have gone to, which is on Tourism, page 108. So the people who disappeared from this place have appeared in the other one, page 108.

1010 Mr Chairman: Head 29, Port and Shipping, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

1015 Clerk: Head 30, Tourism, subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, maybe the Minister for Employment can enlighten me as well, that there is a bit of movement here between GDC and what I assume is the Civil Service.

1020 There is a reduction under (vi), from 71 to 32, that makes it – if my maths is correct and it may well not be – a reduction of 39. I think of those 39, 29 go into the Establishment section, which last year I think had a figure of zero and now it is 29; and then the overall result is that you had 71 last year and now you have 61, so there is a reduction of 10.

1025 So clearly the reduction comes from the GDC staff. So of those 39, from 71 to 32, 29 go into the Civil Service, presumably, and then there are 10 which are, at least in this sheet of paper, unaccounted for. Where did those 10 go?

Presumably we should have had the eight we were talking about earlier in Port and Shipping coming into Tourism, if I have followed the Minister for Employment's explanation correctly.

1030 Hon. J J Bossano: They have to be somewhere, because I know we have got the same numbers! (Laughter)

Hon. D J Bossino: The total number is exactly the same, we just do not know where they all are! Where are they?

1035 Hon. D A Feetham: We are assuming the books balance! (Laughter)

Hon. J J Bossano: I know we are paying for it, so they must be somewhere. (Laughter)

1040 It appears that some of those are now in the newly created agencies like Culture and so on, and therefore the relationship is that they would be paid out of the contribution from the Consolidated Fund to the Culture Agency and so forth.

1045 The bottom line is that there has not been a reduction in the numbers, but there has been movement from people. The clearest movement was the movement which split the original complement between the GDC and the Civil Service. There has been a smaller number that have finished up maybe with the Culture Agency or the Coastguard Agency or something like that, but the people are doing basically jobs that were being done and were on the previous year's Estimates.

So it is not that there has been a reduction in the complement in terms of the work that was being done and that they are doing something which is now being paid out of a new Head which did not exist. Where they have moved, they have moved and they have taken their pay with them.

1050 But the bulk, I would say 90% are either GDC or Civil Service and there is an odd 10% that have gone to other places, which it should be possible to identify exactly where they are, obviously. (A Member: Yes.) (Interjection) By homing in on the names of the individuals, we can find where they are being paid from. So we can get that for the hon. Member, so he knows where they are.

1055 Minister for Tourism, Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Chairman, as the Hon. the Minister for Employment is saying, I from memory can remember five individuals who were previously under Tourism that have gone to different agencies and different locations, but rather than give their names out, I could tell the hon. Gentleman the people that I remember and we can also find out for him who are the other five people and where they have got to, if he wants to know.

1060 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, there are 10 less.

Hon. N F Costa: There are not 10 less people; it is just that those people have been deployed to different places.

1065 Hon. E J Reyes: But there are 10 less to do the workload of Tourism, yes?

Hon. J J Bossano: They have taken the work and the money and it has all gone together.

When it has moved, it has moved not because there are now less people doing the same work that was previously being done by more. It is that the work, the pay and the individual have moved.

1070 So, therefore, the money that was there last year – subject to the fact that they were of course earning more this year as a result of having Civil Service status, irrespective of where they are... Apart from that difference, the nature of the work, the grading of the individual and the rate of pay, except that it is now on a parity with the Civil Service grade, is still the same in this year's Estimates as it was in last year's Estimate. There has been no reduction in that respect.

1075 So where there is a body and a rate of pay missing from one Department, it is because the work, the pay and the person are somewhere else.

1080 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

1085 Clerk: Head 31, Public Transport and Commercial Affairs.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, can we go back to the Terminals Expenses? (Hon. J J Bossano: Tourism?) Yes, Tourism, Other Charges, (11)(h) X-ray Machine Repairs and Maintenance. Is that a new head or is that a transfer from Port and Shipping? But I am not aware that there is an X-ray machine in the Port.

1090 Hon. J J Bossano: Security, I would imagine. (Interjections)

Hon. N F Costa: Yes [inaudible].

1095 Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, it is a baggage X-ray – sorry, I was thinking about something more sophisticated that they have in Algeciras and also in Tarifa, which is the X-ray in relation to people.

Mr Chairman: Head 31, Public Transport and Commercial Affairs, subhead 1, Payroll.

1100 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, again there is a substantial reduction in the numbers of AOs, from one year to the next, of six. Is that also in relation to the GDC issue or is it something else?

Hon. J J Bossano: The people here were previously under the Enterprise Head that was working out of the Europort area and that function has now been transferred to the new Enterprise, Employment and Training, so the reduction there has been the loss of that facility. The individuals have been deployed to other work, because they have not passed on to me.

1110 Hon. D A Feetham: This is effectively the extra six, in page 96, about European Union Programmes and –

Hon. J J Bossano: That is right and the European Union Programme and the people who provided leaflets and information and so on that were under Joe Holliday before – 1115 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, which was called Invest Gibraltar.

Hon. J J Bossano: Invest Gibraltar, that is right.

Mr Chairman: Head 31, Public Transport and Commercial Affairs, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I would home in on subparagraphs (2), (3) and (4), which are described as 'Marketing, Promotions and Conferences' and the second one, 'Business Support Office', and each have an estimate of £20,000. It was not there before. Is that because of the amalgamation in the Budget Book of Public Transport and Commercial Affairs? No?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Chairman, it is related to the answer the Hon. the Minister for Employment gave a few moments ago. Before, there was the Ministry headed by Mr Joe Holliday and as the hon. Gentleman has just said, that has been divided, or rather the Invest Gibraltar part, etc has been taken by the Minister for Employment to fulfil the function of inward investment and we have created the new Ministry, which is Commercial Affairs. As a result, because there has never been a Ministry of Public Transport and Commercial Affairs, this is the first time there has had to be provision for this.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 32, Technical Services, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Head 32, Technical Services, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes Mr Chairman, subhead 2(3)(k), 'Cleaning of Street Gullies': there is an increase from last year's figure of £90,000, which has been quite stable between actual in 2010-11 estimates and forecast outturn, to £120,000. Perhaps now that it is in Technical Services, the hon. Gentleman for Technical Services can explain why the 33% increase.

Hon. P J Balban: Can you repeat the Head and subhead please?

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, subhead 2, Other Charges, section (3) Operational Expenses, (k) Cleaning of Street Gullies. (Interjections) It was £90,000 and it was Environment. (Interjection) Yes, I am aware of that. It is just I am wondering why the difference of £30,000 year on year, from actual to estimate.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, the increase in this respect is due to the fact that the recommendation came from the Head of Technical Services that more investment was needed in the cleaning of street gullies – in the past not enough had been spent on this very important part of the infrastructure. They have been pushing for an increase for a while now and it is reflected in this year's...

Hon. S M Figueras: And this increase will be paid in its totality to the current contractor, Wastage Products Ltd, which is listed in the Environment section?

Hon. J J Bossano: What there is is an increased provision on the basis that they have argued that the £90,000 that they were getting was not enough to do all the cleaning that is required.

Presumably, we shall see during the course of the year how they go towards spending that amount, but given that this is a specialist area, it is not the kind of thing that you can say 'Let's go out to tender and see how many people have got street gully cleaning lorries.' These are the ones that go and suck all the stuff out.

Hon. S M Figueras: So just to clarify that: it is in response to the initiative or approach by...?

Hon. Chief Minister: It is in response by the Chief Technical Officer's recommendations.

Hon. J J Bossano: On a bid to increase the amount. We were caught on an off day and we gave him a 30% increase, basically! (Interjections and laughter)

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

- 1180 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just assist the House because there is now a full explanation here and it may be useful for the hon. Gentleman to know, given the interest they have in it. Apparently, it all arises because there has been an increase in the number of gullies due to the construction of new roads and therefore there is more to clean.
- 1185 Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.
- Clerk: Head 33, Driver and Vehicle Licensing, subhead 1, Payroll.
- 1190 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, in Payroll, Salaries, we have an estimate of £578,000 and the forecast outturn for the previous financial year was £700,000. Do we have an explanation why the constant drop? I see even compared to the estimate of last year, there has been a continued drop – is there an explanation for this?
- 1195 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, I can confirm that there appears to have been actually an under-funding there.
- Hon. J J Netto: Sorry, I do not quite understand what he means by an ‘under-funding’. Could he expand this further? (Interjections)
- 1200 Hon. J J Bossano: Not enough money to pay the 30 guys, that is what he is saying! (Laughter)
- Hon. G H Licudi: It will have to be increased.
- Hon. J J Bossano: That will need to be increased!
- 1205 Hon. G H Licudi: Not enough money has been put under that Head and that will need to be increased.
- 1210 Hon. J J Netto: Oh, I see! (Interjections and laughter)
- Hon. J J Bossano: This is to compensate for the 30% extra we gave in the salaries! (Interjections and laughter)
- 1215 Mr Chairman: Head 33, Driver and Vehicle Licensing, subhead 1, Payroll stands part of the Bill.
- Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.
- Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.
- 1220 Clerk: Head 34, Utilities, subhead 2, Other Charges.
- Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead (1) in Other Charges, (a) Contribution from Revenues Received, there is an increase of £2 million there. Is there any explanation as to the significant increase? It represents about 7% to 7½%. I wonder whether there is any particular reason for it.
- 1225 Hon. S E Linares: There could be a couple of reasons for this. Basically, it could be because... it is an estimate, but it is because either the water consumes a lot of electricity and therefore there will be an increase of revenue from AquaGib to the GEA and also the increase of housing – people living in different houses, therefore there is an increase. It is an estimated increase of an extra £2 million there.
- 1230 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman cares to look at page 9 on the Revenue side, he will also see how the fuel hedge has increased. (Interjections) Page 9, Utilities: there is a difference there in the cost of the hedge that he will see. (Interjections)
- 1235 Mr Chairman: Head 34, Utilities, subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.
- Clerk: Head 35, Collection and Disposal of Refuse, subhead 2, Other Charges.
- 1240 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, there is a general point/question and one more specific relating to the actual estimate for the coming year. I note the transfer of refuse collection from the Environment

Ministry to the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth. I wonder whether perhaps there is an explanation for that, although it is just a reallocation.

1245 Hon. S E Linares: It has been considered a Utility and therefore I am the Minister for refuse collection and it has been transferred from the Department of the Environment to a Ministry that I have now, which I run is the GIC – Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners.

1250 Hon. S M Figueras: Right, and then, more specifically, there is an approximately 7% increase in the estimate over the cost. Is there any – ?

Hon. S E Linares: It is to do with what I said in my Budget speech, the extra 7 and the extra lorry that we are going to introduce, plus two more that will be employed later.

1255 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for that.

Mr Chairman: Head 35, Collection and Disposal of Refuse, subhead 2, Other Charges stands part of the Bill.

1260 Clerk: Head 36, Sport and Leisure, subhead 1, Payroll.

1265 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, on subhead 1(2)(d), it says there ‘Pension Contributions’ and there is now a new estimate of £1,000. If I recall correctly, there are three industrial staff members – it is reflected on page 124, so there has been no change there. These are long serving civil servants, which I have always understood did not have to contribute towards their pension scheme. So is this £1,000 here because there has been a change in staffing and it is a new civil servant entrant or is it just in order to have a token provision which may not even materialise?

1270 Hon. S E Linares: The explanation given is that this is to do with the three employees that are down in the Authority and therefore, if they need –

Hon. E J Reyes: They are not from the Authority – the three –

1275 Hon. S E Linares: No, no they are not from the Authority; they are working for the Authority –

Hon. E J Reyes: Right, the three civil servants.

1280 Hon. S E Linares: – although they are civil servants. It is a token sum. If there is a need to bring in that they move somewhere and they need to be replaced, this is the total sum for the pension contribution.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, yes, if I understood correctly, it is just a token sum, should there be – (Hon. S E Linares: Absolutely.)

1285 But my understanding is there has not been a movement. The three individuals who were last here happen to be the same ones – long-serving ones, so there has not been... It is just hypothetical in case it happens.

Hon. S E Linares: They are still there.

- 1325 Hon. Minister confirm, is this, I am assuming, in relation to the explosion at the North Mole?
- 1330 Hon. S E Linares: Absolutely. That is the increase, and therefore this year there is just a slight increase from £134,000 to £140,000.

Clerk: Clause 4, Improvement and Development Fund.
Head 101, Works and Equipment, subhead 1, Works and Equipment.

1380 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I may, on item (x), which is Government Furniture and Equipment, I see an estimate there of £½ million. Does the £½ million represent the total bid that Department Authorities and Agents submitted to Government or is this a fraction of the bid?

1385 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think it is the full amount bid. I assume it is what was bid and what has been approved.

Hon. J J Netto: I can understand that but that was the total amount of the collected bids from all the Government Departments, Authorities and Agencies?

1390 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I am told is that the figure is much, much higher, as is usually the case, and that the amount approved this year, is, as the hon. Gentleman can see, much more – £½ million more – than was approved for last year and about £325,000 more than was approved the year before that.

1395 But never I am told is it... Sorry, I am giving you the wrong number – £½ million more than has been approved for a couple of years under that Head – never I am told is the bid approved, because it is all the bids together and it is a lot more than the £½ million that has been approved.

1400 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, I do appreciate that is always the case, but what I am asking is whether... He may not have the information available, but perhaps the civil servants behind him may have the information available as to what was the total bid requested, regardless of what the Government, rightfully, may put in the Estimates Book.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not have the information available. I can tell him that it is £½ million more than has been approved for a couple of years –

1405 Hon. J J Netto: I know that.

Hon. Chief Minister: So that is a point worth making, if he understands.

1410 If I can see where he is going, then the point I am going to make to him is that it is £½ million more than has been approved for the past two years. I do not have the information, Mr Speaker. I think that what we have to debate is what has been approved and that is what has been approved and...

1415 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Chairman, I am not asking whether it is more or less or whether it is the same. All I am asking is even if he has not got the information himself, which I can appreciate, that information might be available by the civil servants sitting behind him and if it is available...

1420 Hon. Chief Minister: I am sure it is available because all the bids are available and could be totted up, but I am not going to open the door to giving the hon. Gentleman access to the bids that are made, because we would be here all day, every single day for the next 365 days, if we had to debate not just what it is that the Government is proposing we should spend, but what it is that every single Department asks the Government that they should be spending. And it has never been the case in the 16 years that he has been in Government and we have been in Opposition that that information has been shared, Mr Speaker.

1425 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with respect to subhead 1(a) Education, could the Hon. Minister explain what the £2 million estimated is going to be for?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, in answer to a question last month and also during the Budget debate yesterday, I did give details of some of the capital expenditures that we would be doing, including the extension at Notre Dame, the other extensions and other projects that we would be doing.

1430 What the hon. Member will see is that we are, in fact, increasing by 33% the provision for capital expenditure. In my answer last month, I did say also that other projects would be done during the course of the year, apart from the ones that I specifically mentioned, and we have got provision here for some other projects.

1435 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, which have not been identified yet.

And, Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead 1(h), Contribution to Gibraltar Health Authority, I again ask the Hon. Minister the same question: the £3.3 million, what will that be going towards?

1440 If I remember correctly, the Hon. the Chief Minister mentioned £1 million of that was going to the new patient transfer vehicles and KGV refurbishment, so that leaves about £2.3 million, which I do not think was addressed in the budget.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, yes, £300,000 is earmarked to the colon cancer screening; £1 million is for ambulances; there is provision there also for the Community Mental Health premises at Coaling Island; also to provide wheelchair access to the garden and there is also scope there for replacement of equipment. There is also provision there for initiation of projects to relocate the kitchen and to relocate the ambulance staff.

There will be others coming in the year, but those are the main items that the money is going to be dedicated to.

1450 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful.

And, Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead 1(r)(iii), for the City Fire Brigade, £150,000 have been earmarked. Can the Hon. Minister confirm if this is in relation to the smoke extractor system?

1455 Hon. S E Linares: Partially, it is the extractor. There are things like pumps and other equipment which they have asked for, and also to do with the ambulance – some repairs to the ambulance that they have, so that would add up... In fact they asked for £295,000 and then it was slashed to £150,000.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, in relation to Works and Equipment, subsection (I), Contribution to Gibraltar Electricity Authority of £1 million, can someone other than the Minister for the Environment, who is unfortunately not in the Chamber at the moment, confirm that that is the contribution he mentioned in his Budget speech towards alternative energy? I suspect but I would just like to have confirmation.

The Hon. Minister for the Environment has returned – maybe he can shed some light on it?

1465 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this relates to Works and Equipment principally, which is what would be covered by capital, so for example, things like the flood lights on the Rock face etc, are covered by this. The big item of expenditure in respect of this is an interconnector and switch gear and that accounts for almost two-thirds of the material.

1470 The hon. Gentleman will know that when I made my statement a couple of months back about the position in relation to the power station issue, we said that we would be continuing, through the GEA, to do the works in respect of switch gear, etc -

A Member: And main cables.

1475 Hon. Chief Minister: – and main cables etc. The infrastructure works, as they are known, are not just in relation to Lathbury, but also in relation to the rest of the ‘grid’ – and I say ‘grid’ in inverted commas – and that is what that principally relates to.

1480 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for that.

One more point I would like to raise in relation to paragraph or section... it was (p)(iii), Drains and Sewers. We know that the Government has been busy in the last few months dealing with the collapse of the Line Wall sewer. In the Budget speeches and in answers to questions in the House, the Hon. Minister for Technical Services had referred to the fact that not enough investment had been made in them. However, it just strikes me as odd that the estimate is not significantly higher than what it had been or indeed what has already been spent on the drains and the sewers.

1485 Perhaps the Hon. Minister can enlighten us as to why maybe the works already done have constituted a significant enough improvement that that is all they need to provision for it.

1490 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, the money, the funding actually being asked for in that respect is a token amount. It has been prior to beginning work on a sewer rehabilitation programme to bring the sewer and the stormwater systems up to a standard over a number of years.

1495 Hon. S M Figueras: I am sorry, Mr Chairman, just under paragraph (r), Essential Services and Equipment, Royal Gibraltar Police, there is £150,000 there as an estimate. An indication as to what that would be applied to would be helpful – particularly in the context of them having received two very fast launches very recently.

1500 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may, just on the launches: the launches are provided for in 1(v), if he reads on – nothing to do with the launches there. (Interjection)
I am telling him it is not the launches. I will leave the Minister for Justice to deal with the other.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, this is just general provision which is made for general equipment which the Police may require during the year.

1505 Hon. S M Figueras: I only asked simply, because there was no estimate or provision for it in the past and that was the only reason I have raised it. (Interjection) I am grateful to the Minister for Justice.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is that equipment relating to what the Police might actually need in relation to PACE; or actually is it repairs to New Mole Police Station and perhaps also Central Police Station?

1510 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, I think if the hon. Members look at the footnote (i), this is now a breakdown which was in fact previously shown as ‘Other Departments, Agencies and Authorities’. It was a global sum from which people drew from what they needed during the course of a year, in the expectation that every year they need to replace something or repair something, so in fact there is much more money than there was last year, if we actually add all the things with a footnote (i) and compare it with what has disappeared. But the increase has not been done in the global figure, because then everybody would have been able to access, presumably, to get an equal share of the increase. It has actually been divided more in relation to what people have identified at the beginning of the financial year that they are likely to need.

1520 So in respect of the individual items with a footnote (i), it means that Members are now able to see, out of that block vote, what is intended to go to each different Department.

As Members are well aware, there is nothing to stop us viring from one Head to another, if one is underspending and the other needs more money.

1525 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, in relation to this particular amount of £150,000, this follows clearly a bid by the Royal Gibraltar Police for funding for diverse equipment. It includes matters such as equipment needed for the marine section, for the diving unit, scenes of crime, community support, special equipment, office furniture, transport, so there is a myriad of various heads of equipment which they need in capital expenditure, which are now provided under this £150,000.

1530 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, if we look at ‘Housing: Works and Repairs’, we look at the estimate for 2011-12 of £2 million and the forecast outturn £3.8 million, and now it is down to £1 million, which I note is actually lower than the actual for 2010-11, is there an explanation for the actual decrease in the provision made for Housing Works and Repairs; or is it...? Well, it cannot be a token figure, because it is a million pounds, but is there an explanation for it?

1540 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, of course there is an explanation: it is very simple. The forecast outturns and the estimates for the previous year show what costs were in part of the process of developing estates whilst they were in Government, whilst we are at the beginning of the process of the developments that we are aiming for.

So the £1 million that he sees there is a token for the work that will commence this year.

1545 Hon. D A Feetham: So that includes the projected building of new accommodation as well as repairs. Is that what he is saying?

1550 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, this includes, for example, in some instances, where he knows we are in the process of doing works which are beyond – (A Member: Preparatory?) Yes, (a) preparatory and (b) beyond the old simple works and repairs that there have been in other estates. At Laguna, at Glacis, at Moorish Castle, the hon. Members will have seen works which include cladding and which include that type of work which goes beyond simple works and repairs.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes but this is the... I asked about... This million pounds is the million pounds that appears under Housing, that I asked earlier on about, and you may recall I asked, 'Did that million pounds relate to, or partly relate to, the cladding of the three estates that was part of the announcement by the Minister for Housing?' and the Hon. the Minister for Employment said to me, 'No, no, no, it wasn't that.' (Interjection)
Now...

1560 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the state that we are at at the moment is – it may be a surprise to hear this – but it is principally being done in-house in the Housing Department, all of the preparatory work, all of the cladding, etc. We have not gone out to expensive consultants or anything like that, so there has been no need to show other expenditure here in respect of that. (Hon. J J Bossano: So far.) There may be in the future a need to do so.

1565 Hon. D A Feetham: So basically I was right some moments earlier, when I said the million pounds related not to the cladding, but to –

Hon. Chief Minister: No, it relates to – 1570 Hon. J J Bossano: Not putting up the cladding, really.

Hon. Chief Minister: Not putting up the cladding, that is right. It relates to all the preparatory work that needs to be done in order to do that.

1575 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, it cannot possibly relate to the putting up of the cladding, because the cladding of actually three estates is going to cost above £50 million. It is a substantial expenditure.

Hon. Chief Minister: It certainly costs more than £1 million.

1580 Hon. D A Feetham: So it must be preparatory towards that – that is what I was asking.

Mr Chairman: Improvement and Development Fund – Expenditure, Head 101, Works and Equipment, subhead 1 stands part of the Bill.

1585 Clerk: Head 102, Projects, subhead 1, Beautification Projects.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, on Other Projects, subhead 5(s) is one that jumps out. It is the Smart Bikes.

1590 Clerk: We are not on there, Mr Speaker.

Mr Chairman: We are still at subhead 1, Beautification Projects.

Hon. S M Figueras: Oh apologies, Mr Chairman.

1595 Mr Chairman: Okay subhead 1, I imagine there are no questions. Subhead 1, Beautification Projects stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Roads and Parking Projects.

1600 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, may I ask for an explanation for the massive reduction under 2(a)(i) (Interjection and laughter) from £8.6 million, which is the forecast outturn, to £½ million for this coming year by way of estimate?

1605 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman knows, the development of the tunnel, for all the reasons that have been ventilated in the past six months, is not progressing at the moment. There is the litigation and there is, as I told the House in an earlier intervention, the possibility of a new tender having to be created, in order to see what the real cost to completion – the balance to complete, so to speak – of that project would be, given the present state in which it lies.

1610 Therefore, there is a token there, Mr Speaker, for some of the expenditure which there will be, because there is some continuing expenditure, just to have the site safe as it is at the moment, and post procurement process, there may be another figure there.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 2, Roads and Parking Projects stands part of the Bill.

1615 Clerk: Subhead 3, Relocation Costs.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 3, Relocation Costs stands part of the Bill.

1620 Clerk: Subhead 4, Reclamation Projects.

Mr Chairman: Subhead 4, Reclamation Projects stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 5, Other Projects.

1625 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead 5(f), Old St Bernard's Hospital Demolition and Conversion Works: is this £1.36 million the amount needed to complete the conversion of this site?

1630 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Chairman, as the hon. Lady well knows, there were plans to convert that for educational purposes. A bid has been put to do some preparatory work. But as I have indicated, no final decision has been taken, so there has been a provision made, but the final decision as to the use of the site has not been taken yet.

1635 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, is that the whole site or is this just the front part which was going to be converted to a school? This includes the...

Hon. G H Licudi: The old part of what used to be St Bernard's Hospital is the part at the top which was to be worked for – (Interjections)

1640 Hon. S M Figueras: The lower part was also part of the Hospital. (Interjections)

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, there was a demolition carried out and there were continuing works in relation to that demolition to make it safe, but there has been a provision in respect of the bottom side of the old St Bernard's Hospital. As I said, there is a provision there, but no final decision has been taken as to precisely what is going to happen with that site.

1650 Hon. S M Figueras: And, sorry Mr Chairman, just for some more clarification, is there a decision as to the use of what was originally the new wing, before what was demolished was made – the wing where St John's Ward, Victoria Ward were originally and the chapel? (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) Okay, there were two annexes. (Interjections) Is it the Mackintosh Wing?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Gentleman talking about the area which was next to the lab, more or less? (Interjections) The Mackintosh Wing, along Lower Castle Road? (Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.) Mr Speaker, that is the housing that is being developed for elderly occupation.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Chairman, the Hon. Minister can confirm that this is, in effect, a token figure, till a decision is made as to what that bit is going to be converted to? Yes.

I was just surprised with the £363,000 added to it; I thought the rounded figure of a million would be a good indication of a token figure.

1660 Hon. G H Licudi: Certainly more than a token figure, but as I said, the final decision has not been taken as to what is actually going to be done.

1665 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And, Mr Chairman, in relation to subhead 5(g), the Old Naval Hospital Conversion and Refurbishment Works, a million pounds has been earmarked for this. Again, is this a token, albeit a high figure?

Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, which number?

1670 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Subhead 5(g).

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman this is a basic estimate. We are still awaiting a quote for the cost of the redesign of the unit.

- 1675 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Chairman, one additional point relevant to the Hon. Minister for Transport on the Smart Bikes – subsection (s) which refers to the Smart Bikes. The estimate is for £1,000. Now, I know that they are having these negotiations and discussions with the supplier, and the £1,000 is just a token amount, obviously, to see how things progress – is that the case?
- 1680 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, as the hon. Gentleman has pointed out in the light of the answers to his questions and the Hon. Mr Bossino's, as a result of these negotiations, we have put a token figure and we will be able to say exactly how much that is in due course, once those discussions have concluded.
- 1685 Hon. D J Bossino: If I can ask, Mr Chairman, the Minister for Traffic, presumably that explanation given by the Minister for Transport also applies to item (x) in relation to the plan?
- Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, that is right: the £1,000 is merely a token figure.
- 1690 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, on subhead 5(l), the Main Guard, which is, as it says in brackets, the headquarters for the Heritage Trust, although no expenditure was entered into last year, there had originally been an estimate of half a million pounds which was arrived at in consultation with the 'wish list' of the Trust in itself. I see that has now been reduced to £100,000.
- 1695 Is the hon. Member able to say whether it is because the project has been drastically reduced in size or is it because it will be ongoing from one financial year to another, and therefore for this year only a £100,000 is required?
- Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, it is exactly what the hon. Member is saying, that it will be phased in. So we are starting the project with the Heritage Trust with £100,000 this year. If more funds are needed this year, they will be put in but we expect it to be more phased in, rather than a one like previously stated, which was the £500,000. That would have been probably the total cost of the whole project, so we are phasing it in.
- 1700 Mr Chairman: Subhead 5, Other Projects stands part of the Bill.
- 1705 Clerk: Subhead 6, Equity Funding – Gibraltar Investment (Holdings) Ltd.
- Mr Chairman: Subhead 6, Equity Funding – Gibraltar Investment (Holdings) Ltd stands part of the Bill
- 1710 Clerk: That concludes clause 4.
- Mr Chairman: Clause 4 stands part of the Bill.
- 1715 Clerk: Clause 5.
- Mr Chairman: Clause 5 stands part of the Bill.
- 1720 Clerk: Clauses 6 and 7, Gibraltar Development Corporation – Appendix B.
- Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, if we go to page 154 – and we were talking about this earlier on – Planned European Structural Funds, £5,661,000, can the Hon. the Minister for Employment confirm that an application for those structural funds has been made; and also whether the application has been made on the basis that the money is going to be used for the funding of Government-sponsored training schemes?
- 1725 Hon. J J Bossano: The application that has been made has been made in respect of the ongoing VTS that was approved already on the basis of the new rates. That has gone through and that has been accepted, so the level of funding per individual is now a reflection of the new rate that we are paying, and we are getting 50% of that.
- 1730 But the expectation that is included there, of course, is not yet something that has happened. That is to say, we are providing for what we think will be the possible maximum number of people that will be going through the system, but the hon. Member knows, from the answers we are giving him, that the numbers at present are not at that level. We cannot ask for the money, so that we get the money in case we put so many people through. It has to be substantiated because we do not get money for all the people that we put through, because there are conditions attached to new funding in terms of age and in terms of periods of unemployment, which would not necessarily apply to some of the categories that we are putting through the system, given that the employer has got now a say in the selection of a potential trainee, that was not there before.

1740 In terms of the training, for example, in the construction industry, at Gibdock and so on, that is different because there, we are able to increase the numbers ourselves, since there is no employer involved. That is to say, for example – I think the last intake last year was 40 into the Construction Training Centre – if we are able to bring more people in, it will not be on the premise that we have already identified who those people are likely to be working for in two years' time, when they reach NVQ

So if we are able to, as a result of putting more resources into construction training, which I have already mentioned in my speech was something that we will be looking at this summer, if we are able to take in 80 instead of 40, then that would be reflected there and it would be reflected in the fact that we ask for more money for that.

1750 But in terms of the people who are in ETCL, the flow of people in ETCL is not something that we can, in anticipation, make a bid for, until the people are already in place, and only in respect of those that meet EU criteria, which will be less than all the people we have.

1755 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, in actual fact most of the people, I think there is a very high percentage of Construction Training Centre trainees, actually eventually found a job, because they are highly qualified.

It is in relation to VTS trainees, where the uptake by employers was less than 50%.

1760 But can he help me with this: was part of the satisfying whoever it is in Europe that actually provides this funding, that the VTS trainees were undertaking Government-sponsored training schemes and also, secondly, is this something that is going to be something that an application is going to be made every single year? Because, of course, one assumes there is going to be an intake of VTS trainees next year. Presumably there will be another application next year.

So there are two questions, essentially.

1765 Hon. J J Bossano: There has to be an application made each year under the programme and there has been in the past. Right! In the past, the training courses were for people doing six months and this time they are longer, but in fact, in all the employer-related guaranteed employment, it is only intended to be less than a year, because the ones that are longer than a year are really the ones that are going to be going through a training scheme like the construction training or the nursing training, which have got a requirement that people do so much in a sort of semi-academic environment, in order to get the necessary qualifications.

1770 For example we have got some people who are being trained as cabinet makers. They are being trained as cabinet makers and they are people who had already some carpentry skills. In those areas, although we are getting EU funding – in fact that particular project, for example, has had ERDF funding and EU funding – so what we are doing is that in the money we are getting from the EU to support new business start-ups, there is an element that is included which requires new jobs being created, as part of the condition.

1775 In the new jobs being created, we are also claiming financial support from the ESF and we are funding the other half. So in nearly all those cases, we are talking about annual requirements involving new individuals. In the cases that last more than one year, then it is in cases which are not linked to employers training the trainees, but the organised training like the construction training or Gibdock or the nursing and so forth. So they go beyond a year.

1785 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but for European purposes and for the purposes of the funds, the VTS employees are being treated as Government-sponsored trainees.

Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely, yes.

1795 Clerk: Appendix D, Borders and Coastguard Agency.

Mr Chairman: Appendix D, Borders and Coastguard Agency stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Appendix E, Gibraltar Health Authority.

1800 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with respect to Recurrent Payments, Ambulance Service, point (5), Salaries: could the Hon. Minister explain the increase from the estimate of 2011-12 of £826,000 to £971,000 as the forecast outturn, and then it is back down for this year's estimate to £889,000, when the staffing numbers have actually stayed the same?

1805 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Chairman, this will have been as a result of the Agenda for Change Agreement that considerably increased the salaries of most health workers.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Therefore, Mr Chairman, why has the estimate then gone down by £72,000? Why has it not then remained at the £971,000?

1810 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I suspect that there will have been an element of retrospection involved last year, which would not apply this year. So it has come back down to a more realistic figure, but still above the previous year.

1815 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in respect still with the Ambulance Service, point (7) for Allowances, I notice that the estimate allows for a decrease of £100,000 for allowances for the Ambulance Service.

1820 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is exactly the same explanation: the allowances were also part of the Agenda for Change.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, continuing with Payments, point (22) – Dressings, Medical Gases and Tests: could the Hon. Minister explain the reduction in £100,000 earmarked for that, please?

1825 Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry... Excuse me, it is not a reduction of £100,000 on what is earmarked for that; it is a £200,000 increase on what was earmarked for that.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, but £100,000 less than the forecast outturn.

1830 Hon. Chief Minister: From the forecast outturn, but £200,000 increase.

1835 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to point (23), Provisions, can the Hon. Minister explain what it means by 'Provisions'? Does this include the kitchen and the provisions within the kitchen?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Chairman.

1840 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to point (34), the School of Health Studies Expenses: there has been an increase of funding. Is this to do with the increased bursary for the student nurses?

1845 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Two reasons: an increase in the bursary; and also the fact that we will be taking another intake of nurses, while the previous intake has one more year to complete, so that this year, we will in fact have two intakes of nurses, one in its final year, one in its first year.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to point (35), Insurances and Claims: there is a decrease again in the estimate. Is this because the cover has been decreased?

1850 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, when it comes to claims, you never know what you may be up against, so one tends to be a little bit conservative in one's provision, because it is something that we cannot predict. There has to be some leeway and so it is slightly less than the previous estimate, less than the forecast outturn, because I suspect that last year, there may have been rather a lot of claims.

1855 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Finally, Mr Chairman, on page 171, under Capital Expenditure, there is £2 million for Works and Equipment and £300,000 for the Colon Cancer Initiative. This figure is also... is this part of what is already under the I&D...?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is exactly that: it is just shown here for clarity.

1860 Mr Chairman: Appendix E, Gibraltar Health Authority stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Appendix F, Housing Works Agency.

1865 Clerk: Appendix G, Care Agency.

1870 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I may, in relation to the establishment figures, as seen on page 176, if the hon. Lady perhaps goes down to the Rehabilitation Centre, I see in the little table being offered there, that the cooks for the Rehabilitation Centre that used to be seen there, in previous financial years, are not seen in the new financial year. So what I would like to know is whether the cooks have been transferred, perhaps, to another place of the Care Agency – perhaps the Mount Alvernia – or is it perhaps because the cooks are now seen within the figures of the industrial staff?

1875 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman, they are reflected under the industrial staff.

Hon. J J Netto: So basically, now, we have... They have not been transferred; they are still in Bruce's Farm, but the figures are now represented in industrial, as presumably would be the cooks for Mount Alvernia as well?

1880 I think that perhaps if I try to be helpful here: what pages 175 and 176 do provide is where the people are by location, basically.

Now, the problem I have is that if you go to page 175, the top tabulation there, which is Elderly Care, you have all the people working there, including the technical officer, the store supervisors and all of them are there in Mount Alvernia; but we do not see there any cooks.

1885 If you go to page 176 and you go to the tabulation on the Rehabilitation Centre, the figure for cooks was there, but not in the new financial year.

I am just trying to make sense of this, whether the only logical explanation we have is because all cooks, regardless of whether they are in Mount Alvernia or in Bruce's Farm, they are up there, under industrials, because the only other cooks that I can think of are in St Bernadette's.

1890 If we look perhaps at St Bernadette's because... So the cooks at St Bernadette's are not there either, so the only logical explanation is that they are all under industrial staff, within the global figure of industrial staff. Is that the case?

1895 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Chairman, they are all reflected under industrial staff and there continue to be cooks at the Rehabilitation Centre and the other places.

1900 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, moving on to, within the Care Agency, Appendix G, on page 178, item (16) which is Special Care Abroad, we have a figure there, an estimate for the new financial year of £896,000. Does the hon. Lady know, or can she tell me, how many people this figure will cover, in terms of placements abroad? Is it four, five or six? It has got to be around that figure.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Is the hon. Gentleman asking for the total figure or the figure for the increase? Is it in relation to the increase or the total figure?

1905 Hon. J J Netto: No, no, I am not asking for the increase; all I am asking is, for that amount of money, how many people does it support, in terms of placement abroad – abroad from Gibraltar?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman, it is in relation to six adults and also includes travel.

1910 Hon. J J Netto: So six adults, which includes of the six, one child – is that what you said? (Interjection) Sorry?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, it is five adults and one child – I beg your pardon, yes.

1915 Hon. J J Netto: And is the placement in the UK or, given the circumstances of this particular person, perhaps in another country?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman, I believe I have already answered this question in response to Parliamentary questions.

1920 On a confidential basis, I am happy to remind the hon. Member confidentially, but not now, Mr Chairman.

1925 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman if I may, if the hon. Lady goes to page 179, item (39), Health and Safety Expenses, I see an estimate of £1,000. Although we are not talking about a huge amount of money, I see that the estimate for the previous financial year was £10,000 and the forecast outturn £9,000. Now, £1,000 in relation to £10,000 is almost like a drop of 90%. Can the hon. Lady explain why the drop by such an amount?

1930 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman, this is because previously Health and Safety was sub-contracted to a private entity, and it no longer is; it will now be undertaken in-house, under the auspices of the Minister with responsibility for Health and Safety, and obviously the saving is reflected in the Estimates.

Mr Chairman: Appendix G, Care Agency stands part of the Bill.

1935 Clerk: Appendix H, Gibraltar Port Authority.

1940 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, can I ask the Minister responsible for the Port for an explanation which accounts for the increase under (19), described as 'Inspections', from I think there is a forecast outturn for this year of £75,000 – a decrease rather – and then it decreases to £10,000? Why is that the case, given that in previous years we have a figure... the actual expenditure last year was £96,000 and an estimate was made of £100,000?

1945 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, previously the work was sub-contracted and now we have a bunkering superintendent in the Gibraltar Port Authority, which explains the variance.

The subcontractor payment was for £90,000 and of course, now that we have a person in post, there is a salary which does account for the saving, of course, and it is much better to have someone working in-house.

1950 Mr Chairman: Appendix H, Gibraltar Port Authority stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Appendix I, Gibraltar Electricity Authority.

1955 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to point (30), GHA Related Expenditure, the Authority is estimated at spending £33,000. Could one of the hon. Members opposite explain what this figure is in relation to?

1960 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: The electrical services of the Health Authority are in fact provided by the Electricity Authority and that will explain why there is a payment. I suspect that perhaps there may have been an overlap as to whether the payment was made before or after the financial year.

But as I say, the relationship is that the electrical services are provided by the Electricity Authority, and are not provided by GHA personnel.

Mr Chairman: Appendix I, Gibraltar Electricity Authority stands part of the Bill.

1965 Clerk: Appendix J, Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority.

1970 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, under Payments, subparagraph (21), it says 'Hockey Pitches' and then there is a small roman numeral (ii). I believe that is possibly a misprint or typographical error and it should be a '(iii)' instead, corresponding to the note at the bottom that says:

'From 2011/2012 Hockey Pitches expenses included under (10) Running Expenses'.

Am I correct in that assumption?

1975 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Chairman, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman to have noted that. So it has been noted.

Thank you very much.

1980 Mr Chairman: Appendix J, Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Appendix K, Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency.

1985 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, there is, in the Establishment, there is a provision for one Technical Grade 4. Looking at the very back of the Book, on page 227, where the salaries are given for Technical Grades 2 and 3, there has been an omission of Technical Grade 4. So that is missing from the actual printout here. We have no idea what that salary scale or range would be.

1990 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, there is an omission there, but this officer in the general Establishment is an officer who is seconded from the Civil Service into the Agency, and has been, sort of, 'slotted into' the Technical Grade 4, because it was a type of personal to holder, but it is equivalent to a Technical Grade 4. I realise there is not, at the back, a Technical Grade 4.

1995 This can be included and because of the information given at the beginning of the Culture and Heritage Agency and it is to do with the halfway restructure that has been going on; but there will be a Technical Grade 4 added at page 227, which has been highlighted by the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Chairman but can I, in a cordial and friendly manner, advise the Minister, if the person has been seconded, then one has to be careful that he is not accounted for both in his permanent and pensionable Department and then here.

2000 For example, I did not raise an eyebrow, if we go back to the Sports and Leisure Authority, I know because of my tenure as Minister there, other than all those listed here from Grades 1 to 13, there is an actual operative who was seconded from our Department and therefore does not appear under this heading, because I believe he actually comes from Technical Services.

2005 So de jure, his head of Department is someone in Technical Service and on a day-to-day basis, he actually reports physically to ensure that his time keeping is correct to the Chief Executive of the Sport and Leisure Authority and that has been working fine for many years. So rightly so, the Sports and Leisure Authority does not account for him in its Establishment here, because he still appears on the other side.

2010 I just want to make the hon. Member aware – and he does not have to give me an answer today – that he should double-check that we do not have a double accounting for this individual and then one day our figures do not tally. Had he still been accounted under the other one, there would have been no need for me to ask what a Technical Grade 4 salary range would be.

2015 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, this is the information that was given by the Head of the Culture, because it happens to be on the Culture side, and she actually equated him to a Grade 4. So I appreciate what the hon. Member is saying and I will look and see that there is not a doubling up. Apparently, this is also subject to a question –

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I was going to say, Mr Speaker, I did give notice of the question –

2020 Hon. S E Linares: – to a question which has been put to the –

Mr Chairman: Order!

2025 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, it might be very useful for the Minister if I actually leave the question in, because it allows him an opportunity to then answer back in Parliament.

If, however, I do get the information in some other format, then I will inform the Chairman, in his capacity as the Speaker of the House, that I might even withdraw the question at that moment in time, if within the week's space, I have received the answer.

2030 But we will wait and see and we will sort it out in an amicable manner. All we want to do is to make sure we all have the correct details for any future reference.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, I will be happy to answer the question when it is posed, and we can air it out here, no problem.

BILLS FOR THIRD READING

2075 Appropriation Bill 2012
Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Bill 2012
Third Readings approved; Bills passed

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

2080 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Appropriation Bill 2012 and the Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Bill 2012 have been considered in Committee and agreed to.

I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

2085 Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that the Appropriation Bill 2012 and the Magistrates' Court (Amendment) Bill 2012 be read a third time and passed. Those in favour –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I call for a division on the votes.

2090 Mr Speaker: Those in favour of the Appropriation Bill 2012. (Several Members: Aye.) I think we take the voices first, then we take a poll, as the Hon. Chief Minister has asked for.

Those in favour of the Appropriation Bill 2012. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.

Mr Speaker: In view of the request for a poll, the – (Interjection and laughter)

2095 Clerk: Is it on the Magistrates' Court (Amendment)?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, no, on the – 2100 Clerk: On the Appropriation? Right.

Mr Speaker: On the Appropriation.

In that case, before we proceed on that, perhaps the Clerk will call out the names of all the Members in alphabetical order. (Interjections and laughter)

2105 Clerk: Just waiting for a list.

Mr Speaker: I think the request by the Chief Minister has caught the Clerk totally unprepared! We do not have an alphabetical list of Members. (Laughter)

2110 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have not actually looked at the Rules in relation to this, but –

Mr Speaker: Any Member may call for a poll.

2115 Hon. D A Feetham: Even when there is no question that we are going to be voting in favour, not against the Bill?

Mr Speaker: There is no requirement, is my understanding, for there to be any –

2120 Hon. D A Feetham: I have not looked at it, as I said –

Mr Speaker: No, my understanding is that any Member may, after the voices are heard, ask for a poll to be taken.

We are looking at Standing Order 53(2):

2125 ‘At the conclusion of a debate the question shall be put by the Speaker and the votes may be taken by voices Aye or No and the result shall be declared by the Speaker, but any Member may claim a division when the votes shall be taken by the Clerk asking each Member separately how he desires to vote and recording the votes accordingly.’

2130 Hon. D A Feetham: Isn’t it the interpretation of the words ‘may claim a division’?

Mr Speaker: That is what the Hon. the Chief Minister has requested. (Interjections)

One must bear in mind, in the House of Commons, in most cases, the Members actually do troop out of the House behind the Speaker’s Chair into either the Aye or the No lobbies, so it is a different manner of proceeding generally.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is what the House dividing is about. The House divides into the lobby to vote.

2140 Mr Speaker: Is the Clerk ready?

Clerk: More or less!

A division was called for and voting resulted as follows:

2145 Ayes 16, Noes 0

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Question 670, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister confirm whether information and guidance from the DPC has been sought in relation to the extension to Notre Dame School announced by the Hon. Minister for Education during his speech at the 2012 Budget session?

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Government rental flats Outstanding works

Clerk: Question 637, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide an explanation as to why the Minister for Housing and the Minister for Health both had a different answer to the number of outstanding works that need to be undertaken in Government flats as a result of reports made by the Occupational Department of the GHA in the last sitting of Parliament, and in addition state what the actual number of outstanding works are, the cost involved and whether such works are expected to be carried out in this new financial year of 2012-13?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, the reason why the Minister for Housing and the Minister for Health each had different answers to the questions regarding occupational therapy reports is because the question submitted to each Minister was worded differently, such as to cause divergence in interpretation.

Whilst the question put to the Minister for Health can only be interpreted to request the number of outstanding OT reports, the question put to the Minister for Housing can be, and in fact was, interpreted to request the total number of reports originated – not outstanding – by the OT department.

There are currently 43 outstanding OT works, each estimated to cost in the region of £2,000 – sorry, ‘£2k’ – and it is expected that all currently outstanding works will be completed during the current financial year.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Government rental flats Details of those empty and awaiting repairs

Clerk: Question 638, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 531/2012, how many flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs, giving a breakdown in respect of:

- (a) pre-war and post-war flats;
- (b) flat size composition;
- (c) the dates as from when these flats have been empty;
- (d) the nature of repairs which are required to be undertaken before they may be reallocated?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

Given that the hon. Member is requesting this information at each meeting of Parliament, in order to facilitate access to the data requested to him and to members of the general public, it will be added to the statistics published on the Government website on a monthly basis and will therefore mean that he will have the information without having to ask for it.

In addition, the information requested at Questions 639 to 647, 649 to 652 and 655 will also be published on the Government website.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 638

Further to my answer given to Question No. 531 of 2012, up to 121 flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs.

Table 1 shows the number of empty flats for cleaning/refurbishment (post and pre-war) by room composition.

Table 2 highlights the number of empty flats per year and room composition. Specific dates per flat cannot be provided.

The following table provides the required breakdown:-

Table 1 - By room composition (post and pre-war)

TOTAL	20	65	16	8	1	3	3		2	1	2	121

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I seem to have most of the information required here; however, in relation to my sub-paragraph (c), I was requesting the dates from when these flats have been empty, and I do not quite feel I have got the full information requested there.

135 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, if the information has not been provided, there must be an explanation. I will do my best to forward this information to him, if possible, as soon as I can.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am most grateful, Mr Speaker.

140 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask a minor question, just simply for clarification purposes?
Looking at the first table at the top there, under the column of 'Refurbishment Technical Decision', what is the scope that encompassed technical decisions? What I am thinking aloud, just to give the hon. Member an example, is are we talking about obviously refurbishment in terms of carpentry, plumbing, but in addition to that which would be done by the Housing Works Agency? But in addition to that, are we also talking about when the electricians, the one in Wellington Front, also have to provide new installations to flats? Will that come under this category or, will that be something different?

145 Hon. C A Bruzon: I will find out for him. I do not know the answer to that, Mr Speaker. I do not want to guess. What you want to know – if I may just make sure that I have understood the question – is whether the electrical work done by the official electrical department forms part of this or not. Is that what you want to know?

150 Hon. J J Netto: At the end of the day, Mr Speaker, all I want to know is... just to look at the definition of whatever is meant by 'technical decision'. What does it encompass? Does it mean normal refurbishment work in the flat, does it mean electrical, and perhaps I am even missing some other type of work which is not to do with the other column, which is to do with cleaning. So all I am trying to do is to understand what comes under that particular category.

155 Hon. C A Bruzon: I imagine, Mr Speaker, that it means exactly what the hon. Gentleman is implying: general jobs linked with the refurbishment of the flat, anything to do with the internal equipping of the flat to make sure that it is ready for allocation.

Unsafe dwelling report
Numbers requiring urgent decanting

Clerk: Question 639, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 532/2012, how many reports of unsafe dwellings are currently pending and how many of these require urgent decanting due to Health and Safety considerations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, further to my answer to Question No. 532/2012, I can confirm that there are no reports of unsafe dwellings currently pending which require decanting due to Health and Safety considerations.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, my question was not how many were due to Health and Safety; it said how many unsafe dwellings are currently pending and, if there are any pending, are there any that fall then into the category that require urgent decanting due to Health and Safety.

The Hon. Minister might have to end up giving me the same answer, but for the sake of clarity, the question was how many reports of unsafe dwellings. If it is zero, then subsequently the next part is also zero, but there could be two, and then, of those two, have any of those required urgent decanting due to Health and Safety?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will try, next time, to give him the answer in two parts. I have understood it to mean whether there are any pending, and there are none.

Government rental flats
Breakdown of jobs pending or incomplete

Clerk: Question 640, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 533/2012, how many jobs are currently listed as pending/incomplete in Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of internal and external repairs, as well as stating the general nature of the works and by whom these are being carried out, broken down into categories of both pre-war and post-war housing stocks?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

I can read out at least the general answer that: since my answer to Question 533, there are 619 internal jobs currently listed as pending; and since my answer to Question 533, there are 3,491 external jobs currently listed as pending.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 640

I submit a reply to this question primarily broken down by (a) internal jobs and (b) external jobs, as follows:

- (a) Since my answer to Question No. 533, there are 619 internal jobs currently listed as pending within the Housing Works Agency. These jobs are categorised as follows:-

Work Category – Internal Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bath for shower conversion	1	18	19
Bathroom Unit replacement	3	37	40
Carpentry repairs	21	112	133
Cleaning of flat	7	3	10
Drains, rodding and cleaning	1	5	6
Emergency repairs	1	16	17
Masonry repairs	14	54	68
O/T Repairs/refurbishments	0	22	22
Painting	6	81	87
Plumbing repairs	14	157	171
Refurbishment – empty flats	9	37	46
TOTAL	77	542	619

- (b) Since my answer to Question No. 533, there are 3491 external jobs currently listed as pending to be carried out by external works contractors. External jobs vary in nature ranging from repairs to building fabric, to waterproofing/roofing. It is impossible to deliver a detailed categorisation of all 3491 jobs. The following condensed categorisation applies:

Work Category – External Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
External Building Contractors	564	2043	2607
Windows Replacement Contractors	101	783	884
TOTAL	665	2826	3491

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Minister guide me a bit through this schedule? I have got the figures here, but the part saying... The general nature of the works is shown in the first part, for example, the bath or shower conversion and so on, but then I asked by whom these were being carried out. Is that contained in the schedule or does he have the answer in addition to this?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I think the answer will be in another question, Mr Speaker, but any internal jobs, of course, are carried out by the Housing Works Agency staff themselves and/or small companies that are called in to help out. External jobs, of course, are organised by the Housing Technical Staff based at the City Hall.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

So, as a follow-up of that, if internal jobs are either handled by the Agency or contracted out, I am missing details of who are the contractors who are being allocated these tasks.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I think the hon. Member will see that the contractors and the small businesses that do the works are part of our other answers to questions that he has asked.

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, Mr Speaker, I accept that for now. Yes.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: – it is just that I am looking at the figures being provided by the Hon. Minister and I notice that, in terms of OT repairs/refurbishment works, there is a total outstanding in that column of 22, and I am just thinking aloud, given that in Question 637 the hon. Member said that there was a total of 43 OT works outstanding, is there an explanation for the difference of those two figures?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I have not got an exact answer for that. I am just going to suggest that the figures given here refer to certain types of work. Maybe the others refer to bath-to-shower conversion, but I am not 100% sure.

What I could do, if the hon. Member wants the exact explanation, is I could put the question to my technical staff and answer it in another question next time, maybe, (Interjection) or you write to me in my... (Interjection) Sí.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker. I suppose that if the hon. Member can write to me with an explanation as to why, it would probably be much simpler and easier to see – there must be a reason for it, obviously – why we have two different figures and what is the logic behind it.

I would be grateful for that, Mr Speaker.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I think I may be beginning to have an answer for the hon. Gentleman. The general question asked earlier this morning refers to outstanding works or works reported to the occupational therapist as requiring attention. This refers to the actual physical jobs that are being done this month. (Hon. J J Netto: Oh?) That is what I suspect, but I will make 100% sure and come back to him.

Hon. D A Feetham: That cannot be right, can it, because it says... The question was:

‘Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 533/2012, how many jobs are currently listed as pending/incomplete...’

But anyway, if you could write to the Hon. Mr Netto and also write to the Hon. Mr Reyes in relation to all the other queries that we have raised, we would appreciate it.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will be glad to do that, Mr Speaker.

Government rental flats
Numbers empty and available for reallocation

Clerk: Question 641, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many flats have become empty and therefore available for reallocation since his answer to Question No. 534/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Since the answer given to Question No. 534/2012, 14 flats have become empty and therefore are available for reallocation.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 642

Government rental flats
Repairs completed

Clerk: Question 643, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants, since his answer to Question No. 536/2012, have had their pending repairs completed in respect of Government rental flats, giving a 305 breakdown of how many were internal and external repairs and broken down into categories of both pre-war and post-war housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

310 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

There have, in fact, been a total of 423 tenants who had 539 jobs completed. The details are on the schedule.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 643

Since the answer given to Question No.536 of 2012, there have been a total of 423 tenants that had 539 jobs completed, as follows:

INTERNAL

	Completed jobs	No. of tenants
Pre-War	38	29
Post-War	272	209
TOTAL	310	238

EXTERNAL

	Completed jobs	No. of tenants

Government rental properties
Number of tenants requiring works

320

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer to Question No. 537/2012, how many tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, broken down into categories of both pre-war and post-war housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

325

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, further to my answer to Question No. 537/2012, 1,570 tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, of which 251 reside in pre-war flats and 1,319 reside in post-war flats.

330

Breakdown of jobs completed

335

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs, since his answer to Question No. 538/2012, have been completed in respect of Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of how many were internal and external repairs and the nature of works undertaken broken down into categories of both pre-war and post-war housing stocks?

340

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

The general answer is that a total of 573 jobs have been completed in respect of Government rental flats.

Out of this total, 344 jobs were internal jobs completed by the Housing Works Agency and 229 were external jobs completed by the Ministry for Housing. The details are on the schedule that is being handed to them now.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 645

A total of 573 jobs have been completed in respect of Government rental flats.

Out of this total, 344 jobs were internal jobs completed by the Housing Works Agency and 229 were external jobs completed by the Ministry for Housing. These are further broken down as follows:

Work category – Internal repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bath for shower conversions	-	2	2
Bathroom unit replacement	-	4	4
Carpentry repairs	3	24	27
Cleaning of flat	3	4	7
Drains, rodding and cleaning	1	7	8
Emergency repairs	23	134	157
Masonry repair	-	10	10
Other – asbestos removal	1	1	2
Painting	-	10	10
Plumbing repairs	13	103	116
Refurbishment – empty flat	-	1	1
TOTAL	44	300	344

Work category – External repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
General	76	23	99
Letterboxes	33	90	123
TOTAL	109	120	229

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, for the sake of my own clarity, the 344 jobs that were carried out by the Housing Works Agency, it obviously follows, were carried out by the employees of the Agency themselves. However, the external jobs that were completed by the Ministry for Housing – who actually carried out those works? Is it contractors that the Ministry for Housing took on, or who undertook the task?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Absolutely right, yes, Mr Speaker, the external jobs that are organised by the staff of the City Hall are big external jobs. The Housing Works Agency, which is responsible for carrying out internal refurbishment and cleaning of flats, sometimes require assistance, and for this purpose they employ small companies – not the kind of company that would be contracted to carry out much larger external works.

Hon. E J Reyes: Would the Hon. Minister have any details of which were the companies involved?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I think the answer to that question will appear later on in the Order Paper.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I try and expand, if I can, a little bit what the Hon. Minister is saying in terms of the big jobs – I think I am using his own words, ‘big jobs’ – that are outsourced from the City Hall, as opposed to the Housing Works Agency? Could he elaborate, perhaps, what he means by the big jobs?

Is he actually saying ‘big jobs’ in the sense that it is a certain threshold as far as cost is concerned, beyond which they would go to the private contractors; or is it that it is a specific type of work that may 375 go to contractors; or is it perhaps that some works, regardless of the cost or the type, may have gone to the Housing Works Agency for a considerable period of time, upon which then the Housing Department in the City Hall may decide there have been people waiting for too long and it is about time that the work gets done?

Is there a definition of what we mean by 'big jobs'?

380 Hon. C A Bruzon: I think I can explain it quite simply by saying that external jobs that I have described as 'big jobs' entail scaffolding, fixing of roofs, that kind of thing. Smaller internal jobs are inside the house and are done by the Housing Works Agency, sometimes with the assistance of small companies.

385 Hon. J J Netto: I understand that, Mr Speaker, but what I am trying to establish is whether... Is it just roofs, the only thing that goes outsourced, or is it that there are other types of works which may have a cost value beyond which there is a line and you say, 'Well, look, this is just too big and therefore whatever is beyond x or y then goes...' That is what I am trying to...

390 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I think I understand what the hon. Gentleman is trying to get at. As far as I know, there is no cost value or red line, which if you cross it has to go to a big company. It is just that the nature of the work required, if it is outside the building, often enough requires scaffolding. If it is on the roof, you require certain paraphernalia to make it safe.

395 The internal jobs – things like plastering, plumbing – are done inside the flat by the small companies or by the Housing Works Agency staff themselves.

Hon. J J Netto: When – to use your own phrase – a 'big job' goes out, and to just follow the example that you gave us, in terms of being a roof perhaps, just to follow the example, does the Housing Department, before engaging a particular company...? Is it just the same company, JBS, or is it perhaps a number of companies, and before engaging whatever company it is, they cross-reference the details of that company, perhaps with Employment, Income Tax, Social Insurance, to ascertain that they are a bona fide company as far as being compliant with Income Tax and the Social Insurance Department?

405 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the answer to the first part of the question will be clear later on on the Order Paper, because there are names of companies... (Interjection) Companies are mentioned later on.

Hon. J J Netto: Okay.

410 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I still do not understand what he means by 'big jobs' because he seems to be referring to, or using as a criteria for big jobs, scaffolding, but of course you can hire a scaffolding company to just simply raise scaffolds, and then the people from within the relevant Government Department or Agency can do the painting, for example, or remove and replace windows.

415 Does he not have any criteria as to what amounts to a 'big job' – which are his words – therefore providing us with information as to the criteria used for the outsourcing of work?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I would like to move away from my definition – 'big job' – if I may. I think a simpler way of understanding this is to take the external works: works that are external to the building, whether it is roof or outside walls are often enough done by companies contracted to do the work by the technical staff in the City Hall.

420 Jobs inside the flat are done by the Housing Works Agency staff or by the smaller companies that come to the help of Government, so that we can speed up the process and make flats available for our tenants, for our applicants.

425 Hon. D A Feetham: So, is he then saying – so that I can get this right – that, effectively, the distinction is between external work and internal work? External work is outsourced; internal works are done internally.

430 But you will appreciate that that distinction is also problematical because not every external job is effectively a large job that is beyond the expertise or the manpower of the relevant Government Department or Agency. So I do not think, with respect to the Hon. Minister, that that can be right. But if that is the answer, that is the answer.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I think the hon. Member makes a valid point.

We are, in fact, trying to find the right formula, the right definitions. In general, I think, and for the future, what we would like to achieve is to have a body of workers within the Housing 435 Department/Housing Works Agency who can tackle more difficult jobs, heavier jobs – ‘big jobs’, if I may go back to my previous phrase – that cannot be done by the Housing Works Agency staff.

I have not got a clear-cut definition, Mr Speaker, but the hon. Member is right in saying that if we talk about just external and internal jobs... and in a sense we are trying to move away from that, even though I have just made an attempt to give an explanation by using that phraseology. We are trying to establish a way of carrying things out so that the Housing Works Agency staff do the kind of works that are within their capability to do, and if they cannot, then we contract other companies to do the work.

445 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, so effectively the answer, then, is really that there is an assessment made by the technicians within the relevant Government Department or the Agency as to whether they have the expertise and the manpower, amongst other things, to conduct the job. If the judgement is that they do not, then it goes externally. If they do, whether it is external or internal works, they undertake the work. But the judgement is exercised by the technicians or the technical people within the Department or Agency – is that the case?

450 Hon. C A Bruzon: I believe that is correct, Mr Speaker, yes.

Housing Ministry
Number of jobs contracted out

475 Clerk: Question 647, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs have been contracted out, stating the date, type of work, estimated cost and to which companies, by the Housing Ministry, since the answer given to Question No. 540/2012 and broken down into categories of both pre-war and post-war housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 647

Since the answer given to Question No. 540 of 2012, the Housing Ministry has contracted 8 jobs as follows:-

485 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. Minister, is this the schedule that is supposed to contain the information that I asked for before – which were the companies involved?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Partly, yes, but I think there is more to come, Mr Speaker.

490

Hon. E J Reyes: If there is more to come, I will wait, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 648.

495 Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Just a second, I just want to cross-reference something with the [inaudible].

Mr Speaker, just by looking at the type of work category, it seems to be asbestos removal in the main, with a connection by the same company on duct panel repairs, and even looking at the estimated cost... Admittedly, this is since the previous question was asked in Parliament. By definition it does not look like we are talking about big money here, mainly small money.

What was the trigger point, perhaps, of engaging this particular company? Is it because the expertise was not available in-house in the Housing Works Agency, or was it some other trigger point for outsourcing this particular type of work?

505

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I have done my best to give the statistical answer, as requested. I am just not sure, in connection with all the details that my technical staff discuss or how they arrive at a decision. But this is the answer to the question as requested, and any details beyond this, I will need notice, Mr Speaker.

510

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, we have had a number of questions and we agreed... I was going to say we agreed on an answer. After giving various answers, the answer that he eventually gave was that the decision as to whether it goes externally or internally is to do with the fact of whether the technical people, given the resources, given the manpower within the Agency or the Department, can actually perform that work.

The hon. Gentleman has now asked how many works have been contracted outside, and you have provided a list. I quite understand that asbestos removal... and there are a couple of asbestos-removal references there, despite the fact that the amounts, the value is low... £290 and £470, they are low values, but those are specialist jobs. I quite understand that they go outside.

But then you have duct panel repairs, plumbing repairs and they are all £450, £470, £655. So, in the light of that, does he not accept that there must be more to how the decision is taken, as to whether to perform the work internally or contract it externally, in the answer that he has given me a number of questions earlier?

All we are trying to do, at the end of the day, is get to the bottom of Government policy, or Departmental policy, in relation to the criteria that are used for either undertaking the work internally or externally. But of course the answer that he gave me earlier with this does not really lie easily. There may be an explanation, but we are asking for the explanation from the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the reality is that when jobs are to be sorted out or addressed, the technical staff meet. They discuss the issues and then they decide, 'Right, this particular job is beyond the scope of the resident staff at the Housing Works Agency, so let's get a specialist company to do the work. This other job is of such a nature that it requires scaffolding, it requires roof repairs, so let's contract a company to do this kind of work.'

I really have not got any more specific information to offer the hon. Gentlemen opposite. If they want more specific answers, I would request that they address the issues more specifically.

Hon. D A Feetham: With all due respect, the issues are being dealt with specifically and it appears that the hon. ... I do not want to be ungenerous to the hon. Gentleman, but if I were to be ungenerous I would say that the hon. Gentleman was not mastering his brief in the way that he should master his brief. But I do not want to get down that road. At the end of the day, what we want to do is to get to the bottom of what is Government policy.

Could the hon. Gentleman write to my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, and by reference to these jobs just inform Mr Reyes why the decision was taken to actually subcontract the work? From that, we will probably be able to see how effectively the policy has worked, in terms of the decision as to whether to contract out, why the work was contracted out.

At the end of the day, you talk about external works – these are, by value, very minor works indeed. All of them – except a work for external repairs of £6,000 – are below £870 and most of them are, in fact, below £500. So, if you could do that, then from the answer that you have given and also from how exactly the decision was taken in relation to this, we will be able to formulate a view.

It may well be that, for example, at the time that these works were pending or they needed to be undertaken, you did not have anybody within the Agency or within the relevant Department to undertake this work. Therefore, the decision, because it was urgent, was taken to contract it out. That may be the reason, but at the end of the day, we are trying to get to the bottom of what Government policy is in terms of the mechanisms of how the decision is taken to contract out to a private company.

Hon. C A Bruzon: One thing is... You talk about Government policy, Mr Speaker. The Government policy, of course, is clear: we have to help out the people on the waiting list by repairing and preparing these flats as quickly and as efficiently as possible.

So, as the hon. Member himself has hinted, if we discover, given a particular time of the month or given a particular job request that has to be done is beyond our competence, either because of manpower or because of the skill, then we ask outside companies to do the work. It is as simple as that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Will he write to my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, explaining on what basis the decision was taken – and there are not many, there are only eight – to contract out?

If the hon. Gentleman wants us to ask the question on notice for September, we are quite prepared to do it, but of course he could obviate that by just simply writing to Mr Reyes and providing him with the answer.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, if I may, I think the position normally in the House has been, or the practice is, that Members ask a question, my hon. Friend has answered the question. If they want more information, they should either give notice of a new question at the next meeting of the House, or perhaps Mr Reyes could write to Mr Bruzon and seek clarification on whatever issue they want clarified. (Interjection)

That is what we used to be told when we were sitting on that side of the House, Mr Speaker.

575 Hon. D A Feetham: But with respect, you are asking me, or you are asking Mr Reyes, to write a letter asking what I am asking Mr Bruzon now to do.

I am asking Mr Bruzon, which is what you are asking Mr Reyes to do, to write to him and to say, 'Please could you tell me on what basis the decision has been taken in order to subcontract this work out to the private sector.' All I am saying is, let's obviate that: could you please write to Mr Reyes providing that answer?

If you want to make it as technical as either give notice of the question or write, of course we will have to do that, but I think that it is not a helpful intervention, with all due respect to the hon. Gentleman.

585 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has to understand that this House's practice – and the practice was established by them when they used to be in Government. The practice was either... I remember when asking questions, many times I have been told, 'Look, if you want the answer, write to me and I will give you the answer.' And, when you write, you will get the answer, so it is not that the answer is not going to be given or we are holding back information; the answer will be given when the hon. Member writes.

590 But the procedure and the standard practice in this House has always been that if you want information, you either ask a Question or you write to the Minister and the Minister will answer.

Mr Speaker: May I say...

595 Hon. D A Feetham: That is not the case, because I have, on a number of occasions, provided information myself, in writing, when a Member of the Opposition has asked me, 'Could you please provide me that information in writing?' and I have done so.

That is what I am asking the hon. Gentleman to do, to provide...

600 What you are saying, effectively, is 'Write, and then we will provide you with information.' Well, look, if that is the position that you take, it is the position that you take. We think it is thoroughly unhelpful.

605 Mr Speaker: May I assist in this? The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister is entirely right, in that over the last seven years or so that I have been around here, where a supplementary has gone to a stage where it calls for further investigation by the Minister, or further enquiry by the Minister within his Department with a view to getting answers, the Members on this side have usually invited the Opposition to write in with the question and that is the way the matter has progressed. The Deputy Chief Minister is entirely right on that.

610 Having said that... and the reason why I have no need to comment further on the practice is because that has been accepted by the Opposition, that is the end of the matter.

615 But since the Opposition now are querying whether there is a necessity for them to have to write in, I must confess, as a personal view, if a question that is raised by the Opposition is within the ambit of the supplementaries, it does seem rather pointless for the Opposition to have to write in again to obtain information. I am conscious of the fact that the Opposition have very limited resources, in terms of secretarial help and things like that and to have to write in is a little bit of a burden. It is probably easier for either the Minister to make a note or for the officials listening in on this debate or perusing Hansard to be able to ascertain what is required and to provide the information.

620 That is the way I see the scenario, but having said that, again it is not for me – I cannot impose on the Government on this! I am just setting out my view of the landscape.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, our view really is based on past practice, as I said at the beginning of my intervention.

625 Mr Speaker: I accept, and that is entirely what my understanding is.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The situation is the hon. Member has asked a question, he has got the answer to the question, he asked a supplementary, we do not have the information here, and the Minister is entitled to say, 'Well, look, write to me and I will give you the answer.'

630 Mr Speaker: But the Opposition is entitled to say, 'We are asking you a perfectly valid supplementary. If you have not got the answer here, we accept that, but why should I have to write in again?'

635 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Because that is a practice which they established.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I do not accept that the practice that was established was that every time you asked a valid supplementary and we did not have the answer, that on top of it we have asked you to write in order to –

640 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): On a Point of Order, Mr Speaker, every time, every single time – and Hansard will reflect this – every single time I asked supplementaries of Mrs Del Agua and she did not have the information, she used to say, ‘If you write to me, I will give you the answer’ – every single time, and he can check that in Hansard – so that is incorrect.

645 Mr Speaker: That is my recollection of the practice in the past and that was acquiesced to by the Opposition of the day, but...
The hon. Member –

650 Hon. D A Feetham: I can tell you that, from my perspective, I have unilaterally written to the other side, providing the information, without anybody having to write to me. But, Mr Speaker, if at the end of the day, that is what they want us to do, that is what we will do. We just believe that it is not helpful.

655 May I also say this: that I think that we have been very generous and we have been very kind to the hon. Gentleman, Mr Bruzon, because during the course of this morning, virtually on every single question that has been asked and every single supplementary question, it has always been, ‘Well, I don’t have the answer here with me – can I go back and provide you with the answer?’ We have been very tolerant about it, quite frankly.

660 Now we get to a stage where we have said, ‘Well, look, could you write to us providing us with the answer?’ and we have been met with the response, ‘No – write to us and then we will write back.’
I do not think it is helpful, but that is what we will do.

665 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is also another important difference: that is that now they have the chance to ask questions practically every month. We used to have Question Time in March, and then maybe the next one would be in September. So, to be told to ask the question next time round meant to wait six months.

Now there is virtually a Question Time every month, so they do not even need to write; they can just table the question again next time.

670 A Member: But that is an unhelpful situation.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask another question? I do not know whether we have finished. (Interjection by Hon. C A Bruzon) Oh, sorry.

675 Hon. C A Bruzon: Just to round off, my position on this is that I want to be as generous as I possibly can be, but my hon. colleague is perfectly right – and so is the Speaker, of course – in what used to happen during the last few terms in office that I have been in Parliament.

The question that requires an answer is why was the decision taken to contract out. Correct.

680 The answer is the decision is taken to contract out when the nature of the job requires it, if it cannot be done by the employees of the Housing Works Agency, or if it requires special skills. So I think we are making a mountain out of a molehill, if I may say so.

685 I will talk to my technical people, so that I will never again be accused of not being as well informed as I should be. (Interjection) I think the hon. Member is being a little unfair in saying that in nearly every question that has been asked of me, I have been unable to give an answer. I think in most of the questions, I have given answers and I have been honest about everything, every inch of the way.

There are a number of technical issues, of course, that are beyond my competence to answer straight away, but I think on this particular one, we are honestly creating a mountain out of a molehill.

The gentleman asks, what is Government policy? Government policy is to repair these flats, which have been half abandoned by the previous Administration for years, (Banging on tables) flats that require to be refurbished as soon as possible, so that our 1,600 applicants can have homes as soon as possible.

690 Mr Speaker, this is what we are trying to do. If our people in the Housing Works Agency, who are doing their best – their damndest, in fact – to get these things fixed quickly... if it is beyond their competence and their ability, then we bring in outside help.

695 That is the policy, and the reason why we contract outside companies is because we need to for specific jobs, or in any given time. Mr Speaker, that is the answer.

Hon. J J Netto: May I ask another supplementary question, if I may? In fact, I was trying to do this in one or two questions before, and the hon. Gentleman said there is a question in the Order Paper.

In relation to the companies here which have undertaken work for the Housing Works Agency, does the Housing Department in the City Hall have a departmental policy that prior to outsourcing this particular work, or any type of work, by any particular company, they should be complying with Income Tax, Social Insurance and Employment prior to the work being undertaken by this company – or any other company, for that matter?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Most definitely, yes, Mr Speaker. We have to ensure that that is the case.

Hon. J J Netto: So he is giving me an assurance that all these companies are complying with Income Tax, Social Insurance and Employment – is that what he is saying?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I certainly hope it is not otherwise, but I will have to check to make sure that they are all complying.

Hon. J J Netto: I am not asking for him to check. All I am asking is whether there is a departmental policy, not by him – well, it will be by him, as instructed to his civil servants – that prior to putting this type of work, or any type of work, to a company out there in the private sector, before doing that or engaging those companies, they would cross-reference, if I could put it that way, with Income Tax Department, Social Insurance and Employment, to ensure that they are bona fide companies, inasmuch as being compliant with those three essential Departments?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, to answer the question of the hon. Gentleman, there is an approved contractors list that makes sure of exactly that, that the companies that do provide work to the Government –

Hon. J J Netto: No, Mr Speaker –

Hon. N F Costa: If I may be allowed to finish –

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. N F Costa: That the companies that do provide work to the Government are companies that comply with all employment, tax and Social Security laws.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not quite sure that the hon. Gentleman is correct on that. The approved list of contractors, what it does is it is approved in terms of the technical ability to perform certain types of work. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the question asked by the hon. Gentleman was whether the companies that provide work to the Government have complied with taxes, Social Security etc, and my answer is yes, Mr Speaker, there is a list that has been compiled by the Government that those companies that appear on the approved contractors list are those that have complied with all tax, all Social Security and all employment laws.

There is the answer.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, actually, he may be right in relation to that. I am not 100% – (Interjection) No, hang on a minute, please.

It is true that there is a list of approved contractors and they are subdivided in terms of value – contracts above £x million... I cannot remember exactly. I think it goes to £250,000, then it is £½ million, then £1 million, and £1 million and above, something like that. Government policy, when we were in Government, was that unless a contractor was effectively up to date in terms of its tax, Social Insurance contributions etc, they would not be allowed onto the approved contractors list.

I think that his question effectively amounts to this: are all these then from the approved contractors list which is maintained at No. 6 Convent Place, or are these from another list that may be maintained by his Department? Do they come from the approved contractors list?

I think you will find also, if the hon. Gentleman wants to go back to his technical people, there may well be an answer to our previous question. Most of these may well be scaffolding companies anyway, but of course – (Interjection) Yes, but that was... If they are scaffolding companies, you should know the answer and have just said, 'They are scaffolding companies – the Government has no scaffolds and that is why we contract it out'!

760 But there probably is a simple answer.

Mr Speaker: Well, it has taken a long time for everyone in this House to come to that conclusion, but in a recent previous meeting that was exactly what the answer was. They are scaffolding companies and the Government has no scaffolding internal resources and therefore that is why it was contracted out.

765 It has taken a long time to get there!

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, it was obvious last time around. In fact I noticed it and it was confirmed by the Minister for Employment, because they were obvious names to me that they were scaffolding companies.

770 Some of these are obviously scaffolding companies, some of them I do not recognise – Skybridge, I do not recognise the company. I do not know whether they are a scaffolding company. Skybridge has 50% of the work. It may well be that they are scaffolding companies, but it should be within the knowledge of the Minister.

775 Mr Speaker: I think we have really exhausted the subject, haven't we? Next question.

780 Co-ownership housing estates Meetings with Management Companies

Clerk: Question 648, the Hon. E J Reyes.

785 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state if he has, since his answer to Question No. 541/2012, held meetings with any Management Companies of co-ownership housing estates in order to address any new or ongoing concerns?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Member for Housing and the Elderly.

790 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, similar to the answer given last month, no member of any such Management Company of co-ownership housing estates have approached me for such a meeting.

795 Housing Agency employees Number of transfers, retirements and new recruits

800 Clerk: Question 649, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many employees have retired or been transferred from the Housing Agency, since his answer to Question No. 542/2012, and how many new employees have been engaged by the Agency since that date in accordance with the agreement reached between Government and the Unions?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, one employee has retired from the Housing Works Agency, since my answer to Question No. 542/2012, and none have transferred out or have been engaged by the Agency since my previous answer.

Hon. E J Reyes: Does the Hon. Minister have an indication when he will be engaging new employees into the Agency, so as to keep within the agreement reached with the Unions?

815 Hon. C A Bruzon: The Government will be announcing certain reforms in due course and we will in fact make clear to the hon. Members the position we take on staff, additions to the Housing Works Agency and Housing Department.

820 Hon. E J Reyes: With respect, Mr Speaker, that does not quite answer my question. There is an existing agreement, unless the Hon. Minister wants to confirm to me now that they have arranged with the Unions to cancel that agreement.

The agreement was that for every two employees moving out of the Agency, one would be employed. Last time around, I am grateful that the Minister for Employment came in and said, 'I will check the details of that agreement', so that gave me the impression they were going to take stock of how many new employees they had to take on.

The Hon. Minister is now confirming they have not taken anyone on and I am simply asking when does he intend to take someone else on? He now seems to be answering something else about a future announcement, but the agreement has not been kept with in the last seven months.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, quoting the hon. Gentleman, the agreement seems to say that if two leave, we employ one. Well, one has left, so we cannot employ half.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, what I was saying is, since the last Question Time one has left, but at the last Question Time – and I have it somewhere here in my briefcase – a number of people have left, so therefore that is pending employees. We can take a two-minute break whilst I look for the paper and give him the exact figure, which I can dig out from my file, but since they took office in December to now, there is something like round about 10 who have left.

Therefore, in keeping with that agreement, unless the agreement has now been cancelled, with both sides agreeing to it, x number of new employees should have been taken on. I have been told none have been taken on and I am simply asking when it is their intention to take it on, in keeping with the agreement?

Hon. C A Bruzon: My original general answer stands, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Reyes: So therefore, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister does not commit himself now at this particular stage to say that they are keeping to that agreement. (Interjection by Hon. C A Bruzon)

Can the Hon. Minister confirm to me whether it is their intention to keep or not to keep to the agreement currently in force with the Unions?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I think it is very clear that an announcement will be made in due course concerning the Housing Works Agency and certain changes within the Housing Department. I think it was mentioned in my Budget speech. I have given a general answer now. If the hon. Members are just a little bit patient, an announcement will be made.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no with respect, you have got a responsibility to answer questions about Government policy in Parliament, in this House. You cannot shirk that responsibility by saying that you are going to make an announcement outside.

Now the question is very simple: is it Government policy to stick by that agreement that was reached with the Union or is it not? It is a very simple yes or no!

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, we have the same responsibility to answer in this House as they had when they were on this side, and this is the answer they used to give when announcements were about to be made or were imminent. We were told 'an announcement is imminent, wait for the announcement'.

So really all we are doing is what they used to do.

Hon. D A Feetham: So much for the new dawn of transparency, accountability and more meetings of Parliament at which we do not get straight answers to straight questions!

So the position is this: the Deputy Chief Minister does not want to provide an answer to Members of the Opposition as to whether the Government is going to honour the agreement reached by the previous Administration with the Union or not. That is the position: you do not want to answer the question.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the position is that they adopted one standard when they were on this side of the House and they adopt a different one when they sit on that side of the House. They expect us to behave in a way which is not the way in which they used to behave and provide information which they did not used to provide.

The position is very simple. The hon. Member has said an announcement is going to be made. When the announcement is made, the answer will be given.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, we do not agree that that is the case! We answered the questions that we were asked. (Interjections and laughter) This is a very simple question – a very simple question – on something that is important, on something that the Government is accountable to the Opposition in this House about the agreement reached by the previous Administration in respect of the Housing Agency.

885 Now, you know what the answer is. You know what the answer is, unless of course what you are doing is you are making up Government policy on the hoof, as you go along, and you are still not clear what you are going to be doing in respect of that agreement.

Well, look, if you are not clear what you are going to be doing about that agreement, say so: 'We have not decided what we are going to be doing about that agreement and when we make a decision, we will make an announcement.' Now, that is a perfectly valid answer, because you are still deliberating internally what you are going to be doing.

890 But if the position is 'Yes, I know what the answer is. It is either yes or it is no, but I am not going to be providing you with the answer, despite the fact that there is an obligation to account to this House about Government policy', well, I am sorry, but I think that is absolutely abhorrent to the democratic principle and to Parliamentary procedure and to the supremacy of this Parliament.

895 At the end of the day, we may be all politicians and we may be accountable to people outside, to the public who ultimately decide whether we stay or we go every four years, but you are also accountable to this House, and those kinds of answers that you are giving, we do not accept that those are the answers on such fundamental issues that we gave them; but he must accept that that is, really ...it demeans this Parliament in giving those kind of answers.

900 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has just accepted in one contribution that their practice for the last 16 years was obviously abhorrent to democratic principles and to the supremacy of this Parliament, because what we are doing is what they used to do.

905 Now, it is not that we do not want to answer the question. I think my colleague, Mr Bruzon, has made it very clear that the question will be answered and that an announcement is going to be made. So when the announcement is made, when that time comes, the question will be answered, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order, order, order!

910 The question has been put – in fact I have allowed it to be put three times. An answer has been given, whether this side or anyone likes the answer or not, that is the answer. One cannot really repeat the same question over and over again, and the Hon. Daniel Feetham has made a point, without posing any question.

Can we have now a question, but of a different kind.

915 Hon. D A Feetham: It is related. Whether it is of a different kind or not I will allow you Mr Speaker to decide.

Can I ask whether the Government has actually made a decision or not? It is a different question. Has the Government made a decision or not in respect of that agreement?

920 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the decision will be reflected in the announcement.

925 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, as far as I understand it, what the Hon. Minister for Housing said is that in his announcement, he is going to be talking about changes. Now, 'changes' could mean almost anything, in the sense of changing the configuration of the workforce, whether they are going to be housed in one particular work shop, whether there are going to be different places.

So what I would like to know is, despite whatever changes to the methodology or work organisation by the Housing Works Agency, whether that will include, or will not include, or whether he knows that it would include, honouring the agreement with the Unions?

930 Mr Speaker: With respect that question has been asked and again we have had an answer provided. Whether we like the answer or not, the question has been asked, in substance, perhaps different words, and we have an answer.

935 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker with respect, we have had an answer and I accept that we have had an answer. We do not accept that we have had an answer in substance, or whether the answer is adequate.

Mr Speaker: So you really cannot go on repeating the question.

940 Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, I accept they have answered; they have effectively refused to answer the question with an answer. That is what they have done.

But, Mr Speaker, we accept obviously your ruling.

Mr Speaker: I hope the Members do appreciate, this is not a court of law where one is entitled to cross-examine until you beat a confession out of the witness. This is not a court of law.

945 You ask questions, you are given an answer, if you do not like the answer, you may be able to probe it a bit, but at the end of the day, an answer has been given to the question.

950 It is not for me to judge the quality of the answer; it is for the Members on this side to judge and the audience at large to judge the quality of the answer; it is not for me. My role over here is to ensure that an agenda progresses at a reasonable pace, without the repetition of same questions and a certain stage must be reached where we have to accept the answer for what it is and move on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, of course it is not a court of law. I know it is not a court of law and we have not conducted this as a court of law, neither have we cross-examined as if it were a court of law.

955 A Member: Not far from it!

Hon. D A Feetham: The answer, Mr Speaker, was 'We refuse to provide you with an answer in this House; we will give it to you outside the House.'

960 Hon. C A Bruzon: No, we have not said that!

Hon. D A Feetham: And with respect – (Interjections)

965 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! That was not the answer I heard.

Hon. D A Feetham: – that goes to a fundamental principle as to the supremacy of this Parliament.

A Member: That was not the answer.

970 Hon. D A Feetham: That is the answer. The answer is: 'We will make the announcement outside this House, not in this House' – ergo we are not going to give you the answer in this House; we will give you the answer outside.

975 Mr Speaker: Order, order!
First of all, the answer was not what I heard. That may be the hon. Member's interpretation of the answer, but I did not hear the Hon. Minister or anyone on the Government benches say 'We will make an announcement' and underline the word 'outside' the House.

980 An answer will be made. It could be made in this House in September or in November or God knows when, but there was no indication that an announcement would be made outside this House. I did not hear those words. So with respect, the premise is quite incorrect.

I think we must move on to the next question.

985 Housing Waiting Lists
Number of applicants and their requirements

Clerk: Question 650, the Hon. E J Reyes.

990 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 543/2012, how many applicants are presently on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists, giving a breakdown of their housing allocation requirements?

995 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

1000 I am happy to state in general, for the benefit of those listening and those present in this Chamber, that there are 1,658 applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists. The Housing Waiting List proper has a total of 1,041 applicants. On the Pre-list, we have 617 applicants.

Housing Waiting Lists
Number of applicants allocated flats

1005 Clerk: Question 651 The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists have, since his answer to Question No. 544/2012, been allocated a flat, giving a breakdown of the size of home?

1010 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1015 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested – though I think in this case a schedule is hardly necessary, because I am going to read out the answer, but I will obviously provide the Members with the schedule.

The total is that there are 16 applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists. They have been allocated a flat and the breakdown of the size of home is as follows: bedsits, there are two; 2RKBs, two; 3RKBs, 10; and 4RKBs, two; giving us a total of 16.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 651

Sixteen applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists have been allocated a flat. The breakdown of the size of home is as follows:

1RKB	2
2RKB	2
3RKB	10
4RKB	2
5RKB	-
6RKB	-

1020 Housing Waiting Lists
Number of applicants removed due to purchasing homes

Clerk: Question 652, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1025 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants from the Government's Housing Waiting Lists have, since his answer given to Question No. 545/2012, been removed from the waiting lists due to purchasing their own homes?

1030 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, one applicant has been removed from the Waiting List due to the purchase of their own home.

1035 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, the figure one: is that up to date including...? There was an announcement earlier on this week from Government saying the houses that had been sold and so on. Are the successful tenderers for those houses included in this figure or are those figures still to come?

1040 Hon. C A Bruzon: It may well be that the hon. Member is referring to houses that went out to tender and they would not feature here.

Hon. E J Reyes: They wouldn't? (Hon. C A Bruzon: No.) So where would they feature, Mr Speaker?

1045 Hon. C A Bruzon: We are talking about one applicant who has bought his own house as a sitting tenant. Houses that went out to tender are empty, and some derelict and that kind of scenario, if you know what I mean.

1050 Hon. E J Reyes: So, just for the sake of my own clarification, Mr Speaker, from those houses that went out to tender and so on, they were allocated to people out of which only one was really on the Waiting List and that this has been reduced by one. Is that correct?

1055 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): No, Mr Speaker, if I may assist the hon. Member: those houses that went out to tender – we have not completed the analysis – but some successful applicants may have been from the Housing Waiting Lists; others may have not. Some might be young people living with parents, for example. I know there were quite a few who were.

So the position is that the figure the hon. Member has given does not include or reflect those tender allocations.

1060 Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, but if a successful bidder is allocated a house, the minute he is allocated that house and the purchase exists and starts to kick in, he then automatically is removed from the Housing Waiting List and so far the figure introduced is only one.

1065 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: This is probably because, although the tenders have been allocated, they have not been completed yet, so this is probably going to take a month or a couple of months, while they sort out the finance and the mortgages and all the rest of it.

Hon. E J Reyes: Then, just for my own clarification: so I am correct in saying that in future figures, in future statistics, as and when the completion takes place, it will be reflected then.

1070

Housing applicants survey Numbers interested in purchasing/renting homes

1075 Clerk: Question 653, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1080 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of the responses received in respect of his Ministry's recent survey among housing applicants which sought information of how many were interested in purchasing and/or renting their future homes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1085 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, a total of 1,639 letters were sent and 956 replies were received.

The Government considers that the data collected would have commercial implications and should not be put in the public domain at this stage. I am, however, prepared to give the information to the hon. Gentleman on a strictly confidential basis.

1090 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, yes, and within our cordial friendship, I would certainly meet with him and so on. May I simply ask Mr Speaker, just over 50% replied. Does the Hon. Minister feel perhaps a little disillusioned or is there some sort of explanation of why almost 40-odd% did not even reply to that?

1095 Hon. C A Bruzon: Not really, Mr Speaker, and I do not have an explanation because I am ‘incompetent’ – even though he is not implying it, but the Hon. Daniel Feetham might imply that later! I honestly...

Hon. D A Feetham: Point of order, Mr Speaker.
I have not at any stage in these proceedings implied that he is incompetent. What I have implied, and I stand by it, and it is not the first time that he has done it in this House, is that he has not mastered his brief – that he has not come to this House prepared to answer our questions. There is a distinction between the two.

The hon. Gentleman is a perfectly competent man, as long as he prepares. Today he has not prepared, he has not done his homework. That is the point.

1105 Hon. C A Bruzon: I acknowledge that he did not use the word ‘incompetent’ and I withdraw that, Mr Speaker. I was trying to make a light-hearted comment which... that is what it was.

Right, I have almost forgotten the question, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

1110 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I was asking the Hon. Minister if he did have a bit of a disillusion, in that just over 50% really replied. Perhaps he was aware of some senior official in his Ministry who has said, ‘Look, we have not had as many replies as over 90%, because of...’ – I do not know, some particular factor.

1115 Sometimes – if I may hint at something and perhaps the Hon. Minister may wish to confirm – I believe that the questionnaire told people, ‘Look, we are just seeking an opinion; it does not bind you because you now tick a particular preference box – it does not bind you to something.’ I think sometimes people are a bit afraid that they have indicated to be inclined to buy, rather than to rent.

Does he and his senior officials have any particular views on this matter?

1120 Hon. C A Bruzon: I think some people are reluctant to answer these questionnaires. Maybe they do not feel they need to, but those who answered, answered because they wanted to express an interest either in buying or remaining Government tenant.

I really do not have an explanation, Mr Speaker.

1125 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, and I look forward to a ‘comfort break’ later on, so that as colleagues we may share and exchange personal views on the information provided.

Clerk: Question 6...

1130 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.
Have the numbers received caused Government, as a matter of policy, to perhaps re-assess any numbers, both in terms of rentals – and I am not asking you for numbers – and also home ownership? Has it caused a re-assessment of Government policy in that respect?

1135 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is a perfectly valid question and the answer of course is that is the whole point for sending out this enquiry so that Government would have a clearer idea as to how to plan its construction of rental and affordable housing for our people.

1140 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that, but as I understood it – and I cannot at this stage, off the top of my head, actually point to where this has been said – the Government was looking at building just over 1,000 home-ownership apartments. Now, you received back 956. Has it caused a re-assessment of the Government’s initial intentions as to how many home-ownership apartments for sale to build or how many rentals to build? Has it caused that kind of re-assessment from its initial policy and its initial intentions?

1145 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker, the intention, as clearly stated in our manifesto, is to provide every single applicant on the waiting list, as from 9th December, with a home within this term in office.

1150 The hon. Member is right in hinting that this will help us in assessing – or even re-assessing, yes – how many rentals and how many affordable homes to construct.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the answer therefore is that, at this stage, you are still re-assessing in the light of the data. That is the answer, isn't it?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Our position is clear. We want to ensure that we supply homes. As to exactly how many will be for rental and for affordable housing is an on-going process, Mr Speaker. Yes, you are right.

New Principal Housing Officer Appointment

Clerk: Question 654, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing indicate by when Government expects to appoint the new Principal Housing Officer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Principal Housing Officer is on secondment to the ETB.

The matter of his replacement or otherwise will be determined pending the outcome of a possible restructure of the Housing Ministry, which is presently being considered in consultation with all relevant representative bodies.

Hon. E J Reyes: And by 'representative bodies' obviously the Minister there means the Union, which I believe is GGCA, who has the negotiated rights for that particular post.

Hon. C A Bruzon: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: I think, if I understood the hon. Member correctly, he was saying a reform that will take place as far as the Housing Ministry was concerned, that would obviously include Unite because the majority of people work in the City Hall. The vast majority in fact are members of Unite, so obviously whatever reform takes place, Unite would be in discussion with the hon. Member.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes indeed, that is very true, yes, Mr Speaker.

1195

Hon. J J Netto: I do not know whether it is perhaps premature but can the Minister state whether the Government's intention is to unify, if I can call it that, both the Housing Ministry, which is the directorate, with the Housing Works Agency into one organisation? Is that what the Government's objective in this reform may be?

1200

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I think I said something to that effect in my Budget speech.

At the moment, we are concentrating on the technical staff within the Housing City Hall Department. We would like to bring about a merger, but if the hon. Member is patient an announcement will be made in due course on that.

1205

Several Members: Oh! (Laughter)

1210

Repairs/cleaning of empty homes for reallocation
Expenditure since December 2011

Clerk: Question 655, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1215 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of expenditure incurred since December 2011, stating to whom payments were made, in respect of repairs and/or cleaning contracts pertaining to making empty homes suitable for reallocation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1220 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 655

Since December 2011, the Housing Ministry has incurred a total cost of £326,749.57 in respect of the repairs and/or cleaning contracts pertaining to making empty homes suitable for reallocation. This cost is further broken down by contractor as follows:

Contractor	Amount Paid
A&K General Builders	£55,975.75
CIAP Construction	£56,045.82
Profield Contractors	£14,145.93
SFA Interiors	£51,188.06
On the Level	£74,158.30
Koala Construction	£42,656.44
AMCO	£29,039.27
D & J Removals	£1,170.00
Anything Goes	£2,370.00
GRAND TOTAL	£326,749.57

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for the information, Mr Speaker.

1225 Yes, it does shed some light, like the Hon. Minister was saying before. I do not know whether he does have it to hand or not – perhaps... The wording on my question was in respect of repairs and of cleaning. Would the Hon. Minister be able to distinguish from here which were cleaning, which I normally presume to be of a much smaller nature, and which were repairs? Does he by chance have the information to hand?

1230 Hon. C A Bruzon: I asked myself exactly that question in order to be properly briefed this time! The answer is, Mr Speaker, that some of these companies have done both, though the figures are incorporated in both.

If he would like more specific data, I certainly can try to give it to him. Maybe if he asks me next time, specifying the question in two parts, if you know what I mean.

1235 Hon. E J Reyes: So, what we can deduce is, it is possible that one of these particular companies was brought in to carry out a repair, since they had the labour force there, they were added on to the brief: 'Well, and on the way out, just clean with you', and so on; whereas looking at one of the companies here, if they are named as the name implies, they are removals, they were probably just used to remove, to empty stuff, to throw away old broken down furniture, as opposed to construction repairs.

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

1245 Eastern Beach enclosure for bar/restaurant
Permissions sought

Clerk: Question 591, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1250 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide this House with details of permissions sought by the relevant entities/persons in respect of the enclosure of part of the beach at the southern end of Eastern Beach for the apparent exclusive and commercial use of the area by a bar/restaurant at that location?

1255 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes, a concession has been granted this year to Latino's on the Beach, at Eastern Beach.

1260 The concession is for the hire of beach umbrellas and sun beds within a designated area. This year the concession includes a wooden decked area.

The concession agreement allows the concessionaire to screen off the designated area with materials that meet with the Gibraltar Tourist Board's prior approval. The agreement includes a provision for the use of an extended area of the beach and the sectioning off of this for the purposes of organising one-off events.

1265 The proposal for any such one-off event has to be submitted in the form of an operational plan, which is subject then to approval by the Gibraltar Tourist Board and the Royal Gibraltar Police. The operational plan must include details of the extended area required for the particular event.

1270 The beach concession fee of £25 per week is payable to the Government for the duration of the official bathing season, which starts the second Saturday in June and finishes immediately after National Day.

This year all concessionaires were given the opportunity not only to extend their designated hours but also to extend their concession period, thus being able to request to be operational from 21st April to 30th September.

1275 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer and for the details in relation to the arrangement.

1280 I would ask, in relation to other concessionaires at the beach and thinking forward perhaps a little – given that a precedent has been established (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) by the provision of this concession to provide tumbonas for hire at the beach – whether there is a Government policy moving forward in respect of any future applications that may be received by other operators not currently engaged in that activity for the enclosure or the sectioning off of areas or of other areas of that beach or others for the provision of one of the loungers for hire?

1285 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, in the first place, simply to clarify that the concession in respect of the sunbeds and the beach umbrellas is simply a continuation of the policy of the previous Administration. That was there before we came into office and we think it is a good idea and we have continued that.

1290 But it does allow me the opportunity to explain to this House, as the Hon. Mr Feetham will undoubtedly be delighted that I do so, the policy of this Government in respect of this type of concession. To repeat, for the first time, we invited concessionaires to extend not only the designated hours but also their concessionary period, thereby allowing those concessionaires who want to start in April, during Easter, when the sun is already out and people do go to the beach, to open before, and allowing them as well to do more business during that time. It is also the policy of the Government to encourage concessionaires on the beach to plan these one-off events during the summer.

1295 One of the complaints, one of the representations that we received, primarily from young people, is that during summer, they all head off to Spain to enjoy concerts and this type of event and of course, it makes sense to us that instead of our young people going to Spain, that we should reverse that trend and have young people from Spain coming to us and spending money in Gibraltar. This hopefully will mean that, eventually, when one of the events are planned with a bit more time... This was only introduced this year, so this particular concessionaire was not able to obtain the calibre of DJ that they wanted for these particular events, although I understand that they do have a good ilk of people coming over. Hopefully, depending on the calibre of the talent that they bring over, it will encourage people from the hinterland to come to Gibraltar, enjoy our facilities here and stay in our hotels.

1305 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am extremely grateful to the Hon. Minister for providing us with that information on policy in this House.

1310 However, just by way of a little bit of further clarification, you refer to concessionaires, and I do recognise that it was given in the original answer, but I just wanted to clarify: it was offered to existing concessionaires or it was open to all those interested in becoming concessionaires, as well?

It is just that I did not quite get that from the answer.

1315 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, this was advertised, I believe it was in April, and I cannot remember whether, at that point, all the concessionaires were already... Because there are some concessionaires which are always there, which are Latino's and Chiringuito... in Western Beach, so there are two that are always there because they have their own licences for existing... But then there are other concessionaires that put bids in for the other end of Eastern Beach. There were two or three. Of course, the GTB had to choose one, but all concessionaires were given the opportunity, obviously, as from the point that they started to be able to extend their hours.

1320 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, I am grateful. I think the Hon. Minister, if I am not mistaken, is referring to the new kiosk at the northern end –

Hon. N F Costa: That is right.

1325 Hon. S M Figueras: – of the beach.

However just one final point of clarification that I would be grateful to the Minister for, when I was referring to future grants and concessions for the hiring of private tumbonas loungers. Does the Government have a policy in respect of... and if he has answered it then I apologise for revisiting it, it is just that I may not have captured it from it. Does the Government have a policy on limiting the number of concessions that may be given to different operators, to avoid a situation where perhaps there are too many operators on a beach operating the private hire of tumbonas to the exclusion or to the detriment of other beach users in our beaches today?

1335 Hon. N F Costa: No Mr Speaker, I take the point that the hon. Member is trying to make, which is why my policy, which has been ratified by the Cabinet, is that we take a decision on a case-by-case basis. At this point, the only concession that was planning these events, which have already been advertised in the local press was Latino's. Should there be future requests for this sort of concession, which is to have an enclosed area for one-off events, of course, that would be considered by the Gibraltar Tourist Board in the light of any other applications.

1340 In respect of the previous supplementary which the hon. Gentleman did ask me, I did have the specific information – extended hours were in fact requested by Latino's, Sunrise kiosk at Eastern Beach, Parody Kiosk at Camp Bay and Chiringuito Matthew, which was the name I forgot, at Western Beach.

1345 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I hate to labour the point. It is just that the point I was actually getting to is not one that we have dealt with.

The point specifically I am referring to is where operators may request to have, for the duration of the period of the bathing season, an area allocated to them at the beach where they – not for one-off events, which certainly is something that would be dealt with on a case-by-case basis, as the Hon. Minister has already explained – but in relation to having an area of beach allocated to any number of operators, like the Latino's on the Beach already has and the other kiosks as well, whether there is a policy in relation to the bathing-season-long use of a specific area for the private hire of loungers.

1350 What I am getting at, Mr Speaker, and this may perhaps help in terms of clarification is that what I suspect beach users would not want to see would be the development of that particular activity to the extent that there are so many private lounging facilities that it actually inhibits their use or limits the amount of beach space available to the normal everyday beach user. That is the specific point I was getting to.

I wonder whether the Hon. Minister can help us in respect of policy in that regard.

1360 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, in reply to the question of the hon. Gentleman, the only other concession at Eastern Beach, for example is the kiosk that is close to Latino's. They knew that Latino's had this facility, this concession for beach umbrellas and they did not ask for that particular concession from us this year.

1365 As I said, in order that beach users have as much access to the beach as possible, but also in the light of wishing to encourage private operators to come to Gibraltar to set up what I hear is an excellent facility at Latino's and which has taken advantage of regularly, any application from any concessionaire which, as I say, this year has not being sought from the GTB, even though they already knew that it was possible, we will take it on a case-by-case basis.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

1370 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

The Hon. Minister has informed the House that apparently this is a regime which was in place under the previous Administration. Can he confirm to this House whether the designated area he has talked about is exactly the same, in terms of square meterage as was given in the previous concession?

1375 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, whereas I do know that in terms of the concession to hire beach umbrellas and sun beds is a continuation of the policy of the previous Administration, I am not entirely sure what the answer to the question is.

I do know that in respect of this particular year, there was a request for a certain area which was granted by the GTB to this particular concessionaire.

1380 My brief from my official says that the nature of the concession has always been the hire of beach umbrellas and sun beds and it adds – maybe this answers the question –

1385 ‘the number of these being irrelevant as long as the area to be used is kept in an aesthetically pleasing and functional manner subject to the GTB’s approval.’

So that has been the criteria employed by the GTB in past years as to the area that any particular concessionaire may be able to use for sun beds and beach umbrellas.

1390 Hon. D J Bossino: But does the Minister know whether the area is larger or smaller? The criteria may be that it is aesthetically pleasing and all the rest of it, and that is fine and presumably that it is a continuation of what was happening when we were in Government. (Hon. N F Costa: Yes) But what I wanted to establish is whether the designated area, using his words he was talking about earlier has in fact increased in size or has it reduced in size?

1395 From the political angle, what we are concerned about – certainly what I am concerned about – on this side of the House is that if a greater area is licensed to the private operator, that will necessarily result in less beach space for ordinary users outside of the area, who were previously outside the area should the area have increased in size from last year.

1400 Hon. N F Costa: Okay, Mr Speaker, once again reading from the brief prepared by my officials at the GTB, it says that the beach concession that has been granted to Latino’s every summer was amended in order to have the designated area extended in the past to a maximum of eight metres from the sea wall. It then adds that the distance has always been negotiable and changes from year to year depending on the concessionaire’s needs.

1405 Now, whether in this particular year, it is slightly larger or slightly smaller, I do not know. To answer the specific question, I do not know whether this year it is slightly larger or slightly smaller. It is not in my brief.

1410 Hon. S M Figueras: Just on one further point Mr Speaker and perhaps the Hon. Minister can clarify for us. I was under the impression, and it may be mistaken, that that particular concessionaire had not been granted this concession in the past, despite an application for it. That was my understanding, if that is not in fact the case then I am happy to be corrected.

Hon. N F Costa: What? What is the...?

1415 Hon. S M Figueras: That Latino’s on the Beach had not been granted this concession in the past, in respect of going beyond the sea wall on to the tumbonas and the beach umbrellas, and my understanding had been that, despite an application, they had been refused the concession.

If that is incorrect, then I am happy to be corrected.

1420 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, I can only answer the hon. Gentleman what I am advised by my officials, of course, when I asked the question to them. They did prepare, in all fairness to them, a very detailed brief and the first paragraph says to me that when Latino’s on the Beach was relocated to its current site, which is now the beginning of Eastern Beach, the beach concession that had been granted to them, it says ‘every summer’, was amended in order to have the designated area extended to a maximum of eight metres from the sea wall. But then it goes on, it says:

‘The distance has always been negotiable and changes from year to year depending on the concessionaire’s needs.’

1430 So from the answer given to me by my officials, who obviously do provide that continuity and consistency that we expect from Government, whoever sits on this side of the House, it does appear that the concession was granted and that even the distance was negotiable.

1435 Hon. S M Figueras: Could the Minister confirm the date when Latino’s on the Beach moved to its current location?

Hon. N F Costa: I do not know, Mr Speaker, I am sorry.

Clerk: Question –

1440 Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, he mentioned – I think he did – a wooden deck area. Is this a wooden deck area that is going to be constructed now and will it be a permanent structure or is it a removable structure?

1445 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, it is not a permanent structure.

Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively the position is that, after the summer presumably, then it will be removed or is it going to be erected for specific events only?

1450 Hon. N F Costa: No, no, it will be removed at the end of the summer, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: And do you have any measurements, in terms of the size of the wooden deck area?

1455 If you do not, it does not matter, Mr Speaker.

Hon. N F Costa: I do not have that specific measurement with me, Mr Speaker. I apologise.

1460 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has explained that the distance from the wall is negotiable. Just to summarise, can he confirm to this House that he does not have the information here now as to what distance has been negotiated with the private company, the licensee in this case?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, as I said in answer to a previous supplementary, the negotiations having been carried out by the Gibraltar Tourist Board. I do not have the specific answer to that question here.

1465 The only answer that I have is what I have read out in its entirety, which is the first paragraph provided to me by my officials.

1470 London Boat Show
Attendees

Clerk: Question 594, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1475 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details to this House of those who attended the London Boat Show in January of this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

1480 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the following Gibraltar House staff manned – or staffed, I should say – the Boat Show stand on a rota: Mr Peter Canessa; Mr Ian Leyde; Ms Tracy Poggio; Mr William Gomez; Ms Kaiane Aldorino; Mr Dan Lerner; Ms Sara McFadyen and Ms Edwina O'Mahony.

1490 Gibraltar Bus Company Limited
Eco-friendly buses

Clerk: Question 596, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1495 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide the House with the full specifications of the eco-friendly buses which are replacing the current fleet of the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

1500 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I announced in my Budget Speech just last week, what Government has issued is a pre-qualification document, in line with EU Public Procurement Procedures.

The full specifications are currently being drafted. The actual tender document, that will include the full set of specifications, will be made available to those economic operators who have been preselected as a result of this initial stage.

Hon. D J Bossino: This is an important initiative taken by the Government and that is why I am quizzing them.

Is the Minister able to, at this stage – from what I gather from his reply, I think this is still at its very early stages – clarify what technical assistance he is receiving as to the nature of the buses that ought to be purchased?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps, if I may first of all answer the part where he says it is at its very initial stage: it is not that it is at its initial stage. We obtained advice from, obviously, the Public Procurement Office, from the MOT examiners and from members of the Department of Transport. We have had an inter-Ministerial Committee driving this forward, which would therefore have had input from Dr. John Cortes, from his officials at the Environmental Agency. So there has been quite a large group of people having a direct input on the document that has been issued.

So it is not that it is at an early stage. In my view, the early stage would have been the working inter-Ministerial groups with officials that we had, to draw up the document. What we have now, and what has been issued, is a very detailed pre-qualification document and what that is, Mr Speaker – which I am sure the hon. Member knows, of course, because he was on the Transport Commission – it sets out the criteria by which private operators can submit expressions of interest to the Government and only those that comply with ‘the criteria set out herein’, which are of course the EU 2020 Objectives on Environment, that we do comply with our transport regulation laws in terms of width, weight and height... Those that successfully pass this initial threshold will be invited to – well, they would have to – give to the Government the vehicle that they propose that we purchase, so that we can test it on our roads.

In other words, the successful private operator would then be asked to provide the vehicle, we will test it on our roads, at no cost to the Government, so that before we go to the second stage of ordering the vehicle, we would have tested it and made sure that the vehicle... because of course, if it is fully electric, for instance, Mr Speaker, the worry is that it will not be able to negotiate the very steep hills in Gibraltar.

So it may be that we end up with a fleet of fully electric vehicles for those routes that go round the town area and can just be fully electric or we have a fleet of part hybrid vehicles and part electric vehicles, the hybrid of course being when you need the fuel to be able to navigate the steep hill.

Hon. D J Bossino: Is the Minister, at this stage, able to give me an indication as to when he thinks the whole process is likely to be concluded – in other words, when he thinks or he envisages that we will have the vehicles on our roads?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the submissions of applications had to be submitted to the Head of Procurement by no later than Friday, 17th August, so we will obviously have those submissions then.

I am told this morning that nine companies have requested the pre-qualification document so far, so obviously there has been an immediate expression of interest by private operators.

So once we do receive the submissions on the applications, it will be a question for the Procurement Office to go through the different criteria and then the successful pre-qualification tenderer will be able to bring the vehicle to Gibraltar. Maybe we are looking at three months from now.

But of course, we cannot be held to the exact timeframe. It will all depend on how quickly the Procurement Office can turn this around. But, it will be three months: to have the test vehicle, we estimate three months approximately from Friday, 17th August; but of course that is subject to the exigencies and the pressures on the Procurement Office in respect of all the other tender bids that they will have, in respect of all the projects that we have announced in the Budget.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I can well understand that, at this stage of the proceedings of process, the Minister may not be able to answer the supplementary which I asked, which is when he expects those vehicles will be on the roads; but that was my question and if the answer is he cannot answer it, at this stage, I would like it just for the record, that he addresses that issue.

I am grateful for the answer he has been able to have given the House, in any event.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has asked exactly what I asked of my officials as well. I said, ‘Well, once we go through the pre-qualification process etc., how long can the people of Gibraltar reasonably expect to have the new fleet starting to be replaced?’ The officials told me that, from beginning to end, we are looking at 12 calendar months. Again, I cannot be held to that timeframe at this point in time, but the best estimate the officials could give me would be 12 months from the 17th August, subject to the matters that I mentioned before, in my previous supplementary.

Gibraltar Airport taxi service
Lack of provision

1570

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House as to whether he is aware of a lack of provision of a proper taxi service at the Gibraltar Airport and if so, what measures he will implement in order to address this issue?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the provision of a taxi service at Gibraltar Airport today is exactly the same that we inherited from the hon. Members, when they were in Government and consequently something that they failed to address in nearly 16 years in office.

However, this Government is taking action by working with the Gibraltar Taxi Association and we are in the process of demarcating and placing effective signage in the area.

The incentive will address the common problems that are at present restricting taxi drivers from accessing the taxi rank within the airport terminal due to the fact that this area is frequently being used by both relatives who remain in their vehicles, waiting for their arriving family members, or coaches continuously picking up and dropping off passengers.

But the problem, Mr Speaker, as I mentioned before in my Budget Speech last week, in our view, is not the taxi drivers. It is principally traffic that causes the problem to access to the airport.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I will ignore the preamble to his answer.

The reason why I asked the question is because I have been, and certainly the Party has been, the subject of representations in relation to this issue. It has also been the subject of press comments very recently and given that we are now being given the opportunity to ask questions on a regular basis, and it is an issue which is current, I thought I would pose the question.

It is also, incidentally, a Government manifesto commitment in any event, to improve the service and I would urge the Minister to move the matter as fast as possible, in order to improve the services, especially because it does have an impact on visitors who come to our new airport terminal building and then there is this service which does not really reflect properly, or adequately, on Gibraltar plc as a whole.

1600

Can I urge him perhaps to himself, personally, get involved in this matter, if he has not done so already, and maybe set up a meeting with the Taxi Association to discuss other ways of trying to improve the service as soon as possible?

1605

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, the hon. Gentleman need not be in awe as to the preamble of my answer. The reason why I said what I said at the beginning of my answer is as a result to answer the question which he poses, which is whether I can advise whether I am aware of a lack of provision of a proper taxi service. Inherent in that question, therefore, is an implied criticism that we have done nothing about it. I was simply pointing out to the hon. Gentleman opposite that what we have inherited is what they gave to us after they had been in office for 16 years.

So he need not be in awe and a simple cursory reading of his own question will explain to him the reason for the preamble to my answer.

1610

Mr Speaker, as I already mentioned to the hon. Gentleman during the course of my Budget speech, which was as recently as last week, I mentioned that I had already met with the Gibraltar Taxi Association and that I meet with them regularly and that we are already, to use the hon. Gentleman's words, taking urgent action because we have, in fact, assisted the Gibraltar taxis in upgrading their taxi meter system, so that the taxis will have what is in effect a GPS system, so that when there is a call made, the GPS system will be able to allocate the taxi that is nearest to where the call is made.

1615

That is one of the measures we are assisting the Gibraltar Taxi Association, in order to be able to improve their service, and another thing which this Government is also doing, which the hon. Gentleman will know, as I said in my Budget speech, is the deployment of Transport Inspectors.

1620

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, there was not – just by way of clarification – any inherent criticism of the Government in the question; it was just a genuine desire to elicit the information from the Government, given that the Minister is now responsible in discharging his duties as the Minister for Transport, and also because I had received representations, as I said earlier, and also because it had been the subject of comments in the press. In fact, it was also featured in one of the editorials of our daily newspaper.

So, can I ask the Minister – if he has answered it, then he needs to forgive me, I may have missed it – but can I ask when he thinks that the GPS system will be up and running? But in fact one of the cause for complaints has been that, even when calls are made for the taxi service, there can be delays of between 45 minutes and up to an hour, so I would like an answer to that specific question and would be grateful.

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, I cannot comment on the estimated time the hon. Gentleman says that it takes for a taxi to be sent to pick up someone. My own personal experience of taxis, when I call from home, is that they take between five to ten minutes. I use the taxis regularly and frequently, and I have never had to wait more than ten minutes, ever. So it may be that if someone has to wait for 45 minutes, as he suggested, there may have been a traffic problem at the time. Gibraltar roads, unfortunately, as we all know, are quite prone for there to be no traffic to a blockade in very quick and short order.

To answer his supplementary as to when the GPS will be installed, I cannot give him an exact timeframe. I do know the Gibraltar Taxi Association is moving very quickly on this and are very keen to install it, but what I will do for the hon. Gentleman is I will ask the GTA and I will tell him the answer.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Fire prevention courses Arrangements for private companies

Clerk: Question 598, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in respect of the answer to Written Question 97/2012, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies explain what the arrangement is for private companies to receive from the City Fire Brigade basic fire prevention courses?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker. Private companies will contact the Fire Safety Department, requesting fire safety training. The City Fire Brigade Fire Safety Department will arrange an agreed date and deliver the basic fire safety course.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, do these private companies pay for the service and if so, how much do they pay?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I have not been given notice to this question and I have not specifically asked about payments. So again, I would not like to answer that question without the information.

But what I could do during the day is I could ask and during the course of the day, I will give you the answer.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, because under the word ‘arrangement’, I thought that implied, as part of the service, to include cost.

Mr Speaker, in the answer given to Written Question 97, the Waterbabies Nursery, named in the said schedule, is listed under ‘Education’ rather than as a private establishment. Is that because it now comes under the Department of Education? Could the Minister please clarify that?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is relevant to the question the hon. Lady has asked next, which is ‘What are private nurseries and why they are private nurseries, whether they are in Government premises, etc?’

So I could either wait... If the hon. Lady waits for the next question, I think we can include this question with the next question.

Private nurseries Listed as 'Government premises'

1685 Clerk: Question 599, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in respect of the answer to Written Question 99/2012, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies explain why the four private nurseries are included and listed as Government premises?

1690 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, three private nurseries were included because all private nurseries, although private, come under the Department of Education and Training.

1695 So in a way that answers the question you asked me before: whether Waterbabies is included and is it included under the Department of Education now? So all nurseries are listed in the Department of Education and considered part and parcel of the Department of Education and therefore, the Fire Brigade will do drills and will go to the private nurseries, even though they are private.

1700 And, Mr Speaker, may I just say that the fact we have said that it is three private nurseries was that in the original Question 99, the Written Question, there is a list of four nurseries and I have emphasised three, because one of them is a Government nursery, which is Varyl Begg Nursery.

1705 Air Crash Exercise, 29th May 2012
Results and lessons

1710 Clerk: Question 600, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies give us details of the results and tell us what lessons were learnt from the Air Crash Exercise on 29th May 2012?

1715 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, there are no 'results'. The 'lessons' are internal to each of the essential services and Government Departments involved. This data is not made public.

1720 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, did the Government Agencies not conduct a moratorium with the RGP and Ministry of Defence Agencies after the exercise?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it is not a question of doing a moratorium; it is probably a question of doing a post mortem.

1725 But so be it. The first thing that I asked after completing and being the Chairman of the C3 Committee, was that I wanted feedback and on the question of lessons learnt that I wanted a report after what is says there, that all the essential services and Government Departments involved will internally look at where improvements can be made.

1730 So I have asked for that, but again as the answer to the question states, these are data that are internal to Government.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister inform us of the feedback then, that has been given to him?

1735 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, at present, I gave a date as to when I wanted the feedback, which was the end of July. So I am asking for the feedback and the feedback will come as soon as all the Departments get together and discuss the issues.

1740 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Government intend to conduct another such exercise within the two-year recommended period?

Hon. S E Linares: We are looking at how many exercises we need to do and we are also looking at what other improvements we can make, even before the two years elapse.

1745 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware, as some reports will indicate, why it took an hour for the first casualty to leave the airfield?

1750 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I think it is important that we understand where we are going with this. This is an exercise that has been carried out on a number of occasions under the previous Administration and will be carried out under this Administration and whichever is the next Administration.

The detail of information like that is not information that we are going to get into debating across the floor of the House.

1755 I believe actually that it is necessary for there to be a Privy Council-style body in Gibraltar, where Members who are in the Opposition, Members who are in the Government, would be sharing information which is sensitive, like the information that the hon. Lady in our view is seeking now. But this is not information that we are going to get into across the floor of the House.

1760 She needs to understand the implications of information like that, either in terms of the public's view of the service that the essential services can provide, what the other issues that might arise in respect of the civil contingency may be and the information falling into the hands of people who may be observing us for reasons which are not positive like Opposition holding Government to account.

So if she wants further information about this and she wants to have conversations with my hon. Friend, look I am quite happy for that to go on, but for us to get into this sort of detail in the House is not, in my view, an area where it is prudent for us to go or where we should be going.

Trainee Media Officer post Advertising; successful candidate

1770 Clerk: Question 601, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1775 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies advise where and when the post of 'Trainee Media Officer' was advertised and who was successful in getting the three-year employment contract, due to start this month?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1780 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, whilst interviewing for the post of Civil Contingencies Departmental Press Officer, the Board were very impressed with the Civil Contingencies experience of one candidate and the Press Office experience of another.

1785 The Board therefore recommended to the Board of the GDC that both should be considered for employment, on the basis that one was close to retirement age and only engaged on a three-year contract and the other, a young local person who, with the necessary press experience, would then fill the substantive post permanently.

Both were offered a post.

Based on the said recommendation from the board, Jasmine Dunham, a Gibraltarian graduate was recruited as 'Deputy Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer', not 'Trainee Media Officer'.

1790 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then confirm if Jasmine Dunham will automatically then be taking up the post of Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer after three years?

1795 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the intention.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister then confirm that this empty post, after three years, when Mr Green's contract is up, will not be advertised?

1800 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I know it is totally alien to the other side, but this is what is called 'succession planning' – something that we have found when we have been elected has been so absent in the structure of the Public Service in Gibraltar, that we are having serious difficulty in relation to very main senior posts.

So what you do when you have serious succession planning, is that you prepare yourself for what is going to happen at the end of a contract.

1805 In this instance, the hon. Lady has been very vociferous in her criticism of the Government, because the contract has gone to somebody who is not local and who is on a pension – she has made very clear her criticism in that respect. I suppose she is in a difficult position now that we have clearly made 1810 arrangements for a succession plan where this post will go to a Gibraltarian who is not of retirement age, etc. We believe this is the right way to do things and she will be seeing this in many instances throughout the Public Service, where people will be applying for posts before those posts become vacant, so that they are in post, as designates or as deputies with people who are holding the substantive post, in order to take that post.

1815 This post in particular, Mr Speaker, she will know, given how many questions she has asked about the issue and how many press releases she has issued on the subject, is a new post and therefore the post and the post holder... The post is created, the post holder appointed and the succession planning starts with the appointment of a deputy, all from the beginning – something which we commend to the hon. Members should they ever, perish the thought, find themselves once again on this side of the House.

1820 Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1825 Hon. D A Feetham: So in that very long winded answer that he has given to the hon. Lady, (Interjection) the answer therefore to her question is that the post won't be advertised because you have got somebody who you have earmarked to take over that post at the end of the three years. That is the answer, is it not?

1830 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman cannot do is say in one breath that the Government does not give enough information and then when he gets the information, say that he does not like the answer because it is long winded.

The position, Mr Speaker, I have made clear in the context of the answer which I gave which I thought was succinct, clear and precise and he called long winded.

He can go back to Hansard and look at what I said.

1835 Clerk: Question –

1840 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, it is becoming a sort of habit and I do not know whether the Chief Minister is actually leading on this habit or whether he is allowing his Ministers to play their own role in this.

The hon. Lady has asked a perfectly legitimate question. Now he has given an answer which effectively is this long winded speech, critical of the previous Administration. That is politics. But what we are here to do is to ask questions about Government policy, and it still remains in the air as to whether, after three years this post will be advertised or whether it will go to the person concerned.

1845 Look, the answer may well be it is impossible for the Government to actually make the commitment at this stage that the post will not be advertised because you do not know whether this lady is going to be suitable for the job. That is a possible answer. But at least I would invite the Chief Minister to provide an answer to it. That may well be the answer and I suspect it probably is.

1850 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, look, what I am not here to do, and what Parliament is not about – and Question Time in particular – is about information being given which the hon. Members then say is too long winded, because they decide it is too long winded, and then to ask for a summary or ask for a yes or no answer.

1855 I am very confident that all the aspects of what the hon. Gentleman has raised were answered in the context of the first answers given by my hon. and learned friend, Mr Linares and by myself. Look, Mr Speaker, he can go back and look at Hansard: if he does not think that is the case, he can ask another question next time. But I am not going to give him answers in the format that he likes. I am not going to give him yes and no answers when he wants them. I will give yes and no answers when I believe they are appropriate.

1860 I believe that we have answered the question and we have provided the information which is what Question Time is about. If he does not like it Mr Speaker, that's politics – but I think that Hansard reflects exactly what the position is.

International Jazz Festival
Breakdown of expenditure

1865

Clerk: Question 602, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1870

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture provide a detailed breakdown of all expenditure incurred inclusive of staff costs in respect of the first Gibraltar International Jazz Festival?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker. I now hand over a schedule to the hon. Member opposite with details of the expenditure incurred in respect of the first International Jazz Festival up to and including 13th July 2012.

Mr Speaker, I would like to add that the hon. Member in his clip of GBC recently stated that the cost of this would have been £100,000 and that he did the GNDO Festival at half the price. The fact is that he will see in the schedule, it has come to only £66,000, the Jazz Festival and that the GNDO competition that he did went up to £99,470.

Schedule to Question No: 602/2012

Advertising costs	£ 12,009.40
Flights & accommodation	£ 6,360.13
Media rights	£ 590.31
Performer's fees	£ 16,553.75
Jazz workshops	£ 2,300.00
Stage, management & presenter's fees	£ 19,875.00
Piano tuning and hire	£ 2,069.49
Other - t-shirts, tours, transfers, meals, photography	£ 4,685.43
Staff costs/overtime	£ 2,173.75

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for the schedule, Mr Speaker.

Under the heading of 'Stage, management & presenter's fees', is it possible to work out from there how much the stage set-up and relevant costs were, as opposed to management and presenter's fees, which would tend to be more of a contract for human resources? Is it possible to have some sort of further breakdown of that £19,875?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker I do not have that with me; but yes, I am sure it is possible to give it to you, so if the hon. Member would wish to write to me or ask the question again, I will give it to you.

1890

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I do not want to be pedantic and I am grateful for the Speaker's comment before, but I think it is already implied in my question. I am more than willing to accept that the Hon. Minister does not have the information now, but as it has arisen out of the supplementary wanting further detail, can the Minister not take it upon himself that when he has a chance back in his office, he then provides me with information in a written manner?

1895

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, if he writes to me, I will give him all the information.

1900

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, but my notice was I wanted 'a detailed breakdown'. Mr Speaker, I have already given due notice of the question. I am accepting he may not have it at this moment in time, but are we going to go through posing a question again, which I think has already been legitimately posed as quantifying that I wanted a detailed breakdown and not just a general breakdown?

1905

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, this is a rather detailed breakdown and I remember sitting just exactly where the hon. Member was sitting and every time I wanted more detail, I had to write in. So, if the hon. Member wants to –

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, no, sorry to interrupt –

Hon. S E Linares: If he wants more detail – because it gives a rundown of all the costs, he now wants specifically on one item to give him more details – if he writes to me, I will give him the details.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I was trying to say I do not ever recall having told the Hon. Minister, when he sat on this side of the bench to write to me further. I recall having taken it upon myself to look into and provide him with further information.

1915 I do perhaps need, Mr Speaker's clarification: if I have asked for the detailed breakdown, is it incorrect for me to say that I want the details of the stage? For me, my interpretation is it is a construction or a hire of a physical asset, as opposed to management and presenter's fees which are human resources.

1920 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this may have been provided by one entity who may have billed us for 'Stage, management and fees' and we have provided the detail that we have and we think is relevant. But we are not saying if we have the information, that we will not provide it.

1925 Mr Speaker, I know that there has been a debate about this previously, whilst I have been out of the House, dealing with other business, but look, Mr Speaker, the position of the previous Administration was we will not accept having to write to you, because we make a note, because we might forget and if we say in the House, we will write to you with the further information and we then forget, we are in breach of something we said in the House.

So the reason for asking the hon. Member to write is not to be difficult but simply because he will know that triggers the response. So if he writes, he gets the response.

1930 I imagine this is not information he needs urgently. There is also going to be another opportunity to ask questions in September, so he can ask it then. He needs to recall, first, that his Party Leader was the one who established, for that reason, which is not an unreasonable reason, that people write in and they get the further information if they wish it before the next House; and second, that before 8th December, he might have had to wait six months for the next session of the House, yet he only needs to wait until September.

1935 But all that in the context of us saying if we have got the information, we will give it to you.

Environmental Monitor Specific duties of new post

1940

Clerk: Question 603, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1945 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture and Heritage provide details of the specific duties assigned to the new post of Environmental Monitor, who now forms part of the Establishment of said Ministry, as set out under Head 38(iv) of the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure for 2012-13?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1950 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the officer in question has been transferred to my Ministry from the Ministry of Environment, in order to assist me with the Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners and Refuse Collection, which is another of my responsibilities.

Culture and Heritage Agency Technical Grade 4 Duties and salary scale range

1960

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture and Heritage provide details of the specific duties and salary scale range assigned to the new post of Technical Grade 4, who now forms/will form part of the Establishment at the Culture and Heritage Agency, as set out in Appendix K, subhead (ii), of the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure 2012-13?

1965

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1970 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the duties of the Technical Grade 4 Officer will be supervising all works done or that need to be done in all premises that come under the Ministry of Culture and Heritage.

The salary scale range assigned to that of a Technical Grade 4, which has been equated to HPTO.

I would just like to add, Mr Speaker, that it was an issue that came out when we were doing the Budget session, in Committee session, and I am grateful to the hon. Member, because in the actual 1975 Estimate Books there was an omission of Technical Grade 4, if he can remember. The answer therefore is that if he looks in the same Estimate Books and goes to the HPTO Grade, it is exactly the one of Technical Grade 4.

Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps, the Hon. Minister can help us further.

1980 I recall from that there, he clarified the position saying that this was an officer that had been 'seconded' to him. Is it therefore that the person is on temporary secondment or the person has been transferred out of whatever previous Department he was in, and has now become a fully fledged employee of the Culture and Heritage Agency?

1985 Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, it is exactly that: it is secondment. That means that he has moved in for the period that we need him. He was in the – he is still a civil servant. He moves on a secondment basis to the Agency, doing the job that is necessary, as and when needed.

So at the moment, he is in the Agency doing the work, but he is a civil servant seconded into it.

1990 Hon. E J Reyes: Therefore, Mr Speaker, am I correct in deducting from there that it is a secondment for a period of time, be it short, long or whatever and would not necessarily follow that, should that person retire or leave the service, he would be automatically replaced through a post that would be advertised, as would be applicable to all other posts within the Establishment?

1995 Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, that has to do with the general restructure of the Agency that we are currently doing. It depends whether this officer or the work that this officer is doing currently will be needed in the future.

We have seconded him into the Agency for now and he is doing a specific job – how long for, we do not know.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Renewable energy projects Details

Clerk: Question 617, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2010 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm details of the renewable energy projects his Government will be facilitating with the allocation of £1 million, as announced in his speech at this month's Budget session?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2015 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there are various projects which are being assessed on technical and feasibility grounds which may be facilitated with the allocation of funds from that budget. The specifics are yet to be finalised the sum is therefore a token figure.

2020

Energy from waste and sewage treatment plants Government policy

2025 Clerk: Question 618, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether it is the Government's policy to deliver an energy from waste plant and sewage treatment plant within this term of office?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, it is indeed the Government's intention to proceed with the construction of a new Sewage Treatment Plant to comply with Gibraltar's obligations under the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive.

It is also the Government's intention to develop more sustainable and integrated waste management systems, comprising high percentages of recycling and cost-effective residual waste treatment.

Other cleaner technologies are therefore being considered, as it is recognised that there is a need to modernise our practices. We are therefore presently examining the range of technology options available for treatment of residual waste, which includes a sludge that would be produced by the sewage treatment plant and to assess the impact of adopting various technology scenarios on key criteria.

We are therefore not presently able to commit ourselves to a timescale for the delivery of these two projects, although we remain fully committed to their delivery, as soon as the results and conclusions of the various assessments are made available to us, and we are able to conclude our strategic planning for both projects.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the reply.

Just by way of clarification, then the policy is to proceed with these projects, certainly within this term of office, even though you cannot commit, for the various reasons you have explained, to completing them within the term. Is that the situation?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I think the answer is clear: we are committed, when we have all the relevant information. We cannot commit ourselves to a timescale for delivery. It is hopeful that the timescale will be as soon as possible, which therefore, by definition, would be almost within this term of office, but we cannot commit ourselves to completion by those dates, because we are still looking at all the options.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, one further question and it may well be that the Hon. Minister is unable to furnish the information, that he may need notice of the question even, but have any sites been identified or are being discussed right now for the location of these plants as and when the moment arises?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: A number of sites are under consideration, but depending on the technology we go for, some sites may be more suitable than others. So we are considering the sites at the same time as we are considering the technologies.

Western Beach reclamation Managing environmental issues

Clerk: Question 619, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment provide details to this House of the measures being taken to manage environmental issues arising from the Western Beach reclamation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a Construction and Environmental Management Plan has been produced to ensure that all environmental issues associated with the Western Beach reclamation are considered and, where necessary, mitigated.

It is worth pointing out that before the works commenced the Government – through its appointed consultants – commissioned an ecological survey of the area in question to determine whether there would be any significant adverse environmental effects arising from the proposed development.

Additionally, the appointed contractor was required to develop a Dust Control Plan and obtain a Certificate of Approval from the Environmental Agency as required by Regulation 4 of the Dust Control Regulations 2010.

The Construction Environmental Plan details various measures that are being implemented at Western Beach including, but not limited to the following: (1) watering down both backfill and any trucks leaving the site – the latter have to be completely covered so as to minimise dust emissions; (2) material being taken for deposition on site has been screened for contaminants beforehand; (3) in order to control any sedimentation on the seabed entering the water columns and affecting users of the adjacent beaches, a Floating Turbidity Control Curtain has been installed around the work area; (4) implementation of a Traffic Management Protocol to minimise disruption to pedestrians and beach users; (5) implementation of a contingency plan for accidental spillages; and (6) placing a geotextile membrane in the inward face of the containment bund to minimise the migration of material into the marine environment.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer and for the detail, in particular.

Given I asked the question in the specific context of information that we have received, in relation to the presence in the area of a certain species of limpet and the action that has been taken to address any issues that may arise in respect of its presence in the area. Perhaps the Minister could provide further details.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is a little bit of confusion here. The whole of the area around the airfield and in fact a number of other sites around the Rock – and here is where I should have brought my PowerPoint again – is the habitat of a European protected species, Patella ferruginea, the brown limpet, which is in fact of very restricted distribution. One of the main sites anywhere in the world is the Rock of Gibraltar.

2105

The location of the limpets that the hon. Member is referring to would be an issue in the proposed larger Western Beach reclamation, where the plan envisages – and that particular environmental survey, I do not believe has been completed, as I have not yet seen it – would envisage, in any areas where they might be found, there would be a relocation of the animals or the rocks where they are found.

But the actual development at Western Beach which is currently ongoing which is the development of a car park, does not have – as far as I am aware – these limpets present.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker I am grateful for the answer and with your indulgence, I am not going to ask the question; I merely wanted to publicly, and in this House, congratulate, as I have done personally, the Minister for the Environment for his letter to The Guardian newspaper, clarifying the situation in relation to the carbon footprint. I have already communicated my congratulations to him, and commend him for that, because I think it is very important that certainly, as far as the rest of the world is concerned, we are seen to be doing what we are, in relation to the environment. (Applause)

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

2125

Barbary Macaque Management Plan Funding

Clerk: Question 620, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2130

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm the nature and extent of the funding that either the International Primate Protection League and/or the Born Free Foundation have committed to in the delivery of the Barbary Macaque Management Plan when it is complete, as he referred to in his speech at this month's Budget session?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as the question rightly suggests, the Plan is still not complete and a final decision of its contents is not possible yet, hence the International Primate Protection League and/or the Born Free Foundation contribution will depend on this.

I will add that the initial discussions suggest that they will be assisting with interpretation material, publications and that kind of work.

Hon. S M Figueras: As a point of clarification, is there... You say in relation to publications and the like, is the commitment that they will be assisting in the production of this material for distribution, but not a financial contribution to the implementation of the Plan?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is possible there could be a financial contribution to the production of material, but that is something that is currently under discussion.

2150

Barbary Macaque Management Plan
Relocation of macaques; contraception

2155

Clerk: Question 621, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2160

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, at this month's Budget session, the Hon. Minister for the Environment explained that, and I quote:

'the possibility of relocating macaques to adequate places abroad will continue to be an option and the use of contraceptive measures will be enhanced.'

2165

Can the Minister now provide further details by way of an update to previous questions in this House as to whether negotiations with parties interested in receiving apes abroad have progressed and, separately, what enhanced contraception measures are being planned and whether these have been attempted before?

2170

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2175

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Government is awaiting responses regarding the relocation of monkeys. It is, for example, in contact with both organisations we mentioned earlier – the IPPL and Born Free – who are looking themselves into appropriate opportunities.

The contraceptive measures being considered include contraceptive implants and also immunological methods. The latter has not been used in Gibraltar before, but has been used in other areas with monkey population problems, for example in Hong Kong.

Commonwealth Park car parking
Location of Gibraltar Fair

2185

Clerk: Question 622, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2190

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, is the Minister for the Environment able to confirm whether a decision has now been taken by the Government in relation to the provision of car parking at the Commonwealth Park site and whether any consideration has been given to the location of the annual Gibraltar Fair once works have begun at the site of the Commonwealth Park?

If such consideration has been given, can he give us an indication of the potential locations being discussed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, one of the options being considered, but not yet finally determined is that car parking facilities will not be provided under Commonwealth Park, but at a nearby site.

Initially, the number of spaces will be identical to those available now with up to double during the lifetime of this Parliament. The aim is to ensure that parking will be free for local residents only.

The Gibraltar Fair will be held at the Commonwealth Park site this year. Several possible sites are being considered for the Fair from 2013 onwards and Government will make an announcement in that respect next year.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

Focusing just momentarily on the parking for residents only, is it safe to assume that the system that will be employed in order to enable residents to park for free in these parkings, will be one similar to the system that is currently in use for the free bus service or something along those lines? Is there any discussion in that regard at all yet?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, it is not safe to assume any of that. We have not determined that at this stage.

Clerk: Question –

2215 Mr Speaker: Would this be a convenient moment for a short recess?
The House will recess for, say, 10 minutes.

The House adjourned at 11.57 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 12.30 p.m.

2220

Government investment in equipment
Details

2225 Clerk: Questions and answers continue.
Question 623, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2230 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us what equipment the Government intends to invest considerable amounts of money in, over the years, as he announced during a GBC 'Newswatch' interview on Friday, 18th May?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2235 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, on taking office, I was briefed by management on GHA equipment procurement issues and I was advised that, previously, Government had not committed to an orderly replacement programme for essential medical and building equipment, thus placing patient care at potential risk; and that requests for additional major and minor works had been ignored.

2240 As I said in my Budget speech, Mr Speaker, the Government is committed to investing to resolve these issues. In this respect, whereas the 2011-12 Works and Equipment Budget was £800,000, this year it was £3.3 million.

The GHA's technical experts and clinicians are currently working on the list of equipment to be acquired, some of which will be replacement and some of which will be new.

High dose oxygen therapy
Arrangement with Multiple Sclerosis Centre

2250 Clerk: Question 624, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2255 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain how the new arrangement with the Multiple Sclerosis Centre for the provision of high dose oxygen therapy to GHA patients will work?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2260 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the arrangement is that the Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre will provide treatment to entitle patients on a self-referral basis.

The Centre remains an independent charity.

2265 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, what criteria will be used for patients to be able to use the hyperbaric oxygen therapy centre? How will patients know whether to self-refer. Is there any medical involvement at all?

2270 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the criteria are imposed and regulated by the Centre itself, which has its own checks and its own experts and every individual is entitled to go to the Centre, if they choose to do so.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister saying that the Centre then diagnoses the condition and then refers the patient for treatment?

2275 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, I am not.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, what is the involvement of the Gibraltar Health Authority in the Multiple Sclerosis Centre?

2280 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: If any patient is an in-patient in the hospital, then wherever possible, ambulance transfer is arranged in order to facilitate it for the patient, but there is no involvement of GHA clinicians in the work of the Centre.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, who pays for the self referral treatment?

2285 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Government has provided the Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre with a grant for them to be able to carry out their work.

2290 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will this be an ongoing grant or is this a one-off payment?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is expected that it will be an ongoing process.

2295 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, are there any conditions attached to the continued payment of grants to the Centre?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, of course, Mr Speaker. These include the need for them to satisfy the Minister for Health of the fact that they are properly insured, of the fact that they are properly regulated by the network of similar centres in the UK and they have to provide regular information and provide details of numbers of patients and so on.

2300 So obviously, there are detailed conditions that they have to abide by.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us how much the grant is, please?

2305 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is £200,000. It is actually in the Estimates. (Interjection)

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us what his GHA staff, in particular the consultant anaesthetists, think of the Government's policy to make available treatment at the hyperbaric oxygen therapy centre to all who need it?

2310 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hyperbaric oxygen, as I am sure the hon. Member well knows, as she was present when it was inaugurated several years ago, in the Devil's Tower Road site, and obviously showed her support for the Centre in that way, hyperbaric therapy is a therapy which different clinicians have different opinions on. Some doctors feel it is extremely effective, some doctors feel it is not as effective, some doctors feel it is not effective at all.

2315 But ultimately, as it is a self-referral process, each person is the owner of his own body and therefore can choose whether to use this process or not. If people want to have oxygen therapy, they can go anywhere in the world to have it. The fact that Government is providing indirectly this service in Gibraltar just gives people an opportunity to use it.

2320 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us if this form of treatment is offered under the NHS in the UK, and if it is approved as evidence-based treatment, under NICE?

2325 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would have to research that question to be able to give a full answer, which I would be most happy to do in future, but I do not have all the details available.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I understand that this treatment does bring relief, as the Hon. Minister suggested, and that I did support in my capacity as fellow charity. Even though it is not evidence-based or approved by NICE, it is welcomed that more people will be able to access this.

2330 However, Mr Speaker, will the Government consider giving a grant for private osteopathy, acupuncture, chiropractic treatment, reflexology, homeopathy and other complementary treatments that do bring benefit and relief to hundreds of Gibraltarians who are having to pay for treatment themselves at great expense?

2335 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think that question is too far from the original to be considered a supplementary. It is asking for Government policy on a range of treatments which would have to be considered and discussed, with appropriate time and a view taken.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the unit under the clinical governance system of the GHA?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, once again, I say it is not part of the GHA; it is an independent charity, running its own centre.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Finally, Mr Speaker, if something happens to a GHA card carrying patient when or after receiving treatment at the centre, will the GHA be responsible or liable? Does the GHA mitigate the unit's risk?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think the GHA, the Gibraltar Health Authority, would be liable in that way. Whether there is any liability on the Government for any patient who goes for any form of private treatment in any centre in Gibraltar or elsewhere, I think the question cannot be answered as simply as that, because anybody has the right to go and take on any kind of treatment for any condition, so that would have to be the answer that I can give.

St Bernard's Hospital Attracting local consultants

Clerk: Question 625 the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Minister for Health explain what he is doing to attract local consultants who are working in UK hospitals and further afield to come and work at St Bernard's Hospital?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, all consultant posts are widely advertised in the relevant UK medical journals – usually the BMJ – so will no doubt be seen by any Gibraltarian consultants working in the UK. We do not routinely advertise in other European or Commonwealth countries or the USA – sometimes this the case – but many doctors stay in touch by following these UK journals on-line.

In addition any local doctors who are known to be working as consultants or who are training to become consultants in UK hospitals have been identified to the Medical Director. As an example, a local who is completing his training as a radiologist has recently been recruited to a consultant radiology position within the GHA. He will take up his post in the autumn.

Contact is maintained as much as possible with local doctors and I have myself had discussions with several, over the past few months. This, of course, is not just in respect of doctors at St. Bernard's Hospital, but also in respect of other areas of the GHA's work.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, then can the Minister confirm that the GHA is continuing with the GSD's policy in this regard?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I cannot confirm or deny that. I have no idea what the GSD's policy is in that regard. I suspect that there was not much of a policy anyway.

CT Scan at St Bernard's Hospital Replacement

Clerk: Question 626, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the CT Scan at St Bernard's Hospital is now seven years old. Can the Minister for Health advise if the GHA will be purchasing a new one?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as a result of the Government's commitment to appropriate funding, the GHA is in the process of revision and 2400 implementation of an orderly replacement plan for all its clinical equipment. At present, subject to Government approval, the CT will be replaced in 2013 or 2014, depending on its position in that replacement plan.

GHA new complaints process
Details

2410 Clerk: Question 627, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health provide details on the GHA's new complaints process, as announced by the Ombudsman on 25th June 2012, in a GBC 'Newswatch' interview and how it will be implemented?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the new process, which will be initiated following the transfer of responsibility of complaints management to the Ombudsman, is in the process of being developed and will be subject of a meeting between the Ombudsman and myself. Once the process is approved, I will make the necessary announcement.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the current complement of staff working for the GHA's Complaints Department now be transferred to the Ombudsman's Office, as per the Government manifesto?

2425

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: How we actually deal with it is part of the process, so therefore, as the process is still not completed, I cannot answer that question.

2430

'Best before' dates on medication
Making clearly legible

2435 Clerk: Question 628, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us what he plans to do after representations were made to him by the Gibraltar Senior Citizens' Association on 'best before' dates on medication to be clearly legible?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, currently the GHA requires pharmacists to practise in accordance with UK standards for dispensing. However, enhancements such as 'best before' dates being more legible will be raised as part of a review of pharmacy practice later this year.

By way of additional information, Mr Speaker, another request by the Senior Citizens' Association which was to provide benches outside the entrance at podium level of the Hospital has now been completed.

2450

(Applause)

'GP Evidence-based Prescribing' Auditing of five medical treatments

2455

Clerk: Question 629, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2460 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, as stated by the Medical Director in his report for the GHA Board of 31st May, can the Minister for Health explain the 'GP Evidence-based Prescribing' where five medical treatments will be piloted and audited for a year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2465 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, five drug groups that are known in the literature to be prone to being prescribed outside NICE guidelines by general practitioners will be subject to frequency of prescribing audit during this year.

2470 The five groups are: statins used in lowering cholesterol; proton pump inhibitors used in the treatment of gastro-oesophageal reflux disease; topical non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medications used in the treatment of bone and joint pains; selected serotonin re-uptake inhibitors, used in the treatment of anxiety and depression; and Plavix or Clopidogrel used in the prevention of heart attack and stroke after episodes of these illnesses or after a coronary stent procedure.

2475 ‘Bed Management Report’
Not included in report to GHA Board

Clerk: Question 630, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2480 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us why the ‘Bed Management Report’ from the Director of Nursing as part of his report to the GHA Board for the meeting of 17th July 2012 is missing, despite it being listed on his first page for reporting, right after ‘Primary Care Services’?

2485 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the section on bed management, which was also not provided in the previous meeting, contains confidential patient-related information that is inappropriate for the meeting held in public.

2490 If I may add, the fact that it appeared in the index was a typographical error.

2495 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I also note that the human resources recruitment and selection activity and the business plan vacancies, the control of expenditure by the controlling officer, the summary list of de-personalised complaints and minutes from the last meeting are also missing from the board papers. Will these be included in future papers made available to the public?

2500 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, most of those referred to recruitment, which includes names of people who may or may not have been selected, to disciplinary procedures, which includes items which obviously have to remain confidential, and therefore any paper that includes that kind of information will not be presented in the public domain.

2505 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, if the information... in fact, the information is de-personalised and it is just a list of vacancies and HR activity, then why has that not been included in the papers; and also the control of expenditure by the controlling officer – will those finance figures be provided in future?

2510 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will just answer that first and say that it does depend on the nature of the information and on whether there is anything that is sensitive, particularly in relation to patients or staff, although I must say I am surprised that the hon. Lady is asking for so much information in the public domain, when she clearly does not want us to have any of this information in the public domain and continue with secret Board meetings. (Interjections and banging on tables)

2515 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, that is not true. (Interjections) In fact, I have stated publicly that I welcome the Board papers being placed on-line. That is certainly a part of the new ‘open and transparency’ policy on the ‘in public’ GHA Board meetings and that is welcome. I was critical of the other aspect.

So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm then that the financial figures will not be presented to the public in future?

2520 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, I have not said that. There will be financial figures that can be and there will be figures that cannot be for a number of reasons. There could be commercial discussions going ahead; there could be finance in relation to sponsored patients, which includes patient information. It has to be screened and in order to avoid information which clearly cannot be in the public domain, we have to 2525 be cautious. But anything that has not got those aspects, then clearly it is our policy that it will be in the public domain.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain then why they were not included in this month's Board papers – the financial figures?

2530 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: If they were not included in this quarter's papers in the public site, it is clearly because they fell into one of the categories that I have described.

2535 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he know that to be the case because he has looked at those documents that have not been included, or is he making the assumption that that is the case?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, he believes he knows because he has looked at the papers, but I have learnt in these short months as a Parliamentarian that I have to be very careful when I say absolutely no, because I may have missed something.

2540 Therefore, I believe that that is the case, but I will have to read them all again before I said that I conclusively know that every single detail is like that.

GHA 11-month contracts
Details of any issued since 9th December

2545 Clerk: Question 631, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2550 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health state how many 11-month contracts have been issued since 9th December in the GHA and (a) how many are British; (b) how many are Spanish; (c) how many are Gibraltarian; (d) broken down by grades; (e) the length of time in which prior to issuing the 11-month contracts such an employee or employees have been working for the GHA; and (f) if it is the intention of the GHA to permanently employ such persons, upon the successful completion of the 11-month contracts?

2555 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2560 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Health Authority has not issued any 11-month contracts since 9th December 2011.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Question 598 – Fire prevention courses Supplementary information

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, if I may, this morning I told the hon. Lady that I would give her some information in relation to Question 598 about the costs of the fire courses.

The cost of the basic safety courses is £20 per person and each company is charged for the use of the extinguishers between £50 and £60, depending on the number of people attending.

Thank you.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I appreciate that, Mr Speaker, Minister.

EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Looked After Children Training programmes

30

Clerk: Question 632/2012, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if further progress has been made in finding suitable training programmes for the remaining Looked After Children referred to in Question 524/2012; and, if so, what the training will consist of, when the training will start and who will provide the training?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this Question now applies to three Looked After Children, for the reasons explained to the hon. Member, on a confidential basis.

40

With regard to these three Looked After Children referred to in Question 171/2012, I can say that progress continues to be made. Given that now there are only three children involved and they could potentially be easily identified, as such I am providing the hon. Member with further detailed information on a confidential basis.

45

Care Agency residential homes
Recordable acts of violence

Clerk: Question 633, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency residential homes, since this question was asked in Question 526 to date; and, if so, could the Minister provide a breakdown showing the date of the incident or incidents, whether the incident or incidents were between children or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required, either in the home or in the hospital and for what purpose?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since this question was asked in Question 526/2012, there have been seven incidents.

I now hand the hon. Member a table stating the requested information.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 633 OF 2012

Date	LAC to LAC	LAC to Staff	Medical Attention/Residential Home or Hospital	What purpose
25/06/2012		Yes	None required
26/06/2012		Yes	None required
27/06/2012		Yes	None required
03/07/2012		Yes	None required
03/07/2012		Yes	None required
10/07/2012		Yes	None required
12/07/2012		Yes	None required

65 Hon. S J Sacramento: None of the incidents resulted in the need for medical attention. Many were extremely mild, such as, for example, spitting or kicking the back seat of the car.
I am providing the hon. Member with some further details on a confidential basis.

70 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if the further confidential information... it is not this one. Is there something else that you are referring to?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is on its way round.

75 Mr Speaker: I think it is clearly marked in red that it is confidential.

Care Agency residential homes
Looked After Children who have absconded

80 Clerk: Question 634, the Hon. J J Netto.

85 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any Looked After Children in any of the Care Agency residential homes who have absconded since this question was asked in Question 527 of 2012; and, if so, state how long the absconding lasted, whether the absconding was in Gibraltar or Spain, and whether any of these children have a track record of engaging in acts of violence against any other children or staff members?

90 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since this question was asked in Question 527/2012, there have been three incidents of absconding.

I now hand the hon. Member a table with the requested information.

95 In addition to these incidents there is also the issue of the 17-year-old from the Republic of Guinea, as explained in Question 404/2012. The young person in question was formally discharged from care on 11th July 2012.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 634 OF 2012

Name of LAC	Date	Length of LAC absconded	Any track record of violence towards staff or LAC	Absconding in Gibraltar or Spain
A	23/06/2012	2 hours 30 minutes	Yes	Gibraltar
B	23/06/2012	13 hours 15 minutes	No	Gibraltar
B	25/06/2012	17 hours 40 minutes	No	Gibraltar

100 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has mentioned a child from Guinea who has been discharged from care because... well, he is 17 years old. I thought she said that he is 17 years old. No?

105 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the reason why he has been discharged from care. He has now been discharged from care because, as the hon. Member may recall, this is in fact the third session of this House in which I refer to this case. This is a child who absconded from the care of the Care Agency months ago and given that he has not returned to care, it is believed that he is not in Gibraltar. The case has now been formally discharged.

110 Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively, what we have is a position that he has been discharged from care because he cannot be found in Gibraltar. He has absconded and effectively he is, if I can put it that way, at large?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the case.

Care Agency
Details of employees

Clerk: Question 635, the Hon. J J Netto.

120

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, following the presentation of the new Estimate Book for 2012-13, can the Minister for Social Services provide a breakdown by grade, location and nationality of all employees currently in the employment of the Care Agency as at the end of June 2012?

125

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member the requested information.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just one question, as obviously one needs more time to assimilate the details of all of this, but one thing that struck me on the very first date on the top table there – because obviously the question relates to employees in location – I do not see in Bruce's Farm any of the cooks. Remember that when we were doing the Estimate Book, the Appropriation Bill, I was asking the question whether 'cooks' are now defined as 'industrials'; hence the reason why I could not see them in the column of the Establishment figures which is...

I am asking this particular question because I am trying to identify people in location, as opposed to whether they are white collar, blue collar, non-industrial, industrial, and I just spotted this now. Obviously, there may be other issues that with a bit of time I may be able to spot.

Is it perhaps because they are located somewhere else as cooks, perhaps under Mount Alvernia or something else? I am not quite sure.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, yes, the hon. Gentleman opposite is right to spot that because there are cooks at Mount Alvernia. It is regrettable that those who have prepared this for me have omitted them from the table, but I will provide an accurate table to the hon. Member. This is an oversight.

Obviously, it is an administrative error, because as I said last week, Mr Speaker, there are cooks at Bruce's Farm, as well as Mount Alvernia.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Care Agency employees 11-month contracts issued since 9th December

Clerk: Question 636, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state how many 11-month contracts have been issued since 9th December in the Care Agency, and of those: (a) how many are British; (b) how many are Spaniards; (c) how many are Gibraltarian; (d) broken down by Grades; and the length of time in which prior to the issuing of the 11-month contracts, such employees have been working for the Agency, and if it is the intention of the Agency to permanently employ such persons upon the successful completion of the 11-month contract?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, eleven 11-month contracts have been issued since 9th December in the Care Agency.

The breakdown by nationality is as follows: British/UK – three; Spanish – six; British/Gibraltarian – two.

I am handing the hon. Member a table with more detailed information broken down by grade.

These employees to whom 11-month contracts have been issued had not been working in the Agency previously.

Subject to successful completion of the initial contract period, i.e. subject to reviews, and other relevant policy considerations which may arise, it is presently the intention of the Care Agency to take on such employees indefinitely.

TRAFFIC, HEALTH & SAFETY AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Sustainable traffic transport and parking plan
Tender for consultancy services

Clerk: Question 656, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise whether the tender for consultancy services in relation to the sustainable traffic transport and parking plan has been awarded; and, if so, can he now provide further details of the services which will be provided by the tenderer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no, sir. It has not been awarded.

Hon. D J Bossino: Is the Minister able to give me an indication as to when it is likely that the tender will be awarded?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the expression of interest has been submitted by consultants and the recommendations of the Tender Board is now with the Procurement Office. It is expected that the invitation to tender will be forwarded within the next couple of weeks.

205 Part two of the tender process – that is the time for consultants to prepare their bids – will be a minimum of 40 days from the issue of the invitation to tender to receipt of tender response.

210 Car parking construction plans
Old Theatre Royal site

Clerk: Question 657, the Hon. D J Bossino.

215 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise the House whether it is proceeding with the plans to construct parking at the old Theatre Royal site?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

220 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government can confirm that it is proceeding with the construction of a multi-storey car park at the old Theatre Royal site.

225 Driver Certificate of Professional Competence
Availability of tests

Clerk: Question 658, the Hon. D J Bossino.

230 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services confirm whether the tests to obtain the Driver Certificate of Professional Competence are currently available to those individuals who want to take them?

235 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, yes, sir. In accordance with the Traffic (Drivers Qualification and Training) Regulations 2008, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department has introduced and made available to applicants the Driver Certificate of Professional Competence (CPC) initial qualification tests.

240 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I would ask the Minister to perhaps focus on this a bit more, if he has a chance when he gets back to the office because the reason why I ask this question is that representations have been made to me in relation to this issue.

245 I am told that despite the Government's announcement in the press that these certificates would be available and the initiatives which the Government has undertaken to make these available to pay for certain... I think it is... the cost of the examiner is going to be met by the Government and if you are unemployed, then the cost of the test is also going to be met by the... The tests, if you are unemployed, the cost of that is also going to be met by the Government.

250 It has, I am told, attracted some interest, but people are going to the Licensing Department, and it seems that the civil servants on the ground are not aware of all the details, and all that they are asking the person who is interested is to leave their name and then they are going to be contacted. But the information I am receiving is that the people who are expressing an interest are not, indeed, being contacted.

255 I would ask the Minister to perhaps look into this in a bit more detail because the reality does not quite correlate with the answer he has just given this House.

260 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs to remember what I told him in the course of my Budget speech. I am going to assume, again, as I did then, that he knows what he is talking about and that therefore what he is asking us to do again, from this position, is to once again deliver to the other side a massive political slap in the face for not offering this sort of qualification for the past 16 years.

The introduction of this policy and the introduction of this type of test, once the political colour of the Government changed, I assume, given what he is saying, is something that he supports and he wants us to see through as soon as possible.

As far as we are concerned, we will, of course... and he said to the hon. Gentleman, in the course of his first intervention, that he should concentrate more on these issues when he gets back to his office. We will concentrate on this and all the other issues on which we are delivering for our community, in particular those on which there has been no delivery for our community in the past 16 years.

Hon. P J Balban: If I just may add, just for your information, since the introduction, 15 applicants have undergone the bus CPC and 29 applicants have undergone the lorry CPC.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for the Minister's reply, which I found much more useful than the Chief Minister's reply (Interjections) which at least... (Interjections) We are being asked to ask questions in order to elicit information and that is all I am doing in this House. I think I am keeping to that as best as I possibly can, but if that is the reply the Chief Minister wants to come up with, then so be it.

But it is simply to point out, Mr Speaker, that as far as I understand it – and I stand to be corrected – the professional competency test is in fact a new requirement, as the Hon. the Minister for Transport quite rightly explained at the last sitting of the House. So it is not a Government policy initiative; it is actually an EU legal requirement. Maybe the Chief Minister should himself do some homework.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is not a question of homework or of simply standing up and pretending to be the nice guy asking questions to elicit information, because when one prefaces one's question with, 'Will the hon. Gentleman agree to go back and do more work and concentrate more on this issue?' one is not asking an innocent question to ask and elicit information.

The hon. Gentleman knows me well enough to know that I am not going to let him get away with that, and that I am going to refer him back to Hansard, so that he can concentrate more on the way that he asks questions, if they really are just to elicit the information.

Look, Mr Speaker, this is an EU requirement. It is a new EU requirement, but it is an EU requirement that does not just transpose now. It is an EU requirement that has been there for some time and was not transposed by the hon. Members when they were in Government.

That is why, if it is a question of homework and he wants to reduce it to that, he needs to go back and do some homework himself.

Prohibitions and improvement notices Number issued June 2012

Clerk: Question 659, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services state how many prohibitions and improvement notices were issued in the month of June 2012, if any, broken down by industry group, and specifying the reason or reasons for issuing the notice in this period which may have brought operations to a halt, until the inspector was satisfied that the correct standard had been duly complied with?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule, which I now hand over to him.

Given that the hon. Member is requesting this information at each meeting of the Parliament, in order to facilitate access to the data requested to him and to members of the general public, it will be added to the statistics published on the Government website on a monthly basis and will therefore mean that he will have the information without having to ask for it.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I notice that, all in all, there has been one, either improvement or prohibition notice which does not really tally with the kind of figures I have been getting in previous months.

The normal incidence of either prohibition or improvement seems to be much higher than one. Is there any particular reason? Is it perhaps because the Factory Inspector has been concentrating on some other type of work?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the Factories Inspectorate actually responds mainly to requests from members of the general public – they respond in that way. In fact, the figures show a prohibition notice, as opposed to an improvement notice because that is clearly on the spreadsheets. So that is the reason why, perhaps, they have not received any complaints or any requests in that time period.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, it can be for any of two particular reasons. Either because someone in particular phones them and they go out and look on site at whatever they deem to be unacceptable or as a result of their daily excursion out into various industry groups. It can emanate in different forms.

But the particular question I was asking for is that, given that we are talking of just one in that particular period, which is a figure much, much lower than would have been traditionally the case in previous months, whether there was some reason for this particular low figure in this particular month?

Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker, not that I am aware of.

Factories Inspectors
Site meetings/advice given, June 2012

Clerk: Question 660, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many site meetings and advice were given by the Factories Inspectors during the month of June 2012, and stating to which industry group this was given?

350 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedules, which I now hand over to him.

As already stated in my answer to the previous question, this information will be added to the statistics published on the Government website.

355 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, any particular reason why there were 32 site meetings/advice for the construction industry and just one for shipbuilding and one for sea transfer related and none for the other industry groups? Any particular reason for this?

360 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the actual construction industry encompasses a very wide range of sectors. It is not specifically the bricks and mortar industry. Construction will overlap between any repairs being done within a shop, which will come under, perhaps under the retail trade, or it could involve other industry groups.

So just because we see 32 on-site meetings or inspections or advice given, it does not necessarily mean that that is construction sites.

365 The reasons for the apparent disparity in the statistical monitoring activities of the construction industry from the rest of the industries is due to what the Factories Act defines as 'construction work', as was mentioned earlier, and construction work is considered and not limited... and I will quote what this includes: alterations; conversions; fitting out; commissioning; renovations; repairs; upkeep; redecorations or other maintenance, including cleaning which involves use of water or an abrasive at high pressure or the use of corrosive or toxic substances; decommissioning; demolition or dismantling the structure; scaffolding; roadworks; trenches; sewer works etc.

370 So as you can see, just because I am in 'construction', it does not necessarily mean works which are undertaken at the construction site.

375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that, even though I do know a little bit of the construction industry, but that is not the point I am making.

380 The point I am making is that there is an obvious exclusive dedication, if I can put it that way, just on monitoring the construction industry, no matter how big it is, no matter how diverse it may be. The point is that it seems that it consumes the totality of the time of the Factory Inspectorate and what I am saying is why is it that all of the others, being smaller, being less diverse, never seem to get any attention in terms of site meetings, advice, inspections etc?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, in that particular industry sector the risk is obviously far greater than, for example, in the office environment. Obviously there is a lot more risk involved in construction and all its associated areas.

For example, if we expect the Factory Inspectorate to go into offices and check whether the angle of their chair, their seating is correct because that obviously gives problems with backache and whether the computer is at the right level, the keyboard has it wrist rests etc, then obviously this could be...

This is exactly why the actual construction industry is what establishes the highest risk group and where you would expect the injuries to proceed from most commonly.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, that is the point I have been labouring for the last seven months.

Mr Speaker: I was going to make that point, that this line of question – (Interjection) Order!
This line of question has a rather familiar ring to it. There is a rule in the Standing Orders that one ought not to revisit matters which have been answered in Parliament.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am revisiting matters in relation to the development within the month; I am not revisiting the questions which I have been asking previously.

Mr Speaker: I accept that in the context of the month of June 2012, but the gist of the line of questioning now, being an over-concentration on the construction industry, has a familiar ring to it from several months past.

Hon. J J Netto: Do you want me to ask the question?

Mr Speaker: I will allow you to ask the question, but we have to draw a line somewhere on a repeated line of questioning.

But you know, I will allow you to ask the question, but I hope the Member appreciates this line of questioning has been asked at least three times in the last six months. (Interjection)

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do recall I said it in my Budget speech? I do not know whether it is relevant, the session of the Budget in relation to Question Time, sir?

Mr Speaker: No. It was a supplementary to similar questions at the last sitting, and indeed previous sittings. Yes, go ahead.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, if I can ask the supplementary question.

Mr Speaker: Yes, go ahead.

Hon. J J Netto: Even on the basis of what the Hon. Minister has just said – which I accept and I have been saying it – meaning that the construction industry per se has a higher incidence of accidents, so it is also true of the shipbuilding/marine repairs as well, but if you look at the numbers between one and the other, it is one for shipbuilding and 32 for construction. There is an enormous disparity.

So if the argument that you are using is because there is a higher incidence in construction, then that does not seem to tally with the dedication being applied to the other industry group.

Therefore, would the Hon. Minister not consider having a discussion with his own Factory Inspectorate to see whether sufficient time is taken to apply the resources available right across the whole spectrum, and not necessarily on just one industry group, in this case the construction industry?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I will communicate to the Factory Inspectors that the hon. Gentleman does not think that they are doing their job properly.

I seem to recall the conversation I had with my staff regarding this, and if I am not mistaken, I believe that the ship-repair industry has, apparently, qualified staff who actually do this sort of work for them, which means to say that I do not think there is a need for them – they do not feel there is a need for them – to go there unless they are called in specifically for a specific incident, but I will confirm that and I will let the hon. Gentleman know.

Health and Safety Report industrial accidents

445

Clerk: Question 661, the Hon. J J Netto.

450

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services state if there have been any reported accidents during the month of June 2012, showing the industry group and stating which ones were reportable, major and fatal, if any?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

455

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, it is premature to provide an answer to this question as the collating of the notification of accident reports for the month of June 2012 has not been completed, as these are produced more or less two months in arrears.

460

However, once this information is readily available, it will be added to the statistics published on the Government website on a monthly basis.

Factories Inspectorate Number of inspections and results

465

470

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services state how many inspections during the month of June 2012 did the Factories Inspectors conduct, showing the industry group targeted, whether any possible breach to the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation by any private company, a Gibraltar Government or MOD workplace, may have taken place, and whether legal advice is being sought?

475

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the first part of the question, in relation to the inspections, has been answered in Question 660/2012.

The second part of the question, in relation to breaches of the Factories Act or its subsidiary legislation, has been answered in Question 659/2012.

In relation to legal advice, no legal advice has been sought. As stated in my answer to Questions 659 and 660, this information will be added to the statistics published on the Government website on a monthly basis.

485

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister therefore tell me, from the information given to Question 660, which ones of those numbers are in relation to inspections, which ones are in relation to prohibition and improvement notices, and which ones are in relation to site meetings and advice?

490

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as mentioned in the response to the questions, Question 659 is the prohibition and improvement notices served in the month of June.

Sorry, I seem to have misplaced the other part of the other table.

In response to the second part, Question 659/2012, the information requested is actually on the spreadsheet there: one prohibition notice in the construction trade served in the month of June.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman has finished or has not finished. I am still not any wiser, by looking at the answers given in answer to Question 660, of the figures in the column shown, which ones of those figures pertain to either inspections or site meetings.

For instance, when it says that in June, there has been one on the industry group shipbuilding, is that to do with inspection or is that to do with site meetings or advice? Then the 32, and then the other one.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, now I understand what the hon. Gentleman is trying to get at.

Unfortunately, the way that we report statistics, site meetings, inspections and advice are collated together under monitoring activities, so they all fall under one group. Presently, and with the resources available at the moment, the Factories Inspectorate is in a reactive mode, as I already explained, and they are responding to complaints from the general public and other entities. Thus all these are recorded as monitoring activities.

We actually do not split up the figures. I cannot give that information, because of the lack of statistical software that we have available.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, what the hon. Member is saying is pathetic. This is a question that I specifically asked last month. I asked in supplementary questions the same thing because he could not distinguish, from a very clear and specific question, what information I was asking for. He told me in supplementary last month that he would go back and provide me with the figure, which he has not done. I ask the same question this particular month, and he says that asking for this particular Question, which all we are talking about a total of 34 – whatever they are, whether they are inspections, whether they are site meetings or advice – is too much work to do.

Well, Mr Speaker, it will probably take an administrative assistant five minutes to provide this particular kind of information. It is just ridiculous! Just by looking at the logbook of the Factory Inspector, it will take them about 30 seconds every day to determine whether they have gone to do an inspection or they have gone to do a site meeting. He can give me whatever answer he wants to give me, but he has to be a little bit sensible and credible.

Mr Speaker: There was no question there.

A Member: What is your question?

Mr Speaker: There was no question. There really should be –

Hon. J J Netto: The question therefore is will he do as he told me he was going to do last month, which is to provide information in the manner I have been asking... the answer, sorry, to the question I have been asking last month and the month before, which he has not?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I agree with the hon. Gentleman 100%. It is amazing, but unfortunately, with what we have inherited, this is exactly... It is a pathetic system (Interjection) and unfortunately we need to correct this system to be able to provide the hon. Member with the statistics which he requires now, which does not seem... or was not so important then, and probably that is the reason why that statistical software was discontinued some time back and the licence was never renewed. Now obviously we will try to put this old system – as mentioned, pathetic – and correct that.

Hon. J J Netto: To the hon. Gentleman opposite, you do not even need a computer. Forget whether a computer was bought in the year 2000. For the kind of question we are asking him, considering the small amount of figures we are talking about, an administrative assistant with the file in front of him or the logbook of the Factory Inspector, will take no more than five minutes to give me an answer. You do not need a computer, you do not need an iPad, you do not need anything like that. All it needs is someone – a very young-scale admin grade – to do the information.

Is he willing – given that I have to put this in a question form – ?

Mr Speaker: It has to be a question.

Hon. J J Netto: Is he willing to get someone, whether it is the Factory Inspector himself at the end of the day, to tell me, ‘Well, I have done today eight hours’ work, for which four were two inspections, one was one site meeting...’? I do not think it is unreasonable to provide that kind of information, with or without computers.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we will correct the pathetic situation that we have inherited and we will provide this information in the way that we feel fit in the future.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I just explore with the hon. Gentleman that pathetic system?

My hon. Friend, Mr Netto, his contention is that for the month of June the Factories Inspectors would have actually logged, in relation to these 34, in a logbook – ‘This relates to an inspection, this is a site meeting, this is advice.’ Is he saying that that does not exist and all that is logged in the logbook is just simply a generic visit, for example? Is that what he is saying?

Because, of course, if that is what he is saying, and effectively what is recorded is a generic visit or something generic that does not really go into any detail about whether it is an inspection, a site meeting or advice, well maybe the hon. Gentleman would be justified in describing it as pathetic.

565 But if that is not the case and the logbook actually differentiates and the Factories Inspectors, as we would expect them to have done, actually differentiate between inspections, site meetings and advice, then this is not about pathetic systems; it is about the hon. Gentleman really not wanting to provide the answer or not having done his homework, or not having been briefed properly.

570 Could he help the House as to what it is, please?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, calling in aid pathos to support one's questions is something that the hon. Gentleman needs to be very careful with. It was the hon. Member, Mr Netto, who prayed in aid pathos in support of his supplementary and called the system pathetic. So it is really quite unfair – although I know that fairness is not an issue that is relevant to him – for the Hon. Mr Feetham to get up and accuse the Hon. Minister of having prayed in aid pathos.

585 But what the Hon. Minister has said is that the system is exactly the system that was there before. So, if the logbook provided a generic entry before, it provides a generic entry now. If it provided a detailed entry before, it provides a detailed entry now. What the Hon. the Minister has said is, 'Look, I will go back. I now understand what it is that you want. I will go back and I will give you the information.'

590 And what is more, what has also been said during the course of the intervention, which I am happy to say, if we can provide it in the format that the hon. Gentleman appears to want, we will extend to the information when provided, is that it will be put on the internet going forward every month.

Mr Speaker, how is it that that can suggest anything other than wanting to provide the information?

595 And so, Mr Speaker, with that honesty from the Minister, I think we rest and we have provided as much information as we are able today and we will continue to provide that information in the future, if possible, if it is not a generic entry in the format that the hon. Gentleman has proposed. If it is a generic entry, then that system, perhaps I would agree, is pathetic. It is the one that has been there for 16 years – perhaps even longer, perhaps for 40 – and we will change it to ensure that the whole House has the benefit of that information, without anyone having to pray in aid pathos in support of their position.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, but you see the Hon. the Minister was doing quite well and matters were progressing very nicely, until it was the Chief Minister who whispered in his ear, 'Tell him, is he saying that the inspectors don't know how to do their jobs?' and it was the Hon. the Chief Minister who whispered in the Hon. Minister's ear, 'Tell him that the system was pathetic and that it existed during their time in Government.'

600 Of course, if the hon. the Chief Minister would not do that much whispering and would not prompt his Minister as to what to say – which inevitably, every time he does that really does raise temperatures in this House – we would not get into these exchanges in the first place.

Does the Chief Minister not accept and does he not agree with me that if the logbook actually distinguishes between the various categories and it is not generic, then you cannot describe it as pathetic, whether it was our system or whether it is a continuation of the system by the Government that he leads?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, given that sort of intervention, I think 'pathetic' really is now the appropriate word. What a pathetic approach to asking questions in this House, to say, 'You whispered in his ear. You didn't whisper this. You prompted him. You didn't prompt him.'

610 Mr Speaker, if we are going to get into that sort of debate across the floor of the House, he can rest assured that every time he is prompted to sit down and shut up, as he was very often by the hon. Member, (Banging on desks) the Leader of the Opposition, who is not here, when he was Chief Minister and he was a Minister, we will start to reflect that in every intervention. I know that what he enjoys is trying to lower the tone and raise the temperature in this House, but we are not going to fall for it.

615 Mr Speaker, I did prompt my hon. Friend, the Minister, in respect of the comments made by the hon. Member, as Hansard will show, and if the hon. Member were paying attention, he would realise the first person to refer to the system as 'pathetic' was the Hon. Mr Netto, who has been a Minister for 16 years and at different times may have been responsible for that system. That is where the concept of pathos was injected into this discussion.

And look, Mr Speaker, as for careless whispers, those are things best left for number-one hits.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman described the answer as pathetic, but let me say this: the hon. Gentleman, in his recent interventions in this House, particularly in the Budget and today again, is slowly turning and is slowly adopting all the characters of arrogance, highhandedness and unwillingness to answer questions that he used to accuse our Government of when he was on this side of the House.

625 Again, I say this, that if that represents a 'new dawn' for Gibraltar, then God help us for the next four years! (Banging on desks) (Laughter)

Is he not going to answer my question? Yes or no?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is just... I really must be in a different dimension. The man has not been gone for 48 hours, in parliamentary terms, and my summing up and today... and already the knives are now out and being sharpened, not even as astutely as the Hon. Mr Bossino has the elegance to do, but just matter-of-factly. 'All the characteristics of arrogance etc and character assassination,' (Laughter) (Banging on desks) says the hon. Gentleman, and then he realised... 'used to accuse, allegedly...' (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, there has been a new dawn. There is a new attitude. Everybody except them wants to see it, and we are not going to be cross-examined and told to answer questions, yes or no.

This question has been answered. It has been answered clearly and, Mr Speaker, I think it has been answered candidly and positively, with a view to the information being provided, and we rest on that.

Procedural

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): And so, Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to Friday, 20th July at 3.30 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Insurance specialist post Number of applications

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Friday, 20th July 2012. Answers to Questions continue.
Question 671/2012, the Hon. P R Caruana.

5 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the Chief Minister say how many persons have applied for the new insurance specialist post under the Finance Centre Director?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, five persons have applied for the new insurance specialist post under the Finance Centre Director.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, has one been selected?

15 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, one has withdrawn and one has been recommended, and there is now a final process, which is in play at the moment, and I think one will be informed, as a result of that final process coming to an end, that he is being offered the post.

20 If the hon. Gentleman will allow me, he knows that there are, I think, three or four areas where specialists are going to be appointed, and I think the final issue now is to tell them all at the same time, in respect of... The applicants who have applied for each of the posts will all be told at the same time what the position is. I think there are some who may have applied for more than one post.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member able to say what, in the end... I know these things are subject to a bit of negotiation with the candidate, but what the salary is? Has that been determined?

25 Hon. Chief Minister: No. The hon. Gentleman will know that, because these are specialised areas, there will be an element of negotiation in respect of each of the appointees. The old adverts used to say salary will be commensurate with experience, and there is an element of that in respect of the potential appointees for these specialist posts.

30 Hon. P R Caruana: So I take it from that that, for this particular post, the salary has not yet been fixed because the person has not yet been selected.

35 Hon. Chief Minister: The person has not yet been told that they are being offered the opportunity, and therefore the negotiation has not kicked in, although I understand – if this is helpful – that we have an indication of what the relevant salary figure would be in respect of each of those who have applied.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is this a Civil Service post or a Gibraltar Development Corporation post, or perhaps a Civil Service contract post?

40 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he threw me with those two options, because I think it is the third. I think it is a contract, rather than a Civil Service or GDC post that is envisaged in respect of these specialists.

45 Hon. P R Caruana: But a contract with a civil servant – with the Crown, or with the GDC?

Hon. Chief Minister: I believe that they are contracts with the GDC, because these are posts that develop the economy and therefore they are appropriately provided for under the structure of the GDC.

50 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member tell me – these people have presumably been interviewed by the board – who has been the interview board for this post?

55 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am afraid I cannot give him the details, but I can tell him something of the structure of those posts because, in respect of each of the specialist posts, there has been a relevant specialist on the board. So, for example, I believe that Mr Tipping has formed part of all of the boards; I believe Mr Peter Montegriffo formed part of one, if not more, of the interview boards; Mr Blight – who is the Chairman of the Finance Centre Council, he will know – has been on one or all of the boards; Mr Hogg, who was the Chairman of the Fund Association, was on one or all of the boards. There may have been other representation, which I have not been made aware of, in respect of some of the other boards.

60 Hon. P R Caruana: So the hon. Member's answer is that he is not aware who was on the selection board for this particular post?

65 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, no, I can tell him that, in respect of this particular post – I thought he said the posts, but in respect of this particular post – if my memory serves me correct, it was Mr Tipping, Mr Montegriffo, Mr Hogg and Mr Blight who would have been involved. I believe that is the list, but I preface that with I believe. If he wants me to tell him exactly, and hold me to it, then he needs to write to me, but I think that is what the board was.

70 Hon. P R Caruana: So, implicit in that answer, Mr Speaker, is that there was no ministerial involvement in any of the selection process, or the boards.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is correct about the selection process. In other words, the recommendations have been made by those boards. I told him there was a final filtering process. Now there is a meeting/interview – it depends on how you want to characterise it – with the Minister for Financial Services, and with me in my capacity as Minister for Finance, almost just to have sight of who these individuals might be – not all of them, as he may know, are local individuals known in the industry – and just to understand that they share the Government’s vision of where these particular industries need to be going. That is not the recommendation process; that is at the end of the recommendation process.

Hon. P R Caruana: Nevertheless, Mr Speaker, I am trying to understand what the process is. So there is a group of professional worthies who have done the sifting and the recommending, but not the selecting and the appointing. Should I deduce from his last answer that the selecting and the decision whether to accept the recommendations and who to appoint or not to appoint is yet to be made, and will be made by this board that he has just referred to?

Hon. Chief Minister: There is no other board, Mr Speaker. The selecting and the recommending has been done by the board that is represented by the, as he called them, relevant worthies – but who do they recommend to, if not to Ministers? What Ministers have wanted to do is to at least have the opportunity of meeting those who are being recommended before proceeding to the process of appointment. He might understand that there could be, in this very sensitive... In these very sensitive areas, actually – because it is not just insurance – there could be reasons why Ministers might think it is not appropriate for a particular individual to be appointed.

He used to tell us about the macro-economic responsibility that he had in his capacity as Minister for Finance and Minister for Financial Services, something with which we did not disagree, and it has almost been a ‘This is the person who has been recommended.’ ‘Well, nice to meet you. Now we agree we should proceed to appointment.’ That is what the process has been, and that ‘Nice to meet you’ has amounted to asking these individuals, who are the ones recommended – in other words, we do not meet all of those who applied, just those who are recommended – ‘What is your vision for the future of insurance in Gibraltar for example – [Technical interruption]

Hon. P R Caruana: May I proceed? But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is making more of this than it is worth, and he is not providing me with the simple information that I want.

Given that a number of people have been interviewed and recommended by the previous group – which he says involves Mr Tipping, Mr Montegriffo, Mr Hogg and Mr Blight, he thinks – subject to confirmation later, whose decision is it as to which, if any, of these individuals are actually appointed?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as is the case in respect of most of these types of contracts, in this particular instance it will be a decision made by Ministers, informed by the recommendations made by those boards.

Hon. P R Caruana: So the decision – [Technical interruption]

So not just the formal appointment of the sort that the Governor would make formally, albeit acting on the advice of the Public Service Commission, if they were civil servants. So the role of Ministers is not formalistically procedural in that way. Ministers, in this case... and the hon. Member must not assume what aspects of it I might criticise, if indeed any, if it were so. I am just trying to establish now what the procedure is that they are adopting as a matter of policy here. The actual decision of who to select from amongst the recommendees and then to appoint them is a ministerial decision to be taken, I think he has said, by him and the Minister for Finance, the Hon. Mr Licudi, who is not in the Chamber today.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he can characterise it like that; I actually characterise it in a different way. It is a ministerial decision whether or not to accept the recommendation of the board, and for that recommendation to be informed, other than just by the write-up of the board, we have felt it appropriate, because of the sensitivities that could be engaged in respect of each of these, to meet with the individuals before making the appointments.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must not describe what I am asking him as characterisation of anything. It is a perfectly simple question. There is somebody who drafts the advert to put in the newspaper, there is a secretary who opens the envelopes for applicants, there is somebody who sifts them, there is somebody who does the initial perusal of the applications, there is somebody who then recommends the shortlist, and that is as far as we have got, with Mr Tipping, Mr Montegriffo – they have recommended a number of people.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, sorry, he has not... It may be that we are at cross-purposes. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) They have recommended one individual in respect of –

Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see.

Hon. Chief Minister: – four posts. So there is one recommendation for the post of insurance specialist, one for funds, one for private clients and one for banking, and we are seeing, Mr Speaker, each of those ones, so that we do not meet them for the first time, in many instances, when they first turn up for work.

Hon. P R Caruana: That is clear now. So the recommending board – if I could call them that, the gentleman whose name he mentioned earlier – has put up to Ministers just one name for each; not one name plus other back-ups, not in order of preference? (A Member: No.)

And then Ministers – by which he has said it means him and the Minister for Financial Services – will, having interviewed this man or woman, decide whether to go along with and accept the recommendation of the recommending board, or reject the recommendation because you do not like the candidate. And what – if it were the second case, it would then remit the matter back to the board? Is that how the hon. Member sees it happening?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I assume... We have not come across any instance where we feel that we need to do that, but we would remit the matter back to the board.

Can I just tell him, Mr Speaker, that in the context of what he calls the ministerial interview – I do not call it that – we are doing that not on our own; we are doing that with the board itself. So in other words, when we are meeting the individuals whom the board has recommended, we are meeting them with Mr Blight, with Mr Montegriffo, with Mr Hogg – I think, in one instance, Mr Hogg was not available and Mr Lasry attended – and with Mr Tipping. So we are meeting them in that context as a sort of ‘getting-to-know-you, just getting comfortable with the fact that your vision for where we want to go is also our vision of where we want to go.’

If we were to come to the view... and look, I am happy to tell him that I do not think we have had to exercise our minds in that respect yet. We have not met all of the recommendees – I think we have met two out of four, but some people’s summer breaks are intervening with when we can meet the others... then my attitude would be to go back to the board and say to them, ‘We do not share your view that this person is the right person to take the job – do you want to re-advertise, or do you want to recommend another of those who might have applied?’

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not addressing the formal aspects of who is the appointer. The appointer is the GDC, assuming that his memory serves him correctly and this is a GDC contract. The actual appointer – the equivalent of the Governor, who makes all appointments in terms of signing off the minute on behalf of the Crown, were this Civil Service – in the GDC that is the board of the GDC, of which he is the Chairman, and no doubt a couple of his –

Hon. Chief Minister: Joe Bossano.

Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, Joe Bossano is the Chairman, and a couple of... So that is the formal appointer, which does not interest me very much. I am more interested in the process of identifying and selecting the individual. Who has signed the minute appointing him is really neither here nor there. Can the hon. Member say to me – I will write to him asking for this – whether it will be the same board that sits with him and his colleague, the Minister for Financial Services, that he has mentioned, or could there be other people in it too? Well, he has mentioned four names. I hate to carry on mentioning them all.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, subject to this caveat, Mr Speaker: that I have told him that, in respect of the post in respect of which he has asked, which is insurance, I believe that was the board, but that there may be different boards in respect of the different areas of specialisation. But those boards, I think, Mr Speaker, were selected on the basis of (a) people who had wide experience across the board in financial services, and (b) a specialist from that specific field for each one of the boards.

So if he will indulge me, I think Mr Montegriffo and Mr Blight may be on the all the boards, Mr Hogg I think was only on the board in respect of insurance or funds, one of the two. So, subject to that, it is the board as it was. There is no intention, should we go back... Should we have to go back, because I do not think that is necessarily something that is going to happen – but remember nobody has been written to until they have got the job yet – there would be no question of changing the board, other than in this context, which is something I mentioned to him a moment ago, that when Mr Hogg was not available, Mr Lasry, who I think was his deputy at the time, attended with us, and I think the deputy may now have become the chairman, because they tend to alternate in that organisation. But it is the person who is the chairman of a particular organisation that I think has presence on the interviewing board.

200 Mr Speaker: The Clerk has asked for us to pause for a few minutes, without necessarily leaving the Chamber, just to enable the technicians to restart the sound equipment. They were having problems a few minutes ago.

The recording equipment was re-started.

Government properties
Policy re squatters

210 Clerk: Question 672, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what is the Government's policy in relation to squatters in its properties?

215 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, exactly the same as it was before 16th May 1996 and 8th December 2011, and will, I imagine, be in the future: namely, that people who are squatting are subject to proceedings for possession in the Supreme Court for eviction.

220 Hon. P R Caruana: So, implicit in that is the fact that the hon. Member does not believe that the Housing Department can just invite the Police to go in and get them out.

225 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this should not be a quiz on my understanding of the landlord provisions in Gibraltar, but whatever the position is in law is the position that I expect my Housing Ministry to be enforcing, and if police officers [Technical interruption]pretend to have powers beyond those which the law gives them, then I am sure that there will be a court to remind them of what their powers actually are.

230 I think his understanding and mine are probably the same in respect of residential property. One requires a court order in order to be able to evict someone.

235 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, he must not be shy about playing quizzes when he volunteers the answer, which was that he believes a court order is required. Implicit in the belief that a court order is required is that it requires a court order and therefore cannot be done without a court order, which means that it is not open to the Housing Department simply to say to the Police, 'There is a squatter in my Government property – please go and see them out.' Unless what the hon. Member is saying is, 'Look, I'm not here to give legal advice,' – which obviously I was not seeking from him – 'the Government's policy is whatever the law permits it to be. If the law permits it to be without a court order, then it will be the Government policy to have recourse to the Police without a court order if the law permits it.' Is that what he is saying?

240 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think that is what I have said, but I actually do not believe that it permits it, but if it does and it is within the power of a police officer to do so, then of course the Housing Department would be perfectly entitled to do that in the appropriate circumstances which the law provides for it.

245 I am not going to ask him for legal advice. I would not presume to do so. He and I have our own views about our own legal abilities. He has made clear what his view of mine is repeatedly across the floor of the House, and I am delighted to confirm that I have great faith in his legal abilities, but now that he is in private practice, I would expect him to charge for his advice, so I will not ask him for it across the floor of the House.

United Nations Committee of 24
Purpose of Chief Minister's address

255 Clerk: Question 673, the Hon. P R Caruana.

260 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the purpose of his addressing the United Nations Committee of 24 is to try and persuade that Committee both to recognise our inalienable right to self-determination and to recommend our removal from the United Nations list of non-self-governing territories; and will he further say whether the Government itself considers Gibraltar to remain in a colonial status and relationship with the United Kingdom until the United Nations does both of those things?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the purpose of addressing the United Nations Committee of 24 is to counter Spain's continued interventions before the C24 and to make the C24 realise – not to seek to persuade them, but to make them realise – that the people of Gibraltar enjoy an absolute and unfettered right of self-determination and that we should be removed from the UN list of non-self-governing territories.

Mr Speaker, in our view, the next part of the question calls for an opinion, but we will answer it factually as follows, by saying that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar considers and is advised that one of the factors in international law which determines whether a territory is or is not a colony – however much we dislike that word – namely a self-governing territory or a non-self-governing territory, is whether or not the territory appears on the UN list of non-self-governing territories.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is aware that there are many British territories that are not on any UN list and therefore do not need delisting, are not colonies and are not sovereign independent states, to wit the three Crown dependencies, amongst others. (Interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member... I was very gratified by the first part of his answer; less gratified by the second half of his answer, which in my view, to a degree, contradicts the first part. Let me see if I can ask him some questions.

The purpose of asking these questions, Mr Speaker, is simply to establish the extent to which there is still a divide across the floor of this House on this question. There is not a hidden blunt instrument in my last supplementary, so you can rest assured. (Interjection) Now he has won! (Laughter) Well, Mr Speaker, some things you just have to take on trust.

Mr Speaker, when the hon. Member says that he is advised that one of the factors... I am not asking for an expression of opinion; I am asking him for the Government's policy position. What is the Government's policy as to whether Gibraltar remains a colony or not? We are unquestionably on the list of non-self-governing territories.

The United Kingdom, at the highest level of government... I think the Prime Minister has said it, but if the Prime Minister has not said it, certainly the last two foreign secretaries have, in Parliament. The Ambassador for the United Kingdom says it at the United Nations twice a year. He says that the nature of the constitutional arrangements in Gibraltar are not such as to regulate a colonial relationship. In other words, the United Kingdom says to the world the relationship between Gibraltar and it, the United Kingdom, is not colonial in nature. In those circumstances, given that the ex-colonial power does not consider us to be in a colonial relationship with it – although, clearly, still in a relationship of political dependence – and given that we do not believe – it is implicit in the first half of the hon. Member's answer – that... It is not as if we do not have decolonisation unless the United Nations says it. Given both those things, given that the United Nations' say-so is not essential, and given that the UK says that it does not regard us as a colony, would the hon. Member agree with me that the preferable view is that however desirable it might be to get off the UN list for housekeeping, book-keeping reasons, it does not determine whether or not we are a colony? In other words, that it is possible, even if the hon. Member were to disagree that the facts as they currently exist get us across that line, regardless of that question, but that actually is possible to cease to be a colony without the United Nations getting them off your list, or even acknowledging your right to self-determination?

I do not think [inaudible] the possibility of which is not excluded by the fact that one of the characteristics is listing.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to assume that the hon. Gentleman is genuine in the way that he postulates his supplementary, and not with a political blunt instrument in the sock that he lunges towards us, and try and deal with the issues that he is raising – which perhaps are more appropriately dealt with on a motion on these issues rather than on questions, but I think this is in both our interests – first of all, by telling him that the final part of his question is a hypothetical question, and in that hypothesis of course it may be possible for there to be a territory that is decolonised whilst it is still on the UN list of non-self-governing territories. That could, of course, be a legal possibility. It is one of a number of legal possibilities. The other, of course, also being that whilst you remain on the list of non-self-governing territories, in international law you will always be regarded as a non-self-governing territory. To make the jump from non self-governing territory to colony is to equate those two, which in my view is not necessarily always the case, but sometimes can be the case.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is the same for UN purposes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Right. For UN purposes, however, as the hon. Gentleman is prompting me, 'non-self-governing' and 'colony' means the same. So, is a territory, let's say like Gibraltar, self-governing or not self-governing? That should be the question that is asked about our colonial status.

The hon. Gentleman said, in 2008, two years after the new Constitution at the C24, that he no longer regarded the C24 as the gatekeeper of our decolonisation. He did not say at the United Nations that he would therefore not be attending their meetings again, although there is a giveaway last sentence where he thanks them for the work they have done for Gibraltar to date and says goodbye without saying, 'I'm not coming back,' (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to the Committee of 24.

In January 2009, he said in his New Year's message that, for all those reasons, he did not consider it appropriate to continue to attend the C24. But, Mr Speaker, I think he needs to accept in the discussion that we are having, as I think he did before he sat down, that being on the list is one of the characteristics which may indicate whether a territory is or is not colonial – it may or may not be the determining factor, I think he said.

Mr Speaker, we think, on this side of the House, that in international law and at the very least certainly in UN doctrine – and those two can also diverge – being on the list is what determines whether a territory is or is not self-governing. Some territories were put on the list which were clearly non-self-governing. Some territories which were not self-governing were not put on the list by administering powers in the 1960s, and that, to a very great extent, Mr Speaker, depended more on what the internal regime in those territories was than on the objective criteria that one might have applied.

For example, France might have what they might have called in French an overseas territory which it brought into metropolitan France by operation of French law. It was therefore a far-flung part of France, not a colony of France, and therefore France – and let's not get into Spain and what she did with Ceuta and Melilla, because that is perhaps more controversial – did not put those territories on the list. The United Kingdom put a lot of its then properly so-called colonies on the list, but did not put other territories on the list.

So, Mr Speaker, what are we left with? The fact is that Gibraltar is on that list. The fact is that Spain attends Committee meetings, uses the fact that we are on the list to bring up all matters related to Gibraltar at the C24, and we believe therefore it is important and appropriate that we are there. It is an issue of genuine division across the floor of the House.

Hon. P R Caruana: The issue that I am trying to see whether there is a division across the floor of the House is not whether you should go to the Committee of 24 or not. He is free to go if he pleases –

Hon. Chief Minister: Of course I am.

Hon. P R Caruana: – and that is not the issue. The issue, if he wants to define it, upon which I am asking him whether there is division across the floor of the House, is the question of whether unless the United Nations recognised that you have ceased to be a colony, ergo you have not ceased to be a colony, because if that which may indeed have been the traditional view, if that is the case, does he not believe that he is placing Gibraltar in a position whereby rights and progress that we can make in our relationship with the United Kingdom and the meaning of that relationship is not makeable and our rights to move away from ceasing to be a colony depends on UN recognition, which might never be forthcoming and therefore we condemn ourselves to continue to be in a colony?

I should say, whether the hon. Member will agree, that I think it is right to say that in the United Nations, self-determination... decolonisation is the same thing as –

Hon. Chief Minister: Non-self-governing.

Hon. P R Caruana: – non-self-governing, to a degree. I think it is true, but it has got to be read in the context that really for them, non-self-governing territory means independence in one of the three forms that the United Nations delisting criteria recognise independence. Either independence as your own independent sovereign nation state, either independence because you join an independent country through integration and you become part of an independent country and therefore the territory joins an independence status as part of the enlarged independent country, or through free association which is entitlement in the future to independence.

The hon. Member knows that free association is only recognised by the United Nations if the associating territory is free at any time of its choosing to disassociate freely into an independent sovereign state status. So all the acceptable, all the supposedly acceptable methods of decolonisation in the UN had independence as their core ingredient.

All I am trying to get to the bottom of – and this is my last supplementary on the matter – is whether the hon. Member believes that if the United Kingdom does not consider that we are in a colonial relationship and if, which I am not saying is the case, but if it were the case that the Gibraltar Government also does not believe that the relationship it enjoys with the United Kingdom is colonial, does the Government believe, is it within the scope of its policy to then say regardless of whether the UN, and therefore other countries, recognise it or not, and desirable as it might be to get off the UN's list, nevertheless and notwithstanding both those negatives we do not consider ourselves to be a colony?

Hon. Chief Minister: I think, Mr Speaker, there is much more international law in that than just those three criteria and what the hon. Gentleman is trying to suggest. For example, what is the status of a territory that unilaterally declares itself independent? Well, it depends on the Realpolitik surrounding that. So say for example, Mr Speaker, just for the sake of argument that the Basque Country were to declare itself independent. Would that in effect render it independent? Well, Mr Speaker, the United Nations would not recognise it as independent. The hon. Gentleman knows that the doctrine of the emergence of states requires to an extent recognition from other states and it is almost a political balance (Interjection) when one has enough states on one side that vote in the General Assembly to recognise the new status of a territory that one then achieves UN recognition and membership.

But, Mr Speaker, when is independence actually effected? Well, it may be when – usually these things happen through violence – the moment that the violence occurs that gives rise to the Declaration of Independence and the fact that it is later recognised by a vote at the General Assembly as an independent state and subsequently a member of the United Nations does not mean that the point from which independence flowed was the moment of the Declaration. So, Mr Speaker, when does the relationship become non-colonial: the minute its characteristics are non-colonial or the minute that the UN takes that territory, if it is one that was on the list, off the list?

Mr Speaker, I look forward to reading many dissertations on this subject, but I will tell him this, in all the time that he was in Government, he would only describe the relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom as modern and non-colonial in nature. So the hon. Gentleman did not say, 'Gibraltar is not a colony of the United Kingdom', in the context, Mr Speaker, of anything other than the new relationship and the way that he saw the characteristics and the way that the criteria of the United Nations should have developed. But, Mr Speaker, as he knows and I know, the criteria of the United Nations remains the same criteria as in the 1960s. We might be agreed that those criteria should change, but it is not, as he has suggested, three criteria or three statuses that are in play. The one thing he has not told the House this afternoon is that there is of course a fourth option, a fourth option on which his speeches relied on many occasions before both the Committee of 24 and (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) – [Technical interruption] a principle or an option on which his speeches relied, both before the C24 and the Fourth Committee. So there is a status, which is not one of those three statuses which he said had an element of independence in them in one way or another which might be a tailor-made solution that applied to any particular territory.

So, Mr Speaker, that is as far as I am prepared to go. I do not think it is in anybody's interest for us to go further at this stage because, Mr Speaker, if he were right – if he were right – and I were to say in that context incorrectly that we are not decolonising until we are taken off the list, we would be doing a great disservice to the people of Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: On the contrary –

Hon. Chief Minister: If I am right and... or rather, if he is wrong, Mr Speaker, and you are not actually decolonised in the context of international law until you are taken off the list, well then, Mr Speaker, what do we achieve by going around saying that we are decolonised, if we are actually not decolonised.

So, Mr Speaker, it is a hangman's noose and I think people need to understand that the importance of being at the C24 primarily is that Spain is there putting her arguments and we will always turn up to counter them.

FCO paper on Overseas Territories Government policy re Gibraltar

Clerk: Question 674, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: I regret I was not able to persuade the hon. Member to join us in our very sound policy position on that matter.

Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what, if any, aspects or contents of the recently published Foreign Commonwealth Office paper on the Overseas Territories, entitled 'Security, Success and Sustainability' is contrary to the Government's policy insofar as relates to Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, can I take my cue from him and say that I regret that, despite our differences, he could not find it in his heart to join me, as I invited him to do in June before the C24, because whether we agree or disagree about what the effect of the C24 may be, seeing us there together I think is good for Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, in answer to this question, there are many aspects of the White Paper on Overseas Territories which are very positive and some which the Government considers to be less positive. We are engaged in addressing all aspects of the White Paper with relevant UK Ministers and officials and it would be inappropriate at this stage to say more, but I would be very happy indeed to consider aspects of the White Paper with the hon. Gentleman if he wishes to have that discussion with me outside this House.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, whilst I accept that that position may be one on which he can stand at this point in time, and indeed for some shorter time, there comes a point, given that the UK has described this document as indeed the previous one called, 'Partnerships...' something or other, in my days, given that the UK regards this as the bible – and I agree with him there is a lot that is positive – but at some point the Government is, I think, going to be duty bound to explain in this House what parts of the document that the UK thinks is key to our bilateral relation that it does not share. But I accept that if the hon. Member is not ready to do that now, because they are still working through the implications and discussing it bilaterally, that is fine, but certainly our view would be – obviously there is nothing that I can do to oblige him to do it publicly... but our view is that at some appropriate time, it is legitimate for the House to understand what there is in that document that clashes with the policy position of the Government of the day, as I would have not minded doing, had the boot been on the other foot and I had been asked. But I might have asked for what he has now asked, which is time to consider the implications bilaterally with the UK.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not so much a question of considering bilaterally with the UK or needing more time to work through. The document has been worked through. We are already engaging with the UK, as it is our obligation to do.

Mr Speaker, if I can just go back a step in the Order Paper, and for the United Kingdom to say, 'This is it, boys and girls,' well, that is colonialism, Mr Speaker. That is unacceptable.

I do not actually read the White Paper in that sense. I read the White Paper as what White Papers are intended to be. Therefore there are issues on which we are engaging outside the public consultation process, because the hon. Gentleman would not have expected the Government of Gibraltar, whether headed by him or me, to simply form part of the public consultation process with the hundreds of thousands of other citizens of the overseas territories, and indeed of the United Kingdom, the millions in the United Kingdom who might have wanted to form part of a public consultation process.

There are parts of the White Paper that we think are not appropriate but may have been put there aiming towards actions and behaviour in other territories where they may be appropriate or they may appear to us to be appropriate from the outside for temporal reasons.

Mr Speaker, it is a question of continuing engagement with the UK on these issues and I have said what I said advisedly. If he has spotted things there which he wants to bring to our attention, I dare say we spotted the same ones and that we are taking up those same ones, but I would be delighted to have a discussion with him outside the hearing of these microphones.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, there is a key issue here, would the hon. Member agree with me? There could be different views about whether specific contents are or are not objectionable, whether we like some or do not like some, or like them all, or do not like any of them. In my view that is less important because I think the hon. Member is right in saying that this is not a document drafted for Gibraltar and in the application and in the attitude towards the implementation of it, the UK will take a horses-for-courses approach and will not use the document for the same purposes in relation to all of the overseas territories, as indeed they did not with the previous one.

So my concern is not that. My concern, which I would ask the hon. Member simply to keep in his mind is the one of principle, and that is the extent to which the UK would be free [Technical interruption] if it were minded to in such a document to purport, to circumvent or even to modify formal constitutional arrangements. In other words, my view always has been that of course the UK has power to modify the Constitution and it has power to legislate for the overseas territories, although it happily has not done so for Gibraltar for many years, but these documents, White Papers, are not capable of effectively moderating, altering the content of the Constitution in terms of who is responsible, primarily who is responsible for what. That is the overriding principle and I think is probably the only important principle that arises from these documents, which in their content may all be very good and may describe precisely the sort of co-operative relationship that ought to exist between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom – so long as it is not viewed by the United Kingdom as a droit du seigneur to modify the Constitution whenever it feels like it as if the Constitution were not a primary source of law, binding as much on the United Kingdom Government as on Gibraltar, which is often forgotten. The Constitution is a UK piece of legislation which binds us all, not just us in this House and our fellow citizens, but indeed, the United Kingdom as well, in how it deals with Gibraltar.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have never heard droit du seigneur used in that context before, but I understand how he uses it. I had heard it used in a much more amusing context previously. I am sure he – (Interjection and laughter) Well, it depends what the seigneur is trying to do, I suppose.

Mr Speaker, I actually think that we need to go a bit further than that. I think that markers have to be put down in respect of certain things and some of them have to be put down privately, in other words in correspondence, because it is not appropriate to say those things publicly; but some things have to be said publicly and it may be that we come to the stage where the Government feels that it needs to express a view in respect of some aspects of the White Paper in public, if we do not receive the assurances that we expect to receive – assurances, Mr Speaker, we do not think it would be hard for us to receive, because as the hon. Gentleman has said, there are some things in there which are clearly designed to fit other territories and perhaps most of the other territories, but very clearly do not fit Gibraltar and its present constitutional arrangements in particular.

But look, Mr Speaker, a White Paper is a White Paper. It has no status, in my view, other than as a political document. It does not upset what is the law of the United Kingdom and the hon. Gentleman is right to say, of course, that the Constitution of Gibraltar is a piece of UK legislation as binding on the United Kingdom, until it takes the necessary legislative Acts to change it, as it is amongst us in Gibraltar.

So I think it is appropriate to end this part of the debate, unless he wants to get up and say something else, by repeating something I said to him, perhaps I think in the first Question Time – we have had so many this year already – in January... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) well, you are only missing one, we are catching up – which is this, Mr Speaker, that there is only one direction of travel in respect of the Constitution and it is the one we are all in this House agreed on and that is in the direction of further emancipation. This is a one-way road. There is no way back.

Commercial use of airfield Renewal of MOD agreement

Clerk: Question 675, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, and if I may just add, Mr Speaker, to that at the end, in fact and in practice as much as in law.

Hon. P R Caruana: Since it has become fashionable to prefix a question with a reference to the previous one, Mr Speaker, much as I would like to travel with him to New York, he will surely understand that I cannot at one and at the same time occupy the position that we have achieved, our decolonised status, and at the same time go to the United Nations and ask for it. It is just not a coherent position.

The question that has been called from the Order, I am –

Clerk: Question 675.

Hon. P R Caruana: – obliged, Mr Speaker, for the very indulgent mood this afternoon, I have to say –

Mr Speaker: It is Friday afternoon. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: That must be the reason!

Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the Government has renewed the agreement with the MOD relating to the commercial use of the airfield, which expired in December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): If I might, Mr Speaker, just deal with the point raised before I address the answer to the question.

Mr Speaker, that begs the question of why he would attend the Fourth Committee meetings in October which are essentially to a very great extent for the same purpose which is the General Assembly's consideration of the Report of the Committee of 24. Anyway, those arguments I am sure we can have elsewhere. It is probably good for both our blood pressures that we do not travel together to New York, but I hope that in October he will be able to join me!

Mr Speaker, in answer to this question, the answer remains as set out in answer to Question 470/2012.

Hon. P R Caruana: I see, Mr Speaker.

Can the hon. Member give the House any sort of indication of whether this is a negotiation that the Government thinks is difficult and complex and therefore may continue to take time to finalise or whether he, on the contrary, sees it as business that can be disposed of quite quickly now?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I can tell him is that I expected to have meetings with the Ministry of Defence in respect of this and other matters last week, but because of the change in the Budget session, those have now been shunted forward to next week. This, as he will know and I think I told him last time, is one of the issues on the agenda.

There are figures being provided to us which are enabling us to do the exercise that we want to do in order to get to the stage where we make a decision in respect of this contract.

Airfield use by RAF Discussions re local traffic disruption

Clerk: Question 676, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether, welcome as the airfield's continuing value to and use by the RAF is, there was any liaison and discussions between the MOD and the Government to minimise the considerable disruption to local traffic that resulted and continues to result at key hours from the ongoing exercises?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the MOD notified the Government in advance about their use of Gibraltar by RAF aircraft for exercise purposes. The Government was assured that the MOD would try to keep disruption to a minimum. To this end, in order to minimise disruption, the station commander was asked to carefully manage the flying programme and to liaise with the RGP's Traffic Department so that the traffic management plans formulated during busy periods were elaborated with full knowledge of movements at the Airport.

We have been very happy indeed to see the detachment of Hawks, which arrived in April, and the Tornados we have seen in July using Gibraltar for their exercises. They are – and I am sure I speak for the whole House – very welcome indeed.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker, they are, and we could welcome them more often without disruption to our road traffic, if only the tunnel can be finished as quickly as possible. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, of course I know that the MOD certainly does not go out of its way to maximize inconvenience and I am sure would want to minimise inconvenience to the greatest possible degree, but the question is the extent to which the Government is satisfied that that in fact has happened. For example, is the Government satisfied that landing and taking off times, as part of the training exercise or outgoing or incoming jet fighters, have been scheduled to the greatest possible extent to avoid key frontier crossing times – nine o'clock in the morning, between 8.30 and 9.15, the evening rush hour back, that sort of thing. The question is not information and co-operation, but whether the Government is satisfied that, given that we want them to use the airfield for training, given that they obviously want to cause the minimum degree of disruption, that has happened and key runway closure times have been avoided.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, given that they want to avoid all of those problems, as the hon. Gentleman has himself conceded, we must therefore, unless we do not accept that given, believe that that has been the case, and would, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman had developed the tunnel for the price and within the timeframe that he promised Gibraltar that he was going to. Instead, we have found ourselves, as he knows, Mr Speaker, inheriting the chaos of litigation. I will not say any more in the interests of not affecting Gibraltar's case in that matter which is presently before the Court in London, but the tunnel ain't there and it was supposed to be two years ago.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, alas, we were relying on Gibraltar still having a competent Government able to handle both the litigation and the ongoing building of the tunnel and its funding – and its funding, Mr Speaker. So all I can do from these lowly benches here is to encourage the hon. Member to proceed with the tunnel and persuade him, in as non-partisan possible a way, that this is something that Gibraltar wants and needs.

I think it is implicit in the statement, and I will not press him further, but it is implicit in the hon. Member's answer that, whilst he shares my view that the MOD is welcome to use the runway and that he shares my view that the MOD would want to minimise, but actually there has been no co-ordination of landing of which the Government is aware, of which he is aware, to specifically avoid specific times for landings and takings off of these aeroplanes. It is implicit. He has invited me to take it to assume that that is the case, because otherwise we would be impugning our view that they want to minimise, which suggests that he does not actually know.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I could just, on the tunnel, give him a piece of unsolicited advice. He really needs to stop digging, which is to an extent is what we have done! (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) (Laughter) Which to an extent is what we have done for this reason. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker, I know that he could not bear to hear the whole of my reply, during the course of the Appropriation Bill, but the point about the hole in the public finances, which would have just got bigger if we had carried on with a project that required £55 million to finish the tunnel, I think is a point already well made.

Mr Speaker, we actually believe that there has been the level of co-operation necessary in order to avoid key times for runway closings insofar as that has been possible, but there are other criteria which apply in respect of when aircraft can and cannot take off for particular exercises. I think some of them also involved other nation states, so that was not possible in every instance, but we are satisfied with the way and the manner in which these things were handled, in co-operation with the people who we have now made solely responsible for traffic management on the ground, namely the RGP. He knows that they now control also the Highways Enforcement Officers' cadre which he created in his final four years in office.

New ID cards and driving licences Intention to introduce

Clerk: Question 677, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government intends to issue (i) new identity cards and (ii) new driving licences; and, if so, when?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is the Government's intention to provide new format identify cards, including chip and pin or similar technology, and new driving licences to comply with EU requirements. When Government is ready to introduce these new cards, it will make the relevant announcement.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Government say whether it has taken a view on this question which we had before us about whether the Government would invest in the technology to produce these cards locally or whether to avoid that cost the Government would have these cards printed in the UK by a printer?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he threw me a little bit [Technical interruption] with the use of the word 'produce' the cards. The physical card, the plastic comes blank and that is the option we have chosen. The printing of the card will take effect in Gibraltar, so literally white pieces of card will arrive in Gibraltar and they will be printed using our own technology in Gibraltar to be the new identity cards and driving licences that will be distributed.

Community care
Intended changes to system

Clerk: Question 678, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the Government considers that there is any need to bring about a change to the system of Community Care by ceasing to make grants to the current private trust and replacing those with grants in favour of a different arrangement?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the position of successive Governments of Gibraltar, I am sure he would agree, is that Community Care is a private charitable trust and the Government has no control over its affairs.

As we have said in our manifesto, which I will read out, given that after the last session Members opposite complained that we would not read out the relevant parts of that splendid document, in relation to Community Care's future, we said as follows:

'In 1996 Community Care had assets of £63 million of which £60 million was in cash and was available to provide support to resident pensioners and others with the income from its investments. In the last 15 years, its reserves have been run down to zero in a deliberate policy in order to replace its role by alternative arrangements.

This was first announced by Mr Caruana in 2009 and it was stated that legislation would be introduced that would ensure that no loss of support for those getting it or with a right to do so in future would take place and that new arrangements would better protect such payments from claims by non-residents. The new arrangements were originally said to be designed to remove any possible claims by non-residents.

No such action has taken place, except that this year it was stated that as from 2012'

– of course, 'this year' meaning 2011 –

'the payments would be provided as a legal entitlement, together with social insurance pensions. On the basis of this statement we believe such a change would have the very opposite effect of what was claimed to be the purpose of the exercise. Rather than protect Gibraltar from any claims or liability to pay non-residents, it would make it legally binding to do so. In other words, it will bring about what it was said it was intended to prevent.

Unless and until someone produces evidence that such a change will benefit Gibraltar based pensioners, we remain fully committed to restore the fortunes of Community Care and ensure its survival.

To this end we are committed to resume funding it in excess of its annual requirements as from April 2012 so that once again it is able to meet all its commitments and better its reserves to achieve its own investment income and not to have to rely solely on Government grants, the position it enjoyed in 1996.

Given that its outgoings are now much higher, the target is that it should have been able to build up its reserves currently zero to at least £100 million by the time of the next General Election.'

This is on page 63 of our manifesto, Mr Speaker.

We are also committed, Mr Speaker, on page 27 of our manifesto, as follows, in respect of our projections for growth of our economy:

'No doubt we shall get the same reaction to the benefits contained in this Manifesto as we have had in the past elections from others – they will tell you it is impossible and will ruin Gibraltar.'

Well, Mr Speaker, that first projection was certainly true – it took them 10 minutes to say that.

'... in the 2007 General Election our Manifesto was costed on a predicted GDP level of £800 million and a projected level for this financial year of £1.2 billion. Our figures have proved remarkably accurate. The figure for 2007/08 published some 18 months later was £804 million and the estimate for last year was £1 billion. We are assuming that in the current year the size of the Gibraltar economy will reach £1.1 billion. On this basis, the programme in this Manifesto is designed to be delivered with an economy that grows from £1.1 billion to £1.65 billion between 2011 and 2015. In the same period Government revenue is projected to grow from £400 million to £600 million and Government expenditure projected to grow from £375 million to £525 million. On this basis the surplus for the current year would be £25 million growing to a level of £75 million at the time of the next General Election. In effect, Government revenue is being kept at a constant ratio to GDP and it will grow at the same rate as the economy. Government expenditure growth will be kept below the growth in the economy and limited to an increase of 40% over the 4 year period. The annual surplus that will result from these figures will be gifted to Gibraltar Community Care in each of the 4 years to allow the charity to meet its current and future costs and build up its reserves so that in the future it will once again be totally independent of Government grants.'

That is our published political position on the matter of Community Care funding.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker... So the answer to my question is no, which he could just have said.

Mr Speaker, I note that the hon. Member says that he is planning to donate the entirety of the Budget surplus for the next four years to Community Care. If he plans to do that, can he say to this House where is he going to fund the rest of his programme from, without increasing public debt?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to have the Budget debate all over again. We have already set out exactly what we are going to do, and I will remind him, Mr Speaker, that in respect of Community Care in particular, during the course of the Budget debate I set out very clearly a question to the hon. Member which related to the aspect of our manifesto which I read first, which set out what he had said in respect of the changes he was going to implement to Community Care. He was, Mr Speaker... I am not going to say suspicious, but I will say ominously silent on the point of Community Care and in replying to any of the invitations that I set out for him to respond.

So, Mr Speaker, that is the question that is still on the table between us: what would have been the mechanisms he would have implemented in respect of Community Care? I offered him, Mr Speaker, the possibility not just of telling us across the floor of the House, but of telling me behind the Speaker's Chair, confidentially, what the mechanisms he intended to implement are, and unless I missed him trying to grab my eye on the way out, he has not sought to tell us what that position is.

As to how we are going to, Mr Speaker, donate the surplus to Community Care and deliver our programme without increasing debt... Well, it is obvious, Mr Speaker, that he does not know how to do it, and I am not going to explain it to him.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I have some news for him: he is obliged to explain it to this Parliament. That is what the Parliament that he wanted to make more transparent and more meaningful and more relevant to the democracy of Gibraltar is for; not so that he can taunt with non-explanations, but rather for which he should give more explanations.

Mr Speaker, the purpose of supplementary questions is most purely to ask questions which are raised by the answer given to the original question. He chose, in a question which had nothing to do with it, to give me a spiel about the fact, which ended with a statement that the Government was going to donate its Budget surpluses to Community Care. I have therefore asked him, given that he is committed both to giving the whole of the Government's recurrent Budget surplus to one organisation called Community Care, and that he is also committed – and therefore he has got no spare money in his Budget to pay for capital expenditure – and is also committed to cutting the gross public debt by 50%, Mr Speaker... He will have to explain to this House – and I am asking him now in supplementary – how he can reconcile that commitment, which he has just raised in this House today, and therefore I am entitled to ask him supplementaries about how he intends to reconcile that commitment, assuming that his understanding goes beyond simply being able to read what a manifesto drafted by others contains – how he proposes to reconcile that commitment with the commitment to reduce public debt and deliver all the other increases in recurrent expenditure and cut all the revenue by all the ways that he has promised to recover the revenue, and still have money to give Budget surpluses to the tune of £75 million over the next four years.

Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Member, it is not I that may not understand how these things work, but he – because it is axiomatic, isn't it? Doesn't he agree that if you are going to give all your spare revenue over income to a charity, you do not have it to do other things with, and all the other things are all the other things that he has promised, which by the way are not just increasing expenditure but reducing revenue, and it is not including cutting tax to 17%.

So, Mr Speaker, what I am asking is: is the hon. Member committing – recommitting – his Government in this House today to doing all of those things?

Hon. Chief Minister: He just does not get it, Mr Speaker; that is the problem. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) He does not understand, beyond the way that he has explained it, how it is possible to finance a manifesto like ours and deliver it, and I am therefore very happy to recommit myself to it today because I am confident that it can be and grant surpluses to Community Care.

Mr Speaker, what I am telling him is not 'I am not going to tell you'; it is that he is going to see how it is done as we do it over the next four years, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and we are recommitted to doing it. We are recommitted to doing it by my statements in this House today, if he wants that to be the case.

I said during the course of the Budget debate, in my primary intervention and during my reply – although I recognise that he was not here to hear the whole of it – that I recommitted my Party to everything set out in my manifesto being delivered in the next four years. I told him, he might remember, that I would not be taking the route to the trapdoor that he offered me, where he said, 'If you like, because I have not left you enough in public finances – according to you, Fabian – come through this door where you say "That's my excuse for not delivering the manifesto."' I told him I was not going to go through that trapdoor.

Mr Speaker, this is becoming what is known in Spanish as el cuento de la buena pipita. I am going to tell him again. Would he like to tell me, would he like to inform Gibraltar, this House, or just me behind the Speaker's Chair, what the new arrangements he was proposing for Community Care were?

I said very clearly, Mr Speaker, in our manifesto – and everybody accuses me of having drafted the document; it is nice that somebody says somebody else drafted it – what our position was going to be in respect of Community Care and how we are going to fund it, and I am recommitting ourselves to it.

Mr Speaker, he said in his manifesto, and before that to the general public, that he would be implementing a new system that was better than Community Care. Mr Speaker, is it so much to ask him to tell us what that new system was?

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member cannot get used to the fact that he now answers questions which I ask, I am very happy to change roles with him again! (Interjections) By 237 votes, or something like that, the people of Gibraltar, for whose judgement I have the utmost respect, have decided that I should be cast in the role of asker of questions and he is cast in the role of answerer of questions; a casting, by the way, that I suspect many people have come to regret already.

But Mr Speaker, nevertheless it remains such and it really does not become the Government to ask questions across the floor and to invite the Opposition to design policy for the Government.

If the hon. Member does not think that Community Care needs reforming – as he has just informed me in the previous question he believes it does not need reforming – then what interest does he have in how I would have reformed it, who does think it needs reforming? Unfortunately for me, and I believe for Gibraltar, the GSD is no longer in Government. The hon. Member now saddles the whole community with the view of the Government that Community Care does not need reforming. It is not for him to taunt the Opposition to disclose what the Opposition would have done to fix a problem had it been elected into office, which the hon. Members do not think is a problem that needs fixing.

Mr Speaker they have to decide... This is why I asked him the question. I asked him the question in order to decide whether the Opposition should help the Government out. If the hon. Member had said, 'Yes, I do think there is a possible problem there for Gibraltar,' – what I call the ticking time bomb – 'but I am sorry, you know, we just cannot understand how we might fix it,' I would have rushed to No. 6 and given him the benefit of my ideas. But he has told Gibraltar in this House today that he does not think the problem needs fixing, he does not think that there is a problem. In those circumstances, for him to ask me to contribute to fashioning a solution for him is entirely, in my view, inappropriate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I actually believe that he is right that many people in the General Election now regret how they cast their votes, and that if the vote were called again, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) the majority that we would enjoy would be much greater than 237 votes. (Banging on desks) It would be well into the thousands, where it will be after the next General Election.

Hon. P R Caruana: If you think that, call an Election now! (Laughter) I challenge you to call an Election now!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he did not pick up when I said before –

Hon. P R Caruana: Call an Election!

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: – that it was not his last term in Government, it was his final term in Government after the last time.

Mr Speaker, we are not going to put Gibraltar through the expense of another General Election quite at this stage –

Hon. P R Caruana: We will pay for it!

Hon. Chief Minister: – but we are very much thinking... Yes, that's nicely rigged if you pay for it!

Hon. P R Caruana: We will pay for it.

Hon. Chief Minister: We are very much looking forward to the next General Election, Mr Speaker, because in that General Election, where I confidently expect that I will be facing a different opponent as Leader of the GSD – 885 Hon. P R Caruana: But you will still have the same [inaudible].

Hon. Chief Minister: – and by which time I will have had the opportunity of wishing him a much more elegant (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) adieu than he might have wished any of his political opponents, and thanking him for the service that he will have given to Gibraltar to date, he will also have had the opportunity of explaining to people why it is that since 2011 – and, in fact, Mr Speaker, since 2010 when he was in Government – the hon. Gentleman was saying – not from Opposition, as he is today, but from Government – that, in his view, Community Care was a ticking time bomb that he said he was not willing to bequeath to our future generations. In 2010, Mr Speaker, he said, in January, in his New Year speech, ‘I will be introducing in this Budget in 2010 significant reforms to protect Gibraltar from this possibility. Reform will not result in financial loss to our pensioners or recipients of Community Care.’ That was the plan of the Government, Mr Speaker, in 2010.

So I am not asking him what plan did he have if he won the Election now, as Leader of the Opposition, to share with him; I am saying to him, Mr Speaker, what on earth was he basing that on, if he did not have a design or a plan at the time? Because, Mr Speaker, in 2010, in their Budget, the hon. Member did not mention the words ‘Community Care’.

Mr Speaker, what we were saying... and I said it specifically in my first intervention on the Budget, in my principal speech, not in my reply – because he missed an excellent part of that, in my principal speech – we do not think Community Care has a problem. I said that specifically, but you said, on a number of occasions, and I listed them, Mr Leader of the Opposition, when you were Chief Minister, that you believed that Community Care had a problem. I said to him, Mr Speaker, and I repeat to him, I therefore now call on the Leader of the Opposition to make public in his reply what he was going to do in 2010. In other words, what were the plans of the Government in 2010? One cannot say that one is going to do things without having some sort of plan. Or was it, Mr Speaker, that there was no plan?

You see, Mr Speaker – and this is how I finished my intervention on this issue – if we are wrong – and we do not believe we are wrong; we believe there are no problems with Community Care, but if we are wrong – it is actually very bloody-minded of the hon. Gentleman to simply say, ‘Go and sail into this problem,’ and ‘I will not help you, because I was rejected by 237 votes,’ and ‘Let Gibraltar have the problem, because I won’t tell you what my design and what my alternative plan for Community Care was. Find yourself, Gibraltar, in the quagmire, because I didn’t win by 237 votes.’

Mr Speaker, how bad can that be? Mr Speaker, we were actually saying, ‘Peter if you have got a better plan, share it and we may actually come out and say that your plan was better than ours. This is too important to be playing party politics on.’ But, Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman has said today in his last intervention is to confirm in terms, in terms ‘As I did not win the Election, then you can go and sail into the problems. I don’t care.’ Well, Mr Speaker, what an attitude!

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the attitude that he has just described is not the one that I described, but certainly it was the one that the GSLP announced in 1996 on the night of 16th May (Interjection) when the then recently elected Leader of the Opposition said that Gibraltar had the Government that it deserved, and then went on to re-elect it for another 16 years.

Mr Speaker, I sincerely hope that as the man who has the fortunes of this community in his hands for the next three-and-a-half years at least, I sincerely hope that the powers of analysis and the powers of listening and regurgitation and the powers of discernment from what he hears his interlocutor say are not as he has just described them to be. I know that he wants to portray me to the people of Gibraltar as a traitor who left him with a huge financial black hole. Look, Mr Speaker, I have not said that Gibraltar can stew in its own juice; I have said the opposite. I have asked him whether he thinks there is a ‘juice’, and given that he has told me that there isn’t a juice and therefore he does not think there is any possibility of stewing, then I do not have to give him my stewing recipe. After all, why should I give him my favourite stew recipe when he does not want to eat a stew because he does not think there is a need for one? He is confusing remedy with the identification of whether a problem exists in the first place.

Mr Speaker, if he wants to have analogies, then the analogy is this: here is somebody who declares that he is fit as a fiddle and wants to berate somebody else for not prescribing the remedy for an illness that he says does not exist, never existed and will not exist. Well, Mr Speaker, he can try and convert all of that into the statement that the ex-Chief Minister, because he lost by 238 votes or whatever the number was, is happy to let Gibraltar sink – in his words, Mr Speaker.

All he has to say is declare publicly that he thinks that there is a problem in Community Care – in other words, reverse the position that he has announced in his Budget and today – and then, if he wants, we can work together on designing a solution, and I will be very happy to carry into that exercise if the Government needs the Opposition’s help in doing that job, as he might wish.

But what I am certainly not going to do it is on the hypothetical basis which is created by the circumstance that he does not think there is a problem at all, that he thinks – well, not him; the Minister for Employment, who is absent from the Chamber today, thinks – that his creation, Community Care, is perfect and is not a problem for Gibraltar now or in the future. If that is what they think, then they must want the solution, to what the problem would be if it was not okay, for reasons other than fixing something, because they do not think there is anything that needs fixing. So what he wants is to get the solution for the purposes of playing politics with it, but not to apply to save Gibraltar from anything, because he does not think Gibraltar needs saving.

Mr Speaker, I have been in this House just a little bit longer than him.

Hon. Chief Minister: I thought he was supposed to be asking questions, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: If he does not like what I am saying, I am happy to sit down.

Hon. Chief Minister: I thought you had said you were ready to ask questions.

Hon. P R Caruana: If he is having difficulty hearing what I am saying, I am happy to sit down.

Hon. Chief Minister: I have absolutely no difficulty hearing what he is saying, but I am going to subject it to careful analysis to show him why it is that he is wrong about all of it.

Mr Speaker, in what I told him during the course of the Budget debate, I actually said that we were committed to the things I have now read out to him. I said it during the course of the Budget debate, Mr Speaker, and he did not come back and say, 'Well, look, I am not going to give you my answer, my new design, because you have recommitted yourself to the manifesto.' He, instead, kept schtum about the whole thing and then set down this Question.

Mr Speaker, thank goodness we have got Hansard and we will be able to go back and see what the hon. Gentleman said, and not rely on his version of what it is that he said or his now desired interpretation of what it is that he said before I rose and dealt with his previous supplementary.

Mr Speaker, I have actually not accused him of being a traitor. I have said that this attitude to Community Care displays what his politics are like. If I were to accuse him of being a traitor, Mr Speaker, it might not be about this, because the first thing that springs to mind is to remind him that he is the only Chief Minister of Gibraltar who has ever said outside of Gibraltar, in Spain, that he might be prepared to consider putting – supporting – the Andorra-style solution to the people of Gibraltar in a referendum. There are those who might consider that to be treachery.

I have not put it to him in those terms, Mr Speaker, but I will tell him this: he now says what the hon. the Member with the responsibility for employment and other matters, who is not in the Chamber today, said to him, having lost the Election in 1996. Mr Speaker, I think it is appropriate to remind him of what he said to the then the Leader of the Opposition in 1996 when he lost the Election and in 2000 and 2003 and 2007 when he lost the Election, which was, 'You should go because you have lost the Election and political leaders, when they lose elections, should have the decency to vacate their posts and allow younger blood to take over.' (Interjection and laughter) Mr Speaker, if he said then that that was appropriate for the Hon. Mr Bossano – and Mr Bossano did not take his advice, rightly, and well done; now there he is, back in Government – it may be, Mr Speaker, that either (a) he has changed his position, or (b) he needs to be giving himself a dose of his own medicine.

Medicine, Mr Speaker, brings me to this business of not being allowed to know what the remedy is for any illness other than the illness that one is suffering, in his example. Is it, Mr Speaker, that one is not entitled to consult a textbook to find out what the answer is to a common cold until one has the common cold, in his style of politics? Mr Speaker, is it that somebody can sit on this chair, with the responsibilities that it carries, for two years since 2010, tell people – the elderly, in particular – that he is going to amend Community Care, the whole structure of it, and change it and redesign it, and actually not have a clue of what you are going to replace it with?

Because, Mr Speaker, one is left with the impression that, actually, all those statements were made in the Budget in 2009, in the New Year's message in 2010, in the Budget in 2011, and not followed through because actually there was, behind St Peter's Chair – if you will excuse the analogy with the Chair in the Vatican – absolutely no plan whatsoever to replace Community Care, no design whatsoever to replace Community Care with something safer or something less safe.

Mr Speaker, he will know he is entitled to have his files of his Government confidential in all matters in respect of correspondence etc, but I am entitled to have access in respect of others. I lay down the gauntlet, and it is a simple one: will he allow me to have access to any file of his D-series which contains the new plan for Community Care? It is that simple.

Statutory old-age pensions
Review of current system

Clerk: Question 679, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether the Government considers that there is any need to review, reform or change the current system of statutory old-age pensions?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member knows, and as we have repeatedly stated in the past from the Opposition benches, and given a commitment in our Election manifesto, and stated in the recent Budget session, the answer is yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member able to say when he thinks that that might emerge, roughly? Are we talking about weeks, months, the end of the year, early next year? Any timescale?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will tell him it is a work in progress. He was very averse to having any Member of the Opposition be the timekeeper for his projects. It is a work in progress and it is certainly something that we want to see the light of day very soon indeed; but because it is, he will understand, a project that requires careful work, I am not going to commit ourselves to any particular time, other than what might already have been said in this House during the course of the Budget debate about how that work is progressing.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I was averse to being pressed by the Opposition to say when I was going to deliver a policy that I had not said I would deliver by any particular time during a four-year mandate. This is not the case here, where they have said in their manifesto that they would do this within a period of time which I think has expired already, and I think the... I was going to say the Chief Minister – I mean the Minister for Employment, indicated – in fact, apologised, or expressed regret, if not apologised – during his Budget address for the fact that it has not been possible for him to do it by early July, or by the beginning of July, as had been the announcement.

So it is because there has been an acknowledgement by the Government already that they are late with this in accordance with their own timetable, not with one that I am trying to pin on them, that I am just asking whether he has any idea when this commitment – that they had planted for July, but has not yet emerged – is likely to emerge. It is not comparable to what they used to do to me.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not agree. I do not recognise what the hon. Gentleman has said. In fact, I do not think that the apology related to this matter. Perhaps he would like to point me in the direction of what was actually said.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, perhaps he was not in the Chamber when the Minister for Employment gave his address, but does he not recall the Minister for Employment expressing regret that he had not had... I think he put it down to legislative drafting time or something, that it had not proved possible for him to bring the changes to the reform of Social Security and pensions that he was working on, and that he would bring them as soon as possible. This question is designed to just place a timetable on that, but clearly he does not know, and it does not matter. We will find out on some other day.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if the hon. the Clerk will give me the opportunity, I am just looking at the Budget speech because I do not recognise what the hon. Gentleman is saying in the Budget speech of the Hon. Mr Bossano, so if I can just have a moment, or perhaps we can recess, then I can have an opportunity of checking that, because I think he has confused different parts of our manifesto.

So, Mr Speaker, if this might be a convenient moment, we might recess for five minutes.

Mr Speaker: Five minutes. The House will recess for five minutes. (Interjection) I think the Hon. Chief Minister wants to answer the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: In the interest of clarity, Mr Speaker, I [inaudible].

Mr Speaker: The House will recess for five minutes.

The House adjourned at 5.02 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.07 p.m.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the short break.

Mr Speaker, the position actually is absolutely clear – and totally contrary to what the hon. Gentleman was saying – that the position set out in respect of Social Insurance reform in our manifesto is on page 62 and it does not have any time limit. We recall that before he sat down, the hon. Gentleman said, ‘But this was an issue which you had a time limit on and that is why I am holding you to it.’ So I am going to read it to him, Mr Speaker:

‘A GSLP Liberal Government will reform the entire structure of the Social Insurance Fund which is now insolvent.’

No time limit.

‘We will place the Fund on a viable footing.’

No time limit.

‘EU Law now requires equal pensionable age for men and women in all new schemes. In the new scheme we will pay pensions to men and women from age 60.’

No time limit.

And the bit that my hon. Colleague, the Minister for Employment, gave the House during the course of his Budget speech reads as follows:

‘The Social Security Fund as it stands is not viable. I have raised this issue many times from the Opposition benches. The hundreds of workers who pass through our economy and contribute to the Fund whilst here will one day become pensioners and create a future liability for Gibraltar greater than the one feared by the GSD Government as a result of the Civil Service Final Salary Pension Scheme.

I regret it has not been possible to move on this issue so as to limit the liability at least and ensure it does not continue to grow into the future. There is a manifesto commitment to act on this and I am still hopeful that it will be possible to bring in the new arrangements during this financial year.’

– but there is no manifesto commitment to be held to in terms of time. The hon. Gentleman, in his Budget speech, said that he hoped to do it within the financial year, so if he goes back to what I first said when I said, absent what might have been said in the Budget, that is the position, and there is no question of a manifesto time limit that he can time us to.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, I readily accept that there is no manifesto time commitment and that the part of the Minister for Employment’s Budget address that I had been alluding to was the statement of regret that it had not been possible to move on this issue. In other words, it is true that, contrary to what I suggested earlier, there is no time limit placed on the... no target date in the manifesto, but clearly this is something that they want to move on quickly, because the Hon. the Minister for Employment expressed regret that he had not been able to move on it yet. Therefore, the question is whether the Hon. Chief Minister can say when that will be forthcoming and if he can narrow it a little bit to the current financial year, which is 31st December next year. But I acknowledge, if he wants it formally for the record, that it was wrong of me to suggest that there was a deadline in the manifesto.

Hon. Chief Minister: I appreciate that, Mr Speaker, and I am grateful.
Mr Speaker, 31st March, not 31st December.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is March.

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry –

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, it is just the end of the financial year, 31st March.

Hon. Chief Minister: That is right. The hon. Gentleman just said now – and I think it was in error – 31st December. Yes, 31st March 2012.

Mr Speaker, yes, I echo the words of the hon. the Member for Employment. There was a manifesto commitment to act on this and we, as a Government, are still hopeful that it will be possible to bring in the new arrangement during this financial year, i.e. before 31st March. Hopeful – in other words, we are working towards that.

Spanish fishermen in Gibraltar waters
Number of arrests

Clerk: Question 680, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1140

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, how many arrests of Spanish fishermen in Gibraltar waters have occurred since 9th December 2011? He can provide me with the update, if he wants.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1145

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Sorry, the hon. Gentleman said something at the end of that which I did not quite –

Hon. P R Caruana: You can provide me with the update, because a question has been asked, a similar one.

1150

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, but he has asked about 9th December 2011, so I am going to answer in that respect, and it relates to arrests.

I am informed by the Royal Gibraltar Police that no Spanish fishermen have been arrested in Gibraltar waters during the dates in question.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, given that there have been no arrests and given that fishing has continued to take place, and that notwithstanding that there have been no arrests, does the hon. Member, with hindsight and the benefit of it, consider that it would have been possible and indeed perhaps more appropriate, rather than to have torn up the 1999 Agreement overnight, so to speak... whether he believes that that statistic indicates that the matter could have been dealt with, with less risk of horizontal contamination of other matters, by putting the Spanish side on notice of termination, allowing the Agreement to continue to prevail during that period of time, during which new arrangements might have been discussed and put in place in less strained circumstances?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are two things I need to say about that. The first is that I recognise the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition was not here for the last Question Time. For good reason he was not here, and so be it. The Hon. the Deputy Leader of the GSD – I do not know whether that makes him Deputy Leader of the Opposition because the Leader of the Opposition is a constitutional post. (Interjection) Indeed. Well, not unconstitutional; not envisaged in the Constitution, which is not to say that they are unconstitutional, Mr Speaker (Interjection) – asked me exactly the same question less than a month ago.

1170

Mr Speaker, I do not want to have that debate again, but I am happy to tell him that we remain of the view that we have acted absolutely properly. Mr Speaker, I do not recognise that there continues to be fishing as there was before in our waters. There is some fishing in breach of our laws which is, in some instances when it occurs, has involved Spanish fishing vessels being escorted by Guardia Civil vessels in breach not just of the Nature Protection Act but of the United Nations Conventions on the Law of the Sea and of the appropriate behaviour that should be displayed by one nation state in respect of the territorial waters of another nation state, in particular NATO and EU allies, as Britain, Gibraltar and the United Kingdom are with Spain.

Mr Speaker, would we have acted in a different way with hindsight? No, Mr Speaker, because there is a division between him and me as to what the effect of the 1999 Agreement is, and I said that to him when he was here for questions at the previous session, when I said to him if one believes that the 1999 Agreement is unconstitutional and a breach of the rule of law for all of the reasons that we debated previously, then one cannot tolerate that whilst one negotiates one's way out of it, because you cannot tolerate breaches of the law. It is not up to us to deal with application of the law; that is a matter, of course, for the Royal Gibraltar Police. We just make laws in this Parliament.

So, for all of those reasons, Mr Speaker, as I told him two months ago, as I told his Deputy one month ago, the short answer – and they always try and pin me down to a yes or no, and I am happy to give them one in this instance – is no, even with the benefit of hindsight.

1190

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, my question does not go to whether it is proper or improper, or whether they have acted properly or improperly. Different people in Gibraltar have different views on that question, just as different people in Gibraltar have different views on his confident assertion that the previous, the 1999 Fishing Agreement was unlawful or unconstitutional, and I have no hesitation in categorising myself amongst those who do not think it is either of those things, like the British Government did not think it was and the Commissioner of [inaudible]. But that is not the issue, Mr

Speaker. That is not the question. I am not asking him Questions designed to reopen any of those debates. The narrow question that I was putting to him – but his answer might still be the same – is given that the objection to the 1999 Agreement was the suggestion that it contained a behind-the-scenes understanding between the Government and the RGP that there would be no enforcement of the law – which, by the way, is not true... The Agreement does not say that they can fish. The Agreement is about the enforcement attitude of the RGP reverting to what it had been in earlier years, leaving the enforcement decision thereby in the hands of the RGP. I do not want to debate with him. I am happy to, if he wants to, but that is not the sense of my questions, to debate those aspects. Given that the Agreement left the enforcement of the law in the hands of the RGP, and that they chose to enforce it, he believes, by not arresting people, not because they were exercising any proper judgement, but because they were, in effect, complying with a behind-the-scenes agreement with the Government of the day, but the net result was that there were zero arrests, and that that, in fact, is the same net result as there has been since he tore up the Agreement; namely both with the 1999 Agreement and without the 1999 Agreement, the net result – albeit, he would argue, for different reasons – is zero arrests.

I am asking him, in those circumstances, doesn't he think that the considerable strife might have been avoided by just allowing the zero arrests to continue whilst different arrangements, which he regards as less unconstitutional and less illegal, had been put in place in a way which would not provoke as much as this unilateral thing appears to have provoked?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer him to the supplementary asked by the Hon. the Deputy Leader of the GSD on page 21 of the Hansard for Thursday, 21st June, at line 1005, where he said this:

'Now, does he not accept that, looking back in retrospect, this issue of the 1999 Agreement and how one tears up the 1999 Agreement – call it a memorandum of understanding or whatever it is that you wish to call it – but it has not been dealt with well by the Government side because, for example, you could have actually called in the Mayors of La Linea and Algeciras, the fishermen, in the same way as you are having discussions with them now, because you are having those discussions with them now, and say to them "Look here, as from six months' time the 1999 Agreement is out of the window..."'

So I have had this debate in the House, Mr Speaker, with the Hon. –

Hon. P R Caruana: I was here.

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry?

Hon. P R Caruana: I think I was here.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, you were not. The hon. Member, I am sorry to say, was not here for that one. This was when the Hon. the Deputy Leader of the Opposition was pretending to be the Leader of the Opposition already, so he definitely was not here for that one.

Mr Speaker, there is a difference. If we were just to say let's have this debate on the basis of the zero arrests, there is a difference, because you see, Mr Speaker, his question was about arrests but there have been reports for process, which there were not, Mr Speaker, before, under the 1999 Agreement.

He will know, Mr Speaker, as well as I do, that a police officer has many ways to deal with people who are breaching the law. He can either caution them, he can report them for process, he can arrest them, he can just give them a strict telling off, if he likes – and that is just down to the police officer at the time. What is happening now, when people are fishing here, Mr Speaker – and there are very few who are fishing here, and I will come to that in a moment – is that they are being escorted by very large boats of the Guardia Civil – usually two large Guardia Civil boats to one Spanish fishing vessel; something which I understand is annoying members of the Guardia Civil as much as it is everybody else, given that they also think that they have better things to do.

But, Mr Speaker, in that context, is he saying that what the Royal Gibraltar Police should do – and we do not interfere in what they should do – is ensure that they arrest, even if that means that they ram Guardia Civil vessels etc? First of all, I am sure he is not saying that. Second, Mr Speaker, he remembers, of course, every time he talked about upgrading the assets available to the Royal Gibraltar Police, but then actually never did that, and we, Mr Speaker, after 8th December 2011, ordered new and bigger boats for the RGP because they were having to rely – as people will know, Mr Speaker, and he will definitely know – on boats that they had confiscated from drugs magnates to be their vessels.

So, Mr Speaker, in that context, 'What is the difference?' he says. Well, I have done all the analysis that I have done as to what the 1999 Agreement achieved or did not achieve and whether it was contrary to the rule of law or contrary to the Constitution, and I stand by those, but what is the strict difference between the zero – and I forgive him the pun – net result arrests then and now? Well, Mr Speaker, there is a very big difference. A very big difference. There were upwards of 60 vessels fishing in our waters under the 1999 Agreement. They would come, not all at the same time but whenever they wished, three or four at a time. So on one night there might be three or four, on another night another three or four. What has happened in the past 60 days has been that the same two vessels, perhaps three, have come in to fish, contrary to the memorandum of understanding we have entered into with the Spanish cofradías, and those two or three vessels are outside the control of the cofradía, which is in effect the union. They are the ones that are always the blacklegs, whatever agreement has been reached by the cofradías with anybody else. The cofradías are staying away, and you have got these two or three that the Government of the Kingdom of Spain have decided should, if they want, have the protection of vessels which should not be in these waters, which should be used for other purposes and I would like to see, in conjunction with Royal Gibraltar Police vessels, controlling drug trafficking and people trafficking and other illicit activity in the Strait, rather than being involved in assisting in the breaches of Gibraltar's fine laws for the protection of our environment.

So, under the 1999 Agreement, any member of the cofradía would come and fish, and there were zero arrests. Post the 1999 Agreement, post 8th December when we get into the new situation and after the memorandum of understanding, no boats from the cofradía come to fish, except two or three blackguards who do not accept the discipline of their union and come and fish, and are then aided and abetted by the Guardia Civil. That is an important difference to this.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, it is an important temporary difference. It remains to be seen the terms upon which the hon. Members can permanently resolve this matter, and therefore it remains to be seen whether those terms are better than the 1999 Agreement, and it remains to be seen whether they are better or worse in terms of the circumstances in which they are seen to have been brought about under pressure etc. (A Member: Hear, hear.) But we do wish the Government luck on that, and I want the hon. Member to know that the position of the Opposition is that we would like to see this matter resolved as quickly as possible for the same reasons that we did the 1999 Fishing Agreement. For the very same reasons that we did the 1999 Fishing Agreement, we want the hon. Members to bring this matter to a satisfactory conclusion as quickly and as consistently as possible with Gibraltar's political rights, interests and jurisdictions in these waters. Part of that is the circumstances in which that is seen to be brought about and whether it seems to be... whether it looks the result of duress or a forced hand, or not, which is, amongst other reasons, why we did not change the law back in 1999. There is that aspect of the matter which is an inescapable consequence of resolving any problems of this sort.

But anyway, Mr Speaker, we remain of the view that the 1999 Agreement should not have been determined. We acknowledge that the hon. Members have a different view. We think their view is mistaken, but they are the Government – they are entitled to give vent to their policies and not ours. It remains, we think, therefore, that it is an unnecessary problem that has been created, but we remain to see and we will be the first to acknowledge if they are able to resolve it on better terms than we were able to obtain in 1999.

By the way, just for his further amusement, Mr Speaker, the new and bigger boats, as he calls them, that have arrived, are the ones that we had agreed to finance, but the order was actually put through by them, even though the RGP had already received the clearance, but I should hasten to add that my point – which is not that – is that those were not the bigger boats that Dr Garcia and I used to debate about during the last Parliament. We believe that in the context of the Coastguard Agency, the seafaring part of the Coastguard Agency, there ought to be bigger, sturdier vessels, not to ram Guardia Civil boats with, but to be able to assert jurisdictions in nautical accidents, search and rescue, when there is inclement weather resulting from... and this policy arose from the incidents of the two tankers where we found we had insufficiently large boats.

So, whilst congratulating the hon. Gentleman for going ahead with the ordering of these new bigger boats that he calls the fast boats that he was photographed with recently – even though he has no constitutional responsibility for the Police, as he keeps on reminding us, nevertheless he was keen to be photographed with them – will he acknowledge for me that those are not the boats that we were intending, and that we were intending much bigger boats? Not... yes, bigger boats in the context, and they are probably still somewhere in my office, the photographs and brochures of the sort of thing, some of them exaggeratedly large, we could not have prospered. Will he therefore accept from me a further urge, urging this afternoon, on a Friday, to continue with – (Interjection) Okay.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said a lot of things which I am happy to deal with.

First of all, he will recall that his statement about upgrading assets was made in respect of the confrontations which were ongoing at sea, I believe in 2009-10, in particular in his statements and his New Year message dealing specifically – and this is a matter of record, Mr Speaker, that he will see – dealing with the incursions of the Guardia Civil, that they might also have had a use in respect of problems like we had with the New Flame and the Fedra etc. Of course they might, but his statements were specific and they related to those issues which were affecting the RGP and arose from the Guardia

Civil purporting to exercise sovereignty, jurisdiction or control in our waters. Mr Speaker, we agreed with him, as he knows, and the Hon. Dr Garcia was as dogged as ever in trying to get across our agreement with him (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) so that he understood exactly how much we agreed with him and encouraged him to buy those boats.

Mr Speaker, I do recognise (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) that when we were elected the RGP had already set their eyes on these boats but had not yet made their order, and that we approved that order and it was therefore an order made in our time, and if there are, Mr Speaker, plans for even bigger boats –

Hon. P R Caruana: These were not the boats that Dr Garcia was –

Hon. Chief Minister: I look forward to seeing those plans and those designs because, although... I am prepared to take on trust the fact that there are such plans in his office. At least there are some plans for those, because I am sure there are no plans whatsoever for what he was talking about in respect of Community Care.

Mr Speaker, we do not feel under pressure to do any agreement in respect of fishing. Pressure is a state of mind. We have agreed with colleagues from La Línea and Algeciras a 60-day working process, involving experts in the field, that will lead us to conclusions. We feel very relaxed about that and we will not accept any new deadlines or timetables being imposed by anybody else for their own purposes, and we will act according to our understanding of what our law requires and what Gibraltar's environmental protection and sustainable fishing requires in the context of that timetable.

So he needs to look elsewhere, Mr Speaker, for people acting under pressure – perhaps, Mr Speaker, to the events of 1999, where there were stones thrown at vehicles round the back of Convent Place, with windscreens crashed, meetings with fishermen aborted, charges brought against people who were –

Hon. P R Caruana: Not thrown by Spanish fishermen.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, it would have been something if a Spanish fisherman had thrown a stone behind Convent Place – I don't fancy his chances, Mr Speaker! But members of the public in Gibraltar incensed in that way, Spanish fishermen having to be met at the airport for press conferences and meetings, Mr Speaker, because they could not be brought to No. 6 Convent Place, given how the temperature had risen to febrile levels by then. Mr Speaker, that is not the situation that we are in today. I know he does not wish such a situation upon us.

We are very relaxed about where we are going and we very much look forward to considering carefully the report of the internationally renowned experts that are members of the working group, together with some local fishermen and some Spanish fishermen.

MOD Lands Agreement Value of properties sold; expenditure on relocations

Clerk: Question 681, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Will the Chief Minister say, as at 30th June 2012, (i) what was the total value, by agreed sale price, of properties sold by Government from the properties transferred to it by the MOD under the last Lands Agreement; and (ii) what is Government's expenditure to date on the MOD relocations agreed therein?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the total value, by agreed sale price, of properties sold by the Government from the properties transferred to it by the MOD under the last Lands Agreement, as at 30th June 2012, was £1,839,500. Government expenditure to date on the MOD relocations therein agreed, is £331,985 –

Hon. P R Caruana: One hundred and...?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, £331,985.71.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the expenditure on relocations reflect a conscious decision that they should lag revenue, or is that simply that there are no plans afoot to go any faster than that, in terms of the projects themselves?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can tell him that he will have seen in the local press that Ms Lang MP was in Gibraltar this week, and that Ms Lang and other representatives of the Ministry of Defence who I met with were very happy with the progress that was being made in respect of this relocation programme, called Project Euston, and the pace at which it is going and its connection – as he will know, because he negotiated that for the Government – to the sale process of properties as they are handed over.

So everything is going, as far as I am concerned, apace. There is now design work going on and there are demolitions going on, which I think will make sense to him because I think he agreed the schedule of some of those things. So the expense side will go up when we are charged for designs. That has already started, but we have not been charged the full amount, I think, for those designs. I think there are tender processes also involved for some works, so those will bite when those tenders are awarded, and there is an intention – and I think, Mr Speaker, from reading the agreement, it was always intended it should be – that sales should go ahead before expenditure is incurred insofar as possible, and that those were linked, Mr Speaker.

I do not understand the Ministry of Defence to be dissatisfied with that. The Government side is not dissatisfied with that at the moment. It may be that at some stage we have a desire to either receive other bits of land more quickly, which would mean we have to hurry up the relocations, or that the MOD, for its own interest, may wish to hurry up relocations and may want to look at another type of programme for the relocations to go ahead.

Public debt Breakdown of net figure

Clerk: Question 682, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say, as at each of 30th April 2012, 31st May 2012 and 30th June 2012, what was (i) the gross public debt; (ii) the cash reserves; and (iii) therefore the net public debt?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 683 to 686.

Public debt Government debentures

Clerk: Question 683.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister give a breakdown, as of each of the 30th April, 31st May and 30th June 2012, in the three cases by debenture issues, of that part of the aggregate public debt which comprises Government debentures?

Gibraltar Savings Bank Outstanding debt securities

Clerk: Question 684.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister give a breakdown by nominal value and issue of the debenture or other debt securities that have been raised by the Gibraltar Savings Bank and remain outstanding as at each of 30th April, 31st May and 30th June 2012 in the three cases?

New recurrent expenditure measures
Estimated annualised cost

1450 Clerk: Question 685.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister provide the estimated annualised cost of each new recurrent expenditure measure introduced or announced by the Government since 9th December 2011?

1455

Government-owned companies
Breakdown of 2011-12 contribution

1460 Clerk: Question 686.

1465 Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say, of the £28.3 million shown on page 2 of this year's Budget Book as having been contributed in the year ended 31st March 2012 to Government-owned companies, how much relates to which company, and in respect of the amount that relates to each company: (a) how much relates to recurrent annual expenditure incurred by that company during the financial year ended 31st March 2012; (b) how much relates to recurrent expenditure incurred by that company during previous Government financial years; and (c) how much relates to capital expenditure incurred by that company, regardless of the year in which it was incurred?

1470 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1475 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the amount of (i) gross public debt, (ii) cash reserves and (iii) net public debt as at 30th April 2012, 31st May 2012 and 30th June 2012 is as follows – with the caveat, Mr Speaker, that some of the figures I am going to give him are tentative. He will know that they mean very little, if anything at all, because in some instances, the Government has greater expenses which are balanced against income, that come in in different months of the year, and he will know that different months are sometimes seen as representing more expected income for the Government than others and there are cyclical issues there.

So, April 2012: Gross Public Debt, £516.50 million; May 2012, £514.77 million –

1480 Hon. P R Caruana: Five hundred and what?

Hon. Chief Minister: – £514.77 million; June 2012, £513.57 million.

Tentative Cash Reserves: April 2012, £209.52 million; May 2012, £200.09 million; June 2012, £192.12 million.

1485 Tentative Net Public Debt: April 2012, £306.98 million; May 2012, £314.68 million; June 2012, £321.45 million.

In answer to Question 685, Mr Speaker, the annualised cost of new recurrent expenditure measures introduced to approve by the Government since 9th December 2011 are reflected in the Estimates Book and the Appropriation Bill for 2012-13.

1490 These have already been discussed and approved by Parliament earlier this month.

I now hand the hon. Member a schedule with the information requested in Questions 683, 684 and 686.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, starting first with Question 685, I know that increases in public expenditure are reflected in the Budget Book, but that is not the answer to my question. The answer to my question is not elicited from the Budget Book.

My question was: will the Chief Minister provide the estimated annualised cost of each new recurrent expenditure measure introduced or announced by the Government since 9th December 2011? In other words, what is the cost in one full year of each of the new policies that they have introduced? That is not discernible from the Budget Book. The Budget Book is not disaggregated on that basis and the information requested is simply not capable of being established from any reading of the Budget Book.

Since 9th December, and even since 1st April, or even since the Budget date, the Government has adopted new measures, for which of course there may be provision in the Budget Book, but not provision labelled necessarily for a particular policy. So it cannot be identified as being the cost of a particular policy, especially when it is just provided by means of increasing the vote of a particular existing Head.

Indeed, the only one for which we have been provided that degree of information is in respect of the costs of the Future Job Strategy, where the Minister for Employment has said to us in previous Question Times that the cost was roughly around £1 million a month. So that is the cost of that particular new policy that the hon. Members are introducing. For the rest, it is not possible to discern it and I would ask whether the hon... Clearly he has not got the information with him, but whether he will consider... presumably when the Government introduces a new policy – in other words, not just a continuation of what was there before, but decides to start doing something new or to do something existing, but as a matter of policy in a different way or to a greater extent – part of the decision, part of the factors they take into account is how much it will cost. So they must know what each newly introduced policy measure costs, and that is the information that I am asking for.

1515 Will he please just confirm – so that we take these issues one at a time – that he does not have that information?

1520 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not agree that this is not discernible from the Budget Book. It may not be discernible at first blush from the Budget Book, but in the Committee Stage what one does is go through each Head in the Budget Book, and you can ask us, Mr Speaker, ‘What is it that you are dealing with in these emoluments? Are you changing the policies that are, in effect, there in the emoluments column? Is there an effect in any of the other columns?’ All of that is what the whole of the Budget debate – which is not just, if I may call it, the glamorous part, the delivery of speeches – is about, and that, Mr Speaker, is a debate that has already been had in this House actually during the course of this session, because the hon. Gentleman knows we have adjourned to questions again. So I do not agree with him on that, Mr Speaker.

Of course, it would be possible for me to work out all of the new policies separately, not just provided to him across the floor of the House at the Committee Stage, but I do not have that information with me today, Mr Speaker, and there are a number of reasons for that.

1530 First of all, he needs to understand – in fact, he probably understands better than me – that policy decisions are made all the time, and policy decisions with cost consequences are explained every time that one makes a policy decision, before you take the step of making it, not just, Mr Speaker, in terms of what is a manifesto commitment, but in the day-to-day running of Government, where there may be an industrial issue in a Department, there may be another type of issue in a Department, and that has an effect.

So, Mr Speaker, what I would say to him is if he wants to write to me, identifying a particular policy and asking me what the annualised cost of it is, I will try to identify for him where in the Budget Book it is provided for and which part of a particular Head deals with that and what the costing of it is. I am happy to try and do that, if he wishes to write to me, Mr Speaker.

1540 But every single policy since 8th December – which is not just policies in the manifesto, Mr Speaker – is not something that I am prepared to sit down and go back seven months of Government of, in order to produce for him an essay on costs in respect of – remember what he is saying – every single policy decision, Mr Speaker. That is, in my view, not appropriate.

1545 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, first of all, I am not asking for each and every day-to-day policy decision. The question is of each new recurrent expenditure measure. A recurrent expenditure measure is a measure which they expect to repeat every year.

Mr Speaker, I do not understand the hon. Member’s answer. Does he expect that, in the Committee Stage of the Budget Book, on every line of expenditure, on every line of the Book, we should ask ‘And does this provide for any new policy?’

I know that each Minister sits in their office every day, making decisions on this case or that case that might result in increased expenditure. The Minister for Social Services may decide to provide funding for this new pupil who needs to be sent to a school in England, or the Minister for Culture... all these things. That is not what the question asks. It is each new recurrent expenditure measure.

1555 The difficulty is that we do not have a list of them, and I just do not understand why the hon. Member thinks that this House is not entitled to know what the recurring annual costs are – in other words, by how much the Government is increasing the cost of governing in Gibraltar – by virtue of the new policies that it introduces, and that it is not capable, short of asking on every line of the Budget Book, ‘Does this provide for any new measure?’ because we cannot know the list of new measures. We can trawl your press releases and try and see the ones that you have announced, but of the ones that you have not announced, we would have no way of knowing the ones that you have just put into operation without an announcement.

The question is not about each and every one-off decision that increases... It is things like the Future Job Strategy, which was a clear policy decision, the effect of which was to increase public expenditure by £12 million a year; the cost of employing 47 new teachers – a clear Government policy to employ 47 teachers with an annual cost. Yes, Mr Speaker, some of them can be discerned from the Budget, like that one, because there was a figure in the Budget Book that we could marry to a public statement, but when there is no public statement announcing it, there is no way that we can discern it from the amount provided in the Budget. He must know this. I think that this House is entitled to know, and I will put it down for Written Answer, if he prefers, next time so that his officials can prepare the answer in slower order.

I honestly do think that this House is entitled to know, and even if I was wrong in that view, given that the hon. Member makes great store by how transparent he wants to be, there is no reason, surely, why he would not want us to know simply what is the annual cost of their policy measures.

I acknowledge that he cannot provide the information now and that indeed he may not agree to provide it at all, but on the next Question Time I will ask it for Written Answer, so that it can be prepared in slower order.

1580

Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 686, does he now acknowledge, given that out of the £28.3 million, £17.393 million related to expenditure in previous years, even if I were to accept – which at this stage I am not doing – that the third column is correctly filled in and that all of the expenditure, all of the £28.3 million, is genuinely expenditure of a non-capital nature, but even on that basis... and of course he was careful to sail around this point in his reply to the Budget address, when he spoke about assuring us that there was no capital expenditure in the figure, but failing to mention the other criticism that I had made of his treatment above the line of the £28.3 million, which was that it contained recurrent expenditure not just of the year to which the account related, but indeed of previous financial years.

1585

Yes, he can check Hansard, if he wants. I can e-mail him, if he wants, a copy of my Budget address.

Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible].

Hon. P R Caruana: Fine. Mr Speaker, the fact of the matter is that, as I explained to him in my own Budget address, he has pretended in his presentation of the Budget – on page 2, I think it is – that the £28.3 million was recurrent expenditure of the Government since that was the bit of the Budget Book that reflects the recurrent expenditure and the recurrent revenue of the Government during that 12-month financial year. By placing the £28.3 million where he placed it, does he not acknowledge that he was pretending that the whole of the £28.3 million was recurrent expenditure in that financial year, where it was not – £17.393 million of it was not – and if he did feel a need to make a provision for previous years' expenditure that were not recurrent in that year, the correct way to have dealt with it, as I said in my Budget address, was to have provided it below the line, as it has always been in the past?

1600

Mr Speaker, the Budget Book, on page 2, does he not acknowledge, professes... Under the heading 'Recurrent expenditure', it says 'Consolidated Fund Charge, £59 million; Departmental Expenditure, £333 million; Contribution to Government-owned companies...' That is to say recurrent expenditure for the 12 months 2011-12, recurrent expenditure, contribution to Government-owned companies £28.3 million. It is neither expenditure that was incurred during the 12-month period to which that account relates, nor indeed is it recurrent. It is, at worst, one-off if it is in respect of previous years, and by putting it there he is mis-stating, mis-describing this. At least to the extent of £17.39 million, he is mis-describing it as recurrent expenditure incurred during those 12 months, where in fact £17.3 million was incurred in the previous year. It is not recurrent at all. It is one-off, given that he is making a provision for expenditure that has already taken place and is not being repeated, and therefore he has understated the recurrent Budget surplus by a minimum of £17.4 million. (Banging on desks) (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, first of all, let me deal with his first point, which was his retort on Question 685. I am not saying that this House is not entitled to the information. Quite the opposite: I am telling the hon. Gentleman that the House has had the information. Of course it has not been provided broken down by policy, because the Book actually does not provide for that. It provides for what the actual expenditure is going to be, taking into consideration what all of those policies are for the next year, and he is now saying break the Book down in another way, which is by policy, showing what the increases are by policy. I do not think, Mr Speaker, that we are going to be getting into answering questions like that, other than in the context of the Committee Stage of the Budget where we would have been able to look at each issue that concerned the hon. Gentleman.

We did, Mr Speaker, for example, in respect of the example he gave of 47 new teachers. Ms Isobel Ellul-Hammond asked Mr Licudi exactly about them when we were going through the payroll in terms of the Head for Education.

1625

Mr Speaker, he was not here for the Committee Stage this year. He has been here for 21 previous years. If he could not be here this time, I make no criticism of the fact that he was not here, but that was the time when we went through the Book and we looked at that, Mr Speaker. So he can ask the Written Question that he wants to ask in that respect.

1630

Mr Speaker, coming on now to Question 686, let me start by telling him that the third column has been filled in accurately, as accurately as my speech was written telling him that, and if he suggests it has not been prepared accurately, he is suggesting that the work done in the Treasury and the Ministry for Finance by officials was not done accurately, because that is not work that I do and I do not expose them to that criticism.

Mr Speaker, I do not tire of telling him that I have huge respect for his intellectual abilities. I do not believe it would have been possible for me to beat him in the last General Election – he takes compliments very badly, I must tell him – without understanding his intellectual capabilities. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am saddened that he is now rendered as ineffective as he is, because the respect that I have for his intellectual rigour has got to be affected by the fact that he appears not to have got beyond the summary on page 2 of the Budget.

If he had turned to page 140 of the Budget Book, which has a specific Head assigned to it now called ‘Contribution to Government-owned companies’ – it is the penultimate Head; it is the page before the pink pages – there is set out there, specifically, an analysis which does not list as many companies as I have given him now, which is all the companies. There is one provision for ‘other’ and most of the principal companies are set out there, setting out what the expenditure is for 2012-13, as an estimate; the forecast outturn for 2011-12; the forecast for the year 2011-12; and for previous years – specifically.

So what the hon. Member has done in everything he has said, with such flamboyance and the usual eloquence, just before sitting down, in respect of Question 686, is actually specifically provided for on page 140. What he specifically said I had avoided providing is specifically set out in page 140. It is actually, Mr Speaker, I am sorry to say – and I refer him to my prepared speech, the one I gave at the beginning of the Budget session, and to my reply – specifically referred to in my speeches. There is specific reference to page 140 and how it is set out there.

So, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman obviously does not understand the issue himself, because if he looks at what I have given him, which he now says proves his point, and he looks at page 140, he will understand that it was set out for everyone there as an estimate, here much more particularly.

He will now wriggle, Mr Speaker. He will now say that is not what he said, but when all we Hansard geeks go back and read Hansard – and I know that at least Mr Bossino and I will be reading it – we will know that he got his argument wrong. And what a pity, Mr Speaker – I tell him genuinely, what a pity – for me to see the Hon. Peter Caruana reduced to this in this House, because I have so much more respect for his intellectual rigour.

Perhaps he should take the advice he so repeatedly gave the Hon. the Member for Employment, and having lost an Election, go.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether the hon. Member thinks that his condescending nonsense, his absolutely discourteous claptrap, his complete and utter mocking personalisation of his opponents will serve him as a cover for the absolute diatribe of nonsense that he utters.

I have come to the conclusion that the hon. Member is, in his political understanding of public finances, so superficial that he understands neither the questions nor indeed the answers that somebody has written for him to come and read in this House.

I have never heard a more nonsensical, irrelevant, completely ungermane to the points that I have raised in my supplementary, explanation than that, and I propose from now on, we will take for granted that whenever the Chief Minister prefixes his answers with the sort of insipid hot air that has emerged from his mouth for the first two minutes of that answer, we will know that that is the sign for smokescreen for crap to follow. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! I do not think the word – (Interjections)

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member... (Laughter) If the Hon. Speaker does not think that ‘crap’ is parliamentary language –

Mr Speaker: It is not really parliamentary.

Hon. P R Caruana: – I will, of course, withdraw it –

Mr Speaker: Thank you very much.

Hon. P R Caruana: – and I will replace it with ‘that brown stuff that we all find so unpleasant’. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, the answer that the hon. Member has given is complete and utter nonsense, and of course, Mr Speaker, he starts his condescending... This green-behind-the-ears upstart Chief Minister who has not been six months in the job feels –

A Member: Upstart?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, upstart! As a Chief Minister he is a complete upstart (Interjections) and he obviously thinks that I would come to this House asking him a question on a document that I have handled personally for 16 years, not knowing to get beyond page 2.

Well, his problem is that he is so selective with his recollection that he conveniently forgets what does not suit him. He will remember that I did indeed get beyond page 2 and indeed that I took him to page 14 precisely to demonstrate that the two items, contribution to wholly-owned Government companies in the summary of Government expenditure... so he has now referred me to the page that deals in detail with that heading, but the item is referred to in the summary as Head 44 on page 14, to which I specifically referred him in my Budget reply, and lo and behold, there it is to be found below the line, after departmental expenditure, as it has always been in the past.

Mr Speaker, the issue that I raised with him is not whether he had given me, before, the breakdown, even though the numbers are now different. The issue in the question, as he appears to have completely failed to grasp, is not whether he had given me the information, therefore QED... There on page 140 is information which he assumes I have not seen. Therefore, that is the answer to my question and that is why the £28.3 million was not mistreated, on page 2, to understate the Budget surplus, which is the point that I was making. It is completely irrelevant to that!

The question is not whether he had provided the breakdown of the £28.3 million; the question is the use that he had made of the £28.3 million in declaring the annual Budget surplus last year to be £31 million, and had he dealt with the contribution to Government-owned companies, the £28.3 million, on which he provided some figures in the Budget Book and different figures now, had he provided that £28.3 million in the right place on page 2, the declared Budget surplus on page 2 – which is the point that I am making to him – would have been at least £17.393 million higher than the £31.2 million, namely nearly £50 million Budget surplus.

How did he doctor the figures so as not to have to present a budget surplus of £50 million at the time that he is going on about black holes? Simply by deducting from one year's revenue several years' worth of expenditure, as he has just confirmed again here which information partly was... Well, it actually was not there, that breakdown. So he has now, by the answer that he has provided me, Mr Speaker, admitted that, of the £28.3 million, £17.4 million did not relate to last year's expenditure at all – it was expenditure of previous years, several years before last year – and he pretends, in the presentation in the Budget Book, that all of it, the £28.3 million, was recurrent expenditure incurred last year, when it was not – neither recurrent nor incurred last year to the tune of at least £17.3 million.

So to that extent, the figure that he declares in this Book as being the surplus of recurrent revenue last year over recurrent expenditure last year, which is what this page 2 attempts to do, is a complete fraud of statistical and accountancy presentation, (A Member: Hear, hear.) a complete and utter fraud, all perpetrated by the simple device of taking above the line a figure that belongs below the line, which would have declared the Budget figure, of £31 million, £50 million. He might then have wanted to go on to say, 'But of that Budget surplus, I then went on to spend so much in this way that is below the line.' That would have been an accurate presentation.

So I regret to tell the hon. Member that the position is exactly as I told him in the Budget speech, it is exactly as I am telling him now, and the only Member in this House who has so far spoken on this matter who appears not to know his backside from his elbows on this question is him.

Hon. Chief Minister: Welcome back! (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, I really thought that I had lost my foil, so I am delighted that he is back, but of course, Mr Speaker, he is wrong, wrong, wrong. (Laughter) He is wrong, wrong, wrong, Mr Speaker, because (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) the speech which I delivered, and which I have so usefully in front of me on my Mac Apple iPad, sets out exactly the reference to page 140, sets out exactly how those losses arise. They are all recurrent. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker, he bangs the Book and he says he has proved the point. He has got to look at page 140, Mr Speaker! Page 140 sets out no pretence, and those figures given there are different because they are forecasts and estimates in many instances. But he can see, Mr Speaker, there is a heading, 'Previous years', which provides for £18.7 million, the one that is now set out at £17.3 million, so that there is a greater level of exactitude on how the £28.3 million is arrived at.

Previous years – Mr Speaker, where is the pretence that that was last year? Where? Is it that he missed it? (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Is it that he missed it, Mr Speaker? Was there any pretence therefore that this was just in that year? No, Mr Speaker. Of course it could have been done in a different way. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) It could have been done by restating every surplus he has pretended to have, because into every surplus he should have carried the recurrent losses to state the real position, rather than the GSD fantasy (Banging on desks) of surpluses that he presented this community with. It could have been done that way, but it was easier done this way and properly done this way.

Mr Speaker, he referred to us cooking the books. Now he has referred to us doctoring them. The only person who needs a doctor – or is going to need one if he carries on as he is doing – is going to be him, because he has gone from political giant to political pygmy in seven short months, and the bluster that he makes in dealing with the point that I have made before actually demonstrates the point. If he does not like Shakespeare, then he will not like the reference to the fact that the lady doth protest so much that clearly he has been caught out.

1760 There is no question of these numbers being wrong. If he is saying that these numbers are wrong, he is saying that every official in the Treasury and every official in the Ministry for Finance has lent themselves to a fraud that he alleges. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Is that the allegation that he is making against the excellent public servants of Gibraltar that served him as loyally as they serve me? Because I certainly do not tell them where to put things – or is it that he used to? (Interjections and laughter) Is it that he used to? (Interjections and laughter) Because you see, Mr Speaker, the people that I have worked with do not seem to me to be the sort to be influenced in that way!

1765 And so, Mr Speaker, anybody who has followed the Budget debate heard the excellent presentation of the figures that I made, (Interjections) setting out exactly how the deductions are being affected, read for themselves the Budget Book on page 140 – to which I felt, ‘The poor man, after suffering an Election defeat, I can’t just expect him to read it. I’ll refer him to it specifically: page 140, previous years, no pretence that it is in any particular year’ – will know that the only person guilty of trying to perpetrate a fraud on the people of Gibraltar is the hon. Gentleman who is left clawing for his legacy! What a pity, Mr Speaker. What a pity to see him in such fashion.

1770 But, look, I will not compliment him any more. Seeing that he describes my compliments of him as being akin to things which should not be mentioned in this House, (Laughter) let somebody else tell him that he was a giant, because he ain’t no more. (Banging on desks.)

1780 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member really is the political equivalent of a game show host. (Laughter) What I really cannot work out is whether that show is ‘Blankety Blank’ or the ‘Weakest Link’, (Laughter) but it is certainly one. I have never heard so much theatrical nonsense uttered in such a short space of time by somebody simply trying to obfuscate the facts.

1785 Look, Mr Speaker, for the last time I will say the question is not whether the figures are wrong, but whether the figures have been treated correctly in calculating the Budget surplus. The Hon. the Chief Minister can, in order to create a smokescreen for his own fraudulent presentation of the Budget surplus figure, continue to pretend that my arguments here are different to what they are.

1790 My argument is not that the figures are wrong, it is not that they are not on page 140 – as they were then known, although they have now been tightened up and the updated figures have been produced to us in answer to that; the figure is there, so the answer is not whether they are wrong or whether they are available, but precisely whether the figures, broken down, of £28.3 million on page 140, and also referred to in the summary on page 14 at item 44... The question is whether that figure of £28.3 million was properly or not properly treated for the purposes of calculating last year’s recurrent annual Budget surplus. The part of the book where that calculation is presented for all to see is not page 3 or page 14, or page 140. The page of the Budget Book where the Budget surplus is shown for the previous year is headed ‘Summary of forecast financial outturn 2011/2012’ – in other words, the forecast figures for last year – and they are on page 2.

1795 So he will forgive me for referring to the page where the sin is committed, and not to the page which has nothing to do with the bloody sin that I am complaining about!

A Member: Bloody! (Interjections)

1800 Hon. Chief Minister: Come on! Be parliamentary.

Hon. P R Caruana: Therefore, Mr Speaker, the page where the sin that he has committed is disclosed in all its sordid details is on page 2, and that is therefore the page that I refer to him, and on this page...

1805 I know that he thinks I am a moron. First of all, he tells me that he has huge respect for my intellect – and he tells me this every time he gets to his feet – only immediately to follow it with a statement which suggests that I am an illiterate, innumerate idiot! (Laughter) Well, Mr Speaker, he will have to decide which of the two it is. Either I have intellect worthy of his great respect, or I am economically illiterate and actually illiterate, even semantically illiterate.

1810 Because look, Mr Speaker, you do not have to be an accountant or a Chief Minister or a lawyer or intellectually brilliant, or even intellectually not moronic to read what it says in the English language on this page! It says, ‘Forecast outturn for the 12 months 2011-12’, a 12-month period ending on 31st March 2012, and it says, ‘Recurrent Expenditure.’

1815 By the way, in case anybody listening does not know, ‘recurrent’ means occurring every year – recurring every year, hence recurrent. (Laughter) Recurrent expenditure incurred during this 12-month period ending 31st March 2012: (1) Consolidated Fund Charges, £59.628 million; (2) Departmental Expenditure, £333 million; (3) Contribution to Government-owned Companies, £28.3 million. Deduct all that from the £452 million of revenue in the 12 months ending 31st March and you get, as if by magic, the surplus of recurrent revenue over recurrent expenditure for the year, and it is declared at £31.25 million, except – wait for it, except – that the figure that they have deducted from the year’s revenue, alleging that it is the year’s expenditure, is not the year’s expenditure, because in the figure for the year’s expenditure that they have deducted from the year’s revenue to produce the year’s surplus of £31 million, there is expenditure that was not incurred in the year but was incurred over several years prior to last year, and that amounts, by his own admission today, to £17.3 million, and by the information provided in the Budget Book on page 140, (Interjection) it amounts to... previous years, £18.7 million.

Mr Speaker, the point is not whether it is on page 140 or not on page 140, or whether it was disclosed or not disclosed. The fact of the matter is that on page 2, by including that £17.3 million that was not incurred last year but in previous years, by treating it above the line as including it under the heading ‘Recurrent expenditure for the year ended March 2012’, they have treated as recurrent expenditure – which it is not – that expenditure. That £17 million does not recur again, will never recur again, that £17 million, because that is not a one-year sort of expenditure. That £17 million will never recur. It is a one-off, and every accountant knows that one-off payments go below the line, not above the line.

Not only is it not recurrent, in the sense that it will not recur; it is not even expenditure of the year to which the sum relates, the account relates! So it is fraudulently presented on two separate counts: it is neither recurrent, nor was it spent in the year to which the Budget surplus... What they should have done, as has always been done, Mr Speaker, is put the figure of £17 million below the figure of the budget surplus, so it would have been £50-odd million budget surplus minus exceptional expenditure of £17 million, if that is what you wanted to do. That is the correct expenditure.

I have to tell the hon. Member that he cannot wriggle off any hook of that by suggesting that every official in the Treasury is participant in his fraud. I have no doubt that the position was correctly explained to him, that he – or he who does the financial work for him in the Government, (A Member: Hear, hear.) namely the Minister for Employment – gave that instruction and officials followed, Mr Speaker.

And I will say this, just to make sure that he understands it: if there is an official in the Civil Service – which I do not believe, but if there were an official in the Civil Service – who believes that this presentation of the account is correct, then he is wrong. He is as wrong as the Chief Minister is: absolutely wrong.

Mr Speaker: Before the Hon. Chief Minister rises, I appreciate the point the learned Hon. Leader of the Opposition wants to make probably does not lend itself to a question, but he appreciates I have been indulgent – I have allowed three supplementaries, statements – so I will invite the Hon. the Chief Minister to reply as if he were concluding a debate, and that will be the end of the matter.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you have got to laugh. Let’s face it, you have got to laugh to see the performance.

Hon. P R Caruana: You will laugh.

Hon. Chief Minister: I think, Mr Speaker, that what happens here is that the hon. Member has such an excellent brief that he can only argue what he is told, and when he has not got someone to explain it to him, then he cannot argue it.

I think it was said of a very senior, now elderly British politician that he could argue any brief. Well, Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman can argue a brief if it is properly explained to him, but now that he has lost the officials in the Treasury who explain these things, he no longer is able to argue it with any credibility.

The Budget debate has been had, Mr Speaker, and I know that he missed a very large part of it – again, probably for very good reason – but there were times to have these debates. He chose to deliver the speech that he chose to deliver. He made some of these points and I made counterpoints during the course of my reply where I explained all of this, Mr Speaker.

But one of the first things that he said was, ‘If I were to accept for a moment that there is no capital involved,’ – well, look, Mr Speaker, the first point he took during the course of his reply to me in the Budget was that there must have been also capital engaged in these recurrent expenses which were being set off. Now, having made a massive meal of that, he is not quite prepared to accept yet that there is no capital, but it is clearly explained to him that there is not. So what does he do? He just says that he is going to, for one moment, accept it and move on.

I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman just does not want to understand the position, but I have explained it to him twice and I am going to explain it to him again. Recurrent expenditure is expenditure which is incurred every year. He was not applying the recurrent cost in the companies against his surpluses. He was therefore inflating his surpluses. He was spending money and not showing in the final account that it had been spent.

1880 I have said to him, during the course of my intervention, there are two ways of dealing with that: go back and restate all the surpluses, or restate it on one occasion. That is what I said in the course of my Budget speech and also in the course of my reply, and I do not know whether he deigned us with his presence for that part of my reply. So there is no question of trying to pull the wool over anybody's eyes. Above the line, below the line – there it is on page 140, clearly set out in respect of previous years,

1885 So I do not know what it is that is causing the hon. Gentleman to be quite so upset about the issue. Does he want to go around talking about £17 million more in his surplus for this year, or does he want to go back and break that down and deduct it from his earlier surpluses? He can do it as he likes. We have done it in a way that we are advised is acceptable, proper and appropriate. (Interjection) He might want to do it the other way. It is a matter entirely for him. We have presented it as we in Government have been advised is appropriate and proper, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and therefore we stand by the way that it has been presented.

1890 Mr Speaker, the performance that the hon. Gentleman has given today reminds me of something I said to him some years back, and that was that sometimes in this House, instead of a Chief Minister, which he was supposed to be in this chair, and now a Leader of the Opposition, he was actually quite fun to watch in his presentation of all arguments, as if he were Basil Fawltly once again having to deal with a problematic tenant at Fawltly Towers. I called him Basil then and you told me I could not do that, so I am not calling him Basil this time, Mr Speaker. What I am saying, Mr Speaker, is that he is still behaving as if he were like that and that his analysis is just as 'faulty'.

1900 Finally, Mr Speaker, he said that there were parts of this debate which could be akin to a game show host, or to a game show. Well, Mr Speaker –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, that you were a game show host.

1905 Hon. Chief Minister: At least, Mr Speaker, the verdict of the public has been that he is the weakest link. Goodbye. (Laughter and banging on desks)

Clerk: Question 612, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please provide a breakdown as to whether the successful candidates for the security and immigration posts advertised with the Borders and Coastguard Agency earlier this year were: (a) people who were already employed in the private sector; (b) people already employed in the public sector; (c) unemployed and, if so, for how long; or (d) Future Job Strategy trainees?

210 Registered unemployed
Breakdown as at 31st May and 30th June

Clerk: Question 614, the Hon. D A Feetham.

215 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many people were registered unemployed, as at 31st May and 30th June 2012 between: (a) 0 to 3 months; (b) 3 to 6 months; (c) 6 to 12 months; (d) 12 to 24 months; and (e) above 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

220 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): The number of persons registered as unemployed at 31st May was as follows: 0 to 3 months, 412; 3 to 6 months, 130; 6 to 12 months, 62; 12 to 24 months, 24; above 24 months, 60.

On 30th June 2012 the equivalent figures are: 0 to 3 months, 499; 3 to 6 months, 122; 6 to 12 months, 62; 12 to 24 months, 28; above 24 months, 58.

225 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister provide, perhaps, his view as to why there appears to be a resistance in terms of the very long-term unemployed, 12 to 24 months and above 24 months?

There is an increase in the 12 to 24 months from 24 to 28 and there is a decrease of two from 60 to 58 in relation to above 24 months. Can he just give his own view about that?

230 Hon. J J Bossano: I think the increase is simply because there were people who were below 12 in May and who passed the 12 mark in June. If they do not get a job, they clearly move into the higher category with every passing month.

235 Hon. D A Feetham: I understand.

Hon. J J Bossano: I think there is a greater reluctance on the part of employers to take people who have been unemployed for a very long time, on the premise that, if they have not been employed for so long, if they have not been with a job for so long, then there must be something wrong with the candidate. It is a regrettable fact that when we send candidates to be interviewed for vacancies, it is the people who show that they have only recently left work are the ones that tend to get picked.

240 We try and persuade, through the training scheme, employers to do it the other way round, that is to say... So the hon. Member will see that I have got, in fact, in the previous answer that I gave him, people we have been able to place in training with a job guarantee at the end, who have been two, three and four years unemployed, but it is very difficult without some kind of incentive, like paying their wages for a few months, to get employers to... If they have got a choice, they choose the people who are younger and less time out of work.

245 Hon. D A Feetham: Has he done an analysis as well of – or has his Department done an analysis of – the profile of these individuals? Not necessarily does one, for example, have to not have qualifications to be in this kind of situation. I was reading an article over the weekend, for example, there was an accountant in the UK and there is a story on his situation: an accountant in the UK who has been unemployed for, I think it is about four years or three years.

Has he done a profile of these individuals, as to whether, for example, these are individuals that may have criminal convictions that are not spent and therefore they are at a disadvantage in the labour market; that these individuals have no training and therefore it is much more difficult to place them, so that the Government can then focus, obviously, on what it is that they need to do in order to get these people into employment. Has that analysis been done?

Hon. J J Bossano: I think it has not been done, but from my knowledge of... I look at these cases, almost on a weekly basis, just to see how the market is moving, and the reality of it is that it is not related to anything specifically wrong with the individual; it is just that some people have been out of work for a very long time, frankly because people were not...

We have the peculiar situation at the moment that, although the numbers of Gibraltarians and other residents in employment is going up every month, the numbers who are registering is also going up every month. So the fact that I have got some people in the register who appear, in the answer to the question, as having been out of work for four months, it does not mean they have actually been registering for four months. In many cases we are getting people registering for employment who were previously getting social assistance and not bothering to turn up to look for work, because of what I have mentioned in previous meetings of the House of this very high rate of passing through. People went there, they were sent to a job and when they went to the job, the job did not exist, because in fact there was a practice that was prevalent – particularly in the private sector, but not uniquely in the private sector – that they did the recruiting outside the ETB and after they had selected the individual, they opened the vacancy. Therefore, it is in my view, possibly that 300 or 400 people who ought to have been registered were not registered previously. Some of them have been out of work for a very long time, but there is nothing identifiably justifying their unemployment, except that they have not been successful in the past and have given up looking for work and now they are coming back.

I think we should encourage their coming back and encourage employers to take them on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, that has always been the case and I do not want this to turn into a debate about the former... the practice of ETB before the hon. Member became a Minister, or the former Minister for Employment. I am not trying to be controversial here in making that point, but it has always been the case that there are going to be people who are unemployed and economically active in the sense that they are actively seeking employment and registering with the ETB. There are people, who, for whatever reason, may be unemployed, not registered, not seeking employment, or indeed that they may have decided to give up on registering at the ETB. There are many reasons.

But can I commend to the hon. Gentleman and will he undertake at the very least to consider undertaking an analysis of these individuals – at the end of the day we are talking about a significant number, we are talking over 80 who are effectively unemployed for longer than 12 months, there are 58 unemployed for longer than two years – to do an analysis of precisely why they are in that kind of situation?

I accept that somebody who has been unemployed for a long period of time will always be at a disadvantage, because the employer will always ask the question, why has this person been unemployed for so long? That is obvious. But there may be very specific reasons why people are unemployed, very specific reasons that can actually be dealt with and the Government can target assistance to those individuals, bearing in mind the reason why they are unemployed.

I would just ask, commend to the hon. Gentleman that perhaps somebody in his Department undertakes an analysis. It is not a lot of people; it is 80-something, so it is manageable, the analysis and I hope that perhaps the hon. Gentleman, leaving aside our political differences, can consider the validity of that suggestion and undertake that analysis.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, it has nothing to do with political differences, or wanting to go into the past or anything else. I am actually providing the hon. Member with facts. The facts are that, if I tell him that the number of local residents, predominantly Gibraltarians, who are working, goes up by 30 every month and yet the unemployment does not come down by 30 every month, it is because there are people constantly being added to the register and it is not people who are losing their jobs in the last two or three months. It is people, who, having been absent from being registered for a very long time are now coming back, in the knowledge that we are taking a very forceful line in persuading employers to take on local workers.

I will take on board what the hon. Member is suggesting and ask the Department to have a look to see if there is any identifiable reason why there are 80 –but we are talking about 80 out of 1,000 –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, no. If the hon. Member will give way, it is not why there are 80; it is looking at the individual circumstances of those 80 to do an analysis as to whether... There may well be 20 of those 80, the reasons why they are long-term unemployed are very specific to those 20. There may be others in a different category, different reasons. By analyzing... I would have thought that it is by analysing the reasons why some of these unemployed long term, that is the first port of call, in considering what the remedy is.

That is the only thing that I am suggesting to the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I accept that that is what he is suggesting, but he is concentrating on 80, presumably only because of the time they have been out of work and not for any other reason. I am telling him that this is not that there are 80 individuals who have been seeking employment for 24 months and for some identifiable reason they have not been able to do it. The numbers that have been registered in that category in December would have been much lower.

So if he looks at the figures that I gave him earlier, I pointed out to him where we are already making an impact on the long-term unemployed and what we are doing is we are effectively... in the areas where we are providing money, to encourage employers to provide training for somebody local, as well as trying to take on somebody local, they try and take somebody who is local and in the 'over a year' category already. That is already happening. That is already reflected in the answer to the previous Question.

I believe that continuing that policy will see in the future a declining level in this figure, unless more people turn up who are not registered today, but have not been working for the last 24 months.

But I will certainly ask them to look at the individuals, because we have got their names and addresses and their whole labour history in the computers of the ETB, to see if there is anything particularly that explains why they have been out of work for so long – but we are talking about 80 out of 1,000 and I want all the 1,000 in jobs, not just this 80.

Clerk: Question 615, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, coming back, he says over 1,000, but over 1,000, did you include all the trainees that are employed by the Employment and Training Company? Because the figures that you have given me, in terms of the unemployed, 0 to 3 months, 3 to 6 months, do not amount to 1,000. You are including within that the people that are trainees.

Hon. J J Bossano: I am including all the trainees that have not yet got a job guarantee, because those people are still, as far as I am concerned, available for work.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the difference between this side and that side is how to define unemployment.

Thank you very much for that clarification.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): I have the honour to move that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 2nd August at 3.30 p.m.

400 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 2nd August 2012 at 3.30 p.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 2nd August 2012 at 3.30 p.m. Those in favour. (Government Members: Aye.)(Opposition Members: No.) Defeated.

405 Hon. J J Bossano: If we do not adjourn to then, we will adjourn sine die! Or do not adjourn at all; we sit here for the next four weeks! (Laughter).

Hon. P R Caruana: Could the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister at least explain to the House why we are parting with the tradition that the House does not sit in August?

410 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the adjournment to that date is when Mr Licudi is available, back in Gibraltar, to answer questions.

415 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member know when the last time was that the House met in August? And does he really think that it is justified that Ministers should not organise their agendas in a way that avoids breaking with Parliamentary tradition, not just in this country, but indeed in the United Kingdom too?

420 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member knows that the Government has been very flexible to him, particularly, whenever he has requested adjournments or changes even of Chief Minister's questions. So I do not think we are asking anything extraordinary to change.

425 Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible] for the adjournment if he wants the Opposition to vote in favour of it, or secure his majority from the Government benches. The Opposition is not supporting an adjournment to August.

430 Mr Speaker: Well, I think, (Interjections) I understand the debate here, but in practical terms, do we sit here until 2nd August, when the hon. Members...? (Interjections) Because we either carry on the business or we adjourn, but we cannot carry on the business because the Member is not here. (Interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if they don't want to [inaudible].

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can... I have the honour to move the House do now adjourn sine die?

435 Mr Speaker: But there are questions unanswered yet. Is the Opposition content with that?

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker –

440 Mr Speaker: Because in theory, you can ask on day one... On day one, you can have an adjournment sine die –

Hon. P R Caruana: – the Hon. Minister Licudi is not present, as I understand it, in Gibraltar – (Mr Speaker: Exactly.) is that right? Or is he sitting in his office doing something else?

445 Mr Speaker: He is away.

Hon. P R Caruana: If the Hon. Minister is not here, he cannot be dragged here. (Mr Speaker: [inaudible]) Therefore there is no point in the Opposition insisting on an adjournment that facilitates him being here to answer questions, when he is not physically here. That would be absurd. We are not making a stand against the fact that Mr Licudi cannot organise his diary to be present in the House.

450 At the last sitting of the House, the Hon. and Learned Chief Minister interspersed his interventions consistently with a reminder to people that I had not been present in the House during parts of the Budget debate. Well, what is sauce for the goose, is sauce for the gander. We are now making a point of that too. Our protest is not about the fact that Mr Licudi is not here, much as we regret that; our protest is against the adjournment of a House unconventionally to August for that reason, which is not an emergency reason.

455 If there were an emergency of some sort, then a sitting in August would be justified. If there is not an emergency, if it is all up to Mr Licudi's diary, then frankly, I do not think this House ought to part with the tradition that it does not sit in August and that is the reason why we are objecting to the adjournment to August.

460 If the hon. Member now is moving the adjournment sine die, we will support that and we will expect Mr Licudi to answer these questions next time. I do not think there are any questions there that cannot wait for –

465 Mr Speaker: No, if the Opposition is content to have these questions not answered in this sitting and is happy to put them for the next sitting, well...

I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourns sine die.

470 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.

This House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 4.05 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

Marine Officer post Recruitment

Clerk: Question 687/2012, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Since Question 112/2012 was asked, is the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port now in a position to advise whether the position of Marine Officer has been filled?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the position has not yet been filled.

Hon. D J Bossino: The reply to the Question I have just cited in the written Question was that the Government was currently in the process of advertising the vacancy.

Mr Speaker, is the Minister in a position to confirm to me when the vacancy was, in fact, advertised?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have the exact date of when the position was advertised for the second time, but the closing date for that position was on 13th June and the date of the interview will be on 27th September.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, have I understood the Minister correctly, that there was a second vacancy advertised?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the position was that there was a vacancy advertised internally at the end of March. There was no suitable candidate found by that selection board, as a result of which we had to open the vacancy again.

Hon. D J Bossino: Is the Minister able to answer politically in this House as to what the reason was for the failure to fill the vacancy in the first process he has just referred to?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, it is not a political answer. The fact is that the interview board, for the reasons and their own deliberations, decided there was no-one suitable at the time, and that was the advice given to me, which I of course accepted.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, both the Minister and I have discussed this issue in the past in this House, and I think we both agreed the importance of... I know we made, in the context of that question-and-reply session, political statements, but I think we both agreed the importance of having that position filled for the proper functioning of the Port, because the Marine Officer – in effect, I think you also agreed on that – ought to be in a position to properly deputise for the Captain of the Port.

So in those circumstances, can he give this House an indication as to whether he is satisfied as to the delay that this process seems to be subjected to?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, as to the importance of the position of Marine Officer, I have agreed with the hon. Gentleman that it is our position that the sooner the post is filled, the better; but as I did point out to him during the course of the last question-and-answer session, it was in fact the case that, between 1990 and 2010, there was no Marine Officer, with only a Captain of the Port obviously would have worked quite well. So therefore, for nine years of his administration, there was no Marine Officer, but having said that, the Port did not go down in flames, and it continued to work.

Notwithstanding that, I do agree with him that the post of Marine Officer to deputise for the Captain when he is absent is, in fact, advantageous. As I have told him, the selection board will hold the interview on 27th September and I am hopeful therefore that this then will come up with a positive recommendation, so that we can then fill that post.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as the Minister is fully aware, the position was in fact filled when the GSD was in office but, due to unfortunate circumstances, the position was vacant in, I think it was, April or May 2011.

Can he confirm to this House that what is holding the process up is, in fact, the failure to identify a suitable candidate in the first round?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, no, Mr Speaker, as I said, the selection board came with no recommendation, following which there was a second notification of the position.

Applicants wrote in. There were, in fact, six applicants who will be interviewed. I imagine the reason may have been human resources deployment, but it is not for the reason that the hon. Gentleman alluded to just a few moments ago.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am sure the Minister has answered this point, but can he advise this House, if he has not, whether the vacancy is being advertised exclusively internally?

Hon. N F Costa: As a first step, yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: So, presumably all the six applicants currently expected to be interviewed are from within the Port?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, to clarify the point, the very first time that it was advertised in March, it was only internal. Given that there was no successful applicant internally, it has been opened now internally and externally.

Hon. D J Bossino: Ah! Yes, I am grateful for that confirmation, Mr Speaker, because I think the initial reply was not [inaudible].

Mega Yacht registry Promotion and marketing

Clerk: Question 688, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the plans the Government has to promote and market the Mega Yacht registry?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, since the Gibraltar Yacht Register was taken back into direct Government control, I opened and spoke at the Gibraltar Yacht Seminar in April, and at that seminar I outlined the plans to promote and market the Yacht Register.

The outline included the Gibraltar Yacht Register meetings with all the interested parties in Gibraltar, attendance at the Amsterdam Yacht Show, Monaco Boat Show and arranging to meet with the chartering agents in London.

A meeting with all the interested parties in Gibraltar was held on 13th September, and there was an extensive discussion on the way forward, including carrying out some more in-depth background research on the advantages of registering these yachts in Gibraltar.

The Registrar of Yachts will attend the Amsterdam Boat Show from 12th to 14th November and will also visit the Monaco Boat Show from 19th to 22nd September. Further plans to promote and market the Yacht Register will be developed in conjunction with all of the interested parties in Gibraltar.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I thank the Minister for that reply.

Is he able to advise this House whether he is aware that my party, when in office, had very much advanced plans to produce a publication? All the literature was ready, all the designs and everything were ready. Does he know whether he found that on his desk when he entered office on 9th December? Certainly from this side of the House, we are somewhat surprised that that has not seen the light of day, given the advanced nature of that particular publication.

So I wonder if the Minister is in a position to enlighten this House as to where those plans currently are.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have not been made aware by my officials of any plans that were being developed by the previous administration.

Hon. D J Bossino: It may be unfair to ask this question of the Minister, but he will forgive me as a relatively new Member of this House, and having had no previous Government experience, is he able, from the reply he has just given us, to dissect – of the marketing plans he has just outlined – that which is his Government's initiative from what was there before?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have answered my hon. Friend, the plans that have been devised in respect of the Monaco Boat Show and the Amsterdam Yacht Show have come about as a result of meeting stakeholders in Gibraltar. Now, whether or not those were in the pipeline or thought of when his administration was in place, I could not say for sure.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman will allow me just to try and dissect for him that which he has asked that we dissect, certainly he will know – because he was in this House – that during the course of my Budget address, one of the measures taken related to import duties in respect of yachts. Obviously, therefore, the marketing of that product could not have occurred before the Budget statement. I understand that those were matters that were being brought to the attention of the previous administration but that the previous administration had not agreed with, so anything that flows in respect of that new potential for the registration of vessels in Gibraltar – that new attractiveness for the registration of vessels in Gibraltar – will essentially flow only as a result of the Budget statement under this administration.

Of course, all the material for marketing Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for the registration of yachts will have to be updated, because that will be one of the marks of attraction in particular for vessels of a particular size. He knows that we were, in that statement, trying to attract the business of superyacht registration and berthing and housing, so to speak, in Gibraltar.

Facilities for small boat owners Government plans

Clerk: Question 689, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House what plans the Government has for the provision of facilities for small boat owners?

195 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. As stated in my Budget speech, the plans that the Government has for the provision of facilities for small boat owners is as set out in our manifesto.

200 Hon D J Bossino: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, by way of confirmation... and he will understand, when I explain to him now, why I asked the question is because I saw that there appear to be certainly in the wording... I have read both his Budget speech before drafting the Question, as well as the relevant bit in the GSLP/Liberal manifesto. Now, as far as the latter document is concerned, it made specific reference to the location of the berths, as well as the number. I do not have the manifesto in front of me – I think the location was Europort and the number was 700.

205 Hon D J Bossino: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, by way of confirmation... and he will understand, when I explain to him now, why I asked the question is because I saw that there appear to be certainly in the wording... I have read both his Budget speech before drafting the Question, as well as the relevant bit in the GSLP/Liberal manifesto. Now, as far as the latter document is concerned, it made specific reference to the location of the berths, as well as the number. I do not have the manifesto in front of me – I think the location was Europort and the number was 700.

210 Hon D J Bossino: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, by way of confirmation... and he will understand, when I explain to him now, why I asked the question is because I saw that there appear to be certainly in the wording... I have read both his Budget speech before drafting the Question, as well as the relevant bit in the GSLP/Liberal manifesto. Now, as far as the latter document is concerned, it made specific reference to the location of the berths, as well as the number. I do not have the manifesto in front of me – I think the location was Europort and the number was 700.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am happy to do so. The plans are as stated in the manifesto, so the location still continues to be Europort and the number still continues to be 700 berths.

215 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am happy to do so. The plans are as stated in the manifesto, so the location still continues to be Europort and the number still continues to be 700 berths.

Hon D J Bossino: Is the Minister able to –

Hon. N F Costa: Sorry – it certainly will not be less than 700.

220 Hon D J Bossino: I think that was understood – and if it does not materialise, he can rest assured, I will be asking further questions in this House!

Hon D J Bossino: I think that was understood – and if it does not materialise, he can rest assured, I will be asking further questions in this House!

225 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. The project is at the EIA screening report stage, which runs in parallel with the wave action reflection modelling stage. So once that is completed an EIA can be conducted and the wave reflection effects on the rest of the harbour can be ascertained. That will determine whether any changes need to be introduced to address any EIA concerns and whether any wave reflection dampening is required in the design.

230 Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably those changes would not impact, given both his electoral and political commitment, just given to this House, on the numbers. He is satisfied of that, is he?

235 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, just one more question perhaps.
Is the Minister in a position to confirm whether or not there is a specific deadline or timeframe in which the, during which construction will begin with this project?

240 Hon. N F Costa: I do not have a specific date, Mr Speaker, but certainly in time before the next election.

Hon. S M Figueras: I have only asked the question, Mr Speaker, because we are aware of comments made in the public domain that plans are at an advanced stage and that, indeed, construction will be beginning in the next month. I was merely trying to establish whether there was any information on that.

245 A Member: I shouldn't believe that!

250 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Hon. Minister be consulting with the rowing clubs as to the construction of the berths because, of course, that will be right in front of the pathway and rowing vessels would have to get in and out of the area?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady raises a valid point. But we will not only be consulting with the rowing clubs, but all relevant stakeholders.

255 Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, Mr Speaker, the Government's commitment is to complete the project before the next General Election?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes.

260 Hon. D J Bossino: I think I heard the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, absolutely. Yes.

265 Hon. D J Bossino: Not simply start it?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Not simply start it?

270 Hon. N F Costa: No, no, complete the project.

275 Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman is right: the construction will begin in time for the project to be finished before 8th December 2015 and, of course, no doubt we shall look forward to being given the huge credit necessary in respect of the completion of such an important project with social value in the period of this, our first Parliament.

280 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, we certainly will. When we inaugurate it immediately after the next election (Applause), we certainly will not be taking credit for it, as you have done with our project in the court building! (Laughter)

285 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if all they do, if heaven forbid they were to once again form the Government of Gibraltar, is at least (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) (Laughter) be as generous as the Hon. the Minister for Justice was in his previous press releases and in his Budget speech about the development of the law courts, and as I was in the course of my speech at recognising the cross-administrative nature of those particular projects (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana), we will have been, Mr Speaker – and he will then be, if he is even then a Member of this Parliament – much more generous than he ever was in this Parliament about the legacy that he inherited in 1996, which other Ministers sitting alongside him in their Budget speeches in May-June 1996 and 1997 recognised and he did not, because he has been characterised forever as a man who believed that the world started on the day that he was first elected in 1996 and he will go down in the history of Gibraltar as the only politician to pretend that that was the case in respect of any of the parliaments that we have had the pleasure of having since our first Constitution.

Clerk: Question six hundred –

295 Hon. P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member not accept that the legacy that we inherited in 1996 was not one worth celebrating? As I recall it, the people of Gibraltar had just demonstrated on the streets because they thought that the then GSLP Government was taking Gibraltar to the very precipice, which indeed it was. I cannot think of anything about the legacy of the last GSLP Government that we inherited and I have spent 16 difficult years fixing, that would have been worthy of note or celebration. Indeed, as I recall, Gibraltar could not wait to get rid of that Government quickly enough for it to survive.

300 For the hon. Member now to think that he can airbrush history away by pretending that, in 1996, the previous GSLP Government left Gibraltar in the sort of state that only an ungenerous successor would not acknowledge to have been a wonderful legacy is the worst example of the rewriting of history that I have heard, certainly in the years that I have been in this Parliament, which of course is not to say that the previous GSLP Government did not, during eight years – long and difficult years for Gibraltar – managed to do some things right but, on balance, as shown by the fact that you have managed to go from a 72% majority to defeat in just four short years, I think the electorate more or less agrees with my evaluation as to the quality of the legacy and not with the hon. Member's rewriting of it now. (Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am surprised to see Mr Bossino applauding that, (Laughter) given where he was in 1996! (Interjections and applause) But anyway, but anyway... well... Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. –

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: I know he is there to absorb all the shocks until he goes, Mr Speaker, to try and avoid affecting the others, who will hopefully stay to try and fight another General Election, but one has to say things that one has to say.

Mr Speaker, the only person who is going to write history is the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, who, when he retires many years from now, having had a long and prosperous career, generous career, in Government, will be writing a history of all our histories for the future, I have no doubt, and he will treat him with the generosity that he deserves. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana.)

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is arguing against his own Ministers, and this is almost the schizophrenia that was present in some of the Budget speeches of the Members opposite during the Budget debate. The hon. Gentleman knows, because he was sitting in the chair in which I sit now, that when the Hon. Mr Montegriffo, his then deputy, delivered his first Budget address, sitting alongside him in 1996, he recognised that the GSD were building on the legacy of the GSLP in the growth of the finance centre in the eight years between 1988 and 1996.

Mr Speaker, if the Deputy Chief Minister in his Government was saying that then and he did not get up and shut him up, as he was prone to do when any of his Ministers said something he did not agree with, well one must assume that the Hon. Mr Montegriffo then, as Deputy Chief Minister, was telling the truth.

Then his next deputy, Mr Speaker, Mr Azopardi... Perhaps this explains, Mr Speaker, why, once one became the hon. Member's deputy, one was for the high jump, and perhaps the present deputy might want to take note of that. But Mr Azopardi, Mr Speaker, when he delivered one of his Budget speeches, also alluded to the fact that, in the years from 1988 to 1996, a great legacy was left to the Government that came after and that the GSD was building on that legacy.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to the speeches of his deputies, Mr Speaker. Perhaps that is why the head became disentangled from the body so often in the times that he was in Government.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, that is one explanation. Another explanation is that that is why they never not got beyond deputy! (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker, of course I am very happy to allow the record to lie as it does. In other words, let people judge our respective powers of analysis and political judgement on the basis that I believe that, in 1996, the people of Gibraltar did not think that Gibraltar was in a good place of going in a right direction and a good legacy, and that the hon. Member to this minute continues to insist that it was. I am delighted for that to be a monument to how people can distinguish his judgement from mine.

Mr Speaker: Before the Hon. the Chief Minister replies, I have allowed a considerable amount of deviation from the (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) building of the facilities for small boat owners. After this response, we will have to move either back to the small boat owners or to the next Question.

360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what this Government will always accept, both in respect of our statements and in respect of our actions, is that the judges of what we do and what we do not do are the public, and they determine when we get things right and when we get things wrong. They determined, Mr Speaker, in 1996, that Gibraltar required a change of Government, not because that Government had done nothing, but in the same way that they had determined in 1988 that it was time for a change of Government, and, thank God, Mr Speaker, on 8th December 2011 when they decided that it was once again time for a change of Government.

365 I rely, Mr Speaker, not on my judgement or on the hon. Gentleman's, but on the judgement of the people of Gibraltar.

370 Hon. P R Caruana: Of a minority of the electorate? He relies on the [inaudible] of a minority of the electorate.

Hon. Chief Minister: As the hon. Member did since 2007 – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

375 Does the Hon. Damon Bossino have another supplementary on small boat owners?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker... (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

Well, no, Mr Speaker – I will follow Mr Speaker's ruling on this matter, but there is a point on which I will be responding to the Chief Minister, perhaps outside this House.

380 Mr Speaker: Good idea.

385 New port building
Details of current works

Clerk: Question 690, the Hon. D J Bossino.

390 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the works which he has claimed are currently underway in respect of the new port buildings?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

395 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. I have never said that works are currently underway in respect of the new port building.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I accept, Mr Speaker, that there may have been a misinterpretation on my part of what the Minister said in his Budget speech. Perhaps he can elucidate. This has relation to...

400 If I pose a question by way of a supplementary in a different way, he did say that:

'Work is therefore underway to specify the requirements for a new port building.'

405 Again, is he able to clarify or expand on that, of what type of work is currently underway to identify the requirements for a new port building?

410 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is, indeed, correct when he says that he had misunderstood what I had said. What I had said is now what he has read from an excerpt of my Budget speech and the hon. Gentleman is indeed lucky that he is not asking questions from the Hon. Mrs Del Agua, because if it were not in written format and did not relate to the Question, she would never have answered them. But we are different and I shall give you the answer.

An outline specification has been prepared and submitted by the Captain of the Port. That is now under consideration by technical staff, who will prepare and cost a proper technical design.

Hon. D J Bossino: I missed the very first words in his reply. Can I indulge him further, and maybe could he repeat those words?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, I started by saying that an outline specification has been prepared and submitted by the Captain of the Port.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for the Minister indulging me on two occasions. Both he and I, I think, are a new breed of politician and, in that sense, if ever I am on the other side of the House, I will treat – and he is on this side of the House, I intend to treat him – likewise.

Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware that there were advanced plans and designs to build a new port building when we were last in office? I can repeat the question.

Hon. N F Costa: No, I heard it clearly.

Mr Speaker, as with the reply I gave in respect of any plans with the yacht register, I have not been made privy of any plans that may have been work-shopped by the previous administration.

Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, the outline plans he referred to in his first reply, Mr Speaker, referred to outline plans designed when the Hon. the Minister took office.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

It may be that those plans, of which I have no knowledge, may have been prepared by either the Captain or another official. These plans to which I refer have been prepared by the current Captain of the Port, who, as he knows, took office, post rather on 27th February of this year.

Workers' hostel Berth location

Clerk: Question 691, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, advise this House where the workers' hostel is to be berthed?

I am conscious, Mr Speaker, that there is another Question on the Order Paper which is being posed by my hon. and learned Friend, Mr Feetham, which is similar. I think that Question presupposes the location of the berth.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the current proposal is for the barge housing the workers' hostel to be berthed at the ferry terminal. At this moment in time, the Captain of the Port is reviewing port procedures to ensure a smooth and seamless transition in its operations once the barge arrives.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. and learned Minister whether there has been a change of plan in relation to the location of the hostel because, as I understood – hence my question to the Chief Minister – the Chief Minister on a previous occasion, in answers to questions from Mr Netto, there were plans to locate it at Coaling Island and, indeed, I think that the infrastructure – some of the infrastructure – was actually laid. Can he confirm that is the case; and, if it is the case, can he perhaps enlighten this House as to why the change of plan in relation to location?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there is no change of plan, in the sense that plans had not been finalised for the flotel to be located at Coaling Island. Coaling Island is one of the potential locations. What has been the subject of analysis is wave action to try and identify where the flotel would be subject to the least possible wave action, which means that the flotel would then move the least possible. There has certainly been no infrastructure laid to Coaling Island.

My understanding of the position is that Coaling Island offered the opportunity of a site, which had an element of wave action, but already had services available there; whilst the ferry terminal also offers the services and has a different sort of wave action. Of course, Mr Speaker, this – as I have said before in the context of the possibility of this flotel – is something which will be very much a temporary provision.

The hon. Gentleman will know that, as part of one of the property transactions involving the previous administration, for which we are happy to give credit, the hon. Gentleman, the Chief Minister, agreed to move the Moroccan workers presently at the Buena Vista Hostel out of that facility so that the developer could take over the hostel and produce there some housing scheme. The deadline for achieving that was 30th June – and I believe I have explained this in the House in answers to Mr Netto. Now not a brick had been laid to establish a new workers' hostel by that time. I know that the hon. Members had one site in question that then, I think, was affected by the 'modern curse', if I might call it that, of rights to light, which restricted some of the building pattern that could go on on that site – I am talking about the 'Readymix' site. I do not know whether that is something that the hon. Gentleman recognised, but that that may have been, or perhaps some other reason, why the development of a new hostel was delayed.

So the Government, therefore, finds itself in the situation where it has to hand over possession of the Buena Vista block – vacant possession, of course – and has to put these Moroccan workers – I think they are all Moroccan workers, but there may be one or two who are not Moroccan workers – in an alternative site.

Absent the new hostel, a temporary location has to be found. Gibraltar being Gibraltar, it is almost impossible to find another location: therefore, this is potentially the only temporary way whilst a hostel is developed in the shortest period of time. The essential thing – and this is where I think the question from the hon. Member, Mr Netto, came from – is we all agree. We need to ensure that this is as comfortable a temporary solution as possible. Hence, the analysis of different areas where the flotel hostel could be located so that there is the least wave action possible – and the ferry terminal is one that the Captain of the Port identified. I am happy to tell the hon. Members what the other sites we considered were.

One of them is the extension jetty, where there is not much wave action, but the state of the extension jetty is such that it is difficult to see whether it could hold for the period necessary. And, of course, the security issues at the port would mean that access for workers... not all of whom have security clearance. Some of them do, because they work for the MOD and some of them work in the port, but they would all have to have security clearance to access the flotel through the extension jetty, so that created other issues. This potential site, as a temporary site, creates a potential area where the flotel would be subject to the least possible wave action and which has the services. Hence the need to explore all of these potential sites.

The other alternative would be, for example, in the south-western corner of the area of Gibdock, which would involve having to agree with Gibdock a location there.

Buena Vista is quite a way out for gentlemen who, principally, do not have their own means of transport and walk or take the bus, and this would be further out than the ferry terminal and would require an arrangement with Gibdock, which would take up some of their valuable berthing space which they commercialise. Hence the analysis by those who understand wave actions etc, etc, of the different potential sites for the flotel.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, so effectively, the decision has been based on wave action.

The last time that we touched upon this particular issue, he only mentioned Coaling Island. He did not mention any of the other sites – but have there also been any representations from people operating in the Coaling Island vicinity as to the siting of the hostel in that area and did that play an additional part in the decision as to not locating it there and locating it in the port area, or was it just simply this question of wave action and there being a potential problem with this site in relation to wave action?

Hon. Chief Minister: There is nobody operating the area of Coaling Island whose representations would, I think, have been relevant to this.

The hon. Gentleman will know that the people there are the Royal Gibraltar Yacht Club, whose representations in this respect have not been received – they have not made any objection. The Community Mental Health and the Camber Boat Owners... At present there is a Steel Mac vessel there which has some pollution emergency and fire emergency material there which was allocated to them by the previous administration, and other operators, most of whom, as I understand it, are awaiting the finalisation, if that is possible, of the Western Beach reclamation so that they can be relocated there.

None of those, as far as I know, have made any representations to any part of the Government in order to influence this and the hon. Gentleman should take it as read that the issue here is the wave action –

Hon. D A Feetham: That is what I asked.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and the importance here is that it is impossible to anchor a flotel because... I mean you anchor it, but you cannot anchor it and... I mean a flotel does not become a reclamation. It is still a vessel and subject, potentially, to some element of movement and therefore wave action is relevant and because we, I hope, all agree – and no doubt all agree – need to make this as comfortable a process as possible for those who will inhabit that flotel.

Insofar as possible, it should not move, and therefore wave action is the relevant point, and the people who know more about that are the people in the ports, rather than the Ministers.

Clerk: Question 6...

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I would just like to ask the Hon. Minister – perhaps he may even have given information whilst I was outside the Chamber – but does he have a target date when he thinks that this particular hotel, workers' hostel, is going to be berthed in the ferry terminal? Is there a date available, or approximate date?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this matter is not being handled by the hon. Gentleman and that is why I am getting up to respond. It is being handled by me, although because he is the Minister for the port, where it is berthed, will be relevant to him.

Mr Speaker, the flotel is still being prepared to come to Gibraltar. It is not yet, as far as I understand it, en route. We are not in control of that process because we have no commitment in respect of the flotel until it arrives in Gibraltar, but we are seeking that it should arrive as soon as possible because of the Government's contractual commitment, which I have just alluded to in respect of the handing over the stone block, and because – I think the hon. Member may not want to agree with me – but the conditions of the stone block are really pretty awful.

I have been there on two occasions since I was elected and it is not a place where people would want to be living, even if all they are doing is putting their head down for the night whilst they are working. People, essentially, finish work at five or thereafter and spend a lot of their day there during the week when they are not with their relatives at the weekend and it is a pretty awful place to have to live. It is pretty embarrassing that we are putting people in that place and, therefore, the flotel, Mr Speaker, actually, will be a much better accommodation and, hopefully, a stepping stone to even better accommodation when the modern facility is developed.

So the answer is, Mr Speaker, the Government is doing everything possible to bring about the arrival of the flotel and its availability for use as soon as possible. I am not going to be able to give him a date today, but we are working on having a date available.

Hon. J J Netto: I am obliged, Mr Speaker, but could I also ask the Chief Minister – given that he is handling this particular item – what is the room capacity of the hotel?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I cannot tell him the exact room capacity because although it is about... I think it is 230 rooms as presently configured. That configuration is part of what may change, depending on what availability or what requirement for rooms we have and, of course, this potentially can house people who are not already tenants of the Government at either of the two workers' hostels and the type of configuration of room can change –

Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member would give way, I was not referring to how many workers are residing in the current hostel in Gibraltar. What I was referring to is what room capacity does the ship – if it is going to turn out to be a hotel – what room capacity it has?

Hon. Chief Minister: The issue, Mr Speaker, is what the configuration of the bedrooms will be when the refurbishment of the facility is finalised.

Per individual, it could take up to approximately 550 people, doubling up in bedrooms. It could take approximately half if you were to stick one to a bedroom. It could take more if you were to restructure the bedrooms.

We are not talking about a facility that has brick walls, of course. These are moveable walls, in the sense that you can refurbish the facility and we are talking to the two Moroccan Workers' Associations about this potential and, therefore, I do not want to be committed to what it is that they can offer because we are trying to maximise what they can offer, subject to what it is that they want each room to provide for, and he will have the same feedback that I have. Some people are happy to have a partner in a room – they are quite happy to share a room and have two beds in the room. Some people would prefer to have a single room, but they do not need it to be as big as the rooms that have two beds in them.

So that is why we are playing around with the configuration, in order to assist in providing the type of configuration that the workers, the relevant workers, want.

Hon. J J Netto: But in order to determine the configuration, then, is the Government conducting some sort of a survey of the Moroccan workers at the moment as to whether they prefer living with another person or not, so that that information can then be placed to any changes in the refurbishment works?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, through the Moroccan Community Association, in particular, who are giving us the feedback of how many would prefer what type of room, that is the sort of work that is going on at the moment.

I do not think this is hugely difficult, by the way, and therefore it should be fairly easy to ensure that everybody can be accommodated more or less as they wish.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as the drafter of the original Question, given that we are homing in on some of the detail – and I do appreciate, Mr Speaker, that we have digressed somewhat from the original question – but I do pick up on one point that the Chief Minister made in response to one of the questions from my hon. colleagues, which is that the vessel is, in fact, not on its way to Gibraltar.

That is not quite what the Chronicle... it was not a Government press statement, I think it was a Chronicle report said recently, in that particular newspaper... but it also reports that the vessel – just so I can visualise what it is that is going to end up at the ferry terminal – is the Bibby Kalmar, which is the sister vessel to the Bibby Altona, which is the one which was pictured in the press report I have just referred to. Is it that vessel? Does the Chief Minister know that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is that vessel and, of course, Mr Speaker, we are not responsible for what the Chronicle publishes. (Interjection)

Gibraltar Bus Company Appointment of director/manager

Clerk: Question 692, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House whether the post of director/manager of the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited has been filled?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes, sir. The post was opened internally on 2nd May 2012, with a closing date of 11th May. Three applications were received in total.

As a result of the recommendations of the interview board, it was decided to divide the position of general manager into two posts: one manager to be responsible for operations and another for administration. The posts were filled from the internal applicants.

635 The advertised post for general manager carried a salary of £45,000. The salary attributable to the new general managers was calculated taking the difference between their salary and the advertised pay and splitting this difference in half amongst both employees. Gibraltar Bus Company, therefore, now has two specialised managers for the price of one.

640 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Minister what, in fact, the salary is, because I know he has given me the basis of the equation and the calculation which was carried out, but obviously without the base figures I am not able to do the calculation myself? So I would be grateful if he could give me that information.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, of course. The basic wages are £35,000.

645 Hon. D J Bossino: I see. They are each getting £35,000, as opposed to what?

Hon. N F Costa: As a result of – 650 Hon. D J Bossino: As a result of that calculation. So, if my maths is correct, it is a £70,000 expenditure for the Bus Company in respect of both positions.

Hon. N F Costa: Well, remember that these are already existing posts. He has not brought anyone else in from the outside. (Interjection) Yes.

655 Clerk: Question –

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful.

660 Mr Speaker, he says that the applicants were three employees working within the Bus Company. Is he able to tell this House which positions the successful applicants held prior to the positions being filled?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information in front of me. I don't think... Perhaps if the hon. Gentleman were to indulge me for just one second to see whether I do have it.

665 Yes, one of the successful applicants was an office administrator and the other person was originally employed as a bus driver, although I am quite sure that by the time he was successful he was a chargehand, but that is not in the information in front, that is working from memory.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am somewhat surprised by the answer because from the position of – I think... is it office 'chargehand' did he say?

670 Hon. N F Costa: Chargehand.

Hon. D J Bossino: – Chargehand, and the other successful applicant was a bus driver, (Interjection) to the dizzy heights... oh, that –

675 Hon. N F Costa: Sorry, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman will just give way for a second? The second successful applicant was originally a bus driver; but, as I said, from memory, I am quite sure that by the time he interviewed for this post he was already a chargehand. He was no longer working as a driver.

680 Hon. D J Bossino: For the purpose of clarification, and the other applicant?

Hon. N F Costa: Office administrator.

685 Hon. D J Bossino: Office Administrator. Mr Speaker, is the Minister satisfied – given that he has political responsibility for that particular company – that the successful applicants have the requisite experience and knowledge to run a company of this nature?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, I remind the hon. Gentleman that the two persons that were originally recruited by the GSD were police officers that went over to a bus company. I am not entirely sure what experience exactly they had of running a bus company.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): None at all!

Hon. N F Costa: In the second place, Mr Speaker, these are people who have been working within the company since 2004. Therefore, they have two employees who may well have been at the middle (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi: You do not have to justify) – no, no – who may have been... well, at the middle rung, but they had been employees of the company since 2004, and the most important point, Mr Speaker, is that he must bear in mind that I simply accept the recommendations made to me by the interview board and those are the people who were recommended to me by (Laughter) – I do not know why the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition laughs at this. I actually accept the recommendations of the board. I have it here in writing, and it says that two of the candidates were found suitable and therefore recommended them to me. (Interjections)

Sir, and may I say that it gives me particular pride to be able to say that people who start at any particular rung of any company should be able to go to the very top. That, I believe, sir, is fair enough (Interjection) and we find it much (Interjections) And we find it (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! The Hon. Minister is answering.

Hon. N F Costa: And we find it much preferable to having people who have started at a lower rung coming up that particular rung, rather than parachuting pensioners, who already have a pension, dropped into as political appointments with no notification of vacancy! (Applause)

Hon. D J Bossino: Clearly, once again, each time I ask questions on the Gibraltar Bus Company it seems to ruffle some feathers, and the Minister of Justice ought to calm down (Laughter) and allow the Minister for Transport to answer the questions that I am posing from him. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections)

Hon. G H Licudi: It is totally inappropriate for the hon. Member to give instructions to me to calm down or otherwise. He is here to ask questions. We are here to answer.

What is also totally inappropriate is that the hon. Members should appear to find it totally objectionable that somebody who starts as a bus driver ends up as a manager. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Interjections) Good on that person! (Members: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

It is not entirely out of order for a Member, in posing his question or addressing this House, to refer to another Member, as the Hon. Damon Bossino has done. Perhaps the Minister for Justice should not be so sensitive. (Interjections)

Hon. P R Caruana: With respect, Mr Speaker, the thrust of the questions are –

Mr Speaker: I think we will close that subject.
Is there a Point of Order there?

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, it is not a Point of Order, we do not want to close the subject, we would rather hold the Government to account.

Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member not accept that the question is not whether a person is free to rise from relatively humble occupations to much higher offices – we have seen how easy that is do-able – but how quickly, and in how many simple steps they arrive at that office? So it is not a question of whether he was once a bus driver, and he now isn't. The question is how long ago was he a bus driver and how long has it taken him to go from bus driver, through chargehand, to the position to which he has now been promoted? Would the hon. Member care to identify the individuals in question?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker.

745 Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member answers, when I said we will close the subject, I was referring to the subject of the Hon. Minister for Justice's intervention. (Interjections) Well, I appreciate that, but the Hon. Damon Bossino was in the middle of his question and I imagine he has no objection to giving way to his (Interjection) –

750 A Member: Supreme –

Mr Speaker: Well, in that case –

755 Hon. G H Licudi: Supreme leader!

Mr Speaker: – I call on the Hon. Minister.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no. I cannot agree with the hon. Gentleman because he prefaced his question by saying that he finds it astonishing that a bus driver should have elevated himself to the position of general manager. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) No, you did not, but your hon. colleague did. So, therefore, I cannot accept the premise of his question.

760 This gentleman has been, as I said... and perhaps if he had been listening to me, Mr Speaker, he would have heard me say in my reply to the supplementary that he was there, this gentleman has been there since 2004. (Interjection) So from 2004 to 2012 he has been working as a bus driver and, subsequently, as I said from recollection, as a chargehand.

765 Mr Speaker, the point I want to make is as follows. In our view, it makes perfect sense that people who start at any particular lower rung of a company should go all the way up to general manager's position and is infinitely better than parachuting people who are retired and have absolutely no experience of running a bus company, with no notification of vacancy and contrary against the Employment Regulations of 1994. (A

770 Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, of course.

775 Would the hon. Member accept that it is perfectly possible for somebody to rise from the ranks of bus drivers – not that that is such an unworthy occupation, but still they seem to be determined to play it down – to the ranks to which he has now raised? That is not the issue.

Mr Speaker, there are people who have risen from much lowlier jobs than that to much loftier posts than the ones we are now discussing. That is not the issue. The issue is how quickly is it reasonable for somebody to have risen from bus driver to the position being discussed in just eight years –

780 A Member: Eight years.

Hon. P R Caruana: – coming from nowhere. Coming from nowhere.

785 Will the hon. Member identify who these people are so that we can be absolutely clear that there is no basis for that rapid ascension, other than the absolute merit and qualification of the individual to run the bus company?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, of course it is appropriate for people to rise from bus driver, or any other post, to higher office. Mr Speaker, of course it is, and that is what we on this side of the House are all for: equal opportunities, Mr Speaker.

790 Mr Speaker, I am delighted to say that I started as a messenger in a well-known local law firm and I have ended up as Chief Minister. But there are people sitting around this table who, on 7th December, were taxi drivers, and on the 9th were Government Ministers.

795 Mr Speaker (Interjection) the issue is not to analyse the career path of an individual, but that the hon. Gentleman should be saying to us, 'Well done for accepting the recommendations of a board,' because what the hon. Gentleman is impugning, Mr Speaker, is the recommendations of the board in question. Not the decisions of the Minister but the recommendations of the board – perhaps, Mr Speaker, because he does not understand that that is how modern Government works. Usually it is – in his day – finding somebody who is properly qualified, 'You are appointed because I like you,' or because of some other unknown reason.

800 Mr Speaker, in that context, we will not descend to bandying about this House the names of individuals, but if he wishes to, given that he knows who they are, he should feel free to bandy their names about. All I say, Mr Speaker, is that I am very proud of the Minister responsible who accepts the recommendations of the board, acts in accordance with the recommendations of the board and does not appoint people a dedo, (A Member: Hear, hear.) as used to be the case before 8th December. (Applause)

805 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member surely must acknowledge that when the hon. Members elevate rapidly to these posts, people who are well-known and well-documented activists –

Hon. Chief Minister: A Point of Order, Mr Speaker. On a Point of Order, Mr Speaker. (Interjection)
On a Point of Order, Mr Speaker.

810 The hon. Gentleman has been told repeatedly – and if he wants to challenge it, he should challenge it, Mr Speaker, but he should not try and do so cowardly from behind – that the Hon. Minister has not elevated anyone. A board was established and the board made recommendations and the Minister accepted the recommendations of the board, Mr Speaker. If he wants to impugn the board, he should do so; but the Point of Order is clear, Mr Speaker: he cannot say that the Minister has 'elevated' people if all he has done is subject 815 himself to the recommendations of the board.

Hon. P R Caruana: This is the same board that immediately after the Election recommended the company to collapse its case against Mr Sardeña – presumably, the same board.

820 Look, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member (Interjections) –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, on a Point of Order, I have to challenge the hon. Gentleman – 825 Mr Speaker: Order! (Interjections) Order, Order.

I know what the problem is. Perhaps the Hon. Leader of the Opposition would proceed with his question, but in two parts. One is, is he asking whether it is the same board that advised the Minister to discontinue the case or whatever it is... because I think that is a preface to the next question.

830 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, my question is this: does the hon. Member not understand that he strains the patience and credibility, he strains the patience of the electorate in Gibraltar and his own credibility if he is expecting people in Gibraltar – because I do not accept – that all the people who have suddenly, post-9th December, with no political allegiances, arrived in positions into which they have arrived, that that is all the coincidental result of independent, independently selected, independently adjudicating boards. If that is what 835 he is asking this side of the House to accept, know there, opposite, that we do not accept any such fairytale!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we note that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition impugns the boards that have made the appointments (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to which he refers... Mr Speaker, he needs to shut up and listen!

840 Mr Speaker: Order. Order. Order. (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: That the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition impugns the integrity of the Boards that have made the appointments that he challenges, most of which have been made by Boards established by the Public Services Commission of Gibraltar. Let that test the patience of the electorate, Mr Speaker, and let the electorate look back to what happened before 8th December 2011.

845 Let the electorate look back at all the appointments that were made on the whim and the fancy of the occupant then of No. 6 Convent Place. Let the electorate have its patience tested by all the information to be put into the public domain that reflects all of this, Mr Speaker, and then let this Government always act, Mr Speaker, in keeping with recommendations of properly established independent boards, whose credibility we 850 do not believe is impugnable.

855 Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member answer my question? Does he accept that these appointees, whoever he claims they were appointed by and by whatever process he claims they were appointed, Mr Speaker, which he knows we do not accept, will he accept that they are well-known activists of his party? (Interjections)

Hon. N F Costa: No. Absolutely not.

860 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, under this Government (Interjection) anyone can apply for any job: activist of the GSD; (Interjection) activist of the GSLP; of the Liberal Party; and even old activists of the Labour Party, Mr Speaker. They all stand as much of a chance as an independent board will give them. (Laughter) And if he wants, Mr Speaker, that we draw up a list, that we draw up a list with the names of GSD
865 activists who have achieved office in any particular post in the past 20 years and of the GSLP activists who have achieved that in the past 20 years, and we look at when it happened, Mr Speaker, he will find that the only person testing the patience of the electorate is he himself.

Mr Speaker, I am going to be too prudent to actually mention in this House the names that he knows I can mention and the relatives of his that he knows I can mention that found themselves elevated to high office without boards to do so, where the only person whose credibility is impugned is his, as the person who 870 appointed them. (Applause)

Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member is willing to do so. He suggests – he makes statements in this House – as if it is a fait accompli that any of the things that he is suggesting I used to do, (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) I did – and he is welcome to publish as many lists as he wants!

875 I can tell you that, in the 16 years I was in office, I did not elevate anybody to any post, (Interjection) either on my own decision, nor did I allow anybody or any board that I had contrived for the purpose to elevate somebody to a post to which they are plainly not prepared, on the basis of their party card carrying allegiance. (Interjections)

880 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! (Interjections)
There was no question over there to the...

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, but the hon. Gentleman knows that what he is saying is just not true. He will know, Mr Speaker. He will know what I found on the day that I arrived at No. 6 Convent Place.
885 He will know who was in what post and how many of them had been put there by a board or by him. And he will know, Mr Speaker, who they were and who they supported; and he will know, Mr Speaker, that they have all been treated fairly, despite that.

So, Mr Speaker, everything that he has said is not just refuted by this administration; it is not true. And the public knows, Mr Speaker. He is trying to climb Everest without oxygen if he wants people to believe that 890 under his administration, everybody got a fair crack of the whip, as they do now, because under him, Mr Speaker, it mattered more who you were and who you supported than what you could do.

Today, Mr Speaker, all that matters is what an independent panel assesses you are able to do and recommends to Ministers. That is the way that Western democracies should work – not as we were working, 895 Mr Speaker, before 8th December 2011.

The dark days of appointments at the whim of the man at 6 Convent Place are over.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Applause)

900 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, just for the record, let me tell the hon. Member that I do believe exactly what he says is not the case – in other words, it was in the days of the GSD that everybody had a fair crack of the whip and it is in the days... it is since 9th December that known GSD supporters are shunted about and that known GSLP supporters are suddenly elevated and parachuted into offices, including ministerial offices. That is what I am saying. I am telling him that he is saying one thing and doing the opposite, (Applause) as is 905 typical of his political style. (Applause) That was what I am saying to him.

It is the position of the Opposition that he says the right things to persuade people that he is the paragon of Western democratic virtue, whilst actually permitting his Government and his Ministers to do the opposite. That is what I am saying to the hon. Member, and the evidence out there on the street is absolutely legion for it. It is not just me who is saying or thinking it, Mr Speaker. It is not just me that is saying it or thinking it.

910 The question is that he has not yet answered my question, unless I should interpret the answer to be that, because he thinks that I used to do it, that he is doing it now and he justifies it on the basis that he is doing no different from what I was doing.

915 The question was are these individuals well known activists of the GSLP, to which the answer was ‘If he wants a list of the GSD activists that he elevated when he was in office...’ – well, I deny that. But even if he was right, why is he imitating what he regards is the Darth Vader of Western European politics? Why is he imitating me? He should be saying, ‘No, it was the case then and it is no longer the case now, because these people are not this or are not that’.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman’s statements remind one of what the male cow does in the field when nobody is looking. (Laughter)

920 Look, how can he say that he was the paragon of Western democratic governments, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) when he used to call two meetings of the House in an election year and three in a year when it was not an election, and we come here once a month?

925 How can he say that, Mr Speaker, in relation to appointments in particular, when under his administration, the individuals that were appointed to different posts – most of them are the most highly paid – were also appointed because of who they supported politically?

Look, Mr Speaker, I know that he wants to make the point as loudly as possible, but ‘the lady doth protest too much’. He is saying it and saying it, because he knows that he is fighting a battle against the truth – the truth that is so self-evident that I do not need to tell the public the names of the individuals in question, because they all know who they are. Some of them are his closest relatives!

930 Yet, Mr Speaker, he says: are these two people activists of the GSLP? Mr Speaker, I can give him an assurance that these people are not members of the executive of the GSLP or of the Liberal Party. These individuals, as far as I know, (Interjection) are not registered activists of the GSLP (Interjections) (A Member: Registered!) These individuals, Mr Speaker, may, like so many others in Gibraltar, have realised that the policies we defended at the last election are the ones that are best for Gibraltar. If they have said so, Mr Speaker, they do not in that way exclude themselves from any potential promotion, as the hon. Gentleman suggests that they should – of course, Mr Speaker, now trying to make a virtue that he did not identify at the time that he was at Convent Place appointing relative x and mate y and friend w and este amiguito here and there to the best and cushiest jobs in Gibraltar at the expense of the taxpayer. That, Mr Speaker, is over and it will never come back, Mr Speaker, because people are never going to allow him the opportunity of doing with the money of the taxpayer of Gibraltar that which he did before 8th December – spread it out amongst friends and supporters. That is definitely over.

940 If a Minister accepts the recommendations of a properly appointed board, he is doing the right thing, Mr Speaker – not looking at the political colour of the appointee, not starting the process, Mr Speaker, by who is it that applies and who is it that they support.

945 Or is it that he has forgotten, Mr Speaker, how he disqualified people after 1996, simply because of who they might have supported? Because if he thinks, Mr Speaker, that by repeating this poppycock he can get the public to forget, he has got something else coming! (Applause)

950 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, on a Point of Order, and to wrap this debate up, (Interjection) it has become fashionable for the hon. Member to say that I spent 15½ years in Government feathering the beds and the nests of – to quote him – ‘many close relatives’. I suppose he is referring to one close relative, Mr Armstrong; but as he has chosen to use the plural, I put it to him that he is now obliged to give me the list of the close relatives, in the plural, that he thinks I have advanced, through my own decision or in whose advancement he believes I have, during the whole of the 15½ years that I was in office, participated, and who are these amiguitos, as he calls them, that I have put in these elevated posts without board, without decision, simply on the basis that they were either my friends or my... He either now gives that list or accepts that he is making himself responsible for statements that he knows to be false. I am telling him now, in advance of his answer, that he is not telling the truth, that what he is saying is simply untrue.

960 To demonstrate that it is true, he has to give the names – not threaten to give the names but not give them, thereby getting the benefit of the political points without actually having to be assessed for truth. He should state the list of names that he thinks exists, and which I in advance refute, but let him take responsibility for his statements. Name the people – in other words, put up or shut up, which I understand is an unusually courageous condition for the hon. Member to live by.

965 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is foolish enough to think that he is the one who determines when debates are over and how they should be determined.

Hon. P R Caruana: As I raised a Point of Order.

970 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he is foolish to think that –

Hon. P R Caruana: I raised a Point of Order.

975 Hon. Chief Minister: And I am replying to the Point of Order, Mr Speaker – and he needs to listen whilst I reply.

The hon. Gentleman is foolish enough to think that he decides when a debate is over and when it is not. That, Mr Speaker, is not a valid Point of Order. It is a political point, Mr Speaker.

980 Hon. P R Caruana: That has not been ruled.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is a political point, Mr Speaker, to which I will answer politically as follows. Look, I am happy to give him the list. He knows what the list is but, as he prompts me so much, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to take him through it if he likes. Mr Speaker, he should look at the list of all his brothers-in-law and all the advantages that they obtained whilst he was in office for 15½ years – all of his brothers-in-law, Mr Speaker. He should have an opportunity to analyse exactly all the advantages that they took and then he should look, Mr Speaker, at some of the advantages that some of his Ministers took, whilst he was in office and some of the deals that feathered their nests and then he should look, Mr Speaker, at some of what his party supporters achieved – some of them elevated well beyond offices and some of them given deals, as insurance, I understand, in the last month of the administration, elevating them well beyond where they should be, up a class and a class.

I think I have identified them sufficiently, Mr Speaker, and if he wants to look at his friends, he should look at our press release of some weeks ago, showing how we have determined some of the consultancy agreements that were granted outside of European law and how those millions of pounds have flowed outside what we say was the EU procurement procedure. There, Mr Speaker, is the list, and now, with that list... If he wants I can put the names to it. I have already told him who they are and identified them sufficiently for everyone in this Chamber to know who they are, both the people on the opposite benches and the people in the public gallery and the people outside, then he can try and defend his abysmal record on fairness, the way that he has used taxpayers' money for those around him to have a better deal and, perhaps, Mr Speaker, people will then understand why it is that their nails clawed to try and stay in 6 Convent Place on 9th December, so that they could continue the abuse.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if this is the basis upon which the hon. Member conducts the relations of the Government of Gibraltar with other governments, it is little wonder that he has taken Gibraltar, in a record short period of time, to the crisis in which he is at... Is this the extent of the man's intellectual grasp of the issues beforehand or does he give this bluster approach to all the people that he interlocks with or just us?

I have raised the Point of Order. He has said in this House that I have used my office to elevate to high offices and to expensive high salaried posts members of my family – several. I have asked him, twice already, to state the names. If he refuses, then he has made an improper statement, imputing to me improper motives for which he refuses to provide details, Mr Speaker. This is a flagrant violation of the responsibility that he has for his behaviour in this House. I have not asked him – we can have a debate about that, too – all the people that he thinks have benefited contractually from Government contracts and all the other corruption and nepotism that he thinks I have been involved in with people that he now entertains in his office and perhaps even has lunch with. I am asking him specifically (Interjections) about his statement about my using my office to elevate and promote people to posts on the basis... who are members of my family, to all these high posts. He either withdraws it, I would have thought, or illustrates it. If he continues to refuse to illustrate the point, then people will know that what I am saying is true, and that is that he is repeatedly not only failing to adhere to the truth but that he is repeatedly making statements which he knows to be untrue.

1020 This is nothing to do with EU tenders; it is nothing to do with Government contracts. We can have that separate debate. We were talking about the promotion of individuals to posts. That is the statement that he made and that is the statement to which his answer must relate, Mr Speaker, I would have thought.

1025 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I said on a number of occasions both that he had promoted his relatives and his supporters to posts and that he had feathered their nests, and he came back and answered some of that. The Hansard will show, Mr Speaker, what I said and what he said. I have told him who those relatives are, Mr Speaker. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) I have told him to look amongst the canon of his brothers-in-law. He can do that if he likes, Mr Speaker, and if he wants me to give the exact names, I can give the exact names. I do not think it is appropriate to do that. They have already been properly identified, Mr Speaker.

1030 So the position is very clear. He asked me to put up or shut up, and I put up; and when I put up, Mr Speaker, all he can do is say, 'Ah, but that's not a post, that's a contract – that's feathering their nests in this way, not in this other way.' Mr Speaker, the fact of the matter is that this happened before 8th December, he knows it happened before 8th December, and he does not know how to get himself off the hook. He has got to stop wriggling, Mr Speaker. I do not know whether he is just jealous of the fact that some people who used to do business with him continue to do business with this Government, because I do not tend to have lunch with people other than people who are doing business with the Government because I try and use every possible minute for the purposes of making the Government's programme advance, but I do not think that is at all relevant to this. The issue has, I think, been very clear and ventilated clearly. When he goes back, Mr Speaker, and he looks at Hansard, he will understand that he got it wrong.

1040 Mr Speaker: I think I must... I should rule on this.

1045 Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, what will be clear from his answer is that he is compounding his sin. Far from me wriggling, Mr Speaker, it is clear that the only one wriggling here is him. How can it be called wriggling to ask for particulars of serious insinuations which can only be believed if they are particularised? So now people believe that all my brothers-in-law – plural, because I have one, two, three, four brothers-in-law on my side... Who is he talking about? So I suppose now the record stands me wriggling and him being as clear as daylight (Laughter) by suggesting that he has sufficiently explained to me who are all these family members that I have feathered the nests of by promoting them to some of the most highly paid jobs in Government by telling me to, quote: 'Look at all your brothers-in-law.'

1050 Well, Mr Speaker, as far as I am aware, I only have one brother-in-law who works in the Government or has ever worked in the Government, so the only one who is wriggling, the only one who is being his usual self, the only one who is showing in this House today why Gibraltar's affairs, particularly international affairs, are in the mess that they are, is him, Mr Speaker. He has made a very serious allegation against me in this House, which I tell him is untrue, and if it were not because of the Rules of Parliament preventing me, I would tell him that he is a liar, and when I ask him to do the right thing and tell me, so that people can gauge for themselves whether his allegations are right and fair or not, as I say they are not, he refuses to tell me who are the names of these members of my family that I have appointed to high posts.

1055 Mr Speaker, I would just invite you to consider what the ruling might be if a Member of this side of the House made a similar allegation about a Member on that side of the House. Indeed, we have had much less serious allegations of that sort since 9th December and Mr Speaker knows the position he has taken.

1060 Mr Speaker: I would like to rule on this matter, if I may.

1065 Hon. Chief Minister: If I may just reply, because the hon. Gentleman has said a number of things.

Mr Speaker: A very brief reply because I think we have gone over the ground several times now.

1070 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Gentleman needs to go back to Hansard because he will see exactly what I said about which brothers-in-law and other things. He needs to go back to Hansard because I think he has got a little bit upset, he has got a little bit nervous and he is forgetting. Perhaps it is the post-Government, post-office dementia setting in. He needs to analyse what was said and then he will understand who I am talking about and what I am saying about each of them.

1075 The hon. Gentleman has said that this explains why the affairs of Gibraltar are in such a mess internationally. Mr Speaker, that analysis is his own and it is self serving, and of course he would want to say that. The international affairs of Gibraltar have only been in a mess in 2002, when we had a Chief Minister who said to a Minister for Europe that he might consider an Andorra-style solution for Gibraltar, (Interjection) which he said did not mean joint sovereignty but the Minister obviously interpreted that and launched the joint sovereignty proposals. (Interjections)

1080 The international affairs of Gibraltar have only been in a mess – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

1085 There was reference by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition to the conduct by the Government of its foreign affairs.

Hon. P R Caruana: It was in answer to my –

1090 Hon. Chief Minister: So, Mr Speaker, the international affairs of Gibraltar have only been in a mess in 2002 and since then when we had a Chief Minister who was saying to UK Ministers that he would consider Andorra-style solutions, and in particular, Mr Speaker, in December 2010 when that same Chief Minister went to Seville and said there that he might ‘Um, ah, um, maybe one day, ah, um, um, maybe’ consider recommending ‘perhaps one day, maybe,’ an Andorra-style solution to the people of Gibraltar in a referendum.

1095 That, Mr Speaker, is what rendered the international affairs of Gibraltar a mess and, Mr Speaker, doing agreements with people outside of Gibraltar that they should be able not to respect the laws of Gibraltar but do what they like whilst the laws are applied to the people of Gibraltar in Gibraltar. That, Mr Speaker, is a mess –

1100 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: – of the highest order that one is left to untangle without having to call upon one’s family in Government to assist or give one’s friends or supporters jobs a dedo.

1105 Mr Speaker: Okay, I think I really must rule on this matter now. What started off as a fairly narrow Question as to the suitability of circumstances in which managers of the bus company were appointed has now digressed considerably into conduct of both the present and the previous administrations’ appointments of individuals, purportedly supporters, activists, and then it has gone on to family members and friends. We have digressed way beyond the Question.

1110 It is not proper in the course of parliamentary Questions and answers to bring in, drag into the proceedings of the House individuals who have no say in the conduct of either Government business or Opposition business, or indeed any other business. These are matters which should properly be aired in a motion brought before the House, where both sides know exactly what is to be debated and both sides can come armed with whatever information and evidence they see fit.

1115 The Hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned one particular individual who I think, Gibraltar being what it is, we all know is a member of his family, and he asked, invited or challenged the Chief Minister to name the other members of his family who are alleged to have benefited from his largesse.

Hon. P R Caruana: No! We are talking about appointments, jobs.

1120 Mr Speaker: Well, I am paraphrasing, alright? Appointed to specific jobs.

A Member: [Inaudible].

1125 Mr Speaker: The hon. the Chief Minister responded by referring to the relationship, namely brothers-in-law of the Hon. Leader of the Opposition. Again, Gibraltar being what it is, we all know that there are several individuals who fall into that category.

The impression I got was that the allegation related to all or most of them. It would be, obviously,

1130 preferable for the individuals concerned who are said to have benefited – again, I use the word loosely and widely – to have been named, but again that is not a proper... The Question and Answer session is not a proper forum for that naming. That naming –

1135 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with the greatest of respect to the Chair, we are not talking about Question and Answer sessions, nor are we talking about largesse or benefit. I raised a Point of Order. In this House, a Member has stood and said that another Member, namely me, has abused his power to appoint, not benefit or extend largesse in any general sense. The exact words, as Hansard will show, are that I elevated individual members of my close family to some of the highest paid jobs in Government. That was the allegation, Mr Speaker. It is not true and I am entitled –

1140 Hon. Chief Minister: On a Point of Order, Mr Speaker.
That is exactly the point I am taking with him, Mr Speaker, in respect of Hansard and he needs to look back and look at Hansard.

1145 Hon. P R Caruana: Then I suggest that Mr Speaker adjourns his ruling on this until he has had an opportunity to review exactly what the hon. Member said in Hansard.

1150 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you can do that if you wish. I am not going to object to that. I think it is entirely appropriate that you should rule as you are ruling, and this side of the House (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) will stand, as usual, Mr Speaker, by the wisdom of your rulings, although we should all be conscious that, unfortunately, Mr Speaker, this is the last time that you are going to be ruling during Question Time.

1155 Mr Speaker: Anyway, I will, of course, refresh my memory with the benefit of Hansard, but I think I have got a fair grasp of what is being said over here. When I use the word ‘largesse’, fine, I accept I use it in broad terms but, yes, the precise allegation was in terms of appointments made by the then Chief Minister to highest office.

Hon. Chief Minister: With respect, the allegation was appointment by the Chief Minister of relatives, friends and supporters to posts.

1160 Mr Speaker: That is correct. That is what I understood it to be –

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely. Check the Hansard.

1165 Mr Speaker: – and although the Leader of the Opposition invited the Chief Minister to name names, the Hon. the Chief Minister referred to the persons who are the subject of that allegation as the ‘brothers-in-law’. As I say, this is not the place. The parties or the persons have been identified without their names having been given. I think it is not proper that names should be bandied about in this House, although we all know in Gibraltar who the class of persons referred to are.

1170 Hon. P R Caruana: All the brothers-in-law.

Mr Speaker: That is the impression I got.

1175 Hon. P R Caruana: And, Mr Speaker, thinks that that is a proper statement to allow a Member of this House to say, is it?

Mr Speaker: No, but – (Interjection) Order!

1180 Hon. Chief Minister: But, with respect, I would think that ‘supporters and activists’ is a proper term to take, Mr Speaker, because it identifies thousands of individuals.

Hon. P R Caruana: Everybody in this House and listening to the debate in this House knows very well

1185 that what the hon. Member the Chief Minister said was by reference to appointments to jobs, members of my family, and I have said to him the only member of my family I am aware of works is one brother-in-law, who used to be the Assistant Chief Secretary, so who are the other members of the family that I have appointed to posts?

Hon. Chief Minister: Your ruling –

1190 Hon. P R Caruana: This is a Point of Order, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Yes.

1195 Hon. P R Caruana: This is not about whether we are in Question Time, whether we are in motion time, or whether we are on our tea break. The question is whether or not, in this House, it is permissible for any Member, even if he is the Chief Minister, whom it used to be possible to obtain rulings against... whether it is appropriate for any Member of this House to make serious insinuations of that kind, and then, on the basis of some general wrapping up, to be allowed to get away without taking responsibility for those allegations.

1200 Hon. Chief Minister: This is just unacceptable, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, in his intervention now has gone one step further, and I think it is a step too far. He has impugned the Chair. He has impugned the Chair, Mr Speaker, and therefore, not in defence of Haresh K Budhrani QC, but in defence of the Chair, Mr Speaker, I give notice that I will be moving a motion against the hon. Member of no confidence because, Mr Speaker, one of the things that we have to do in this House, if this House is going to work, is that we have to accept the primacy of the Chair and the hon. Member has just said that, before, it was possible to obtain rulings against the Chief Minister, and now it is not, as if the Chair were in some way partial.

1205 Mr Speaker, I invite the hon. Gentleman to withdraw that, or the Government – not in defence of Haresh K Budhrani QC, but in defence of the Chair – will move a motion of no confidence in the hon. Member.

1210 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, whether the hon. Members opposite have confidence in me or not is a matter about which I am totally indifferent. Since when do Governments have to have confidence in Oppositions?

This is a man who claims to understand the basic workings... (Interjections)

1215 Hon. Chief Minister: Since –

Mr Speaker: Order!

1220 A Member: Mr Speaker, I think he has got his – (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Another Point of Order.

Hon. P R Caruana: Am I not allowed to speak –

1225 Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker. (Interjections) The hon. Gentleman has taken leave of his senses.

1230 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Gentleman has taken leave of his senses.

The first Chief Minister to move a motion of no confidence against a Member of the Opposition was him, Mr Speaker: he moved one against me, Mr Speaker – or is it that he has forgotten that, Mr Speaker? – at the time of the Budget debate last year.

1235 Mr Speaker, in any event, the position is very clear for us. We will accept your ruling, Mr Speaker, on the substantive issue. I know the hon. Gentleman used to do everything possible not to, but we will accept your ruling.

1240 Mr Speaker: Can I just conclude my ruling? I must say, when the Hon. the Chief Minister indicated he would move a motion of no confidence, I did not in my mind think it was very appropriate. That is not the appropriate motion in here.

Hon. Chief Minister: A motion inviting him to withdraw.

1245 Mr Speaker: Well, yes. The motion which the Chief Minister refers to was a different one in nature – (Interjections)

I wish to conclude my ruling on this matter. The Leader of the Opposition invited the Chief Minister – challenged the Chief Minister – to name names. The Chief Minister has responded in terms of relationships and he refers, in addition to that, to two other – how do I put it? – entities whose contracts were recently terminated, and this is all public knowledge. That is the response given.

1250 For the purpose of the Question and Answer session in the midst of which we are, that is a sufficient response. It does not have to be individual names, date of birth and place of residence, or whatever it is. The reference to the relationship is sufficient. Whether or not the reference is accurate, the impression I got was all, if not most, of the brothers-in-law, but that is the allegation.

1255 Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see. So Members do not have to take responsibility for the accuracy of their statements in this House?

Mr Speaker: That is the answer. (Interjections by Hon. P R Caruana and Hon. Chief Minister) No, that is the answer.

1260 Order!

That is the answer, and if any Member is aggrieved by the conduct of another Member in this House, we have motions to debate that very point. What we cannot do is debate, in the middle of a Question about two managers of a bus company, the whole conduct of 16 years of Government on this side.

1265 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Hon. P R Caruana: But this is why I have made it a point of emphasising repeatedly that this is not in the context of Questions and Answers. This is in the question of a Point of Order, Mr Speaker. Of course I know I can bring a motion because I have the ability to move a motion, but we also have a Chair whose responsibility it is to enforce the Rules of the House. Foremost amongst those Rules – because I have been at the receiving end of rulings of it myself in the last few months – is that it is not appropriate to make statements in this House which impugn the motives or the behaviour of another Member of this House.

1270 Mr Speaker, I cannot think of a more serious impugnation of me than to say that when I held the position of responsibility in this House I abused it to promote and advance the employment interests of unnamed members of my family, and after an hour and a half of debate and the Chair's ruling, all we have discovered about the allegation – and people can assess it for what it is or is not – is that it is a reference to all my brothers-in-law.

1275 Mr Speaker, if you think that that is a proper way in which to leave this matter, I bow to your ruling, but I cannot really believe that it is a proper place to leave this.

1280 Mr Speaker: The response has been clearly given that the persons whom the Chief Minister is alleging are the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's brothers-in-law. That is the response. We may not like it, we may not agree with it, it may not be true, but this is not the place to debate it now. It has to be in a motion.

1285 That is all I am saying, because what we cannot do is halt Questions and Answers, of which we have another hundred-and-odd to go through, to debate this particular point. The challenge was laid down and the answer has been given, namely the Leader of the Opposition's brothers-in-law. That is the answer. He could name the eight or nine or ten individuals, but that would not take the answer any further; it is still the brothers-in-law, so we know who the allegation is about.

1290 If the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition feels that the allegation has been made in an improper manner or is unsubstantiated, or whatever it is, there are motions for that purpose.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that might be an appropriate moment for us to take a break –

Mr Speaker: Already?

1295 Hon. Chief Minister: – but I beg to give notice, Mr Speaker, of a motion that the Leader of the Opposition should withdraw his challenge to the rulings of Mr Speaker, and I will put that motion in writing so it can be debated during the course of this meeting, later in the course of our affairs.

But I move, Mr Speaker, that the House do now adjourn until 5.30 in the afternoon.

1300 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I just intervene to say that, if we adjourn, we adjourn, and that is the end of the matter?

Hon. Chief Minister: Five thirty.

1305 Mr Speaker: No, recessing for a cup of tea.

Hon. Chief Minister: Only for a cup of tea.

1310 Hon. J J Netto: When we actually come back, can we continue with this Question because I have got a supplementary question I would like to ask? (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: I have got to go, Mr Speaker, for 15 minutes.

1315 Mr Speaker: Yes, we will recess for 10 or 15 minutes and then we will come back to the proper Question.

The House adjourned at 5.05 p.m. and resumed it sitting at 5.30 p.m.

1320

Gibraltar Bus Company
Appointment of director/manager

1325 Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1330 Just going back to the actual original Question as asked by my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino, could I ask the Minister whether he can confirm or deny that one of the persons elevated to the post of director or manager into the Gibraltar Bus Company is Mr Alfred Traverso; and if so, to which post?

1335 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have already said, I accepted the recommendation of an interview board. There was no question of me appointing or elevating anyone in particular. (Interjection) Yes, you said –

Hon. J J Netto: No, I didn't.

1340 Hon. N F Costa: – the elevation of a particular person to the post, which implies –

Mr Speaker: No, the question was one of the persons elevated. That is referring to the Minister.

1345 Hon. N F Costa: That is right, and I simply wish to reiterate the point that I did not elevate anyone or appoint anyone. I simply accepted the recommendation of the board and one of the persons is Alfred Traverso.

Hon. J J Netto: Could the Minister say whether it is to a post of director or manager, or to some other post?

1350 Hon. N F Costa: No, in my answer to the original Question, I made clear that the advertised post was one of general manager. The directors are the company directors; the officials within the company are civil servants. They are not hands-on managers like these two gentlemen are.

Hon. J J Netto: So I take it, then, that Mr Traverso is the general manager.

1355 Hon. N F Costa: One of the general managers, yes. There are two: one for administration, and one for operations.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Traverso was manager for administration?

1360 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, Mr Traverso was the office administrator since 2004 and he was recommended for the post of general manager for administration.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

1365 Hon. D J Bossino: We did ask, from the Opposition benches, for the names of the successful applicants. The Minister has kindly confirmed the name of Mr Traverso and the other –

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, sorry, the second person is Clive Martinez.

1370 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise this House who constituted the board which conducted the interviews?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, of course, Mr Speaker.

1375 The first person was Audrey Vela, Marketing Manager of the GTB; the second person was Peter Cleverly, who is the Chief Examiner; and the third person is Caine Sanchez, PA to the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Minister has referred to a recommendation. Is that the only recommendation received from the board?

1380 Hon. N F Costa: Yes. Mr Speaker, as I said in answer either to my original Question or to one of the supplementaries – and I read part of the extract of the recommendation – it said:

‘The board agreed that they could not come to a final outcome to decide on who to recommend for the post of general manager...’

1385 – noting that there was only one advertised post –

‘...as two of the candidates were found suitable.’

1390 Hon. D J Bossino: Is he in a position to divulge to this House who the third applicant was?

Hon. N F Costa: Well Mr Speaker, I do not think that would be appropriate, given that the person was not successful and he may not want the whole of Gibraltar to know that he applied and was therefore unsuccessful.

1395 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister confirm that, in fact, the third unsuccessful applicant was found unsuitable for the job?

1400 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, once again, I remind the hon. Gentleman that there was one post advertised for general manager. The interview board, according to the recommendation, was that they found two of the three candidates suitable, so it is inherent, I imagine, from that, that they did not find the third person suitable, but having said that, this is a private individual who I think would be loathe to be mentioned and named in this House, and I think that it is only fair that the hon. Gentleman stopped probing me on an issue which would expose a person who was not suitable by an interview board. I do not think it is fair that the hon. Gentleman should keep probing me on that particular point.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, given the move up the ladder as far as Mr Martinez and Mr Traverso are concerned, have the posts which they presumably have left vacant been filled; and if so, by whom?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, whereas I do not have the exact dates or the exact positions, from recollection from my last meeting with them, the posts that they have left vacant have now been advertised internally and I would not be able to tell him the exact date but interview boards will be held.

1410

To stress the independence of those boards, I will not at all be taking part in who is nominated etc. I have left it for them, in conjunction with the principal secretary, to arrange.

1415

Hon. D J Bossino: So those positions, as at 19th September, remain vacant – is that the case? Is that understanding correct?

Hon. N F Costa: That is correct. There is currently an acting deputy administrator.

Hon. D J Bossino: Is the Minister able to provide a name?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think if I may just answer that by saying that I do not feel comfortable providing the names of people in a Government-owned company, for the very simple reason that should these people not be found suitable or successful, they may not want their names being bandied about. If I recall correctly, there is some rule that says that it may not be proper to refer to third parties by names etc. (Laughter)

1425

By all means he can ask me in future who the successful applicants were – I would have no problem in telling him that – but to start getting into who applies, who does not apply, I think would be improper and certainly unfair for the people concerned because people may now start to worry that, should they apply for a post, their names are going to be now part of a debate across the floor of this House and I think that people should just be allowed to apply on their own merits and not because of what political debate we may hold here.

1430

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. the Minister for Tourism that the next time that perhaps we make a Point of Order he might be the person in fact arguing on behalf of that Point of Order, because he has elucidated quite well and very succinctly the point that my learned friend, the Leader of the Opposition, was making, which is it is quite improper, in fact, to be identifying third parties in this House that have nothing to do with this House: we can identify a person by name or you can identify that person by just referring to a narrow class of people, as the Hon. the Chief Minister made reference earlier.

1435

Can I ask the Hon. the Minister, when he received the recommendation from the board, did it cause him any concern that two of these individuals were GSLP activists, but one of them in particular was the moderator of a well known internet debating group – I think it is ‘Llanito Politics’ – who was very well known for his anti-GSD views, and indeed well known for his rabid, quite personalised comments on Members of these benches, and also well known Members of the GSD?

1440

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I comment to the hon. Gentleman that before his side of the House makes allegations and rises on points of order, they should look at the Hansard and see what has actually been said, because that would have helped them to elucidate the points that they are making.

Finally, Mr Speaker, can I tell the hon. Gentleman that he needs to look back at what it is that we have been debating for the past hour – some of it quite heated – and he will find the answer to his question, which we have answered on a number of occasions.

1450

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Hon. the Chief Minister, I have to say I made this point to him before, that he is rapidly turning into what he used to criticise my hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister, for doing. He is answering every single question that we pose to

1455

Ministers of his Government. He seems to be the one standing up and answering them, and it really is quite unhelpful, because all it does is just lead into endless debate that rapidly spirals out of control because of the way that he conducts the debate.

1460 May I ask the Hon. the Minister to answer the question. The question was not posed. The question this time is whether it caused him concern, when he received that recommendation, that this particular individual had that particular background. That is the question.

1465 Mr Speaker: I do not think it is up to any Member of the Opposition to pinpoint and decide who answers a question. The question is posed to the Government and the Government can answer the question by whichever Member the Hon. Chief Minister thinks fit.

Hon. D A Feetham: I accept that entirely –

1470 Mr Speaker: That is what has happened.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, I accept that entirely, but the point is different, Mr Speaker. The point that I have made is that the Hon. the Chief Minister used to criticise the Leader of the Opposition, when the Leader of the Opposition used to stand up and answer for somebody else and I am saying ‘You are turning into the very thing that you used to criticise!’

1475 I am not saying that he is not entitled to do it. That is not what I am saying. I am making a more subtle political point. I do not think, Mr Speaker, that it is something that is a Point of Order or a transgression of the rules on this –

1480 Mr Speaker: Can I, as a non-politician, say that is typical of all politicians: ‘Do as I say, not as I do’.

Hon. Chief Minister: You see, Mr Speaker, Question Time is not for ‘subtle political points’; Question Time is for the elicitation of information from the Government.

1485 The Hon. Mr Feetham can say what he likes. The fact is that we only heard one voice between 1996 and 2011 from these benches, both in the detail of matters that were being dealt with constitutionally by the then Chief Minister and in others. I am very happy, Mr Speaker, to allow my Ministers to answer questions. I trust my Ministers and I trust my officials, Mr Speaker – quite a change from the regime before 8th December 2011.

1490 But when macro-political issues are raised which affect the whole Government, then I am perfectly happy to get up and deal with those issues. I do not think it raises any issue with any of my Ministers.

In respect of the substance of the ‘subtle political point’, I think, that the hon. Gentleman thought he was making – but of course he is as subtle as brick – I refer him to the Hansard of answers that have already been given, because re-phrasing a question does not mean that it is an opportunity to ask it over and over again.

1495 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask a supplementary question?

I think I heard the Minister just now say that the recommendation of the board was that they had selected two names. Can I ask the Minister whether that is the only recommendation they have had from the board or whether there was a previous recommendation?

1500 Hon. N F Costa: That was the only recommendation received from the board. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Clerk: Question 693, the Hon. – (Interjections)

1505 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

1510 Hon. D A Feetham: Look, I quite understand that the Hon. the Chief Minister... I don’t know, he is new at the job, he really wants to (Interjections) make his mark and he has a need to stand up and answer for everybody else.

1515 As I understand it, the recommendation has not been made to him; it has been made to the Minister. If I ask a question of the Minister about what concerns he may have had – and it is very specific, easily answered – about a recommendation that has been made to him, he ought to be allowed to answer, otherwise we will all go out of this House thinking ‘Well, he’s got something to hide’, because the Hon. the Chief Minister keeps on standing up and feels the need to protect him from a quite straightforward question. Again, I would invite the Hon. Minister to answer the question.

1520 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is not any longer Question Time; this is the hon. Member with his pickaxe trying to make these subtle political points, right! – ‘Oh, he doesn’t allow that... he’s got something to hide.’

1525 Mr Speaker, the tricks of cross-examination are not to be deployed in Question Time in the House. There is absolutely nothing to hide. It has been ventilated a thousand times, and what I am saying to the hon. Member is stop wasting your time and ours and the listeners’, get onto the next Question, because that question phrased in a thousand other ways has already been answered on a thousand occasions.

1530 If he wants to make political capital of it, let him issue as many press releases as he likes about this issue and how much he wants us to recognise that he was responsible for the courts and all the rest of the things that he likes to take credit for. But in this House at Question Time, Mr Speaker, let us leave those babyish issues aside and let us get on with elucidating information. That is what Question Time is for. They have now got 10 a year. Use it for that. If they want to make ‘subtle political points’, let them issue press releases or bring motions for debate. Let us use Question Time for what it is intended to.

1535 Mr Speaker: I think we must move to the next Question, unless we have a supplementary of substance to elicit information which we have not already elicited this afternoon!

Introduction of new bus service
Details of consultation process

Clerk: Question 693, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1545 Hon D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the consultation process carried out in relation to the introduction of the new bus service to include matters such as when it commenced; the number of representations received; the nature of the representations; the sources of the representations made; and when the process closed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

1550

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Question implies in the first place that the formal consultation process was initiated, given that the Question asks for the commencement and the closing date of this process.

1555 On taking office, I requested to see any complaints and representations received in writing in respect of the routes, before the changes implemented in August of this year, in order to familiarise myself with a background to any existing problems and issues.

At the same time, I took the opportunity to meet with representative associations and private individuals in respect of their complaints and their suggestions on routes. The hon. Gentleman will, I am sure, be as surprised as I was that the survey conducted by their administration recorded 284 complaints over a five-day period.

1560

In addition, there are 94 written complaints addressed to the previous Minister for Transport. I am informed by officials of the Gibraltar Bus Company that when the changes were introduced on 28th May 2011, there was nothing short of a tidal wave of verbal complaints directed to the drivers, chargehands and inspectors, and it was as a result of this tide of dissatisfaction in respect of the changes of May that the previous administration conducted the previously mentioned survey over the five days.

Given that there were 284 complaints plus the additional 94 written complaints to the previous Minister, it is impossible to provide the exact details of each of the complaints, because these range from dissatisfaction of route changes, the length of some of the new routes, the insufficiency of buses at peak times and overcrowding being the most frequently repeated complaint, as a result of tourists taking advantage of the free bus service – in our view, when in Opposition, Mr Speaker, a fundamentally flawed, misguided and irresponsible decision. The less charitable minds amongst us, Mr Speaker, will no doubt attribute the introduction of a universally free bus service to the nearing and inevitable election dates.

Since being elected into office, I have received five letters from private individuals making representations, the majority on Route 3 and one in respect of bus shelters. As the hon. Gentleman will no doubt know, from our press release, the complaint in respect of Route 3 has been addressed by reducing waiting times from 25 minutes to 20 minutes. In respect of the bus shelters, one has already been erected at Tank Ramp and a second one is being erected outside Shorthorn Estate.

Since the date of drafting the answer to this Question, the managers of the bus company advise that they have received three written complaints in respect of the new bus routes, one concerning a change to the scheduled time of arrivals no longer being the same as before; another from residents of South Barracks, who would like the Route 4 buses to stop in that location too, and this is now tabled for consideration by the Transport Commission; and, finally, users of Route 3 stating problems with schoolchildren not being able to alight the bus due to overcrowding – although the complaint specifies that this only happened on one morning.

Mr Speaker, I have been in contact as well with the Gibraltar Pensioners' Association, who have made various suggestions. These include adding two new routes which are currently under consideration.

Finally, Mr Speaker, Government consultation by its very nature is a fluid and continuous affair so that, as far as this Government is concerned, consultation will not cease.

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, the Minister must forgive me for thinking that he, in fact, had undertaken a formal consultation process; he has now confirmed that that is not the case.

Is he able to give me, in a schedule perhaps, later on outside of this House, the list of private individuals and associations he claims to have met as part of his consultation process?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have mentioned one of them, which is the Gibraltar Pensioners' Association. I cannot off the top of my head remember the names of the other representative groups that I have met, but I am happy to call my office at some point and then give him the information, if he wants.

Hon. D J Bossino: I would also be grateful for the Minister, so I can analyse his reply further, in relation to the complaints he said that we received under our watch – in terms of the number and the nature of the complaints.

I am happy to pose a further Question at the next sitting of the House, but maybe we can have a discussion.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

Gibraltar Bus Company Limited Drivers employed and dismissed

Clerk: Question 694, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, advise the House how many drivers are employed by the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited; the nationality of the drivers; how many of the drivers have been dismissed since 9th December 2011; and the nationality of the dismissed drivers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. The Gibraltar Bus Company Limited, as at 12th of this month, currently avails itself of 44 drivers, broken down as follows: 13 Spanish nationals; of which 12 are on indefinite contracts and one on a supply basis; 6 Moroccan nationals on indefinite contracts; 25 British-Gibraltarian nationals, of which 21 are on indefinite contracts, three under the Future Job Strategy scheme and one on a supply basis.

1625 There has been no dismissal of any drivers on indefinite contract since 9th December. One employee was dismissed and started proceedings for unfair dismissal and, following the reconciliation services of the ETB, was subsequently reinstated.

Gibraltar Bus Company Limited terminated the services of seven supply workers. Five were Spanish, two British-Gibraltarian, as a result of the implementation of the new routes introduced in August of this year.

1630

Gibraltar Bus Company Limited
Eco-friendly buses

1635 Clerk: Question 695, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide this House with details of the cost, precise number, make and place of manufacture of the eco-friendly buses which are in the process of being acquired by the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited?

1640

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the first instance, may I draw attention to my reply to the hon. Gentleman's Question 596 of this year.

1645

Mr Speaker, the tender for the supply of eco-friendly buses has still not been completed. As such, I am unable to provide the House with the information the hon. Gentleman requests.

For his information, however, let me tell him that there are nine companies currently participating in the process. The first stage submission of documents took place on Friday, 14th September. From a quick look, four of those companies are local.

1650

After a period of consideration, selected tenderers have to be given an EU imposed minimum 40 days in which to price their requirements as part of the second stage. Given the variety of vehicles currently on the market and the varying costs associated with the different types of vehicles, in addition to the related services required, it is not possible to provide accurate costs. These will have to be calculated once price tenders are submitted.

Companies applying as a primary contractor have been allowed to nominate up to three partners, in order to improve the chances of getting good-quality environmentally-friendly buses which meet the demands of the public and routes alike, and of course I should have added here which are compliant with EU directives.

Similarly, the precise number of buses is not known at this stage, as this will be evaluated pending the results of performance tests to be carried out as part of the tender process. However, all interested companies have been informed that 18 to 20 buses will be purchased over the next three-and-a-half years.

1660

Hon. D J Bossino: I did check the reply which the Minister referred me to in his current reply, and from my understanding of the position can I ask him this: presumably we are still not at the stage where there is a successful and – I use his words – pre-qualification tenderer?

1665

Hon. N F Costa: That is right.

Hon. D J Bossino: So at the moment, it is all in the air as far as the nine applicants are concerned.

1670

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the position is correct to say that it is not in there; it is part of an ongoing process, yes.

1675

Airline business development
Consultation services

1680 Clerk: Question 696, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise who or which company provides consultation services to the Government in respect of airline business development in Gibraltar and can he provide this House with the full particulars of the nature of the services that are provided?

1685

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, although this information is already available on the Government website, I can confirm that Mr Stuart Finlayson provides consultation to the Government in respect of airline business development.

1690

Mr Finlayson has been engaged on a six-month contract at a cost of £13,750 for the six months. Mr Finlayson is tasked with assisting the Gibraltar Tourist Board with its critically important route development work by maintaining constant contact with the airlines currently operating to Gibraltar and also attracting new operators to the Rock.

1695

Hon. D J Bossino: Is Mr Finlayson – using his categorisation in response to one of my previous Questions – a British Gibraltarian?

Hon. N F Costa: I have his CV before me. I do not believe it states his nationality. I do believe he is a British Gibraltarian. I would have to ask him that personally when I see him next on my weekly meeting, but I do believe he is.

1700

Let me say also, Mr Speaker, that we believe we have found very good value for money in this contract as this gentleman's CV does speak for itself and he is already proving to be quite an asset to the Tourist Board in respect of its consulting services.

1705

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can he advise when Mr Finlayson took post, if he has not replied to that already?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I have not provided that information. He took post on 1st July, and of course the contract, being of a six-month term, will expire, if not renewed, on 31st December of this year.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, was that position advertised?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, put simply, this gentleman requested to see me. He made a presentation to me and the Chief Executive of the Tourist Board. We were exceedingly impressed by the information he had with him in terms of passenger routes, passenger number analyses, the throughput from Gibraltar to Spain.

1715

Simply put, he was a very impressive person who gave a very impressive presentation, and the Chief Executive, following that meeting, advised me that it would do Gibraltar a great good, in particular in respect of developing air route connectivity which, as the hon. Gentleman knows, does take some lead-in time – save that, of course, my experience with Monarch increasing routes from Manchester and from Birmingham will show that we can move quite quickly on this when required. We thought that it was a good fichaje for the Gibraltar Tourist Board.

1720

Hon. P R Caruana: In terms of the required level of precision in the House, will the hon. Member confirm whether or not this gentleman is his brother-in-law?

1725

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I first met Mr Finlayson whenever he gave me the presentation a few months ago.

1730

Hon. P R Caruana: So he is not your brother-in-law? That's okay.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon Dr. J J Garcia): You don't have a brother-in-law.

1735 Hon. N F Costa: I don't have a brother-in-law (Laughter). I may have without knowing, perhaps, but not to my knowledge.

1740 Hon. P R Caruana: It is just that it appears to be only brothers-in-law to whom you are not allowed to give contracts and things and friends without [inaudible].

Clerk: Question six hundred and –

Hon. D J Bossino: Sorry, just by way of further –

1745 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

1750 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I have to move an adjournment now until tomorrow morning, if the gentleman will allow, but if he has got one supplementary and he wants to make it now, I am quite happy to allow him to do that. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) No, no ya no nos fiamos de ustedes. (Laughter and applause)

1755 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! (Interjections and applause) Order! (Interjections) Order! Order! Order! Order! Order! (Interjections) Order! Order!

Before the hon. Gentleman poses his question, may I remind members of the public sitting in the public gallery you are invited here to observe the proceedings and not to participate by either cheering or jeering what you see and hear. I will expect some order in the public gallery. The Hon. Damon Bossino.

1760 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am happy to accede to the Chief Minister's request.

Mr Speaker: No further questions, in that case.

1765 Hon. D J Bossino: I will proceed tomorrow, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: If I let you. (Laughter)

Hon. D J Bossino: With Mr Speaker's permission.

1770 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Chief Minister has indicated that if there is a supplementary he is willing to wait for a few minutes. Is there a long line of questions in the offing on this?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, it depends on the answer I get to my first supplementary.

1775 Mr Speaker: Alright, in that case –

Hon. D J Bossino: With respect, the Hon. the Chief Minister has suggested that he is going to be moving a motion to adjourn the House and – 1780 Mr Speaker: We will leave the matter open.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in that case I beg to move the motion that the House do now adjourn to 9.15 a.m. tomorrow morning.

1785 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 20th September 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Thursday, 20th September 2012 at 9.15 a.m. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed. This House will adjourn to Thursday, 20th September 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

1790

The House adjourned at 6.00 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Airline business development
Consultation services

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Thursday, 20th September. Answers to Questions continue.
Question 696.

5 Mr Speaker: I think we had reached the supplementary stage.
Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

I am sure we have all had a well-earned rest after yesterday's proceedings and I look forward to these proceedings being a bit more calm and civil. (Interjection). Let's see... Let's see what happens.

10 Mr Speaker, I think the way we left matters in relation to my Question, which related to the provision of consultancy services to the Government in respect of airline business development in Gibraltar... The answer was, just to recap, that Mr Stuart Finlayson had been appointed in this respect and the Minister gave me some information as to the terms in which that appointment had been given. But can I ask the Minister... maybe home in and request further particulars as to what those terms of reference are.

15 In relation to that, does Mr Finlayson have any objectives which he has to achieve within the first six-month period of his appointment?

20 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the objectives that the hon. Gentleman speaks of are not contained in the consultancy agreement, but we have made it clear to Mr Finlayson that the whole point of his consultancy services to the GTB is, other than maintaining contact with the airlines and introducing Gibraltar as a potential destination to Nordic countries – in particular to Germany – and other operators in Spain and other operators in the UK, for us to take a positive view to renew his contract it would be ideal if we had a signed agreement of a new air route coming to Gibraltar.

25 That does not mean that if we do not have one then we will not renew his contract, because it may be that negotiations are well progressed in respect of various airlines that may well consider coming to Gibraltar, but it is, to answer the hon. Gentleman's question, a result-driven contract and it is perfectly clear that in order for him to continue to provide consultancy services to the Gibraltar Tourist Board he will need to provide results and, of course, that would be tangibly new air connectivity to Gibraltar.

30 Hon. D J Bossino: Perhaps just to confirm something that the Minister has just said, Mr Speaker, I would be interested, on this side of the House, to ask for the Minister's confirmation that the measurable target on which he, as the Minister responsible for this area of policy, will be able to assess whether Mr Finlayson's appointment has been a success or otherwise, will be the ability to secure connectivity, as he has just mentioned. Is that the target? And if that is indeed the target – I expect that the answer will be that it is – is there a timeframe that he has in his mind now as to when he expects Mr Finlayson to deliver in that respect?

40 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place – I did say this, but I will reiterate it – it is important that we maintain constant contact with airlines. There are, as the hon. Gentleman knows, a number of them, some of which we think are suited to come to Gibraltar because of their place in Europe. It is because Mr Finlayson has such an extensive experience of the airline industry and has worked, for instance, for Routes Ltd, which the hon. Gentleman knows sets up the Routes conference, he has worked for Airport Coordination Ltd, for airport slots as senior co-ordination executive, he has a Masters in air transport management... Because of his background, he therefore has a unique blend of contacts throughout the airline industry which we do intend to, in the best possible sense, possibly plunder so that Gibraltar becomes very much visible in their minds and on their radar.

45 So part of Mr Finlayson's value to the Gibraltar Tourist Board is, firstly, the contacts that he is able to establish and the relationships that he is able to pursue, and that cannot be, I think, belittled because it is very difficult for us to get in touch with airlines through which we have no contacts. So having a foot in the door, as it were, is crucial. Once we have that, of course, the target very much is that Mr Finlayson, where possible, secures an airline connection to Gibraltar.

50 All of the experts in the industry – whether it is local tour operators or international operators or, indeed, the executives of airlines that I have spoken to, have always told me that lead-in time to establish a new route could be anything between a year or two. The hon. Gentleman knows that we were successful, once the Liverpool route disappeared, to increase capacity, to maintain the capacity through Manchester through Monarch, and when Bmibaby announced that it would cease operations in October we were also able to move quickly to start operations, as from March, also through Monarch at Birmingham. So we can move quickly where it is absolutely necessary that we do so, and the hon. Gentleman will, I am sure, congratulate us in being able to do so in those two respects.

That is one thing. Being able to develop relationships and secure airlines from partners with which we have absolutely no relationship... We have no relationship with airlines in the Nordic countries, no relationship with airlines in Germany, for instance. We need, as I say, to establish those contacts and then try to see how we best secure those routes.

I have impressed on Mr Finlayson, as I have already said, that for the Government, a sure sign of success would be that he is able to have a contract signed with an airline before the expiration of his first six-month term, but as I have also said, given that he has invaluable contacts in the airline industry, and if we feel that he has sufficiently progressed negotiations with any number of airlines, it does not mean that because he has not secured one contract by the end of his first six months, that we will not renew it for another six months for him to finalise and continue negotiations which are already in place.

I can already tell him, too, that Mr Finlayson has prepared a very detailed information booklet on the Gibraltar Airport as to passenger input, passenger throughput, the benefits of the Gibraltar Airport, the benefits of flying to Gibraltar and how that analysis will factor into airlines' own analysis as to why it would be commercially viable for them to come to Gibraltar, and this is the point that I am trying to make. For Monarch, even if they have no data from Birmingham to Gibraltar, they have been able to rely on the data from Bmibaby and, indeed, the data from Luton, so they have more or less an idea of numbers because of their relationship, but for those airlines that have no relationship this is where Mr Finlayson comes in.

Hon. D J Bossino: The answer I am now seeking may have been inherent in what the Minister has just said, but one of the concerns I have... because I can tell him that when we were in office... As he well knows, I was not in that GSD administration. The information that I get is that we had gentlemen – maybe it was Mr Finlayson himself, or people like him – who sold his wares to the Gibraltar Government at the time and that was never seen as a positive move, on the basis simply that the analysis made was that there were sufficient staff within the GTB, as well as the Minister himself, who would be able to carry out that work.

I would be interested to learn... and this goes really to the issue of cost, and I do appreciate that the cost outlay here is not necessarily great, given it is under £15,000 for the first six months but, given the issue of costs and given also the statements made by the Hon. Minister in this House in the past, Mr Speaker, that he lays a lot of emphasis on personal contact, and I assumed it was his personal contact with the players in the industry... how he expects – and I could home in on that – to marry what Mr Finlayson does and what he himself has told this House he is doing, as well as his Department?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, there is nothing mutually exclusive between a person who has the connections that he has as a result of having worked for so many years in the airport industry that introduce his Minister to those people to build those personal contacts and the work that he does. Mr Finlayson comes armed and equipped with an ability to analyse data in respect of passengers and throughput and can establish those contacts and introduce us – the Gibraltar Tourist Board and me – to those personal contacts that will eventually, hopefully, once he has done the groundwork in terms of passenger analysis – the number of people that can fly to Gibraltar, why it is commercially beneficial for them – for me to go eventually and sign whatever agreement is necessary.

My personal contacts are now very much, I hope, embedded with Monarch Airlines and also with British Airways. Of course, Monarch Airlines is a much smaller business, so to know the managing director is very much like knowing the actual owner, because there is this symbiosis between them, too, because it is a family-owned business and therefore very small. British Airways, as he knows, is a behemoth, it is much bigger, so as we do now have a special contact for Gibraltar – indeed, it is through this contact that we managed to obtain the two extra weekend flights with BA... It is a much bigger organisation, so just by knowing this one contact does not mean, of course, that we know people at the very top, but Mr Finlayson does, indeed, know certain people that he can introduce us to.

So the hon. Gentleman will note that, even when Mr Finlayson was now here, we were able to obtain the two additional flights from BA. Those were done, in fairness, through the efforts of the chief executive, Mr Guerrero, and my three meetings with this gentleman from BA. However, I think that Mr Finlayson's statistical analysis very much helped clinch the deal as to whether it was commercially viable or not for Gibraltar.

In respect of costs, I think the hon. Gentleman will agree with me that £13,000 for six months, when we have been able to secure already two extra additional flights from BA weekly, is very much a good deal.

115 In respect of staff, yes, the Gibraltar Tourist Board does have, I would say, a high complement of people, but I can assure him that they are very much busy in whatever areas they are contracted to perform.

120 Mr Guerrero does have a particular expertise on airports and air connections, which is why we brought him in as the chief executive, but because he is also the chief executive it means that at least half of his time is designed to administration, human resources issues, paper-clipping etc, so he was not able to fully dedicate himself to what we think is a vitally, critically important economic generator, which is air connectivity, and the hon. Gentleman will agree with me, without getting into the political squabble of whether €80 million was too high or too low – we know what the respective political positions are – because we do now have an airport that has a capacity for one million passengers a year and we only have air connectivity to the UK, we really do need to have the expert resources of those that we can obtain to make the airport, which we say was built over-excessively in terms of cost, a success.

125 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Minister has quite rightly said that we will always be at loggerheads as to the judgement that this side of the House has and the tick that this side of the House has in relation to the building of that airport. That is absolutely right and, just by way of emphasis, we certainly still support. He knows what the arguments are and he knows what I said in my Budget speech. I very much encourage the Government... [Mobile telephone interference] to make use of the Airport... [Mobile telephone interference] – I think we have some mobile interference – and get it operational as soon as possible.

130 Just by way of confirmation, basically Mr Finlayson at this stage, and I do appreciate that it is very much work in progress, since he was only appointed relatively recently... I think it was 1st July he mentioned yesterday. Basically, he is an introducer of business to the Government, but an introducer of business who has a particular expertise and knowledge of the industry in terms of statistics and data and all the rest.

135 Mr Speaker: I hate to be –

140 Hon. D J Bossino: Just by way of confirmation.

Mr Speaker: I hate to be critical. Sorry. I hate to be critical of the hon. Member, but at Question Time a supplementary is not about confirmation or reconfirmation; it is about eliciting information. That information has been provided. What was the need for confirmation of that same information?

145 Next question, please.

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, Mr Speaker –

150 Mr Speaker: No, with respect, the answer, everything which the hon. Member asked the Minister to confirm has been answered in different ways over several supplementaries. What is the point of a confirmation?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this is a new initiative on the part of the Government.

155 Mr Speaker: I beg your pardon?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this is a new initiative on the part of the Government and I am just very interested to learn and to make sure that I have understood the responses that the Minister has given me in this House and I think it is –

160 Mr Speaker: But doesn't the sum total of all the answers encompass what the hon. Member has asked the Minister to confirm? Or is there something else you have asked him to confirm?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, simply to... perhaps for the Minister to – 165 Mr Speaker: With respect, this is not a courtroom where –

Hon. D J Bossino: – to summarise what –

170 Mr Speaker: No, with respect, in Question Time, there was summarising of information that has been provided. It is not a courtroom where we have got to summarise the information for the benefit of the jury. The information has been provided.

175 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but Mr Speaker, I have to say that Mr Speaker has, on a number of sessions, now with me accused me of asking questions of the Government in a way that is designed to batter a confession out of the witness. He has drawn this analogy with a courtroom on a number of occasions and I think it demeans this side of the House.

Now Mr Speaker may or may not have a point, but I think that Mr Speaker takes the analogy with a courtroom and playing to... What effectively you are saying is that we, on this side of the House, are playing to the gallery; and we, on this side of the House, refute entirely that suggestion.

180 My hon. and learned Friend, Mr Bossino, is asking questions. Sometimes one may overstep the mark. It is not the first time that it has happened, it will not be the last time, but what I would ask Mr Speaker to do is perhaps show some restraint in the use of his analogy, which he has used on a number of occasions, about courtrooms and battering witnesses and playing to the jury.

185 I personally did not see anything wrong with the questions; but, of course, you are the Speaker and he has to abide by your ruling. All I am saying is that perhaps you are going a little bit –

Hon. D J Bossino: Sorry, Mr Speaker, also if I could just to that and explain that this was, literally, my last supplementary.

190 This is, as I explained earlier, a new initiative from the Government. I am very interested in it. I do not think my questions – and I think the Hon. Minister would agree with me – have been aggressive in any way.

Mr Speaker: Not at all.

195 Hon. D J Bossino: In fact, they have not even been political in any way. It is simply – and I am very conscious of Standing Orders, Mr Speaker – an attempt to elicit information. As part of that process, Mr Speaker, I think it is important, by way of confirmation – and I do not think that the Opposition ought to be shackled in that respect – to be in a position on this side of the House to ensure that we have fully understood what have been – with all due respect to the Minister – rather lengthy replies. (Interjection)

200 I am sure that the response could easily have been – and I expected that the response would be, because I think I have understood, but I just wanted confirmation in that respect – a simple ‘yes’, and then I can assure Mr Speaker, and the Chair, that my supplementaries would have ended there.

205 Mr Speaker: Okay. First of all, may I say to the Hon. Daniel Feetham that I have never accused or suggested that the questions or the conduct of the Opposition are aimed at playing to the gallery – I never have.

When I have drawn an analogy, I have drawn an analogy in terms of trying to get the answer. If I talk about ‘beating a confession out of the witness’, I am referring to trying to get the answer in the manner in which the Opposition would like to hear it, in the manner which lawyers like to hear an answer from witnesses, in that context. I have never... I am sure if the Gentleman on this side were to cast their minds back, I have never suggested that any of the questions or any of the conduct of the Opposition is playing to the gallery. I never have and it would be wrong for me to do so. I never have.

210 Getting back to this point again, with respect, we must all understand (Interjection) that Question Time is about eliciting information or urging a certain policy. The hon. Gentleman has asked three or four supplementaries today in a perfectly proper manner – no criticism meant, or even suggested, of the manner in which questions are posed, or the questions themselves. The answers have been given in an equally straightforward forthright matter. There is absolutely no criticism of the question or of the answers.

215 The criticism lies in the last question, which asks the Hon. Minister to confirm the state of affairs, which the Minister has answered over a series of questions. That is not, in my understanding, eliciting information or urging of policies: simply asking him to reconfirm that that is a summary of what he has said over the questions this morning and one or two yesterday afternoon. That is not the purpose of supplementaries.

220 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is the ruling from the House going to be... or the recommendation from the House that we are not to seek confirmation in respect of answers where perhaps the poser of the question may not have understood the entirety of the answer given?

Mr Speaker: Ask for –

Hon. D J Bossino: Is that the position –

Mr Speaker: Just ask for clarification of the answer; but not confirmation.

Hon. D J Bossino: I will happily replace the word ‘confirmation’ with ‘clarification’.

Mr Speaker: Please do.

What would you like the Minister to clarify?

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, can the Minister clarify, because in fact, Mr Speaker, I have asked and used the word ‘confirmation’ in the past, and the Chair has not stopped me... but can the Hon. the Minister for Tourism clarify that Mr Finlayson’s duty, or the benefits of Mr Finlayson’s appointment, will be that he will be, in effect, the introducer of business to his departments? That in fact he is telling this House that he is a particularly attractive appointment because not only is he somebody in the know, in terms of whether he knows the contacts and all the rest of it, but he also has the data and information and that sort of nitty-gritty arsenal of information at his disposal? Can I ask him to clarify that?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman likes to test my memory first thing in the morning, but I think I can clarify the position.

The hon. Gentleman is right to say that one of the primary roles which will be discharged by Mr Finlayson, will be to introduce possible business opportunities to the Gibraltar Tourist Board and to the Gibraltar Government. As I have said, as a result of the extensive professional experience that he has had in the flight industry – he even was cabin crew from 1997 to 2004 for various long and short-haul flights and, as I said, he has a Masters in Transport Management... So as a result of all of that and having worked on the administration side and on the actual flying side of the business, he does know a wealth of people who we in Gibraltar would not necessarily have the contact. So yes, he is a vital introducer of potential business.

Secondly, as to whether he is attractive: yes, he is a very attractive proposition, precisely because he does have, by virtue of his own studies, an erudition – data and information – which he is able to put together in a very attractive brochure to send to all of the airlines that we wish to attract to Gibraltar. I believe that was the extent of my supplementaries to date. (Interjection)

The third point is that he is not my brother-in-law! I only met him whenever I met him the first time.

It is thanks to Mr Finlayson that whereas the personal contacts were held through me and Nicky Guerrero in respect of the new BA flights, it is my opinion that he did clinch that deal by producing and collating data for British Airways that showed that what Mr Guerrero and I were telling the airline as being a commercially successful route anecdotally, he was able to back up by figures because – let’s not make the mistake – airlines will only fly to Gibraltar if they are going to make money.

Mr Speaker: There is nothing new that I learnt over there, apart from the fact that this is a very attractive man!

Next question, please. (Laughter and interjections)

Hon. N F Costa: But I hope that I remembered everything, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Well, there is nothing new that I learnt over there.

Hon. N F Costa: Okay. Thank you.

Mr Speaker: Next question, please.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Elliott's Battery development Public consultation

Clerk: We are now very quickly going to take Question 810, which is to be answered by the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.
Question 810, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, good morning, Mr Speaker.

Can the Deputy Chief Minister confirm, further to the announcement in relation to the new housing development in the area of Elliott's Battery, whether it will be considering the views of the public, particularly residents and other stakeholders in the area, expressed in open meetings of the DPC, and to what extent such representations and the consequent opinion and guidance of the DPC will form part of the Government's process to determine whether the project will go ahead?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the Government will indeed consider both the views of the public and the recommendations of the DPC as part of the process to determine whether the eco-housing projects will go ahead at Europa Point. This will be balanced against the housing needs of Gibraltar.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister could confirm whether there is any chance that the project will not go ahead following representations received?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the placing of the project before the DPC is the start of the public consultation. So now we are taking the views and then we will take a decision.

So the project could go ahead, or it could not go ahead. Yes, that is the correct position.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the answer.

In the announcement of the project the Government – I will use two microphones... far better. (Laughter)

In the announcement of the project, the Government confirmed, indeed, that the project was going through the DPC for opinion and guidance. However, there is precedent, or rather there was some confusion in respect of what it meant to go to the DPC in respect of another issue earlier on in the year, but specifically in relation to Grand Battery, I would be grateful if the Deputy Chief Minister could confirm, or rather could clarify whether, by virtue of going to the DPC whether it is in fact – and I know he said it, but I just want to ensure that there is no confusion in this specific respect – whether going to the DPC means going beyond just the Committee of the DPC itself by a round-robin e-mail and beyond to a public consultation and public meetings?

I am aware that there have been public meetings. I would like to pin the Deputy Chief Minister onto whether or not the public opinion – as if the project were going to the full planning process – is going to be taken fully on board and whether that opinion, if there were significant strength of it, would actually result in the mothballing of the project in its entirety?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I can confirm at this stage is that the Government will take a decision, taking on board the views of the residents and the views of the DPC, and then will decide whether the project will go ahead or not. That is the whole purpose of the exercise.

Clerk: Question 697.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, just on that. I have got a number of supplementaries here. I have got a question on the Order Paper later on for the Chief Minister. I might as well ask you, given that we are advancing, my learned friend, Mr Figueras, has asked his question and we are advancing it.

Are you saying that... you answered first... You said one has to balance the views with the housing needs of the community, and I quite understand that. At the end you said you have got to balance the views of the DPC with the views of the residents. (Interjection) Is the Government's... Well, that is what I heard you say at the present moment. Is the position that, of course, the Government will take into account the views of the residents but, at the end of the day, one must balance that with the housing needs of the community and it may well be the case that the housing needs of the community are such that you have got to, in an appropriate case – I do not know whether it will be this one – ignore, or it will trump, the views of the local community because of those needs?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think what I said was that we need to take into account... the Government will take into account both the views of the DPC and the views of the residents, on the one hand –

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): And then take a decision.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: – and then take a decision as to whether the project goes ahead or not. That is what I said.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understand what you said at the end, but I am just trying to understand the way that the Government actually sees this operating, not only in relation to this but in relation to other projects.

You may – Sorry, he is... the honourable... I do not mind giving you a moment to discuss it between you. No.

I quite understand what you have told me about the views of the DPC. Of course, the DPC has to provide its views on pure planning aspects, because that is what they are there for. Pure planning aspects. The residents will provide their views in terms of the impact on them, but there is a third element that is particularly important in the context of Gibraltar, where land is limited, and of course, very often it does not matter where one builds, there is going to be an impact on the people around.

Does the hon. Gentleman accept, therefore, and is it part of Government policy that one needs to take into account the housing needs of this community and, in appropriate circumstances, the housing needs of the community will trump the views of people around? That is what I am asking.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in this particular case, I think the Government needs to listen to the arguments being put forward first, so the whole idea of going to planning is to start the public debate on the issue. That has now started. We are listening to the views of the DPC, to the views of residents, and then we take a decision. So the matter is open at this stage.

Clerk: Question 697 –

Mr Speaker: No, no, I think the hon. Gentleman has another question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and the other question, which I was going to ask the Chief Minister: did you consult the residents of the area around Grandy Close before you made your announcement as to eco-housing and, if not, are you effectively setting a precedent for the future, that the consultation exercise will take place as part of the planning process and there will not be any consultation beforehand with residents of the area?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government is that, in relation to these large projects – particularly housing ones – the act of going to planning is the start of the public consultation.

So what we have done with these cases is to announce them beforehand, they come out on the DPC website before the meeting takes place, and people are then free to come and express an opinion, either at the DPC itself or in writing, as many have done. Many people have written to the Government. We take all that on board in coming to a decision on whether the project then proceeds or not.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, so effectively, Government policy is there will be no consultation prior to the, prior to effectively, the planning process, because that is the formal consultation. That is the position, is it not?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: In relation to these housing projects, the formal consultation starts at the point of making the announcement and going to planning and then people are free to write in, express opinions, have meetings, and the Government then takes a position.

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Gibraltar Tourist Board Costs of new lifeboats and trailers

Clerk: Question 697, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House what the costs of the lifeboats and trailers, recently purchased, reportedly, by the Gibraltar Tourist Board was?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this information is already available to the hon. Gentleman on the Government's website.

Clerk: Question 698 –

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if I may, can the Minister... and I do appreciate what the rules say, so I will not pursue that line of enquiry. If the Minister is willing to indulge me as he did yesterday and provide me with information... but he may not have it with him, because he has a prepared answer with him, but I take the point, and I will look at the Government website.

The question I was going to ask is what, if any – I am not aware that there was any – tender process was undertaken in relation to the purchase of these items?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do understand that the gentleman was obviously too busy to look at the Government website, but I do have the figures for him and I shall give them to him.

The total cost of the new boats and trailers was £5,730. It does give me the opportunity to also tell him that, as a result of advice received, we approved the purchase of trailers and sand tyre kits to avoid the deterioration and the need for continuous repairs to the boats, as unfortunately happened with the last ones.

There were three quotes obtained. The successful company was a local company.

Hon. D J Bossino: But is it the case – by way of clarification, Mr Speaker – that, so that I understand the response that there was no...? I can understand the Tourist Board seeking and obtaining those quotes, but presumably there was no formal tender process.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, given the extremely low amount of £5,730, it was not deemed suitable, appropriate – indeed a waste of time – to go through a formal EU tender process, which would have taken months. Yes. It takes a very long time. We are talking about three lifeboats, a very low sum. I trust the members of the Gibraltar Tourist Board to be independent and fair when deciding which company to go for. They sought three quotes and they went for the best quote that, in their view, was available to them at the time.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister answer whether it is the Government's view that it will only go to tender when there is an EU requirement? As I understand it, it does not necessarily have to be the case, if it is just for local purposes. But I have to admit that I am ignorant of the law in this respect.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the policy of the Government. What I have said is that, as a 445 result of the very low amount of the cost, it was decided, on this occasion, not to go through the formal tender procedure and simply obtain three quotes.

450 Gibraltar Tourist Board Restructure

Clerk: Question 698, the Hon. D J Bossino.

455 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide full details of the restructure that the Government has carried out at the Gibraltar Tourist Board?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

460 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Gentleman the information requested on the Gibraltar Tourist Board as it stood prior to 9th December 2001. I also hand over an organisational structure of the GTB as it stood after 9th December 2001 and a diagram of the current state.

After 09 December 2011

Cont....

Hon. D J Bossino: Just by way of clarification, for the record, I think the Minister was intending to refer to 9th December 2011, rather than 2001.

Hon. N F Costa: And 11, yes... Not 2001.

Hon. D J Bossino: Just bear with me a moment.

Mr Speaker, there is a lot of information which the Minister has kindly provided to me, which I will study, I think, when I am back in the office, but I think – I am hopeful – that what I am seeing will be very useful indeed, just so that the public listening in or in the Public Gallery is aware, what I have been handed is an –

Hon. N F Costa: Organisational chart.

Hon. D J Bossino: – Organisational chart with nice colours and I am sure that will assist. I am all for that type of thing, and I am sure that will assist my understanding. In fact, one of my supplementaries was going to be the difference between one and the other, so I am very grateful to the Minister for anticipating my supplementary.

But can I just press him further, if I may? He did say in his Budget speech that the restructure of the Board had been undertaken in order – and I quote him – ‘to enhance the responsive approach of the Board in attracting visitors to Gibraltar.’ So therefore there was a very clear purpose behind the restructure of the Board, which I myself, as I have just said a few moments ago, have not had the opportunity to analyse, but I will.

485 Now, in relation to that, is he satisfied now whether that restructure is fit for purpose? (Interjection by Hon. N F Costa) Whether that restructure is fit for purpose, Mr Speaker, and whether he thinks that it has met his requirement?

490 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I think it is fair to answer this question by telling the hon. Gentleman that the restructure has only been in place for nine months. As a result, whereas it is my view that it is currently working well, I always have in mind different ideas formulating in my head as to perhaps how things may be further tweaked to better the response of the Gibraltar Tourist Board. On that I rely on the advice of my officials.

495 So the answer is yes, so far, so good. Could it be bettered? Perhaps, but at this moment, things are in my view working well.

500 Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, Mr Speaker, the Minister stands by his statement, that as far as he is aware – I appreciate that this could be work in progress – but the way that things currently stand, he still stands by his statement that the restructure has enhanced, from the position as it was prior to 9th December, the responsive approach that he was talking about in his Budget speech.

505 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, I very much think so, and given that we are led by results, the fact that we have been able to, as I said – I mentioned the Birmingham route, I have mentioned the Manchester route, I have mentioned the BA flight – I believe all of that has been... the speed at which we moved on those issues, I believe, is partly due to the restructure that was effected. There were other things, of course: the fact that we have been able to allocate what we think is a fair amount of capital expenditure, which is the £1 million, for this financial year, in terms of the existing tourist attractions on the Upper Rock. We intend to start the capital expenditure on that, which has been, as the hon. Gentleman knows, quite neglected for quite some time, and as I say, that is because it is my belief that my ministry, my office is obtaining the right advice from the Gibraltar Tourist Board.

Clerk: Question 699 –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

515

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I please ask for a little clarification?

The first page shows the organisational chart, headed 'Prior to December 2011'; the last page, that is the third one, says 'Current structure', so one can take it that the date is today's meeting; but the one in the middle says 'After 9th December'. I am a bit lost. From 9th December to today is a nine-month period, so can I hone the Hon. Minister a little bit more to more or less what date he is referring to?

525 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman has had the opportunity to consider the diagrams in time – I appreciate, of course, he has not; he has just received them – he will see that we took the view that Terminal Management should be part of the Tourist Board and not part of Transport, because we believe that Terminal Management would have, being on the ground, the sort of specialist knowledge that the ministry would require to be able to formulate marketing policies and tourist policies. So Terminal Management is brought back into the Tourist Board after 9th December.

530

Hotel development proposal NAAFI pool area

Clerk: Question 699, the Hon. D J Bossino.

535

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House what developments there have been, if any, in relation to the proposal to build a hotel by the NAAFI pool area?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

540 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I understand the position, the proposal made to the previous administration, according to the promoter of the project, was on the basis that he had been promised that the landlord would provide the land free of charge, as long as he paid for the re-provisioning of the NAAFI pool at the estimated cost of £1 million. The promoter was informed by this administration that the land would not be provided for free and he has not returned since.

545 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, that is, in fact, not the entirety of the information that I have been given. In fact, I think the view taken by the previous GSD administration was that this was, indeed, a very attractive proposal. As I understand it, there was going to be an investment of some £50 million in building the hotel, which would have had – we thought at the time – untold knock-on benefits, in terms of employment and the provision of other facilities and amenities in the area.

550 I also understand that it could have been a three- or four-star luxury hotel and, in this connection, can I ask the Minister, who in particular within the Government did the investor have contact with? ... Was it with the Minister with responsibility for tourism?

555 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker, it was with me.

Hon. D J Bossino: Right.

560 Can I ask why it is that that was the case, instead of the Minister for Tourism? Is it because the Minister for Employment is also responsible, I think, for inward investment? Was that the view taken by the Government?

565 Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct. The person wanted to bring in money to invest in Gibraltar and asked for an appointment to see me, and I saw him.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can I ask the Minister for Employment etc – I do not know what the full responsibility is – 570 Hon. J J Bossano: Inward investments.

Hon. D J Bossino: – inward investments, thank you – where he met the potential investor?

575 Hon. J J Bossano: Certainly. (Laughter) I do not think it makes any difference to the decision but I met him in the Employment Department. He was in London, he contacted me through the London Office, he said that he had been given the run-around by the GSD administration for years without being given any straightforward answers, and since I am notorious for giving straightforward answers I asked him to come down to see me, to the ETB – and I gave him a straightforward answer.

580 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the straightforward answer given by the Hon. the Minister was... Can he confirm, or can he clarify, for my purposes, whether it was in response to the proposal which I briefly outlined as a preamble to one of my previous supplementaries? In other words, the £50 million investment and all the other things that I mentioned earlier, and was that his flippant response?

585 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether the response is flippant or not, and I do not think the hon. Member is entitled to pass judgement on the nature of my responses. That is not what he is here for. He is here to obtain information. I can think his questions are flippant, but I do not tell him that.

590 Let me say that, in fact, Mr Speaker, the gentleman in question produced some artist's impressions of these things. If he has had any previous knowledge of the way these things work, he will know that the fact that somebody brings a pretty picture of a hotel and says it is going to cost £55 million is not, of itself, an indication that there is anything solid, because there was nothing produced in terms of where the tourists were going to come from, what would be the costs of operating, where he was going to get the labour from, or anything else. The essence of the thing was that the clinching factor was whether he had to pay for the land or not, and the gentleman told me that he had been promised by Mr Holliday – he might have been making it up, for all I know – that he could get the land free, provided he spent £1 million on reproviding the NAAFI pool because one of the conditions was that the land would transfer to the Government but a NAAFI pool had to be reprovided, and that he had been told that if he took on the cash responsibility for reproviding the pool at his own expense, then the land would be given to him on a long lease without any further payment. I said, ‘Well, look, unless you can produce something in writing which is a binding commitment which we have to honour, the answer is we do not agree with that.’ He then told me that unless the land was provided free, the investment would not work. So, that if he had to pay the market value for the land, then it was a no-go. He has not come back with any alternatives, but if he came back willing to pay for the land, or if he came back willing to pay for some other land, then we would reconsider the proposals.

He is an important customer of Gibraltar because he actually brings quite a lot of people and his main argument for the hotel, as he explained it to me, was that the other hotels in Gibraltar are charging him too much for his package tours and that he wanted to have his own hotel in order to put in his own customers. We are interested in having the hotel, we are interested in him investing the money, but of course if we are offering people land for nothing in Gibraltar we will have a long, long queue of investors.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if the reason for pouring cold water over this particular potential investment, which I think, I am given to understand, reached quite an advanced stage when we were in Government, to the extent that there were formal plans which had been reviewed by the Town Planner and there had been a series of negotiations with senior people – and it may have been also the Minister, I am not too sure, but certainly senior civil servants within the Department of Trade and Industry... So there had been quite a lot of work and I think the view taken by the Government was that this was a serious investment [Interruption by mobile phone] ...a sort of fly-by-night matter and, in fact, there had also been negotiations with the Ministry of Defence in relation to the land where the hotel was going to be located.

I am not too sure, Mr Speaker, that, if I have understood the Minister correctly – and no doubt he will correct me if I have not – what he has said is entirely true, in the sense that there was an understanding on behalf of the investor that the investment in Gibraltar would require a payment of a £1 million outlay in relation to the premium over the land. So that was understood and the land was not going to go for free to the investor, but I am sure the Minister will clarify the position to this House.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know the source of the information of the hon. Member opposite. I do not know whether it is that the investor has been in touch with him and told him these things, or that somebody in the Government has been in touch with him and told him these things, because he was not in Government before so he cannot possibly know what was happening before any more than I do.

I know nothing of any of the things that he is telling me, and I can tell him that the investor that came to see me did not appear to know anything about those things either, because if he did he chose not to tell me. He did not use any of the arguments that the hon. Member has used in support of the investment... was used by the investor.

The investor used three arguments. One was that the shortage of hotel beds meant that he could not bring more people and that, anyway, the shortage of hotel beds was having an effect on the price of the beds and that meant that he was having a problem in the charges that he had to put on the package holidays and that he could bring more people and bring them at a bigger profit if he could have his own hotel – which is fine. But it does not mean necessarily, when you look at that, that that is going to be, whatever the investment is, is not going to be in that scenario, a net gain. It may be a gross gain, that you gain x number of hotel beds but, of course, if some of those... If there are 23,000 people that he brings – so he told me – and those 23,000 people are a big chunk of the hotel beds we are now selling, if they are just shifted to a new hotel, then I am sure he can see that that is not necessarily a scenario in which we gain 23,000 extra sales, because it will be at the expense of what is being sold already. I am giving the hon. Member the information that I was given by the investor. I have no other source.

He then said that the viability of the hotel – which is odd for a hotel which is £55 million – was not on once I told him he had to pay whatever the LPS, or whoever, decides the land is worth, that reprovioning the swimming pool, which was estimated to cost £1 million, would not be sufficient.

So the answer is that he told me that he had been given the run-around by the previous administration. He had been made a lot of promises that had not been delivered, from meetings that had never materialised... and that he was on the point of giving up, and that because there had been a change of Government he had contacted the London Office and said, 'Well, look, is it worth me trying again?' because he has got a commitment to Gibraltar.

Certainly we want to encourage him to keep on using Gibraltar and keep on bringing people here but, at the end of the day, there was nothing of the nature of a detailed business proposal put before me and the impression I got from him was that he had talked to the MOD, that he thought the understanding was that the MOD would pass the land to him, which I told him would be, in fact, in conflict with the long-established principles under the Lands Memorandum – that land is given to the Government of Gibraltar and the Government of Gibraltar gives it to whoever it has to go to, that there is not a direct movement from the MOD to the developer, and I am not aware whether that has happened on any occasion, but it certainly did not happen in the past – and that therefore it was quite simple: if he could come up with a proposal which included a price, meeting whatever the price for the land was, either there or somewhere else, we will consider it.

We have not told him we do not want him here. We have told him we are not... If the condition for you proceeding with this thing in Rosia Bay is that the net payment that you make is whatever it costs you to put the swimming pool somewhere else, then that land is not available on that basis. If the land was available on that basis, I think we would have to then announce that there is land available and open it to others, but if the man comes along with a specific proposal that is for a hotel to expand the traffic he is bringing to us, which is interesting and good but it is not enough to say, 'Okay, we will make a direct allocation without giving any other party the opportunity of using that area and on the basis that we are not charging for the land.'

He claims that that is what was on offer before. I told him that if he could produce written evidence of that, then we would have to see whether there was a commitment. If there is any evidence that the matter had proceeded along the road, as the hon. Member claims – and he knows how I can establish that – and he passes me the information, fine, I will look at it again. But my source of information is the client and the client did not claim what he claims, but if there is evidence that there was a commitment and that we should be honouring it, we will look at it again because we believe that the commitments that are given by one Government have got to be considered by the succeeding Government.

Lester Hotel, Devil's Tower Road Progress of development

Clerk: Question 700, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise what progress has been made, if any, in connection with the development of Lester Hotel at Devil's Tower Road?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the absence of payment of the application fee, the planning permit drafted on 28th June of last year has not been issued.

Hon. D J Bossino: So do we take it from that, that the investor is the Lester Hotel Group that was going to build this hotel. Presumably they have no interest in the matter now?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I say, on this question I spoke with the Town Planner, who explained to me that the planning application had been approved by the Development and Planning Commission, but that the planning permit has not been issued given that he has not paid the planning fee or the premium for the site. He has not come back, essentially.

Hon. D J Bossino: Has the Minister with responsibility for tourism had any contact with this investor, trying to find out why it is that the matter has not progressed?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, since the Election there has been no contact by the applicant's agents with the Town Planning Office. Remember, that this was already before the DPC and approved, so any progress would have had to have been from them by paying the fee and getting on with the works. There was nothing else to discuss.

Clerk: Question seven hundred and –

Hon. D A Feetham: May I, please?

Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. the Minister, doesn't he accept that, as I understood the answer, there are two separate aspects to this? Or perhaps I am wrong. One is the planning fee; the other one is the premium. The planning fee goes to the Planning Department; the premium goes to the Government's agents, LPS, so it is a matter for the Government. Is the position that both are outstanding?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: And no-one on behalf of the Government – their agents or otherwise – has actually been in contact at all with these investors and said, 'Well, hang on a minute, why haven't you paid this particular premium?' Nothing at all? No contact?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, once again, the application has already been approved by the Development and Planning Commission and there is a permit laying in wait, drafted on 28th June, and all that the developer has to do is go in, pay the fee and pay the premium for the land. If they were to do that, they can forge ahead.

The fact that they have gone through the planning process and have not paid the fee nor the premium for the land would seem, to me at least, to indicate a loss of interest, because they know that they have got the approval, they know that they can start, and they have not done anything about it.

Hon. D J Bossino: A loss of interest, Mr Speaker, he says, which is rather odd in this context. If he is able to confirm, if he knows, if he has enquired about it, is he aware that this developer actually purchased the land on which the hotel was proposed to be built? So, basically, as far as that side of matters is concerned, there was certainly a rather key level of commitment to proceed with this project.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I said, this was an ongoing project of the previous administration, so I obviously had to contact officials for them to provide me with the advice. The advice that I have been given is that the planning permit was not issued because neither the planning fees nor premium for the site have been paid. That is the information that I have.

I remind the hon. Gentleman too that the planning permit was drafted on 28th June 2011. I imagine, given that he is pressing me about not contacting them, given that it was so important and it was drafted in 2011, Mr Holliday would have had to have contacted them in July, August, September, October, November and December to ask, 'Why haven't you paid the fee?' They did not. It has not happened. He can ask him.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am afraid that you are in Government; therefore you have to take responsibility for Government affairs. (Interjection by Hon. N F Costa) No, hang on a minute, no.

Does the Hon. the Minister know by when, under this particular contract, that premium was payable?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: If he does not know under the contract and he has not bothered checking when that...

Hon. N F Costa: Perhaps you should have given me written notice of the question.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: Please may I –

Mr Speaker: Of course.

760 Hon. D A Feetham: This was not supposed to be contentious. We are trying to just elicit information here.

If he has not bothered checking the contract as to when the premium is payable under the contract – because premiums and fees for planning are quite separate issues altogether – how can he sit there and then turn round and say that we ought to have spoken to the Minister for –

765

Hon. N F Costa: The former Minister.

Hon. D A Feetham: The previous Minister, when the reality is that perhaps the premium had not actually been payable prior to December. I do not know. Does he know?

770

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, with respect, this is a preposterous question.

The progress of this particular project lay on the table of the former Minister for Tourism and Transport, Mr Holliday. No fees have been paid. Whether or not they are payable, no fees have been paid. The premium for the land has not been paid, whether or not it has been payable under the contract, but particularly importantly I would have thought, given the importance the hon. Members opposite now appear to have for this particular project... If it is so important for them now, surely they would have been urging Mr Holliday to have got on the phone to the developers at the time in July and in August and in September and in October and in November and in December of their administration, but they clearly did nothing because the fee has not been paid!

775

We have been in Government since December. No fee has been paid, no premium has been paid. They were in Government when they were seeing the project through. The last stumbling block, it would appear, would be the payment of the fee. I do not know whether Mr Holliday called or did not call, brought them for coffee or for lunch or whether he cycled to work or he didn't, but what I can tell him for sure is that it was not progressed to the point that there has been any progression of the works. (Interjection)

780

Which is, by the way, Mr Speaker, the question. The question is whether there was any progress in connection with the development, and the question falls at the first hurdle, which is no fee has been paid for the planning permit, so there cannot be any progress. (Interjection) The question has certainly been answered.

785

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the position of the Government in relation to this that because the premium has not been paid, the investor is in breach of its obligations and therefore the Government has decided not to honour whatever commitment there may have been by the previous Government in relation to this particular project?

790

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, that is not what I have said. I have already told him.

795 Hon. D A Feetham: We are all at sea.

Hon. N F Costa: No, we are not all at sea.

That is not at all what I have said, so he cannot extrapolate from my answers or interpret them in the way that he suggests, because I have not said that.

800

Hon. D A Feetham: So is the position, then, that if the premium is paid – and the fee is payable to the Department – these individuals will be allowed to continue with the development?

805 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I can answer that very simply by saying that this Government will honour whatever contractual obligations arose from the previous administration.

Hon. D A Feetham: We do not know what the contractual obligations are.

810 Hon. N F Costa: Well, absolutely, which is why if he does not know and I do not know about them, instead of asking questions about an invisible piece of paper that neither of us have read!

Clerk: Question –

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker –

815 Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

820 The Minister makes reference to Mr Holliday. I am not in a position now to get that information for him, although I do understand that contact was made and he talks about telephone calls and all the rest of it. Given that he has implied, by admonishing the previous Minister in post for not having done those things, I think what my hon. and learned Friend Mr Feetham is seeking to elicit from the Minister is whether he himself has taken an interest, given his responsibilities, to establish what the reason has been for the matter going cold.

825 We are now facing, as a result of these two questions which I have posed, a situation where there have been two potential investors – two potential investors who were each going to build a hotel which, for one reason or another, has not happened since 9th December. So that is why I am now slightly concerned that the Minister responsible for this area of Government policy appears not, Mr Speaker, to have taken it upon himself to make what I think... what he himself considers to be the relevant and pertinent enquiries if he has been put on notice of the fact that there could be a loss of interest on the part of this investor.

830 At the end of the day, they are building a hotel in Gibraltar. Let's not forget that. They are making an investment in Gibraltar.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if he has a question I can answer it, but – 835 Hon. D J Bossino: They are making an investment in Gibraltar.

Hon. N F Costa: – the preamble is so long I will no doubt forget.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I do acknowledge that my preamble –

840 Mr Speaker: I must ask you to ask the question.

845 Hon. D J Bossino: And I am couching this question in a rather lengthy way, but I would seek your indulgence, because I do not normally do that, Mr Speaker. (Laughter and interjection) The record is there, in relative terms! (Laughter) But, given that, is the Minister... I am just concerned whether he does not think that, given that he was put on inquiry that there may have been loss of interest by the fact that there has not been a payment of this planning fee, why it is that he has not made those inquiries himself?

850 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the rather lengthy supplementary presumes too many things that I really do not care to answer, but even his question presumes something which is not true.

855 On receiving notice of this Question, the first thing I did was to call in the Town Planner and the officials who are relevant to the planning application etc and ask them what the state of play was. Given that I found out that there was this interest in building a hotel on that site, I went to the website and obtained the press release and that press release from the Lester Group said every effort would be made to minimise the carbon footprint of the new building – very exciting for us already; the Minister for the Environment certainly was leaping for joy there – and work is expected to commence in early summer 2011.

860 At the time that I received notice of the Question, as I said, I looked at this press release, I brought in the Town Planner and I have given instructions to my officials to find out whether there is still an interest on this or not.

Cruise liner terminal
Construction of new terminal

865 Clerk: Question 702, the Hon. D J Bossino. (Interjection) It is 702. (Interjection) It is 702 because 701 is to be answered by the Chief Minister.

870 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise what the Government's plans are in relation to the cruise liner terminal and, in particular, whether it has the intention of proceeding with the construction of a larger and better-resourced terminal?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

875 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government is considering a number of options in respect of its cruise facilities. These include determining whether a new cruise terminal structure is actually required and, if so, the size and the facilities it should have. All the cruise lines are being consulted on what they expect of a modern cruise port and the Government is taking due note of the feedback received. Once all of this data is collated, the Government will make a decision on the best way forward to ensure the needs of Gibraltar's cruise industry are met for many years to come.

880 Consultation with local operators, however, has already revealed that in their professional view a new cruise liner terminal at the North Mole is entirely irrelevant to attracting additional calls or to attracting new companies. Further, a discussion I personally had with one top executive, of what everyone would agree is probably one of the most important cruise companies said to me, over dinner, in no uncertain terms, that the existing terminal was perfectly adequate and that funds were better spent elsewhere – a sentiment with which I, in fact, do fully agree, subject to finalising the above consultation process.

885 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am very quickly coming to the view that, unfortunately, the new Government is labouring under the same difficulty that they say that we were labouring under, which is that life started on 9th December 2011.

890 Is he aware and has he made the relevant enquiries in this respect, Mr Speaker, that in fact there had already been undertaken a rather lengthy process of consultation in relation to the cruise liner terminal, and is he aware that, in fact, there were already advanced plans when we were in Government to proceed with the building of a new terminal, in fact that it was poised and ready to go out to tender? Is he aware of that?

895 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am aware of many things, some of which are as follows.

The first is that I do not think that life began on 9th December, for the following reasons. I do know that there were plans quite developed, because I remember the former Minister for Transport, Mr Holliday, giving a press conference about this – I do watch the news – amongst my personal contacts with tourist companies. The overall budget for that construction of the new building was around £3.8 million, just at the threshold so that they did not have to go to EU tender. Interesting point, that.

900 The design costs were £160,000. The design costs were £160,000 for a design which all local operators in Gibraltar tell me is entirely irrelevant to bringing new calls and new companies to Gibraltar: £160,000 thrown down the drain without consulting the experts in the industry. As I have already told him, one particularly renowned executive of the cruising world has told me, 'Don't waste a penny on a terminal because the one that you have is perfectly wonderful and it does the job' – envisaged by the old GSLP and brought to fruition by the GSD in 1997.' (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham: Old GSLP... laughter)

905 So if we are going to take leave from someone, Mr Speaker, we shall take our cues from the people on the ground – or at sea, in this particular case. They know what they are doing and if all local operators are telling me, 'Don't spend a dime or a penny on something which is not needed,' we certainly will not do so.

910 Hon. D J Bossino: We seem to be living in parallel realities.

Hon. N F Costa: Thank God, Mr Speaker!

915 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, we will be the judge of that after the three years which are now left. (Interjection) Yes. Thank you for that contribution!

920 Is he aware... and I understand that this is what informed the Government's decision to proceed with the construction of a new terminal and it concerns me that it has not formed part of the response that he has given to me in this House, and that is: is he aware that, in fact, one of the main driving forces behind the idea to build a new cruise terminal was in order to provide adequate facilities for the what I understand will be the new thing coming into the industry, which is the hop-on hop-off... (Interjection) Yes, basically where you can embark or disembark at any point in any given route. At the moment, what happens is that you embark at a particular point and then you do the tour and then you normally return to that point or to another, but you cannot get off the cruise in the ports in the interim in that particular tour.

So what the Government wanted to do is to ensure that the Gibraltar port was able to provide the facilities for this service. In other words, that passengers could disembark or embark in Gibraltar port. Is he aware and has that formed part of the decision-making process?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, my advice from those who were involved at the design stage and in looking at the possibility of a new cruise liner terminal advise me that that was not the reason at all. Apparently, the reason for having a redesign in any event was for security aspects and to better that, and there is nothing stopping people from disembarking in Gibraltar getting on a plane and going anywhere, and vice versa, right now, as the current set-up is.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether perhaps the Minister is just missing the point, for no other reason other than he has not been made aware of the developing trend in the cruise industry in that direction. It may well be that the Minister has not been made aware, and if he hasn't, well, then he certainly cannot answer in that regard.

Could the Minister clarify whether the advice he received was based on anything other than enhancement of the facilities in the regards that he has mentioned?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of his preface of the supplementary, as he knows... he must know. The hon. Gentleman must know that I have met with 14 cruise companies over the last nine months. They certainly know what they are talking about, I would have thought, given that they are in the business and not one of them has mentioned this idea to me as being necessary for a new cruise liner terminal building.

As I say, my advice is that of those people who were involved in the design of the new, possible new, cruise liner terminal building and the reason, the principal focus for that was to enhance passenger and security control, and that therefore, I think, importantly for the Hon. Mr Bossino, the consultation was with Gibraltar Port Authority staff, terminal management, security and immigration, which confirms that the design was principally for, as I say, passenger control and security aspects – nothing to do with the hop-on, hop-off ideas that they are extolling to me now.

Miami cruise convention Value for money

Clerk: Question 703, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise whether he has come to a conclusion as to whether the Miami cruise convention provides value for money?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government believes that attendance at this specific event does provide value for money, but not at the level of expense incurred over the last several years.

As the hon. Gentleman knows, the Cruise Shipping Miami Convention, which was known as Seatrade Miami, is the major annual showcase for cruise ports and destinations which is held in the cruise capital of the world and draws tens of thousands of delegates, exhibitors and visitors.

The Government, however, believes, as the hon. Gentleman knows, that its most powerful marketing tool is the personal contact with decision makers, and we say, Mr Speaker, that this is a marked difference between this administration and the previous.

In March, only three months after the General Election, I visited all the major cruise lines in the week prior to the Convention in order to start the process of establishing personal contacts with itinerary planners. The process is ongoing, Mr Speaker, and both my officials and I are in continuous contact with operators to keep them briefed and up to date on all cruise-related developments in Gibraltar. A stand at the Convention consolidates our position in the public eye, reinforcing the Rock's status as a major cruise port in the Mediterranean. However, the Government is of the view that because the major players now know us personally, there is no need to spend so many tens of thousands of pounds on a huge stand which is better served in providing the sort of hospitality to the decision makers that will make the executives remember Gibraltar and consider us not just business partners but friends they want to do business with.

As a result of my personal meetings, Mr Speaker – as the hon. Gentleman knows, because he does give me plenty of opportunities to remind him – I met with the top executives of cruise companies in Miami, followed by my visit of nine cruise companies in the UK. We achieved, Mr Speaker, an increase of nine calls this year, bringing the expected number of calls for 2012 to 180 from the inherited 171 when we came into office. In addition, as the hon. Gentleman knows, we are currently in discussions with such companies to explore tailor-made shore excursions and initial calls.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, he keeps on reminding me about the wonderful things that will come and are coming, apparently, as a result of his policy of personal contact. Of course, I need to remind him also, and he gives me plenty of opportunity to do so, that he is building – and I have used this word before – on a bonanza which was there on 9th December 2011. I can only hope for Gibraltar plc's sake that we continue to succeed in this industry.

Simply to add, Mr Speaker – and I will be posing a question – that, of course, to suggest that there was not personal contact when we were in Government is simply not acceptable and we refute that. (Interjection). Well, we have a different... Again, parallel realities, Mr Speaker. The question – (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. D J Bossino: The question is what form will attendance at the Miami Seatrade Fair take?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of his first point in the preface to his supplementary, talking of a bonanza, I think it was particularly clear and stark in my analysis during the course of my Budget speech that, in fact, cruise calls were in decline. If he wants to reiterate that we inherited a bonanza, he can carry on saying it, despite the statistics. Having said that, I do accept from the hon. Gentleman that cruise calls during the time of the GSD did enjoy a surge for a particular amount of time and we can, of course, continue that, and for the sake of Gibraltar we all obviously hope that there will be an increase in cruise calls and an increase in passenger numbers – I do not think there is any disagreement on that across the floor of the House – but I do not think, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman really wants to challenge me as to personal contacts and to what I now know happened in respect of the absence of personal contacts with cruise companies. Perhaps the hon. Gentleman, instead of challenging me about it, should speak to, no doubt, his colleague, Mr Holliday, as to what were his personal contacts and maybe he can provide him with a list of the number of times he had dinner or lunch or coffee or walked or cycled to work with any of these people and spoke about what was important for the cruise industry.

The way we shall take part in what is now called the Cruise Shipping Miami Convention is simple and it is implicit in my answer. We will attend – the Minister will attend – a few days before the Convention to make sure that he continues the personal contacts with itinerary planners and the top executives, and the reason is very simple, because obviously the hon. Gentleman knows that during the course of the Convention it is absolute mayhem when you have tens of thousands... Perhaps what it is, actually, Mr Speaker – I have just realised – is that he is angling for a trip with me to Miami, which, if that is what he wants, he should just ask me and come out and I will consider it. During the course of the Convention it is absolute mayhem. You have tens of thousands – (Interjection) There are tens of thousands of delegates who go and put up the stalls; these are people at a medium-tier level of their respective companies showing the wares to each other. There is only perhaps half a day or one day we actually have people from the public coming in. So these are medium-tier employees talking to each other about Gibraltar and all different port calls.

The real business of the world, to call it that, is never done at the Convention. It is done either before or after, so it makes perfect sense to us that we should go, meet the top guys and discuss itinerary planning, tailor-made shore excursions for them, trying to ask them to come to Gibraltar more often, asking them to come and stay overnight, which is part of the legislation that they passed when they were in Government and we supported in Parliament, and it is therefore fair enough to have officials staffing the stand at the Convention because, as I say, the top executives hardly attend, and if they do it is already for pre-planned meetings, so you do not get to talk to, for example, Giora Israel or other top people in the cruising industry because you will not catch them walking down the corridors of the Convention.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Minister really ought to realise... I know he is new to the post and he is young, but the fact is... and maybe he ought to make enquiries about what used to happen before, but the fact is that Mr Holliday would also attend the Convention before it actually started, as he has just mentioned. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, I do not think I have had a full answer to my question. As I understand it, there are three manners in which participants can participate at the Convention. One is to have one's own stand, which is what we used to do when in Government, and we did that because we thought that that was the best way that we could advertise and market and sell our wares. It is still work in progress: let's see what happens, but I do not have much hope in what the Minister is telling me as to whether it will be successful or not.

The second way is to have a stand as part of the Medcruise stand, and the third way to participate, as I understand it, is to simply send delegates.

Can he clarify to me – and I think I can justifiably use the word 'confirm' to me – whether the form that participation will be taking in the future is by way of presence of a delegation, as opposed to the other two forms?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, certainly I am young, but I certainly have the wealth of knowledge and experience of the Minister for Employment, who has taught me many things, and I think quite effectively, very soon.

In order for us to determine whether or not we spend a penny of taxpayers' money on anything has to be subject to stringent criteria and it has to be results-driven and mathematical. If no-one from the Tourist Board or from my ministry can tell me that, as a result of attendance at a convention, there have been any additional calls, then why attend the convention? I am sure that the hon. Gentleman would agree.

However, I can tell him with mathematical precision, which is demanded rightly by the Minister for Employment, (Laughter and interjection) that, as a result of meetings with top cruise executives, following those meetings we have had an increase of nine calls during this year. So, meetings with top cruise executives results: nine additional calls. That is what I would think the taxpayers would demand: that when we spend money – especially where we are shuttling officials and Ministers off to expensive conventions – that they expect a return for their money, and I certainly adhere to that philosophy.

As I have said in my answer, it is very simple: we will have a delegation – which will basically be me and the chief executive – that will go to Miami to meet the top executives. (Interjection) Yes, and then, secondly, for this particular fair, we will have a smaller stand at the Convention, manned by officials – staffed, I should say, because there are also women... staffed by officials, to exchange information at the Convention. So it is two-pronged.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Heritage Department training Budget

Clerk: Question 704, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Heritage state what type of training has been/will be undertaken, the cost of which has been/will be debited to the financial provision made in the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure 2012/2013, as at Appendix K – sub section (45)?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the time to raise issues such as this, of course, is the time of the committee stage of the Appropriation Bill. Nonetheless, I will give him the information now.

1090 The Heritage Agency is exploring two ways of providing training from this budget: (1) provision of staff training through work-based higher degrees education in the field of archaeology, heritage and museums management via accredited United Kingdom universities; and (2) short courses in Gibraltar on specific areas of heritage and heritage management by external specialists for Heritage Department staff.

1095 In the latter case, and depending on the subject, there may be room to expand the scope of such courses to include persons outside the Department, such as volunteers and helpers. Over and above this, the Department will continue with its in-house on-the-job training programmes, which are not expected to have budgetary impact.

1100 Gibraltar Museum
Waiving entrance fees

Clerk: Question 705, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1105 Hon. E J Reyes: Has the Minister for Culture and Heritage considered waiving entrance fees for all visitors to Gibraltar Museum, save for opening during non-standard opening hours so as to bring Gibraltar closer to ever increasing international trends which seek to promote heritage and historical matters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1110 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the waiving of entrance fees for all visitors to the Gibraltar Museum is something that at present is not being considered. As far as the Cultural and Heritage Agency is aware, it is not an international trend.

1115 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker may I ask the Hon. Minister to please put down on the agenda and consider the waiving of fees. If we look at the statistics available on the Government's website in the first six months of 2012 the income derived from admission fees was just over the £7,000 mark and I do for the record say, that I disagree with the Minister, it is an ever increasing trend to have free entrances into museums and the United Kingdom itself and the Natural History Museum is but one example.

1120 Hon. S E Linares: The question, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: Please consider.

1125 International Folklore Festival Prague Fair
Details of delegation and costs

1130 Clerk: Question 706, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture and Heritage provide details of the composition of the delegation, as well as all costs incurred, which attended the International Folklore Festival Prague Fair, held in late August this year?

1135 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth

1140 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the delegation consisted of (1) Myself, Minister for Sport, Culture, Heritage and Youth; (2) Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency, Mr Carl Viagas; (3) The Gibraltar Culture Officer of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency Mrs Yvette Zarb; (4) The Director of the Garrison Library, Mrs Jennifer Ballantine.

The total airline costs, including the four of us, were £1,258.00. Accommodation and travel costs during the festival were kindly covered by the Folklore Association of the Czech Republic.

1145 Hon. E J Reyes: I take it, then, Mr Speaker there were no subsistence costs or anything like that also incurred.

Hon. S E Linares: None at all.

1150

Gibraltar International Jazz Festival
Breakdown of expenditure

1155 Clerk: Question 707, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1160 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture provide further detailed breakdown in respect of the £19,875 expenditure incurred, as stated in his answer to Question No. 602/2012, thereby clarifying exactly how much and to whom payments were made in respect of (a) the stage (b) management fees and (c) presenters' fees, all of which pertain to the first Gibraltar International Jazz Festival?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1165 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, details in respect of the £19,875 expenditure appertaining to the first Gibraltar International Jazz Festival are as follows: (a) the stage – £8,600, Planet Projects Limited; (b) Management fees – £10,000 George Posse, Gibraltar Jazz Society and (c) Presenter's Fee £1,275, James Neish.

1170

Gibraltar Music Festival
Breakdown of expenditure

Clerk: Question 708, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1175 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture state who are the members of the Gibraltar Music Festival management board or committee and provide full details of any payments or allowances made to any of its members, stating how much was paid, to whom and in respect of what services?

1180 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1185 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the members of the organising board or committee are (1) Dylan Ferro, representing Axel Media; (2) Les Roberts representing Axel Media; (3) Owen Smith representing Word of Mouth; (4) Jonathan Scott representing Word of Mouth; (5) Steven Linares – myself – as Minister for Culture; (6) Dennis Cardona appointed by the Minister for Culture; (7) Peter Cabezzuto appointed by the Minister for Culture; (8) Daniel Guerrero appointed by the Minister for Culture. Those appointed by me did not charge any monies for the services they provided.

1190 As for Axel Media and Word of Mouth, the Government is not in a position at this stage to provide any details of payments in respect of the production and organisation of the Gibraltar Music Festival until final receipts are collated. It should be possible to provide this information by the next meeting of Parliament for Questions or earlier.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those who took part in any way for having helped the Government stage what has been labelled as the best ever concert in Gibraltar's history.

1195

Cultural Grants Commitments given

1200 Clerk: Question 709, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Culture state what expenditure it has already made, or is firmly committed to make, in respect of cultural grants for which financial provision is made in the estimate of revenue and expenditure 2012/13 as at Appendix K, sub section 13?

1205 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, £93,929 has already been firmly committed to date in respect of cultural grants for which financial provisions have been made in the estimates of revenue and expenditure 2012/13 Appendix K, sub section 13.

1210 Clerk: Question 710.

1215 Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, Mr Speaker, does the Hon. Minister have any breakdown of that £93,929 available?

1220 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the associations and the groups that have applied have not yet been informed of it, but as soon as they are informed I will give him the whole list of how much each association has been given.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker.
Yes, there is no great urgency as long as we get the information during the course of the year.

1225 Can I clarify, then, Mr Speaker would the Hon. Minister wish me to raise it at as a Question at a future meeting or will he, as and when the payments are made, provide information. I ask this, Mr Speaker, because it could become repetitive every month saying, you know, have you now made any payment or whatever. So I do not know which of the two options the Hon. Minister would prefer we took.

1230 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I could give it to him on a confidential basis, because I have got it with me and I can give it to him in the ante room on a confidential basis until I actually tell him that he can use it because it is not, I don't think it is fair...

1235 Hon. E J Reyes: That is perfectly acceptable to me, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he just finish what he was saying: you don't think it is fair 1240 Hon. S E Linares: It is not fair for me to give, publicly, for the hon. Member on the other side to publicly announce what are Government funds. It is the Government and the actual Cultural Grant Committee, because there is a committee that actually decides on how much money is given to each group and it is not fair, for example, if I give the hon. Member the list that he can then go publishing it if he wishes before the actual people who get the monies are informed. I think it is only fair.

1245 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes I quite understand. So the information is going to be provided on the basis that once, of course, the Government then, the Hon. the Shadow Minister can make use of it for, obviously his own [inaudible].

Hon. S E Linares: Absolutely.

Gibraltar Fair Week
Reason for change of date

1255 Clerk: Question 710, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Culture state why the 2012 Gibraltar Fair Week was held approximately a week later than all previous years' established dates, thereby creating a clash with the start of the Government schools' new academic year?

1260 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Fair was organised by the Self Determination Gibraltar Group with the assistance of the Ministry for Culture. The SDGG decided on those dates similar to those when the Fair was held back in the 90's, when the event was organised by their volunteers.

1270 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Hon. Minister aware that although it may have been at that date at its very origins it was later changed because representations had been made by professional bodies such as the Gibraltar Teacher's Association who requested that the Fair dates did not clash with the start of the academic year?

1275 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, even consultation was made this year because of the change and the Government side actually consulted the professionals and the professionals did not see or actually voice a strong objection to the fact that the Fair was changed, but I can tell him that we will be looking at the whole aspect of when the Fair is done.

It was the decision of the SDGG this year and we will again consult the SDGG and the professionals again to see if we need to readjust and move this at any stage.

1280 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, can I just supplement what the hon. Member has just said in relation to consulting the professionals. This is a matter that was referred to me as Minister for Education as to the possible educational impact and I did discuss this matter with professionals at the Department of Education.

1285 It was felt, with the representations that were made, that it would not impact on the attendance at school, particularly because it was the first week of school, it was half days and it was a short week in any event. As I understand it, the issues that were raised subsequently have nothing to do with attendance at school but attendance at the Fair as a result of school.

1290 So it did not have any educational impact and what is being considered is that it appears to have had an impact on the attendance at the Fair and not attendance at school. So the educational side was taken care of but the issue is the practical attendance at the Fair and that is what is being considered for next year's purposes.

1295 Hon. E J Reyes: So, then, Mr Speaker I think the Hon. Minister for Education, like me, should rejoice that parents chose to give priority to attendance at schools rather than to attendance at the Fair. (Laughter)

Hon G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it would be nice for everybody to be able to enjoy absolutely everything but it is not a question of rejoicing or not rejoicing, there is an issue that has been raised as to the effect on the Fair itself and that is an issue that my hon. Friend has taken on board and is considering for next year.

1300 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful to the Minister for Education who told me about the consultation with his Ministry and, obviously, in turn, he did it with his senior officials. Can one or the other of the Ministers confirm that there was some consultation at least with the Gibraltar Teachers Association?

1305 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I certainly did not speak directly to the Teacher's Association on this particular issue. I consulted officials and got some feedback from them.

1310 Hon. D A Feetham: Did the Minister consider also the implications on parking before agreeing to the shift of the timetable for the Fair from August to September, bearing in mind that that was the week where children were back at school and therefore parents on school runs and also people coming back from holidays and that, therefore, inevitably there would be more people at that time looking for parking rather than at the end of August when usually people are on holiday?

1315 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, parking was provided opposite straightaway. I mean that was part and parcel of the idea of doing the parking so quickly, because of the fact that Commonwealth Parade was going to be used but, yes, I take the point that we have to look at parking with the finite land that we have got and parking is an issue all the time, not only in the Fair.

1320 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, for example, does he know how many parking spaces there are in Commonwealth Parade and also the car park next door that was used for the Fair and how many parking spaces there were provided opposite Commonwealth Parade? Did he make that analysis?

Hon. S E Linares: No, I did not, I do not think it was that important.

1325 Hon. D A Feetham: So the Hon. Minister does not think (Laughter) that it is actually important to plan ahead and consider the implications on parking for people before making a decision of this nature. Is that the answer he is giving? I am giving him another opportunity. (Interjections)

1330 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, we have had Fairs since, I think, the 1990s, and during the time that the hon. Member was on this side of the House, I cannot remember them even thinking about the parking implications. The fact that Commonwealth Parade was emptied of cars and no other provision was made at all just goes to show that the hon. Member is just trying to make cheap political points at the fact that we actually provided parking and that I do not know how many, and I do not think that it is important, because at least we provided... Even if we provided even one parking extra than what the hon. Member used to is better.

1335 So the fact that I do not know whether there was 500 parkings and that I only provided 300 parkings is irrelevant. That is why I think it is not important – because, quite frankly, it was not even in their minds about the parking. The fact that we did it, we did hard work, we laid the tarmac, we put solar panel lighting on it, which we are very proud of. Those are the things that people will be looking at – not whether there is one parking less or one parking more, Mr Speaker.

1340 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister is factually incorrect in stating that no parking has ever been provided by the GSD when it was in Government. I ask him to search back in past press releases and he will find that alternative parking spaces were made to at least cater for part of the loss of Commonwealth Parade car parking during the Fair Week.

1345 In any case, then, Mr Speaker, further to that, what we were trying to say was, if the Fair Week is held at the time of the year when schools have still not commenced, it makes life a bit easier for parents to perhaps consider – and the Minister for the Environment would support this – walking to work, because it just requires an adult to walk to work and so on and therefore adopt a healthier and greener lifestyle; whereas if it coincides with the start of school week, it becomes a bit more complicated to walk to work, carrying along children who walk at a much slower pace and are much younger and therefore cars do become necessary. So that was the point, as well, we were trying to put in, Mr Speaker.

1350 Mr Speaker: I think he is clarifying the point that has been made by the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

1355 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, can the Minister confirm – because this is what I understand by his answer; maybe I have got it wrong – that they provided the parking opposite to Commonwealth Parade specifically to take into account the lack of parking for the Fair, during that week? Is that what he is saying? Because, of course, the answer... that particular parking is provided as part of the Government's commitments in respect of other policies the Government has. But maybe – I do not know – I was wrong in my assessment of that, as well.

1360 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, you are. And why? Because what we have done... It is the timing of it. We could have left that and said, right, when Commonwealth Park starts its development and we have to shift it, we could have done it then. The fact is that we did it just before the Fair, in order to alleviate the shortfall that was there. That is exactly why we did it before and not after.

1365

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, by way of clarification – and I will need two microphones to make this point – we have had this discussion in Parliament in recent sessions, where I have had the debate with the Hon. the Minister for the Environment in respect of the Commonwealth Park, in rather heated fashion and a very entertaining one, that the plans for the Commonwealth Park – or rather the logistics as they have mapped out – were that, just before the Fair, the Commonwealth Park area would be vacated and the parking would be provided elsewhere on the other side of Queensway and that, after the Fair, the Commonwealth Parade would no longer be used, because work would continue. I remember that we had that discussion.

1370

So now for the Minister to pretend – the Minister for Culture – that they somehow provided that parking because they were going to deprive the users of the parking during the Fair is somewhat disingenuous, given the fact that we had that debate – and that will be on Hansard.

1375

So I just offer that by way of clarification, because I think it is an important point to clarify, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: There is no question there.
Next question, in that case.

1380

Clerk: Question 711, the Hon. E J Reyes – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Well, I will allow the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

But I must make the point that when we end up with a statement as opposed to a question, I must reasonably assume there are no further questions.

Anyway, the Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: What does the Hon. the Minister think that the SDGG bring to the party, so to speak, in terms of the organisation of the Fair, other than the fact that they organised the Fair in the early 1990s?

1390

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, they are a group of volunteers who help, in conjunction with the Ministry for Culture, set up everything to do with National Week and National Day. That is exactly what they do.

Hon. D A Feetham: They are also an organisation that, obviously, deals with, that represents, rights of self-determination – although they perhaps do not want to go this far, but it is the logical conclusion of their philosophy – independence or certainly the right to self-determination.

1395

There are many other organisations that are volunteers that do a perfectly good job during the 16 or 15 years of GSD Government it was dealt with. There were other volunteers that dealt with this. Why the SDGG? What is it that they bring to this other than the fact that, historically, under Mr Bossano's Government, they were the ones that organised it, that you feel they bring to bear in terms of expertise or experience to the organisation of the Fair? Or is it just – (Interjection) I just want to understand it – that, historically, they dealt with it, when the GSLP were in Government and therefore you are returning to that, simply for historical reasons?

1400

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the SDGG was the group that actually started National Day. (Interjection) Yes, hold on – National Day. They then proceeded by doing the Fair and all that was around a National Week.

1405

So it is only fair – and, yes, he is right in saying 'because of historical reasons'. It is their 'baby', for want of a better word, which the previous administration then ostracised and ignored and did not want to know and had to do rallies in Casements in a private property, because the previous administration did not like what they used to organise. They were volunteers, they were... It was only until the GSD came into Government that they took over completely, the whole of National Day, the whole of National Week, manipulated in their own way for their own political ends and we believe that it is only right that the people who started National Day, the people who started National Week and all its festivities should have at least involvement and working together with the Ministry of Culture.

1410

Hon. D A Feetham: I am afraid I do not understand the logic of that. Actually, we did away with the political... (Interjection) We did –I do not think you understand the logic of that. But we did away with the political rally. I do not understand how you can possibly say, in the same breath, that we actually politicised the event. On the contrary, we tried to do the opposite of politicising the event.

But is your point of contact on this within the SDGG, Mr Cardona. Is that the position or not?

Mr Speaker: Before the Hon. Minister answers, I will allow that supplementary as it is, but I should point out, we are now deviating far away from the original Question, which was the dates of the Fair Week in conjunction with the schools' academic year. Now we are moving it around to debating the justification or otherwise of entrusting this whole thing to the SDGG. I will allow that question, but no further questions on that line.

1425

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I have connections with all the members of the SDGG, including Mr Dennis Matthews, who is now the Chairman.

1430

Youth Clubs Weekend opening

1435

Clerk: Question 711, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Youth confirm if resources have now been made available in order for Youth Clubs to be open at weekends, as per his Party's manifesto commitment and, if any, provide details of these?

1440

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, resources have been made available, in order for the Youth Clubs to open at weekends.

1445

I would like to add that the Youth Service is currently conducting a recruitment campaign to recruit volunteers to help in fulfilling our stated manifesto commitment.

I now hand over to the hon. Member opposite a schedule of the detailed information.

The schedule appears on the next page.

ANSWER TO QUESTION No: 711/2012

December:

Dolphins Youth club met at its premises before travelling to the nearby Rio Miel for a club whole day outing.

The Youth Centre opened and used the sessions; usually the whole afternoon, in the preparation for the construction of the 3 King's Cavalcade float.

January

The first Saturday In January including members and friends from other clubs who were encouraged to come to the Youth Centre and assist with the decoration and preparation of the float.

Dolphins youth club again met on a Saturday and went with members and some friends on a walk to Mediterranean steps.

Members from Plater Youth Club and the Youth Centre met at their respective clubs and from there went on "driving tours" to the Upper Rock; local beaches; Rosia Bay and enjoyed local natural history sites and open space away from their normal meeting venues.

February

Plater Youth Club members met on a Saturday and helped organise and deliver a cake-stall and raffle next to the Moorish Castle children's playground to raise funds for club projects.

Laguna youth club also met on a Saturday to travel to a nearby river in Spain.

March

Dolphins Youth Club members met on a Saturday morning and went to the Piazza to hold a cake stall and raffle at the Piazza to raise funds for club projects.

Later that month they too went to Spain, this time to Tarifa where they took part in a walk along the coastline and natural park in that area.

April

The Youth Centre members met on a Saturday to go on a "local" hiking venture taking in Anglian Way, the Great Siege Tunnels and the Upper Rock in general enjoying the views and identifying local landmarks.

May

Dolphins Youth Club again met on a Saturday morning and this time walked inside the rock on a tunnel tour including the Great North Road.

Laguna Youth Club members met on a Saturday to take its members on a "dolphin spotting" trip out in the bay.

June

Plater Youth Club members enjoyed two Saturday outings; one to the Marbella ski park and the other to Bahia Park also in Spain during the month of June.

August

The Youth Centre held one last trip on a Saturday in August for members from various youth clubs and some friends.

1450

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister.

He has provided me with this detailed breakdown, highlighting some of the activities that have taken place at weekends, during the course of last December up to last month of August, but can I be more specific in asking him is it his intention that youth clubs will be open at weekends on a permanent basis and not just once or twice a month?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is precisely why we are doing the recruitment campaign, because in order to open during the weekends, you need more people to man it. It would include youth workers but it will also include many volunteers, and that is why we are doing the recruitment campaign that we are currently engaged in, so that we can get as many volunteers as we can, in order to open them even further.

Hon E J Reyes: And by when, Mr Speaker, would the Minister dare to say he hopes to have this implemented?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, in the Chronicle, it had a closing date. I cannot remember, I think it was 24th September, on which the actual closing date is, but we are open all the time for volunteers.

I would like to take this opportunity to try and encourage people to come and work with our young people in youth clubs and everywhere we can. We are currently also working very closely with the Heritage Trust, with the Heritage Division. We are currently also working through Education, everywhere we can, so that we can recruit volunteers and have our youth in youth clubs in the right place and atmosphere that they should be.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Minister referred me to a closing date of 24th September, he believed in the Chronicle. Does that mean that, as from 25th September, youth clubs will be open at weekends?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I added to that that it is not a finite date. Because the Youth Service has to run courses and have to run screening and things like that – which is ongoing – it does not close on 24th September, but they have given themselves a target of 24th September, because they want to conduct a course.

They will have to see from 24th September how many they have got. If they have not got any people, then they will say, 'Well, we need to extend it, we have not got any volunteers. Why are we going to run the course?' If they have got 30 people or they have got three, it is up to them to decide whether they will continue with the courses. It is ongoing all the time, and these courses are how to deal with young people because not everybody can. It is not academic at all. It is just a question of how you relate with young people.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. E J Reyes: Once again, expressing gratitude for all those explanations, does the Minister dare to give me a projected date by which he hopes the youth clubs will be open at weekends?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, I have already answered the question.

We will have to view it as and when we get applications, we get people, volunteers and all that. I would love, and I hope he concurs with me, that we should have it by tomorrow or this next weekend, and he should be happy that at least this Government is trying to work to have all the youth clubs open all weekends. This is a goal that I am sure he probably had when he was on this side of the House, so the fact that we are actively pursuing it... he should be congratulating me for trying to at least move this forward.

Clerk: Question 712 –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: I would just like to ask the Minister whether, in relation to the Laguna Youth Club, over there, the refurbishment which I started in my previous term as a Government Minister in order to allow the usage on certain days of the week by the elderly people in the catchment area of Glacis and Laguna, is that still going on? Or perhaps that project has now been abandoned for some other reason?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, yes, the project that he started was nearly two years stopped whilst he was there because there was nothing happening. The fact is that the users... even the youth club itself was shut for a very long time. The hall was divided into two, in which one side – and that is the place that we have all used when we have elections, one side... That side was apparently to be for a place where the elderly were supposed to have gone there. Nothing had moved for a very long time. It was stopped.

So, what happened was that I tried to... because the users... because we opened and it was opened... I think it was opened in October or November last year when the youth club was opened. Half... not the other side. The other side was never used as a day centre, ever, and what happened was that the users of the Laguna Youth Club were telling me, 'Look, we are crammed in here. What is happening? There is nothing happening on the other side.’ So, in consultation first to try and get the tenants’ association, who have a big premises, to see if they can reconcile having the day centre... But I am happy to say that, in consultation with the Minister for Social Services, we have been able to do something different, which is not have the centre there. The centre that you used to have in the Laguna is now opened and is now a youth club. The whole thing is a youth club because they needed it. Therefore, it was like robbing Peter to pay Paul in that sense. So what we have done is open it all and the day centre has been relocated elsewhere.

Europa Point
Cricket and rugby facilities

Clerk: Question 712, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1530

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details of his Ministry’s plans to provide renewed facilities for the playing, teaching and development of both cricket and rugby at Europa Point, as per his Party’s manifesto commitment?

1535

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, no details can be provided at this stage for the renewed facilities for the playing, teaching and development of both cricket and rugby at Europa Point, but discussions are ongoing with the relevant sporting bodies about potential locations for such facilities.

1540

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I please ask for some clarification?

Is what the Minister is saying that he is discussing with both the Cricket and Rugby Associations as to perhaps providing the facilities elsewhere, other than Europa Point?

1545

Hon. S E Linares: Wherever it is possible, either Europa Point or wherever we can find places and they are happy with. It could well be Europa Point.

Hon. E J Reyes: So what happened to the firm manifesto commitment of providing these facilities at Europa Point?

1550

Hon. S E Linares: The fact is that if the Associations are happy with the fact that we are moving somewhere else, you can then put a little cross on our manifesto commitment that it is not in Europa Point but the facilities – the brilliant and wonderful facilities which the Associations will be really happy about – are not in Europa Point. We can contest that in an Election on that one.

1555

Hon. E J Reyes: And what would happen, Mr Speaker, in the circumstances that the Association is not happy vacating Europa Point?

1560

Hon. S E Linares: We will work as hard as we can to make them happy.

1565

Sports grants

1575

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1580

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I now hand over to the hon. Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the information, which I can look at with greater time on my hands.

1585

Can I clarify from the Minister as and when he makes the additional grants or whatever under these sections, will he automatically then pass on to me the information?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, it will also be... Yes, I will do that, and not only that, all this is now going to be on the new Gibraltar Sports and Leisure website. They are going to have an independent... Well, it will be run by Government but they are going to have their own website on which all this information will be, as soon as it can be provided.

Hon. E J Reyes: It prompts me to ask something, Mr Speaker.

1595

I am very grateful that that sort of information is being provided through the Government website and so on. I would like to bring to the Minister's attention that when, on the Opposition side, you come to tabulate your Questions and hand them in before the deadlines, because this side of the House does not enjoy all these facilities to automatically have access to the online information...

I must express some gratitude to the Clerk of this House who actually made available to me the use of one of the officers' PCs so that we can have access, and it is something the Government may wish to consider, because information has been provided – we are grateful to the Ministers – but the facility for this side of the House to access the information has not been provided. So we are here, and other than Mr Netto, who happens to have his own personal laptop... I cannot look into it and verify or tabulate, or in fact, do the legitimate work of the Opposition, which is to see what is being provided or what further questioning from there may be needed. So that is something that this House should consider for the future if we are going to have increased 1605 information being provided via these types of services.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, just to say that if we do put it in the website, he can still ask the question and I can tell him that he can look at it on the website or, if he wants, he can ask somebody else to look on the website for him, but I have no problem in giving him the information – even if he asks in this House – straight to him.

Mr Speaker: I think this was a wider plea, rather than just the information. A wider plea to the Leader of the House to provide iPads and laptops to all the Members, which I must say I do endorse.

1615 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, for helping to clarify that.

1620 Gibraltar Olympic Movement
Application to join International Olympic Committee

Clerk: Question 714, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1625 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to his recent announced support in respect of Gibraltar's longstanding application to join the IOC, can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details of what specific course of action his Ministry will be taking to sustain the bid submitted several years ago by the Gibraltar Olympic Movement?

1630 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, as the Leader of the Opposition, who is not here in the Chamber today, will know, the Gibraltar Olympic Movement commenced legal action against the International Olympic Committee before the Swiss civil courts many years ago and that action went all the way to the Swiss federal courts and was unsuccessful.

1635 The Gibraltar Olympic Committee is exploring what further avenues are available to succeed and the Gibraltar Government will support any initiative they or any other relevant parties may take in this respect in order to advance further.

1640 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.

So, what I gather is that the present Government will continue with the same level of support as this party did when it was in government, and I therefore publicly announce that I wish to join wholeheartedly with the Minister's efforts and he can count 100% on support from this side of the House in respect of the Gibraltar Olympic Movement's application to the IOC – in fact, I will even go further: in respect of all applications submitted by any legitimately registered sport associations – and I hope that we can work together in partnership, even, if need be, speaking outside meetings of this House so that we are mutually updated and there is a common approach for the good and benefit of all sports persons in Gibraltar.

1650 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, just to say that it is a thing that we welcome. It is not a party political issue. It is an issue that we should all be united on, and in this case I welcome any help or anything that the hon. Members on that side or anybody in Gibraltar might give.

1655 Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority facilities
Bookings/allocations made to sporting bodies

Clerk: Question 715, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details of all fixed 1660 bookings/allocations made to sporting bodies in respect of all facilities managed or administered by the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority for the 2012-13 season?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1665 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the tables of all fixed bookings/allocations provided for use by sporting bodies in respect of all facilities managed and administered by the GSLA for the 2012-13 season are in the process of being finalised. The hon. Member will be sent a copy of what will become a public document on completion of the exercise.

1670 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful and I accept that, Mr Speaker.

Just so that it goes in the record, I had a similar thing which I accepted once from the Minister for Housing, and when he actually handed me the document we needed guidance from the Clerk so that that schedule or whatever was handed over could actually then be recorded and become part of the Hansard.

1675 So although I am patient enough and will wait and understand that the final allocations still have to be made, when that is available, somehow or other, Mr Speaker, I wish that to be recorded in Parliament. So perhaps at the next meeting, if it is ready by then, the Minister can actually table it – I think that is the advice that the Clerk gave us. The Minister can then table it and then he can legitimately make it form part of the Hansard for the sake of perhaps when it comes to a future reference.

1680 As a Member of the Opposition, one only has to look into Hansard and find all the information there. Otherwise, it ends up being lost. A piece of paper can easily be lost in my home, given that the Opposition does not even have offices available here within the Parliament building.

1685 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, suffice to say that, as he well knows, they are finalising it because of the time of the year where we are. It is August/September, so the season is changing, some seasons are starting and all that.

1690 But I can also say to him that in this case, yes, we will go through the process that he has mentioned, through the Clerk, so that it is in Hansard. I have no problem with that. But again, next year, all this will be on the website as soon as it is available, so there might not be a need next year to come through Parliament in order for this because it will be a public document that will be on the website. But this year I have no problem; we will do that.

Strongman Champions League 2012 Sponsorship arrangement

1695

Clerk: Question 716, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1700 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the sponsorship arrangements, inclusive of its financial value, granted by Government towards the staging of the Strongman Champions League in Gibraltar during September 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1705 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, Government, through the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, agreed to provide £20,000 sponsorship towards the staging of the Strong Man Championship League. Non financial assistance was also provided relating to resources, facilities and venues necessary for the event.

1710 It is important to understand that this event will be televised as a one hour programme in Eurosport and coverage of the event will also be transmitted on Channel 5 and ITV. Therefore, the event is seen as an excellent opportunity to market Gibraltar.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker thank you for that information.

Within welcoming this type of events – and this party has always supported Gibraltar being a host nation

1715 for international events and so on – does the Minister know if the timing of events, did it infringe and therefore cause cancellations for other sporting events that were scheduled or, I am going to give him time perhaps to look it up and I can get the answer from him at any future date?

1720 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, it did not because the organisers came, if I remember correctly, it was about April/May time and by then they had already notified the dates that they wanted to use. As I understand it, the GSLA did not have any problem on the facilities exactly for the reason that I have just mentioned because August/September there are, it is like the summer and therefore associations and bodies are not using the facilities as they do during the winter time.

1725 But I can also say that it is not a firm date. Those are not firm dates for every year because we want it to be maybe an annual event and the sponsorship deal might change – we don't know. But, what I am saying to you now is that we want it to be an annual event because of the importance that Gibraltar is put on the map at least on this sport and Gibraltar itself, the one hour programme that apparently Eurosport is going to do, will include lots of shots of Gibraltar, lots of places in Gibraltar, so it will be like a story of the men coming to Gibraltar, seeing the place and that, in itself, is marketing. It is marketing tourism so we thought that it was very important to do this first one and then the next one, next year, things might change. Even the dates might change.

1730 Hon. E J Reyes: Can I then just simply to round it up, Mr Speaker, just ask the Minister that, although he will continue receiving our support on that, just to bear in mind for future dates requirement, the sensitivities of other sporting associations. I mean he has probably heard it the same as I have, you know those within for example the football fraternity who wish to have allocations now in order to get ready for the formal start of the season, end up feeling that their slots may have, in the same way that slots were found for the Strongman thing, that no slots were offered for them in order to prepare themselves better for a championship, more so with Gibraltar's pending and imminent membership of UEFA.

1740 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, we will look into that and I can assure you that the MUGA area, as it is called, was not a place where the footballers actually lost any allocations at all. The footballers themselves, if the MUGA is not a place where the footballers... (Interjection)

1745 Well, yes, fine. Yes, we will be sensitive towards all... because, like I said, we want – it is events that we want to do and we have to be both sensitive and see the value of the event and, at the same time, see it not affecting associations. Maybe we can think of more venues but, at this stage, we are not there yet.

1750 Hon. E J Reyes: And, once again, for clarity, Mr Speaker, I hope the Hon. Minister accepts my wholehearted support for Gibraltar to host international events and perhaps I can receive his assurance that we will work in an un-political manner in a joint effort to ensure that Gibraltar gets as much promotion in sporting events as possible.

1755 Hon. S E Linares: That is appreciated Mr Speaker.

Locally registered sports associations
Government assistance for sports development officers

1760 Clerk: Question 716, the Hon –
I beg your pardon, Question 717, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1765 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details of any financial contributions it has made, or is committed to make, during this current financial year to any locally registered sporting association in connection with any expenses incurred in respect of, or by, their sports development officers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, financial 1770 assistance through funds available for the sports development projects is made available to the sports associations in respect of previously approved projects which their sports development officers do in schools, but do not work there, they do directly for the... but work that they do directly for the association.

1775 In the current financial year, to date, the following payments have been made: Basketball £4,987.50; Ice Skating £325.00.

Procedural

1780 Mr Speaker: Would that be a convenient moment for a short recess before I move to the Questions for the Minister?

It was agreed.

1785 Mr Speaker: This House will recess for ten minutes.

The House adjourned at 11.40 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 11.57 a.m.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

1795 Graduate Employment Scheme Three year contracts for research assistants

Clerk: Question 718/2012, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1800 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Employment explain how the Graduate Employment Scheme offering graduates three year contracts as research assistants works?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1805 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the graduates that are currently undertaking research are primarily engaged in sourcing information as and when required in relation to a number of areas. These are primarily in following up sources of information relevant to employment issues, legislation changes, innovation and inward investment possibilities relevant to the 'enterprise' element of my Department or as relevant in the Department in which they have been placed.

1810 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when did this Graduate Employment Scheme start? Was this as from 9th December?

1815 Hon. J J Bossano: No, it was launched at the same time as the employment training scheme for non graduates, which was in February.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, how does a graduate go about signing up for the Graduate Employment Scheme?

1820 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, we have got fifty-six graduates who were unemployed at the time. The hon. Member has asked for a number of additional pieces of information in writing and there she has got the breakdown of when they started but I think something like ten of them started in February and the others have been coming through and there are now, for example, people are making enquiries and, essentially, very much like the ETCL, we take them in as we have something for them to do and we can place them somewhere. Some are in the private sector, some are in the public, I have got that all in the written breakdown and if she 1825 wants more information, I am happy to provide it.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes. Thank you for that.
So, Mr Speaker, registration is via the ETB. The graduate will go to the ETB to register.

1830 Hon. J J Bossano: It is only open to people who are graduates, who are in Gibraltar and therefore resident and registered as unemployed.

1835 Hon. D J Bossino: For the purpose of clarification, can I ask the Minister is there... are these graduates going to have some sort of input in relation to legislation, did he say? Can I ask him to clarify that?

1840 Hon J J Bossano: Yes, there are a number of lawyers who are unemployed nowadays. (Interjection) Yes, (Laughter) and given that there are so many in the pipeline studying, (Laughter) I would not be surprised if the biggest element in the graduate scheme is going to be lawyers in the future. But those that have got a legal background... For example, I have had some people doing research in my Department for me in relation to some of the legislation we have brought to the House, which means that we have got people that look at UK or other places and help me formulate policy before I ask the Gibraltar Government's Legislation Unit to prepare the draft. So they carry out research in areas of employment law for me or in areas of investment for me.

1845 Hon. D J Bossino: Do I take it that it is the Minister himself who identifies the expertise that is relevant to the particular area that the graduate who will be assisting him on?

1850 Hon J J Bossano: Well, no, the expertise that the graduate has depends on the degree that he has.
For example, I can tell the hon. Member I have got a graduate who has got a First Class honours in Physics and a Masters in Physics and I cannot provide him with anything that can use his specialist knowledge, but the whole concept is that people who are able to do studying at that kind of level in a UK university have got the ability to apply their analytical skills to any task that you give them – but it doesn't mean we are in a position to provide, for somebody that does nuclear physics, the equivalent of CERN. For somebody like that, we don't have that, but it is better that some of these people... I mean we are getting, I suppose, a situation now where, in the United Kingdom, there are 136,000 graduates out of work, who come out of University.

1855 So, before, we used to lose people the moment there was nothing here for them in their specialist field. They tended to go back, they used to come usually for the summer and then, if they couldn't find anything... and in terms of employment the openings for graduates are very limited outside, for example, the gaming companies.

1860 We are looking, also, at some of the graduates who may be interested – and there are a couple – in doing a second qualification in an area like accountancy, where we are having to give work permits to people who are non-EU nationals because the industry demands cannot be met from our local supply. So the whole idea of the scheme partly is to give Gibraltarians an opportunity to come back home and be available in the Gibraltar market and doing something worthwhile in return for the money that we pay them. That is the philosophy of it.

1865 Hon. D A Feetham: The position, when you talk about graduates doing research and I think that in my firm certainly there is at least one that has been placed there, one of the many lawyers in Gibraltar. But, is it the hon. Member that, effectively, says 'Look, I am interested in this particular area and I want you to do research in this particular area' or are you giving these particular graduates a very wide latitude to look at areas? What is the brief that is being handed to these individuals?

1870 Hon. J J Bossano: In my Department the brief is mine. That is to say, there are things that I want done for me either in the enterprise field or in the employment field or in the legislation field. There are some people... for example, that may be with Dr. Cortes and they are being asked to do research in an area of environmental products that we can be looking at in terms of investing in the programme that we want for, say, solar energy or anything like that. Most of this research is done on the internet and we have got people who have got the skills, because they have done research in order to get their degree. Nowadays, a big chunk of the first degree 1880 today is, in fact, researching projects so it is the research skills that they have already learnt that we are putting into use.

1885 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the question was ‘how does the scheme work?’ What I would like to know, and... forgive me if the answer has been given, but I do not think... If it has, I have not understood it. Who decides, of the pool of 56 graduates we currently have, who goes where? Is that the Minister? Yes. And doing what? Is that the Minister for –

Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, no. Look, the –

1890 Hon. D J Bossino: – Employment who could answer this question? For example, he has mentioned that there are two or three graduates working in the Ministry for Health, presumably because they have a certain expertise in that area. He has also mentioned that he has certain graduates – law graduates – who are assisting him in relation to the legislative aspects of the work of Government.

1895 What I want to know is who is the person who decides, or which body, if it is not one individual, which graduates should go where?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, there is a Higher Executive Officer who is the manager of the company. He is the one dealing day to day with the graduates.

1900 Hon. D A Feetham: Just for example... It is just that we are trying to look at the way that this works. For example, you mentioned legislative changes. Of course, when I was the Minister for Justice, I had a programme on crime. We want to reform our criminal offences, we want to reform evidence of procedure. We then delegate to people who can do the drafting.

1905 These are lawyers that have just come out of university. Presumably, the hon. Gentleman, when he talks about, ‘They are doing some research on legislation for me’, you are telling them, ‘I want you to specifically research this particular area of the law or legislative change that I am thinking of introducing in Gibraltar’. Is that the position or is it somebody else? Or are they given a wide latitude – I do not know – ‘Have a look at, in this wide field, in terms of the environment, what are the laws that they have introduced in Gibraltar in relation to this, because we perhaps are interested in introducing it in Gibraltar’? I do not know how the process is.

1910 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the process is dependent on what the area is that is being looked at. In my case, when I have given them the brief to look at labour legislation, I have done it on the basis of getting them to look at Labour legislation in the UK, compare it with what we have got here, identify particularly what the requirements are for the things that I want to achieve. Then that preparatory work means that, when it is passed to the Legislation Unit, it should shorten the process, because some of the stuff has already been done ahead of time, and I can give them a brief with which I am more satisfied that it will not be going backwards and forwards, because it will be more focused.

1920 In other areas, for example, there are things that, as a result of my recent trips, there are things that I have come back with that I want to follow up, on the enterprise side, and I need background information.

1925 Labour market skills audit
Details and findings

Clerk: Question 719, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1930 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Minister for Employment provide the details and findings of the skills audit of the labour market that was to be ready by April of this year, according to the Government’s manifesto?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

- 1935 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker, the skills audit was conducted in the Department in March and was limited to the construction sector, and particularly to manual workers in the construction sector, since this is the area in which the priority is being given, in terms of future training.
- 1940 This produced a breakdown of 1,912 construction workers, broken down in the following areas: general craft operatives, 286; scaffolders, 50; labourers, 381, semi-skilled labourers, 112; masons, plasterers, renderers and bricklayers, 302; carpenters and joiners, 200; plumbers, 80; painters and decorators, 166; stores operatives, 30; welders and metal workers, 87; electricians and electrical fitters, 101; window fitters, 24; roofers, 19; lift operatives, 23; and drivers, 46.
- 1945 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.
Can the Hon. Minister say if the skills audit will be conducted now in other sectors of the labour market?
- 1950 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, there is, in addition to this, a skills audit included in the survey questions for the year census which I think starts in October. So that means that the entire population will be subjected to questions which will reveal the... in a much detailed form than we can do it. One of the things is that here we are talking about historical data that has been inputted into our computer, whereas what we are going to have in April is a snapshot of the economy which will be completely up to date.
- 1955 The gap, when the Statistics Office produce the census report this year, they will have a very detailed breakdown which will give us the age profile, the nationality profile, the gender profile and the skills distribution of the whole of the workforce of Gibraltar that is resident. Obviously, we have got something like 7,000 non-resident workers which will not be reflected in that.
- 1960 In terms of what the Department is doing, since we are still at the stage of increasing the labour content in the construction industry, where it was very low, we have not yet moved into other areas. Therefore, I think the next target area for us after the construction is likely to be the retail and wholesale trade. Essentially, the selection of the area is determined and has been decided by virtue of the size. Since construction is the biggest area, the most obvious thing to do was to start with the area which had the greatest possibility of people acquiring skills and us increasing the resident workforce share of the industry.
- The next one on the list would be retail and wholesale, if we go by that criteria.
- 1965 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the survey, as I understand it, is effectively the supply side of the skills market. It is not a survey of the demand side. Does the Government intend to do anything on the demand side – in other words, what employers, what kind of skills employers need, as opposed to what is there already in these particular sectors?
- 1970 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no, it is not the supply side; it is, indeed, the demand side. People have got jobs because there is a demand for those jobs. This shows what the market in Gibraltar currently uses. That is the demand side.
- There may be, amongst the 1,000 unemployed, 200 people who want to be carpenters, but that is not reflected here.
- 1975 So he has got it wrong – the wrong way round.
- 1980 Hon. D A Feetham: That does not necessarily follow.
- There may, in fact, be people who are unemployed who may actually have skills that you are not taking into account in the survey. There may well be employers that require certain skills that are not reflected in an exercise of that nature, because if you are only analysing... If you are doing a skills audit, just simply by looking who is in employment with what skills, that cannot surely – and I am asking him the question – be reflective entirely – it may be partially reflective – of what skills the economy and employers in particular require. For all we know, there may be employers that require different skills or, alternatively, for example, if there are 80 carpenters within the sector, there may be a demand for 200 carpenters. It cannot be reflective.
- 1985 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, we know there is no demand for 200 carpenters, because we have not got 200 vacancies for carpenters. That is obvious. But there is nothing to suggest that the proportions here are exceptional, and therefore it is not an unreasonable deduction from this which will be proved right or wrong when we do the one in October, anyway.

1990 The one in October is going to show what everybody in Gibraltar is doing and that will give us a picture of the whole economy and the distribution of skills. The number of vacancies are a very small proportion of the number of jobs at any one time, but if you look at the nature of the construction industry, the only thing that is likely to produce, I would say, a shift in the composition is if we have got – as we may well have – in the future, a situation where we are moving more to a higher dependence on maintenance work in the industry and a lower dependence on new construction.

1995 The reflection of the industry today, I would say, given the fact that there are no big construction projects going is probably a better snapshot of the long-term core construction industry profile than if we had done this, for example, when we had hundreds of workers in the tunnel, the airport, Bruesa and so forth, which might have given us a very distorted picture of the degree of numbers of people in one particular area where there might be a lot of people, for example, putting up steel girders, but who then come in and go.

2000 So I think, in some respects, the snapshot here is likely to reflect more the long-term basic core, which is, in my judgement, going to be around the range of between 1,500 and 2,000 jobs. Here we have got 1,912. But the industry, for example, in the October survey last year which has been tabled in Parliament was that there were 3,500 people in the construction industry. But many of those jobs would not be very useful to us if we are planning the training that we want to provide.

2005 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I understand what the hon. Gentleman is saying. The hon. Gentleman is saying ‘Look, we have reached a basement level now, in terms of jobs within the construction industry, which is reflective of what those jobs... the number of jobs in a situation where there is no peak in terms of construction demand for whatever reason.’ But, of course, does he not agree with me that cannot possibly be an accurate picture of skills requirements within the economy? Because he was very critical for example, when we were in Government, of the fact that there was an influx coming into Gibraltar of foreign labour – particularly skilled foreign labour, in particular areas, which... Those jobs were taken over by foreigners because we did not in Gibraltar have those skills. That is the point that... I know that his point is wider, but that is one of the points that he made.

2015 Therefore, does he not agree that he needs to undertake a survey of the skills that employers, for example, may say, ‘Look these are skills that we always require within this particular industry’, because you are undertaking a number of Government projects, for example? When those Government projects launch and start, then there will be a spike and, unless you are well prepared in terms of matching future projected skills with the skills that we have in the market, particularly amongst Gibraltarians, the jobs are always going to be taken by people that come out from the outside, because we do not have the skilled labour here.

2020 Hence why I am urging him to not just simply focus on what there is now at a basement level, but to undertake – and I think I have said this before to the hon. Gentleman across the floor – also undertake an appropriate survey of the skills that the employers themselves, within these particular industries, think are necessary in terms of skills and skills that, actually, from my own knowledge of speaking to employers, are always needed within the sector.

2025 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the skills we always need are the skills that are here – not the skills when there is a sudden big project. If somebody comes tomorrow and starts investing in a big way, and there is a lot of construction then, throughout our history, there has been a situation where people have been brought in, from the days of the Filipino hostel onwards, done the job and gone. The hon. Member seems to be under the misapprehension that these are 1,912 Gibraltarians. All the imported labour is included in this.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understand that.

2035 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, then, if he understands that, he will understand that, in fact, by knowing that there are, for example, 60 scaffolders and if there are only six who are locals, I know that there is a potential for 54 more.

2040 Hon. D A Feetham: Unless, of course, what the hon. Member – and I am asking – I quite understand his analysis – unless of course what he is planning is, what he is saying to me is this: there are 1,500 people within this sector, or whatever the number is. ‘There are these skills: 40% are Gibraltarians; 60% are foreigners. I plan in the future to get rid of the foreigners so that Gibraltarians take that 60%’ – is that what he is planning?

2045 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I cannot say... that it is not something that Gibraltarians will welcome, but the reality of it is that foreigners and Gibraltarians lose their jobs when construction projects finish. They do now and they did a year ago when the party that he now calls 'his' was in Government. Therefore, that will be a feature of the industry.

2050 The fact that we import people because we haven't got them does not mean that we have to say to our school leavers 'I am not going to train you so that we keep on importing people because we don't have locals'. The training will be determined by the prospects of employment, the selection of the skills. If we have got a situation where, for example, we have got very few carpenters and lots of painters, then the logic is to concentrate on training more carpenters. Why, because we want to have in Gibraltar the day when we don't need to import carpenters, except for exceptional things that are going to have a start and a finish.

2055 There is no reason why we should have non-Gibraltarians and non-residents in Gibraltar working long term on Government buildings or in Government Departments. No reason whatsoever. And that is the heritage that the previous administration, of which the hon. Member is now so proud, has left and which we intend to put right.

2060 Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively what the hon. Gentleman is saying is that he plans to get rid of foreign labour working within the public sector.

2065 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker the hon. Member chooses to put it in a pejorative way and I choose to put it in a positive way. I intend to ensure that the proportion of our people in work in Gibraltar in the public and in the private sector increases for every single month that I am in office. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: Is it true that the hon. Gentleman personally phones companies within the private sector saying: 'You are not getting a Government contract unless you sack foreign labourers and you employ Gibraltarians'?

2070 Hon. J J Bossano: No it is not true, I haven't found it necessary, but I will take his advice into account if I need to use his ideas. (Laughter)

Clerk: Question –

2075 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.

2080 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the... Looking at the private sector, will the Government be identifying gaps in the market – for example, the number of accountants that are needed in order for our economy to progress? Will the Government be surveying the private sector and perhaps identifying and encouraging these educational programmes for young Gibraltarians to pursue in order to fill those gaps?

2085 Hon. J J Bossano: Well we know, in fact already, that... accountancy, which has been identified by the hon. Member, is an area clearly where we have got a shortage. There have been, for as long as I have been in the Department, unfilled vacancies for people in accountancy which we are not able to supply. Therefore, whenever people come and register, if they have not got accountancy qualifications but they have got, for example, 'A' levels or degrees, the Department interviews them and tries to persuade them to look at the possibility of accountancy.

2090 It is quite obvious, for reasons that are not very clear to me, that accountancy is not everybody's cup of tea. So we seem to have a problem. It is an area where we are now, in fact, meeting a requirement from the industry for work permits for non-EU nationals to come in. What we are doing is granting those work permits but on the basis that we will look, in the future, to replace the people we are importing with locally trained staff.

2095 I think I want to take this opportunity of saying that this is an area which is one that gives secure, more secure employment, I would say, than almost anything else, other than lawyers, in the private sector, given that, irrespective of the industry, they all need accountants. So even if there is an industry that is shrinking and another one is expanding, these are transferable skills. It is something we should be encouraging and I hope that people will see this as a future.

2100 The Department is very keen to give whatever assistance, both technical and financial, to people who want to go into that area. In other areas the bulk of the vacancies that are registered are in the gaming industries and, there, at some point I will need to be educated by the people in those industries as to what exactly it is that they want – because I’m afraid that I cannot even understand the labels.

2105 Hon. Mrs. I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is this something that perhaps your Department will be working with the Department of Education on, in order to identify these skills – and maybe the Department of Education can market these to students to perhaps pursue as future careers?

2110 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I believe that is something that has been absent in the past and we need to see what we can do to correct that in the future – what there should be in terms of the careers guidance. There should be a briefing about what are the demands for labour in the economy, as reflected in the vacancies that are open and the prospect of those demands changing or remaining the same.

2115 So, I believe very strongly that our young people should be given the opportunity to study whatever they want to study, therefore to develop their intellect and, their innate abilities to the full and that we, as a community, should be proud of them and be willing to finance that. But I think people have also got to be made aware that that may mean that, once they have studied that, there are no prospects of employment in Gibraltar and that, therefore, they have to balance whether they want to spend their years in higher education in the UK acquiring skills that are marketable in our economy or acquiring something that is their passion in life.

2120 I think we should finance both alternatives but I think more needs to be done, in terms of careers advice, as to indicating to people which are the kind of skills that give them the best chance of employment and which are the ones where, when they come back, they really have to learn to do something else to earn a living.

2125 Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: No. The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2130 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I thought he said, with his usual smile that sometimes spells trouble... when he said he would be turning his attention to the gaming industry, ‘I don’t understand the labels’ That made me quake slightly in my boots because the gaming industry unfortunately in Gibraltar is going to be facing some difficulty, particularly next year, in the light of legislative changes that are going to be made in the United Kingdom to betting tax source.

2135 May I urge, and does he not agree with me, that at this particular time, when that particular industry which, after all, employs 2,200 people in Gibraltar – the bulk of them may not be Gibraltarians, but in terms of the economic value of that through taxes and duties, and indirectly as well, a knock-on to other industries, that provides an immense benefit to Gibraltar – does he not agree with me that he has to tread with care in how he approaches the gaming industry in particular, listen to them very, very carefully and do nothing that can upset a very fine equilibrium, in terms of decisions that boardrooms and directors may make in relation to whether they stay or leave Gibraltar as a consequence of legislative changes in the United Kingdom?

2140 Hon. J J Bossano: First of all, Mr Speaker, I want to reassure him that he does not have to ‘quake in his boots’, because my bark is worse than my bite!

2145 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I don’t accept that! (Laughter)

Hon. J J Bossano: The industry wants to meet me, actually. So the initiative has come from them, not from me. I plan to sit down with them in a spirit of comradeship to learn from them. (Laughter)

2150

2155 Basic Training Courses
Availability and starting dates

Clerk: Question 720, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2160 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Training tell us when the following courses will be starting at Bleak House: (a) the OCR Levels 1 & 2 of Numeracy & Literacy; (b) the CLaIT Courses, which are the computer and IT courses; and (c) the generally known as 'life skills' basic courses for Special Educational Needs students who are no longer within mainstream education?

2165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to say when the courses specified in (a) and (b) will be starting at Bleak House and, as regards (c), I am not aware that any such courses have ever been carried out before.

2170 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Can the Minister explain why these courses stopped in May?

Hon. J J Bossano: I answered that question in the last House, Mr Speaker.

2175 Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps the Hon. Minister can enlighten us a bit further.
In the last House he said that the course ran up to examination time that happened in the month of May, yes, but there has been no follow-up, no further courses for those who have a need to get these qualifications? One set was prepared for examinations up to May and that is when they sat their exams.

2180 My understanding, unless the dates have changed, is that there is probably another set of exams scheduled now for November. The course has not started yet, therefore those students would not be adequately prepared to sit the examination in November.

2185 Hon. J J Bossano: Apparently, I am told that these courses were offered to people on the VTS Scheme that no longer exists. Therefore, they are being looked at in the context that now we have got people who are in the Employment Training Scheme who are, in effect, in employment with ETCL, with an agreement with an employer that is going to take them on.

2190 So, unlike the people who were doing these things before, so I am told, because this came from what was then the Bleak House education side of the outfit, the people who are getting the £300 or £400 a month were given day release to do this. Therefore, we are looking at how we can provide the equivalent to those who are in the new system but may still benefit from this, which may not be in the same numbers that there were before, and whether we should continue to do it in Bleak House or whether we should be looking to the College to do it.

Therefore, the answer is I am not at the moment able to say whether this exercise that is currently being conducted is going to be finished in September or there may be a further delay.

2195 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, but can I add for the Minister's consideration, (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano: Sure.) although the potential employer has that commitment to take him on, does it not help to improve the employability prospects of the individual if he were, whilst he is receiving the allowance – which comes from taxpayers' money – if he were able to complete these qualifications because they are basic skills that will be needed perhaps now and also for the future?

2200 We are looking, as well, at the long term prospects of the individual... So there is a lot of educational value on this. I just want to put it forward to the Minister that he considers it and, if need be, I am willing to sit down with him, as well, outside this Chamber and give him my personal view, from experience as well as an educationalist, so that we can give a package as good as possible for the individuals, even if it does mean, Mr Speaker, that the Minister may want to provide these courses outside, let us call it, the routine 9.00 to 5.00
2205 working hours so that the individual has better prospects for future employment now and in the future, because someone starts in a junior post with a particular employer and then wishes to aspire...

So, in the same way that the Government has continued doing it, for example, for those in accountancy firms where we help them do after office hours, we do the AAT and ACCA courses so they can aspire to 2210 become accountants – and we do not have to import accountants, on which both sides of the House are in agreement – we can do this right down to basic level. Perhaps we can meet one day for a cup of coffee, the Minister and I, and share it in a manner that makes it more beneficial for these youngsters?

2215 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, I welcome that offer of assistance and I will take him up on it. Thank you.

Equalisation of Old Age Pension Commitment for both sexes at age 60

2220

Clerk: Question 721, the Hon. J J Netto.

2225 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Security state if the Government is still committed to introduce equalisation of the Old Age Pension at 60 between both sexes during this term of office in line with their manifesto commitment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2230 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 722, 737 and 738.

Planned changes to Social Security Fund
Confirmation and details

Clerk: Question 722

2240 Hon. J J Netto: Given the comments of the Minister of Social Security in his Budget address this year, in which he stated that he will be bringing about new arrangements to the Social Security Fund in this financial year to coincide with the increase in the Old Age Pension, could the Minister say if this indeed has happened, or will happen soon, and provide the details of such changes, if any, and whether this will be happening through administrative changes, or by primary legislation?

2245

Social Insurance Fund Reform of structure

2250

Clerk: Question 737, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: When will the Government be in a position to implement its manifesto commitment to reform the entire structure of the Social Insurance Fund?

2255

Pensionable age
Equalisation for men and women

2260

Clerk: Question 738.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government intend to equalise pensionable ages for men and women in any new pension schemes?

2265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the position remains as stated in the manifesto and in answer to Question 125/2012.

2270 All new pension schemes are required to equalise pensions for men and women. Should the changes to the Social Security Fund require primary legislation, a Command Paper will be presented in Parliament and the hon. Member will have 10 weeks in which to look at the proposed text.

2275 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, the reason why I ask in relation to Question 721 is because the last time I asked this Question, which was back in February, and looking at Hansard in front of me here there was perhaps slightly some confusion, which I think needed clarity... clarity in the sense that, regardless of the answer that the Hon. Minister gave me, the last time, back in February, inasmuch as saying, well, European legislation will provide that there will have to be equalisation... despite that answer which he gave me back in February, one has to consider the fact that when the GSLP/Liberals actually produced their own manifesto, it is a manifesto for Government over four years, if elected by the people of Gibraltar.

2280 In the context of that manifesto, as opposed to the context of what may be the legislation, or the legal position, in the European Union, I am asking the question whether it is the view of the Government that, in order to honour that manifesto commitment, as stated in the manifesto, they will do it within their term of office, as opposed to having to wait for it, whenever being told to do so by the European Union. This is what I am trying to obtain an answer to from the hon. Gentleman, if I may.

2285 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, since I have answered 'the position remains as stated in the manifesto', I think he has got his answer.

2290 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can he tell me – perhaps provide me an answer – whether they will do it... because it is not clear from the previous answer whether they will do it within this term of office or they will simply put it to rest and they might do it if they get an instruction from the European Union to equalise it at some future date. That is what I am trying to find out.

2295 Hon. J J Bossano: As far as I am concerned, Mr Speaker, everything in the manifesto will be completed before the next Election. (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am glad to hear it.

2300 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): That is the whole point of a manifesto.

Hon. J J Netto: Do I take it, then, that this policy will be implemented by the end of this term?

Hon. J J Bossano: As stated in the manifesto, Mr Speaker.

2305 Clerk: Question seven hundred –

Hon. D A Feetham: His answer is very clear: everything in their manifesto will be completed this term. That is the answer.

2310 Does he have any plans, and if he does, can he share it with the House, about the restructure of the Social Security Fund?

Hon. J J Bossano: Obviously I have got plans, but I am not prepared to share them.

2315 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I also ask a further supplementary question, and this is in relation to Question 722.

One of the things I would like to know is in previous answers to my Questions, the Minister did say that the increases in the old age pension, I think he stated would happen as from the second quarter, meaning... yes, from the second quarter. We now find ourselves in the position, from the Government press release on 2320 the matter, that the increases will be given to the old age pensioners as from 1st October retrospective to 1st August – I think that is the statement from the Government – but given that he has also made commitments in the past that he will honour no erosion in the purchasing value of the old age pension by applying the index of retail prices to it, it seems to me – and I am not an economist; perhaps he can enlighten me on this – that by applying the index of retail prices of 1st July, pensioners may be somewhat out of pocket for a small amount of money.

2325 I would have thought that if the increases were being made on 1st October, rather than make it retrospective to 1st August it would have been made retrospective to 1st July. I understand and I accept that, obviously, he got the latest available figure, which was the figure of 1st July – fair enough, I am not saying that... If that is the latest available, that is the latest available, but why make it retrospective to 1st August and leave a complete month outside of the equation, because even if it is a small amount of money – whatever the changes to the index of retail prices are – for pensioners it is something that they value.

2330 So, if that is correct, if my analysis is correct, why does not perhaps the Government reconsider its position and make it retrospective to 1st July and not to 1st August?

2335 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am sure the hon. Members know that this is not the first time this has happened and that this has happened previously in their 15 years where the dates have not coincided but, be that as it may, we picked 1st August because the confusion in the question that he is putting is that what I told him was going to happen in that quarter was not the reform of the Social Security but putting in a way of revaluing the pensions so that the minimum income guarantee did not subsequently have to be reduced, which is something that happened when he was there, and therefore he will see that on this occasion, when the payment has been made from the beginning of August, we have not made any allowance for the increase of December of the minimum income guarantee of 2011. That has not been deducted and therefore what we are trying to do is review the relationship between the household cost allowance, the minimum income guarantee and the old age pension so that they all go up at the same time and you do not have different payments going to the same people on different dates, and then you find that, because some are means tested and some are not, it has to be clawed back and people do not understand it.

2340 Quite apart from anything else, the pensioners cannot understand how they get an increase in January and then, in July, they are supposed to be getting another increase, and when the second increase comes the deduction of what they got in January – which is what happened last year – in some instances happened to be higher than the new increase. So people were saying, ‘Well, how can I have got an increase and I finished up with less money?’ Never mind a percentage that did not cover – less money in pounds, shillings and pence! Therefore, that is the explanation that I gave him in the last Question when he asked me and that is what he is referring to about the increases in the old age pensions being brought in at a particular time of the year. It was to coincide with the increase in pension, the review of the household cost allowance and the minimum income guarantee.

2355 What we have done this year is that we have ignored the past increases in order to try and rationalise it. It has nothing to do with a new pension scheme. It may well be that people are slightly out of pocket for one month as a result of those who do not get the minimum income guarantee not being benefited by the other changes, but it is not the first time that it happens.

2360 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I have not got the figures in front of me to know whether it has happened in the past or not, (Interjection) but there is definitely a recognition on his part that there will be at least some – I do not know how much to quantify how big or small the sum would be – who will be out of pocket, and all I am asking, and all I am suggesting, is for him to consider whether, instead of making it retrospective to 1st August, make it just retrospective to 1st July, which is where you are getting the figure from.

2365 Hon. J J Bossano: No. The answer is no, I am not prepared to consider that. No.

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry?

2370 Hon. J J Bossano: No. The answer is no. He is asking me to consider it and I am saying to him no, I am not.

Hon. J J Netto: Can you give me an explanation at least why not?

2375 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I asked him last year to consider not taking money away from pensioners and he said I was not telling the truth, and he was lying and I was telling the truth.
He, last year –

Mr Speaker: Order!

2380 Hon. J J Bossano: – had representations from me –

A Member: Mr Speaker –

2385 Mr Speaker: Order!

A Member: Mr Speaker, on a Point of Order.

2390 Mr Speaker: May I just remind the Hon. Minister, we do not permit ‘lying’. So, perhaps, if he could rephrase that, the use of the word ‘lying’.

Hon. J J Bossano: I am only using it because he used it last year about me and now it is my chance to say it, too.

2395 Mr Speaker: Well –

Hon. J J Bossano: If he was forgiven for it last year, I can be forgiven for it this year. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: If it escaped me last year, I apologise for that, but it has not today.

2400 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the workings of how the minimum income guarantee operates, in taking into account all incomes of a particular person, is neither here nor there to the issue which I am raising. That is completely alien to the point I am making, and the point I am making is nothing to do with taking into account the increase of the old age pension or taking into account the increase of the household income support that he mentioned. The point I am making is he is making an increase of the old age pension on 1st October retrospective to 1st August, whereby he obtained the level of increase of 4.2% as it stood on 1st July. He has recognised the fact that some pensioners will be out of pocket, and all I am saying – which has nothing to do with how the workings of the household income guarantee operates – is to take it into account so that nobody is out of pocket. That is what I am saying.

2410 Hon. J J Bossano: And my answer to him is that ‘out of pocket’ for him means that some people might have got slightly more than they would have got if we had done it in July, obviously, and if I had done it in June they would have got even more, but being out of pocket is not this. Being out of pocket is what he did last year when he took the money out of their pockets. The money was in their pockets in June and he took the money out in July, and when the pension increases were given out last year, there were pensioners who came to see me, who made representations to me. I wrote letters. He said that the letters had been fabricated by me and that I had invented the people who existed!

2415 Hon. J J Netto: Yes. By you! By you!

2420 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

2425 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I was doing my job in the Opposition, advising people who had lost money from their payments by the Department under his ministry when he was there, and he was the one who took the money out of their pockets. That is how they were out of pocket. He put his hand in their pocket and took money out of it, and I gave him advice of the letters that they had to write to try to get the money back from him, and he refused to give it to them.

This year, I have made sure that those people that he prejudiced last year are in a better position, and therefore, just like he did not take my advice and my representation last year when people were affected – 2430 who were the people at the bottom of the income; the people who were means-tested were the ones that he took the money away from and he did nothing about them – I am not going to do anything that he is advising me, and that is the end of the story. He can take it or he can leave it.

2435 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, this is not about taking money away from any particular pensioners while I was the Minister, because it is... The actual formula of how the minimum income guarantee operates is that if any particular pensioner receives money from whatever source it is, it is taken into account in order to determine the level... whether that particular pensioner needs the minimum guarantee or a certain level of money within the minimum guarantee. So whatever money comes in from one side is taken into account, into the calculation. That is not taking money away. It is neither taking money away from what he is pretending to do, which is to say, 'I am going to put the two dates together so that the increase in the old age pension is taken into account and then pensioners do not see that there is a diminution. He is doing exactly the same thing as I was doing, albeit that, last year, it was on a different date. So it is not a question about taking money, and even if he wants to do all the shenanigans in the world to turn the whole issue upside down to confuse everyone, fine, but I am not talking about that.

2440 Even if he is right, which he is not – even if he is right, which he is not – the issue is not that. The issue which I am making, and I am asking him to consider, although he is very obstinate –

Mr Speaker: And he has answered.

2450 Hon. J J Netto: Although he is a very obstinate man –

Mr Speaker: Well, he has answered.

Hon. J J Netto: – is that given that –

2455 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

If that is the question, it has been answered. You are repeating the same question, which is really not on. The question has been put and the Minister has answered, in no uncertain terms: no, he will not do it. You will have to leave it at that.

2460 Next Question, please.

Social Security Department
Outstanding Higher Executive Officer position

2465 Clerk: Question 723, the Hon. J J Netto.

2470 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Minister for Social Security in a position to say when the outstanding position of Higher Executive Officer in the Social Security Department is going to be advertised so that civil servants can apply?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2475 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker, the post became vacant on 1st September 2010 and the vacancy was advertised on 21st September 2011 during the period that the hon. Member was in Government, so the answer is it was advertised by him already.

2480 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, have interviews already taken place for people to apply for the posts and are they being considered?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not monitor the movement of people in the Civil Service or the promotion board.

The Civil Service does not come under me and this is done by the people in Human Resources and the 2485 Public Service Commission. All I can tell him is the Question is not whether the job has already been filled; the Question is to tell me when people are going to be able to apply, and the answer is they have been able to apply since he was in Government on 11th September 2011. For all I know, they applied before 9th December.

2490 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry but don't you know, it is perfectly, you would have been able to see the supplementary coming, I mean it is a supplementary that is obvious. Don't you know whether this particular post has actually been filled or not?

2495 Hon. J J Bossano: No, I don't know whether it has been filled or not, all I know is that I find it very strange that somebody who is now in Opposition should not know that he advertised the job on 11th September and he is asking me when I am going to do it and he did it in September last year. So I don't know whether the post was filled before the General Election.

2500 Mr Speaker, the answer that I have been given is the answer provided by the controlling officer of that budget and the Head of that Department and this is not a political decision that I take in selecting who goes to an interview or who gets picked. But the hon. Member is asking me, as a Minister responsible, when I am going to advertise this HEO vacancy. I took it for granted that the Member knows that it is there and, therefore, I asked the Department whether you are going to advertise it and the answer the Department has given me is that they advertised it in September last year when the questioner was in Government. Well, what supplementary does he want?

2505 Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry so you come prepared to make a political point but you haven't come prepared – you are so –

Hon. J J Bossano: I have come prepared.

2510 Hon. D A Feetham: No, with respect, you are so blinded, you are so blinded with your desire to make a political point to try and embarrass the Member sitting to my right that you haven't made what are reasonable enquiries which are – because certainly I would have, I would have said well, if it has been advertised, has it been filled? Now, if the hon. Member is not really interested in providing the information to this House and all he is interested in is making petty political points and trying to embarrass his political opponents, well fine.

2515 Does he not know –

Hon. J J Bossano: What is the question?

2520 Hon. D A Feetham: The question is this, does he not know anything about this particular post in terms of the filling of the post, how many applicants there were, whether it remains vacant, none of that?

2525 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, let me make clear one thing to the hon. Member opposite. The work that I do in my Department is not dictated by the information that they may want or may not want. Therefore, if the hon. Member says to me when is the vacancy going to be advertised – I pass that question to the Department and get them to answer it. If the hon. Member is so incompetent and he may or may not be embarrassed – but in the forty years that I have been here I have never heard anybody ask when something is going to be advertised which he advertised when he was in office on 11th September. If his memory is already failing at his young age I hate to think what will happen to him when he gets to 73. All I can tell him is he has got the answer to the question on the order paper and, as far as I am concerned, there are no supplementaries to something which is so absurd that he is asking me about a vacancy to be advertised which he should know he was the one who advertised it.

2535 So if the hon. Member thinks that I am doing this to embarrass the hon. Member he is wrong because I know that the hon. Member that is asking the question is incapable of being embarrassed. I have heard him say so many things from this side of the House and he never batted an eyelid when it was demonstrated that he hadn't a clue what he was saying and never became embarrassed. So there is no chance of him becoming embarrassed.

Clerk: Question –

2540 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I come to the point. First of all, obviously, the Minister is not the person who advertises the vacancies. It is the department. So it is wrong to say that I advertised the vacancy. Secondly, I mean time has passed and we passed a new Appropriation Bill where in the Estimates Book of Revenue Expenditure, it tells you on the Head of the Department, the particular persons who are in post or not and I think I am entitled, with the passage of time, to ask what I think is a reasonable question without the hon. Member getting aggressive or hot and cold under the collar.

I think it is a perfectly reasonable and legitimate question and I would have thought that we are dealing not with an AO but we are talking about a senior manager in an important department like Social Security, in a position of HEO, that the Minister would be aware whether that particular vacancy has been filled or not. I think that Ministers ought to know that senior management are in post and, if they are not in post, why they are not in post or what is the process to get them advertised. As my hon. Friend said... I have just missed the point now. (Interjection) –

2555 Mr Speaker: Yes, would the Member get to the question.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, indeed. So I would have thought... and perhaps he could consider whether the interviews have taken place and whether he wants to have this position fulfilled permanently, as opposed to an acting basis for a long period of time. After all, we are talking about how he has been in Government for nine months and I would have thought that he would want to see a permanent person in a higher position in the Department.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, when we came in, the number of vacancies of EOs, HEOs and AOs that were vacant and had been vacant for years, would have filled a book (Interjection by Hon. N F Costa: Especially in the GTB. For years.) – before 9th December – and suddenly not to be on top of a HEO vacancy being filled in nine months is a dereliction of Ministerial duty. Well, look, I will provide the hon. Member for his benefit –

Hon. J J Netto: I didn't say that.

2570 Hon. J J Bossano: What is the hon. Member saying? I should know if the job has been filled and I should be interested in filling it. Well, does he want me to tell him all the jobs that were not filled before 9th December and how long they had been unfilled and how nobody in the Government of which he formed part, seemed to care at all that they were not filled.

2575 The answer is when vacancies are open within the Government for promotion, people apply. I assume that the vacancy that was open on 1st September 2011 produced applicants. I assume that the applicants were interviewed. I assume that they were selected before the Election because it would be an unusual thing – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham: It is in the Estimate book as not having been filled. This is what he is saying.)

2580 Well I don't know why – he says the Estimate Books, he says it identifies the people who are filling the posts, I don't think it does, we don't have names in these – we have got a complement that may say two HEOs or three HEOs. I mean at any point in time Mr Speaker where you have got a situation where the public sector has got five thousand people, five thousand at any point in time, while we are speaking there are jobs being filled and jobs becoming vacant constantly, all over the place. This is an ongoing thing. There are people who are permanently employed doing nothing else in the Government and therefore the reality of it is that when I read the Question, I assumed naturally, that it was a job that had been filled before the Election and had become vacant since the Election and that therefore the thrust of the Question was if the job had become vacant, why wasn't I filling it. That is what I took it to be. It was only when I asked the Department why are we not filling it, that I was told well look the advert came out in September. It would be very unusual if the advert had come out in September and nobody who was an EO anywhere in Government had applied. Yes, that would be very unusual. But, I am answering the original Question and the supplementary would have been logical and legitimate if the answer had been it has still not been advertised or it was advertised last week. But if it was advertised three months before I get there and he was there and he doesn't know whether it was filled, why does he expect me to have to know when he didn't know?

2595 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, because you are responsible for Government and for this area of Government business.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am responsible since 9th December and this happened on 1st September.

2600 Hon. D A Feetham: May I, May I because the hon. Gentleman is going to blow a gasket and you know...

Hon. J J Bossano: Oh don't worry about it.

2605 Hon. D A Feetham: And you talk about his young age, and at his age, I wouldn't want that to happen. Now, this kind of exchange does no credit to the House – tempers can flare, sometimes they flare and sometimes they flare with important issues. On this particular issue I don't see why tempers ought to flare and it doesn't do credit to anybody.

2610 Can I ask the hon. Gentleman that perhaps he might look into this and write to the hon. Gentleman, just to see whether this particular post has in fact been filled or it has not been filled. It may well be... he has probably asked the question in this particular format because he knows that the post has not been filled and, of course (Laughter and interjections)

Could I ask the hon. Gentleman to just write to us, to write to the hon. Gentleman, Mr Netto, as to whether this particular post has been filled or it has not been filled.

2615 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, first of all, I can assure the hon. Member – to put his mind at rest – that I am in robust state of health (Applause and laughter) and in no danger whatsoever of blowing a gasket or having to be visited by him on my deathbed. There is not the remotest risk of that happening! But I want him to be reassured because I know how worried he is about that possibility, because he keeps on saying it.

2620 Secondly, the answer is no, I am not prepared to write to him. If he thinks that this brings the House into disrepute, well, I don't know what he thinks of the performance of yesterday, but I was told that that was hair-raising. I wasn't here to enjoy it and I am sorry that I missed it, I must admit.

2625 So the answer is no. The hon. Member has put a question, the question, in my view, is not something for which I am responsible because the answer to the question is that he is asking me when it is going to happen: I have told him has happened already. I think that it is not my responsibility to go to the Department and find out what was happening before 9th December because the vacancy was there in September and it is inconceivable, not to say almost impossible, that nobody should have applied between 1st September and 9th December for an HEO vacancy That is unheard of. So, therefore, there must have been applicants when he was a Minister. Now he wants me to go back and say I am going to write to you to tell you what happened when you were there. Is that the idea?

2630 Hon. D A Feetham: Not necessarily.

Mr Speaker: Anyway, I think we should move to the next Question.

2635

Drug or alcohol offenders
Finding employment after prison sentence

2640 Clerk: Question 724, the Hon. J J Netto.

2645 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many individuals recently have finished a prison sentence arising to, or due to, the individual's addiction to drugs or alcohol and have been assisted to find employment or are still registered as unemployed and, if so, can the information be provided on a monthly basis?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2650 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I am informed that no individual serving a prison sentence arising from, or due to, the individual's addiction to drugs or alcohol has finished so far this year.

2655 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for Employment, or is he aware, perhaps, as a result of the interface between his employment officers and registered unemployed persons, that some of them may have, or do have, an addiction or an affliction to drugs and alcohol and, in the past, may have even have served sentence in prison?

2660 The reason why I am trying to focus on that particular point is because, at the end of the day, I am sure we all want to try and assist as much as we possibly can those particular persons who may find it very difficult to get back into employment. So really, my question is, even if he has not been informed in the manner in which the question is asked, I am sure that perhaps he may be aware by now, given that he has been there for nine months, that there are registered unemployed persons who, sadly, are afflicted by these circumstances and they need all sorts of help in trying to assist them into employment.

2665 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am aware that there are people who have been in this problem, primarily because in the area of the public sector some of the candidates that we said do not get past the vetting because of problems in the past like this. That is something which I think needs addressing. That is a separate issue.

2670 But I can tell him that the people concerned that have got that kind of problem I have not found difficulty in getting into employment without having to give them special treatment, just on the basis that we are putting them in, with the effort that we are making to get people in the construction industry, where there are people who are capable of working in that industry. In other areas, it may be more difficult but, as I have said in the past, we have got a very high level of people unemployed, and the people in this category are a very small proportion of the total. It is not as if...

2675 If you had a situation where you have full employment and you have got a minority of people who have great difficulty in getting a job when everybody else is getting it, then it is a different issue. But the reality of it is that we have got a high level of unemployment, and that, notwithstanding the fact that there are more people working now than there were in the past, the figures are not coming down.

2680 Hon. J J Netto: I understand that and I accept that to be the case, but every individual is different in their own circumstances in life. But focusing on this particular group of people, I just wonder whether the Minister perhaps is aware that some of them are now what we call long-term unemployed, meaning registered unemployed for more than 12 months, and perhaps one of the reasons why they are long-term unemployed is because in some – I am not saying all of them – they may have literacy, numeracy problems in order to be able to sell themselves to an employer for a job. On other occasions, it may be that despite being academically suited or skill-wise suited for the particular vacancy, some employers may say, 'Well, shall I take the risk of employing someone with a track record, having served a sentence in prison?'

2685 Perhaps one of the ways, which is one of the ways I remember we used to do, back in 1996 to 2000, was in some cases, we used to have even a wage subsidy to those long-term unemployed persons with this sort of affliction, to try and induce the employer to get these particular persons back into employment.

2690 What I am trying to find out, in the form of a question to the Minister, is to see whether, with the data available in his office, whether there are people in this group, long-term unemployed, who may need specialised focus, in order to try and get them back into work.

2695 Hon. J J Bossano: There is no data in the records of the Department as such, but the people who have had problems of this nature in the past – who have had prison sentences in the past – that I am aware of are the people who have actually come to see me in the interviews that I have given.

A couple of weeks ago, for example, I saw 107 in one week. So I can tell him that there are a number of people in that category that have actually talked directly with employers and, as a result of, in effect, underwriting them and giving a guarantee about their reliability, they have been taken on.

2700 In one particular case, for example, there was somebody that I think had made great efforts to break with the past, had been going to do the AAT courses in the college and still could not break into a field where there is a huge shortage, which is accountancy, and I am happy to say that he is now working.

Clerk: Question 725, the Hon. J J Netto.

2705 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: I had a supplementary – just one supplementary on the previous question. But of course, he is perfectly entitled to call the adjournment.

2710 Mr Speaker: Well, if it is only one supplementary, I am sure the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister does not mind.

Hon. J J Bossano: I will take the supplementary.

2715 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, first of all, can I congratulate him in relation to this particular gentleman. He came to see me, just before the General Election and I know that it was a difficult case, but I, like him, am totally convinced that the gentleman is a reformed character, despite the seriousness of the offence that we were talking about, that he committed in the past.

2720 But I thought that he said in relation to – maybe I misheard – the public service, that we cannot employ people with criminal convictions in the public service, because of General Orders. I thought he said that that is something that we have got to look at. Is that what you said? Can you elaborate on that?

2725 Hon. J J Bossano: Certainly, I can tell him, we had a case last week, where an applicant for the job of cleaner in the public service was told that she had not been successful in the vetting because, in the process of an acrimonious break-up of a marriage, she had a row with her former husband, who reported her.

Well, look, if that is what the vetting produces, then we have somebody from al-Qaeda who goes into people's houses and somebody who has a row with her former husband who cannot get a job as a cleaner! There is something wrong with that system – that is what I am saying, so it needs to be looked at.

2730 Hon. D A Feetham: But, for example, I know that... These are difficult issues.

When I was a Minister, I used to come across them, and they are frustrating, but in relation to the Future Job Strategy, for example, I know of a number of instances of individuals that have had quite serious prison sentences who are now, as a consequence of the Future Job Strategy, being placed within Government Departments, where if they would have applied to those Government Departments directly for a job, General Orders would have prevented them from actually being selected for the job.

2735 Is this part – those examples and what he has just told me – of a change of Government policy in relation to the applicability of General Orders to people with criminal convictions in respect of entry into the public service?

2740 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, this is not General Orders; this is throughout the public service. General Orders apply to civil servants, not to public servants. There is a distinction.

Hon. D A Feetham: General Orders and for example, in relation to the GDC, GDC General Terms and Conditions.

2745 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, yes, but look, it is... The previous Government chose to apply some things of the Civil Service to some people who are not civil servants, and not others. Therefore, when everybody in the GDC was made to comply with the pay and conditions of the Civil Service, there might have been legitimacy in applying General Orders to them, but not before. But in any event, I can assure him that there are people in the GDC who were made civil servants who would never have got through with that requirement in General Orders. That was done on 1st October by the previous administration.

2750 So whether the GDC had General Orders applied to them or not is highly questionable, because I can assure him that this is not what happened on 1st October.

2755 The point that I am making is that, in my experience, as Minister for Employment whose job it is to get as many people working as possible, I think that the interpretation that is being given to conviction is that it may be simply 'blowing a gasket' – to use the hon. Member's favourite phrase – or committing mass murder. There seem to be no criteria that are introduced to relate the severity of the alleged misconduct to the relevance to the work that is being done and the places that are sensitive.

For example, if you have got a situation where there are people with drug convictions, and it has been 2760 standard policy that you do not put them to work in a place where they have access to drugs. Quite apart from anything else, it is because you may be making life more difficult for them in putting temptation in their path.

2765 So what I am saying is that, as Minister for Labour, I feel, from recent experience, that there needs to be, if you like, a more intelligent and commonsense application of what is considered to be something that debars people from working in the public sector, in relation to the seriousness of the alleged offence that they have committed and the sensitivity of the place where they are going to work. It is not a matter on which we have taken a policy decision or introduced anything; it is just something that, frankly, it occurred to me as an issue in the context of helping people who come out of prison.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understand, and I apologise, but this is an important point.

2770 I understand and I said, I recognise, these are difficult decisions. There may well be, taking your example of a cleaner, somebody who has committed... has been cautioned in the past for a very minor drugs offence, and that should have absolutely no impact on his or her application in relation to a job as a cleaner.

2775 But, of course, it is always a question of fact and degree. You have said, there has to be an intelligent application. Whose intelligence are we talking about? Is it your intelligence? Because in the absence of proper policy underpinning and a proper analysis of how you treat these cases, then obviously it is your judgement as a Government Minister that is going to prevail in relation to these cases – hence my question about Government policy. Because otherwise, of course, you are going to receive criticism from this side of the House, in the absence of proper criteria and, quite clearly, when we have General Orders and they are there in order to maintain standards within the Civil Service.

2780 There may be cases that are really... Deserving cases, that unfortunately, are on one side of that line that one draws, but one could say, ‘Well, it should be on the other line’, but at least they set a standard. Unless one has a situation where, effectively, without a policy, you are going to be dealing with it, you are going to be taking these decisions – it is your intelligence that we are talking about – I would have thought that this is something that the Government surely must have a policy, perhaps in terms of a review of General Orders and including a different clause within General Orders or sending out a policy document or instruction to Human Resources after having reconsidered General Orders. I do not know. Or is it just simply going to be you?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member opposite is wrong in thinking it is just going to be me, and I have not said it is just going to be me.

2790 What I have said, in answer to the previous supplementary question, was that in my view, the way that this law or system applies is that the Police are asked, ‘Has anybody committed an offence?’ and the answer is yes or no, and that is the end of the story. Therefore people are either put on one side or the other, and the offence can be anything from the insignificant to the serial killer and that in my judgement, we need to have a system that is refined so as to select criteria that determine what is serious and what is not serious and how relevant it is to the job in question. That is a position that I have volunteered that information in the context of a supplementary.

2795 Clearly, I have made a mistake and I must remind myself not to volunteer information that I am not asked!

Hon. D A Feetham: But you still have not answered the question!

2800 Hon. J J Bossano: Look, the question –

Hon. D A Feetham: Let me tell you about the Police –

2805 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have answered the question.

Mr Speaker: The Minister did say that there should be a system, so I think he addresses the point the hon. Member is making. He is not talking about himself choosing; he says there should be a system. I think that answers the question.

2810 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, there is a system in place. The system has not changed. I made the mistake of volunteering my own concerns about the system.

Now, the concerns about the system, the hon. Member is now trying to convert into a repetition of yesterday’s analysis that now the new Government is going to be putting their family, their party members 2815 and the convicts in the public service. Is that where he wants to get to?

Mr Speaker: No, I do not think –

2820 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman is really getting very, very paranoid in his advanced years, I have to say! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, order! (Interjections) I do not think the hon. Member should harp on about another Member's age or whatever it is.

2825 A Member: It is an insult.

A Member: Absolutely.

2830 Hon. D A Feetham: He has talked about the system that is in place. (Interjection by Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) He has said it is not a perfect system, there are inadequacies in the system. I have personally said to him, I understand what those inadequacies are, there are difficult issues. In fact, when I was Minister, I spoke... I think I am right in saying that a new system was put into place because I did not feel it was right for the Police to be handing out this kind of information to any Government Department that asked for it and that it had produced some unjust situations.

2835 I remember there was a particular individual in the NHS, for example, who had been offered a job, and then the offer had been withdrawn on the basis of information that the Police had provided. One could have said, in relation to that particular case, well, actually the caution that was provided when that boy was young had no correlation with the job.

2840 I understand there are difficulties but, of course, if there are difficulties with a system – and this has all arisen out of you saying that is something we have got to look at – if there is difficulty in the system, then I suppose he is thinking of replacing it with a different system. I am asking, what is your thinking in relation to that system?

2845 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer to the last question is that it is my view that the system needs to be looked at.

Nothing is being looked at at the moment. There is no policy decision. If a decision is taken, when it is taken, it will be made public.

2850 Procedural

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

2855 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I move that this House do now adjourn to three o'clock.

2860 It was agreed.

Mr Speaker: This House will adjourn until 3.00 p.m. this afternoon.

The House adjourned at 1.16 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Hilton Hotel Progress of development

Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.
Question 701, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: The Question was submitted, Mr Speaker, addressed to the Minister for Tourism etc, but I understand it is going to be answered by the Chief Minister. So I will just amend that slightly.

Can the Chief Minister advise what progress has been made, if any, in connection with the development of the Hilton Hotel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government continues in discussion with the investment group that has proposed a project that includes the potential establishment of a Hilton Hotel.

Tobacco smuggling
Government proposals to stamp out

Clerk: Question 811, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state whether the only steps the Government proposes to take to make good on its recent public commitment to stamp out tobacco smuggling are limited to measures set out in the communiqué making that commitment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is taking considerable steps to stop illicit tobacco smuggling. One of the principal measures taken has been the bolstering of the frontier fence, which has been allowed to fall into disrepair to the extent that people were able to access Gibraltar without having to pass through the established entry points.

Other measures discussed with tenants associations of the housing estates most affected, Laguna and Glacis, include CCTV, potentially controlling vehicular access to estates and other measures. All policing matters are, however, a matter exclusively for the RGP.

Customs is also drawing up plans to control illicit tobacco smuggling, but Government is not involved in planning any such operations, of course.

The Government feels very strongly that the anti-social behaviour in the residential estates must be curtailed, as it is self-evidently affecting the quality of life of people who live in those estates.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I am very grateful to the Chief Minister for that answer and of course it recognises what was going to be part of my supplementaries, that when one analyses the question of tobacco smuggling, with that we are not just simply dealing with smuggling of tobacco, either through the frontier fence or alternatively at sea, which happened to be the subject matter of the communiqué of 29th August, but that there is also an element that part and parcel of tobacco smuggling are the preparatory steps that are actually taken, at considerable nuisance to people that live in those areas, for example, Laguna Estate and also Glacis.

Does he rule out as well – in relation to taking these measures, that perhaps confining the sale of tobacco to particular areas in Gibraltar or at the very least taking out of the legality of where they are sold – residential estates? Because as he quite rightly recognised in his address to the Laguna and Glacis Estates, some of these shops, which were general convenience shops within those estates to start off with are now becoming tobacco supermarkets and are selling mainly tobacco products. Of course, it is causing huge amounts of nuisance to people in the area because of what it attracts.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I rule absolutely nothing out and I do not want to be committed to anything, but I am working with those who may require the Government to be involved in some aspect of the operations in which they plan, to ensure that the Government's demeanor to this is always seen to try and control what is happening in those estates. That may include, Mr Speaker – I am happy to share with the House – the designation of certain parts of the estates as special zones, under the Tobacco Act, something which I am pursuing directly.

There is only really one issue of dispute between what the hon. Gentleman has said and what I am going to reply, and it is this: that the hon. Gentleman said that those areas are becoming a problem. Mr Speaker, I hope that we can agree, because empirically it is so, that these areas were and are a problem. None of the tobacco licences which are operating in those estates were granted by this administration.

I am sure that when tobacco licences were granted for those estates, nobody envisaged that they would be used for those purposes, but on 9th December, the moment from which we are responsible, this problem already existed and we are trying to deal with it as best as possible and as quickly as possible, because it is a real problem that we have inherited for the people who live in those estates.

The anti-social behaviour aspects of this, in places like Laguna and Glacis, are becoming so overwhelming that they have to be dealt with, because, since before the Election and after, there are remarks about children being exposed to people who are in states of undress, etc, blocks being used for these purposes and this Government certainly is not going to tolerate that. That was the position before 8th December; it is the position after 9th December. We are the ones in administration, we are the ones who have to deal with it and that is why I am telling the hon. Gentleman, I am ruling nothing out and I am already looking, with those who are responsible under the Tobacco Act, to the possibility of declaring special zones in different areas.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman has said there is nothing in the semantics of it. I accept that this was becoming and was problematical prior to 9th December. I accept that and, in fact, I think that in exchanges between the then Chief Minister and the now Chief Minister, when he asked questions about this in Parliament at the time, I think the now Leader of the Opposition, then Chief Minister, actually said that the Government was considering the possibility of introducing exclusion zones in these particular areas, because it was becoming a problem. As time goes by, I genuinely do believe that it is becoming a greater problem.

Just so that I understand these exclusion clauses, is what the Government is looking at is actually excluding the sale of tobacco wholesale in these estates, or some other limited form of exclusion?

Hon. Chief Minister: Can I just ask the Member to clarify whether he means, by the word 'wholesale', wholly or wholesale? (Hon. D A Feetham: Wholly.) Right, okay. I do not think there any wholesalers of tobacco in those areas which are causing a problem.

Mr Speaker, the Tobacco Act provides for the declaration of special zones, which give law enforcement officials greater powers in respect of those zones. The hon. Gentleman will know that, in the past three months, I have declared areas in and around the Airport special zones, so that Customs officers and RGP officers can ask people to move on or can search people in those areas, if they suspect that offences contrary to the Tobacco Act are being committed.

These are the zones that I am considering also declaring in Laguna and Glacis, which are the only ones that, in law at the moment, I would have the power under the Tobacco Act to declare. That is why it would have to be the Government involved and not the RGP or Customs who would be planning these things. This is actually a power, I think, in the Chief Minister or the Minister with responsibility for Customs, which happens to be the Chief Minister now and was previously the Chief Minister as well.

Mr Speaker, it is not possible, in our analysis, to take away from people a licence that they already have, so it is therefore not possible, in our view, to prevent people who are already engaged in this trade, simply by operation of law, whether in the public interest or otherwise, from continuing to trade from one day to the other. A case would have to be made, for something as draconian as the withdrawal of a licence, simply because of the area where trade is occurring, absent an offence committed by the licence holder, or a breach of the licence committed by the licence holder.

But there are many different possibilities here. For example, Mr Speaker, it is possible to see these licence holders being enticed to go elsewhere – (a); or (b) it is possible to see a situation where it is more attractive, for people who wish to come to buy tobacco in Gibraltar legally, to buy somewhere else. All of those things have to be looked at in combination. The Government can rule nothing out, as I told the hon. Gentleman, but a licence gives certain people a right – it is an acquired right – and we would not want to see ourselves in a situation of pulling licences. We very much hope that, with the co-operation of licence holders, of tenants in the estates, of the law enforcement officials involved and the instruments that we have available to us already in the legislation, it may be possible to deal with this issue. If it is not, then we will have to look at other potential ways of dealing with this matter.

But I would like the position to be known clearly, that what is going on in the estates is just unacceptable to the Government. It was unacceptable to us as an Opposition; it is unacceptable to us as a Government. This is not an issue where one can act overnight; one has to act properly. We have started already in dealing with the issues at the frontier and we are already dealing with the issues in the estates.

The issue of CCTV that I also talked about in the estates and the control of vehicular access to the estates, etc: all of that can contribute to controlling this activity and it is fundamentally important that we get it right when we do it, so that the activity is controlled and those who wish to buy tobacco legally in Gibraltar are able to do so in other places.

Procedural Question 812 withdrawn

Clerk: Question 812, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Mr Speaker: I think that was dealt with yesterday.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, this was dealt with, either this morning or yesterday.

Mr Speaker: Yesterday.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Is it withdrawn or...? I am happy to give an answer –

Mr Speaker: Well, I think the matter was –

Hon. D A Feetham: It was answered by the Deputy Chief Minister.

145 Hon. Chief Minister: But for Hansard, do you want to ask it and I'll stand up or do you want to...

Clerk: Yes. Yes.

150 Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, it was withdrawn – it was answered yesterday anyway.

Mr Speaker: We will treat it as withdrawn, I think.

155
Glacis and Laguna Estates
Construction of additional floors in blocks

Clerk: Question 813, the Hon. D A Feetham.

160 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state what consultation of local residents took place before the Government announced it was constructing an additional floor on some of the blocks at Glacis and Laguna Estates?

165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 814 and 815 of 2012.

170
Moorish Castle, Glacis and Laguna Estates
Cost of proposed cladding works

175 Clerk: Question 814.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state what is the estimated cost of the proposed cladding works at Moorish Castle, Glacis and Laguna Estates, now that the Government has confirmed to residents it will not be going ahead with the construction of extra floors?

180 Clerk: Question 815.

Hon. D A Feetham: Question 815 was in fact answered by the Deputy Chief Minister, so it is withdrawn.

185 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the proposal to construct these additional floors was put to the Development and Planning Commission as the start of the public consultation process. I also held meetings with the Tenants' Association of each of these estates and subsequently held public meetings with tenants of these estates.

The final design of the proposed cladding works at Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates has not yet been finalised. Different types of cladding are being considered in consultation with the Tenants' Association and technical advisers.

195 Mr Speaker, I would have said, both in relation to Question 813 and Question 815, but I now say in relation to Question 813, that as the hon. Members will now know, the Development and Planning Commission is now an open forum so that all members of the community can provide feedback on the projects which are put before it. The Government will balance all the competing interests in deciding how to proceed in respect of any housing project.

200 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he tell us at least this – just focusing on Question 814 for the moment as to the cost – does he know what the cost was of actually building, or the proposed cost of the proposed building of extra floors on these estates?

205 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I know to the penny what it was that it was estimated that they would cost, but I do not have that detail with me. If he wants me to write to him and tell him what it would have been, if he sends me a note, I will ensure it is replied to with that detail.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, please. Thank you very much.

210 In relation to Question 813, does he know what the cost of preparing these proposals were in the first place, the producing of the plans and everything associated with the actual construction of the extra floors?

215 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it will be very closely intertwined to the planning for adding a lift and for adding certain types of cladding etc. So I do not know whether it is possible to divide the cost of what is going to go ahead from what is not going to go ahead; but, of course, he will know that it is not unusual to change plans. Changing plans in this particular respect is not, in my view, going to cost too much because he will know from the time that his party was in Government that when you add a lift, you tend to add, in effect, a floor and a pitched roof. So what is going to happen is that the internal layout of that extra floor is not going to be turned into flats.

220 Hon. D A Feetham: Because he had a cost or... if he doesn't, I am not going to press him, but does he have a cost of the actual plans for this particular project – how much it actually cost the Government to produce these plans to get it to the position of when it was announced to the public?

225 Hon. Chief Minister: I am sure, Mr Speaker, that there must be a cost or a cost can be given, but I do not have it with me. But the cost of what is going to go ahead is very likely to be very close to the cost of planning what is not going to go ahead because externally it is going to look exactly the same.

Hon. D A Feetham: I doubt that is going to be the case, but... (Interjection)

230 Mr Speaker, did you, for example, or did the Government, for example, conduct any kind of survey or any kind of analysis of the impact of constructing these floors on parking, for example, for residents before they announced the project?

235 Hon. Chief Minister: Parking, for example, but many other things too. All of this was considered in the planning stage and that is why it was an issue that had to be taken to the DPC for guidance and consultation, as we do with all of the Government projects.

240 But the hon. Gentleman will be a Doubting Thomas on everything that I tell him. He can rest assured (Interjection) that the cost of the plans, or perhaps that element of the planning which may now require a change, will be much less than the cost of the changes to the airport from £24 million when it was originally announced to £80 million when it was delivered. Or the costs thrown away in respect of the planning for the new Theatre Royal at the Old Theatre Royal site.

245 What is clear to us, Mr Speaker, is that this was a project that it was important to talk to the people in the estates about, and that is why I went out to the estates, that is why I saw the Tenants' Associations and that is why it went to the DPC. The hon. Gentleman may think that that is not sufficient consultation. I dare say it is more consultation than has ever gone on before.

Hon. D A Feetham: He is anticipating the points that I am going to make. I have not even got to those points and I had moved on from the point about the cost of the plan.

250 No, what I am asking the hon. Gentleman – and indeed, one can extend it to other areas – is did he or did he not conduct, or he did his Government, did the Government, or did it not, conduct any kind of survey on the impact of building these additional floors of parking, for example, on the potential need to relocate individuals living in the top floors of these estates, and on the potential for nuisance for those living in these estates, before it announced the project? Did it undertake that kind of survey?

255 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it depends what one means by 'survey'. Is this something to which attention was turned? Of course it was. I told him, in my first words when I got up to reply to him, 'parking, for example'. Of course these things were considered, and it was considered, how could people on top floors be moved away? How could extra parking be added? Would it be sufficient parking? Could the area, for example, at the entrance below Tankerville be used for additional parking for Moorish Castle Estate and would that be sufficient? Could the multi-story car park in the area of Devil's Tower Road take more parking from Laguna Estate if there were to be more flats in Laguna Estate?

260 Of course these things were considered. The officials who are working for the Government today are the same officials who were working for the Government before and they considered these things and presented the Government with their views in respect of them.

Did we carry out a survey in terms of questioning the people living in the estates about it? No, Mr Speaker. That is what the consultation process was about – the consultation process which went about later. I think it is perfectly normal to do things in that way which we consider to be appropriate.

Hon. D A Feetham: But doesn't the Chief Minister think that in relation to a project of this kind where one is not dealing with the building of something on a flat piece of ground where there are residents around, and you are always going to have those kinds of issues in Gibraltar... You are always going to have issues in terms of, for example, balancing housing needs of people with the quality of life and rights to light, rights to view – although there is no right to view – but those kinds of issues in the context of a small community like Gibraltar are always going to arise.

But is it not the case that this is different, because here you were proposing to, effectively, add another floor onto an existing estate, impacting very, very directly on the people living in that estate? Does it not really show a lack of thought and planning on the part of the Government of, effectively, making that announcement without actually bothering really to do in-depth studies and at the same time consult the residents as to whether this was a good idea beforehand or it was not a good idea, and whether it was supported by residents or it was not supported, given that they were going to be impacted very, very directly by this particular project?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we just cannot get it right, can we? If we do a traffic survey, but we do not say what we think the results of that survey should be when we put it out to the public, we are told that we do not know what we are going on about and that we just want the public to write it for us and that that is not leadership. If we say, 'Look, these are the plans that we think work', when we go out to consultation for the public, we are told, 'Oh, you determined all of this before you started the consultation.'

Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Members are here to do the political job that the Westminster system requires them to do, which is to hit us so that they can try and come over here – that is the adversarial system – but they have got to make up their minds. Either the leadership of Mr Bossino prevails, which is the one that says when you go out to a consultation process, you need to know where you are going, because you are there to lead Government; or the leadership of Mr Feetham prevails, which is you must consult on everything before you go out to present your plans for consultation. In other words, I have to knock on every door in Laguna Estate, Moorish Castle Estate and Glacis Estate and carry out a survey before I am able to take plans to the DPC for guidance and consultation with the general neighbourhood Tenants' Association and go out to a meeting with them.

We have done it the way that we have done it. We think it is the most appropriate way to do it. But let me ask him this: although it was not adding an extra floor, but it was much more inconvenient than that, what public survey – I say rhetorically, as I know he is not here to answer questions – did the previous administration do in Rosia Dale, in Cumberland, in Vineyards, before they built the cell block that is Cumberland Terrace's today, creating, in effect, a tunnel where Cumberland Road is? When they built Nelson's View destroying the water tanks that had victualled Victory and many other ships, what public survey was carried out there? (A Member: Hear, hear.)

What happened there was that they had created, Mr Speaker, such a housing problem in Gibraltar that at the last minute, in the final term and a half, they had to do everything possible to create housing – and one is tempted to say 'bugger', but one can't – but 'there goes public opinion' and 'there goes the survey', and 'let us just build as high as we can, as square as we can and as ugly as we can', and 'who cares about parking', because it is all very well to have one allocated parking per flat? Who cares about parking when most people have two cars per flat? So who cares about the density in those areas? Who cares about the right to the view, that we all recognise does not exist? Who cares, even, about the rights to light that do exist and have stopped some of those projects?

Mr Speaker, they have got their model of survey and consultation, which we think does not work. We have got our model of consultation, which we think not only works, but has been seen to work in this process and in particular in respect of these estates. We are judged by the electorate every four years, each team, on whether ours works or it does not. Theirs obviously appears not to have worked at the last Election, and ours, I understand, is by 237 votes that the hon. Gentleman calculates prevailed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really has a habit of not answering the question. The reality is that they announced, under a great, great fanfare, the construction of these extra floors, going to the extent of saying, 'These are the forgotten estates', and it is them that actually forget to consult the people there who are most directly affected! Really, it must be the most unfortunate choice of words, this phrase that must have been coined by the Chief Minister himself, 'the forgotten estate', when they themselves actually forgot to conduct the most rudimentary consultation –

A Member: There is no question there.

Mr Speaker: I am hoping there is one at the end.

Hon. D A Feetham: – the most rudimentary consultation with residents of the area.

330 Does the hon. Member know this, for example, does he know how many extra parking spaces would have been needed in order to cater for all those extra flats that were going to be constructed on the top floors of those estates?

335 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, these ‘forgotten estates’ are rightly described in that way because they were forgotten for the time that the hon. Members were in Government. That is why it is absolutely appropriate to call them ‘the forgotten estates’. That is why the fanfare is there, for the refurbishment plans that are at last going to be enacted by this administration for the people in those forgotten estates – estates, Mr Speaker, forgotten – I dare say, in reminding the hon. Gentleman of his immediately previous question – forgotten even in respect of the very serious anti-social behaviour that was occurring there in respect of the tobacco matters that we have just debated.

340 I assume that he also coined the phrase ‘the forgotten estates they forgot to consult’, because it is all about that, isn’t it, Mr Speaker? It is all about catch phrases – even adopting ones that others have already coined before, like ‘U-turn this’ and ‘U-turn that’. Politics is not about catchphrases, Mr Speaker; it is about the opportunity to make people lives better (A Member: Hear, hear.) and that is what this Government is going to do in those forgotten estates, make their lives better. (Applause)

345 I would tell him, Mr Speaker, in respect of the number of parking spaces, it would have been estimated at least that we should be able to have one extra parking space per flat and provision was being made on that basis. The whole issue was this: can you by adding one parking space per flat create such a scheme that will satisfy the parking needs of the area? And in some areas you could not (A Member: Exactly.) because in Glacis, there is already not one parking space per flat. In Laguna, there is not one parking space per flat. So if you plan to add something and you plan to add one parking space per flat, you are still, nonetheless, compounding the problem that was there. This was the issue to go out to consultation on and these are the things that we talked about with the Tenants’ Associations and with the people who live in the estates. That is the feedback we have got and this is not just, Mr Speaker, an issue about parking spaces; it is about many other issues.

355 The one thing, Mr Speaker, that I hope he is not trying to get away from is that these estates were forgotten by the previous administration. They were totally abandoned. Mr Speaker, some people say to us that they felt at least abandoned, because they were traditionally seen as not providing the hot bed of support for the hon. Member’s party. Well, Mr Speaker, I will give them the benefit of the doubt and I will believe that is not why they forgot them. They just forgot them, Mr Speaker. We will ensure that they are never forgotten again. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: What a load of waffle, I have to say!

365 Mr Speaker, does he not recognise that the previous administration did a great deal for some of these estates. In Laguna Estate alone, there was considerable beautification of the estate. The sheds were built across the estate, although I am told that, in fact, in relation to the sheds, the hon. Gentleman’s Government has actually put a stop to that work. In Glacis Estate: pitched roofs were put into Glacis Estate, the lifts were also renewed in Glacis Estate.

370 The problem with the hon. Gentleman is that he may make a better point by overextending the point that he makes. This is the problem with these catchphrases. (Interjection) He is the one that makes the... He is the one that overextends himself. He is the one that makes the mistake by calling them forgotten estates.

375 He may have a valid criticism in saying, ‘Well, perhaps you should have done this and you didn’t do it’ – look, maybe. No Government actually does everything and no Government is beyond criticism and I, as the person here who is asking the question, if he has a valid criticism, I will accept it; but not that they were the forgotten estates.

380 On the basis, the hon. Gentleman says that they will not be forgotten, why was this commitment – which happens to be a flagship commitment during the first year of his Government – why was it not in their manifesto? It was certainly in ours, the question of the cladding, for example. Is this something that has occurred to the hon. Gentleman during the course of the first few months of his Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Gentleman to page 47 of the GSLP Liberal Manifesto which reads as follows:

385 ‘We will complete the programme of refurbishment, beautification and lift installation on existing Government estates where this has not already been finalised.’

If he reads further down Mr Speaker, on page 47, in the paragraph headed 'Refurbishment and Beautification':

'This will include re-cladding buildings in Glacis, Laguna and Moorish Castle Estates, as well as adding lifts if possible.'

Mr Speaker there is a splendid shot of what the re-cladding is likely to look like which takes up a lot of our manifesto, so I think, Mr Speaker, that he has forgotten what was in our manifesto, if he prefaces, or if he ends his presentation with that question.

Mr Speaker, it is clear that this question of the forgotten estates has done damage. It hurts, I can see, because whenever they come back at me and say that I am waffling, this is, as we analysed you in the course of the debate on the Appropriation Bill, that sort of attack is the best form of defence in the sort of leadership that Mr Feetham is likely to represent for the GSD.

Well look, Mr Speaker, if it hurts, I am going to say it over and over again: Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates, the forgotten estates, the estates that were abandoned; Landport House unpainted for something like 40 or 50 years, Mr Speaker – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) the only one that remains unpainted.

Look, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentlemen and Lady want to say to us that they did not forget Glacis and Laguna, that they built them sheds – well, Mr Speaker I think people want a lot more than sheds in life. A shed may be important, but people want a lot more than sheds in life. I do not recognise this idea that any shed programme has been stopped. What I will tell the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, is that what is going to happen in those estates is designed for a purpose. It is designed to make the lives of the people who live in those forgotten estates better. It is designed to show those people that they are not forgotten as they were before the 8th December. The forgotten estates are forgotten no more and if the hon. Gentleman forgets to read our manifesto again, I forgive him. I know it is such a brilliant document, it hurts his eyes to read it.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say that there are so many promises in that manifesto, to so many people, so individually targeted that I am afraid that even I sometimes forget the promises that the hon. Gentleman opposite –

Hon. Chief Minister: Apology accepted.

Hon. D A Feetham: – had made.

But look is it not the case that it is not only about you forgetting to consult the very same people that you say are forgotten but that the Government did not in fact do its homework, because in answer to my questions, he has already said, 'Look, we were looking at it and it was a question of one parking space per flat that we were building and it just simply did not work out.' Well, that exercise did not require any consultation with anybody. That exercise was capable of having been done and that conclusion was capable of having been reached before the announcement was made. Is it not the case that the reality is that this was a half-baked, half-cocked idea that the hon. Gentleman or I don't know who in his Government came up with, which was ill conceived from the very beginning?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, 'do its homework', 'half-baked': once again, the politics of phraseology, ignoring how to deal with the substance of issues.

Mr Speaker, this was not half-baked. This was not a question of homework not being done. This was an exercise which the Government did and then took to the people who would be involved in it. I took it, Mr Speaker, to the Tenants' Associations and then to the tenants themselves. I am not running away from something, if I take it to that level of consultation. I am not running away from something, if I go to the heart of the area which is going to be affected and spend time with the people there, talking about this issue of how they feel about the parking, etc because ours, Mr Speaker, is not the policy of phraseology, it is not the politics of sound-bites; it is the politics of substance.

Mr Speaker, where is the difference? Very simple: we have an ambitious pledge in our manifesto. Our manifesto, of course it is ambitious and we are convinced that we can complete it in this term of office. Why? Because we are ambitious for Gibraltar. That ambitious promise is that everybody who was on the housing waiting list on 8th December will have a home before the next General Election.

Well, Mr Speaker, let us be clear: is that not what we should all be trying to achieve? Is that not what the aim should always have been? How is it, Mr Speaker, that we go from a housing waiting list of 200 people in 1996 to a housing waiting list – a soul destroying housing waiting list – of 1,500. Well, look, Mr Speaker, it must mean that their policies for 16 years were half baked, that their policies for 16 years were infected with an absence of homework. It must mean, Mr Speaker, that for 16 years they forgot not just Glacis, Laguna and Moorish Castle Estates, but the mounting number of people with real social and personal problems who were putting their names on the housing waiting list and never likely to see the light of day.

Our policies, Mr Speaker, are not about being half-baked, although I will remind him that a soufflé is half-baked and it is one of the most expensive dishes on any menu. It is about ensuring that we house everybody who needs a home. That is why the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister has said this morning and I repeat this afternoon, we have to marry the competing interests of those who need homes and those who will need to suffer some disruption whilst homes are built around them.

Mr Speaker, in this instance, we think we did a fine job to take this particular issue to the people who it would have affected the most. I think that is exactly the sort of way to run Government. It is a pity he does not share my view. He might have found himself on this side of the House again, if he did.

Hon. D A Feetham: Whether I or anybody on this side of the House will find ourselves on that side of the House is not up to him and it is not up to me. It is up to the people of Gibraltar in a democratic election.

But look, he keeps on harking back. Yesterday he made a point about the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition not giving credit where credit is due for things that were achieved during the GSLP Government. Today he is actually doing exactly the same thing in relation to housing and in relation to the achievements on housing of the GSD Government. Or does he not recognise – and I am asking him a question – the fact that it was this party that constructed the first Government rental housing estate in Mid Harbours that has nothing to envy at all any private estate, anywhere in Gibraltar, the first Government housing rental estate since Varyl Begg in the 1970s – not the AACR Government, not the GSLP Government – since the early 1970s. I think it was an IWPB Government. Does he not recognise that the GSD Government built hundreds of homes for the elderly at Bishop Canilla and other areas?

Does he not also recognise that, whatever the controversy may have been initially in terms of the location of Nelson's View, of Bay View and other estates on co-ownership that the Government built, Waterport Terraces, that these have provided homes for many ordinary working class Gibraltarians? Does he not recognise that? Is he not prepared to concede that it is never a question in politics of simply saying, 'No, you did absolutely nothing'? It is a question of actually recognising what your opponents have done, criticising what is wrong, recognising what they have done and not just simply stand up and make these wide-netted criticisms which really does your side of the House and the entire Parliament no credit at all.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Where has he been for the last 15 years? (laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, (Interjections) look, let me take each one of those points in turn.

Of course, the next election will be a democratic election where people will decide between this party and our coalition together as GSLP Liberals, and whoever is then in Opposition. I do not know whether the fault-lines in the party opposite will mean that it survives and fights the next election or not, but so be it. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) It will be a democratic election and I will tell you why, Mr Speaker: because the Government will not be spending £150,000 on a rag to promote its policies. There will be a level playing field and it will be a democratic election – point one.

Do I recognise that they built the Mid Harbour Estate? Well, Mr Speaker, in all the time that he and I have known each other, we have debated with each other across the floor of the House or elsewhere, I have never suggested to him that he is stupid. I would be grateful if he did not suggest that about me. Of course, I recognise that, because it was built in the time that they were in Government and the Hon. the then Chief Minister used to go down to the building site in his work boots as Clerk of Works, they built the Mid Harbour Estate. Of course I do. Of course I know that the Waterport Terraces and Bishop Canilla were built on their watch.

And yet Mr Speaker, does he not recognise that there are still 1,500 people on the housing waiting list, because if he looks back to what I said – and I really think that I need to persuade the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister to provide us not just with the excellent service that the House is now providing in Hansard which we get so quickly compared to what we used to get before, but we need to have voice recognition and immediate Hansard, so that the hon. Members can go back quickly and see what it is that we have said and not debate the ghost of the shadows of what they would rather we had said.

I did not say they had done nothing. I said that there were 1,500 people on the waiting list, that the list had got longer, rather than shorter. That is exactly what I said. And for that, Mr Speaker, by attacking me as he has, he has recognised that that is actually the case.

Or is it that he believes that we have manufactured the extent of the housing waiting list? I will tell him, he can go back and look at the answers of the then Minister for Housing, the Hon. Fabian Vinet, much missed in this House as he is, used to give the data. It is easy to plot from where one was in 1996, after the Election, to where Gibraltar ended up after they had been 16 years in Government.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman talks about making announcements in great pomp and circumstance and fanfare, and then having to withdraw. Well, I can think of a number, in the 16 years that they were in Government, not least the many uses to which Lathbury Barracks was going to be used and the many times that great projects were announced for there.

But I will remind him only of this, Mr Speaker (Interjection): before the 2007 General Election, a great project was announced, with great fanfare, of 700 homes at what became the Mid Harbour Estate in the area of Rooke. Mr Speaker, as he knows, we have raised no complaint in respect of the Mid Harbour Estate, other than whilst in Opposition, the Hon. Mr Bruzon attended on a number of occasions issues to do with cleaning, etc, which I am sure were concerns shared across the floor of the House.

But what I will tell him is, Mr Speaker, in case he does not know, was that that estate was only for 400 flats. So where was the homework, Mr Speaker? How could they announce an estate of 700 apartments, and yet, shortly thereafter, send out, in time for the Election, 400 letters allocating flats? How could they announce 700 flats, Mr Speaker, and yet build only 400 on the same footprint?

Well, Mr Speaker, ours is not the politics of phraseology, but if anything is half-baked, Mr Speaker, it must be the announcement that there were going to be 700 flats in the area of Rooke.

Look, the 400 people who got homes are very happy, Mr Speaker. Of the 1,500 who are on the housing waiting list, perhaps 300 also thought that their time had come and it did not.

I am also reminded Mr Speaker, and I should tell the House, that before the announcement of the building of the extra floors above Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates, the Hon. the Minister for Housing had met with the Tenants' Association, just before this was announced, and said to them that he wanted them to go back and take the views of the tenants and that this announcement was going to be made so that we could have the input of the community generally.

Mr Speaker, in those circumstances, I think all of the comments that the hon. Gentleman makes can be seen to be an appeal to the grandeur and the importance of this House, only in an attempt to avoid the obvious criticism that must be levelled at them for having allowed in 16 years, Mr Speaker... They did not have one term in office – for all we know, we may only have one term in office. They were privileged, Mr Speaker. They were privileged to have four, Mr Speaker, and in those four to allow the housing waiting list to go from 200 to 1,500, they know in their heart of hearts that that is one of the most monumental failures for which they are responsible, and I can understand why it is that they do not like to be reminded of it.

Mr Speaker: I have allowed considerable latitude away from the original Question on Glacis and Laguna and Moorish Castle Estates. We are now talking about general housing policy. There are Questions for the Minister for Housing later on in the Order Paper. I suggest we leave it at that.

Tripartite Agreement Instituto Cervantes

Clerk: Question 816, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Chief Minister still think that the best thing to come out of the Tripartite Agreement is the Instituto Cervantes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know what our position in respect of the Instituto Cervantes has been and is, namely that it should not be housed in a public building or given any advantage in respect of a Government tenancy.

I was very happy that this red line of ours was adhered to when the Gaggero family generously provided a part of one of their buildings for this purpose. Since then, I understand that the Instituto has been very successful in offering its courses.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I do not want to get him into trouble with his erstwhile leader who is in close proximity to his left, but with respect, he has not answered my question. (Interjection) With respect, he has not answered my question.

Does he or does he not still think – as he indeed said in Madrid, earlier on this year – that the Instituto Cervantes was the best thing to come out of the Tripartite Forum?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not recognise that quote.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman has a version of events of what happens in his meetings with representatives from Spain, and then the Spanish press and those on the Spanish side that come out of that meeting have a quite different version altogether. We saw an example of Mr Masa coming out of the meeting with the hon. Gentleman saying that he had been promised that he could commence fishing on 16th August, and then we had a different version altogether emanating from the Chief Minister. But it was widely reported – Europa Press, amongst other places, indeed in the national press – that he had made these statements.

Is he saying that he cannot remember or is he saying that he did not make them?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that he prefers to believe everything that anybody who is in dispute with the Government says, rather than what the Government may say (Interjection) – he would much rather believe a Spanish newspaper than the Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

If he wants to talk about what happened in respect of the statements made by Mr Masa, etc, he just needs to go back and look at what actually was said on the day, and look at the detail of it, rather than just try and take the flavour of it and assume that that is what is correct.

Europa Press is a news agency, he will know, Mr Speaker. If Europa Press gets something wrong, then all the reports that he sees in the newspapers thereafter will also be wrong because Europa Press is the source of the story.

I do not recognise that quote, Mr Speaker. If that is what was put in the story it must have been a misquote. I will tell him with sincerity, Mr Speaker, that he should be wary of the Spanish press, because very often it unconsciously misquotes things that are said, in my view. It may be that it sometimes consciously misquotes, but it sometimes, I believe, unconsciously misquotes things.

I have seen an interview that I gave in Seville last week, today, in a newspaper called El Economista, that includes several misquotes. They are not issues in respect of which one would necessarily want to take issue with the journalist. In fact, Mr Speaker, there is very little point, sometimes, taking issue with journalists on minor quotes, because all that is going to happen is that a corrigendum will appear in a printed version of a newspaper somewhere, and may not even be seen.

But in this respect, Mr Speaker, I can tell him honestly that I do not recognise that quote. He can decide whether he believes Europa Press or me, but that is not the sort of thing that would slip off my tongue.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, he says it and I accept it.

But let me ask the question: does he think that the Instituto Cervantes is a good thing or a bad thing?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman accepting what I have said.

The Instituto Cervantes is in Gibraltar under agreements done by the administration that he represents. As far as we are concerned, the point we have consistently taken and we have been very clear about this is that the Instituto Cervantes – or A N Other entity, in particular a Spanish entity, given the political issues – should not be given, before others who have been waiting, some of them for years – associations, clubs, institutions – a public building from which to ply its trade. That was the position, under the Córdoba Agreement. We were very clear about what our red lines were, in respect of that agreement, and behold, the building that was used was not a public building.

Mr Speaker, there are many institutes in Gibraltar, many organisations. The Government does not express views about them. As far as we are concerned, this is an entity which is trading legally in Gibraltar and not in a public building, and if it were in a public building, we would have something to say about it.

I will tell him that I believe – and perhaps he has the same feedback – that it is trading successfully amongst those who do not have Spanish as a second language and avail themselves of the services provided there for that purpose. I do not think it should be a matter for me to provide an opinion in respect of any emanation of the Spanish state, other than those who take us on and require to be told what we think about them and in particular the Instituto that is here.

Religious minorities Discrimination within job applicants

Clerk: Question 817, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state what steps the Government is taking to ensure citizens from religious minorities who cannot work either at certain times of the week or year are not discriminated against when applying for jobs in any part of the public sector?

635 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this administration has asked the Chief Secretary to set out clear guidelines for all public bodies to address this important and sensitive issue.

640 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I congratulate the Chief Minister. I think that is the right step. Certainly, when I was a Government Minister, I... and I cannot remember any other colleague of mine ever discussing this as having been an issue, but it certainly on two occasions now has come to my attention. It probably has come to the attention of the Chief Minister.

645 Has he had any input at all in those guidelines or is he just simply allowing the Chief Secretary to deal with this? Or has he set any kind of parameters for the Chief Secretary to come up with guidelines?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe that the two occasions that have been brought to his attention have been brought to my attention. That has happened, I am very sorry to say, in the past 21 or 14 days. The Government has acted immediately, and the remit to the Chief Secretary from the Government is to say that this has never been an issue before, and it should never be an issue again.

650 Because when people have minority issues, they need to be accommodated as best as possible, because that is what our Constitution provides and that is what everyone in this House stands for.

655 Gibtelecom and AquaGib
Pension issues

Clerk: Question 818, the Hon. D A Feetham.

660 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the Government engaged with the Unions or the employees of Gibtelecom and AquaGib to address pension issues which the GSLP said during the election had been raised by those employees with them?

665 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he say whether that engagement is at an advanced stage, whether the Chief Minister is also confident of reaching agreement in relation to these issues?

670 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, when you are dealing with issues like this, there are two concerns. There are issues of principle, and then there are financial issues.

675 What I have asked the Financial Secretary to do, with the individuals concerned and the companies concerned, is to first of all ascertain what are the financial implications of this, and then to meet with me to consider further the issues of principle.

I have met, I believe, on two occasions with the representative of the staff and the unions with the Financial Secretary. Calculations are ongoing. I believe that staff members have had, through their unions, legal assistance also, working on these issues to try and understand the financial implications and at the same time, we are going to consider the principle of what they have raised, to see whether it is possible to reach an accommodation, either in one particular way or another.

680 But those two issues need to be considered separately: principle and finances.

Hon. D A Feetham: I do not want to in any way jeopardise any negotiations that are taking place or talks that are taking place between his Government and the unions. Is there a reason why he should not provide, if I ask him now, what are the type of issues and principles that are engaged in relation to this, why he should not provide it across the floor of this House? Would he prefer that I write to him, so that he could write back to me in relation to that?

I am just concerned about the issues of principle.

690 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, frankly, I do not think this is something to write about, but I am quite happy to have a conversation, if he can bear it, about the issue, if he likes, behind the Speaker's Chair.

695 Hon. D A Feetham: So he is not prepared to tell me what kind of issues of principle – (Interjection) No, no, I mean across the floor of the House. If there is a problem –

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, sorry, Mr Speaker, I misunderstood. I thought the hon. Gentleman had said that he assumed that I would not do that here, because we are negotiating about them, and would I write to him about it. What I have said is, this is a complex issue. It is much easier to have a conversation about it than it is to write down what the issues are – not because I am afraid to see it written down, but because I think where we are in the negotiations, it is worth talking about.

But I assume he was approached, and his party was approached before the election as well, and he will understand what the issues of principle are. They are not complex, but there may be some disagreement between the unions or at least, between the members of staff that the union represents and the Government, and perhaps even between the union and the Government and the members of staff. But those, I think, are not insurmountable. With good faith, we can try and get over them in some way.

The finances are another issue that we need to look at as well, to see whether it is possible to accommodate in some way.

I am confident that going forward it is going to be possible to square the circle – but as the hon. Gentleman knows, I am an optimist.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, sometimes he is too much of an optimist, but there is nothing wrong with that.

There is a duty... there is a duty... We are here to ask questions, you are here to answer them and answers are given for the benefit of Hansard. Forgive me if I did not make myself clear, but is there a reason why you ought not to tell me what those issues of principle are across this House? If he says, 'Yes, I can't because there are negotiations, it might prejudice negotiations', or for whatever reason, I will accept that, he can tell me in the lobby of the House; but if there are not those kind of issues, will he tell us so that everybody else understands them, what those issues of principle are?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am ever so grateful that he is going to allow me to be an optimist. It is very kind of him.

Look, Mr Speaker, it is the reason that he prefaced his question twice, that we are in the middle of negotiations and I do not think it is sensible, for any of the parties, that this matter be ventilated across the floor of the House, otherwise I may as well conduct my negotiations with the union with them sitting where the mace is. That was never the case when the hon. Gentlemen were here on this side of the House. We believe ourselves to be open and transparent, but that does not mean that we can have a webcam in my office and people can just see everything that is going on, because that would not give business efficacy to the business of Government.

I am happy to give him the information, if he can bear a conversation with me behind the Speaker's Chair.

Hon. D A Feetham: I accept that and I am not asking him for the nitty-gritty of all the details; neither was I asking him to bare openly within this House what those details are. It is the points of principle that concern me that may in fact have an impact across other sectors. I do not know whether they do or they do not, but that is what concerns me – the points of principle, not the detail.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is why they are points of principle, because they could have consequences across other sectors.

Hon. D A Feetham: Not necessarily.

Hon. Chief Minister: 'They could have' means that they do not necessarily have to. That is what 'could' means.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

Ms Joanna Hernandez
Details of post with Employment Service

Clerk: Question 725, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Employment and Social Security provide the following information in respect of Ms Joanna Hernandez: (a) in which month of this year she started work with the Employment Service; (b) the job title; (c) salary grade; (d) whether the position she is now holding is a temporary or permanent one; (e) whether the position was advertised either through the GDC or externally so that anyone in Gibraltar could have applied for the vacancy; and (f) provide a copy of the job description.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government employee to whom the Question refers was unfairly dismissed by the Members opposite when they were in Government. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The Tribunal included in its findings the recommendation that she should be re-engaged within the Government service on the same grade and salary scale that she enjoyed as manager of the Dr Giraldi Home.

This recommendation was implemented in July of this year. The title is that of manager. The employment is with an indefinite contract and she is seconded to the Employment Service as manager of the Supported Employment Company Limited. The role in that company is to co-ordinate the provision of supported employment and to advise those who are seeking such employment.

Hon. J J Netto: Was this particular position a vacancy that was there available before the employment of Ms Joanna Hernandez within the Employment Service or was it a new extra employment opportunity within the Department?

Hon. J J Bossano: The managers of the companies are not paid as managers of the company; they are all required to do that additional work, in addition to their employment in the public service which they get paid for in the public service.

Hon. J J Netto: [Inaudible] perhaps you misunderstood me or perhaps I should have expressed the supplementary –

Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, I understood.

Hon. J J Netto: – question in a different way.

Hon. J J Bossano: I have understood precisely.

Hon. J J Netto: What I am trying to do is to follow the logic in the sense that in his original answer he was saying that she was a manager, obviously she was working as a manager for Dr Giraldi Residential Home, what was then the Social Services Agency. Now, if I follow the logic of your answer she is now working as a manager in the Employment Service, which is a different entity altogether.

In other words, what has superseded the Social Services Agency is the Care Agency; but she is not working for the Care Agency, she is now working for the Employment Service and I believe or suppose that she is a GDC employee, as opposed to a Care Agency employee.

So what I am asking is whether there was, prior to the employment of Ms Joanna Hernandez in the Employment Service as a GDC officer, a vacancy for the things that he has now said.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes and I am telling him, Mr Speaker, the job that she is doing as manager of the company is the same as the job that is being done by the manager of the two other companies. Those three managers are not jobs that are vacant which are advertised and recruited from outside. They are duties allocated to staff of the Employment Service and therefore the people who are in the Employment Service that manage the three companies are people that, if the companies were not there, would still be in the Employment Service.

This particular employee was re-engaged in the Government service – that is to say, in the Civil Service – in accordance with the recommendations of the Tribunal and she has been deployed to the Employment Service and she has the grade and the pay scale of the manager of the Dr Giraldi Home which is what the recommendation was.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, notwithstanding the fact that she had already been paid compensation as a ruling from the declaration from the Chairman, can the Minister tell me whether the salary scale is the salary scale of a HEO?

Hon. J J Bossano: I have just told him, Mr Speaker, the salary scale is the salary scale of the manager of the Dr Giraldi Home. The recommendation of the board was that she should be paid compensation and re-engaged in the Government service, but not in the Care Agency, given the fact that there might be a problem of friction in returning there and that is the recommendation that has been accepted and implemented by this administration. So what does he want to know?

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, what I am trying to find out is that this particular lady, she was working as a manager in Dr Giraldi Home and for that she was the manager, so she had a wage which was to do the managing for that particular function.

What I am trying to find out is, as a manager now working for the Employment Service, whether she is in that particular grade of a HEO or perhaps some other particular grade, and I think that is a reasonable question. I am sure that the Hon. Minister would know whether she is working... Because the point is when she was working for the Social Services Agency, that grade at that time was not a grade HEO or GDC equivalent. It was a specific grade of the Social Services Agency before.

So what I am trying to find out now, something that does not exist right now, because obviously the Social Services Agency has been superseded by the Care Agency, she is now working in Employment Services, whether that is the grade of the HEO.

Hon. J J Bossano: I know what he is trying to find out and I have given him the answer on each and every time that he has repeated the question.

Mr Speaker, the Tribunal made a ruling. The ruling was compensation and a recommendation of re-engagement by the Government of Gibraltar, in any Government Department but not in the Care Agency, on the scale and the grade that the person that had been dismissed enjoyed at the time that she was dismissed, and that is what we have implemented. If that pay is the same as the pay of a HEO or an SEO or any other grade, I am not able to tell him, but I can tell him that he can find it in the Estimates Book. It is a public document which will show what the manager of the Dr Giraldi Home is employed at and that is the pay.

Hon. J J Netto: No, no, there is a difference. There is a difference because as the Minister of Social Services will be able to inform him, at the time that particular post of manager was, as I said before, manager only and exclusively of Dr Giraldi Home. The post of manager, which it is now, is a post of manager for Dr Giraldi Home and St Bernadette – in other words, a general manager's post – which is a different thing to what happened before. So it is not the correct analogy in terms of what you have just said.

Can I put it in a different way, if he finds it so difficult? (Interjection) Can he actually say what is – the point, in whatever grade of manager – the annual wage that she will be getting?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I can tell the hon. Member that what we have done in her case is that the recommendation of the Tribunal has been implemented and therefore, we have taken the pay of the job that she was doing, we have looked at what is the equivalent pay now and we have given her that pay.

There are peculiar examples of things that have happened in the GDC, where for example, a monitor was recruited on an advertised rate of £18,000 and within a month of having started work, he had negotiated for himself an increase of 50% in his pay, backdated to the day that he started work. (Laughter) So, if he wants me to give him the details of anomalies, I can be here a very long time, pointing to all the anomalies that have existed.

As far as I am concerned, no political decision has been taken on changing the ruling of the Tribunal. The political decision has been to accept the recommendation of the Tribunal. The Tribunal said that she should be re-engaged on what was the equivalent pay of what she was getting, which she would have been getting, if she had not been sacked.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask the hon. Gentleman, did the Tribunal, when it made its compensatory award to Mrs Hernandez...? I ought to have actually declared an interest: I represented Mrs Hernandez to begin with, in fact, before she asked me to pass the file to Mr Picardo and he took over from me. I am duty bound to declare that. I think Mr Bossano represented her later on as well. (Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.) But did the compensatory award, awarded to her, did that include future loss of earnings? Is he absolutely certain – I have not looked at the judgment, but certainly I am going to look at the judgment after we leave tonight – that the total package of compensation awarded to Mrs Hernandez did not take into account the fact that reinstatement was not a possibility in this particular case and that, therefore, she is not now in a position where she has obtained that compensation – which she would not have got, if she had been reinstated – plus reinstatement? Is he certain of that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not pretend to be a lawyer, but I am not sure that the hon. Member is as conversant with employment law as I am. (Interjection and laughter) In fact, if she had been re-engaged at the time that the ruling was made, then of course clearly, which is when the Chairman intended that it should be made, she would have been paid a lot of money between then and now.

The Tribunal made the ruling that this should be done in conjunction and in addition to the compensation for loss of earnings between the last day that she worked and the day that the ruling was made and the Government agreed to pay the compensation, but said they would resist the re-engagement recommendation, and I regret to say, in my view, incorrectly – the Tribunal did not go back and revise the compensation in the light of the fact that the other half of the recommendation had been rejected.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is what I am asking.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes. It did not happen, I think, incorrectly.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask another supplementary question and that is that this particular post that this lady is occupying today is a post that should be ring fenced, in accordance with the agreement between the union and the Government. In other words, whenever a post exists in any particular organisation within the GDC, it should go internally within what are the employees of the GDC, to be able to apply, or at least to have the opportunity to apply to a post which is quite senior, particularly if I understand correctly, she is holding a position of HEO.

Has the Government therefore not consulted the union to waive the agreement, so that, given that it was ring fenced, they can put it to one side so that the Government could proceed in this direct appointment?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am afraid, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member does not have a clue what he is talking about. (Laughter) There is no ring fencing in the GDC. What his administration agreed with the union was that whether they liked it or not, everybody was made a civil servant on 1st October 2011 and then, when the GGCA objected to the transfer of people into the Civil Service – I must say in a way which was completely in breach of General Orders, vetting and everything else – when a list of names was provided to the Public Service Commission by the Office of the Chief Minister with instructions that they had to rubberstamp it, they were all given letters informing them that they were now civil servants as of 1st October. (Interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, I am not going to waste opportunities to remind Members of things that they seem to have forgotten! (Laughter and interjections)

It was as a result of that objection that the previous Government backtracked on what it had told the GDC employees, which was that they were going to be integrated into the Civil Service unconditionally, and they said that those who were in the Civil Service were now ring fenced, meaning that they could only apply for each other's jobs.

When we came in, since it was our intention not to dissolve the Gibraltar Development Corporation, which was the previous plan, I thought it would be fair to the people who had been told they were going into the Civil Service without an alternative because their previous home was being demolished with them still in it, that they should be given an opportunity to come back home, and I am happy to say that 75% of them did come back home.

The ring fenced ones therefore are the ones who stayed in the Civil Service in accordance with the union agreement. There is no union agreement covering GDC employees on ring fencing; nor is there anything to prevent the GDC employees from adding new jobs or having people seconded to it. Indeed, some new jobs have been created recently because some people from the Regulatory Agency are going to be within the GDC. So this is something... and indeed, once the jobs are in the GDC, it means the that the people there will have more opportunities in the future than those who, in my view, mistakenly accepted the philosophy of the GSD and stayed ring fenced, because they will never get out of the ring.

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I think that in a previous supplementary question, the answer by the Minister did not actually provide, in my opinion, the information I wanted, and that was whether he could tell me exactly what is now her annual wage at the moment. Can he actually tell me what is her annual wage? That is the first thing.

The second thing, which is part of the original question, is can he provide me with a job description of the work to be fulfilled? Can he do so?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the question says 'salary grade'; it does not say her annual wage. I do not know what she is getting paid. I know that the salary grade is the salary grade of the job that she had in the Dr Giraldi Home. I do not know whether it is the equivalent of an HEO or not. I know the other two companies' managers are Employment Service HEOs, but I do not know whether her grade is the same, below or above. So I cannot tell him that. I can tell him that the grade is the grade of the Giraldi Home that she would have got had it been implemented at the time and her pay has been increased since then.

As regards her job description, I have given him what the role in the company is, and the role is to co-ordinate the provision of supported employment and advise those who are seeking such employment. So in fact the actual thing that she does on a daily basis is to look after the 48 people we have now got in supported employment who have now got indefinite contracts who are placed in different places to liaise with the relatives of those people, because they are people who need support, and to make sure that they have not got any problems where they are placed. So we have now got a dedicated person doing that and, in addition, interviewing people who approach us on the basis that they have got somebody in their family who they feel might require the working environment that this company is providing, which they welcomed when I answered it in fact.

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just one final one, a supplementary question. If I were to write to the Hon. Minister in relation to what is her annual wage at the moment and whether she is within the HEO, will he be able to provide me with that information?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I will get her to write back to you, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

Notices of termination of employment

Clerk: Question 726, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many notices of termination of employment have been received by the ETB since 9th December 2011 divided by (a) by nationality; and (b) by industry sector?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 727 and 728.

Notices of termination/engagement of employment
Number received from public sector since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 727.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many notices of engagement of employment has his Department received from employers in the private sector since 9th December 2011 divided by nationality and by industry sector?

I am informed that the computer programme does not provide the function that gives a breakdown by industry sector of the terms of engagement.

The breakdown now of the terminations in the public sector is as follows. The total in the same period is 357 from the public sector and the breakdown of the 357 is Gibraltarians, 239; Moroccans, 7; other British, 57; other EEC, 10; non-EEC, 1; Spanish, 43.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask the hon. Gentleman – I have no supplementaries – for a photocopy of that answer so that I can take it with my papers?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I suppose...

Hon. D A Feetham: It need not hold the proceedings up, because I have no supplementaries.

Clerk: I have a set here which I can have photocopied.

Future Job Strategy
VTS trainees/employees placed with private employers

Clerk: Question 729, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many VTS trainees/employees under the Future Job Strategy are currently placed with private employers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer, Mr Speaker, this Question with Question 730 and Question 731.

Future Job Strategy employees Employers who have signed ETCL contracts

Clerk: Question 730.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please provide a list of the names of employers who have signed contracts with Employment and Training Company Limited in respect of the Future Job Strategy employees?

Clerk: Question 731.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many VTS trainees/employees are placed within the public sector under the Future Job Strategy identifying the Department, Authority or the Government company in which they are placed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the number of VTS trainees/ETCL employees placed in the private sector is 381.

The number of employers that have entered into partnership agreements with ETCL since 1st February is 140. These 140 employees have been contacted to see if they have any objections to having their names made public.

The number of VTS trainees/ETCL employees placed with the public sector is 185 in the following Departments: Care Agency; Ministry for Enterprise, Training and Employment; Department of Social 1065 Security; Department of Consumer Affairs; Department of Education; GHA; Gibraltar Citizens' Advice Bureau; Gibraltar Court Services; Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority; Gibraltar Tourist Board; Ministry for Sport, Culture, Heritage and Youth; Human Resources; Royal Gibraltar Police; Statistics Department; and Treasury.

1070 Hon. D A Feetham: If he does not know the answer because he requires notice, I will give him notice next time around, but does he have a breakdown of the number of trainees in respect of each of those Government Departments and Authorities?

1075 Hon. J J Bossano: It is a list that would only be true on the day that I give it to him –

Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely. I understand that.

1080 Hon. J J Bossano: – because it is not that people are there fixed. So the answer that I would give today would not necessarily be accurate tomorrow. I would say that about half of the people were people who were already in those Departments under the VTS and the other half are people who have come in since February. Of course, it includes the people in the Gibdock and the people in the Construction Training Centre and people who were in the Treasury and in the Tax Office because they were doing, at the same time some kind of business course, in Bleak House.

1085 But if he gives me notice, I can give him where they are the day I give the answer; but the following day the numbers will have changed. They are not static.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I understand that. What I am asking him is does he have the information there in front of him today?

1090 Hon. J J Bossano: No.

Hon. D A Feetham: Alright, well I will give him notice next time round.

1095

GTC apprentices
Number in training and employers

1100 Clerk: Question 732, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many apprentices registered at the Gibraltar Training Centre to NVQ standard are currently undertaking training and how many of these apprentices are in placements with training providers, identifying the employers?

1105 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this Question together with Questions 733 and 734.

1110

Gibdock apprentices
Number in training and employers

1115 Clerk: Question 733, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many apprentices registered at Gibdock Training Centre are currently undertaking training and how many of these apprentices are in placements with training providers, identifying the employers?

1120

Clerk: Question 734.

1125 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government advise how many school leavers have this year applied for apprenticeships in the Engineering and Construction Trades, Social and Health Care, Business and Administration programmes, or any other, and how many of these will be taken on as from September?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1130 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, there are 42 trainees at the Construction Training Centre, of which 17 are in placements – in the Housing Works Agency, nine in GJBS and three with private companies.

There are 34 trainees in the Gibdock Training Centre, of which 13 are placed with Gibdock, 13 in Government Departments and eight in private companies.

1135 The Government has not yet finalised the arrangements for apprenticeship schemes that will be introduced in the current financial year.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to the identification of the employers, I did make a note that, in relation to a previous question I asked, he had said he was going to ask the employers whether they had objection to their names being identified. There is another Question on the Order Paper that we will come to in a moment, and that is one of the reasons why I actually need the names.

1140 Does he not accept that... or is there any reason in principle why the Government will not identify the names of these employers, if one or two of them come back and they say... or however many come back and they say, 'We do not want you to identify our name.' Is there any reason in principle why you ought not to identify the names of these employers?

1145 Hon. J J Bossano: The reason in principle is that I think when we approached them to take on a trainee and sign an agreement with us, we did not tell them we were going to publish their names. Therefore, if they do not want their names published, we will not publish them.

1150 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but does he not recognise that there is a legitimate interest in the Opposition in knowing the names of these particular employers, given, for example, that it has certainly come to the attention of this side of the House that a number of these companies that have actually signed contracts with Employment Training Company Ltd are actually start-up companies? Therefore, it is part of the legitimate role that the Opposition plays in actually analysing Government business and what the Government is actually doing in respect of what is a very important area of Government policy.

1155 Therefore, we have a legitimate right to make that analysis and to see how many are start-up companies, how many, for example, are then involved in other types of transactions with the Government. There is a Question on the Order Paper in a moment about how many of these companies that take on these trainees also have the benefit of a contract with the Government, and whether there is some form of quid pro quo for example, taking place here, where the Government is saying to somebody, 'Start up a company, you take on board five of my trainees and I will then give you a Government contract to clean lifts or to renew lifts' or whatever.

1160 Does he not accept that that is, it is legitimate for us, bearing in mind our role, to know the identity of these individuals/companies?

1165 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I think if the hon. Member is interested in knowing how many of the people that have got partnership agreements are actually providing work for the Government, that is the question that he is asking. Why he should want to know what the name of the company is, I do not see that provides him with any further information than what he wants to know.

1170 Hon. D A Feetham: I have just explained.

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not agree with him that it is either necessary or legitimate to want to know the name, because it is not... I have told him the number of companies there are and therefore, I think he will find, when we get to the other Question, that the immense majority of those companies are not doing anything for the Government.

1180 Hon. D A Feetham: Of course the immense majority are going to be doing nothing for the Government! I would be very surprised if 140 companies had Government contracts, but you see the point is that 10 of those companies or a number of those companies do have something to do, or are providing services to the company under contracts that may be very beneficial to those companies. We certainly have a legitimate interest and a legitimate need to know, for example, whether those companies are start-up...

1185 I am just giving you an example. This may not be the entirety of our concern in relation to this. We are entitled to know whether the Government is actually potentially saying to individuals, 'We will give you x, y and z contract, you take on five of our employees'; indeed, also, look at who exactly is behind these companies and draw whatever inference, or whatever conclusion we feel is politically legitimate for us to draw. That is politics.

1190 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, if it is politics, I can tell him that there is a company called Capurro that has got a contract for £32,000 a month with a bus company. I do not know whether I can draw any inference from the relatives of Mr Capurro, but I can assure him that nobody is getting a contract from the ETB that is anywhere near that or at all, and that therefore, since he is asking me about 140 companies and he already knows that the vast majority of them have nothing to do with getting any contracts, then I think it is legitimate that I should ask my staff to contact the 140 and say to them, 'Look, Mr Feetham wants me to publish your names. Do you have a problem?' If the 140 say no, we will publish 140; if 139 say no and one says, 'Yes, I have a problem', then we will publish 139 names.

1200 Hon. D A Feetham: Do you have a problem in providing me... – and I do not want to, for the avoidance of doubt, resile from the position that this information ought to be provided publicly and that we are entitled to this information. But will he in the first instance, at the very least... Look, I may be on a trail of inquiry that leads to a dead end. I do not know. There are people that come to me – maybe even the same people that used to go to him and he used to say, 'Look at what the GSD is doing, look at what they are favouring x, y and z, friends of theirs'. Well, those same people may be coming to us now. It is perfectly legitimate for us to at least investigate that and say, other people that, for example, are getting contracts in respect of lifts in the estates and are they starting up companies and is that linked to the Future Job Strategy and trainees? I do not know.

1210 Is he prepared to provide me with a list of those companies, in private? I will not make it public, unless it is provided across the floor of the House. Right. So, in other words, he does not suffer in his position, because I am not going to make them public, unless he does so across the floor of this House, so at the very least, I can see whether there is anything in some of these complaints that are coming to me, or there is not.

1215 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know what complaints he is getting. I know what was being said before and I do not know whether everything that was said before was true, or none of it was true.

All I can tell him is, Mr Speaker, that certainly he has chosen a very bad example in pointing to the lifts, because all the guys that are repairing the lifts all live in Algeciras and they all have to be called via Madrid for them to come here and repair lifts. A situation I intend to put right, by the way.

1220 Hon. D A Feetham: I know that you intend to put it right.

Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Don't you agree?

1225 Hon. J J Bossano: Perhaps you prefer that they should be in Algeciras?

Hon. D A Feetham: No, Mr Speaker, as long as it is done fairly and openly and everybody is given a chance to compete for those jobs, absolutely, I agree entirely with the hon. Gentleman.

1230 Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell the hon. Gentleman –

Hon. D A Feetham: What I would not agree is, of course, if it goes to one or two favoured individuals a dedo, as the Chief Minister likes to – 1235 Hon. Chief Minister: That used to happen before 8th December.

1240 Hon. J J Bossano: Right. Mr Speaker, I can tell the hon. Member that when it comes to the other Question, he will see that either the people that are telling him stories are not telling him the truth, or his fertile imagination is running away with him.

Clerk: Question –

1245 Hon. D A Feetham: He hasn't... Just give me one more opportunity.

Is he prepared to provide me with that information with the names of those companies on a confidential basis, so that I can make my own enquiries, or not?

I think that is a fair request. It does not prejudice the position of these individuals at all, because you are providing them to me on a confidential basis. Your concern is providing it publicly across the floor of the House. If you are prepared to do it, I am –

1250 Hon. J J Bossano: I think I will wait until I get the replies from the 140 people that we have contacted and see what happens.

1255 Future Job Strategy sheltered employment schemes
Number of people placed in public and private sectors

Clerk: Question 735, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1260 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many people are on the sheltered employment schemes under the Future Job Strategy who are currently placed in the private and public sectors?

1265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, there are currently 48 persons who are employees of the supported employment company, of whom 29 are in the private sector and 19 in the public.

1270 Hon. D A Feetham: Are new entrants closed to the scheme? I know I am coming back to the previous Question, but I note that, in relation to the previous Question – they are all related, it is just that there are different aspects of the Future Job Strategy – he said that, for example, in relation to the construction sector, that no decision had actually been made as to new intakes in September. Has a decision been made in respect of sheltered employment in respect of new entrants?

1275 Hon. J J Bossano: It is demand led. It depends on how many people need the support, but clearly it is something that needs to be carefully assessed, because this is, we are giving indefinite contracts to the people here and we do not expect them to ever be without work and we are giving them as a consequence, basically a job for life, which I think they deserve. Therefore, really, we need to be sure that those we are helping are those that really need that help and we do not finish up with a lot more people who could in fact be in the market, albeit being given a helping hand at the beginning.

1280 The position now is that with the numbers we have got in ETCL, we are now waiting to see some movement out into the placements, so that we can recycle that money and take new people in. I think in the case of the apprenticeships for the construction that I am hoping to achieve, that will mean that once we have got that ready, that could be quite a big influx into that particular company, but we are not likely to take very many before that is ready, because frankly, I want to make sure that I have got enough funding in the moneys that the House has provided, so that we do not run out of money when the time comes to finance the construction training, which is a very important part of the strategy.

1285 But in this case we can expect it to be gradually increasing, that is the answer.

1290 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. The position in relation to these is different from the position – (Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.) These are jobs for life.

1295 What you are saying, so that I understand it, is effectively that in relation to the main bulk of the trainees in the Future Job Strategy, the decision as to whether to take new people on depends on the success of actually ensuring that private employers take these people on permanently. The reason for that, I presume, is because the £11 million that has been estimated as a recurrent cost every single year is based on a finite number of individuals (Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.) and you have got to effectively re-site some of them. That is the position.

1300 Hon. J J Bossano: That is the position.

Hon. D A Feetham: Alright.

1305 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just for the purpose of clarity more than anything else, when we talk about 48 persons in sheltered employment schemes, what do we actually mean by the definition of ‘sheltered employment’? Are we simply talking about disabled persons or perhaps we are talking about disabled persons and some other groups of people – to mind, it could be some looked after children, it could be perhaps some people may have, as I was saying before, an affliction by drugs and alcoholism...?

1310 Hon. J J Bossano: No, the majority of this – I would say probably something like 40 out of the 48 – were in January under the VTS. Some in fact are in the... There is one young lady in the Employment Department, who has been there for eight or nine years – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) in your time, that is right. She is now in the Employment Company and she has now got an indefinite open contract and therefore she is paying social insurance, she is treated as an employee and she will eventually get an old age pension and community care. That is one of the benefits of putting her in this set-up.

Clearly, as a result of monitoring this more closely now, because we now have a dedicated company that does that and nothing else, we have found some people who were not happy where they were and therefore, maybe they were not turning up but they were still getting paid. Those we have moved sideways into other areas and now we are at the stage where we think the 48 are now settled, the bulk of them in the private sector, 29 and 19 in the public sector, but we keep in touch with the individual, the placement provider and the family to monitor that. We are now looking at other people that we might be able to help, but it is not intended for people who have got, if you like, social problems and therefore have difficulty in competing in the market. The people with social problems we will deal with, ETCL and clearly, for those people, we are in a position to persuade employers who are doing work for the Government to take those cases on, which I think was happening previously anyway with the VTS.

Hon. J J Netto: I can accept everything that the Hon. Minister has said, but what I was trying to find out, by the application of the words ‘sheltered employment’, that we were not just talking about people with disabilities. I think in fact there is a Question on the Order Paper later on for the hon. Lady, in relation to some looked after children – this is what I am trying to find out – (Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, no.) which may or may not be included under the 48. Perhaps he may need notice of the question, but whether we are talking about that group of people or perhaps we are talking, in addition, to people with disability, some people may have an affliction in the past with drugs or alcoholism.

Hon. J J Bossano: Although the Question is about sheltered employment, the answer is about supported employment. I assumed that ‘sheltered’ was intended to refer to the questions I have answered before, which were the people in the VTS which then became the employees of a dedicated company that is [inaudible]. Those are not people with personality problems, shall we put it that way. These are people with disabilities which means that they would not be employed anywhere if we were not providing the wages. Those people will be, presumably, as long as they are fitting in and are happy and they are able to live and work in an environment where generally, if they have been there a long time, frankly, moving them elsewhere is a problem, because they are surrounded by people who are caring and are kind to them and they are happy there, and that is what we want.

We monitor it, just to make sure that that continues to be the case. We find slots for those who would be taken on from now on, where, as I have said, I believe about 40 of the 48 were there in January and that we have not taken all that many on.

But what we do not want is that this should be converted into something for which it is not intended.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just ask one more question in relation to this?

I have had a couple of constituents that have approached me that have said that they have gone to the hon. Gentleman’s Department with employers that are effectively willing to train them, and willing to enter into contracts with Employment Training Company Ltd.

In relation to those people, the position then really is again exactly the same, that unless... It does not matter whether they have a placement or they do not have a placement, whether they have an employer who is willing at the end of the day to guarantee them a job, unless there are two people who drop out of the system because they are permanently employed, those within the system, that you are effectively not funding any more of these trainees...?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, in the immediate future, like next week, that would be the case. But if we are approached by people in the category that the hon. Member has told us, then in fact they will be given priority and be put at the top of the list, because there is movement all the time taking place, within the 500 people we have already got, there are some people who are now coming out of the system and new people who are going to be taken in.

The increase is being, if you like, rationed at the moment, because I do not know whether I am going to be needing to find money for 50 construction apprentices or for 100 or for 150. Therefore, I do not want to use money that could provide financing for construction apprentices – we made a bid for a much bigger sum from the EU to support a much bigger volume of apprenticeships, and therefore at the moment, the intake is not as big as it has been, for example, until the month of July, when we were taking on something of the order of 25 months.

But the answer is, if those people have been to the Department, then they should make sure that there is a record of their having been there and that they are being put at the top of the priority list, so that they can be called as soon as we can start paying them. We want to encourage that.

1375 Hon. D A Feetham: No, they say that they have been. They say that the staff tell them that it is on your desk, so no doubt the Hon. Minister will get to them when he –

Hon. J J Bossano: As soon as I can, absolutely!

1380 Hon. D A Feetham: – as soon as you can. Of course, there is no question of those particular ‘jobs’ going to anybody else. If they are the ones that are –

Hon. J J Bossano: I understand.

1385

Employers with Future Job Strategy trainees
Number also providing goods/services to Government

1390 Clerk: Question 736, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many employers who have signed contracts with Employment Training Company Limited in respect of Future Job Strategy trainees have the benefit of a contract with the Government, any public authority or Government-owned company for the provision of any goods and/or services of any kind?

1395

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1400 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker, there are nine employers with partnership agreements with ETCL who are working on Government contracts that I am aware of – that is to say that the Department has something to do with it.

Whether any of the other 141 employers are providing any service or any work or anything to any other Government Department, because they have got a tender for something or other, I do not know.

1405 But I can tell him that the nine are the ones that are involved in the system introduced by the previous administration of allocating contracts from the Employment Service, on the basis that they took on people who were on the unemployment list.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is pretty nifty footwork, if I may say so, it really is!
But the question is not about your Department. The question is:

1410

‘with the Government, any public authority or Government-owned company’.

In other words, it is with anybody. Is there any particular reason why he has come to this House today, and not in a position to answer what is a pretty clear Question, which is –

1415

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I don’t think it is a clear...

Hon. D A Feetham: – which is that I am asking how many of these people who have signed contracts with Employment Training Company Ltd also have the benefit of a contract for the provision of goods and services with the Government? Very clear.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it may be very clear to him, but it is only clear to him, given the assumptions that he is making which he revealed in the supplementaries previously.

1425 That is to say, I can tell him that as far as the Department is concerned, there are only nine, because the Department has only been involved with nine companies that are doing work in the construction sector predominantly, where they are on the approved contractor list. These are companies that put a bid for work, under the system introduced by the previous administration when they announced they were suspending the tender system and that people have to submit... There will be a rotation of contracts for the construction work and I think, out of the nine, eight are construction companies, and these eight construction companies take labour from the ETB as required by the original conditions. They are not allowed to use subcontractors, they have to use local labour, and they have to put a competitive price, which has to be monitored on the basis of what is the going rate by other people. Those are the only nine.

The only way that I can answer the hon. Member’s question is to write to the 139 – or the 131 – that are not involved with my Department, and say to them, ‘Are you by any chance selling something to any Government Department – any service?’

1435 The other Departments do not know that they have got a contract with me, and I do not know whether they are selling anything to anybody else. That is the whole point. Therefore the hon. Member assumes that there is somehow, within Government, a system where, when people put a tender, they get asked 'Do you have a partnership agreement with ETB?' No such system exists.

1440 Hon. D A Feetham: The problem with the hon. Gentleman is that he answers my question, anticipating my supplementary.

You have come to this House anticipating that I am going to accuse you personally of 'You have effectively enabled the employment of x number of Future Job Strategy trainees by offering contracts, lucrative or otherwise, to those employers.'

1445 Look, I do not know, it depends on the answers and the information that you provide as to whether that conclusion is justified or it is not justified. But the reality of the situation is that you are not only... you are representative, you are responsible, obviously, for areas within your responsibility. The Future Job Strategy is within your responsibility. Unless I ask the same question to every single Government Minister, I am never going to get the answer, according to your logic.

1450 Is he prepared to provide me with the answer to this question? He can do it by way of correspondence to me, or is he not? Because that information ought to be available.

Who are the people who have entered into contract with Employment Training Company Ltd, who have the benefit of a contract with the Government for the provision of goods and services? Very simple.

1455 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, first of all, I am not answering a question on the assumption of his supplementary before the supplementary is put, because by mistake, he put a supplementary in respect of the previous question instead of this one. He actually said in the previous question what he has just said now, that he wanted to know the names of the 140, to see if any of them have the benefit of a Government contract and I told him to wait till he came to this question, when he might be surprised. Those are precisely my words of 10 minutes ago, and in fact what I have told him is, there are, as far as I am aware, nine and only nine of the 140.

1460 If I have tomorrow a partnership agreement with Barclays Bank, then presumably, by the logic of the hon. Member, I ought to announce that the Government has got a bank account with Barclays Bank, even though the bank account is not the bank account of the ETB and if I have a partnership agreement with Morrison, then I have to say that somebody from the Health Authority went across and bought something from Morrison's.

1465 Because he is asking me whether anybody in the 140 supplies anything to the Government.

1470 Hon. D A Feetham: [Inaudible] answer the question!

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, that is the question. Yes, that is precisely the question: 'Has anybody who has signed an agreement with me makes... the benefit of a contract with the Government, any public authority, any Government-owned company, for the provision of any goods or any service?' So that means that if tomorrow the bus company buys petrol, I am supposed to be able to say to the hon. Member, 'Shell has got a partnership agreement with me and is now selling petrol to the bus company.' That is precisely what the question asks.

1475 My answer to him is there is no connection between the sale of petrol to the bus company and the partnership agreement with me. Whether there is a connection, or whether he could impute a connection or whether he could argue that there is a connection is in the one where the partnership agreement and the allocation of the work happens in the same place, and there are nine in that category.

1480 Hon. D A Feetham: He really does like to obfuscate and confuse issues and weave in and out and dodge –

1485 A Member: He's calling the kettle black. (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: It is very simple. There are 140 private companies that have entered into a contract with the Employment and Training Company Limited. How many of those provide goods and services for Government?

1490 And you are refusing to provide me with the answer to a quite legitimate question. Is it because you have something to hide? Because that is the inference that I need to draw from your refusal to provide me with the information!

1495 Hon. J J Bossano: I am not surprised that he draws that inference, he served in a Government that had plenty to hide all the time! I am not at all surprised that he thinks that everybody is like they were – and he is wrong!

As far as I am aware, 131 do not supply anything to the Government, but I cannot guarantee him that tomorrow somebody is not going to buy a cup of tea in a coffee shop where there is a partnership agreement with me. In that case, that coffee shop will be selling something to the Government.

The inference that the hon. Member is trying to invent is that, somehow, the 140 companies have been selected in preference to competitors because they signed partnership agreements and others do not. That is complete and utter fabrication on his part, and there is no justification for it.

As far as I am aware, none of the other companies have anything to do with the Government in terms of any contract, as far as I am aware. But since I am writing to all of them, to see if they are happy to have their names revealed, I will say to them, 'Mr Feetham wants to have your name, because he suspects that I am bribing you with contracts. So please can you answer the two questions: (a) do you mind your name...; and (b) can I tell Mr Feetham that you're not being bribed' and that should keep him happy.

Mr Speaker: I think really we have quite exhausted the subject, unless there is a different question.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, Mr Speaker, he has either misunderstood or on purpose he really is clouding the issue. It is not a question of the provision of goods and services at a level of the tea lady or somebody buying some sandwiches for a meeting that the Chief Minister may hold at No. 6 Convent Place –

Mr Speaker: With respect –

Hon. D A Feetham: It is the benefit of a contract – that is the question.

Mr Speaker: No, with respect, I have got the question here –

Hon. D A Feetham: It is the benefit of a contract.

Mr Speaker: No, with respect, goods and services of any kind – which to me, includes tea and coffee.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, it is the benefit of a contract with the Government!

Mr Speaker: Yes, for the provision of goods and services of any kind.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course but – Yes, but it is the provision of a contract with the Government!

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Selling a sandwich [inaudible].

Hon. D A Feetham: It is the provision of a contract. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker: Order, order! I get the point. 'Of any kind' could relate either to the contract or could relate to the goods and services.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, it relates to the goods and services provided under the benefit of a contract. (Interjections) Nobody could be misled. There is no way in a million years that the hon. Gentleman could possibly, from this question, have the... 'Well, Feetham, what he really wants me to do is to provide him with information of how many sandwiches the Chief Minister actually buys from Amar opposite No. 6 Convent Place.' (Interjections) It cannot possibly be the case!

What we are asking is the benefit of contracts. Now, you do not want to provide me with the information – fair enough.

A Member: The Speaker has ruled!

Mr Speaker: I think the question has been posed and I have allowed it to be posed several times in as many variations as possible. I think the answer has been equally consistent in that manner. We really cannot pursue the matter much further.

Hon. J J Bossano: Can I make clear that my answer is, as far as I am aware, and I have no reason to believe that I am mistaken, the only nine people who are providing any kind of service on any kind of contract are the nine that I have mentioned. Is that clear enough for the hon. Member?

1560 Hon. D A Feetham: That is in relation to his Department. (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) Right.

Hon. J J Bossano: As far as I am aware, no other –

Hon. D A Feetham: That is not the question.

1565 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, no other Department that issues contracts asks the prospective contractor, ‘Do you have...?’ None of the Departments know who I have contracts with and I do not know who they have contracts with, so there is no connection between the two! Does he not understand that? That is what I have been telling him all the time! If there are people in...

1570 If tomorrow, the Health Authority (Interjections) or the Tourist Office has given a contract out, it is not the case that in deciding between one offer and another offer, they ring me up to see whether there is a partnership agreement in place. That is not the case. The only Department that dishes out work to contractors in the construction industry and in the cleaning industry is my Department, in continuation of the policy introduced by the previous administration in 2010. (Banging on desks)

1575 Mr Speaker: I think really we have got as far as we can get with that question.

1580 Gibraltar Savings Bank
Question 739 withdrawn

Clerk: Question 739, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1585 Mr Speaker: I think that has been withdrawn, according to the note I have here.

Clerk: But he has got to do it formally. He has to formally withdraw it.

1590 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the Question is withdrawn – all aspects of Gibraltar Savings Bank business are actually exempt. I had a look at it in the Act.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

1595 Commonwealth Park
Budget for Park and car parking

Clerk: Question 740, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1600 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, will the Minister for the Environment provide details to this House of the budget established for the creation of the Commonwealth Park providing, where possible, breakdowns in relation to anticipated expenditure on the Commonwealth Park itself versus the expenditure anticipated for the creation of the car parking facilities related to that project?

1605 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the works for the creation of the Park have still not been awarded, therefore it is not considered advisable to publicly state the budget allocated to the project.

1610 I am, however, very pleased to announce that the Kusuma Trust Gibraltar has expressed an interest in participating in the project with a view to enhancing certain aspects of the park area for the benefit of the people of Gibraltar along the lines of its previous involvement in the Europa Point project, when it constructed the Kusuma Promenade as part of a wider improvement of that area.

1615 The cost of the creation of the car-parking facilities related to the project is also the subject of Question 784/2012 and will be answered by the relevant Minister.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I asked the question of the Hon. Minister, to whom I am grateful for the answer, and I am obviously... I thank the Minister specifically for informing us that the Kusuma Trust 1620 has expressed an interest in participating in a manner similar to which it did in relation to the beautification of the area of Europa Point.

However, the reason why I asked the question, Mr Speaker, fundamentally is because in a statement by the Chief Minister in Press Release 505/2012, which was part of an exchange that we had in relation to the Commonwealth Park openly, he said that:

1625 ‘The project was likely to be completed ahead of schedule and under the budget originally estimate.’

Now, Mr Speaker, it is really very easy for the Government – certainly it looks very easy from this side of the House – to say that something is coming in under budget and earlier than originally estimated, without those figures or those dates actually being made public. So I wonder whether perhaps the Minister will reconsider the question and share with us that budget which was originally estimated to give us the opportunity and anyone listening in, to assess whether or not the Park is coming indeed under budget and coming ahead of schedule.

1635 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no, for this reason: because I have already dealt with this point on a number of occasions in this House in respect of a number of projects. We know what we think these projects were going to cost, because we costed our manifesto. The works have not yet been awarded. It does not make any sense to say what we think it costs to develop the Park, because if people who are going to offer to be the developers in a process of obtaining the work might be prepared to do it for less.

1640 In those circumstances, Mr Speaker, all we would be doing is spending more than is necessary of the taxpayers’ money in order to deliver these projects. If the hon. Member wants, at the end of the legislature, I will tell him what on our ledger we had as a potential cost for each of these projects, and what in fact they have cost, and then he can see which have cost less and which have cost more. I am even prepared to tell him how quickly we thought we could achieve the completion of certain projects, and then he can compare it to when we have. And that would be the appropriate time, Mr Speaker.

1645 I think I recall that in those exchanges I told him, also, that the Government was not going to be incurring more cost than it had to, to deliver its manifesto. Mr Speaker, the answer is the same in respect of this issue as it was in respect of the issue he was raising in those press releases, because what we will not do is allow those who may be seeking to do the work to know how much we had allocated it for it, so that even if they would do it for less, they will do it for more.

1650 Hon. S M Figueras: Subject to reservations in relation to the publication of those figures at that time, I am happy to accept that answer.

1655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I just ask the Chief Minister, what is the difference between providing my hon. and learned Friend the information in relation to those figures for this particular project and announcing that the extra floors plus the cladding at the ‘forgotten estates’ was £80 million?

1660 Hon. Chief Minister: Very simple, Mr Speaker, that those works were to be undertaken by GJBS. They were not going to go out for anybody to competitive tender.

Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively the position in relation to the cladding of the housing estates is that that is going to be done by GJBS.

1665 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are in Parliament at Question Time to elicit information – not for information to be elicited again.

Mr Speaker, we have had this debate. He needs to go back to the Hansard and look at what we said then. It has already been clarified.

1670 Hon. D A Feetham: No, with respect, this has not been clarified. The importance of this is consistency, consistency on the Government side.

Hon. Chief Minister: This is ridiculous!

1675 Hon. D A Feetham: Now, you have – No, it is not ridiculous! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) I am sorry, you may not like the question because you do not know the answer, or you make it along, as you go along.

1680 Hon. Chief Minister: That is silly!

Hon. D A Feetham: That is the problem. (Interjections) You provided an answer, you cannot provide the information because it is going to go out and it is commercially sensitive and I quite understand that. I have asked you what is the difference between that and the so-called forgotten estates' £80 million? You have said GJBS.

1685 So, I am just simply saying to you, the cladding therefore is going to be done by GJBS – and you do not want to answer (Interjection) because you do not want to –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

1690 Hon. Chief Minister: And I am saying to you, in previous answers to previous questions, that has already been answered and you have forgotten, like you have forgotten the estates!
Go back and look at the Hansards!

1695 Hon. D A Feetham: And I am suggesting to you that you make things along as you go along! That is the problem with you.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

1700 Hon. Chief Minister: And I would suggest many more things to you about what it is that you do!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

That question has been put. An answer has been provided. Another question, if necessary, but not shouting across the floor, 'You have' or 'You haven't'.

1705 Next question.

Western Beach pollution Update on resolution

1710 Clerk: Question 741, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1715 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment report such developments as may or may not have occurred in relation to the resolution of the Western Beach pollution issue, further to recent questions and discussions in this House on the matter?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1720 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there have been no further developments to report at this stage, but the Government is continuing to pursue alternatives to attempt to resolve the matter as soon as possible.

1725 Hon. S M Figueras: Perhaps the Minister... I have to say I am obviously, as I imagine many of those concerned individuals listening in will be, I am quite disappointed by the answer, because this is a matter that has been going on now for some time. The Government has been in charge of resolving this since 9th December 2011 and whilst it has been acknowledged in this House by myself and by my learned Leader of the Opposition in debates with the Hon. the Chief Minister, it is a complicated issue, given its international dimension and the fact that it is out of our control, however, the Minister has assured us on a number of occasions that it is being dealt with as a matter of the highest priority, because certainly, I think there is agreement across the House that it is a matter of the highest priority.

1730 I recall that the latest position was that it was with the legal team that was assessing its options. Is the Minister able to provide any kind of update in relation to that process, given the fact that it has been a couple of months since we last discussed it?

1735 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I can report that fortunately, the levels of pollution at Western Beach this summer have been totally acceptable, or certainly within the acceptable limits.

1740 Mr Speaker, there are obviously legal implications to this, which, as I said in my answer, Government is continuing to pursue, but because of the sensitivity of this, it is not something that I would like to say here in public, but I am more than willing to share with my hon. Friend outside the session in the lobby.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the offer, one which I shall certainly take up.

Jellyfish in Gibraltar waters Management of issues

1745

Clerk: Question 742, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1750

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, Can the Minister for the Environment provide further detail of advice sought, if any, in relation to the various issues that have arisen from the prevalence of jellyfish in our waters in recent months and, in particular, whether the Government is considering taking any specific action in the management of this issue beyond raising public awareness?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1755

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Department of the Environment obtained the advice of marine biologists and in-house environmental scientists regarding the recent upsurge in jellyfish number in our beaches. The advice received is consistent with published scientific literature, in that outbreaks of jellyfish numbers, particularly the 'mauve stinger', will continue into the foreseeable future.

1760

The accelerating degradation of the Mediterranean from overfishing, loss of predators such as marine turtles, eutrophication, decreased oxygen, climate change, and species introductions is believed to be expounding the problem of increased jellyfish numbers.

1765

In relation to any possible actions that can be undertaken, the Gibraltar Tourist Board, in close consultation with the Department of the Environment was specifically tasked with identifying possible measures to reduce jellyfish numbers at our beaches. Proposals have now been received from two local companies, which are currently being considered by Government.

1770

Furthermore, the Department of the Environment will continue with the Gibraltar Tourist Board to explore measures that could ameliorate the situation for the start of the next bathing season in 2013, apart from raising public awareness.

1775

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer. Is the Minister able to provide us with any more detail about specifically the last part of his answer and the measures that are being contemplated to ameliorate the situation before the start of the next bathing year, which is essentially where I was going fundamentally with the question?

1780

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, a number of possibilities have arisen and in fact were considered this summer, including one which was discarded because clearly it would not have had a significant effect, which was the removal of some jellyfish, because with the numbers that there were in the region, no matter how many we removed from near our beaches, there would have been more coming in very, very quickly.

1785

One consideration that has been... one possible measure that is being considered – and as I say, it is being considered only – is the provision of exclusion nets to keep jellyfish out of parts, at least particular parts of our beaches, so that they cannot come in and have relatively safe bathing. This is similar, although at a very different scale, to shark exclusion that is done in other parts of the world.

1790

Hon. S M Figueras: And just by way of one final supplementary, more for clarification than for anything else, is this something that will continue to be considered and the policy of the Government is to pursue this, if the situation gives rise to the need for it?

1795

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Indeed, Mr Speaker, in the likelihood that, because of the degraded state of the Mediterranean, for all the reasons that I have mentioned, this could continue for a few years to come, this is something that we are already considering, with my hon. Colleague Mr Costa, in advance of next year's bathing season.

Barbary Macaques Number exported since July

1800

Clerk: Question 743, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister confirm whether any Barbary Macaques have now been exported since I last asked a similar question on this matter during the July session of Parliament, specifically Question 621/2012?

1805 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, no, sadly no Barbary Macaques have been exported since the last Parliament session. The International Primate Protection League and the Born Free Foundation are still pursuing the possibility of finding locations 1810 willing to accept monkeys from Gibraltar.

Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister or has the Minister been made aware by either the International Primate Protection League or Born Free Foundation of any avenues specifically that are being explored into which some inroads have been made in relation to their export?
1815

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, in fact I have been in discussions for some time now. There is a possibility of one centre in the Netherlands which specialises in the conservation of Macaques and we are discussing various possibilities with them.

1820 Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister at liberty to say the numbers of apes we would be looking at in the Netherlands option?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Approximately, in multiples of 30. They would be whole groups and it would either be one group or two groups; I doubt whether three, so it would be 30 or 60 or thereabouts. But we 1825 still do not have confirmation of destination.

Hon. S M Figueras: And finally, Mr Speaker, is the Minister able to provide us any kind of indication as to how long he expects this particular exploration of an option may take?

1830 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, sir.

1835 Thinking Green Conference
Fees for former US Vice-President Al Gore and Juan Verde

Clerk: Question 744, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1840 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please provide details of the anticipated fees for attendance at the Thinking Green Conference in October of this year by former US Vice-President Al Gore and Juan Verde as key note speakers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment

1845 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker the cost for Vice-President Al Gore's participation in the Conference is subject to final adjustment. It is anticipated that this sum will be paid by third party sponsorship of the event and not by Government.

A full account of the cost of the event will be published after it has been held.

1850 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful to the Minister for that answer, although, however, it is not the answer I was seeking from the question.

I understand that the cost will need to be adjusted because I have certainly, since I asked the question, become aware of the fact that there will be tickets sold and that therefore the cost will be adjusted by whatever income that may generate. The question itself was whether he was able to provide me with an 1855 estimate of the fees for attendance by the two speakers.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said, this is still subject to final adjustment.

1860 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm whether there is a ball park? I imagine that before signing a contract or even pencilling in the date for the arrival of a former US Vice-President there must have been some kind of ball park agreement of cost.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, because we are at the moment still sealing sponsorship deals, it is a matter that I think I should not go further on, at this stage, until we seal this and a full adjustment has 1865 been made. As soon as it is done, I am very happy to make that information available.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful and I am fully understanding of the situation that the Minister is alluding to.

1870 However – and I shall not press further than this supplementary – whilst I understand that money secured by sponsorship will adjust the ultimate cost to the Government of the project, the attendance fee is something that will be set by the speakers in question. I note that the Minister does not want to share that figure in the House this afternoon, but I wonder whether the Minister would be as kind as to offer that information on a confidential basis, behind the Speaker's Chair.

1875 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, the information will be shared and, obviously, as I said earlier, a full account of the costs will be published. I am very happy to have a conversation with the hon. Member opposite, who I know directly is looking forward to the event.

1880 Hon. S M Figueras: Indeed, Mr Speaker.

'Dog Parks' in residential areas Progress

1885 Clerk: Question 745, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1890 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can Government state what progress it has made to date in respect of its manifesto commitment to provide 'Dog Parks' in residential areas, so as to prevent the problem of indiscriminate dog fouling?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1895 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I think this is my first response to a Question from Mr Reyes, so I just highlight that. We go back a long way.

The Government has produced a proposed design for the first dog park in an area west of Harbour Views which has been presented to the Estates Management Company and will shortly be tabled at the Development and Planning Commission.

1900 This project will be the first test case and further ones will be delivered subsequently. Additionally, there are plans in hand to provide a dog park of some substantial size in the reclamation area that can be used by any dog owner wishing to provide exercise to their dog.

1905 It must be clear that dog parks are not designated dog fouling areas, so these are not being created as a means of preventing the indiscriminate dog fouling problem. They are meant as areas where dog owners can allow their dogs to exercise freely in a controlled environment.

The problem of indiscriminate dog fouling is being tackled separately, through an awareness and subsequent fining campaign, which will commence in early October this year.

1910 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

My choice of wording here of the 'provision of dog parks in residential areas so as to prevent the problem of indiscriminate dog fouling' is taken directly verbatim from the manifesto, which is why I chose those words so there would not be any misunderstanding.

Can I press him, I think the Hon. Minister said that they are in the process now of presenting to the DPC a possible project West Harbour Views, did I hear correctly?

1915 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I said that it is being presented to the management company and would then be tabled at the DPC.

1920 Hon. E J Reyes: So subsequent to that, Mr Speaker, will due notice be given to the general public of when the DPC is to deliberate on this matter? Because I must declare my vested interest. I live within the Harbour Views Estate and I know that a very, very large number – and I wish to underline and put in bold print, 'large number' – of residents have already expressed great concern about the dog park, noise pollution, not to include the smell pollution as well, that could possibly come out of it, so I want to make sure that the residents of the area may sleep soundly tonight, knowing that due notice will come out, so that they may make their due representations, as residents of that area.

1925 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in this new era of democracy that Gibraltar has entered on 9th December, all documents and the Agenda of the Development Planning Commission are published in advance on the website, so clearly they can sleep peacefully tonight, hopefully without too many dogs barking.

1930

Hon J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, first of all let me declare an interest here, because I do have a dog and I do live in Harbour Views.

Now, unfortunately, there are many dog owners who do not actually clean up after the dog has done its business. Unfortunately, I have to say that the whole perimeter pavement around Harbour Views is in a dreadful, dreadful state of affairs, which is really bad.

1935

I think the Hon. Minister did say that he was going to start a campaign of ensuring that the law is complied with. I congratulate him on that and, by all means, do start in that particular area, because there are some good owners who do the correct thing. So, that is in relation to that.

But the other thing is that this particular area, the dog park which he mentioned, is that the one which is adjacent to the football/basketball pitch in front of the Promenade?

1940

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I believe it might be, but I am not absolutely sure. I have not been dealing with this personally. It has been officials dealing with it, but I can confirm that and advise the hon. Member.

1945

I believe, some people I know who live in the area have told me that the cleaning of the area has increased recently, after they made representations. In any case, I can confirm that, early in October, we will be starting an awareness campaign which involves the Police, the Environmental Agency, the Department of the Environment, the responsible pet owners, the veterinary clinic and Rocky, who is our dog who will be leading this campaign. We will have awareness leaflets on television and an awareness day in October, where I think the whole question of dog fouling will be put across, I think in a humorous manner but taking the message home that we really have to be responsible dog owners.

Procedural

Clerk: Question 746, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1960

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, sorry, if the hon. Lady will allow me, is this a convenient moment to perhaps break for 15 minutes?

1965

Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all hon. Members?
The House will recess for 15 minutes.

The House adjourned at 5.30 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.55 p.m.

EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

1975

Cover for maternity/paternity leave Number of teachers for year

Clerk: Question 798, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1980

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, under ‘Cover for Maternity/Paternity’ in this year’s Estimates Book on page 64, £490,000 is earmarked; can the Minister for Education explain how many teachers on maternity or paternity leave does this reflect for the year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1985

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, in the same way as a Question which was asked earlier, this really is a matter which should have been raised in the course of the Committee Stage of the debate on the Appropriation Bill.

1990 Nonetheless, I will explain that the provision of £490,000 was based on an estimate of 20 teachers taking up their full maternity entitlement for 2012-13. This figure also includes cover for paternity leave entitlement for teachers.

1995 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, considering that over 40 teachers on the supply list have been employed, are there enough supply teachers to cover for these maternity and paternity leave absences, with enough supply teachers left to cover routine absences?

2000 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the result of the engagement of the 47 new teachers from the supply list is – I do not have the exact number – but I understand there are well over 40 teachers still on the supply list. On the basis that we have estimated 20 teachers on maternity leave at any particular time, there are still teachers available on the supply list to cover other absences and we have got to remember, Mr Speaker, that it is a matter of policy of this Government that supply workers are only used to cover temporary absences and not to cover vacancies. If a vacancy arises, then the vacancy will be advertised and will be filled in the normal way.

Examination Expenses Increased forecast outturn

2010

Clerk: Question 799, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2015 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in this year's Estimates Book, on page 65, an increase of £275,000 from last year's forecast outturn is assigned to Examination Expenses. Can the Minister for Education explain why there is such an increase?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2020 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the same issue arises in respect of the Committee Stage of the Appropriation Bill.

2025 However, I can confirm that the increase of £275,000 from last year's forecast outturn is attributed to a general increase in the fees charged per subject and entry. Other general costs, such as exam software upgrades have also increased.

GDC staff member for training purposes Grade and duties

2030

Clerk: Question 800, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2035 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, on page 65 of the Estimates Book under 'Other Charges – Contribution to GDC', £53,000 is assigned to a GDC staff member for training purposes, as explained by the Hon. Minister for Education at the Committee Stage of the Appropriation Bill. Can the Minister for Education tell us what the grade of this post is and the duties assigned to it?

2040 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2045 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the post is Bleak House Administrator, which is a GDC Grade 5 post. The core duties include the management and administration of Bleak House.

I do in fact have further details of the job description, where the role is described as:

'To be responsible for the management and administration of all activities taking place within the institute'

– within Bleak House. The duties are:

2050 'To be responsible for the administration and management of all professional and vocational courses taking place in Bleak House; to provide all relevant resources for such courses; to liaise with the training officer for the provision of courses within the institute; to liaise with external training providers with a view to accommodating their needs within the institute; to manage industrial and non-industrial staff at Bleak House; to ensure that Bleak House facilities are kept in a fit state; to undertake any other duty required by the Director of Education commensurate with the grade.'

2055 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is there a course or required specific qualifications for this particular post that this individual needs to undertake, in order to offer the duties that have been assigned to him or her?

2060 Hon. G H Licudi: The person who is in post... Is the hon. Member asking what qualifications the specific person in post has, or what qualifications were required when the post was advertised?

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, £53,000 does seem a considerable sum of money –

2065 Hon. G H Licudi: It is not a salary.

Hon. E J Reyes: No, £53,000 is the cost of the training, isn't it?

2070 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the £53,000 that the hon. Member refers to appears on page 65, under 'Contribution to Gibraltar Development Corporation – Staff Services'.

2075 If the hon. Member were to have looked at page 156 of the Book, which is Appendix B, which deals with the Gibraltar Development Corporation, there is a provision there which says, 'Head 17 – Education – Salaries – £44,000.' So the salary... This is a GDC Grade 5 employee; that is the equivalent of an SEO, as I understand it, and £44,000 is within the scale of the SEO. In fact, I understand that the SEO goes up to about £47,000, but because this is a contribution to the GDC, there is also an additional £9,000 in respect of social insurance and pension contributions in respect of that particular post, but the salary is in fact £44,000, and it is shown in the Book.

2080 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker. It does clarify. I clarify for the Hon. Minister: we were a bit under the impression that it was training that was going to be undertaken by the individual. No, so it is a contribution that offsets that. It does not necessarily mean that the individual is going to have to undertake any further training herself. That person was chosen and it is just a contribution for services really rendered, that is, it's services done to the Department of Education, hence why the virement of sums, yes?

2085 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is a contribution by the Government under the budget of the Department of Education. That is why it appears under Head 17. It is a contribution to the GDC in respect of all the costs attributed to that particular post.

2090 Hon. E J Reyes: Most grateful, Mr Speaker. It has certainly clarified the misunderstandings we had from this side. Thank you.

2095 Earlier opening for first schools
Women's Association desire for 8.30 a.m. start

Clerk: Question 801, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2100 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us if he concurs with, or will consider, the Women's Association desire to see First Schools open their school gates 15 minutes earlier, at 8.30 in the morning?

2105 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2110 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government has received representations from the Gibraltar Women's Association and from a number of working parents expressing a desire to see First Schools open their school gates at 8.30 a.m. The Government is currently considering those representations.

It should be noted that opening schools at 8.30 a.m. does not simply involve opening the school gates. It requires that pupils arriving at school should be supervised during this time. The Government is taking on board the views of all stakeholders and is analysing the possible educational impact of this move, before arriving at a final decision on this matter, in consultation with the Gibraltar Teachers' Association.

Bayside School students
Repeating failed GCSE core subject exams

2120

Clerk: Question 802, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2125

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education advise whether Bayside School students, who have failed their GCSE core subjects, are able to repeat these exams after a year of study, as per the set up at Westside School in their year 12G?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2130

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Department is working closely with the senior management team at Bayside School, so that students who fail their GCSE core subjects are afforded the same opportunities as Westside students.

2135

Clerk: Question –

2140

Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, Mr Speaker, yes, I think the Hon. Minister will agree, what happens at the moment is if you are female, it means you can go back to your school to resit, for example, mathematics and English and if you are male, Bayside School says it cannot cater for that.

I understand the Minister wants to enter into discussions with the professions and so on. Does he have a target date of when this might be achievable?

2145

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker – I may have misunderstood the supplementary – this is not something that we are discussing with a view to considering. The matter has been considered already and the answer that I have given is that we are already working closely with the management team at Bayside, so that those students are afforded the same opportunities.

2150

It is my own view that it should not matter, when it comes to getting the best possible educational experience, whether you are a boy or a girl. It should not matter at all, but this is a system that we have inherited. This is not a system that we would certainly put in place. It is not intended to make this political or to start making allegations as to it is your fault or it is our fault, but this is a system that we have inherited. I am certainly, as Minister for Education, not happy at all with students in one school getting some benefit which students in another school do not get.

2155

Therefore, the instruction has been and the discussion, in consultation with the professionals of the Department and now with the management team at Bayside, is that students from both schools have to have the same opportunity. It was not possible for logistical reasons, because the matter was raised during the course of this year, it was not possible to put together the arrangements for September of this year, but I am certainly intending that this should be in place by September of next year.

2160

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker. This side of the House concurs completely with the Minister for Education and he can count on the full support of us to make this a reality as soon as possible.

2165

Hon. G H Licudi: Thank you very much.

Excessive noise from motor vehicles
Persons reported and prosecutions

2170

Clerk: Question 803, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details to this House of the number of persons reported for process for offences of excessive noise in the context of motor vehicles, broken down by vehicle type and source of noise during the last 12 months, broken down by month and compared with the number of successful prosecutions during the same period, expressed on a month-by-month basis?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in a schedule that I now hand to him.

2185 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I will just start my line of supplementaries which will not be too long, with one relating specifically to the information that I have just had a very quick opportunity to look at. That is at the total at the very end of the schedule of information, there is a very helpful totalling of the offences. The total for defective exhausts on motorcycles is 16 and the total for excessive noise from motorcycles is 35.

2190 Is the Minister in a position to explain what the total other excessive noise from motorcycles may be down to? I know he may not, but if he is, I would be grateful for the assistance.

2195 Hon. G H Licudi: I am afraid I cannot help him very much, other than, in the schedule, there is a distinction drawn in respect of motorcycles between defective exhausts and excessive noise. I do not want to speculate, but one can speculate that a motorcycle might make excessive noise without necessarily having a defective exhaust.

I can find out, if the hon. Member really wants me to, (Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.) but I do not have the information.

2200 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, I cannot imagine there would be that loud a turn or indicator signal! (Interjection)

2205 I am grateful for his attempt to assist and would be grateful for some clarification on that, insofar as it may be helpful, because the point of the question, Mr Speaker, is that I am approached regularly by concerned individuals and note myself that there seems to be an increasing number... well, I do not know whether perhaps if 'increasing' number is the correct way to describe it, but a very significant instance of very, very loud motorcycles in particular, sporting after market exhausts which cause what is to the minds of these concerned individuals, and certainly myself, excessive noise.

2210 Is the Government in a position to explain what its policy is in relation to this, specifically in relation to this trend that seems to have emerged in recent times for excessively loud exhausts which are not necessarily defective?

2215 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, we do not have any particular policy on that. The matter simply has not been brought to my attention as being an area of concern. If the hon. Member tells me that there are hundreds or thousands of motorcycles out there making this excessive noise, then it is a matter that we would look at.

2220 What we do have in respect of excessive noise by motorcycles, over a period of one year, in fact the information provided spans to 13 months, because it starts in July 2011 and ends July 2012 inclusive of the two July's – so it's 13 months – there are 35 reports over 13 months. I am not sure whether we can classify that as a major problem that needs to be looked at as a matter of policy or not. But if the hon. Member tells me of different specifics as to the nature of the problem, I am happy to discuss that with the Police.

2225 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the Minister's intervention. The total amount of 35 certainly, in the context of 13 months, does not strike one as a worrying figure at all. However, what I would say to the Minister – and perhaps this will assist – is that some of the concerned individuals are police officers, who explain that the issue is that these exhausts are not defective; that they are designed in a way that they are indeed louder, and that – (Interjections)

I can wait for the Ministers to confer.

2230 What I am given to understand, Mr Speaker, is that these exhausts are not defective in any way but can be modified in a very, very simple way so as to arguably increase performance or make more noise, which is the net effect of making that very simple modification, and that in instances, if it is not the trend, upon reporting for process for excessive noise, which may be what it is in fact referring to, that schedule, – excessive noise – by the time the noise can be measured at the Test Centre, which I believe is the manner in which these matters are dealt with and assessed – and I am happy to be corrected if I am wrong

2235 – the simple modification can be undone, so as to avoid the detection.

This is the issue that perhaps you have not yet been made aware of. It is clear that you have not. I wonder whether the Minister will be happy to consider reviewing the situation, if I can bring some more information to his attention on this matter.

2240 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, I will do that in conjunction with my hon. Colleague, the Minister for traffic, who tells me that, in fact – and I did not know this – when these vehicles are made, then the motorcycle or the car is in fact referred to the MOT Test Centre for some sort of [inaudible] –

2245 Hon. S M Figueras: Testing, yes.

Hon. G H Licudi: Whether there is any power to actually undo what has been done... There is a power to report somebody in respect of an offence. The matter then is reported for process and ends up in the Magistrates' Court. The court will have whatever powers it has in respect of sentencing for that particular offence.

2250 But off the top of my head, I cannot think that there is any power for members of the MOT Department simply to rectify something that has been done privately –

Hon. S M Figueras: Perhaps the Minister will give way?

2255 Hon. G H Licudi: – but it is something that perhaps we can look at.

2260 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, in fact there is, Mr Speaker, a recommendation that was made to me, that was mentioned to me in passing and that was that the issue may well be resolved, by the acquisition by the relevant authorities of a device that can measure the noise level on the spot. That was one of the suggestions that was made.

I understand that we are not going to get any further with this, given the fact that the Minister is certainly not aware of it and I understand that fully. I will be happy to continue this conversation outside the Chamber to see whether perhaps a solution can be reached.

2265 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just if the Minister could assist me in understanding the schedule which he has kindly passed over to the Opposition, and that relates to the description under the column entitled 'Prosecution Outcome'. Do I take it that all 'pending court proceedings' – or more particularly, pending court proceedings which seems to the description which applies to almost all of the offences – means that technically, it is before the court, but it is awaiting a court hearing? Is that a proper interpretation?

2270

Hon. G H Licudi: That is correct.

2275

Offence of feeding apes
Persons reported and prosecutions

2280

Clerk: Question 804, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Government provide details to this House of the number of persons reported for process for the offence of feeding apes over the last 12 months, compared to the number of successful prosecutions over the same period, also broken down on a monthly basis?

2285

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2290

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, during the past 12 months, no persons have been reported for process for the offence of feeding apes.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I fear I may be walking into a lion's den – (Laughter and interjections)

2295

A Member: An apes' den!

Hon. S M Figueras: Indeed, well, yes! I am sure apes are incapable of such vicious behaviour as I may well incur by embarking upon this supplementary journey!

2300

Is the Minister able to assist or has he any information that may enlighten us as to why there seems to have been a lack of enforcement of this particular provision in the last 12 months?

2305

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member well knows, matters of enforcement in respect of the law are matters for the Police, and if he does not know, the hon. Member to his left will clearly tell him. It is a matter for the Police to enforce the legislation.

What I can tell him is that the information I have is that during the relevant period, there have been no complaints by members of the public in respect of this particular offence – sorry, I should say, no complaints to the Police in respect of this particular offence.

Clerk: Question 805, the Hon. J J –

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just say to the Hon. the Minister for Justice that... I live up there, in the Upper Rock... I think it is actually, 100 yards from the apes' den. I drive up there every day, and I habitually see the feeding of apes by members of the public!

2315

A Member: You should report it. (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: I do and in fact I have on a number of occasions stopped my car and actually told people –

2320

A Member: Citizen's arrest! (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes – a citizen's arrest! I have told people that that is not something that they ought to do.

2325

How far are we from a situation where the Government is going to perhaps have somebody up there who might help with this particular point? Because ensuring that if anybody does this kind of thing, that it is reported to the Police, or that by having somebody up there, obviously it is going to mean that this does not occur with the frequency that it does at the present moment.

2330 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure... I would have to take a reference of 'having someone up there', whether the hon. Member is suggesting that police officers should be permanently placed there or whether it is a matter of ape management. But the hon. Member who is responsible for the Upper Rock perhaps can enlighten us.

2335 Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Macaque Management Plan is virtually complete and I am having meetings next week, which I hope will finalise it and that would include provision for supervision up on the Rock.

2340 As far as elsewhere in Gibraltar where it is just as illegal as on the Upper Rock, we will shortly be seeing some signs going up, advising the public that they are not to feed the monkeys. One takes the view that we should warn people, because it is even advertised abroad that people can come to Gibraltar to feed the monkeys. We need to make that perfectly clear to all to be fair, before the Police may or may not – it is entirely up to them – choose to take this up. But the signs will be going up in some parts of Gibraltar shortly.

2345 Hon. J J Netto: But, Mr Speaker, if I may, signs in the Upper Rock have been there for many, many years, and people have never paid...

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I said other than on the Upper Rock.

2350 Hon. J J Netto: It seems that people have never paid any notice whatsoever of the signs, regardless of the size of the board which is quite enormous.

2355 So the point that my hon. learned Friend was making is that if the Police for whatever operational reasons do not go to the Upper Rock to enforce the law as it stands, I think what he was hinting at was whether the Department of Environment would be employing some kind of wardens, which may have certain powers, just like traffic wardens have in relation to complying with certain traffic matters. I think that is what he was pointing at, and perhaps he could enlighten us whether this is in the pipeline to be done.

2360 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, let me make one thing absolutely clear: I did not say what he suggests, that the Police do not go to any part of Gibraltar to enforce the law. (Interjections) He said, 'not go to the Upper Rock to enforce the law.' The Police do go wherever it is necessary –

Hon. J J Netto: For whatever operational reasons.

2365 Hon. G H Licudi: – in order to enforce the law. Sometimes there are complaints by members of the public. I note that the hon. Member seems to be suggesting or has suggested that he has seen offences being committed but he has not –

Hon. D A Feetham: Habitually, every single day.

2370 Hon. G H Licudi: Habitually, but he does not call the Police to report the offence. I do not know whether that makes him an accessory or anything like that, (Laughter) but that is a matter for his own conscience.

2375 But I just wanted to refute the suggestion that the Police do not enforce the law. It is a matter for the Police, how they enforce the law, but clearly if offences are committed, the Police will –

2380 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Minister will give way, there are many good, operational reasons why the Police would not go up to the Upper Rock, either most days or some days. I am not questioning that; but the fact remains that a person is not there on a permanent basis, to enforce the legislation.

2385 Given that we have that and given that we know that apes should not be fed – which is not good for their health – the point should be whether we should have some other kind of presence there, in the form of wardens. Therefore, if this is something that the Hon. Minister for the Environment, who is keen to stand up and give us an answer, says is something that is in the pipeline, and if it is so, whether these wardens have certain powers to be able to fine people on the spot if they were to be feeding apes, or in fact contravene any other aspect of the Upper Rock.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member well knows, when he was my Minister for the Environment, during which there was a long and very cordial and, I think, fruitful relationship, this has always been a problem, which we are addressing in this Macaque Management Plan and which will be 2390 addressed, (Interjection) which I have said earlier on today and I have said on other occasions in Parliament.

I must add that zero charges, prosecutions, in nine months is probably statistically more significant than zero in 16 years, but in order not to blame it all on the previous Government, I think that since the law was passed prohibiting the feeding of apes in 1918, there have been three prosecutions. I suspect that that may largely be the cause of why we have problems with the macaques at this point in time, but obviously we are going back almost a hundred years.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, on that basis, nearly the entire community are accessories to a crime, because we have all probably seen it done!

A Member: Indeed.

2405 Juvenile crime
Details of under-18s in court

Clerk: Question 805, the Hon. J J Netto.

2410 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Justice state how many juveniles below the age of 18 have appeared before the Courts of Gibraltar during 2012, broken down by months and including the following: their sex; their age; the charges; whether the Courts have found any of them guilty; and the sentence?

2415 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2420 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the information requested, subject to what I will say in a moment, is set out in a table which I now hand to the hon. Member.

The hon. Member asks in his Question for details concerning juveniles below the age of 18. The information provided in the schedule, however, deals with persons below the age of 17.

2425 Under the Criminal Procedure Act 1962, a young person is defined as a person who has attained the age of 14 years and is under the age of 17 years. A child is a person under the age of 14. A differentiation is therefore made, for the purposes of court and police records, of persons charged and appearing in court who are under the age of 17 on the one hand and those who are 17 and over on the other. That is why the information provided concerns persons below the age of 17.

2430 The position will be different once the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 comes fully into force in early October 2012, which I know the hon. Member will be very happy about. Juveniles are defined in that Act as persons below the age of 18. It will therefore, as from then, be possible to provide hon. Members with details of all persons below the age of 18 who appear in court.

Mr Speaker, perhaps I should also – because I had some difficulty following the table originally, when I got it – explain to the hon. Member how the table actually works.

2435 The table is related to persons charged to appear. Although the Question relates to persons appearing in court, the table goes a little bit further and gives, in fact, a little bit more information than the hon. Member has sought.

2440 The hon. Member will see the first column is ‘Month’; the second column is the number of persons arrested; then the breakdown by age... males and females; and then the breakdown by age of all those persons arrested; and then we see the number of persons charged from those arrested. Clearly, the number of persons charged will not total the number of people arrested.

2445 In the first row, Mr Speaker, where it says ‘Possession of Drugs – 1’, ‘Taking a Conveyance – 2’, ‘Common Assault – 3’, that is the number of people. So he should not take it that there is a correlation between the age and the charge that is right beside it. They are totally separate and distinct columns. One gives the breakdown of age and the other one just gives the numbers of juveniles charged in respect of each of those particular offences.

In the final column, which talks about the sentence imposed if convicted, again, where it says ‘Conditional Discharge – 4’, it simply means that four of the people who were charged were given a conditional discharge, three were given fines and six are still pending in respect of court proceedings.

So that essentially explains how this table has been put together.

2450 Clerk: Question 806.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2455 Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to July and also June of this year, it says 'Possession of a Firearm/Ammunition' on both. Are we talking in terms of possession of firearms... Are we talking possession of what is called in Spanish escopeta de perdigones, or are we talking about proper actual firearms, guns? Does he know that at all, or not?

2460 Hon. G H Licudi: The answer is that I do not know which specific weapon is referred to when it comes to possession of firearms, but 'firearm', as the hon. Member knows, under the Firearms Act, includes the air rifles and air pistols, so all those that the hon. Member has described includes 'firearms'. There is no distinction as to what is a proper firearm and what is not –

2465 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I do understand that.

Hon. G H Licudi: – but I do not have the information as to which particular category of firearm that charge relates to.

2470 Hon. D A Feetham: I am asking because it would be very worrying indeed if you had two separate incidents in June and July of possession of firearms other than pellet guns. It is not justified – it is against the law – but pellet guns are in a different category to other types of firearms that are far more serious.

2475 What about the possession of offensive weapons in June 2012 and also February 2012? Does he have any information about those, as to whether they relate to knives, for example, or does he not have any information?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, I do not have the specific breakdown of the type of weapon, but I am happy to find out for the hon. Member.

2480 Hon. D A Feetham: Please.

Domestic violence Breakdown of cases

2485 Clerk: Question 806, the Hon. J J Netto.

2490 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice state if there have been any cases of domestic violence reported to the Royal Gibraltar Police since Question 163/2012 to date, showing the number of persons affected by such violence, their age, sex, the number of persons arrested and the persons charged?

2495 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2500 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, a total of 60 reports of domestic violence, affecting 85 persons, of which 67 were females and 18 were males, have been made to the Royal Gibraltar Police from 1st February 2012 to 12th September 2012. A total of seven persons have been arrested of whom four have been charged.

The ages of the persons affected are shown in the schedule, which I now hand to the hon. Member.

2505 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, looking at the schedule that the Minister has so kindly provided, I notice at the very top... and I would not want to, across the floor of the Chamber, necessarily go into the detail, but I notice that there is one person who is 12 years old and one person who is 16 years old. They may be, to some degree or other, affected as a result of this.

Is the Minister perhaps in a position to say whether, in relation to those two cases I have referred to, they required any kind of support perhaps from Social Services in relation to counselling or something of that kind, given the age of these particular persons who are affected?

2510 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I do not have that specific information, but I will check whether Social Services were involved and I will let the hon. Member know.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.

2515 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, yesterday the United Kingdom Government announced that the Home Office is changing the definition of domestic violence by including coercive control, such as psychological abuse, as part of it. Will the Government consider following this lead and updating Gibraltar's definition too?

2520 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, we are fast, but not that fast. If this announcement was made by the UK, I certainly have not got any information or knowledge of that, but I am happy to look at what proposed changes are being made to see whether we can improve in any way our legislation in Gibraltar. Certainly every effort will be made to protect individuals from domestic violence.

2525 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, I am grateful for that. That is why I said 'would the Government consider'.

2530 Sexual assaults on juveniles
Breakdown of cases

Clerk: Question 807, the Hon. J J Netto.

2535 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice state if there have been any persons during 2012 who have been charged with sexually assaulting juveniles, broken down by months, and provide the following information: (a) the possible number of victims suspected as a result of the charge of sexual assault; (b) how many cases have now been heard in our courts or are waiting to be heard; (c) of those heard, how many have now been concluded; and (d) the sentence of those found guilty?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2545 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, from 1st January 2012 to 12th September 2012, a total of two persons have been charged with sexually assaulting juveniles. One person was charged in January 2012 with sexually assaulting one victim, and another was charged in March 2012 with sexually assaulting two victims. Court proceedings are still ongoing.

2550

Child pornography
Breakdown of cases

2555 Clerk: Question 808, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice state how many persons have been charged with the illegal download of pornographic pictures of juveniles during 2012, broken down by months, and provide the following information: (a) the number of persons who have been found guilty in the courts and the sentence given; (b) the number of cases pending a hearing at the courts; and (c) the age and sex of those awaiting a hearing and of those found guilty?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2565

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, from 1st January 2012 to 12th September 2012, one person has been charged with the illegal download of pornographic pictures of juveniles. The person concerned is a 67-year-old male. Court proceedings are still ongoing.

2570

St Bernard's Hospital site Government's plans

2575

Clerk: Question 809, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Development and Planning explain what plans the Government has for the old St Bernard's Hospital site that was earmarked by the former GSD Government as a joint first and middle school?

2580

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2585

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, there are no concrete plans for the site as yet.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, in February, the Hon. Minister for Education answered to this Question that they were still considering various options. Can he say what those options are that are being considered?

2590

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, the Government still has an open mind as to what those premises are going to be used for and is still considering a number of options. I would not like to give details of what those options are until we decide what we are going to do with that site.

2595

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Hospital meals
New arrangements

Clerk: Question 746, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain the new arrangements for hospital meals and where the new kitchens will be sited?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the proposal presented by the Catering Department to revert to bulk meal service was approved and discussions with the relevant Departments have taken place in order to phase in this service. Introduction dates to the new services have not been established and agreed to date. The new Catering Facility will cater for bulk food distribution.

A feasibility study to relocate the Catering Facility to St Bernard's Hospital has been commissioned and proposals for possible sites are being considered. The Government Architect will be presenting scheme designs shortly, and in fact I spoke to him yesterday and I expect them on Monday or Tuesday.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister know what will be happening to the old kitchen site on the North Mole?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker. No decision has been taken on that site.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, as part of this new meal service, will patients be given a choice of food, which they could order the day before, according to the dietary needs – for instance, vegetarian or diabetic, celiac or gluten free, or intolerant and so on?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: That is the intention. The first step is to have the bulk service and once that is established, the intention is to do what should have always been done and that is to give the patients a choice.

Nursing assistants and registered general nurses
Eight-month contracts

Clerk: Question 747, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise how many nursing assistants and registered general nurses, as per the advert in February for their recruitment, are on the eight-month contracts as advertised, and is it the intention of the GHA to permanently employ such persons upon the successful completion of the eight-month contract?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the nursing assistant vacancies advertised internally in March 2012 were, as indicated in the advert, for appointment on indefinite permanent terms, and I can confirm that 18 appointments were made.

Further vacancies were advertised internally in April 2012 on the same terms and conditions, and a further 14 appointments were made.

As far as the registered general nurse vacancies are concerned, these were advertised on a short-term contract for 10 months. One appointment was made and although it was the GHA's intention to permanently employ that person on completion of the contract, the appointee resigned shortly after.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is this recruitment part of the GHA's drive to employ over 20 new nurses and increase the complement as announced during the Budget?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.

GHA review
Findings by UK consultants; recommendations

2660

Clerk: Question 748, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2665

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what the overall findings of the GHA review by the UK consultants were and what measures will be taken to implement the recommendations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2670

Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the contents of the review will be made public shortly and will be considered by the Gibraltar Health Authority and GHA management with a view to preparing an implementation plan.

2675

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when will the GHA be in a position to inform the people of Gibraltar as to the results of the review?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: There are meetings being held next week of both the Health Authority and GHA management in order to discuss a timeframe for this.

2680

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say if part of the findings of the GHA review was to restructure the GHA's management?

2685

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the restructure of management is something that has been ongoing since... maybe not the 9th, but certainly 10th December. I have been involved in discussions with the Executive of the GHA and others.

I have, as this House is aware, also looked at models in other jurisdictions, so that partly this is happening anyway, but there are suggestions and recommendations in the Report which do have a bearing on the restructure and which will be taken into account, as this restructure is finalised.

2690

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if part of the findings of the GHA review was that Dr McCutcheon should resign as Chief Executive of the GHA?

2695

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I want to resist... I have already offered information, but only in as far as there are recommendations on restructure, which will surprise no one, but I do not think that I should say anything further while the Health Authority and the management of the GHA have still not deliberated and considered this review. As it will be made public, then that information will be available shortly and I dare say more than likely before the next sitting of Parliament, and obviously then I would be willing and able to take questions.

2700

Health and Safety Committee of the GHA
Membership, qualifications and duties

2705

Clerk: Question 749, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain who comprises the Health and Safety Committee of the GHA, what their qualifications are and what they do?

2710

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2715

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Health and Safety Committee is comprised of the following staff members: Mr Chris Wilson, Director of Human Resources, who chairs representing the GHA; Evelyn Cervan, Deputy Director or acting Director of Corporate Services representing the GHA; Edward Holmes, Deputy Director of Nursing Services representing the GHA; Lloyd Ocaña, Craftsman who represents Unite, I believe, this is the staff side; Harold Zammit, Linen Supervisor, also Unite; Paul Tremayne, Emergency Medical Technician, also representing the Union; Darren Cerisola, Emergency Medical Technician, also representing the Union; Linda Castro, Dermatology Nurse Specialist, representing the Union; Marilyn Bramble, Nursing Assistant representing the Union; and Jane Marzan, a Personal Secretary representing the GHA.

2720 Their role is to conduct audits and inspections and address any issues that arise from these or otherwise brought to their attention.

2725 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is any one of those in the Committee the Health and Safety adviser, or is that still being considered?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is a Committee that looks overall at Health and Safety issues within the GHA. None of them is specifically a or the Health and Safety adviser.

2730 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain how they assess risk assessments – how they are conducted?

2735 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is not information I have available. I have explained who comprises, what they are and what they do in carrying out audits, but any further details I would need notice of.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

2740 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, first of all, the first comment I would like to put as a premise is that obviously one welcomes the fact that there is an established Committee in the GHA which is composed from management and the union in order to discuss and highlight issues in Health and Safety, and that in itself is a welcome step in the right direction.

2745 But as the hon. Member knows, back in February or March of this year, I did ask him specifically whether the GHA would consider having a permanent person qualified and specialised in Health and Safety as a Health and Safety adviser or officer, and at the time, the hon. Member did say that they were conducting a review of management needs in the GHA and he would certainly look into that.

2750 What I am about to ask him is that if he looks at the numbers of Health and Safety advising officers, as applied by the Hon. the Minister for Health and Safety in various Government Departments, Authorities and Agencies, he will be able to see from the previous list – and I say this because there is another Question on the Order Paper which may be updated from the old one that I have available – that there are some Government Departments... in fact, the City Fire Brigade has a specialised Health and Safety adviser officer and Customs has another one. Both Departments, both numerically in numbers and perhaps in the diversity of functions, do not come anywhere near the size of the GHA, both in people employed and the diversity of functions that the GHA provides across the board. So basically, I think it is not fair to say that the onus of responsibility for risk assessment and audits of this kind should go on people, who may be very qualified in management and be very good qualified in many things in the trade union field, but not necessarily be a specialist in Health and Safety, because in the UK, as far as I am aware, Health and Safety adviser officers do require to have a number of qualifications in that particular field.

2760 So what I am asking the Hon. Minister, and I am glad for your indulgence in my prelude to this, is whether he has considered the development of a particular post on a permanent basis for the GHA or whether this is in the pipeline?

2765 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I chair a complex large multi-disciplinary organisation that I have inherited and I suspect that I could probably list more shortfalls myself than anybody else present in this House at the moment. So the fact that there is no such adviser is certainly not of my making or this Government's making.

2770 Having said that, it is an important role to be played in any organisation of this size and it is certainly something that is being looked at.

Hon. J J Netto: So is it part still of this review that has not finished?

2775 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: This review did not, as far as I can recollect, address specifically the Health and Safety issue. It was more looking at clinical governance and management procedures.

Hon. J J Netto: I am referring to the view that you referred back in February or March where the GHA was going to consider this.

2780 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, this is being considered, but it is not part of the review that we were referring to earlier. It is being considered within management.

2785 Hon. J J Netto: Does the Minister have an indication by when they will be in a position to know whether they will or will not have a Health and Safety adviser or officer – which is another option perfectly legitimate for him to take, if he wants to take it? He can also say, ‘Well, look, I will satisfy my obligations under the management of Health and Safety legislation, not necessarily by employing someone permanently in the GHA, but by outsourcing the function to someone else, in support of the management who has the responsibility to comply with that.’ That is another option he can take. It is up to him.

2790 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is already happening. The Government’s Health and Safety Inspectors have carried out Health and Safety audits of some parts of the GHA, including the kitchen facilities, which were found very, very, very lacking, and we have already taken steps to correct most of those faults which again I have inherited. It was a particularly scathing report that we got very early on, on the kitchen, but that is by the by.

2795 So they have carried out a number of Health and Safety inspections within the GHA, so it is not that nothing of this sort is happening. It is happening, but we have to consider, as the hon. Member rightly says, whether with the size of organisation we should have one person specifically employed for that or whether we should outsource, as we are already doing, with Government Health and Safety Inspectors.

2800 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in this last statement that the Hon. Minister has just said, he said that a number of audits – in plural – have been carried out in GHA, and then he went on to mention the one in the kitchen. If I were to write – because obviously he would probably need notice of the question – to him asking him what other Departments within the GHA the audit has been done, will he be able to supply me with that information?

2805 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Certainly.

2810 Cancer Nurse Specialists
Administrative support

Clerk: Question 750, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2815 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise if the Cancer Nurse Specialists will be receiving administrative support, as per the concern raised on page 9 of the Director of Nursing’s Report to 17th July GHA Board meeting?

2820 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, administrative support for the Cancer Nurse Specialists is being considered in the context of the overall need to boost specialist services, including nurse-led services. No details have yet been decided.

2825 In the interim, however, Nurse Management’s administrative staff has been providing support on an ad hoc basis.

2830 Finance and Procurement Directorate
Management structure

Clerk: Question 751, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2835 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for Health concur with the Director for Finances’ statement on page 2 of his Report to 17th July GHA Board meeting which says:

‘The overall management structure within the Finance & Procurement Directorate, inclusive of this new middle management post, is not robust enough to effectively deal with a portfolio and budget of this size.’

2840 And, if so, what measures will the Minister implement to address this?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2845 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I cannot, at this point in time, agree or disagree until such time as the recruitment of the HEO, expected shortly, takes place. Once the post has been filled for a period of time, I will be able to make an informed judgement. I do note however that again the Director of Finances makes this criticism of the structure left behind by the party opposite.

GHA Information Management and Technology Permanent office space

2855 Clerk: Question 752, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise when the IM&T Department will be given permanent office space, as per the concern raised on page 8 of the Acting Director for Information Management and Technology's Report to the 17th July GHA Board meeting?

2860

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the issue of space is being addressed in the wider context of the usage of space in the GHA as a whole.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say what options are available for the additional space or relocation for this Department?

2870 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is very complex. The St Bernard's Hospital, in the short time in which it has existed, has had different departments springing up in different areas and the layout is not altogether to my satisfaction.

2875 IM&T certainly have a very cramped situation, again which I found on visiting them actually, but there are other areas where the use of space is not really to my satisfaction and we are looking... We have a committee being put together to look at the whole issues of space in the context, of course, as well, of the new kitchen and the ambulance. This is all coming together to see how we can improve the efficiency of the use of space.

2880

Ambulance facility
Project commencement and location

Clerk: Question 753 the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2885 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Then you have partially answered this Question already!
Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise, as announced in his Budget speech, where the new larger Ambulance facility will be and when the project will commence?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker – Sorry.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Sorry, Mr Speaker. Apologies to the Clerk for jumping my cue – I didn't used to do that too often in my acting days! (Laughter)

2895 The facility is, as I have already said, currently – (Interjection and laughter) I have no comment to make at this point! – being planned in conjunction with the redeployment of other services and all space issues within the GHA.

Clerk: Question –

2900

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have a time frame for the movement and creation of new areas and movement of facilities?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Okay, again it is difficult because of the complexities and the number of different groups and patient groups and so on involved. But certainly, I would like to have a clear picture 2905 by the end of this calendar year, certainly of things like the kitchen and the ambulance which are a clear commitment. Certainly within this calendar year, we will know where we want everything to be.

2910 Charities
Encouraging contribution to Health Service

Clerk: Question 754, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2915 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain further the statement in his Budget speech in relation to the work that charities do for the Health Service of, and I quote:

2920 'Rather than discourage their work and contributions, as was often the case before, I encourage it as adding value' and give examples of where the GSD discouraged the work and contributions of charities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2925 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, it is the GSD who could, of course, better answer this question. I can only go by personal experience in my last occupation, when I was discouraged by my Minister from approaching charities for contributions, as the then Chief Minister was not keen on these. It was only after a great deal of insistence on my part that I was able to access such funding.

2930 I am aware of at least one project that was executed in La Línea because it was not authorised by the then Government. Also, an offer from a charity to pay for the refurbishment of children's playgrounds was declined, which resulted in these then being paid for by the taxpayer and possibly being of lesser quality.

2935 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, and in relation to the Health Services?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: As I say, Mr Speaker, those are the examples that I can give from direct experience. I have heard of other instances, but my experience in the courts tells me that hearsay is not something that I should present in this House. I have been asked to give examples and examples I have given.

2940 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, could the Minister then clarify what he did say in his Budget speech and he said – I will read it –

2945 'I would like to take this opportunity to publicly express my appreciation for the work the charities, large and small, do for the Health Service. Rather than discourage their work and contributions, as was often the case before, I encourage it as adding value to our work and giving ownership to our people. Likewise, I would like to thank the Health Users' Forum...'

2950 So it was stated within the context of Health, within the Health section of your Budget and I am asking for examples of where charities within the spectrum of Health Services... where their work and contributions were discouraged by the previous Government?

2955 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am delighted to give particular examples. I understand that a number of charities were prepared to purchase equipment and they were discouraged from doing so by the previous Administration. I am happy to give the hon. Lady the names of those charities and the type of equipment that we are talking about, outside the Chamber.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I appreciate that, thank you.

2960 Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask the Hon. the Minister for Health, why does it necessarily follow that, simply because the Government took a decision as a matter of principle to fund the parks, that they would be of lesser quality than if they had been funded by a charity?

2965 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: From personal experience, the only park that was in fact funded by that particular charity ended up being – coincidentally or otherwise – within the Alameda Gardens and, in fact in my opinion, it is of far better quality than the others that were put up in the rest of Gibraltar. As it was the same charity that was going to fund them, I could only extrapolate that conclusion and say that they would have been of better quality. Certainly they would have cost the people less.

2970 Hon. D A Feetham: Certainly they would have cost the people less, yes, but why...? I do not understand... It is very easy to make these kinds of very broad sweeping statements in the House, which are difficult to actually verify. What is it that you are basing yourself on in terms of the quality of the parks that were the parks – ? (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

2975 May I just ask the question? I know the Chief Minister is very eager to give instructions to his Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: I can whisper as much as I like.

2980 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, yes but please pay me the courtesy, because of course, I am asking a question and you are whispering to your – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) And you are still talking! Do you have something to say? I will sit down –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

2985 Hon. Chief Minister: I do have something to say and I am grateful for the hon. Gentleman giving way.

I will talk to my Ministers and my Ministers will talk to me, as we desire and we will abide only by the rules of Mr Speaker and his rulings – something which I know Members opposite these days do not seem to like to want to do, and we will not have ourselves brought to order by the hon. Gentleman.

2990 Mr Speaker: May I invite the hon. Member who has asked the question, please feel free to ignore whatever is going on behind the scenes, if I might call it that, and proceed with your question and leave it to them to sort it out.

2995 Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker, I find it –

Mr Speaker: It may be disconcerting, but –

3000 Hon. D A Feetham: It is very off-putting and it is a matter of common courtesy that one obviously listens to the questioner, rather than be talking amongst themselves when I am asking the question. It is a matter of common courtesy, but look, the Chief Minister –

Mr Speaker: The Speaker does not really –

3005 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a matter of common courtesy. I agree it is a matter of common courtesy. It is a common courtesy that is not extended to us by the hon. Members opposite on a number of occasions and, therefore, the behaviour in this House has been that both sides have acted in that way.

3010 The hon. Gentleman does not like it when it happens to him. Well look, so be it. If he does not like it when it happens to him, he has got to put up with it, if the rest of us have to put up with it when it happens to us.

3015 Mr Speaker: The Speaker does not control the communications between Members of this House on either side between themselves, as long as such communication does not really interfere with the progress of proceedings. I appreciate that the hon. Member may find it off-putting and disconcerting. All I can suggest is ignore what is going on and just get on with the question. You might be asked to repeat the question, but that is the best I can help, really.

3020 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, well, on that basis, I have no further questions. I have to say that it is extremely, extremely disappointing that Mr Speaker says that, because it is within Mr Speaker's authority that if you have a situation where somebody is asking a question to somebody opposite and effectively they are talking amongst themselves in a way that is discourteous to the person who is asking the question, that surely must be a matter for Mr Speaker. But I am not going to push it further.

3025 What I will say is this: that the Chief Minister is becoming as high handed as he used to accuse us when we were in Government of being. He is slowly morphing into the very thing that he always criticised.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not a question; that is a remark made for the purposes of trying to persuade people who may be listening of a party political issue which he wants to raise.

This is Question Time Mr Speaker. I complained about many things when I have been in Opposition. I stand by all those criticisms. Anybody who makes an objective assessment of what used to happen before and what happens today – an objective assessment, not the hon. Gentleman's subjective self-serving assessment – will realise just how different things are.

I get up to answer that point, Mr Speaker, because the hon. Members think that they can use Question Time, by a side line sometimes, to make political points. They can try, Mr Speaker, but they will have political points made back at them.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: – if I may, there was enough of a question by the hon. Member for me to be able to extract what he was asking, so I would like at least to give an answer.

Mr Speaker: I will allow the Hon. Minister to do so, but allow me just to... I do regret that the Hon. Daniel Feetham feels disappointed, but with respect, there are limits to what the Speaker's powers are. What I have never done to either side in the past is treat the members like school children, saying, 'Behave yourself, be quiet', and things like that. There have always been conversations held behind the scenes, so to speak, on this side and on that side, no matter who has occupied which side. It has always been the case.

I do not propose at this stage of my tenure to reduce myself to being – no, sorry, wrong word – to behave like a school teacher. As long as the conversations that are held in private do not interfere with the proceedings, I have never found it necessary for me to interfere with those private conversations. I can only encourage a Member to proceed with his speech or his question and just ignore what is going on on the other side. That is my position and that is it.

The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in my opinion, the playground that was created, or paid for by that charity is of better quality than the other playgrounds. It is my opinion only, based on what I have seen and on the experience that I had managing an area which included playgrounds, which were partly my responsibility and which used to sit approximately 15 metres from my office.

Hon. J J Netto: If I may, the hon. Gentleman just said that the facilities, the attractions in the park by the Alameda is a much better quality than the one that the Government provides, yet, as far as I understand, he overruled a charity in one of the particular attractions because he felt they were not safe enough, and that particular attraction is now for the benefit of the people in La Línea, who have got it across the other side of the border.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that was an action which I took in a previous profession, as Director of the Botanic Gardens, for which I believe I am not answerable here.

But in any case, the facts are not correct. The issues to do with that were purely related to the suitability of that facility in the heart of a botanic garden and nothing to do with anything else.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the Hon. Minister did qualify his statement by the prefix that it was in his opinion. Is the Minister aware that whilst I was the Minister for Sports and Leisure, and therefore had an input in the purchase of equipment – that Government officials expressed to me their views that the playground equipment provided at taxpayers' expense was in no way inferior or of lesser standards than those that ended up in the Botanical Garden and that is a professional view expressed to me, as a Minister of Her Majesty's Government, during my tenure as Minister for Sports and Leisure.

Hon. Chief Minister: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I think it is impossible for the hon. Member to answer that question, because how can we know what the hon. Member was told? I think this side of the House is happy to accept that he says he was told it, but we cannot accept or deny whether that was actually the case.

3090

Society for Cancer Relief
Support for new hospice facility

Clerk: Question 755, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3095

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Minister for Health explain the detail of support, announced in his Budget Speech, that the Government will be giving the Society for Cancer Relief in order to run their new hospice facility?

3100

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Health Authority will be releasing a member of staff who will dedicate time both to the hospice facility and to cancer patients within the GHA, so ensuring continuity of care and smooth liaison between the charity and the Authority.

Other ways in which the hospice can be supported are currently being studied.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister tell us who the member of staff is? Is it a nurse or a doctor or a specialist, a GP?

3110

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I do not feel comfortable in releasing the name without talking to the person in advance. The person is aware that he or she is the one designated for that, not currently practising as a nurse, but I believe with nursing qualifications.

I do not think I should go further than that.

3115

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the GHA considering funding a palliative doctor or helping the hospice fund a palliative doctor for the hospice?

3120

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said, other ways in which the hospice can be supported are currently being studied and that could include medical support. Quite how that would be achieved is what is being considered at the moment.

3125

Sponsored Patients
Definition of 'disabled'

Clerk: Question 756, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3130

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain what the Government constitutes as 'disabled', with reference to the extra 50% allowance for Sponsored Patients, introduced in the Budget?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

3135

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, in this context, the Government constitutes the entitlement of 'disabled' as follows: people with Disability Pension, who have severe disability from birth; and people with a Disablement Pension – loss of faculty due to an injury at work.

3140

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does not the definition of 'disabled' also include the description given in the Equal Opportunities Act 2006?

3145

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is the way that the Sponsored Patient in advance of the review is dealing with this, because these are the particular definitions that we have currently in Gibraltar, related to disability. That is what we have to work with.

Any changes in that – any, for example, disability register which my colleague is developing and so on – may have a practical effect on who is entitled to that 50%. At the moment, and pending those reviews, that is what is happening at this point in time.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the Equal Opportunities Act 2006 adds another description which says:

'A person who has cancer, HIV infection or multiple sclerosis is to be deemed to have a disability and hence to be a disabled person.'

3155 Will that not be taken into account as part of this description?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I am advised that that relates specifically to the work environment and does not fall within the definitions that are currently used for this, but if any other evidence can be presented, then certainly we will have a look at that.

3160 I must say that, in the review, of the Sponsored Patients process, we have to look at all possibilities, including that.

3165 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, if I understood the Minister correctly, he said that right now, the only ones who benefit under those definitions are either disabled people at birth, obviously getting Disability Allowance, or people who have sustained an accident at work and are getting... I am not quite sure of his exact words but something like a pension derived from an accident at work, or words to that effect. So that is the criteria, the yardstick that is being applied.

3170 He also mentioned in that sentence that his colleague sitting next to him is conducting a review that may broaden out the definition of disability. Is that exactly what he is saying? I was not sure.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, what I was referring to is a disability register, which is being worked on. That is what I was referring to.

3175 Hon. J J Netto: So that will not impact in any way the definition the Social Security Department has for people who have an accident at work who then get a pension derived from an accident at work? The reason why I am saying this is because that definition, as far as I understand it, goes all the way back to when the Social Security Benefits Scheme took place in 1952 or 1954. So one can argue, and quite rightly, that it needs a review and needs to be broadened. This is why I was trying to find out whether this review he was alluding to, by the Minister for Social Services, is something that will impact on Social Security benefits.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, I did not mean to imply that at all. It is outside my area completely.

3185 I have answered the question. I have been asked, who do we pay this to? I have said who we pay it to. If there is a future policy change, then there might well be, and then we can obviously be taken to task for it, but at the moment, that is the answer that I have.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I might be able to assist the hon. Gentleman.

3190 If he looks at our manifesto, I think it is page 82, what we say about disability laws, that would have, potentially, the effect the hon. Gentleman is talking about. It is a different type of assessment of the definition of disability.

3195 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that information, but just to try to develop it a little bit further, therefore, consistent with that manifesto commitment, is the Chief Minister then saying that there is a review taking place which may produce a broadening of the definition?

Hon. Chief Minister: This is it, Mr Speaker. There are different references to disability in our laws. The difference may be wider in some areas and narrower in others.

3200 The commitment here is to establish a different definition of disability for the purposes of a general definition, which may be applicable in some instances, and not in others, depending on which type of entitlement we are dealing with, which moves away from simply a disability an individual is born with. So people may find themselves eligible for disability benefit etc, where today they do not, because they are not born with a disability.

3205 The hon. Gentleman may know a number of cases where people have become disabled six months after being born, let alone 45 years after being born and in an industrial accident, but they are not recognised as 'disabled' under our laws. I think most administrations have tried to use such discretions as have been available to them, but nobody has actually faced up to the need to look at that core definition, and that is certainly something that we are looking at.

3210

Colon Cancer Screening Programme
Details

3215

Clerk: Question 757, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3220

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health provide details, as announced during the Budget, for which £300,000 has been earmarked, of the Colon Cancer Screening Programme and how it will take effect?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

3225

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the £300,000 provided as start-up capital for the service is as follows: Pathology for histology equipment, £35,000; IM&T scoping and specifications, £5,000; IM&T development and implementation, £25,000; Surgery, four flexible colonoscopes, £160,000; Surgery, disinfectors, £50,000; Surgery, drying and storage unit, £25,000; making a total of £300,000.

3230

At this point, arrangements are in the process of being made to procure all the necessary equipment prior to commencing with the programme. The details of implementation are currently being discussed by a multi-disciplinary team.

3235

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give an indication of when the GHA would like to start the screening programme?

3240

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Clearly as soon as possible, Mr Speaker, but this is complex because it requires a lot of different disciplines. It involves also a system to advise potential members of the community for the screening, so it is something that is being developed at the moment, and I cannot give an implementation date at this point in time.

3245

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say if the screening will be taking place within St Bernard's Hospital?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is likely, but I cannot confirm that, at this moment. That is the likely place that this would happen.

3250

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise which sector of the population will be targeted? Is it above a certain age or would be a certain type of person who will be invited for screening?

3255

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: The specifications are being developed by the multi-disciplinary team. It is above a certain age. I am not sure whether it is 55. I am not absolutely sure, but I can provide that information separately.

But as I say, the details of implementation are not just who is going to do what and how people are going to be called, but also who are the people who are going to be targeted in this? So that is hopefully what this team will come up with very shortly.

3260

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the GHA have a gastroenterologist to form part of this screening programme and will the images be read here, or sent to the United Kingdom?

3265

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, we have recently recruited a new surgeon who specialises in this type of intervention. Whether he will be the one carrying it out or not is something that is part of this discussion.

3270

As I say, details of implementation are currently being discussed by a multi-disciplinary team. I do not want to say anything here that the multi-disciplinary team may have discussed a week ago, and may not have got back to me on, and I am going to say something that the clinicians do not support, because it is absolutely essential that it is the clinicians who decide how this goes forward and not the politicians. Therefore, when I have the information from the multi-disciplinary team, I will clearly share it. In fact, our whole community will know because it is the community that hopefully will benefit – that will benefit.

3275

Patients' appliances
Decrease in forecast funding

3280 Clerk: Question 758, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain why there is a decrease of £30,000, from the forecast outturn of 2011-12 to the 2012-13 estimates, in funding for 'Patients' Appliances', found on page 170 of the Estimates Book?

3285 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as we have seen before in this session, this is really a matter that should have been raised during the course of the Committee Stage of the debate on the Appropriation Bill.

3290 Nonetheless, I will explain that the final spend for 2011-12 on Patient Appliances was around £181,980 and not £230,000.

3295 The forecast outturn figure presented on page 170 of the Estimate Book 2012-13 was that provided halfway through the year and was calculated based on the spend at the time. The spend in the last six months of the year was not as high as expected. Therefore, the £200,000 provided is expected to be adequate.

Dressings, medical gases and tests
Decrease in forecast funding

3300 Clerk: Question 759, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3305 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain why there is a decrease of £100,000, from the forecast outturn of 2011-12 to the 2012-13 estimates, in funding for 'Dressings, Medical Gases and Tests', on page 170 of the Estimates Book?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

3310 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, with the same preamble regarding the Committee Stage, I will explain, similarly, that the total final spend for last year was around £1,281,000 and not £1,300,000. The forecast outturn presented on page 170 was that provided again halfway through the year and calculated based on the spend at the time.

3315 The spend in the latter part of the year was lower than expected. The actual decrease is therefore about £80,000, not £100,000, which is not unreasonable, given the lower trend towards the end of the year. In any case, this does not mean that should there be a need to increase the spend, the necessary items will not be bought – because they will.

Procurement of equipment and medicines
Ensuring value for money

3320 Clerk: Question 760, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3325 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, with regard to the subhead of 'Other Recurrent Expenditure, Equipment and Related Expenses' on page 170 of the Estimates Book, can the Minister for Health explain how will the GHA ensure value for money and waste elimination in the procurement of such equipment and medicines?

3330 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

3335 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, with a similar preamble about the Committee Stage, I will explain that, as in previous years, the GHA follows tender procedures as per Government procurement processes.

Ambulance and public transfer vehicles
Fuel expenses

3340 Clerk: Question 761, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

3345 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, if the fleet of ambulances and public transfer vehicles has increased, can the Minister for Health explain why the funding for 'Fuel Expenses', in the Estimates Book on page 170, has gone down by £20,000 on last year's forecast outturn?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

3350 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Yes, Mr Speaker, because the fuel expenses for the ambulance fleet is met from the recurrent ambulance budget and not from the motor vehicles and fuel expenses account.

3355

Care Agency Trainees

3360 Clerk: Question 762, the Hon. J J Netto.

3365 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state how many trainees, if any, have been placed in the Care Agency by the Employment Services or through the Government company 'ETCL', and state the training being provided, the location within the Care Agency, how long the training will last, will such training deliver any recognisable qualification or qualifications, and if so, which ones?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3370 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Employment Service does not place anyone in employment. There are currently 35 ETCL trainees placed as care workers within different departments of the Care Agency. They are not always in the same department.

3375 The trainees who are taken on as care workers undertake the Care Agency's generic core training which is delivered by the Care Agency, following which they undertake training within the various departments of the Care Agency in which they are based. The modules in the generic core training have been modified so that they can serve as a precursor to a Diploma in Health and Social Care.

The training can last for a period of up to 11 months. There are four ETCL employees working in general administration as part of their acquisition of office skills, but they are not in the Care Agency permanently and are rotated. There is one labourer, and the same principle applies.

3380

Care Agency
11-month contract holders

3385 Clerk: Question 763, the Hon. J J Netto.

3390 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services provide the information on the following: (1) have any of the persons given an 11-month contract, as stated in Question 636, now ended such short-term contract, and if so, how many of them have been provided with an indefinite contract stating their grade and nationality; and (2) have any of the 11-month contracts been issued since this Question was last asked in Question 636 in the Care Agency, and of those: (a) what are their nationalities; (b) their grades; and (c) their location.

3395 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, none of the 11-month contracts referred to in Question 636 have yet ended. Seven new 11-month contracts have been issued since this Question was last asked in Question 636. I am handing the hon. Member a table with the breakdown requested.

Mount Alvernia
Nursing Co-ordinator post

Clerk: Question 764, the Hon. J J Netto.

3405

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if the vacant position of Nursing Co-ordinator at Mount Alvernia has now been filled, and, if not, by when does the Care Agency intend to fill such post?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3410

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the vacant position of Nursing Co-ordinator at Mount Alvernia is currently being filled, albeit in an acting capacity.

3415

Hon. J J Netto: Is the person acting in this particular post an employee of the Care Agency, or an employee of the GHA or perhaps outside the GHA?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: It is an employee of the Care Agency, Mr Speaker.

3420

Hon. J J Netto: And when does the hon. Lady think that such a position will become regularised, in the form of advertising internally within the Care Agency the vacancy?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, there is currently a review of the structure of the Care Agency, so once the review is undertaken and finalised, then we will be able to take a position on vacant posts.

3425

Hon. J J Netto: Is the hon. Lady perhaps saying that the review...? I am not anticipating what the conclusion of a review can be, but at least to the extent that the review might say that they will do away with the position of Nursing Co-ordinator.

3430

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Quite possibly.

Care Agency
Chief Executive post

3435

Clerk: Question 765, the Hon. J J Netto.

3440

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Services state if the position of Chief Executive of the Care Agency has now been appointed on a permanent basis, and if so, when did this happen, or is the current incumbent still carrying out these functions on an acting basis?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3445 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Chief Executive for the Care Agency has not been appointed on a permanent basis. It continues to be covered on an 'acting' capacity by the same person appointed by the hon. Member on 29th November 2011.

3450 Hon. J J Netto: Is there any particular reason why, given that the Members opposite have now been in Government for something like nine months, such a crucial and important post as the Chief Executive of such a big organisation... Can the hon. Lady sit down and let me be allowed to finish? Thank you

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Finish the question.

3455 Hon. J J Netto: Well, I am, if you calm yourself down.
Given that this is quite a large organisation, employing a substantial amount of people there... that perhaps it has taken such a long time. Is this perhaps part of the review she was referring to before?

3460 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, it is precisely because it is such a crucial role and because we are a new Government and because the Care Agency has the enormous problems that it has, that the Chief Executive continues to be the same person, because at least there will be a period of continuity by someone who was there before this Government came in, Mr Speaker.

3465 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Lady have any indication as to by when she thinks that she will be in a position to place this vacancy out so that people in the Care Agency can apply on a permanent basis?

3470 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, by way of example, the post of General Manager for GBC was vacant for four years, the post of Chief Secretary, which is an even greater role than that of Chief Executive of the Care Agency, was vacant for 18 months. This is a post on which the person who is currently acting has been acting for a little over 10 months, Mr Speaker.

It is likely that there may be a change soon. In fact, this is also a post that will be considered in the review, but for the time being, Mr Speaker, it is not unusual or extraordinary that the person that the hon. Gentleman placed in an acting position a few months ago continues to be acting now.

Care Agency
Disabilities Team Leader post

3480 Clerk: Question 766, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state how long the vacancy of team leader has been vacant for and if it is the intention of the Care Agency to fill such vacancy?

3485 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3490 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is referring to the Disabilities Team Leader post, I can confirm that it is currently being filled in an acting capacity. This post has been vacant since 19th July 2011, when the previous incumbent retired. The vacancy was never advertised at the time. This post is currently under review.

3495 Hon. J J Netto: Will the review take into consideration whether the team leader's post will be someone – although at that particular grade – perhaps who specialises in disability? Is that part of the review or part of the issues that will be taken into account?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, one would naturally expect that the position filled by the Disabilities Team Leader would be someone with experience in the field of disabilities, yes. I do not think we need a review for that, Mr Speaker.

3500 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if she does not need a review for that, can she then tell me when is the vacancy going to be advertised?

3505 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is not the qualification of the person; it is the nature of the role. That is what is being reviewed at the moment.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady has had nine months to review the role? Is she saying that she is going to take three-and-a-half years to look at the role, given that she knows already that the person has to be a specialist person in disability? The role is not something that requires... We are not talking about rocket science; we are talking about a role within the management of disability issues. How long is it going to take: another nine months, another two years, three-and-a-half years? I do not know.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, first of all, let me repeat what I said earlier: that the post is currently being filled by someone in an acting capacity, so it is not as if the role is vacant. Second, Mr Speaker, the person who left the role left on 19th July 2011, so the hon. Member had the months of July, August, September, October, November and December to advertise that role, (A Member: Five months.) and that is a role that they created, so clearly they were satisfied with that role, so they had no excuse not to advertise the role, Mr Speaker.

We are reviewing the role, the structure and the function of the Disability Service, Mr Speaker, but in the meantime the role is covered, so I can assure the hon. Member that it is covered and that the Disability Service is covered.

Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has left me with such a mess that I have had to deal with all sorts of problems.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, let me tell her why the delay of five months on my part. The delay was simply because –

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Where is the question, Mr Speaker?

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am having a preamble to then ask a question.

Mr Speaker: Not a very long one – a preamble, yes, but not a very long one. Go ahead with the preamble and then the question.

Hon. J J Netto: The only reason why there was a delay of five months is because there was an agreement between the union, the GGCA and the Government in which that particular post had to be a social worker, not necessarily a person who had to be specialised in disability, and those were issues that had to be negotiated with the union. That was part of the delay. Having said that, I am not aware whether once they got into Government they have continued with the union to pursue whether the agreement can verify in any way where, not necessarily a senior social worker, a team leader in this particular case, would fit into that particular post, because my view at the time was that it would be much better to have a person specialised in disability for that.

But having said that, Mr Speaker, given that she has now said that there is a person acting while the consideration is taking place, is the person acting someone who is either a social worker or a senior social worker, or whether it is someone who has a speciality in disability?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the person who is acting in the role is the same person who was acting in the role when the previous incumbent retired.

Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, what do you mean by the phrase ‘the previous incumbent’? Do you mean my hon. Friend Mr Netto?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, the previous incumbent of the role – the person who was the Disabilities Team Leader. That person retired in July last year and someone was acting in that position. The person who is acting now is the same person.

Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry. It is just that I had thought that what you were saying was the position had remained vacant from July until December and that you had put somebody in, in an acting capacity, and at the very least you had done that. So the position then is that there has been acting, since July of last year and that person continues to act as from July of last year – the five months that he was responsible and the nine that you were responsible.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Actually, Mr Speaker, I understand that someone was not acting continuously between July and December, but that from time to time somebody acted during that period. The person who is acting now is the person who intermittently acted during that period. I hope that is clear.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the actual person that the hon. Lady is mentioning is a person who is not a social worker or a senior social worker, but a person who was the assistant nursing co-ordinator in Mount Alvernia. The only reason why he actually went to act at the time, when the previous person retired, was because it was more or less at the same time where we had employed new nurses to provide nursing duties in Dr Giraldi Home and it was important to ensure that we marry all different types of facilities, and this particular person had a specific timing or acting there to ensure that the smooth reforms were taking place.

So have the duties that were assigned at the time, for a specific period of time – certainly much shorter than five months, because it should not have been more than perhaps two or three months – now been extended, or whether that particular person has been made... I would not say ‘permanent’, because you told me it is on an acting basis?

So the person has been extended well beyond the brief that was done by the Care Agency at the time and obviously this has given a situation where you continue to act for this person, but the review is taking place. Eventually that particular person, if the review says, is not going to be a senior nursing grade, he is going to be someone specialised in disability and would have to return back to Mount Alvernia. Is that the case?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Regardless of what the recommendation is, it will be a review of the structure and not the person. That person is acting and that person will return to that person's post in Mount Alvernia when the acting period finishes.

If the vacancy then arises and that person wishes to apply for it, then so be it; but there is no question of that person then being made permanent there because that person is acting.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, what I am saying... perhaps I have not made myself sufficiently clear.

The substantive position of that particular person is not to be team leader of the Care Agency in terms of disability. The substantive position of that person is to be the assistant nursing co-ordinator up in Mount Alvernia. Therefore, there has to be a definite time when he has to finish the acting, to be able to go back. Or is it that he has no place there whilst somebody is acting in his post at Mount Alvernia?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, he is placed there temporarily while he is acting and someone is acting in his place in Mount Alvernia.

First of all, I think it is important to remind the hon. Member that the Dr Giraldi Home has a manager in any event, and we are talking about the post of the team leader, which is a management post, and then co-ordinates both the manager at Dr Giraldi Home and the manager at St Bernadette's.

The hon. Member will be happy to know that we have spent a considerable time reviewing this post, reviewing the structure, and in fact this is one of the posts that will be advertised very, very shortly. As he alluded to earlier, this also involved negotiations with the unions. So I hope that the answers are now clear.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am somewhat confused because I seemed to have picked up that she is now saying that the advert is going to be shortly advertised, when before she was telling me it was part of a much bigger review. The review has now concluded, obviously, and this is why you are in a position to... or the Care Agency are in a position to actually get out the vacancy to be published. So it seems like your previous intervention is contradicted by your latter one.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, because I said that the review was the reason as to why the post had taken nine months to be advertised. The review has been undertaken by many professionals, in consultation with the union, and the review is almost complete and we are in a position where we are now able to take a decision.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just ask, have you taken a decision or is it that you are in the process of taking the decision? Has the review completed or are you in the process of completing the review?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: In relation to this post a review has been undertaken. It is almost finalised and we expect to be in a position to be able to take a final decision very shortly – hopefully next week, if not the week after. (Interjections)

Hon. J J Netto: I am accepting that now, but she also mentioned that there have been discussions, perhaps negotiations with the union. Can I ask her then whether the union – the GGCA in this particular case – is satisfied and happy to change the original role of the team leader, which used to be a social worker, to perhaps being someone who is not necessarily a social worker but perhaps someone of another profession, but certainly someone who is specialised in this disability?

3630 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is assuming that the professionals involved in the review think that the post should not be undertaken by a social worker.

3635 Hon. J J Netto: No, no, it is not me who is saying that. This is the position of the GGCA. What I am trying to ascertain is whether the union, in part of this negotiations that you are now alluding to, has consented that the change can take place. It is not my view; it is the view of the union.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the union would only have to consent in the event that there was a change. I am not saying that there has been a change, Mr Speaker.

3640 Hon. J J Netto: Therefore, if there is not going to be a change, it means that it is not going to be someone of a profession who specialises in disabilities; it is going to be someone who comes from a social worker's background.

3645 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, perhaps it may be news to the hon. Gentleman, but most people who specialise in disabilities have a social worker background.

3650 Care Agency
Residential Home Manager post

Clerk: Question 767, the Hon. J J Netto.

3655 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say how long the position of Residential Home Manager has been vacant for and if it is the intention of the Care Agency to fill such a post in Tangier Views?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3660 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the position of the Residential Home Manager has been vacant since 5th September 2011. It is being covered in the same way that it was under the previous administration. The structure of residential care is under review.

3665 Care Agency
Assistance for former Looked After Child

3670 Clerk: Question 768, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say what assistance, if any, is the Care Agency providing to the former Looked After Child, now back with the family, as stated in answer to Question No. 632 of 2012?

3675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3680 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Looked After Child was formally discharged from care on 9th July 2012 following a formal LAC review which identified the support that was required, and a support package was provided.
Further details will be provided to the Opposition on a confidential basis.

3685 Care Agency
Training for Looked After Children

Clerk: Question 769, the Hon. J J Netto.

3690 Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Services state if further progress has been made in finding suitable training programmes for the remaining Looked After Children referred to in Question 632/2012; and, if so what the training will consist of, when the training will start, who will provide such training, and in the absence of a training programme placement, what measures is the Care Agency taking to ensure the Agency fulfils its parental responsibilities towards these children?

3695 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

3700 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this question now applies to two Looked After Children because one of those referred to in Question 632/2012 is no longer in care. One has been in employment through ETCL since 30th July 2012 and the other is registered with ETCL.

Given that this answer only applies to two children, further details will be provided to the Opposition on a confidential basis to avoid the risk of them being identified.

3705 Clerk: Question 770.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if that is a convenient moment, I propose to move the adjournment now to 2.30 p.m. tomorrow.

3710 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 21st September 2012 at 2.30 p.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 21st September 2012 at 2.30 p.m. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.

3715 Mr Speaker: Carried. This House will adjourn until Friday, 21st September 2012 at 2.30 p.m.

The House adjourned at 7.48 p.m.

BILLS
FIRST AND SECOND READINGS

A Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act
First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Readings.

A Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act. The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Public Health (Amendment) Act 2012
Second Reading approved

Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Act 2012.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill to amend the Public Health Act goes in tandem with a Bill that we will be presenting shortly in the line of business today, which is related to the smoke-free environment. It was a commitment to offer certain facilities to establishments to help them, if help were needed, to adjust to the fact that they will now have to be smoke free. Therefore, we are introducing a system of reduction of rates, on a sliding scale, which will initially involve an additional 20% of discount for one year to 30th September 2013 and that will reduce to an additional 10% leading up to 30th September 2014.

I say ‘additional’, Mr Speaker, because there is already a 20% reduction on rates for prompt payment. However, we have had to include an additional amendment in this Act, because the 20% which is currently given, which is more than the 10% legislated, was an arrangement arrived by the previous Administration by an exchange of letters and was never incorporated in the law. Therefore, we have taken this opportunity because we believe it is our duty to do so, to incorporate this discount in the law by the amendment in clause 2(1), making it 20% as opposed to 10%, and then the additional 20% and then 10% on the sliding scale.

Therefore, I now commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Opposition will be supporting this Bill, as indeed it will be supporting the Bill that I think the hon. Gentleman will be putting before the House in a few moments.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a second time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Public Health (Amendment) Act 2012
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment) Act 2012.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today?

Members voted Aye.

Mr Speaker: The Committee Stage and Third Reading will be taken today.

A Bill for an Act to prohibit smoking in certain places, premises and vehicles
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to prohibit smoking in certain places, premises and vehicles. The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to prohibit smoking in certain places, premises and vehicles be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to prohibit smoking in certain places, premises and vehicles be read a first time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012
Second Reading approved

Clerk: The Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, following the trend in many other countries and, indeed, a campaign led for several years in Gibraltar by several people, notably Mr Bryan Zammit, there was a general feeling in the community that we should catch up with the rest of the world and introduce legislation that would make the environment within premises and public service vehicles free from smoke.

It is one subject that was not contentious during the election campaign, but it was certainly this party's intention to introduce this Bill in the shortest time possible. I am therefore very pleased, as Minister both for Health and for the Environment, to bring this Bill before the House.

It is a Bill which brings us up to date with legislation in the UK and other European countries. It will prohibit smoking in enclosed public spaces. It will prohibit smoking in public service vehicles, with exemptions only in private residences, except when they are used as a place of work, and in certain specified rooms in hotels and, indeed, in other residences, such as care homes, hospices, prison and so on, where special provision can be made for long-term residents who smoke, to be able to continue to do so.

There are other interesting exemptions – although very few exemptions – and one is for performers in a play where the artistic integrity of the performance makes it appropriate for the person to smoke. I think that is a curious one to point out.

There is provision for exemptions to be made, although none are being made. The other provision is that 'no smoking' signs have to be placed in both premises and vehicles and there are penalties both for smoking where one should not and for not preventing smoking where it is prohibited.

I think that summarises the intention of the Bill. It is well known, it has been well covered in the community as a whole for quite some time, and I therefore commend the Bill to the House.

130 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

135 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes, I commend the Government for bringing the Bill to the House. It is an initiative that, as he himself has pointed out, had the support of all political parties at the last election. It is in the furtherance of a trend identified by the Minister, which is a very positive one and this is a very good step for our community. As an ex-smoker myself, it is a measure that I felt was long overdue and which I am happy to support, as are the rest of the Members sat on this side of the House.

140 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to prohibit smoking in certain places, premises and vehicles be read a second time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

145 Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012

Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Clerk: The Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012.

150 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

155 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and the Third Reading of the Bill be taken today?

Members voted Aye.

Mr Speaker: The Committee Stage and the Third Reading of the Bill will be taken today.

160 A Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act
First Reading approved

165 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act. The Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

170 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act be read for a first time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

175 Supreme Court (Amendment) Act 2012
Second Reading approved

180 Clerk: The Supreme Court (Amendment) Act 2012.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

185 Mr Speaker, in July of this year, Parliament passed an amendment to the Magistrates' Court Act, which had the effect of increasing the age for magistrates and justices of the peace from 70 to 72. This Bill does the same, in terms of increasing the age, but for lay assessors under the Supreme Court Act.

190 In order for a lay assessor to be appointed, that person needs to be qualified to be on the Jurors' List and be no more than 70 years old. The Government received representations, in particular from the Judicial Services Commission, about the desirability of increasing the age to 72 and the Government has accepted that recommendation and has put forward this Bill for that purpose.

I have, Mr Speaker, given notice that I will be moving at Committee Stage an amendment to the Bill. What the amendment does is allow justices of the peace to sit also as lay assessors. This again follows representations made to the Government by the Magistrates' Association, on the basis that their experience and expertise could be well utilised, if they were to be called upon to be lay assessors.

As the Act currently stands, they would not be able to do so, because of the requirement to be on the Jurors' List. Justices of the peace are not entitled to go on the Jurors' List, so therefore they were exempt from the possibility of applying for lay assessors or being appointed as lay assessors. What the amendment does is allow simply the appointment of justices of the peace as lay assessors.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think that we have had exchanges in relation to this in the past. I think that it is a sensible proposal by the Government and therefore it will enjoy the support of the Opposition benches.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act be read a second time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

A Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest. The Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest be read a first time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Employment (Public Interest Information) Act 2012
Second Reading approved

Clerk: The Employment (Public Interest Information) Act 2012.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the Bill for the Employment (Public Interest Information) Act 2012 be read for a second time.

This Bill implements one of our manifesto commitments which we have referred to in the past as whistleblower protection, as is the case in the UK – the same terminology is used. The purpose of the Bill is to provide protection for people who come forward to provide information about abuse or other wrong doing and the way that we are proposing to do this is to amend the Employment Act in a similar way to such protection which exists elsewhere such as in the UK.

Members of this House will be aware that a Command Paper was presented and published in June 2012 on this matter and the Command Paper contained the draft version of the Bill. The Government received one single response, which was taken into account before publishing this Bill. The response did not necessitate any changes to the substance of the Bill, so the Bill before this House is as it appeared in the Command Paper.

On the Bill itself, the protection it provides extends virtually to all employees in the public, private and voluntary sectors and the reference to ‘workers’ is a wider definition than that of ‘employee’ in the rest of the Employment Act. Therefore it includes members of the Royal Gibraltar Police under section 45L.

It protects them, if they make a qualifying disclosure in accordance with the provisions of the Bill. A qualifying disclosure is a disclosure of information which the worker reasonably believes tends to show one or more of the following that it is either happening now, took place in the past, or is likely to happen in the future: a criminal offence; a breach of legal obligation; a miscarriage of justice; a danger to health or safety of an individual; damage to the environment; or deliberate concealment of information tending to show any of the above five matters.

In making the disclosure, the worker must have a reasonable belief that the information he or she is disclosing shows one or more of the matters listed above, which is referred to in the Bill as a ‘relevant failure’. For a belief to be reasonable in such cases, the worker must show that he or she actually held that belief and that it was reasonable to do so in the circumstances at the time of the disclosure, even though it may be that the belief was unfounded and it might subsequently be discovered that the worker was wrong.

When the worker makes a qualifying disclosure, he or she will be protected by the provisions of the Bill, if the disclosure is made under the right circumstances, including that it should be made in good faith. There are, however, some occasions when a worker would not be protected: for example, in making the disclosure, the worker commits a criminal offence by doing so, or if the disclosure is made by the legal adviser, when information is subject to legal professional privilege.

Under the Bill, protection can be sought, even if the relevant failure took place overseas, or where the law applying to a relevant failure was not that of Gibraltar. There are a number of persons to whom disclosures may be made, ranging from the employer, the legal adviser, Ministers, and prescribed persons by order of the Minister. Disclosure to any of these persons are subject to different requirements, which are set out in the proposed sections: 45C, 45D, 45E and 45F.

A qualifying disclosure will be a protected disclosure, even if it is not made by any of the people listed above if the following conditions are met, which are set out in 45G. The worker must be making the disclosure in good faith, must reasonably believe that the information and the allegations are substantially true and must not be acting for personal gain.

Additionally, one or more of the following conditions has to be made: the worker reasonably believed that he or she would be subjected to a detriment by his or her employer, if the disclosure was made to the employer or to a prescribed person; in the absence of an appropriately prescribed person, the worker reasonably believed that the disclosure to the employer would result in the destruction or concealment of evidence relating to the failure; and the worker had previously disclosed substantially the same information to his employer, or to a prescribed person.

Finally, it must be reasonable for the worker to make the disclosure. Guidance as to what is reasonable is also included in the section which sets out what the Industrial Tribunal would have to take into account if it was required to decide whether the worker acted reasonably in all the circumstances. This includes: the identity of the person to whom the disclosure was made; the seriousness of the failure; and whether the relevant failure is continuing or likely to continue in the failure; whether the disclosure is made in breach of the duty of confidentiality, or by an employer to any other person; whether the disclosure was previously made to the employer or a prescribed person; and whether the disclosure was previously made to an employer and the worker complied with internal procedures.

The proposed section 45H makes provision for disclosure of information relating to exceptionally serious failures. In such cases there are different requirements relating to such a disclosure.

The proposed sections further make provision for the voiding of contractual duties of confidentiality which might preclude workers from making such a disclosure. The Bill will protect workers from action taken, or which may be taken by their employer. For example, if an employee is dismissed because he or she made the disclosure, this will be treated as an unfair dismissal, which may be actioned as such.

Workers are given a new right not to be subjected to a detriment by their employers on the grounds that they have made a protected disclosure and workers may present a complaint to a tribunal, if they suffer detriment as a result. Such complaints must be made within three months or such other time as the tribunal considers reasonable. If the tribunal finds a complaint well founded, it shall make a declaration and may make an award of compensation to be paid by the employer and the amount shall be such as the tribunal considers just and equitable in the circumstances.

The Bill in fact follows closely the provisions of the Public Interest Disclosure Act 1998, which amended the Employment Act 1996.

I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes.

Mr Speaker, unfortunately, in its current form, the Opposition is not able to support this Bill. I will express my concerns in relation to it and it may well be that a formula can be worked out, perhaps at Committee Stage. But of course, I will listen to what Minister Bossano has to say in response that may deal with our concerns, allowing the Opposition to support it.

Our concerns are that, although this is a Bill that has to be seen in the context that it is going to amend the Employment Act and it relates to workers, none of the disclosures or the so-called disclosures qualifying for protection are actually circumscribed by the worker's employment or the environment in which he works.

In other words, if one looks at, for example, proposed clause 45B(1), it says this:

'In this Part a "qualifying disclosure" means any disclosure of information, in other words, any disclosure of information which, in the reasonable belief of the worker making the disclosure, tends to show one or more of the following—

- (a) that a criminal offence has been committed, is being committed or is likely to be committed;
- (b) that a person has failed, is failing or is likely to fail to comply with any legal obligation to which he is subject;
- (c) that a miscarriage of justice has occurred, is occurring, or is likely to occur...

In its current form, it is our view that, though it may be intended by the Government that it ought to be read as circumstances relating to that person's employment, that is not the way that it reads and potentially, if this is allowed to go through, then the qualifying disclosures can be much wider. Yesterday, we were talking, jesting about the fact that when I drive home, I see people feeding the apes. That potentially may fall under something like this, because a criminal offence may be committed. I am a worker and I may then say, 'Well, I am a worker and I am entitled to whistleblow in that particular situation, without taking advantage of anonymity.' That is not the intention of this. I believe it is the effect of it and of course, if the Government were to turn round and say, 'Alright, it is a valid point, we will agree to an amendment'... and the amendment that I had in mind, for example, is in 45B(1), after the words 'means any disclosure of information', add the words 'relating to his employment or the environment in which he works', and then when one turns to clause 45C(b), where it says:

- 'where the worker reasonably believes that the relevant failure relates solely or mainly to—
- (i) the conduct of a person other than his employer, or
- (ii) any other matter for which a person other than his employer has legal responsibility,'

— again, wider, potentially, than circumstances relating to his employment — and I would add there: 'provided that the relevant failure or other matter relates to circumstances relating to the worker's employment.' If that formula of words, or something similar, can be worked out and either agreed or something similar can be suggested from the Government benches to make it absolutely clear that this relates to the working environment — the worker and the working environment and no wider than that — then it would have the support of the Opposition benches.

'to that other person'

Otherwise, I am afraid that this goes too far and we are not inclined... we will not support it, because potentially it allows workers, with the benefit of all the protection in this Bill, to just simply whistleblow in circumstances where I do not think, and we do not think, that the Bill is intended to cover.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we do not think that that is a possibility, because the structure of this Bill, inserting into the employment provisions of our law, is clearly relating to workers, dealing with aspects relating to their employment or in the carve-out which is provided for in the section that the hon. Gentleman has just taken us to.

Therefore, the hon. Gentleman is raising a point which we think is a non-point. He is identifying that he agrees with us in respect of what it is that we all wish to provide coverage for. We are not advised that this is an issue. In the hon. Gentleman's interpretation, this Bill covers anyone in Gibraltar who is in employment who witnesses any offence being committed and who then, instead of having such obligations or rights as he may have to report that matter, actually uses this particular amendment of the legislation as a cloak to ask for anonymity in that reporting. Mr Speaker, we do not think that is, in any way, a point of substance that causes us concern.

If an individual went to the police station and said, 'Look, I have seen an offence being committed and I am very worried about reporting it, because of the repercussions that could happen to me,' well, the Police have certain powers to assist that individual to deal with what he is telling them as intelligence, for example, rather than as evidence and in that way have some protection, if there is a good reason for the individual to seek protection in certain circumstances and within the discretion of the officers who may be dealing with the matter or of the Attorney, when it came to bringing a prosecution in respect of that information.

This Bill is being dealt with in this way, in particular, in order to ensure that it is clear – and we think it is abundantly clear – that what you are dealing with here are matters relating to employment and workers in the context of the legislation, clearly relating therefore to employment circumstances. So, Mr Speaker, although the hon. Gentleman has raised the issue, I do not think that this has merit requiring us to agree to an amendment.

But I will say this to him: although we do not agree that it is a relevant point, now that he has raised it and we are saying that the Bill is not intended to cover any of those circumstances and it is employment legislation for that purpose, I think he should rest assured that if anybody needs to look at any aspect of this piece of legislation, once it is an Act, if there should be any doubt, under the principles in Pepper v. Hart, then they will be able to see in Hansard that that is not the intention of the legislature at all.

Not that we believe for one moment that it is possible to read the Bill in that way, other than mischievously. I am not suggesting that the hon. Gentleman is reading it mischievously, but a lawyer might read it mischievously for the purposes of interpretation, in a case in a court or in a tribunal in this jurisdiction. They will now have that door closed to them, by the hon. Gentleman having raised the point – I do not think mischievously; I think genuinely – and the Government having dealt with it.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to – ? I am not sure you are allowed to... but I am not saying no, but the rules of debate are that everybody gets only one say in the matter. The usual process is to allow a Member to give way, but because of the nature of debate, I will allow...

Ah, the Hon. Gilbert Licudi. There is a way there! No doubt you will allow him to [inaudible]!

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): I was going to say that, if the hon. Member wants to say anything and he asks me to give way –

Mr Speaker: I was not going to rule him out altogether, but I am glad the Hon. Minister – I appreciate that –

Hon. G H Licudi: It is a Rule, that a Member speaks only once and then the speaker... the mover of the Bill –

Mr Speaker: No, but everyone gets only one say, anyway.

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, that is absolutely right, sir. If the hon. Member, before I sit down, wants me to give way – does he want to – ?

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful.

Hon. G H Licudi: Do you want to speak now, or after you hear what I have to say?

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, perhaps you might have your say and then I will –

Mr Speaker: You may not get a third bite of the cherry!

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am perfectly aware of the Rules. We have been tolerant and lenient in the past in relation to this –

Mr Speaker: No, no exactly. I was not going to rule it out altogether, but I just thought I would point it out.

The Hon. the Minister for Justice.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the point has been emphasised by the Chief Minister as to the context of this Bill and what it is intended to do. The very fact that it is brought to this House, not as a self-standing Bill for an Act, but as an amendment to the Employment Act precisely shows the context that this is the employment scenario.

But the Bill actually goes further than that. What we have to analyse in this context is what it is that this Bill does. This Bill is not about people going out and making disclosures. Anybody can go out and make a disclosure today about a criminal offence and all the other matters which are set out in the Bill. The purpose of the Bill is to provide protection in respect of that disclosure and what the hon. Members need to look at is what is the nature of that protection. The nature of that protection is the specific right, a statutory right that is included in this Bill, specifically for the purposes of that protection. ‘Rights under this part’ are set out in what is now clause 45M, which says specifically:

‘A worker has the right not to be subjected to any detriment by any act, or any deliberate failure to act, by his employer done on the ground that the worker has made a protected disclosure.’

Then 45N deals with complaints to the Industrial Tribunal, a complaint against the employer in respect of any detriment caused to the employment situation as a result of the disclosure.

So that is what this Bill is intended to do, to protect a worker in respect of detriment by the employer, arising from any disclosure which is listed.

It is important to remark and to reassert that anybody has the absolute right to make any disclosure of the type which is listed under ‘qualifying disclosure’ – anybody can do that – but what this does is go further than that and say if you do that and you are subjected to a detriment, that is a breach of a specific right which you have under the Bill and you can present a complaint to the Industrial Tribunal. Therefore, it is clear that it is in that context and that right exists in the employment scenario.

But I am happy to give way, if the hon. Member wants me to.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am very grateful to him for his contribution, which is always constructive. (Interjection) Look, there is a distinction here – (Interjection) There is a distinction between context and whether a particular disclosure is actually circumscribed by the principal Act. I accept that the context is the Employment Act, the context is a worker making the disclosure. I accept all that; but what I do not actually see in this Bill – and that is why we are concerned about it... Let me say that our concerns are not concerns that I have just simply thought about last night, looking at this Bill. I actually sat down with the Leader of the Opposition and looked at this and we were very concerned about the width of the disclosures, and also in particular clause 45C(b).

There is nothing in this Bill that actually circumscribes the nature of the disclosure and 45C(b) actually goes further. It is not even disclosure to the employer; it is disclosure to another person. All I am saying here, in relation to this, is if you want the support of the Opposition, let us make it absolutely clear that that is the context. I have suggested some language that you may wish to consider. There may be other language that the Government may want to propose.

I do not want to drag the point, but those are the concerns. I think that they are valid concerns and, at the present moment, taking into account this Bill, it does allow for disclosures that are wider and potentially, I think, there is a potential of misuse of the Bill.

The Chief Minister has said the courts can take into account debates in Parliament; but we all know that there are specific principles involved in relation to whether courts can take into account, in statutory interpretation, debates in Hansard. With respect, it is not as simple as what the Chief Minister has outlined to this House.

I think it is a simple point. Let’s just make the Bill clear, that it relates to these kind of circumstances and then it will enjoy the support of the Opposition – otherwise I am afraid that it will not.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member talks about context. It is not just the context; it is the specifics. It is the substantive issues that arise and what the hon. Member says – and he should reflect on what he is saying – his specific words are ‘this does allow for disclosures that are wider than necessary in the employment situation and permits abuse’.

This is not a Bill which is intended to proscribe – in other words, to limit – any behaviour that any of us are perfectly entitled to do today. So what disclosure is wider under this Bill than what I can do today by going to the Police and reporting a criminal offence or by making any other disclosure in respect of the six or the five items that are listed under ‘qualifying disclosure’? There is no limit. There is no proscription in any law, except possibly a confidentiality clause, rules of defamation, but other than those limits which are set out by law, other than those issues which are part of the general framework of our legislation and our common law system, anybody, whether a worker or not a worker, can make any disclosure of the kind described in this Bill.

So that is not what this Bill is about. This Bill is not about describing the types of disclosure that you can make; it is simply about giving a right to a worker of protection from detriment by your employer, if you make a disclosure that you can make in any event, regardless of this Bill. So you can go out, a worker or non-worker, in the street today and make this disclosure – nothing happens. But if you are subjected as a worker to a detriment by your employer, this Bill provides protection. It gives you an absolute right not to be subjected to detriment and a right to make a complaint against your employer in the Industrial Tribunal. That is what this Bill is about and not about allowing or disallowing disclosure.

So with the greatest respect – and I acknowledge the contribution that the hon. Member has made and it is clearly well intended and well meaning, with a suggestion of an amendment – but as the Hon. Chief Minister said, it is absolutely not necessary, because we do not want to give any sort of impression, in this Bill or otherwise, that we are limiting the rights of citizens out there in the street to make disclosures in the public interest. Everybody can do that, but workers who do that should not be subjected to a detriment in the context of their employment. That is what this Bill does.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Does the mover of the Bill wish to reply? The Hon. the Minister for Employment.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, first of all, we have got a manifesto commitment and therefore, we are going to implement what we committed to in the manifesto. If the Opposition wish to vote in favour, they can and if they wish to vote against, so be it.

Let me say that I have got here the UK law that was passed in 1998. The hon. Member has spent many years in the United Kingdom. I have never come across anybody in the United Kingdom arguing that the UK law should be changed since 1998, which is in fact 14 years, because there was a danger that this law might be used for anything other than what it was intended. In fact, the provisions are identical, down to the last full stop and comma – in fact, the United Kingdom law, section 43B, ‘Disclosures qualifying for protection’, broken down in (a) to (f) are an exact replica, because of course it has been copied from it – of 45B(1)(a) to (f). So the answer is we see no reason to depart from what has been in place in the law of the United Kingdom since 1998 and in which, in our view, is long overdue and should have been here, and the previous Government should have done in the 15 years they were there. It came into the legislation of the United Kingdom two years after the 1996 election.

Strangely enough, they have provided, in fact, similar protection by regulation for employees of European companies and apparently they did not see anything wrong with the wording they put there. This was done by them in 2005 and amended by me in 2012, as a result of a Directive that was amending the previous Directive which required it. They had no choice of course – it was EU law. But I find it odd that they should have decided in 2005 to give protection to people who work for European companies but not to the workers of Gibraltar and Gibraltarian companies. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

In addition, there is a very important area here, in terms of the work of the Employment Service. I am sure that anybody on that side who was previously working in the Employment Service will know that the problem that exists with people who are not being paid the legal wage is that there is no protection in the law of Gibraltar against an employer that is not paying the legal minimum wage. For example, we have got a legal minimum wage now of £5.70 and if somebody is paid less, the Labour Inspectors, if they can find the evidence, can require the employer to pay it and in fact we can prosecute it, because it is a criminal offence not to be doing it. They are breaking the legislation which is there to protect good employers against bad ones, as well as protecting employees. But the employee who reports this is not protected against dismissal in the first 52 weeks of his work, so nobody will come forward, and even after the 52 weeks they do not come forward. So people get told quite openly, ‘If you don’t like the wage, there is the door’, and there is nothing they can do because we do not protect them.

With this law somebody can, in their first week of employment, go to the Employment Service and say, ‘This is what my employer is doing’, and if he gets sacked, even though he has not had 52 weeks of continuous service, this law gives him immediate protection. That, I hope, will have an immediate effect in ensuring that those employers who have not been able to get to comply with the law in the past will comply with the law in the future.

I see the main effect of this legislation, in fact, in ensuring that workers who are in the private sector and are not receiving what the law entitles them to will be able to come forward as soon as this is on the statute book and the Employment Service and the Labour Inspectors will be able to ensure that those workers are protected, that the law is observed, and those workers will then be entitled, if they are suffering detriment, in the sense that they are sacked as a result of coming forward and giving the evidence, they are protected because it then is an automatic unfair dismissal and there is no limit to the compensation.

So I commend the Bill to the House. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest be read a second time. Those in favour; those against.

Clerk: Clauses 3 to 5.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, for the sake of clarification, can the Hon. Minister say if it will be considered... There is no provision for activity in the area. No provision of activity has been taken into account, for example, the eating in a conservatory and whether that would be considered...

Yes, a concern was felt that if an area was designated where smoking was allowed, for instance a covered area outside a restaurant, and we have received representations from the public where they felt uncomfortable with having a smoker on the table next to theirs while they were eating, and there is no provision for activity in those areas within these sections.

Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, this relates to premises and not activity.

An area outside a restaurant could well be considered an enclosed area because even though it is a temporary awning, if there is sufficient cover along the sides, and it is defined in the Bill – I believe it is more than 50% of the sides, excluding doors and windows – that is considered an enclosed space. So even outside a restaurant, if it were significantly enclosed, that would be prohibited. If it is completely unenclosed, then that would not be prohibited and not covered in this Bill, although I believe there are moves elsewhere and perhaps we would catch up with that later.

But at this point in time the activity does not fall within the confines of this Bill.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, we have only raised the concern in the context of the developing trend that is becoming apparent elsewhere and certainly just to put it in mind, although you may well have... you indeed already seem to have had it in mind, of such developments.

But I am grateful for the discussion of this [inaudible].

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, it is something that may develop in other countries and we will want to keep abreast with that and not have to catch up afterwards.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, could the Minister just assist me for one moment? What provision does he say is defined in the Bill?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: What I said is that it determines what an enclosed space is. For example –

Hon. D J Bossino: It has just been identified to me and it is clause 2(3).

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: – that describes what... that is right.

Mr Chairman: Clauses 3 to 5 stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 6 and 7.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am sorry, Mr Chairman, sorry.

In respect of clause 4, 'Public service vehicles'... (Interjection by Hon. Dr. J E Cortes) Yes. In relation to the clause that covers public service vehicles, it just occurs to me something actually we have discussed beforehand, it just occurs to me where such a vehicle is used for those purposes, does this cover smoking in the vehicle when it is not occupied for the purposes of that service – for example, a taxi driver when he has no fares on board. Does this provision cover that instance as well?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I think by reading it, Mr Chairman, it is prohibited at all times in any vehicle which is used or is licensed to be used.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Chairman. I am grateful for the clarification because certainly, obviously, there is an issue relating to the presence of tobacco fumes in vehicles, even for some time after with open windows and doors, and I merely wanted to have that clarifying conversation between us.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: And the smell as well within the vehicle, Mr Chairman.

Mr Chairman: Are we content with clauses 6 and 7? Clauses 6 and 7 stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 8.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, within the specified premises where smoking is allowed, does this mean that the workers in these institutions can also smoke in these areas or just the residents of those particular rooms or institutions?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Again, it defines, Mr Chairman, the areas by space. It is not prohibited in a designated room that is used as... One would have thought that the workers would not be smoking in those rooms, but it actually designates the room where smoking is not prohibited.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, perhaps, Mr Chairman, on the other side of that and the fact that smoking would be allowed in those rooms, workers in those areas who do not smoke, has the Government considered the issue for employees who are employed in that environment and the affect that that may have on them? Is this something which is obviously not covered in this particular Bill?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Carrying on from what my hon. Friend has said, for instance, there is protection for workers in clause 6(2). Is there something similar for these – ?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: A residential home would be a public space, so it would be covered because it is a public area, an area to which the public is allowed; but the exemption is in those designated rooms (Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.) like in a hotel. In a hotel you are not allowed to smoke except in those designated rooms which are designated as smoking.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, but the point we raise is only in respect of the protection of employees having to work in those areas and again, it is not a bone of contention. It is just an issue that we raise, because it is certainly something that has been represented to us on a couple of occasions by some constituents who have identified that it is an issue for these employees in the areas where smoking is allowed.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes. Can I just say, Mr Speaker, perhaps the point is this, and to ask the hon. Lady and Gentleman how it is that they were going to protect workers in the private clubs and restaurants that operated isolated and separately ventilated smoking rooms, where they would have allowed smoking?

You see, the policy that is being given effect to by these two Bills actually takes into consideration that even in letting bars, restaurants and private clubs who have isolated rooms to allow smoking, which our Bill does not but theirs would have, you would have been exposing employees to smoking.

So the only people sitting in those areas to have their meals would be those who wanted to sit in smoking areas, but the employees would not necessarily have wanted to be in smoky environments, but if they had the job in that restaurant or that private club, they would have been exposed to smoking.

So in the context of what they were committed to doing, employees – smokers and non-smokers – would have been exposed to smoking. In the context of what we are doing, there is a very tight control in respect of where that exposure will occur is much tighter than this would have allowed.

So that is the issue, I think, to try and reconcile.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, with respect to the Chief Minister, I did say, the moment before he made his contribution, that this is not a matter of contention between us. It was something that I was certainly highlighting or that had come to our notice, post the election and post those commitments, which in any event are irrelevant today, in the extent that this is a policy that is now being pursued by the Government and which we are commending the Government for.

Again, it is just an issue we are highlighting for discussion, or perhaps just to bear in mind again as part of the development of this policy.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, obviously we show great concern for the workers, but I think we have to focus this, as the Chief Minister has said, in that we have gone the whole hog, so to speak. We have to look at it the other way around.

This is an exemption to allow people who are in care homes, hospices, maybe in prison, who have to be there long term, who may already be smoking, to allow them some kind of exemption because they have no choice but to be there and one would have thought that any worker who has to enter those rooms would do that for relatively short periods of time.

But the focus here is on the people who actually have little choice but to be within those rooms.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, clause 8(3)(c):

‘has a ventilation system that does not ventilate into any other parts of the premises...’

How will this subclause work in existing premises?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: The ventilation would have to go outside the building. It would have to suck it outside the building. It would have to be done in such a way that the ventilation was not just circulated into another part of the building. (Interjections)

Mr Chairman: Before we leave clause 8 should not, in subclause (3), the word ‘regulation’ be replaced by the word ‘Act’? This is an Act. (Interjections)

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, thank you for spotting the deliberate mistake. (Laughter)

Mr Chairman: Clause 8, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 9, 10 and 11.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in clause 11(2), does that include clubs’ premises?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It says that this part does not extend in a place where retail of alcohol is allowed, so that includes any place where retail of alcohol for consumption is allowed.

810 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, the only reason I raise it is that we assume this has been taken based on the UK legislation, i.e. the Health Act 2006, and in that Act, in section 3B, it does specify, as it says in subclause (2), authorising for sale by retail of alcohol for consumption, but it also has a separate subclause saying:

815 'premises in respect of which a club premises certificate has effect.'

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: That is not included here.

820 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: That is not? Do our clubs come under a different regime, or it is taken as read then that clubs would come under...?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: It is taken as read that they would come under this one if they sell alcohol.

825 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Chairman, just a minor matter: clause 11(1) reads:

'The Minister with responsibility for health may make regulations providing smoking not to be prohibited.'

830 It should probably read 'may make regulations providing for smoking not to be prohibited.'

Mr Chairman: So we add the word 'for' between 'providing' and 'smoking'.
Yes.

835 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, clause 11(6): is there a particular policy in that regard, and will there be guidelines?

840 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, the policy is subclause (6), that before I consider making any regulations for exemptions, I feel that I need the advice of the person who is qualified in these areas, the Director of Public Health, to advise me of public health consequences. I feel that it is a safeguard to public health that the Director should be consulted, before I take it upon myself to make an exemption.

Mr Chairman: Are we content with 9, 10 and 11? Clauses 9, 10 and 11 stand part of the Bill.

845 Clerk: Clauses 12 and 13.

Mr Chairman: Clauses 12 and 13 stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 14, 15 and 16.

850 Mr Chairman: Clauses 14 to 16 stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The Long Title.

855 Mr Chairman: The Long Title stands part of the Bill.

Supreme Court (Amendment) Bill 2012
Clauses considered and approved

860 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Supreme Court Act.
Clause 1.

865 Mr Chairman: Clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 2.

870 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I run the risk of being a little bit over pedantic, but in the suggested amendment by the Minister for Justice where he is, in effect, asking us to include the words 'or his being a justice of the peace', my first reaction is the nomenclature 'justice of the peace' is probably a proper noun – should it not carry a capital J and a capital P in the same way that in a previous Bill, when we referred to Minister with capital M and to the Director of Public Health, who was capital D for Director and so on?

875 It is a small pedantic thing, but coming from the teaching profession, I sometimes am overkeen in trying to get this thing right. (Laughter)

880 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Chairman, my recollection is that in the Magistrates' Court Act the definition of 'magistrate' says it includes a justice of the peace, and that uses small j and small p, but that is only recollection. I believe that is the case.

Clerk: Clause 2.

885 Mr Chairman: There are amendments moved by the Minister.

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman. In clause 2(3), I would ask that for the words, and I quote:

"the only reason for his disqualification from being a juror is his age"

890 we should substitute:

"the reason for his disqualification from being a juror is his age or his being a justice of the peace."

895 In clause 2(4), for the words:

""(other than by virtue of his age)""

we should substitute:

900 ""(other than by virtue of his age or his being a justice of the peace)"".

Those are the only two amendments that I propose.

905 Mr Chairman: Clause 2, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: The Long Title.

Mr Chairman: The Long Title stands part of the Bill.

910

Employment (Public Interest Information) Bill 2012 Clauses considered and approved

915 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to provide protection for employees and other workers who disclose information in the public interest. Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Clause 1 stands part of the Bill.

920 Clerk: Clause 2.

Mr Chairman: Clause 2 stands part of the Bill.

925 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, to go back to clause 2, can I ask the Hon. the Minister just to explain, in relation to 45C(1)(b), where it says:

930 'where the worker reasonably believes that the relevant failure relates only or mainly to –
(i) the conduct of a person other than his employer, or
(ii) any other matter for which a person other than his employer has legal responsibility to that other person.'

– what circumstances does that clause envisage?

935 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I would imagine, Mr Speaker, that if you are in a place of employment and you see somebody committing a criminal offence, you do not ignore it just because, in fact, the person who is there may be a customer. If you go to report it to your employer and your employer sacks you because it is bad for business, then you go to the tribunal.

I can tell the hon. Member that that is also in UK law.

940 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, look, he has not provided me with the explanation, but in any event, we have had the debate.

945 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he has asked me to give him an example, which is... I have invented one on the spot for his benefit. I do not know what more he wants me to do for him.

Hon. D A Feetham: But that example cannot really be apposite, no. If you have a customer and the customer is doing something, you report it to the employer. Here, what we have is:

950 '(i) the conduct of a person other than his employer, or
(ii) any other matter for which a person other than his employer has legal responsibility,
to that other person.'

955 I do not know what that particular section actually goes to. I can understand, according to the debate that we have had and the rationale that you have provided and the Minister for Justice has provided, that you may make a disclosure to your employer about something occurring within the context of the employment organisation, but (b)... I am not sure what (b) is actually intended to do.

960 Mr Chairman: As a lawyer, I would say a superior officer who is not an employer. Someone in between the chain of command. That would be his superior officer –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I am happy to give another example, if the hon. Gentleman likes.

965 If you have a situation where, for example, a law firm calls in a firm of accountants to do a job, the individual who comes in from the accountancy firm works for the accountancy firm. He may spot something in the law firm which he believes is contrary to law and he reports it, in this context, to the head of chambers at the law firm, not to his chief executive officer in the accountancy firm. That is covered by this clause.

970 Mr Chairman: That would be covered by the normal audit practice, anyway.

975 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, it might be, Mr Speaker, but what this does is that the accountant reporting the matter to the head of chambers cannot be sacked by the chief executive of the accountancy firm for having taken that step. If the head of chambers is very annoyed as a result and makes a complaint to the accountancy firm, or such other circumstances as might stem from that, it protects the employee of the accountancy firm, principally from the accountancy firm, for having taken that step in reporting something to the head of chambers.

Mr Chairman: Clause 2 stands part of the Bill.

980 Clerk: The Long Title.

Mr Chairman: The Long Title stands part of the Bill.

985 The House resumed.

BILLS FOR THIRD READING

990 Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2012
Smoke-Free Environment Bill 2012
Supreme Court (Amendment) Bill 2012
Employment (Public Interest Information) Bill 2012
995 Third Readings approved; Bills passed

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1000 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report that the Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2012; the Smoke-Free Environment Bill 2012; the Supreme Court (Amendment) Bill 2012; the Employment (Public Interest Information) Bill 2012 have been considered in Committee and agreed to, with amendments, and I now move that they be read a third time and passed.

1005 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that the Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2012, the Smoke-Free Environment Bill 2012, the Supreme Court (Amendment) Bill 2012 and the Employment (Public Interest Information) Bill 2012 be read a third time and passed.

Those in favour of the Public Health (Amendment) Bill 2012; (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Those in favour of the Smoke-Free Environment Bill 2012; (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

1010 Those in favour of the Supreme Court (Amendment) Bill 2012; (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Those in favour of the Employment (Public Interest Information) Bill 2012; (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried by majority. (Interjection) Only against the Employment.

1015 Hon. Chief Minister: I think, purely by inadvertence – but, for the purposes of Hansard – that the hon. Member voted against the Supreme Court (Amendment) Act.

Mr Speaker: No.

1020 Clerk: That is how it sounded. (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: There appears to be a division on your side of the House as to whether I voted against.

1025 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let's be clear: the hon. Gentleman, when the noes were called, made a noise. He may have made an 'aye-no' noise, but he made it when the noes were called. (Interjection)

For the purposes of Hansard, can we just clarify that the Supreme Court (Amendment) Act has gone through unanimously?

1030 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, absolutely. I indicated during the debate on the merits that we were voting in favour of it. I commended the Hon. the Minister for Justice on something that needed to be done, and that is the position of the Opposition. There appears to be division on your side, even on that!

1035 Hon. Chief Minister: When the Speaker called 'all those against' or called for the noes, the hon. Gentleman said 'Aye', and that –

Hon. D A Feetham: At that point.

1040 Hon. Chief Minister: – and that, for the purposes of Hansard, can be very confusing, so I think it is important that this should be clarified.

1045 Mr Chairman: My understanding was that the first three Bills were passed unanimously and the last Bill was passed by a Government majority. (Interjections) I had to prod them into voting against.

Questions for Oral Answer

1050 EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Care Agency staff Training and Development Programme

1055 Clerk: Answers to Oral Questions continue.

Question 770/2012, the Hon. J J Netto.

1060 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I just say, before reading the Question, that with hindsight, having written the Question and submitted it, and when I actually saw it again, I came to the realisation that it is excessive in length. It is not intended to set a precedent, obviously, in the future, and obviously I shall take it into account that in the future it is not as excessive as this one. It is not intended to be so.

1065 Mr Speaker: My initial view, on reading this Question, was it was excessive and contrary to Standing Orders, but then I took the view that, if I had drawn it to the Hon. Member's attention, it would have been substituted by 32 Questions and, in all probability, several of them would be answered together. So without setting any precedent, it was allowed on this occasion.

1070 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful and obviously it was not intended to be excessive in nature. Having said that, if I may continue then, with your ruling, Mr Speaker –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): If I can assist the hon. Gentleman –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Chief Minister.

1075 Hon. Chief Minister: If I can assist the hon. Gentleman, if he will give way, we are happy to take that Question as read, because I know it is a very long question for him to have to read into Hansard.

Mr Speaker: I am told Hansard needs a full recording.

1080 Hon. Chief Minister: Because now... Sorry, well, we were prepared to take it as read, but now that it is a recorded Hansard, I am afraid that it is –

1085 Hon. J J Netto: Could I propose a hybrid. Could I propose the beginning and the end? Would that be sufficient?

Mr Speaker: No, I am told by the Clerk... I did discuss this with the Clerk before we sat. I am told that for Hansard purposes, I am afraid the hon. Member will have to expend energy.

1090 Hon. J J Netto: I shall have my friend to fill a glass of water here for me! (Laughter and interjections)

1095 Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Affairs state if the Staff Training and Development Programme for the Care Agency staff for 1st April 2012 to 30th March 2013 contains any of the following: (1) General Information; (2) Staff Training Record; (3) Application for Training Forms (Training outside Care Agency); (4) Internal Training Request Form; (5) Training Evaluation Form; (6) Proposals for Training Form; (7) Training Timetable; (8) Presentation Skills Course; (9) DCRT-Conflict Resolution Training (Level 1 Trainers Update); (10) Missing Persons Training; (11) DCRT-Conflict Resolution Training (Level 2 Train the Trainer); (12) Safeguarding Vulnerable Adults-Policy & Procedure Training; (13) Within the Generic Core Training-Timetable: (a) Introduction to the Care Agency; (b) Health and Safety, Food Hygiene and Infection Control; (c) Values, Attitudes and Beliefs; (d) Professional Boundaries; (e) the Importance of Carer Workers and Caring; (f) DCRT-Conflict Resolution Training (Level 1); (g) Effective Communication; (h) Safeguarding Vulnerable Service Users; (i) Manual Handling Training; (j) Accountability, Responsibility and Medication Training (Assessed); (k) Fire Safety, EVAC Chair and Anglia Blanket; (l) Emergency First Aid at Work; (m) Customer Care; (n) Alcohol/Drug Abuse-Awareness and Policies in the Care Agency; (o) DCRT-Conflict Resolution (Level1-Refresher); (p) Manual Handling, EVAC Chair/Anglia Blanket, Basic Life Support (Refresher Course); (q) DCRT-Conflict Resolution Training (Level 2); (14) Headway-Acquired Brain Injury – Challenging Behaviour; (15) Headway-Acquired Brain Injury – Understanding the Brain, its physical, cognitive, behavioural and emotional effects (Day 1); (16) Headway-Acquired Brain Injury – Challenging Behaviour (Day 2); (17) the 12-hour Paediatric First Aid Course; (18) Emergency First Aid at Work (1 day); (19) People Handling and Risk Assessment Key Trainers Certificate and Children; (20) Handling supplementary day (5 days Trainer the Trainer course); (21) Basic Life Support – Train the Trainer; (22) Mentorship for Practice (5 days); (23) Eastern Beach Mobility Assistant Induction Training; (24) Level 3 Chartered Institute of Environmental Health Accredited – Health and Safety in the Workplace (days); (25) BVS Online Training; (26) NVQ A1 Assessors course (Level 3); (27) NVQ Health and Social Care Levels 2 and 3; (28) Children Act Training; (29) 12-hour Paediatric First Aid Course; (30) Makaton Training; (31) ILM (Institute of Leadership and Management) Level 2 Award in Team Leading; and (32)

if any of the above have not been included, which one(s) is/are they, and if there is/are additional item(s) which is/are over and above those listed above, which one(s) is/are they?

1120 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for acknowledging that his Question and the format is in fact in breach of Standing Orders. Perhaps it may have been easier if this was a Written Question.

1125 In any event, Mr Speaker, let me start off by saying – although, of course, I am sure that this was an innocuous mistake – but I think that, for the record, I want to make it clear that my title is the Minister for Social Services and not Social Affairs, which is what the – (Several Members: Ooh!) For the sake of Hansard, Mr Speaker.

1130 Mr Speaker: Valid point.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I assume that the information contained in this Question is from the 2011 Training Manual, which the hon. Member has retained and I can confirm that the above mentioned has been included in the Care Agency Staff Training and Development Programme for the Care Agency for 1st April 2012 to 30th March 2013, with the exception of numbers (3) and (5), because they have been updated and amended; (8), (10), (11), (12), (14), (17), (19), (20), (23), (24) and (27) to (31) because they were specific service requests for that time period.

Items (13)(e), (g), (h), (n) and (q) have been updated and delivered as part of another session and are now done as in-house training.

1140 Additional items have been included in this programme. I am now handing the hon. Member a list of additional items.

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Mid Harbour Estate Maintenance

1150

Clerk: Question 771, the Hon. D J Bossino.

1155

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am asking this Question, although I do not have shadow responsibility for housing, only because my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, was away at the time and we wanted, as an Opposition, to submit this Question for tabling for Oral Questions in this House. Just to explain that to those listening in.

1160

Can the Minister for Housing advise this House what arrangements are in place in relation to the general upkeep and maintenance of the Mid Harbour Estate, to include, in particular, the replanting of the flower beds, the re-installation of the gym equipment and the children's play area?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1165

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, with regard to the general upkeep and maintenance of the Estate, this is carried out by GJBS. The replanting of the flower beds is carried out by Greenarc, as part of the initial contract.

The department responsible for the maintenance of all play areas, including gym equipment, is the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, who are currently involved in carrying out the necessary repairs in connection with the gym equipment and the children's play area.

1170

Hon. D J Bossino: I understand from representations which have been made to us as a party that the play area is not yet ready and, furthermore, that the gym equipment – or the fitness equipment may be a more appropriate term to use, in these circumstances – I understand it is equipment which is used by people outside and not in an enclosed area – is not yet available and is still currently in a store room.

1175

So in the light of those prevailing facts, I would ask the Hon. Minister if he could advise when he thinks these two aspects within the Estate will be complete and ready for use.

1180

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, if I may, I will answer that question, because it is the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority which is in charge of the playground and the fitness area and yes, he is right it is not in place yet. Unfortunately, it needed to be lifted because of water penetration on the parking spaces underneath.

1185

What happened was that it was done in such a rush and so quickly to be put on the podium, that advice given to the GSLA not to place it there was ignored and therefore they did place it there, which meant that the bolts that were holding the play area plus the gym equipment penetrated what was a layer of tarmac or tarmacking underneath the podium and therefore has now created the problem of water penetration underneath.

1190

So what has happened is that, when I went there, the solution to the problem was to lift everything off, get the contractors to put a new tarmacking underneath and then, therefore, place these things in the right way, so that there is no penetration through the tarmac and no penetration of water underneath.

So there has had to be extensive works that have to be done because the professionals' advice previously was not listened to and therefore this is the consequences of the delay.

Hon. D J Bossino: I hear what the Minister says and I cannot necessarily rebut what he is saying specifically in his initial words in his reply, where he says 'because of the rush' – I am not in a position to refute that or otherwise, but it is certainly something I will investigate.

1195

Mr Speaker, I am not sure that the supplementary has been answered, which is when does the Hon. Minister for Housing – or in this case perhaps, the hon. Member with responsibility for Sports – thinks that these amenities will be available?

1200

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as soon as is possible and I am talking – pardon? (Interjection) No, I cannot give you the time, because then you will hold me to the time, basically; but I am telling you that I am pressing, I can assure you that I am pressing both the GSLA, the contractors and anybody who is responsible to put that back, to put it as soon as possible. I am pressing on that.

1205

I am hoping that it will be weeks, rather than months, so I can give you that indication, because what happens is that I am pressing as much as I can, but it is a physical thing. If it is not ready, it is not ready, but I can tell you because I am aware that children there cannot use the playground and I am aware that people who used to use that training facility and the gym cannot use it. So, as Minister, I want it ASAP.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1210

Hon. E J Reyes: May I, Mr Speaker, come back to the Minister for Housing, who kindly told us that the general upkeep and maintenance for the Mid Harbour Estate was undertaken, those tasks were undertaken by GJBS. Just for the sake of clarity, does that include the replacement of the fused light bulbs, which has been a cause of previous questions in the past? The Minister at that time was not exactly sure. Maybe he has been enlightened now in respect of light bulbs.

1215

Hon. C A Bruzon: The replacing of a light bulb will be done by our technical staff in the City Hall, I am sure. If it is something major, then of course we will involve GJBS.

1220

Hon. D J Bossino: The reason we are asking is because I am not sure if the Minister is aware – I am sure he himself may have been at the receiving end of representations, as indeed we have – as to the general state of the Estate. Does he have any information with regard to this and can he supply us with any information with regard to this? Is he concerned that the Estate may not be up to scratch, in terms of maintenance and the like?

1225

Hon. C A Bruzon: I am not quite sure what you mean by 'the general state' of the Estate – if you could define that a little more clearly?

1230

Hon. D J Bossino: There have been complaints in relation to the inordinate amount of time, we believe, it takes for repairs to be undertaken – like, for example, my hon. Friend referred to, the fixing of light bulbs. I raise that as one specific example.

1235

Hon. C A Bruzon: I was not aware that it takes such a long time, but I can confirm to the hon. Gentleman that I will be meeting the Committee, and I am sure that they will raise points, such as the one you have raised now. As I say to all the other representatives from different Government estates, these simple issues should be addressed immediately and there should be no delays.

So that is the message I want to convey to you and to the tenants of the Estate.

1240

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, those are, indeed, simple issues which ought to be addressed as quickly as possible. But I would ask the Minister – given that he has indicated that he will be meeting the Committee of the Estate – as to when he... Is a meeting scheduled? If so, when is that meeting to take place?

1245

Hon. C A Bruzon: The date is not scheduled yet, but we have been in correspondence and my secretary will be contacting them soon to arrange a date, probably mid to end of October.

Flats currently empty and awaiting repairs Details

1250

Clerk: Question 772, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to his answer given in Question 638/2012, can the Minister for Housing state how many flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs, giving a breakdown in respect of:

1255 (a) pre-war and post-war flats; (b) flat size composition; (c) the dates as from when these flats have been empty; (d) the nature of repairs which are required to be undertaken before they may be reallocated?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1260 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, the information requested has already been published online on the Government website.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I do not think the full extent of what is requested is available. I did come here to Parliament and went online and checked it and, certainly, the full extent was not available there.

1265 Perhaps we are going to have to agree to disagree, but I did not find the full... I did in respect of other Questions that I have asked in the past, but not in respect of this one, Mr Speaker.

1270 Hon. C A Bruzon: I have got a note here that says that these are published in tables at pages 30 and 31 – if you would like to make a note of that. Should the information not be there, obviously if you call my secretary, I would be happy to ask my staff to provide you with the information.

1275 Hon. E J Reyes: I think, Mr Speaker, that is the best mutual arrangement we can come to. I will check the tables on pages 30 and 31 and should I experience any difficulties, then I will be in contact with the Minister's office.

Housing Waiting Lists Details

1280 Clerk: Question 773, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1285 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists have, since his answer given to Question 651/2012, been allocated a flat, giving a breakdown of the size of home as well as indicating if they pertained to either the Social or Medical Waiting Lists category?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1290 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand over to the Hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.
In general I can say that a total of 39 applicants have been allocated a flat.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 773

A total of 39 applicants have been allocated a flat, as follows:

	Medical A+	Medical B	Social A	Waiting List
1RKB	-	-	2	1
2RKB	3	-	1	5
3RKB	-	-	2	15
4RKB	-	1	3	5
5RKB	-	-	-	1
6RKB	-	-	-	-
TOTAL	3	1	8	27

Housing Waiting Lists Number of applicants purchasing homes

Clerk: Question 774, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1300 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists have, since his answer given to Question 652/2012, been removed from the waiting lists due to purchasing their own homes and, if any, indicating if they pertained to either the Social or Medical Waiting Lists category?

1305 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, none.

1310

Housing rental stocks
Criteria for contracting out repairs/refurbishments

1315 Clerk: Question 775, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of his Ministry's criteria for the contracting out of repairs/refurbishments of housing rental stocks?

1320 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, as the refurbishment etc of flats are of a minor nature, contracts are being awarded on the lowest of a three quote system. Contractors used are all in the Government's approved lists.

1325 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker. My understanding is that obviously he is getting three quotes and then going to the lowest in respect of minor repairs. Does that mean that these are in respect of all repairs and refurbishments, or only those that the Housing Works Agency have not been able to meet within a certain timescale of tackling the job?

1330 Hon. C A Bruzon: This refers to jobs being done by the Housing Works Agency, or by small companies that are engaged to do internal repairs.

1335 Hon. J J Netto: If I may. What are the Department's criteria for triggering any particular work to be contracted out to these particular contractors in the approved list? Is it a question that when a report is reported to the reporting office, beyond a certain date when the work is not done that you may have a particular independent category of work perhaps, a set amount of time to allow for the Housing Works Agency to do it; but if it goes beyond that particular reference target date... What are the criteria for saying this would have gone initially to the Housing Works Agency, but now it is going to go to the contractor, in the contractors' approved list? What are the criteria? How does the Department go about determining...?

1340 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I believe we have had this question before and I do not know if the answer was unsatisfactory and you want a more accurate answer. The reality is that when jobs are reported... I remember saying to the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that I have no system in place that says that the job has to be done within a three-month period. I answered him by saying that the situation is such and the urgency is often such, obviously for the tenant, that it is always important that the jobs have to be done as soon as humanly possible. That is the answer that I have to give you again, Mr Speaker... that I have to give the gentleman again, Mr Speaker.

1350 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I can accept that there may not be any systems in place. I am not suggesting that he is trying to avoid the issue, but clearly someone has to have criteria for saying, 'Well, this particular report which has just been recorded in the Reporting Office is going to go straight to the Housing Works Agency to be done today' or no... Perhaps this particular job, because we know in the Reporting Office, it is something to do with doing a new pair of doors, when we have so many doors outstanding in the Housing Works Agency to be done, we know it is going to be taking a long time to do. So therefore, rather than take it into the Housing Works Agency, you might as well go straight to the contractor, or else the job is never going to be done.

1360 Someone somewhere has got to have some kind of criteria for determining when the report comes into the Reporting Office, where you send it towards the Housing Works Agency or you send it over to the contractors, and that is what I am trying to establish. We are not inventing the wheel here. Any local authority in the UK, I am sure, with council houses and flats, they have their own system in play and depending on the type of report they would say, 'Well, you know, it takes two weeks for this particular job to be done by an in-house directly employed labour force or to the contractor.’ These things are well established perhaps in local authorities up and down in the UK.

I accept that there may not be a system in place in Gibraltar, I accept that, but there have to be criteria for determining how long does the tenant wait for a job, depending on the nature of the report, because if something can wait for a while – fine. But there are certain things that cannot wait for a while.

Perhaps if he has not got an answer... I shall leave it to rest there, but perhaps bring it back in a few months’ time to see to give an opportunity when he can have a discussion with his own technical officers, who undoubtedly will tell him that what I am saying exists in the local authorities in the UK, to be able to determine what criteria to use.

So I shall leave it there to rest and perhaps he may take it on board with his own staff to look into the matter.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will just thank him, Mr Speaker.

I will make an additional comment, of course, that almost goes without saying, that there are urgent cases, like a plumbing problem, which are tackled immediately – that is pretty clear. There are other problems, which I am sure that my technical staff will look at and use their discretion, their expertise, and say, ‘Well, look, let’s get on with this job because this one is more urgent than the other one.’

I cannot offer you at the moment any other... I just leave it to the discretion of the technical people who know exactly what... hopefully, what they are doing and they have to...

We are also undergoing, Mr Speaker, a whole process of reformation and there will be major changes, which I hope sincerely will improve the service to the customer.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. The Hon. Minister for Housing has concluded by saying that there will be many major changes. Changes in respect of procedures? Changes in respect of staffing? Can he shed some light?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, indeed. It has been mentioned before in the past. We are embarking upon changes within the Technical Department of the City Hall and the Housing Works Agency to bring about a merger, which will happen when we are ready, and it will be announced, hopefully, very shortly.

Bath-to-shower conversions Contractor; tender process

Clerk: Question 776, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state which company carried out the recently announced 44 bath to shower conversions at a total cost of around £300,000, averaging circa £6,800 each, as well as indicating if these jobs were allocated through a tender process or otherwise?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, all the bath-to-shower conversions have been executed by GJBS.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Minister satisfied that – obviously the amount charged for the job, which gives us an average of £6,800 per conversion – the amount of work required can justify that price?

Hon. C A Bruzon: The question does not distinguish between a standard bath-to-shower conversion and works where the OT – Occupational Therapist – is involved, which obviously would be much more expensive and that is why we give the average. All invoices have not yet been received, but the final cost should still be at no more than the £300,000 mentioned.

The explanation that may satisfy the hon. Gentleman is that the bath-to-shower conversions, the normal ones are cheaper than where the OT requires special works to be done within the bathroom. They will be obviously more expensive.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I put the question in a slightly different way perhaps? Given that we know that the average, depending on the particulars, is £6,800 in terms of the cost that the Housing Ministry is 1425 paying GJBS, does that amount of money coincide with the estimates of your staff, the technical staff in-house?

Well, you can put it another way. Whatever work gets done, the estimators just estimate what is the cost to be done, either by the Housing Works Agency or by a contractor. What I am saying is that, if this is what we are paying to GJBS, do those payments coincide with the estimates of your own staff in Housing? Does he know that?

Hon. C A Bruzon: No, Mr Speaker, I do not. Maybe if you give me notice of that question, but you are asking me...

Let me understand and make sure that I understand the hon. Gentleman. We have estimators who go and provide us with the cost of a particular job. You are asking me if the costs given to us by our estimators is more or less than GJBS, or the other way round?

Hon. J J Netto: It is the other way round, in the sense that when a job needs to be done, your in-house technical staff, the estimators, do an estimate and if they have to do a door, or so on – ‘To do this door here, it would last so many days and it would cost so many pounds.’

Regardless whether the job of the door is done by the Housing Works Agency or regardless whether it is done by GJBS or by any other contractor for that matter, at the end of the day, when the job is done and the contractor or the Housing Works Agency invoice the Housing Ministry for the work done, the estimator will see... ‘Well, if my estimate was £200 for the door, but GJBS is charging me £2,000 for the door, there is something wrong here somewhere.’

So, what I am basically asking the Hon. Minister is whether, given what seems at first hand excessive, in terms of the charges being given by all these conversions, do these prices coincide with his own in-house estimates by his own staff?

Hon. C A Bruzon: And as I indicated, I did not know the answer, but the question that I will have to ask my people is: is it just offered to GJBS, period, or do we have a system in place when, for certain jobs, certain bath-to-shower conversions, our technical people contract a private company to do it? I just do not know the answer to that, Mr Speaker, so he will have to maybe either ask me next month –

Hon. J J Netto: No, Mr Speaker, I am not trying in any way to confuse the issue. When something needs to be done by the Housing Ministry, regardless of whether the Housing Works Agency or a contractor, regardless of the contractor, you do not knock on the door of someone saying, ‘Look, I need this to be done and just give me a price.’ The in-house technical staff would know beforehand, before going to the contractor of the Housing Works Agency, what the cost of doing such a thing would be.

When the work gets done by whoever it gets done by, the estimator would have to reconcile to say, ‘Well, if my estimate was £200 to do x, why have I received an invoice for £2,000?’ All I am saying is, from the point of view just of accountability and value for money really, are we matching up the payments we are making to contractors or to the Housing Works Agency against our own estimates? That is all I am asking.

Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Minister did answer that previously, but the hon. Member preferred to put it the other way round, but I think it was answered before the last one.

Hon. J J Netto: Which is?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, as I explained earlier, I think the question that I am now asking myself, for the benefit of the hon. Gentleman, is is the system in place that we just simply give GJBS all bath-to-shower conversions, or not? This is something that I do not have an answer for, so if you want to either ask me next month or write to me, I will certainly have no problems in furnishing you with the information when I have an answer. I will be happy to do that.

Hon. J J Netto: I will, Mr Speaker.

Construction of additional homes
Government intentions
Question withdrawn

1485 Clerk: Question 777, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker. I think Question 777, in many ways, needs to be withdrawn because I had given notice of this Question before any announcements were made, and so I think most of the hon. Members on the Government benches at least are aware that Mr Speaker and I did represent this esteemed House in the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference in Sri Lanka, where we passed on Gibraltar's regards to all concerned. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am sorry to have wasted your time by having filed this Question.

However, may I indulge a bit of generosity on the Housing Minister's time by saying, from what I have read it seems that Government have passed on these proposed projects to the DPC for guidance, and so on, and they have got some advice back, which has made them then cancel the project. I am a bit confused, and I know the Hon. Minister can enlighten me that way – when did the Development Planning Commission actually consider this project?

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Would it not be better if he asks the Question, Mr Speaker?

Mr Speaker: Yes, perhaps.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Do we know what Question he is talking about?

Hon. E J Reyes: Okay, I am talking about –

Mr Speaker: Question 777.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I know the one he is talking about, but for the benefit of –

Hon. E J Reyes: Alright, yes, Question 777, as announced by the Clerk, in which I was going to ask the Minister to confirm that Government still intends, despite the representations indicating opposition to such projects by the relevant housing estates tenants, to proceed with the construction of additional homes by means of building floors at: (a) Moorish Castle; (b) Laguna; and (c) Glacis Estates? That is what I was referring to. I then clarified by saying I think all that has been answered. We now know it is not.

As a way of supplementary, if the Hon. Minister does know, when was this presented to DPC?

Hon. C A Bruzon: It was presented to the Development and Planning Commission... I forget the exact date.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Can I just clarify one point? That is a matter of public record. The DPC is public; it is online. All that information is a matter of public record. I know that the hon. Gentleman, wanting to be helpful, is going to provide the answer, but the DPC is now a public forum. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The time when things are submitted to the DPC is actually put on the website, so this is a totally public piece of information.

Mr Speaker: That is a valid answer; it is a matter of public record.

Hon. E J Reyes: Alright, Mr Speaker, the reason why I ask that is because, from the Development and Planning Commission's meeting agenda on Wednesday, one of the items listed there was actually this project, and prior to that having taken place on Wednesday, there had already been an announcement from Government that they were not going to continue with this.

Alright, Mr Speaker, I think that has been clarified, and when I look up at what is on public record, if I have any problems, I can always come back next month.

Construction of rental housing Government intentions

Clerk: Question 778, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Further to their announced plans to build additional floors at three existing rental housing estates, can the Minister for Housing commit himself and state what other rental housing Government intends to construct, indicating estimated commencement of construction and completion dates?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government expects to have made announcements on this before the end of the year, and we have, in fact, already made an announcement of the drawings and planning for 450 eco houses for 50:50 purchase going to the Development and Planning Committee – that took place a few days ago – and also 70 flats for our senior citizens. That is also being considered by the Development and Planning Commission.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but in my Question I was saying what other rental housing is going to be constructed. I had taken note of previously announced projects that go for 50:50 purchase.

Hon. C A Bruzon: The hon. Member is absolutely right, but I can also repeat the answer which will refer to rental housing, and that is that we expect to make an announcement on our plans to construct Government rental homes. The announcement will be made hopefully before the end of the year.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just by way of clarification, my recollection... the announcement in respect of the eco housing – we are referring to the ones in the Aerial Farm, is that correct? Yes. The announcement did not – (Interjection) Yes, it is public, yes I know. I am referring to a press release because that was public and I saw it.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): It is not just that though; there have been others as well.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, indeed, but the eco housing at the Aerial Farm is, I believe, what we are talking about here. That press release did not actually make reference to the fact of whether it was going to be for co-ownership or for rental, from what I can recall, so I take it that the decision to make it for co-ownership is something that has followed the issue of the press release?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. The fact is that the press release talks about the project; it does not talk about the details of the project. That is what has been put into the public domain until now. It may be that there are different mixes available to the Government. The Government may decide that some of that may be available for rental, some of it may be for 50:50 purchase and some of it may be for 100% purchase.

When the Government decides exactly what the composition will be – and it is very likely to be 50:50 – then there will be a press release that deals with that, but at the moment it has just gone for guidance to the DPC about heights and densities and the things which it goes to the DPC for.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the clarification. I only ask because it was spoken of very matter-of-factly a moment ago between the Minister and my hon. Friend that it was indeed for co-ownership, so it appears, it struck me, that there was some resolution in that respect. But I am grateful for the clarification in any event.

Co-ownership housing estates Meetings with Government

Clerk: Question 779, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government state if it has held meetings with any management companies/committees of co-ownership housing estates in order to address any new or ongoing concerns and, if so, provide details of the concerns raised and respective final outcomes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, as I have replied on various occasions when the hon. Member has asked a similar Question, no management company or committee have approached my office requesting a meeting.

I know, however, that a number of management companies and committees are in contact with the Chief Minister.

1610 Hon. E J Reyes: Therefore, because my Question this time, as opposed to previous occasions when I was asking just the Minister for Housing, I am asking, has Government held any meetings? Is there any Member on the Government side that can answer anything in that respect of my Question?

1615 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, as the hon. Gentleman has indicated, I have held meetings.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask with whom, Mr Speaker?

1620 Hon. Chief Minister: With management companies and committees of co-ownership estates.

Hon. J J Netto: Which ones in particular?

1625 Hon. Chief Minister: A number of them, Mr Speaker. I do not know whether it is appropriate to list the ones that have come already and those that have not, but I have no difficulty saying that I have met with the management committees of Vineyards and of – (Interjection) Sorry? Of which? (Interjection) The management of Vineyards; the management committee of Brympton; I have had representations from the management committee of Elliot's Battery; I am meeting, subject to diary arrangement, the committee of Montagu Gardens; I have met the committee of Sir William Jackson Grove.

1630 Mr Speaker, what I am not going to do is tell the hon. Members who was present, who I met, what I discussed with them; otherwise, I might as well just put a webcam in the meetings, Mr Speaker!

Hon. J J Netto: Certainly not, he can rest assured that we will not do that, but is there one meeting scheduled for the Harbour Views management committee?

1635 Hon. Chief Minister: Actually, thank you for reminding me. I have met them too.

Clerk: Question –

1640 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: My Question did end up saying, 'if so, provide details of the concerns raised and respective final outcomes'. Is that something that the Chief Minister feels it is not appropriate to talk about?

1645 Hon. Chief Minister: I am not going to give that information, for a simple reason. The hon. Members are free to approach the management companies of the estates in Gibraltar and ask them what issues concern them and what issues they have brought to the attention of the Government, but I do not think it is appropriate for me to give that information in the House.

1650 If there is a resolution of something and the Government commits itself to do something in respect of a particular management company, then if the hon. Member asks me about what we have committed ourselves to do, we will of course be obliged to answer that question because it is a thing that we, as Ministers, are doing.

In fact, I have also met the committee of Bayview, Cumberland Terraces and Nelson's View, I have just remembered.

1655 So I do not think it is appropriate to say, 'What concerns have they raised with you?' These are public individuals. You can go and ask them yourselves, the same as would be the case in respect of other interest groups, where the Opposition would be in dialogue with them as much as the Government.

1660 The Government – this Government – does not take the attitude that people who talk to the Government cannot talk to the Opposition. People can continue in dialogue with the Government and can talk to the Opposition, if they like. The position before 8th December, as the hon. Gentleman will know, was that people were told that if they wanted to continue to be in dialogue with the Government, they could not talk to the Opposition. That also ended with the new dawn of 9th December.

Housing Works Agency Recruitment

1670 Clerk: Question 780, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing explain why no new employees have been engaged by the Housing Works Agency in order to replace former employees who have retired/transferred, in keeping with the agreement between Government and Unite the Union?

1675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1680 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, staffing levels related to the Housing Works Agency are currently the subject of a comprehensive review of the Agency and the Ministry for Housing.

Old St Bernard's hospital site Elderly people's home

1685 Clerk: Question 781, the Hon. J J Netto.

1690 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state why the new elderly people's home at the old St Bernard's Hospital site has not yet been opened, despite having said in Parliament that works would be complete in April of this year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1695 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, Government was advised by GJBS that works would be complete in April this year and it is not uncommon for construction works to suffer some delays. In this case, the issues arising also relate to the need for changes to be made to certain parts of the site to make it accessible to elderly people with mobility issues.

1700 Hon. J J Netto: I presume, Mr Speaker, that those changes may have happened or occurred as a result of the new party coming into Government and altering the original plans – because the initial plans, when we were in Government, meant that the project was finished on 1st April. So my question is those new changes have arisen once the new party has been in Government – is that the case?

1705 Hon. C A Bruzon: I am not sure that I understand the question, but let me explain that technical completion is one thing. When technical completion happens, then a number of things also have to happen.

1710 My hon. Colleague, Samantha Sacramento and I have had site visits with our staff, we have visited the premises on more than one occasion and we have realised that certain adjustments have to be made, particularly to the ground floor, to make the apartments user-friendly for people with mobility disability. That may account – that does account, in fact – for the fact that we have not yet allocated any of these flats, but we are now in the process of identifying people whom we feel may wish to move from a larger Government flat into these rather beautiful 2RKBs.

1715 Hon. J J Netto: Does the Minister know by when will the building be finished and allocated?

Hon. C A Bruzon: We are precisely now currently involved in considering people for an allocation of these flats. It will be happening very, very soon.

1720 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): With this caveat, Mr Speaker: that there may have to be works done to general areas and therefore the allocations may have to wait. This is a really unfortunate turn of events that I am very disappointed in, which is that the plans that have been drawn up and on which a large amount of public money has been spent, render the place inaccessible for people with wheelchairs, and the expert advice that we have – because we do not tend to know about the space required for turning for wheelchairs etc – is that – 1725 Miss S J Sacramento (Minister for Equality and Social Services): And zimmer frames.

1730 Hon. Chief Minister: – and zimmer frames, not just wheelchairs – is that access areas for the building may also require work, in order that people with wheelchairs and zimmer frames etc can access the building. That may delay even the allocations in respect of people who do not have mobility problems, because the general areas may also require work.

To have spent public money, Mr Speaker, on such a project without taking these things into consideration is something that I think the hon. Members opposite should really have considered more carefully at the time.

1735

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the Opposition does not agree with the Chief Minister, because the changes for the wheelchairs that he is referring to are perhaps because the specification that was originally intended has changed. In other words, when the GSD Government gave the specification to the contractors to provide that facility, it was meant as a facility for independent elderly people with no mobility problems. Therefore the construction was made on those specifications.

1740

The new Government is perfectly entitled to change the specification that the previous Government did – that is no problem – but the reality of the situation is that the work ended in December, the snagging had been taking place from December to April. The situation is that both the Minister for Social Services – so she does not get offended – and the Minister for Housing (Interjection by Hon. Miss S J Sacramento) have been at loggerheads because the Minister for Housing wanted the building to be finished to be able to allocate to elderly people who are independent living with no mobility problems, but the lady, the Minister for Social Services, has – rightly or wrongly; it is not for me to determine that – wished to change the specifications that were originally made by us.

1745

That is a different matter, they can do it, but what they cannot say is that the taxpayer has had to put a lot of money to put it right. It has not happened. The reality is that the works were done to what was intended, (Interjections) and what I am asking is whether the specifications, meaning that the building is now intended not only for independent elderly people, it may also be intended for people with mobility problems, which is a different thing, and that is my question.

1750

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is very clear. First of all, the hon. Gentleman is living in cloud-cuckoo-land and believing every rumour that he wishes to believe, if he believes that there are Ministers on this side of the House who are at loggerheads. I hear these rumours all the time and they are absolute and complete poppycock.

1755

This is a Government that works together. (A Member: Hear, hear.) This is a Government that meets every Monday at nine o'clock in the morning and makes decisions by consensus, and therefore there is nobody at loggerheads with anybody else here.

1760

Mr Speaker, this is not a question of changing specifications; this is a question of the wrong specifications having been given for the works to be done in the first place. (Interjections and banging on desks) Or is it that he does not know, Mr Speaker, that the doors fitted to this new development are not doors of the size required for people with mobility problems? They are not even standard-size doors for people with no mobility problems. They are smaller than standard-size doors, and therefore of course he is right that there has had to be a change of specification, because we have had to give the right specification!

1765

Or does he not know, Mr Speaker – or is he trying to forget – that when you develop housing for the elderly, the elderly may be mobile one day and less or immobile the next? There are many elderly people with mobility problems who will need to be rehoused very shortly and this part of the housing stock is going to be used for that purpose with the necessary modification, and some of the elderly people who are mobile today and are moved up there may not be mobile at all within months or years, unfortunately.

1770

Anyone who was prudently developing a facility like this one would have ensured that, from the word go, they would have made the necessary specifications, such that either people with mobility problems or people who are today enjoying independent living but tomorrow may have mobility problems might be able to avail themselves of the service of this development.

1775

That is the reality of the situation, Mr Speaker. He may not like it, and I know that it hurts, but he has to accept it. (Banging on desks)

1780

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not know about rumours. We hear a lot of rumours. We hear a lot of rumours of Ministers threatening to resign on the Government side, (Hon. Chief Minister: You wish!) (Laughter) if the Chief Minister does what his instincts tell him to do on the fishing dispute, which is enter into a reasonable agreement with the fishermen. (Interjections) There are rumours...

1785

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, Point of Order.

1790

Mr Speaker: Point of order, yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, who is the hon. Gentleman to speak of what my instincts tell me to do? He can talk about what his instincts might tell him that my instincts might tell me to do, but he cannot talk about my instincts, because he has always got those wrong.

1795

Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member continues, before he continues, I was about to remind him that under the Standing Orders, and certainly under the guidance of Erskine May, a Member asking a question must make himself responsible for the accuracy of the facts, so I would advise Members to steer away from rumours.

1800

Do carry on, please.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course, I apologise, Mr Speaker, –

1805

Mr Speaker: No, I was just guiding.

Hon. D A Feetham: – and I will not go into the rumour of resignations or of slanging matches at No 6 Convent Place between the Hon. the Chief Minister and the Minister for Employment.

1810

Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Member is compounding it by repeating all that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he has raised something I am going to deal with.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1815

Hon. Chief Minister: He has raised something I am going to deal with. He has, as usual, wanted to pretend not to say something but say it, so I am going to deal with exactly what he has said. I am going to put on record, because he has now elevated a stupid rumour to a stupid remark in the House, and I am going to deal with this in this way. (Interjections)

1820

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

1825

Hon. Chief Minister: I am going to deal with this in this way. He can talk and he has my freedom to talk to every single person in the corridor of power at No 6 Convent Place in Gibraltar. Everyone will tell him that that ridiculous rumour that he has elevated to a ridiculous remark across the floor of the House is not just wrong, it is manifestly untrue; that actually what is happening, which is so difficult for people to bear, is that the people on this side of the House are getting on perfectly, that we are working collectively in the interests of Gibraltar, and that in particular the relationship that I enjoy with the Minister for Employment is among the best that I enjoy with all the people who sit on this side of the House.

1830

They will also tell him that the slanging matches, the banging of doors, the shouting –

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker –

1835

Mr Speaker: Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: – they recall happened when he used to go in to see Mr Caruana, when Mr Netto used to go in to see Mr Caruana, and when Mr Montiel used to go in to see Mr Caruana, all of which I consider to be to their eternal credit because, of the others, I hear that there was only squeaking like mice, and that today, thank goodness, those days are over.

1840

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I now ask my questions?

1845

Mr Speaker: But not rumours, please.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no rumours. I would not want to compound –

1850

Mr Speaker: Say no more.

Hon. D A Feetham: – the... yes... (Laughter) the Hon. the Chief Minister's state of emotion this afternoon.

Hon. Chief Minister: I get very emotional when I am [inaudible] with my friends.

Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely. But does the Chief Minister not accept that there is a distinction, and I think that the hon. the shadow Minister for Social Services, Mr Netto, has been very clear and very fair in the way that he has, in his exposition of that distinction, that there is a distinction between elderly who are people who can live independently and therefore may require a facility that is obviously commensurate with that level of independent living, and elderly who cannot live independently because they may have mobility issues and that, as a matter of policy, this particular facility was not intended to cater for the latter, was intended to cater for the former.

Does he accept that distinction? Because we certainly accept that the Government today is entitled – perfectly entitled – to change its policy and to say, ‘No, this is a facility that we would wish to cater for both independent living and mobility.’ We think there is a difficulty there, but look, you are perfectly entitled to take a different approach.

And does the Chief Minister not accept that that does not mean – that it does not mean...? I think it demeans politics, if we then reduce everything to the level (Interjection) of ‘We are now in Government, this is all rubbish that you have done, it is all wrong and we are going to change it because it is all rubbish and it is all wrong.’ You may have a different policy. It does not mean that what we did was all rubbish and all wrong. (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it demeans politics that people just want to get up and hear their own voices.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just like you.

Hon. Chief Minister: It demeans politics, Mr Speaker, that people want to pretend that their opponents have said one thing, when actually they should be defending a different position, which is what has been put to them.

Mr Speaker, it demeans politics for the hon. Gentleman to say that this facility they were developing up there only for people who had no mobility problems but who were elderly, because people listening to this debate are not stupid. Politicians demean politics when they say things that could only be believed by the stupid, and there are no members of this electorate that I know of who are stupid.

Mr Speaker, if you develop a facility for the elderly who are today mobile, what do you do with that elderly person when they become less mobile or immobile?

Hon. J J Netto: I will answer that later.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is very simple, Mr Speaker: you have to move them from the facility, or else the facility will become a useless prison for them, and in particular, given the location of this facility in the upper town, it would be even worse to have people who might develop mobility problems – and unfortunately the elderly often do – very often do... to have planned this facility without the simple measures necessary to also make it suitable for people who may be less mobile, either when they move in or in the future.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has to understand that he has to make such statements not in the vacuum and not in the reality that he wants people to believe that 8th December was, but in the real reality of 8th December, because, Mr Speaker, he knows what that was, I know what it was, and the members of the general public who are listening know what it was.

That reality, Mr Speaker, was 1,500 people on the housing waiting list. That reality was, Mr Speaker, a lot of people who are elderly with mobility problems, either stuck in the hospital because their existing homes were not suitable for them or stuck in their homes because they could not get out of them because of their mobility problems.

In those circumstances, Mr Speaker, to have planned this facility without the capacity of it taking people who have or may develop mobility problems is what we think was wrong and the hon. Gentleman makes a virtue of giving us the rights that we have. He said, ‘I accept, of course, that you are entitled to change the policy...’ Of course we are entitled to change the policy! We are the Government! We are entitled to take such policy as we believe, but we do not take that policy – saying, as I explained to his erstwhile leader at the beginning of Question Time this week – pretending that the world started on 9th December.

I said when I accepted our election victory in the Mackintosh Hall, and I have said since, that the hon. Members did not do ‘nothing’ for 16 years, but that is what they want me to say because then they attack me by saying, ‘Well, you cannot say that. Your talking is not true. You are saying that everything we have done is rubbish and that is just not true.’ I am not saying that, Mr Speaker.

1915 What I am talking about are the things they did not do. The things they did which were wrong! They know they were wrong and they demonstrate that they know they were wrong by getting up to say, 'You see, it is so unfair when you say that we did nothing and that everything we did was wrong...' Of course, because that sounds so unreasonable. But that is not what we are saying. We are saying that this was wrong and on other occasions we say the other things that were wrong and this was wrong, Mr Speaker, for the reasons that I have already explained.

1920 Mr Speaker, we are convinced that the facility up at St Bernard's needs the work that the Hon. the Minister for Social Services has already outlined and that the Hon. the Minister for Housing is aware of. There are some people who may be able to move in more quickly with that caveat that I have given about having to change certain rooms and having to change certain access areas, but it is going to be delayed, and it is delayed because of those failures.

1925 Mr Speaker, they may like it or they may not, but that is the reality of the situation and that is the view that this Government takes.

1930 Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say, Mr Speaker, that for somebody who says that I like the sound of my own voice, I should remind the Hon. the Chief Minister that he has taken 10 minutes with his response – 10 minutes giving us a political speech. (Interjection)

He likes so much the sound of his own voice, that he did not actually hear Members of his own benches actually reiterate the point that I was making that this project, what we had done, it was all rubbish and all wrong. Those were the cries from the Opposition benches... sorry, from the Government benches (Interjections) from his own Ministers when I was making the point.

1935 Does the Chief Minister not accept that actually this particular site is not a good site for elderly who have mobility problems? It is in a very difficult part of town; hence, one of the reasons why we had allocated this particular facility for elderly people who were capable of independent living. Is he satisfied that this is an appropriate facility for elderly people who have mobility problems, up there in the upper town as it is located?

1940 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the man has only been gone 24 hours, but to say that somebody is fond of the sound of their own voice because they take 10 minutes to answer a question – I doubt it was 10 minutes – is really to call into question what it is that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister, was fond of, when he used to sometimes take 45 minutes to answer a question, or six hours to reply to a Budget speech!

1945 Anyway, Mr Speaker, given that there are so many people dancing on the hon. Member's, the Leader of the Opposition's grave, I will allow the Hon. Mr Feetham that further tango on it.

1950 Mr Speaker, what Members of the Government – we are not of the Opposition, remember – Government – were doing was reiterating the very point that I have made in colourful language – adopting his word of 'rubbish' – about this project. What he was talking about – and I know that they rather Hansard did not exist, but it does and it will be there for people who go back and look at this debate to see what he was talking about – was us saying that everything they had done was rubbish. This particular project, Mr Speaker, in that particular respect in our view is rubbish.

1955 Hon. J J Netto: Answer the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is rubbish –

1960 A Member: Answer the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: – as a facility for people who have mobility issues because all of the criteria which have to be taken into consideration for accessibility by people who have mobility problems for this particular facility are not met inside the facility.

1965 Am I satisfied that being up there in the upper town, this facility can be used by people with mobility difficulties? Yes, I am. Is that me just making up my mind about it? No. Experts tell us that it is possible for people with accessibility issues to use that facility. Different steps are being taken to make it easier for them to access the area and people with mobility issues are asking us, please, to make it available to them once adapted. There may be some who do not want to go up there and they will not be made to go up there, and those who do want to go up there will be able to go up there.

1970 Mr Speaker, they may not like the answer because it flies in the face of what they want to hear, but that is the truth. That is what is happening and that is why these works are going... or rather, why this project is going to have to be delayed and require more money to be spent on it.

1975 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, it not a question that we do not like the answer, it just that –

Mr Speaker: Is it a question?

1980

Hon. J J Netto: It will come –

Mr Speaker: Soon I hope.

Hon. Chief Minister: It has got to be a question.

1985

Mr Speaker: It has to be a question.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, you know at least I will be allowed the latitude of an introduction

1990

Mr Speaker: A brief introduction. Yes.

Hon. J J Netto: – to preface my question.

1995

Mr Speaker: Erskine May tells me it must be a brief preamble.

Hon. D A Feetham: Not 10 minutes.

Mr Speaker: No, that is not a preamble, that is an answer. (Interjections and laughter)

2000

Hon. J J Netto: I promise you that it will be a quarter of the time of the Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker: Okay.

2005

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, it is not a question that we do not like the answer; it just that the analysis that they have done is wrong. It is wrong because he knows that the location up there is not suitable for people with mobility problems and we took that decision on the basis that we created sufficient stock for other elderly people with different needs, by providing Bishop Canilla, Albert Risso House, ground floor flats in Government housing estates, lift installations throughout all Government estates, making Mount Alvernia full of capacity, which it was not before we came into Government, and this is one of the reasons why we did it.

2010

The reality is that... or the question is that they have changed the specification and we would like to know whether they have changed the specification and are now coming with the excuses on the basis of saying, 'We need to change it because of mobility problems.'

2015

The original specifications were carried out. They were completed in December. The snagging took between December and April and now they have changed the specification. They are entitled to do it. They are the Government to do it, but they should not be shy from saying that they have done it.

So could I get an answer saying, have they changed the specification from what was originally met?

2020

Mr Speaker: I think that has been answered, but if the Chief Minister wants to –

Hon. Chief Minister: I have answered that question so many times that I am afraid –

Mr Speaker: – answer it... It has been answered and changed –

2025

Hon. Chief Minister: – that I do not want bore listeners into listening to it again.

Mr Speaker: – and for reasons that I understand, both sides have a different approach to what the facility was for, really. I do not think we can take this debate much further.

2030

Next question.

2035

TRAFFIC, HEALTH & SAFETY AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

2040

Street cleaning campaign
Removal of illegally parked cars

Clerk: Question 782, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2045

Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister is now back.

Mr Speaker, I have got three questions on traffic related matters and I hope they will not descend into the performance that we have just witnessed. (Interjections) The Chief Minister is in an awful mood this afternoon, I must say. He is not here, okay? Good.

2050

Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services, provide the House with the full particulars of how it proposes to ensure that illegally parked cars will be removed in the context of its street cleaning campaign?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2055

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the street cleaning campaign is aimed at improving the cleanliness of various areas and the removal of vehicles on a regular basis is an essential element for its success. This will allow the cleaning operations to be carried out effectively.

2060

The process has started with the distribution of flyers in the areas forming part of the campaign. Following this, fixed penalty tickets will be introduced. The RGP will endeavour, by way of education and interaction with the community, to request that residents remove their own vehicles in a timely manner. However, should there be a need, offending vehicles will be towed away in the future.

2065

Hon. D J Bossino: In the context of ensuring that illegally parked cars are removed in the context of the street cleaning campaign, a reference was made in the Government's press statement as reported in the press – I have got an article here from the Gibraltar Chronicle – and the answer given by the Minister I think reads pretty much from that press statement.

2070

There are two items in particular which I would highlight in the context of my supplementary and that relates to, for example, information flyers and the fact that there will be manpower deployed in the form of RGP Officers and Highway Enforcement Officers. In that context, will the campaign result in further costs to the Government?

2075

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not aware whether there will be any further costs with regard to what the hon. Member is asking.

2080

Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, the answer really is that the Minister does not know, but there could be a cost. Is that a more accurate way of putting it?

I do not presume for one moment to be answering the question for the Minister, but I just propose that as an answer – given that I have been admonished by the Chief Minister in the first sitting of the House for proposing answers to Ministers – proposing as an answer, just by way of clarification.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I do not anticipate any further costs. As I said, the information flyers have already been printed and been distributed; but again, as far as I am aware, there should not be any costs, but if there were, obviously I will let the hon. Member know.

Hon. D J Bossino: This question may an unfair question, but does he know how many information flyers are involved at all?

Hon. P J Balban: No, it is right to say that this could be unfair. No, I do not know.

Hon. D J Bossino: Then I will ask the question at the next sitting.

2095

New pelican crossing, Europa Road
Electrical equipment; date available for use

Clerk: Question 783, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2100 Hon. D J Bossino: Further to Question 433/2012, can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise this House whether the electrical equipment for the placing of the new pelican crossing at Europa Road in the area of Brympton/Mount Road has arrived and when he expects that the crossing will be available?

2105 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I am glad to report that the pelican crossing will shortly be installed at Europa Road in the area of Brympton/Mount Road.

2110 Hon. D J Bossino: By implication, the answer suggests that the equipment is available and ready for installation. Is that correct?

2115 Hon. P J Balban: That is right. As it implies in the question, the equipment is available and will be installed shortly.

Hon. D J Bossino: That, Mr Speaker, will be very welcome news for residents in that area, particularly in Brympton.

2120 The Minister refers to 'shortly'. We have also had this debate in the context of questions and answers in this House, I think in relation to the word 'soon', where the Chief Minister has referred us to the Oxford English Dictionary thereof. Is the Minister able at this stage to give me a more precise indication as to the timings?

In other words, where I do not necessarily have to raise this question at the next sitting of the House at the end of October?

2125 Hon. P J Balban: This is actually sooner than... (Laughter) sooner than when –

Hon. D J Bossino: Sooner than 'soon'.

2130 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, sooner than 'soon', when obviously the GSD was in Government!

King's Wharf site Car park

2135 Clerk: Question 784, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2140 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise this House what the costs of the setting up of the car park opposite the fair was and what arrangements were arrived at with the owners of the site where the parking was provided?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2145 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the development of the car park at the King's Wharf site is part of an agreement with the developers of the site, at no cost to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, to make the site available for use as a temporary public car park for a period of two to three years.

2150 In exchange, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar will agree an extension to the current lease the developer has for the site. Government has not yet finalised the actual terms of the agreement with the developers or received a final statement of the cost of producing the car park.

It is anticipated that the said arrangements should be finalised and the costs should be available in the next 30 to 60 days.

2155 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just by way of supplementary, the cost of the car park is a cost on the Government, is that correct? It is not a cost to be visited upon the developer – is that correct?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): That continues to be a subject of discussion.

2160 Hon. D J Bossino: So just to understand the situation: the car park was provided now, because it is there in place, the whole area has been tarmacked and it is in use, and what is expected is that there will be an extension of the lease provided to the developer who currently owns the site. Is that correct?

2165 Hon. Chief Minister: That is exactly what the answer given says.

Factories inspectors
Employment details

2170 Clerk: Question 785, the Hon. J J Netto.

2175 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety give details of the total number of factories inspectors employed, the number of Health and Safety advisors or officers employed in various Government Departments, authorities and agencies, stating their grades, where they are employed, Health and Safety qualifications and whether any of them are currently undergoing any training or courses leading to a Health and Safety qualification?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2180 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the present complement of the Factories Inspectorate consists of four factories inspectors – that is one principal and three Health and Safety inspectors. At present, there are no officers undergoing training.

2185 A list of grades and qualifications, as requested by the hon. Member, is contained in the schedule, which I now hand over to him.

Answer to Questions 785

Department	Grade	Nos.	Qualifications
TSD	HPTO	1	NEBOSH Certificate (in Construction) NEBOSH DIP Parts 1 & 2 Occupational Health & Safety
Housing Works Agency	PTO	1	NEBOSH Certificate Occupational Health & Safety

Sports Authority	Deputy CEO	1	Certificate (Health & Safety in the Workplace)

2190 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I start by asking a supplementary question? Obviously, the difference between the different chart that he gave me some time back, in Question 181... because we have gone up by two. I think that the previous one was eight; now we have got 10, if we include the two extra factories inspectors. Is that correct?

2195 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, as explained to the hon. Member last time, because of the secondment of the two individuals from the Housing Works Agency, they have joined the Factories Inspectorate – that is why there are an extra two in that respect.

Hon. J J Netto: For the sake of clarity, Mr Speaker, I do recall, when I asked this question subsequently to Question 181, in relation that there were two people seconded to the Factories Inspectorate, I do recall – although I have not got Hansard with me right now – that the Hon. the Minister

2200 for Health & Safety did say that they would not form part, necessarily, of the Factories Inspectorate, only if the vacancies went out and they applied for a job. So do I take it that those two new extra posts now, as factories inspectors, have emanated as a result of vacancies and those two people who were seconded 2205 applied, or have they simply been absorbed without the process of the vacancy coming out in the first place?

Hon. P J Balban: No, as I said earlier, they are still part of the Housing Works Agency. They were seconded to the Department. (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) No vacancy is available there for them; they are just working, helping the Factories Inspectorate at the moment.

2210 Hon. J J Netto: So the situation remains the same, then – they are still seconded? That is the case, is it?

Hon. P J Balban: That is correct.

2215 Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I –

2220 Mr Speaker: Yes, the Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Thank you – you have got to be quick in here!

Mr Speaker: Yes!

2225 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I also ask if the Hon. the Minister for Health and Safety could at least tell me what are the typical work activities of the Health and Safety advisers and officers, obviously within the respective Departments, authorities and agencies that they are doing... In other words, what are the ins and outs of everyday work that they are doing in order to support those Government authorities 2230 and agencies as Health and Safety advisers or officers?

Hon. P J Balban: Are you referring to the two seconded members of staff?

2235 Hon. J J Netto: No, for the sake of clarity, Mr Speaker, if we forget for one minute the... Let's say the four factories inspectors, of whom two are seconded – let's forget about them. The rest, which he has kindly provided to me, who are Health and Safety advisers or officers, like the one, for instance... You have one in the Technical Services Department, you have one in the Housing Works Agency, one in the Environmental Agency, there is one in the City Fire Brigade, there is one in Customs and there is one in the Sports Authority. What I am trying to get a feel for, if the Hon. the Minister can provide, is what are 2240 the typical work activities that they carry out in support of those Departments, authorities and agencies?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the only person I am able to comment upon is the Health and Safety officer we have within the Technical Services Department. You would actually have to ask the other relevant Ministries to see what their Health and Safety advisers do in their relevant Departments.

2245 In my Ministry, in which is the Technical Services Department, the Health and Safety officer there is actually responsible for looking after the wellbeing and the safety of the Sewers Division, so he will actually go and check the procedure they are using before entering a sewer etc is adhered to, and just guarantees the safety of the workforce in that respect.

2250 Hon. J J Netto: I can accept that, in the sense that what he is basically saying is that because of people who work in confined spaces... In other words, the people who work in the sewers obviously require a very high standard of Health and Safety – and I know that from experience myself, and that is quite correct – but my supplementary question is much wider than that, in the sense that if you look – in the UK, at least; it may be different in Gibraltar – that the work that typical Health and Safety officers or 2255 advisers do, it has a wide range that they could do to ensure giving advice to that particular organisation that they are complying with obviously legislation affecting the circumstances or the environment in which they are working. They do audits and risk assessments on behalf of those Departments, but I do not know whether that same pattern that they follow in the UK is necessarily the pattern they follow here.
This is why I am trying to seek a clarification from the Hon. the Minister for Health and Safety. Do they 2260 follow the same pattern they follow in the UK, or is it a different one?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I presume that these individuals working in the other different Ministries will be responsible for, obviously, looking after the Health and Safety of the persons within their organisation. As I said, I have the responsibility for the member of staff in the Technical Services Department. I know exactly what that person is responsible for. I would presume, or I do know the fact that there are other individuals within the other Ministries... that Health and Safety is not their pure, full-time job. They are qualified in Health and Safety and I presume they will give advice to the relevant Departments, but that is not the entirety of what they do.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I cannot remember now whether it was this morning or perhaps yesterday, when there was a Question from my hon. Friend, Isobel Ellul-Hammond to the Minister for Health, in relation to the audit being carried out by the factories inspectors on the kitchen. Basically, the Minister said it is not the only audit that is being carried out by the factories inspectors; there are other audits. Obviously, he has not got, in the GHA, a Health and Safety officer or... what is the other word now I am looking for? – bueno, a Health and Safety officer to be able to conduct that, but the equivalent in the UK would mean that their own in-house Health and Safety officer would have been able to do that.

Presumably, your own Health and Safety officer in the Technical Department, over and above what you have just cited, in terms of supporting the people working in the sewers, because of confined spaces, will also be able to help the Department as a whole in relation to complying with a whole series of different things, from lighting to chairs to risk assessments and records in support of the senior management or the Chief Executive of the Technical Department.

Given I do not know the answer to my question, I am asking the question to you, as the Minister. In other words, having said all of that, do those officers in those Departments follow the same pattern as the UK, or a different one?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, referring back to, obviously, what the hon. Gentleman was saying about the Technical Services Department Health and Safety officer, he is predominantly involved in the sewers section. There is enough work in the sewers section for him, so he would not be engaged in giving advice to the GHA, as a matter of course for that matter. So, that falls under the remit of the Health and Safety Inspectorate, who will conduct audits if need be.

As to whether the other people, who are not in my Department, follow the same guidelines as in the UK, I would presume so. As I said, they do not fall under my Ministry, so I can only advise the hon. Gentleman what Technical Services does in respect of Health and Safety.

Hon. J J Netto: I think, Mr Speaker, all I will do is, next month, I will ask another Question to all the respective Ministers, to see what they do.

Factories Inspectorate Improvement notices and prohibition notices issued

Clerk: Question 786, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state the reasons for the factories inspectors issuing five improvement notices and one prohibition notice in the month of August 2012 and provide the names of the company or companies, if it is more than one, obviously?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, a total of 12 improvement notices and one prohibition notice were issued during the month of August 2012.

However, if the hon. Member is referring to the five improvement notices and one prohibition notice issued to the construction industry, I can then confirm that these were issued for breaches of the Factories (Work at Heights) Regulations.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister provide some more detail, not just as to the legislation, but on what actually triggered the factories inspectors to see that something was particularly wrong to issue at least one prohibition notice and five improvement notices?

Hon. P J Balban: As I mentioned previously, there were actually twelve prohibition notices, not five, so exactly which of the five are you referring to? I can only assume that what you meant was construction, but again, the question was not clear enough.

2325 If the five that I am assuming are the ones that were grouped together statistically, then all the notices were issued to scaffolding companies, and they were all to do with the Factories Act (Work at Heights) Regulations.

Hon. J J Netto: And the names of the companies, Mr Speaker?

2330 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I do not think it is appropriate to actually give the names of the companies, but if the hon. Gentleman likes, I can give them to him in private – and confidentially, obviously.

2335 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, whatever way I get the information, it is of benefit to me, undoubtedly, but I do not see the logic of why it has to be confidential, because from the point of view I am looking at this, these are companies which, to some degree or other, from the point of view of the factories inspectors, have been determined that they were doing certain activities which were not right and, as a result of not being right, they issued a prohibition notice and five improvement notices. So I do not see why there is a reason why we should not know the company. Is there any particular reason?

2340 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman is aware, these are simply improvement notices and they could be to do with minor issues, minor things. Obviously, I do not think it is appropriate to name and shame companies who may have just done something very minor, and yet the overall impression could be that they did something which was serious.

2345 Mr Speaker: I think I should just remind Members, we all enjoy parliamentary privilege here and we should always be very careful in naming individuals or entities, because even though prohibition notices have been issued, they could be erroneously issued and the party concerned has the right of recourse in terms of challenging those notices. So we must be careful when we start bandying names of persons and entities in this House.

Hon. J J Netto: Okay, fair enough, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: No, just as a general principle.

2355 Hon. J J Netto: Alright, I accept that and I also accept what the Minister suggested, that he can give it to me confidentially.

Health and Safety Industrial accidents

Clerk: Question 787, the Hon. J J Netto.

2365

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if there have been any reported accidents during the months of July and August 2012, showing the industry group and the name of the company, and state which ones were reportable, major and fatal, if any?

2370

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 788 to 790.

2375

Factories inspectors Site meetings

2380

Clerk: Question 788.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many site meetings were attended and advice given by the factories inspectors during the months of July and August 2012, stating the names of the companies or public sector organisations?

2385

Factories inspectors Inspections

Clerk: Question 789.

2390

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many inspections during the months of July and August 2012 did the factories inspectors carry out, stating the names of the companies or public sector organisations inspected, whether any possible breach of the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation has taken place, and whether legal advice is being sought?

2395

Health and Safety Inspectorate Inspections, site meetings and advice given

2400

Clerk: Question 790.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety now provide me with the breakdown of figures for the months of May and June 2012 in relation to inspections/site meetings/advice, which he so kindly promised me in reply to Question 555/2012 but has not yet done?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, in answer to Questions 787, 788 and 790, the information requested by the hon. Member is available online on the Government's website.

2410

In answer to Question 789, the information requested by the hon. Member is available on the Government website.

In relation to legal advice, no legal advice has been sought.

2415

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, but unfortunately it does not answer my Questions, because what the Government website provides for is to put together different categories of... o sea, put together my individual respective Questions into a big group, from which I cannot then identify which one falls within inspection, which is a specific Question, or how many fall within what is basically site meetings or advice. So the manner in which the Government is providing information on the website does not correspond to the nature of my Question, which is very specific in kind.

2420

What I am saying is that in the past, when I have brought these to matters to the Minister, he kindly said to me, 'Yes, you have got a point, it is valid, and I will provide information.' Now he seems to be saying to me, 'Forget what I said to you in the past, which is that I will provide the information in the manner that you have asked the Question, and you can go and look at the Government website, which still continues not to provide me with the answer in the manner in which I have asked for it.' So, which of the two is it, Mr Speaker?

2425

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the statistical information, the actual information the hon. Member is requesting, as I said, has been provided monthly from the start, instead of statistically, and this information is actually on the Government website.

2430

If there is anything in particular that the hon. Member wants to elaborate upon, please ask by supplementary and I am happy to give you more information when available.

2435

Hon. J J Netto: It is not a question of asking supplementaries; it is a question that I have given notice of a specific Question and the Questions are not being answered.

He may choose to say, 'Look, regardless of what you ask, I am not going to give you the answer,' and that is fine if he does not want to give me the answer; but given that in the past, in answer to Question 555, he already said he recognised that he is not providing me with the answer and that he is going to provide me with it, he is now regurgitating the fact that he is not going to provide me with the answer, regardless of having told me he is going to give me the answer.

2440

Which one is it? Is he able to provide me with an answer from which I can draw a natural conclusion to my Question, which is: how many inspections in this month and how many site meetings in this month? But if you put together a graph which shows all the figures together and I cannot know which ones of those total figures are inspections or site meetings, then he is not providing the answer. He can continue to do that for as long as he wants to, but at least tell me that he is not going to provide me with the answer!

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I think I get exactly what you are leading to. (Interjection) If I can have his attention for a minute?

2450 What you are saying is that the way the statistics are actually laid out at the moment, in groups, three things together... And this is what we have spoken about before, in the past. Unfortunately, because we do not have the software available to be able to separate these things, it just will not be possible to do so.

2455 The software, as I have mentioned in past sessions of Parliament, is very close to being ready for use, and once that is available, we will be able to provide the hon. Gentleman, I hope, with the relevant information that he requires.

2460 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman or his Department do not need any software at all to extract the information I am asking for. All he needs is someone to create a spreadsheet, so that when a factories inspector goes out and he records in his logbook saying, 'Today, Friday, at five o'clock in the afternoon, I went to inspect such and such a place,' that information will be put onto the spreadsheet, and given that the number of inspections we are talking about is either 50, 35, 40 – the highest is 46 – it takes five minutes within a spreadsheet to provide the information. He does not need a software programme!

2465 This is not about sending a rocket to Mars; this is about simple inspections! I am almost illiterate in IT – I confess that to be the case – but most people, fortunately, have a good understanding of what computers are and what a spreadsheet is, and I would have thought that it does not take a scientist to be able to get this information in the manner I am asking, which he recognised some months ago and now he is saying that he does not.

2470 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I do recognise what the gentleman is saying. The gentleman is saying that inspection site meetings and advice are grouped together on a spreadsheet. (Hon. J J Netto: I am?) Yes, and unfortunately, this is what these guys have been doing for years. This is how they used to provide the statistics in the past. As I said, this will change.

Hon. J J Netto: No. No, Mr Speaker!

2475 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Give way, the Minister is answering.

Hon. J J Netto: No, that is not true!

2480 Mr Speaker: Order! The Hon. Minister is answering.

Hon. P J Balban: That is about it. This is the way... I have not told them this is the way to do it. This is the way that they set up their spreadsheets and this is the way they keep the information statistically.

2485 When I have actually quizzed them and said, 'Why do we do it this way?', they say, 'Because it is not possible for us to do it any other way.' So I am obviously not going to tell them, 'This is the way it should be done because the hon. Member has requested it in that fashion,' but I am assured that once we have the computer software in place and installed, this will be possible to split up into the relevant categories that the hon. Gentleman is requesting.

2490 Hon. J J Netto: No, Mr Speaker, it is not true to say that this is the way that it has always been done. All he has to do is check the annual report that was done throughout the four years in which I was the Health and Safety Minister and he will see that inspection is in one column and it has nothing to do with site meetings or advice. So it is not true what he has just said.

2495 The second thing... regardless of the system that was there in place, right, all I am saying is you do not need a software programme. All you need is a spreadsheet. Pass the information from the logbook onto the spreadsheet, and given the small size of numbers or inspections, it does not take two minutes to get the answer out!

Mr Speaker, a student in Bayside learning to do IT would be able to do it!

2500 Mr Speaker: But there was not a question there, so we must move to the next Question.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, please –

2505 Mr Speaker: No, there was no question there. With respect, I allowed the hon. Member to have his say, but there was no question there. We really must move on to the next Question.

2510

Factories inspectors
Increase in numbers employed

Clerk: Question 791, the Hon. J J Netto.

2515

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Minister for Health and Safety now in a position to state how many more factory inspectors will be employed during this financial year, in order to carry out the Health and Safety audit that the Minister alluded to in answer to Question 440/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2520

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as I already informed the hon. Member in answer to Question 440/2012, the Senior Factories Inspector has been tasked to look at proposals for review, which will then be put forward for ministerial consideration. This process has not yet been finalised, so I am still not in a position at this stage to state how many more factories inspectors will be employed, if any at all.

2525

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, this Question was prompted by the fact that the Minister, in the previous Question, was saying that they were conducting a review. I think he said at the time that the review had been initiated by the Senior Factories Inspector – I think those were his words – and that the review had started almost at the time when they got into Government, which is an obvious thing to say.

2530

So, given that they have been now almost nine months in Government, does he know at what stage the review is? In other words, whether the review is likely to finish shortly, in the next month or two?

2535

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am actually waiting for the Factories Inspector to produce and submit a report regarding the outcome of the review.

Hon. J J Netto: So do I take it then that they started to do the review in December 2011, we are in September 2012, and the review is still ongoing?

2540

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I do not recall having said the review as such started in December. The Department was being reviewed generally, so this is why we decided to get help from the two supplementary officers of the Housing Works Agency. So the review, as such, has been ongoing – that is review of the Department – but the actual review that I am talking about was a review which the Senior Factories Inspector, the Principal Factories Inspector, has been tasked to do recently and – (Hon. J J Netto: Recently?) Yes, recently. Not weeks ago, but recently. It was not December.

2545

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, that does not tally with the information that he gave in the previous Question, in Question 440, which was in May, so it obviously cannot be recently, because he was alluding there to the fact that there was a review and the fact that one of the reasons for the review is that they will be able to do this audit. So is this wrong, Hansard is wrong, and what you are saying now is right?

2550

Hon. P J Balban: When I referred to 'recently', I meant more recently than December 2011.

2555

Hon. J J Netto: Right, okay, alright, so at least we know now that it started in May. At least we know that, which is in Hansard. Given it was in May, can the Hon. Minister at least provide me with an indication of when the review is likely to finish?

Hon. P J Balban: Not at this present time.

Prohibition and improvement notices
Number issued

2565

Clerk: Question 792, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many prohibition and improvement notices were issued in the months of July and August 2012, specifying the names of the companies involved, the site(s), the reason(s) for issuing the notice(s), and the period which may have 2570 brought operations to a halt until the inspector was satisfied that the correct standard had been duly complied with?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2575 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, one prohibition notice was issued in July and one in August. On both occasions, these were issued to construction companies for breaches under the Factories (Work at Heights) Regulations. The work areas at the site in question had not been provided with a collective means of fall protection.

It took two working days to remedy the contraventions.

2580 Five improvement notices were issued in July 2012, and 12 in August 2012. All notices issued were for contraventions to the Factories Act (Lifting Operations and Lifting Equipment) Regulations and (Work at Heights) Regulations.

No further action was required in respect of any of these notices.

2585 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary. Do I take it then that the Hon. Minister will give me, on a confidential basis, the names of the companies, as he stated before?

Hon. P J Balban: Obviously, one of the other ones I included in the answer I already gave, but if the hon. Gentleman insists on having the names of the companies, as long as it is given to him on the understanding that this is obviously on a confidential basis, I am happy to provide these to the hon. Gentleman.

2595

Health and Safety statistics
Government website/Hansard discrepancies

Clerk: Question 793, the Hon. J J Netto.

2600 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety provide an explanation as to why the figures recorded in Hansard for the month of February 2012 in relation to the number of inspections/site meetings/advice vary with the figures on the Government website for the same month as updated on 1st September 2012, or indeed with other subsequent figures recorded in Hansard?

2605 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Factories Inspectorate has been experiencing technical difficulties in transposing data with their present IT software, which seems to be the cause of the problem.

2610 The Department is in the process of acquiring a new computer software programme that will eventually solve the problem. Needless to say, any discrepancies will now be checked and corrected.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, everything seems to fall on this wonderful software programme that is going to come from Houston, apparently.

2615 But look, Mr Speaker, in Question 308, when I asked how many inspections during February did the Factories Inspectorate conduct – and at that time he did provide the answer in the right form – he did say two. Then, in Question 311, when I asked about site meetings and advice, which he then used to provide the correct answer, he said, in the little chart which follows, six. Well, six and two is eight. If you look at the Government website, it is 35.

2620 Ministers are responsible for what they say in Parliament, and of course sometimes they may get the information wrong – it happens to everyone; it happened to me – but we have a duty to come to Parliament at the first possible opportunity and correct the figures.

2625 Given that this is the figure he gave in March for February for inspections on one side and for site meetings and advice on the other, and given that they have been producing an alternative figure on the Government website, surely the Minister should have known this and should have stood up in Parliament to correct the figure, for whatever administrative reason that perhaps the figure was wrong, as opposed to having to rely, from the Opposition bench, to look at the figures, find that the figures are incorrect and then ask for explanation and then have an answer which is all to do again with this wonderful software programme which is going to solve everything.

2630 Does he take responsibility for the figures he produces in Parliament?

Hon. P J Balban: Of course I take responsibility for the figures I produce in Parliament. It was not until the hon. Member raised it that I actually asked my officials and then they came up with the reply to the Question.

Unfortunately, that magnificent piece of software was one that should have been in place when we came in in December. If that had been in place – or so I am told – then we would not have had to have these difficulties that we experience at the moment.

2640

We have tried with different software, and unfortunately they have not been able to get an adequate programme. I am told that we are almost there, so this is a question of just being a bit more patient and hopefully we will be able to get the figures as you so request, but the key issue is that unfortunately we are still working as we were in the past.

2645

Hon. J J Netto: This has got nothing whatsoever to do with the software programme. This is about a Minister who gets, month after month, Questions in the same format but asked in different months, and all he needs to have is a file in front of him, knowing what the figure was that he gave the month before to the Opposition Member and ensuring that he does his diligent work to ensure that the figures on the Government website are correct. Nothing to do with a Government software programme; it is all to do with being prepared for answering a Question and making sure that, as Minister for Health and Safety, the figures that go on the Government website and the statistics for Health and Safety match with the figures that he produces here in Parliament. Nothing to do with a software programme.

2650

So the question is does he take responsibility, and which figure is right – the figure he gave in Parliament, which is eight, or is it 35, because we need either to change Hansard or we need to change the Government website figure. So which one of the two is it?

2655

Hon. P J Balban: The answer to the first Question, I have already answered the hon. Gentleman. The source of these figures... they both come from the same source, so I would assume that, as the months go by, the figures – (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) Pardon? (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) Pardon?

2660

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister is advised not to engage in conversation, just proceed with his answer.

2665

Hon. P J Balban: I do not know what he was saying. I said the source of these figures is the same, so as months go by, presumably the webpage would be updated, so what is the hon. Gentleman asking me to do – every single month to get the figures from the Department and check on the website and check that they tally? I would assume this is what our Health and Safety officers are there to do, and when I request figures, I expect the figures that come are the correct ones, which then I come to Parliament and give to the hon. Gentleman.

2670

In reply to the answer, when I asked and quizzed my members of staff as to why these figures did not tally, the reply that I received was that they had been experiencing technical difficulties in transposing this data with their present IT software, which seems to be the cause of the problem, and then they go on to say that any discrepancies would now be checked and corrected. This is the reply from my officials.

So I would presume and I will make sure that these gentlemen down at Health and Safety check and correct these discrepancies, if so that they are.

Hon. J J Netto: Just one final supplementary, Mr Speaker. I will not go much further than this.

At the end of the day, whether a satisfactory answer is given as to whether the original figure, the eight, is correct, or the 35 which is on the Government website, one is right and one is wrong – or is it a different figure altogether, not necessarily the eight or the 35?

2680

But the Minister would have a responsibility to correct whatever figure is wrong to ensure that, in the Hansard record, we have the right figure. So does he give that undertaking that when he gets a satisfactory answer from his staff, he will either correct Hansard, if Hansard is wrong, or he will correct the Government website?

2685

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, logically that is the intention. I will only want the correct figures to be there, both in Hansard and on the webpage, so that will be looked into.

One thing which I will ask the hon. Member to do, to avoid in the future comments about things I was meant to hand or I promised the gentleman... if in future everything the gentleman wants comes to me in writing, then at least I will not forget, because there could be a genuine case where you ask me for things in Parliament and I say yes, and then I could genuinely...

So anything you request from me, please put it in writing and I will ensure that you get the reply you request.

2695

Gibdock
Health and safety inspections

Clerk: Question 794, the Hon. J J Netto.

2700

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state on how many occasions have the factory inspectors inspected Gibdock facilities during 2012, broken down by months, and whether any contravention to the Factories Act or any of its subsidiary legislation has been identified?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2705

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Gibdock facilities were inspected on two occasions, once in May and once in June 2012. No contraventions to the Factories Act or any of its subsidiary legislation were identified.

2710

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for Health and Safety... perhaps he is aware whether Gibdock does have for itself a Health and Safety adviser officer. The reason why I am asking this is because in the past, when we have discussed the industry groups where it is likely to have a higher incidence of accidents, we have always said and acknowledged that it is the construction industry, but we have also said that, once you remove the construction industry, it is the ship-repairing facilities, not just in Gibraltar but perhaps indeed in Britain and throughout Europe. Given that the nature of the work tends to provide a higher incidence of accidents, obviously we need to ensure that at least the best practice is made available.

2715

Perhaps he may even need notice of the question, but is he aware perhaps whether the Gibdock facilities within his own management team have a Health and Safety adviser officer?

2720

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there is an element of déjà vu with all these questions. We seem to be repeating ourselves with the same questions month in, month out.

As the hon. Member obviously is aware, I am not responsible for Gibdock. In fact, as you rightly say, Gibdock has its own Health and Safety advisers within Gibdock, who are responsible for what goes on within their four walls.

2725

The only reason why a Health and Safety inspector from my Department would go into Gibdock would be following a complaint or request from someone externally, and that is when they would go in.

2730

Ministry of Defence sites
Health and Safety inspections

Clerk: Question 795, the Hon. J J Netto.

2735

Mr Speaker: I have not got a 795 in my bundle. Is there a 795? Thank you.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if any inspections have been carried-out by the factory inspectors to MOD sites during 2012, broken down by months; and, if so, have the factory inspectors detected any contravention of the Factories Act or any of its subsidiary legislation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no inspections have been carried out by the factory inspectors to MOD sites during 2012.

2745

Hon. J J Netto: Is there a reason for this, Mr Speaker?

Hon. P J Balban: MOD works notified to the Inspectorate are not that many. So, going back to the previous Question, nobody actually complains about what goes on within the MOD.

2750

With the previous complement of two inspectors, as was the case under the previous administration, the Inspectorate could only be reactive as to the demands of the day-to-day tasks, which were ample and varied. It is now the intention of the Inspectorate to schedule works to cater for a wider scope, as we may now respond more efficiently due to the temporary increased resources.

So, as part of the general inspection process, we do intend, in future, to be able to go and check the MOD, but it has not been happening during 2012 so far.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. Minister not recognise that the MOD is a substantial employer in Gibraltar, not only in terms of the amount of people it employs, but in terms also of the different functions and the different work environments that they have for different purposes? To have a situation, even with two factory inspectors, where for nine months of 2012, there appears not to have been at least one inspection perhaps is something that should have been looked into itself and perhaps should be given greater prominence, so to speak.

But I hear that the Hon. Minister is also saying that now they have the two extra seconded factory inspectors, this will be the case. Did he say that they intend to do so?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, once we find out what is going to happen – whether we are going to stay with... I said the two members of staff who came from the Housing and Works Agency and the Enterprise Support... If, as a result of the review, it is decided that we will keep those two members of staff, then we will have extra resources to be able to carry out inspections to a wider range of areas within Gibraltar.

Coming back to the previous comment of the Member, it would be very interesting to actually know or find out – and I will try to find out – how many times our Health and Safety inspectors checked MOD with their limited resources... because now, remember, effectively we have four persons working within the Department. Prior to December 2012, we had two, so if they are complaining of lack of resources... Apparently, they say it has been historical. Obviously, I will now find out to see how many times the MOD as established was inspected in 2011, 2010, 2009 etc, because obviously now I am quite keen on learning whether this is so alien that we have not had any inspections to date.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I can help him in that exercise. What I can tell him is that, in the four years I was the Minister for Health and Safety, we did take it quite seriously that the MOD is an established employer in Gibraltar and the jurisdiction of the Factories Act allows for the factory inspectors to actually go and check it. In fact, in those particular four years, they did actually go and check the MOD, because I remember there were some issues of concern.

What happened subsequently, I do not know because I did not continue to be the Minister for Health and Safety, but the point I am making is, regardless of trying to find out what happened last year or the year before or the year before, does the Minister not recognise what I said before, which is that the MOD is a big employer, has a number of different functions, which one would assume that, at the very least, a number of inspections should take place during the course of a year, given the type of work that they undertake year in, year out? That is my question.

Hon. P J Balban: Obviously, we recognise that the MOD is a big employer, just as the Government of Gibraltar is, etc. Obviously, what I am keen to know is... I am not aware, when you were the Minister for Health and Safety, whether it was just prior to the election or... I presume it was a lot earlier than that. I do not know whether you had the privilege of having that computer software and whether that computer software was ended when you left.

Hon. J J Netto: It was bought in my time.

Hon. P J Balban: Exactly, and in fact, so I am told – and I will check for the hon. Member, if possible – apparently, these annual reports that you mention were prepared during your time, apparently these ceased after then and it was the result of the lack of computer software. So you must have had the magical years and things must have been very good for you then! (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) But I can assure you that after that the Department took a dive and, unfortunately, this is where we stand today.

So it is now my responsibility to bring back this Department to more glorious magical years than the ones you experienced.

Health and Safety inspections Government Departments, authorities and agencies

Clerk: Question 796, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state on how many occasions the factory inspectors have inspected any Government Departments, authorities or agencies during January 2012 to date, broken down by months, and whether any contravention of the Factories Act or any of its subsidiary legislation has occurred on any of the sites?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2820 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, inspections have been carried out on four occasions since January 2012 to date as follows: in April 2012, the Electricity Authority and the Elderly Care Agency; in May 2012, the Sports Authority; and in June 2012, the Gibraltar Health Authority.

2825 Improvement notices were issued in all four cases for contraventions to the Factories Act (Lifting Equipment) Regulations and the Factories Act (Work at Heights) Regulations.

No further action was required.

2830 Health and Safety seminar
Details

Clerk: Question 797, the Hon. J J Netto.

2835 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if he has planned any Health and Safety seminar or conference for this year; and, if so, could he provide details of such and the location where it is to be held?

2840 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2845 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, yes, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, in association with IOSH Gibraltar Association Branch, will be holding a seminar on Occupational Safety and Health. This will be held at the John Mackintosh Hall on 23rd October 2012. A programme detailing the event will be made public shortly.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could perhaps the Hon. the Minister expand on the issues or the topics that will be developed in the course of the seminar?

2850 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as I said in the last sentence, a detailed programme of events will be made public shortly, as soon as I am made aware of it.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not asking for the detailed programme; all I am asking for is a couple of the big issues that will be in the seminar.

2855 I am sure that if the hon. Member is going to go – which is the norm – and give a speech, he will know by now, at least before he writes his speech, what the issues are going to be. I am not asking for a detailed account now of everything that is going to transpire, but I am sure he must have some idea of those issues.

2860 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I can assure the hon. Gentleman that I do not require four weeks to write a speech, but as far the gentleman needs to know, the key issues of the seminar will be Health and Safety.

2865 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, thank goodness it is going to be Health and Safety and not something else!

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): You asked for a couple of issues.

Hon. P J Balban: Those are the two issues, Health and Safety –

2870 Hon. J J Netto: That was a very enlightening answer!

Hon. P J Balban: – and I presume that I will be seeing you there as well.

2875 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for that very enlightened answer.

Clerk: With that, we come to the end of Answers to Oral Questions.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister of Housing has asked leave to clarify an answer which he provided to the Hon. Damon Bossino at last week's Question and Answer session.
The Hon. Minister for Housing.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Thank you, Mr Speaker.
With reference to the Hon. Damon Bossino's supplementary question as to who changes the bulbs in the Mid-Harbour rental estate, I would like to inform him, contrary to what I said the other day, that this

FIRST AND SECOND READINGS

25 The Broadcasting Bill 2012 First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills. First and Second Readings.

30 A Bill for an Act to make provision for the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation and to transpose into the law of Gibraltar Council Directive 2010/13/EU of 10th March 2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the co-ordination of certain provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in Member States concerning the provision of audiovisual media services supplementing Directive 2007/65/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 11th December 2007 and for connected purposes.

35 The Hon. the Chief Minister.

40 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation and to transpose into the law of Gibraltar Council Directive 2010/13/EU of 10th March 2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the co-ordination of certain provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in Member States concerning the provision of audiovisual media services supplementing Directive 2007/65/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 11th December 2007, and for connected purposes, be read a first time.

45 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation and to transpose into the law of Gibraltar Council Directive 2010/13/EU of 10th March 2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the co-ordination of certain provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in Member States concerning the provision of audiovisual media services supplementing Directive 2007/65/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 11th December 2007, and for connected purposes, be read a first time. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

Clerk: The Broadcasting Act 2012.

55 The Broadcasting Bill 2012 Second Reading approved

60 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill for the Broadcasting Act 2012 be now read a second time.

65 This Bill introduces a regulatory structure for all broadcasting in Gibraltar and transposes the audiovisual media services Directive, Council Directive 2010-13, of the EU as the long title suggests. It also replaces the existing Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation Act and reproduces much of the existing legislation in that respect.

70 I will be introducing a number of amendments at Committee Stage and I will highlight the main ones during the course of this speech. The amendments serve five main purposes, other than correcting typos etc, as have been highlighted in the letter to Mr Speaker and which I believe were circulated to the hon. Members on Wednesday. Given the number of amendments, I will seek to summarise them now, with the caveat that they are principally technical in nature.

75 Firstly, Mr Speaker, the amendments provide for the revocation of the current AVMS Regulations – the Audio Visual Media Service Regulations and that, in the lexicon of what I am going to be saying for the next little while, is usefully summarised as AVMS – by importing necessary provisions from those Regulations into this Bill and also harmonising the language used in the Bill with the language that was used in those Regulations.

The decision to proceed in this way has been taken so as to ensure that there is no confusion as to whether a particular broadcaster is caught by the Bill or the previous Regulations, or both and at the same time to maintain a sense of continuity regarding the style and use of language in the Bill and the Regulations, especially given that the language used in the Regulations has been effective to date. The majority of the amendments, which I will propose at committee stage, fall into this category, both in terms of numbers and volume.

Secondly, the amendments will remove references to the Transmission Standards Directive and to issues relating to conditional access. On further consideration, following the publication of the Bill, it is now the Government's view that, due to the particular technical nature of these areas, the regulation of the same would be best dealt with by means of secondary legislation.

Thirdly, the amendments will provide for even greater transparency and independence relating to the appointment of the GBC Board. An amendment to the Bill imposes a requirement on the Chief Minister to consult with the Leader of the Opposition before making any appointment. There is also a further amendment, which removes the Minister's power to choose the identity of the person who audits the GBC, thus removing an instance where bias might have been insinuated.

Fourthly, the amendments specifically provide for a digital terrestrial network and for outside operators to make use of it.

Fifthly, there are amendments which move powers invested in the Minister in the current Bill to the Authority – the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority – and also removing the requirement that the Authority obtain the consent of the Minister before acting in certain circumstances. This will allow the Authority to operate independently as a regulator under this Bill.

Mr Speaker, the Bill creates a licensing regime in relation to broadcasting beyond the public broadcasting provisions of the GBC Act for the first time in Gibraltar's history. Licences will be required by all radio and television broadcasters and this will include BFBS, who are presently exempt under the GBC Act. The licensing regime removes the exclusivity which GBC has had since the early 1960s. The monopoly in broadcasting is over.

All regulatory powers are transferred to the Authority which, on commencement of the Act, will be the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, including the powers to ensure impartiality and fairness in GBC broadcasts. These are powers which have traditionally been exercised by the Board of GBC.

This Bill also provides that all broadcasters have to provide to all persons, whose legitimate interests – in particular reputation and good name – have been damaged by an assertion of incorrect facts in a programme, a right of reply, or a remedy judged by the Authority to be an equivalent remedy. Complaints are to be made to the broadcaster in the first instance and, if the broadcaster refuses to grant the right of reply, the matter is referred to the Authority for adjudication.

The Gibraltar Regulatory Authority currently already has a duty under the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 to establish procedures for the handling and resolution of complaints about the observance of standards in political broadcasting. Similar powers are given to the Authority for all elections and referenda in Gibraltar. Until now, hon. Members will be aware that such matters have been the subject of Governor's directions. As this House is aware, Gibraltar will have a digital broadcasting network at the end of this year, which will create opportunities to exploit it commercially. It will not only be GBC that will be able to broadcast on this network and the Government and the GRA have already been in contact with an organisation which will promote the use of the network by other international broadcasters. The existence of the digital broadcasting network is catered for, for the first time, specifically in this Bill and in some of the amendments, which I will be proposing at the committee stage.

Let me now move on, Mr Speaker, to particular clauses of the Bill.

Clause 2.(2) sets out what broadcasters are deemed for the purposes of the Act to be established in Gibraltar. In relation to this particular sub-clause and, as I mentioned above, I will be proposing an amendment at Committee Stage, which would include non-European broadcasters which are licensed in Gibraltar to broadcast on the digital television network within that scope.

Clause 2.(3) sets out which broadcasters outside of sub-clause (2) are under the jurisdiction of Gibraltar and includes those who use, for example, a satellite uplink situated in Gibraltar.

Part II of the Bill deals with the administration of the Act.

Clause 4 sets out the general functions of the Authority, which include regulating, supervising and enforcing compliance with conditions to which licences are issued. The Authority will further be tasked with investigations of any breach, regulating apparatus used and setting standards in technical specifications relating to broadcasting.

Clause 5 empowers them to publish relevant information and advice.

Clause 6 gives the Authority the power to require information relevant to their supervisory powers and duties under this Act. Failure to comply without reasonable cause is a summary offence. Giving false or misleading information is an either-way offence under clause 7. Information supplied to the Authority must be dealt with in compliance with clause 8, which creates restrictions on disclosure.

Clauses 12, 13 and 14 deal with the issue of directions and administrative notices by the Authority. References to the Minister in clauses 13 and 14 as being empowered to issue such notices are the subject of an amendment I will be proposing at Committee Stage. The amendments will remove the need for the consent of the Minister, or for a consultation with the Minister to be necessary before the power is used.

Part III of the Bill creates the regime for the licensing of broadcasters.

Clause 15 sets out general licensing powers and I will be proposing an amendment, which makes it clear that this includes digital, terrestrial television. Fees for licences under this section will be set up by the Minister by regulation. It will be an offence to broadcast in Gibraltar without a licence.

Licences under this section do not affect requirements under Part VI of the Communications Act, which deals with radio communications. The requirements that the Authority needs to take into account are set out in Schedule 1 and Schedule 2, which set out who is restricted from holding a licence. Paragraph 6 of Schedule 2 gives the Authority discretion to refuse a licence to newspaper proprietors on public interest grounds only. There is no blanket prohibition for such proprietors from holding such a licence.

Let me say, Mr Speaker, that this position replicates what is the case already in the United Kingdom, although there are many entities with interests in newspapers that own and operate, either wholly or in partnership with others, media outlets that include digital or satellite television ventures. Our own view, as a Government, is that there would have to be a very good reason indeed why the regulator should consider that they need to exercise this discretion to prevent any entity with interests in newspapers from operating a digital broadcasting service in Gibraltar, but we have reserved the discretion in case there were to be a good reason in the future in the public interest of Gibraltar.

The final provisions of this part deal with enforcement etc of licences and include provision for financial penalties, enforcement notices and, as an ultimate sanction, the revocation of a licence.

Part IV deals with broadcasting standards and, to a great extent, simply replicates similar existing provisions contained in the AVMS Regulations. Examples of matters dealt with in this part include the issue of codes of practice, the recording of broadcasts, information in respect of providers of media services, prohibition of incitement to hatred, matters dealing with advertisements, teleshopping and sponsored programmes etc, the protection of minors and other such matters. Amendments to be proposed at Committee Stage also make similar provisions for accessibility, proportion of distribution and production of television programmes and a requirement to report to the European Commission. There are also amendments in this part which import the language used in the AVMS Regulations by substituting the equivalent clauses in the Bill with a new clause based on that language. The Bill goes further than the Regulations, in that it extends some of the above to audio transmissions, especially with regard to advertising.

Parts V and VI deal with exclusive rights and short news reports in television broadcasting and the right of reply. These are examples of where we have taken the current wording of the Regulations and imported that into the Bill.

Part VII provides for the regulation of community broadcasts, which, in effect, replicates provisions which are currently in parts 2 and 3 of the AVMS Regulations which are being repealed.

Part VIII deals with conditional access and there is an amendment which would delete this part as a whole for the reasons I have mentioned earlier.

Parts IX to XII replicate the equivalent parts of the GBC Act with some amendment.

Following an amendment I will be proposing, as mentioned earlier, the Chairman and board of GBC are now to be appointed by the Chief Minister, after consultation with the Leader of the Opposition, as opposed to the current position where the appointment is by the Governor, a power which I understand has long been exercised in consultation with the Chief Minister of the day, although the present Act does not require it. I believe that for the Chief Minister of the day – not the Minister for Broadcasting, but the Chief Minister, although at the moment I happen to be both – to have this power to exercise in consultation with the elected Leader of the Opposition, is the right way to progress this particular aspect of the governance of our community. There will not be a requirement to clear names with the Governor before publication in the Gazette.

The principal function of the board of GBC will now be to ensure the good governance of GBC. As I mentioned earlier, the independence aspects become the responsibility of the Authority. An amendment to clause 57 deals with the audit point I also mentioned earlier.

Part XIII extends the emergency powers the Governor had under the GBC Act to all broadcasters.

Part XIV deals with appeals against decisions made by the Authority and the appeals are to be to the Supreme Court.

Part XV includes miscellaneous provisions, including offences and repeals, where I intend to include the mentioned repeal of the AVMS Regulations at the committee stage.

Mr Speaker, to deliver arm's-length regulation of a new digital broadcasting network, to deliver independent regulation of public service broadcasting and to deliver the end of GBC's monopoly over broadcasting in Gibraltar, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, regardless of the fact that large parts of this Bill are done by compulsion of EU obligations, we think that the creation of a broadcasting regulatory framework is a good thing and welcome.

We shall not, however, be voting in favour of this Bill, which contains provisions which we think prevent us from supporting it, and even if the hon. Members are not taken by any of the views that I express on matters that may go more to policy choice, I hope they will be taken at least by the observations that I make about matters that are not really political in nature but more technical in nature and which we think are deficiently provided for in this Bill, some of them quite serious – indeed, one of them I think unconstitutionally so.

Mr Speaker, can I just address one of the last points that the Hon. the Chief Minister has made about the supposed alteration of who appoints and who consults and who consults and who appoints the board. Certainly, during all of the years that I was Chief Minister – and I suspect the same is probably true of the years of even my own predecessor as Chief Minister – the appointment of the board of GBC has not been by the Governor in mere consultation with the Chief Minister; it has been by the Governor, because that is what the Act says is the appointor, but acting on the advice of the Chief Minister. In other words, it has always been, certainly since the mid-90s, a decision of the Government/Chief Minister of the day pursuant to a letter – the existence of which I hope he is aware, and if not, he now is – of a letter which is now less important because, of course, we removed the Governor from all of our legislation, or from most of it – a process which, by the way, I do not think we quite finished; there were a handful of Acts which we left undone, which I will recommend the hon. Member to finish... But anyway, at the time that our legislation was littered with references to the Governor, in the time of the previous GSLP Government they secured out of the Foreign Office a helpful letter – I suspect that if Mr Bossano was in the Chamber he would be able to now smile and take credit for this and, indeed, it would be due to him – a letter in which the Foreign Office recognises that where an Act of Gibraltar's Parliament refers to 'Governor' and the exercise of powers by the Governor in the context of defined domestic matters, such as broadcasting, those powers were exercised by the Government. In other words, 'Governor' meant 'Government' in terms of making the underlying decision, and so it was in almost every Bill. The Public Health Act was riddled with references to 'Governor'. So this Act, in a sense, does little more than formalise in terms the arrangements as they have been, as I have always known them, and therefore it is difficult to present it as any great increase in transparency, except... I mean it would be a considerable increase in transparency if the appointments that the Minister makes were subject to the consent of the Opposition, but simply to submit to the process of consulting the Opposition and then perhaps ignoring their views and proceeding with whatever appointment is towards the box-ticking end of transparency, rather than towards the effective end of transparency.

But still, Mr Speaker, I do not criticise him for effectively choosing to continue with a regime, which is the one that we had and presided over in terms of [inaudible] appointment. It is an important responsibility in a small community like Gibraltar for the choice of the board of GBC, for reasons that he has known and may often have felt the victim of in the past when they were in Opposition. People attach a lot of importance to what GBC says and does and, for that reason, the selection of the board. At the end of the day, we were in that position for 15½ years and they are in that position now. We like to think we did not abuse that power and we would like to think that they will not do so, either. I notice by his smirks that he does not share my statement – presumably the first part of my statement, although I suspect they subscribe to the second part of it about my hope for the future.

Mr Speaker, I cannot agree that this Bill does not increase GoG's powers over broadcasting. I think it does that and in the context of the regulator... although I accept that some of the amendments that he has given notice of are helpful, particularly in one section that I will come to in a moment, without which amendments this Bill would have been pretty objectionable in terms of the seizure of political control over the actions of the Authority, in terms of... I will come to the section number in a moment. I cannot recall it and it is marked here for acknowledgement. Without the amendments that he is proposing to that section it would have effectively put the Authority under the tutelage of the Minister for the purposes of the criteria that the Authority has to bear in mind. We will come to that. But, anyway, it is an amendment of which we approve thoroughly.

I have to say, Mr Speaker, before getting into the main points arising from the Bill, that the idea that the Opposition is given little more than 24 hours to consider 33 pages'-worth of amendments makes something of a mockery of the parliamentary process. Having been on that side of the House for many years, I do understand the need for amendments. Some of them are pointed out to the Government late in the day; it used to happen to me. But we now have a constitutional legislative process, whereby Bills are published six weeks in advance. It ought to be possible, in the case of amendments of the scale and magnitude of this Bill, to produce them sooner than 26th September – which, if my calendar management serves me correctly, is the day before yesterday – and in a letter, which runs into page 33, full of amendments. I have no reason to doubt what the hon. Member says, that they are mainly of a technical nature, but the hon. Member will understand and accept, I am sure, that it ought not to have to be taken on the word, that the Opposition should have a reasonable period of time to consider amendments which really go to a substantial part of the body of the legislation.

So, in respect of the amendments... and we have just had an opportunity to scan and really limited ourselves to picking out the ones that we think went to ministerial powers which is, of course, the area in this field which would most concern us, I do not know whether we would agree or would not, so we do not take issue with the amendments. Simply to say that in the time available it has not been possible for us to test what the effect is of the amendments, compared to the legislation from which they are said to be imported, and whether the importation is pure or impure, in the sense of the context in which they now find their place in this new piece. As I say, we have no reason to doubt what the hon. Member says but, in the time available, we have no means of assessing that for ourselves.

I just wonder if, when the hon. Member replies to me, he might just like to tell the House what, if any, effect this Bill has on what one might loosely call in Gibraltar the existence of satellite clubs and things of that sort and whether this Bill, in his view, impacts on that or does not impact on that.

Mr Speaker, delving then into the Bill itself, we find in the context of this area... I do not say that there are not areas of legislation where the concept may be less objectionable, but in the context of the regulation of broadcasting, we find that clause 3(2) is so all-embracing as to really render the rest of the Bill nugatory. After all, if the Minister and the Authority may do anything that appears to them to be incidental or conducive to the carrying out of their duties, what is the purpose of purporting to set out what it is they can do and not do? In effect, this is a blank cheque to do anything they like so long as they believe that it is incidental or conducive to the carrying out of their duties.

Mr Speaker, I have also not been able to alight on an interpretation of clause 8, read with clause 6, which is not entirely circular, to the point where it renders clause 8 and clause 6 in part, completely otiose. So clause 6.(1) says:

‘The Authority may, for the purpose of performing the functions assigned to or conferred respectively upon them by or under this Act, by notice—’ – and then it gives a list, and then there are sections which provide for the information that they can ask for and the purpose for which they can ask for.

Then clause 8.(1) says:

‘Subject to the following provisions of this section, no information with respect to a particular business which—’

– and then it says (a) and (b).

Then it says:

‘(2) Subsection (1) does not apply to any disclosure of information which is made for any one or more of the following reasons—

(a) for the purpose of facilitating the performance of any duties or functions assigned to or conferred on the Minister or the Authority by or under this Act;’

If the Authority can ask for information, under 6, only for the purposes of their duties under the Act, clause 8.(1) says that they cannot, in effect, publish it, and then clause 8.(2) says but the prohibition against publication does not apply for any reasons ‘...for the purpose of facilitating the performance of any duties’, you are back to where you are. In other words, you can demand information for purpose (a), you cannot publish them, or you cannot use them for particular... or you cannot publish it unless sub-clause (2) applies and the first thing that sub-clause (2) applies is that you can publish it for the purposes that you asked for it, which is of the Board. So it seems to me that all information can always be published, because it can only be asked for for the purposes of the Authority’s duties, and if that is an exception to the non-publication rule, then in what circumstances can it not be published? Therefore, I cannot understand what the purpose of the restriction, or the purported restriction in publication is in 8.(1).

Mr Speaker, turning now to the regulation-making power in clause 9, I think that clause 9.(1)(b)... and on this side of the House we believe that clause 9.(1)(b) is objectionable. In other words, what clause 9.(1)(b) does is that, in respect of offences created by the Act, the Minister would later set penalties by regulations. I have come across, before, offences created by regulations and the Minister, in the same regulation as he created the offence, created the penalty. I have also come across regulations which establish penalties for offences created by some European regulation of direct application to Gibraltar. I cannot remember ever having come across a Gibraltar Act of Parliament which creates offences, does not establish the penalties for them and postpones and defers the creation of penalties for offences created by primary legislation to a subsequent exercise of an unaccountable discretion by a Minister in subsidiary legislation.

Clause 9.(1)(b) says:

‘the procedure and principles for the imposition of financial penalties on a person who fails to comply with an obligation imposed on that person under, or pursuant to, this Act...’

– shall be done by regulations. We are talking about regulations that can create penalties of as much as two years’ imprisonment and fines of an apparently unlimited nature.

I applaud the hon. Member’s amendment to clause 13, without which this Bill would have been even more objectionable, and that is the section the number of which I could not remember before. Clause 13, basically where all the references to ‘Minister’ have been taken out and replaced by references to ‘the Authority’ only and it no longer renders the Authority subject to criteria and other things published by the Minister under administrative notices.

Mr Speaker, turning to clause 15, which is the general licensing power, and specifically to clause 15.(3), we could not support a Bill that allows the Minister to decide by himself. Wherever it says ‘consultation’... Consultation is not a check or a balance. Consultation is asking people what they think and not being bound by what they tell you, as opposed to acting on the advice of – (Interjection) Sorry? The idea that the Minister by himself should have the power to exempt a particular broadcasting service from the licensing requirement seems to me a huge power. There is no reason why such a power should be exercised.

If Parliament thinks that licensing should be broadcast and that the GBC monopoly is over and we are creating a licensing regime, I do not see what the need is for the Minister to reserve to himself a power to decide that a particular broadcaster, or a particular broadcasting service, should be allowed to broadcast outwith the regime created by this Act.

Mr Speaker, clause 20 deals with financial penalties and this is a section which I think may be unconstitutional.

Clause 20 allows the Authority to impose financial penalties, if I have correctly understood it, basically in shorthand, up to a certain percentage of the financial turnover of the organisation in question – and there is no right of appeal. The clause in the Bill that deals with the rights of appeal, which is clause 67, lists the decisions which are eligible to be appealed against. It does not include the imposition of financial penalties by the Authority and then says that no other decision of the Authority can be challenged in any court of law by any means or process.

I think it is unconstitutional. The imposition of a penalty without right of appeal, from my memory of the Constitution, although I reserve the right to be shown to be wrong, is unconstitutional. It violates a specific term of the Constitution, and even if it did not, it is wholly undesirable that any public organisation should have the power to impose financial penalty, or penalties of any kind on any citizen, without that citizen having the right and, indeed, being statutorily prohibited from, having that decision reviewed in court.

With slightly less vigour but not to be disregarded for that reason, I hope, I would make a comment in relation to clause 22, where the Authority is given power to make codes of practice, non-compliance with which threatens the licence, subjects to potential penalties, without those codes of practice having to be debated by Parliament, or tabled in Parliament and, again, no right of appeal, no right to challenge. I do not suppose it would be a right of appeal, it would be a right to legal challenge. So, if the Authority were... I do not want to use a ridiculous example, because then the hon. Members will put it in their press release after this, will use it against me, but if the Authority were to issue a code which was absolutely objectionable, it could not be challenged by any broadcasters in court because of the complete prohibition against challenging any action of the Authority in court, except by the exercise of the clause 67 right of appeal, and this is not listed in the things that you can appeal against.

I am all in favour of the exercise of regulatory function by independent regulatory bodies, but even they... the fact that they are independent of the Government does not mean that they should not also be accountable to the courts for their own independently exercised judgements. Indeed, I think that the codes of practice and the power of the Authority to issue codes of practice is so deep and wide and far-reaching in an area as important to modern society as broadcasting that I think those codes of practice should be tabled in Parliament and subject to parliamentary review, as is the other area of very important in society where codes of practice can be issued, in terms of the judicial... I cannot remember the name of the legislation now... the Judicial Commission Act, where hon. Members may remember... codes of practice to be issued etc.

It may be that I am misunderstanding clause 24.(1), Broadcasters’ duties, but is it really the intention... I can understand that 390

'Every broadcaster shall ensure that –

395 and (a) deals with news and that news shall be given objectively, impartially and without expression of the broadcaster's own view, but is it possible for the same to happen in (b)? Is it possible for a broadcaster to have a current affairs programme in which there is no expression of the broadcaster's views? Obviously, Mr Jeremy Paxman is not subject to the same rules in England. In other words –

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, he is.

400

Hon. P R Caruana: It may be that this is the case and that this is a perfectly workable system but, in current affairs programmes, it is inevitable that presenters and moderators and interviewers end up making comment which amount, directly or indirectly, to the communication of a view. But, as I say, this might be... The fact that it is lifted straight from UK legislation is, frankly, I discovered while I was there, not by itself a sufficient certificate of reliability.

405

Mr Speaker, turning to clause 37:

'(2) The Minister may prescribe that events on the list shall be made available live, partially live or by way of whole or partial deferred coverage.'

410

I do not know whether this is an intended provision or whether it is just the effect of casually chosen language. Sub-clause (1) does not give the Minister the right to decide that particular events need to be broadcast, but rather that, if they are, they cannot be broadcast on an exclusive basis. That is the effect of the clause, so the Minister for Broadcasts cannot say; you shall broadcast the GSD annual general meeting –

415

A Member: [Inaudible] (Laughter)

420

Hon. P R Caruana: It says – no doubt, under future leadership, it will have them regularly – that if the GSD annual general meeting is on the list under sub-clause 1 that the Minister has put together, that it cannot be broadcast exclusively. GBC cannot say only I can broadcast it. Now, read sub-clause (2) in relation to sub-clause (1), sub-clause (1) being the operative sub-clause.

425

'The Minister may prescribe that events on the list shall be made available live, partially live or by way of a whole or partially deferred coverage.'

In other words, in determining the three manners of broadcasting, a power has been introduced which means that he can order particular events to be broadcast. Because read by itself, it has that effect.

430

'The Minister may prescribe that events on the list shall be made available...'

– one, two or three but made available– so the Minister could put the GSD annual meeting on the list and then say you must broadcast it, 'either live, partially live, or deferred coverage', but broadcast it, you must.

435

If that were the intention, it would be in sub-clause (1), not in sub-clause (2), which is intended to deal only with whether the non-exclusivity applies to live, recorded, etc.

It may not be the hon. Member's policy intention to empower the Minister to order any broadcaster that they must broadcast a particular event (Interjection) Well, it cannot be made available, if you do not broadcast it. (Interjection) Then you are ordering somebody to record it. You cannot broadcast it without recording it... without covering it.

440

Mr Speaker, look, I have to make the point, so it is up to the hon. Members to decide (a) whether they have any merit and, even if they do have merit, whether they agree with that.

I understand the power of parliamentary majorities. I make these points and observations in good faith

445

Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible] inform the debate.

450

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well, Mr Speaker, the Bill, in our view – the hon. Member is honourable to interpret it differently, but in our view the Bill says that the Minister may prescribe that events on the list shall be made available. (Interjections) That is not what it means. (A Member: Yes.) Shall be made available live, is available to recipients of the broadcast, not to other broadcasters!

Hon. Chief Minister: The hon. Member has made a number of points which I will deal with in my reply, but if I can just contribute to this part of what he is saying.

As I understand that clause, Mr Speaker, comes from a European requirement that certain broadcasters who may be transmitting these events, which are on the list, are not entitled to keep that video of the event to themselves and they must make them available to other broadcasters who may wish to include excerpts of it in their news broadcasts, or may also wish to broadcast it live.

It is certainly not the intention – if the hon. Member says that it can be read that way, perhaps we need to look at the wording of it. It is certainly not the intention – I do not think it can be – that people must transmit something. It is that those who are recording it or showing it live, if they wish to, have to make it available to other broadcasters for those purposes. That is how we read it.

I invite the hon. Gentleman to see whether that reading fits within that clause.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, of course it fits and that objective is an entirely logical part of the architecture.

That interpretation would be an entirely logical part of the architecture of not allowing particular broadcasters to hog a particular event. The only way that you can not hog it, is by being ordered to make it available to others and that making of it available to others, can be live, partially live or whatever.

All I am saying is that language that makes that clear would render the clause unobjectionable but, as drafted, it is not limited to that interpretation, because the Minister may prescribe that events on the list shall be made available live. You are saying that it should be read like this: if a broadcaster broadcasts an event, which is on the sub-clause (1) list, if both those things have happened, then the Minister may prescribe that that event shall be made available to other broadcasters, either live, partially live... Read like that, which is how the hon. Member has described it, it is completely unobjectionable. The hon. Member's interpretation, which is innocuous, is not the only interpretation to which that subsection is capable.

Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Gentleman will give way. If the hon. Gentleman looks at sub-clause (4) he will see that there is an obligation to refer this list also to the European Commission, so it is a list for the purposes of competition of the events in a particular territory so, in other words it is not 'and you shall transmit the GSLP annual general meeting live into every home in Gibraltar, whether you like it or not'.

It is designed as a competition counterbalance measure, which is why the requirement is there for the Commission to be informed of the list. So that those who might wish other events to be on the list, which are not listed by particular countries' Ministers with such a power, can, through the Commission, say, 'Well, Minister, why are you not putting the Miss Gibraltar show, which is the one everybody wants to share, not the GSD annual general meeting, on the list?'

Hon. P R Caruana: I do not doubt that is the case, which is why I started my intervention on this point with the caveat that I did not think this was a policy choice, that this was just a juxtaposition of language. Anyway, enough said, Mr Speaker, it is up to the hon. Members to decide whether they think there is any merit in the point.

Mr Speaker, turning to clause 39 and it is no... where there is latitude in how you transpose directives, it is no... if the way that we choose to do it, is undesirable, it is no consolation to be told that this is a provision of the Directive. The whole regime of right of reply which, at first glance, looks real and useful and valuable, I think is rendered not so by the architecture of deadlines that have been put into it. The easiest way to illustrate the point is this – and I will just do it by reference to three milestones in the whole process, rather than go in detail through the whole regime. In a nutshell there is a right of reply, but sub-clause 5.(a):

'The broadcaster... may refuse to provide the right of reply...'

if he thinks that it 'is not justified'. What are the remedies, then? If somebody feels aggrieved, they ask for the right of reply, the broadcaster says I do not think it is justified. So what then is the remedy available? The remedy available is all the rest of it that follows. In a nutshell, that will take 42 days because, under clause 7, there is 20 there, the Authority has 28 days to adjudicate on it and even if they adjudicate in your favour, the broadcaster then does not have to publish anything for the next fourteen days.

I do not see why, in a small place like Gibraltar, it should take 42 days to decide whether somebody has been justified, feels justified... the hon. Member knows that there are very few grievances which are not made worse, rather than better, by being revisited 42 days later. So you get... somebody calls you all things under the sun, or treats you very unfairly politically, or whatever, and 42 days later, just as everybody is forgetting about it, the whole thing gets dragged up again. It just seems unnecessary, frankly. I would much prefer to see there a simple provision that if the broadcaster wants to invoke 39.(4)(a), then the Authority can consider the matter in a handful of days and direct and should have the power to direct the broadcaster to broadcast.

The benefit of the doubt, the balance of doubt should be in favour of the victim, not of the perpetrator. It would not do a broadcaster a great deal of harm to give somebody a right of reply in circumstances where they might not deserve it. It is much more serious for the person not to get the right of reply in circumstances where they might.

Mr Speaker, I think the amendment that he proposes to clause 47.(2) of the Bill, that is to say, not allowing the Minister to make the decision of who should be on the Board of GBC, but repatriating it to himself, is correct. But it does not sit well with his usual boasts that he is just a normal Minister, that they are all equal in the GSLP Cabinet, and that he does not exercise more power than anybody else.

I support, given the importance of the matter, that it should be the Chief Minister, which is why I always exercised it in consultation, perhaps, with Ministers, but a chief ministerial power, rather than a ministerial power, but I see that the hon. Member's desire to bring this back to him, rather than allow somebody to give it to the Minister, did not appeal to him, despite being a genuine and literal case of primus inter pares – which is what he claims, but I do not think anybody else believes. I hope that, by now, he is learning that primus inter pares is a luxury which effective governance renders pretty unaffordable. (Interjections) Well, if he has not learnt it yet, he will before much longer! I can tell him.

Mr Speaker, turning now to clause 62, which is taking legal proceedings against GBC, I think that these provisions are indefensible, even if they are in the existing Act.

Hon. Chief Minister: Which clause?

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I am going to talk generally about Part XII; it is on page 105 of the Bill.

If we are taking an opportunity, I do not know which of these provisions is in the GBC Act, or it is not. Frankly, it matters not. We should not in this day and age be legislating in these terms. If we think we are reforming, we think we are just transferring the old Act into the new Bill, regardless of the effect of it, I don't think, then that is another matter. That will be a policy decision for the hon. Members.

Clause 62 itself,

'The exercise of any discretionary power with respect to broadcasting content made by the GBC shall not be challenged except by way of a complaint to the Authority.'

Well, Mr Speaker, he who has been elected by the people of Gibraltar – albeit by a small margin – to be the Chief Minister, does not enjoy this privilege. Why are you giving it to anybody else? The idea that it should not be possible in the courts that we are excluding from the competence of the courts the ability to challenge, even by the Wednesbury principles, the editorial decisions of GBC's Board is antediluvian in the context of modern-day access to justice by citizens.

As I say, this is not a statutory cover against legal challenge that he enjoys or that any of his Ministers enjoy. Why are we bestowing it on others, who are not accountable to the people who cannot be elected and are not hireable and fireable by anybody, except by them, except by the Chief Minister?

Then clause 63 is, in a sense, even worse. clause 63 says:

'No civil suit shall be commenced against the GBC before the expiry of one month after written notice...'

How on earth do you get an injunction against GBC in respect of a programme that you think they are broadcasting tomorrow, if you have got to give them one month's notice of civil suit? I do not know whether this provision is in the existing Act or it is not, but if it is, it needs to be confined to the dustbins. I do not think it has been honoured in practice, because I am well aware that people have commenced legal proceedings against GBC and have obtained injunctions or gone to court seeking injunctions against GBC. How they did it in the light of this provision, if I take the hon. Member's word for it that it exists in the Act, I do not know.

I think it is wholly undesirable, particularly against a broadcaster who may be about... The BBC does not enjoy this in England. The idea that you know that GBC is going to publish a programme that a court of law would injunct but that you cannot get an injunction until 30 days' time, because you have got to give them a month's notice of the injunction, is obscene in its effect on the rights of the citizen and on the individual, and I think that this clause has got to go. It serves no useful purpose, it is oppressive of the rights of citizens and it is not protection to which a broadcaster should be entitled in the 21st century in our modern European community.

Mr Speaker, perhaps I might reserve some of my controversial but also advisory and informative remarks in relation to Part VIII, Emergency Powers. I recognise the hand of the Foreign Office legal department here. I say that I 'recognise' because I suggest the hon. Member has been subjected to the 575 same treatment as I was often subject to when junior lawyers in the Foreign Office got their hands on our legislation whilst it was still on the green paper.

Mr Speaker, there is an important underlying issue here which transcends the importance of the substance of this section, even though I think the substance also has importance, which I will come to in a second. There is a view in the Foreign Office, which I think is wholly incorrect – and this is not a point I am making against the hon. Members, because it used to be deployed against me as well – here is a view inside the Foreign Office legal department that the Governor’s constitutional responsibilities trump everybody else’s so that, if the Governor is responsible for internal security and the hon. Member is responsible for broadcasting, when it comes to the internal... If there is an internal security dimension to broadcasting, then his – the Chief Minister’s – competences are pushed aside in favour of the Governor and, in my view, that is a wholly indefensible legal interpretation.

Let me illustrate my point by this example. This is worth hearing and he ought to put his mobile phone down for a minute.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, I am looking for something which relates to exactly –

Hon. P R Caruana: Alright, well in a moment, Mr Speaker, because this is not a point in which I suspect that we need to argue across the floor. I hope we are on the same side on this.

Let me illustrate my point by reference to an example which I think proves it beyond peradventure. For that statement that I have made earlier to be true of the effect of the Governor’s internal security constitutional powers over the hon. Member’s, opposite, powers of broadcasting, the same would have to be true, because it is the same Constitution subject to the same constitutional interpretation mechanisms, of the judiciary. Would anybody argue that it is a tenable sustainable interpretation of the Constitution that, in times of emergency and if the internal security of Gibraltar required it, the Governor could usurp the independent judicial functions of Gibraltar’s judges? No. Well, then, exactly the same applies to anybody else who has constitutional powers. There is not one rule of constitutional interpretation when it comes to whether the Governor’s powers trumps the judiciary’s powers under the Constitution and a different one as to when the Governor’s constitutional powers trumps the judiciary’s constitutional powers.

If this insidious attempt by a small element, I suspect, in the Foreign Office, to claw back a role for the Governor in our legislation by the deployment of this outrageously irrational, practically infantile, argument of constitutional statutory interpretation is allowed to go unchecked, you will end up with this clause in every piece of legislation that you bring to this House because everything has a potential internal security dimension.

Next time we pass amendments to the Traffic Act, they will be telling you that because a terrorist can load a car with explosives and drive it into somebody and cause an explosion, that there is a potential internal security dimension – traffic. Where does it say that the Government’s constitutional powers are subservient to the Governor’s constitutional powers and that the Governor assumes responsibility for things that are normally the Government’s constitutional powers when internal security may be a peripheral affected issue? It does not. This is just the Foreign Office helping themselves to their unilateral... which is why we passed the Bill giving the Government power to test the constitutionality of a Bill before it comes to this House, which is why the Foreign Office did not like the idea that the Government passed that Bill, and there was a Bill – I cannot remember the exact name of it, the Bills Constitutionality Act or something – which was passed precisely in response to a dispute of this sort with the Foreign Office, so that the Government, when deciding whether to bring legislation affected by this question to this House, cannot be unsettled by the threat that it might not get Governor’s consent. That Bill gives the Government an alternative route. You test the constitutionality of the Bill before you bring it to this House and if the court says that it is constitutional, then they cannot withhold their consent, because that is the only ground they are entitled to withhold it for. That was the whole purpose of that Bill.

The same, frankly, applies to the proposed amendment in clause 41.(4)(c), although I do not know if that is already in some other piece of legislation. This is not a criticism of the fact that the hon. Members have submitted to it. We invested a hell of a lot of time on page 26 of his letter, where it says:

‘...where the reason for the intended adoption of a measure is the safeguarding of the internal security defence of Gibraltar and is of such a nature as to fall within the Governor’s constitutional responsibility and the Governor has informed the Minister that the measure needs to be taken and so directs the Authority.’

It is not the case, in our view, that the Governor, because he is responsible for internal security, is responsible constitutionally for the internal security dimensions of broadcasting and traffic and public health and firefighting and everything else, any more than we are as constitutionally responsible for the dimensions of genuine internal security, which are his, which may invoke other areas that we are responsible for.

I can only suspect that the reference to 'Government' on the second line of clause 66.(1) is a Freudian slip:

'If at any time the Governor is satisfied that it is necessary for the preservation of internal security that the Government should have control over broadcasting in Gibraltar...'

(Interjection) Yes. No, Mr Speaker, but he will say that the Government includes him – I do not mean this particular Governor; I mean him, the office of Governor – and it cannot be that because it says:

'(2) If and whenever the Governor exercises the powers conferred upon him by subsection (1) the broadcaster shall be entitled to receive from the Government –'

Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is going to tell me – which I would welcome – that, in effect, what the Governor is doing is invoking internal security powers for the Government – (Interjection) I beg your pardon?

Hon. Chief Minister: As prerogative..

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker... but if that is the case, it is the Government's prerogative, not the Governor.

The idea that the Governor suspends the Constitution, suspends the Broadcasting Act, not in favour of himself, as the party responsible for internal security, but in favour of the Government, if he has achieved that, then he has achieved a little bit more in this area than I, although I was able to...

Hon. Chief Minister: Black and white. It is all [inaudible].

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I doubt very much if that is intended, but if that is what is intended, then the more direct way of doing it would be for the Government to do this directly. The Government is perfectly capable of... I am not suggesting it should be so, but there are plenty of other pieces of legislation – the Civil Contingencies Act, for example – the Emergency Powers Act, for example, gives the Government and Ministers, direct powers in cases of genuine...

I am not so concerned about this particular provision, although it has its importance, but certainly the whole question of the need in the context of this and 47 whatever it is – 47.(1) or (2) as referred to – that we should just keep... There will be pieces of legislation – and I sometimes conceded this to the Convent – which do genuinely go to the Governor's constitution... This is not about us wanting to usurp the Governor's constitutional responsibilities or to somehow redraw the lines of the constitutional settlement of 2006. We, on this side of the House, are very content. It is about making sure that, through this mechanism, these lines are not blurred against us.

The Government will always enjoy the support of this side of the House and should not fear the parliamentary consequences of a dispute with the Foreign Office in relation to anything that genuinely goes to holding the constitutional line.

You will not enjoy our support if the legislation is trying to circumvent the proper constitutional, the proper delegation, the proper constitutional assignation of powers to somebody other than the Government and this Parliament, for example, the judiciary or the Governor, or whoever it might be.

The powers lie where they lie. They are there by agreement with Gibraltar, but they should then respect those and not, by this side door, try to enlarge the impact of that constitutional settlement in their favour.

Mr Speaker, turning now to clause 67, which is the appeals section, the hon. Members will see at 67.(1) that the right of appeal is limited to (a) to (f), to the six matters listed there at clause 67.(1).

Leaving to one side for a moment the fact that that is all that can be appealed against, and there are many important things that cannot be appealed against, even this right of appeal, limited to these six matters can only be exercised with the leave of the court. Mr Speaker, why should a citizen have to get the leave of the court to exercise his first right of appeal? I am familiar with the concept of the leave of an upper court for a subsequent appeal in other areas of our law – indeed, it is constitutionally permissible – but that the very first appeal by a citizen against the decision-making should be subject to appeal is just putting justice even more out of the axis of the ordinary citizen. He has got to spend the money litigating, obtaining the right – the leave to appeal – and then he has got to spend money again actually prosecuting the appeal. What is the need for it? The court is perfectly capable of throwing out frivolous, vexatious and unmeritorious appeals, without having to put the citizen... without having to load the dice this heavily in favour of the broadcaster.

Then, sub-clause (7) I think is unduly onerous in its effect.

'The bringing of an appeal under this section shall not operate to suspend the effect of the decision appealed against saving that the Court may award such interim relief as it sees fit.'

This is all very well and, of course, there is a similar provision in quite a lot of bits of legislation, but we are talking here about the revocation of somebody's licence – I mean, literally close down your broadcasting station at 6 o'clock tonight – because I passed a code, which is inappealable, a code of practice you disobeyed and I have directed you to close down. You have got to close down, you cannot appeal, the appeal does not stay the effect of the order. I think this is simply too draconian. In financial services, the regulator does not have any power of this kind. The Financial Services Commission does not have power to revoke and suspend people's licence without putting them on notice, giving them opportunities to comment, etc. A process. It has not arisen in that case. (Laughter)

I just do not see why we are making... we are not following the same, well-established template in relation to this new regulatory framework and challengeability of their decisions. We now have an established regulatory framework; we have it in quite a few areas; we have it in financial services, we have it in telecommunications. We do not need to reinvent the wheel every time we regulate an activity. We can just borrow the regime with which we are familiar.

Then, clause (8):

'Except as provided by this section the validity of a decision to which this section applies shall not be questioned in any legal proceedings whatsoever.'

So you get an appeal, but you are not entitled to judicial review – it is probably ineffective; you cannot exclude the court's jurisdiction in judicial reviews. It is completely ineffectual and ineffective. Why are we passing legislation that we know is a nonsense?

I think I heard the hon. Member clarify in his – well, state by way of clarification – I think I understood him to say in his own opening address that the effect of the new powers of the Authority are that they will be the ones to make what used to be called 'Governor's directions', in terms of impartiality in the electoral context (Interjection) Yes, but who makes them? I am not focused on the provision that specifically empowers them to make it, not just in respect of directions of that sort, but also where does it say that there will be party political broadcasts? At the moment those things are in Governor's directions, so is it now up to the Authority to decide whether or not there will be party political broadcasts in the future and the terms of it? This is a pretty... it would be a pretty – (Interjection) sorry?

Hon. Chief Minister: Only for Government.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I am quite happy for the hon. Members to have party political broadcasts: the more the better, so long as I have my proportionate share of them, too! The point I am making is that obviously it is the intention that somebody will do this and it is not immediately clear who or where it is provided for and if it is the Authority, they should not have a discretion, they should be required to do it.

Trying to make it fit within a discretionary power grant is not good enough, Mr Speaker. He cannot have a discretion not to have party political broadcasts. There has to be some statutory provision obliging the Authority to require the dominant broadcaster, GBC at least, to have party political broadcasts and the rules that we have got, which used to be all in Governor's directions. Now we are repealing the Governor's directions. I am not saying anybody intends to do any of this, but we need to understand the architecture by which this will be done without anybody having the discretion not to do it.

I would welcome the hon. Member telling me, when he replies, whether the provisions of Schedule 2, in other words, the definition of the various disqualifications, the various disqualified persons and entities, whether the provisions of paragraph 2, 'Disqualification of religious bodies' and of paragraph – I cannot remember now. I have not made a note of it, the one about political bodies – whether that is a requirement of the Directive, or whether that is a policy choice that has been made by the Government – it is Schedule 2 on page 115 of the Bill. In other words, there appears to be a disqualification for religious bodies to own broadcasters. That may be a requirement of the Directive; I have to admit I have not checked this Bill against the Directive. It might be so, I do not know, but it seems odd and I frequently watch a broadcaster that is owned by a religious body. It is not everybody's taste, but it is some people's taste, so if it is a requirement of the Directive, so be it, if it is not a requirement of the Directive, but something that is just a matter of policy, then I would urge the hon. Member, perhaps, to reconsider that.

If I could just refer the hon. Member to paragraph 3 of Schedule 2, dealing with 'Disqualification of publicly-funded bodies', it says,

'The following persons are disqualified persons in relation to any licence granted by the Authority', as amended,

'other than a licence to provide a restricted service—

(a) a body, other than the GBC, which has, in the last financial year, received more than half of its income from public funds.'

765 That is intended to capture GBC, which gets more than half of its income, but it also commits the Government to fund another broadcaster up to 49% with public funds outside of the statutory control that affects GBC, in terms of the GBC provisions of this Bill.

770 Hon. Chief Minister: Subject to licensing.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, but the GBC is subject to much more than licensing. There are a whole series of provisions here, which are GBC specific, in other words, all the Bill... all the sections...

775 I think it is wrong that the Government should be able to fund up to 49.99% of a second broadcaster with none of the constraints under which GBC is required to operate, because it gets 50.01% of its funding. The hon. Member will see that this provision is seriously open to abuse by any Government – and I do not suggest that theirs is such – but any Government that wanted to circumvent the GBC constraints could easily do it by funding somebody else up to just one decimal of one percentage point less than 50%.

780 Then, of course, having done that, having funded somebody to 49.99%, this fictitious Government – which, of course, does not yet exist, that might be tempted to do this – then has paragraph 4 to assist it:

'A person is a disqualified person in relation to a licence granted by the Authority if in its opinion –

(a) any relevant body is, by the giving of financial assistance or otherwise, exerting influence over the activities of that person...'

785 Mr Speaker, the reason why GBC is subject to the statutory control that it is, is precisely because the funder, the Government, would otherwise be able to exert influence, so you have an anti-influence provision in paragraph 4 followed immediately by something that allows the Government to put 49.99% finance and then argue that it is not influencing it. If it is not influencing it, then free GBC as well – which, of course, I am not recommending! I think that what needs changing is 3(a), because a body that requires slightly less than half of its funding from the Government is in the same category as GBC and should not be allowed to operate outside of the sort of statutory framework that GBC – for that very reason – is required to operate.

795 I do not know, Mr Speaker... I know that the rules in England about when a newspaper can own a broadcaster and when a broadcaster can own a newspaper are very complicated and are constantly changing and I do not profess to understand them or know what they are, but reading paragraph 6 of Schedule 2, it says

800 'A licence may not be granted to a body corporate which is, or is connected with, the proprietor of a newspaper published in Gibraltar if the Authority determines'

– delete 'in consultation with the Minister' –

805 'that in all the circumstances the holding of the licence by that body corporate could be expected to operate against the public interest.'

810 The question that this begs, apart from the substantive question of how and to what extent this is justified is... Having said that a broadcasting licence cannot be given to the proprietor of a newspaper, what restriction is there – 'No, don't tempt me. I had not thought of that, so don't put naughty ideas in my mind!' – what is to stop a broadcaster having a newspaper? If a broadcaster establishes a newspaper, do they forfeit their broadcasting licence, because they would not be able to get one if they had it... there is no provision here for that. So there seems to be a prohibition against somebody who owns a newspaper being granted a broadcasting licence, but no prohibition against somebody who already has a broadcasting licence acquiring or establishing a newspaper, which results in exactly the same thing – the same entity controlling both an audiovisual and a written medium.

815 It just does not seem logical. This whole area, I think, is too simplistically dealt with in five or six lines. I suspect that the UK provisions, which may not derive from the Directive – they may be policy of the UK Government, in terms of their broadcasting policy – I am sure are much more complicated than this. But anyway, I just make that point. I think, in this day and age of multimedia, in this day and age of... Look, if it is a Directive requirement, then there is nothing for us to debate in this House, but if it is not a Directive requirement, or there is more wiggle room in the Directive, in this age of multimedia, it just seems to keep these strict lines. It seems... I think you are about to be given the answer, which I will be interested to hear.

820 Mr Speaker, I think my final point relates to the 'Due impartiality and undue prominence' in Schedule

3. It says, in subsection 2.(1) – paragraph 2.(1):

‘The code of practice shall require that television and radio services shall exclude all expressions of the views or opinions of the person providing the services on any of the following matters–’ political, public policy etc. That is consistent with the one that we spoke about a few moments ago. But then sub-paragraph (3) says:

‘The requirements specified in sub-paragraph (1)’

– which is the one that I have just read,

‘may be satisfied by being satisfied in relation to a series of programmes taken as a whole.’

Now, that is nonsense. How does that read with (1)? If you cannot, in a programme, express... if the service provider cannot express his opinion, how can (3) then say that that requirement not to express an opinion is satisfied taking a series of programmes...? That is the language – taking a series of programmes as a whole – is about balance of coverage. It is not about prohibitions of even one example of an event. What is a broadcaster supposed to do to ensure that they do not express an opinion over a series of programmes? I suppose they would have to express one view in one programme and a contrary view, both of their own, mind you, and a contrary view in another programme. I think it just does not work.

If it is an absolute prohibition, it is an absolute prohibition and (3) must relate to something other than sub-paragraph (1) because sub-paragraph (1) does not lend itself to ‘over a certain number of programmes’ balance, it is an absolute prohibition to do it even once: it is not a question of balance.

Mr Speaker, I hope that the hon. Member will take as many as possible of my observations on board in the spirit in which they are intended, which is without partisan political hostility. It is an important piece of legislation and we need to get it right. If anything I have said, in his view, warrants more careful consideration then, after which, they may disagree with me, that is fine. That is their prerogative.

I would urge them not to rush the Committee Stage of this Bill – I do not know what sort of pressure they are under in terms of the infractions timetable. I remember there were issues about that that I recall in my day. I think you might have negotiated an extension which may be up, or coming up, I don’t know. I remember things of that sort. I do not know if this is the Bill in question. Maybe. But if the hon. Members can sustain a degree of delay in the completion of the legislative passage of this Bill through this House I think that they...

If I was making a whole series of partisan points of great political relevance, they may be tempted to resist them just for that reason. This is not such a case and, therefore, I hope that they will take advantage of the considerable effort that I have put into these assessments for the benefit of the quality of [Inaudible].

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Does the mover of the Bill wish to reply?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, can I thank the hon. Gentleman for the analysis that he has done of the draft of the Bill that is before the House and take him through what I think are the arguments that actually should persuade him that many of the issues that he has raised have been considered and can be dealt with in the general body of what is the Bill today and invite him, perhaps, in some instances where he is not satisfied, to move minor amendments of the nature which he might glean from my intervention during the course of the Committee stage today.

Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for alerting me to the existence of this letter. Certainly, it was always in my contemplation that the appointment of the Board of GBC – certainly since I have been sentient politically – is a matter that has been in the hands of the Chief Minister of Gibraltar and that the Governor has acted in accordance with the advice from the Chief Minister. When I presented that to the House, I used the words ‘in consultation with’ but I accept that it is that sort of consultation that leads to the Governor doing exactly what is proposed to him. The formula of words is the advice formula of words and that is exactly how it has been handled and right that it should have been, when we had the concept of ‘defined domestic matters’ and broadcasting was a ‘defined domestic matter’, let alone now when that balance is now reversed.

But I must say to him, Mr Speaker, that he will recall that one of the points that we took in respect of the review of the GBC, which they commissioned of Mr King, who is presently the Chief Executive, and of which they published a summary and we were committed to publish the whole Report – which we did do within days of being elected by our fine majority, by our fine majority, with one highlight deletion in order to avoid identifying a particular individual in respect of an illness.

The one point I did take at the time, Mr Speaker, was to say that I believe that any review of GBC should also review how the Board was appointed and I made the point, at the time of the review initially, at the time that I spoke in the Budget debate after that and I think he may recall, if he follows my interventions on Newswatch when I spoke on the publication of this Bill, that I was not actually happy that the position in respect of the appointment of members of the Board of GBC was exclusively in the control of the Government – because then it was the Governor on the advice of the Chief Minister, in effect.

What I have sought to do, Mr Speaker, in this Act is to create a regime not dissimilar to regimes like appointment of yourself, Mr Speaker. A more constitutionally important responsibility for a Chief Minister there probably isn't the appointment of Mr Speaker – and other office holders, like the Mayor – where the wording of 'consultation with the Leader of the Opposition' has traditionally been the language of involving Members of the Parliament in some way through their respective leaders in this place, in the manner of appointments.

He will know, Mr Speaker, that in the time that he was in my Chair, consultation meant what it meant to him, namely that he would advise (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) who he had considered was appropriate and, put it this way, I cannot think of one occasion where either it was put to him that he should have appointed somebody else or where, if it was put to him that he should have appointed someone else, that he was persuaded with the views of a Leader of the Opposition to not appoint his original proponee and appoint somebody else.

Mr Speaker, I actually think this is a huge step forward, consulting the Leader of the Opposition in respect of the appointment of the Board of GBC, when the Board of GBC would actually be much less important than it is today, is a huge step forward than simply the Chief Minister deciding who should be on the Board of GBC, when the Board of GBC has been responsible for editorial control in respect of content etc. I will give way to him when I finish the point...

Mr Speaker, I think that if we are going to follow the model – and he sees that this is actually what we are proposing – of public service broadcasting à la BBC, in some way, then it is important that we do not stay on the ground we were on before, which is that the Chief Minister makes up his mind and either signs the Gazette himself or asks the Governor to gazette those names. It would be a foolish Chief Minister who was simply to propose to the Leader of the Opposition, in consultation, names of his political devotees to take control of the public service broadcaster. I put it to him, Mr Speaker, that there have been instances in the past where we have not been convinced that that has not been the case. He recognised that in the course of his intervention, where he said that we might have felt, in some instances, two in particular that he will recall from controversy in his days – and, if wishes to be reminded, it is reporters attending the Committee of 24 when the Chief Minister of the day decided not to attend, although they had previously attended, and issues related to the referendum on the new Constitution, that the Board of the GBC then responsible for editorial control etc etc had not satisfied those who were concerned at their decisions... of their political impartiality.

So I want to take a step forward in this legislation and include the process of consultation with the Leader of the Opposition in respect of the appointment of a Board of GBC, which will now really just regulate the GBC, inter se, itself, but will have an outside regulator determining the issues as to right of reply, editorial content of news etc, etc – although I will come to the points that he makes about that later on in the Bill.

For that reason, Mr Speaker, I think this is a huge step forward that opens up the process of the appointment of the Board of GBC. Previously, the Leader of the Opposition would have found out, when he read the Gazette or saw it in a press release from the Government, that individuals had been appointed. Now the Leader of the Opposition will be consulted by the Chief Minister and, therefore, Mr Speaker, I can only say that, in the context of modernising the GBC, this is not what the Bill is about only. The Bill is about broadcasting generally but, in respect of the GBC, this is a huge step forward and I think it is ungenerous of the hon. Member to say that consultation is not really any step towards transparency. I think it must be seen by any objective observer to be real transparency.

Could there be more by seeking consent of the Leader of the Opposition? Well, of course, there could be more. One might, in another political system, even seek unanimity across the floor of a Parliament for appointment. That may be possible. In the Government's judgement, Mr Speaker, having lived through sixteen years of the hon. Gentleman's Government in respect of such appointments, where he has appointed, I would have thought, about four or five of the Boards of GBC, having found out who was on the Board of GBC periodically in Gazettes and in press releases, we think this is actually, for the reasons I have said, a huge step forward.

I give way to the hon. Gentleman on this point.

Hon. P R Caruana Obligated. Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Member... First of all, let me hasten to say that I think it would be a nonsense to require unanimity or consent from the Opposition because, then, the 950 Opposition could hold the Government to ransom and say ‘Unless you appoint the person I want I will never consent to anybody that you suggest’. Requiring the Opposition’s consent to something is equivalent to transferring the power of appointment to the Opposition. That would be absurd and no reasonable, responsible Opposition could have that aspiration.

955 By the same token, I think that the hon. Member is confusing consultation with transparency. If picking up the phone and saying ‘Peter, I am thinking of appointing Jo Bloggs to be the Chairman of GBC. What do you think?’ and keeping me on the phone for a minute, perhaps, listening to my views and then putting them down and my not knowing whether he was going to do anything with them or not, which is what ‘consultation’ means... There is no point in pretending that ‘consultation’ is capable of meaning anything more than it means in the English language and I would be careful about signalling to others that you think that ‘consultation’ is capable of meaning anything else because they will use it against you in those areas where they have the right to be consulted.

960 The hon. Member has presented this publicly not as a step forward but as transparency. Transparency means that you can see it; it means that a decision making process is accountable. That is transparency and that is not delivered by consulting the Leader of the Opposition in a non-binding way, for example not requiring the Opposition’s consent, obviously, but one form which would be a big step forward in transparency in the appointment of the GBC Board, if a big step in transparency is the policy objective that the hon. Members have set themselves, which would be laudable, but then they have got to deliver things that amount to that... Something that would amount to that would be, for example, that the nominees of the Chief Minister should have to be brought to this House and be subject to approval by a majority motion. You are not transferring to us any power of appointment, because you have got the majority; what you are doing is exposing yourselves to having to justify the balance of your appointment and that would be transparency.

970 If the hon. Members want transparency... They said it; I didn’t. We did not have transparency on the appointment... No, Mr Speaker, I am not saying that they are required to have transparency. I am saying that if they are telling the people of Gibraltar that this is in order to deliver transparency in the appointment, is what they have set themselves out as their goal, then they have got to deliver a mechanism which delivers visibility to the appointments. The way that visibility to appointment... is by having to come to this House, in the knowledge that they can appoint whoever they want, because they have got the majority in this House. So there is no transfer, there is no mortgaging yourself to the views of the Opposition but, of course, it is visible because, then, the Opposition can say what it feels about this appointment and you will counteract it: there is not the need for agreement but transparency. People can see what the Government is doing and know why the Government is doing it.

980 In my view, that would be a genuine act of injecting transparency into the view of GBC. I do not say to them, do it; I say to them, do it if it is your policy to have transparency on the appointment of the GBC Board, because what you are offering now in this Bill is not the transparency on the appointment of the GBC Board. Consulting the Leader of the Opposition in private is not a transparency; it is something else. I am not saying it is valueless, I am not saying it is nothing, I am not saying it is not a step forward in another direction, but it is not any degree of step forward in transparency, meaning visibility, to the community at large in what the Government is...

990 That is my point, but if the hon. Members do not want transparency... Look, if I had thought that there should be more transparency, I had 15½ years to do it and I did not, so I can hardly now sit here demanding of the hon. Member to do things that I did not do in 15½ years of opportunity to do so. So he must not misunderstand where I am coming from on this.

995 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is a very useful aid to what the hon. Gentleman considers the definition of ‘consultation’ to be, which perhaps we may have to remind his Opposition colleagues of on occasion.

1000 Mr Speaker, we actually disagree. We think that this is a much more transparent process because the definition of transparency that he now adopts we do not think is the only definition of transparency. One is transparent if one consults with the Leader of the Opposition and then announces to the community who the individuals to be appointed to the GBC are. Of course, they would always be announced to the community either by the Governor in the Gazette under the old model, or by the Chief Minister in the Gazette under this model.

1005 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman seems to forget – a point, perhaps, to consider why it is that Question Times take so long – what are the privileges of Members of this House. The hon. Member can bring a motion at any time, after he has read in the Gazette the names of the people appointed by the Government, and say that he does not believe that those names reflect an independent Board for GBC, or whatever he likes, and we can have the debate in the House and we can then vote with such numbers as one may be able to muster in this House one way or the other. So that is in-built in the system, Mr Speaker. We believe that there is, therefore, now greater of what we call transparency than there was before, but I am grateful the hon. Gentleman recognises that he did not do this and that he cannot, therefore, be urging us to go forward, and that he must simply be analysing what it is that we are doing and trying to adopt his own definitions of what is transparency and consultation and apply them to our process. We do not accept those definitions. We believe that this is a more transparent process, for the reasons I have already indicated.

Mr Speaker, neither do I accept the proposition of the hon. Gentleman that this Bill does anything to bring the Authority – the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, as defined under the Bill – under the tutelage of the Minister. I know the hon. Gentleman will know that I found a Bill, in not too dissimilar terms to the one which I am now moving, ready for publication when I was elected, and this was an issue that was already, as the hon. Gentleman has indicated, something put to him and that there are Directive timetables which are applicable and which had been extended. He will know, Mr Speaker, from having looked at that draft, which gave the Minister many more instances of power, that this Bill, as published, let alone as now to be amended, gives to the Authority almost all of the powers that there were under the Bill and retains to the Minister very, very few, and that has been the process that I have intended to deliver in the course of publishing this Bill.

Mr Speaker, it is true that the hon. Gentleman and Members and lady opposite have not had sufficient time, in my view, to consider the amendments to this Bill, but they will now have seen – and I think the hon. Gentleman's reading of it indicates – that they are principally technical because of legal advice resulting from the need to deal with what is known as the AVMS Directive in a particular way.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Minister will allow me to say –

Hon. Chief Minister: If I may –

Hon. P R Caruana: We can skip this part. We have made a comment. He need not concern himself, except for me to just record...

I am not asking him to delay the Bill for this reason on this occasion, simply to bear it in mind for similar situations in the future, except to comment that the amendments are 'principally technical' suggests that this House does not have a legislative function in respect of merely technical provisions, (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely.) which is not the case, (Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely.) even if they are only technical.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed, and Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will allow me to say that the technical aspects of the amendments are not to make a new law for Gibraltar – they take something that was in regulations and put it in the principal Act. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) As long as he takes me on my word at that, then he will understand that the amendments are for a purpose.

Mr Speaker, I actually believe that hon. Members should have longer to consider amendments and it is only for technical reasons, if he will accept that, for legal advice reasons, that I have been put in a position where I have given them long amendments in this situation. He will know that he had done that before and that, in some instances, we accepted that and in some instances we were critical. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Well, it may be, Mr Speaker, but only in the attempt to make the letter as clear as possible and not simply... The hon. Gentleman will recognise that the letter does not simply refer to the changes to be made; it actually gives them the logic of the amendment to be made so that they could understand the amendment.

Hon. P R Caruana: For the future, if the hon. Member ever finds himself in this position again with a need to thrust upon us lengthy amendments at the last minute – and there may well be other examples when he is up against a deadline he has no choice – it is much more helpful to be sent a marked-up copy of the Bill than it is to... (Hon. D A Feetham: Tracked.) a tracked copy of the Bill, rather than to be sent the letter, which then requires you to do your own... Sorry?

Hon. Chief Minister: I thought he had been sent both.

Hon. P R Caruana: I have only seen... I do not know whether we have been sent it or not... I have only seen the letter.

No. We are not making an issue, except an observation we are making on this occasion. This is for the future.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

If I could now move on to the substance, Mr Speaker, of what it is that the hon. Gentleman has said. We are advised that this Bill, as drafted, this Bill, as now marked up and amended, has no effect on what the hon. Gentleman called 'satellite clubs', and that some of what we are taking out to do by regulation might have in the future. Of course, Mr Speaker, that is an issue to look at very carefully.

Mr Speaker, clause 3.(2) of the –

1075 A Member: [Inaudible].

Hon. Chief Minister: Liverpool Football Club supporters don't tend to watch football much these days, Mr Speaker. It is a sad time for us!

1080 Mr Speaker, clause 3(2) we do not accept renders nugatory everything that is set out in the Act. I think he will find, Mr Speaker, for reasons I will come to now, that that is actually the sort of language that is in Acts and Bills he moved in this House and it is there for a purpose. It is for the purpose of giving business efficacy to what it is that Ministers do.

1085 I recall him saying to me, Mr Speaker, on many occasions, that one had to accept that Ministers would act in good faith and not seek to use powers like this for any purpose other than for the purpose given, which is what the preamble of the legislation provides. So, Mr Speaker, I used to reluctantly take him at his word, so I hope that he does take us at ours.

I do not think, Mr Speaker, that the interaction of clauses 6 and 7 actually render the whole thing tautologous or circular, in particular, Mr Speaker, because clause 8.(1) of the Bill talks about 'disclosure', not 'publication'. So it is the disclosure to the Minister, not the publication that is the issue.

1090 If he wants to just look at that, it is about 'disclosure', not 'publication'. So, Mr Speaker, we do not actually think that that deals with the –

1095 Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, if he will give way, it is true that one clause speaks of publication... collection of information, and the other one speaks of disclosure, but the clause that speaks of disclosure does not speak of disclosure to the Minister, it speaks of disclosure at large, and disclosure at large is publication.

1100 If the clause said 'to the Minister', then at least you would be limiting the circularity, but sub-clause 8.(1) is disclosure to the world, not disclosure to the Minister. It does not say the Minister. Where does it say the Minister?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it says it in 8.(2)(a).

1105 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, but that is only in respect of (a). Mr Speaker, I think he is misreading it.

1110 Hon. Chief Minister: If the hon. Member will allow me, there is absolutely no intention to take information from operators and create a regime which carves out a part of the Data Protection Act and allows somebody to publish information which might otherwise be sensitive. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

There is a list, Mr Speaker, in 8.(2) for purposes (a), (b), (c), (d) and (e), of which the disclosure can be used, and therefore we do not believe (Hon. P R Caruana: No.) that the point makes sense. If he is ever instructed to deal with this matter in court, he can put that side of the argument. We are just not persuaded that the point he makes bites.

1115 Now, Mr Speaker, if I can –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, [inaudible] to correct him if the hon. Member will give way.

Hon. Chief Minister: Does he want me to give way?

1120 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if it is his position that he does not mind the position that this creates, then of course I bow to his majority, but he started by saying that that was not his intention. It was not his intention to create a general power.

1125 If he will just give me one more hearing of 30 seconds on this, 8.(1) places no restriction on who you can disclose to. 8.(2) says... or, rather, it says that you cannot disclose, 8.(2) says sub-clause (1) –

Hon. Chief Minister: Does not apply.

1130 Hon. P R Caruana: – does not apply – to what? It does not apply to the list to which he has just referred. Amongst the things that it does not apply to, the first item of it, (a), so you can disclose to the world in the five instances in the list in (2), amongst them:

'(a) for the purpose of facilitating the performance of any duties or functions assigned to or conferred on the Minister or the Authority by or under this Act;'

1135 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Hon. P R Caruana: As that is the sole purpose for which information can be obtained in the first place under clause 6, then you can always disclose all the information that can lawfully have been demanded under clause 6, because if under –

1140 Hon. Chief Minister: That is only – if you will allow me to complete his sentence –

Hon. P R Caruana: Of course, I –

1145 Hon. Chief Minister: – for the purpose of facilitating the performance of duties or functions –

Hon. P R Caruana: Which is always. That is always.

1150 Hon. Chief Minister: – which, Mr Speaker, will not always mean publication to the world, because – listen, Mr Speaker, and I will come to this point later on – there is, whether the hon. Gentleman likes it or not, a different sort of appeal possible and challenge possible in respect of actions done under this Act, or otherwise by a Minister, which is judicial review. Therefore, Mr Speaker, if a Minister were to publish something to the world, when all he needed to do was discuss it with the Authority, then it would be unreasonable to have done so and, in particular, if the person whose information is disclosed has suffered damage. So, Mr Speaker –

1155 Hon. P R Caruana: I am not concerned about the Minister; I am concerned about the Authority.

1160 Hon. Chief Minister: Fair enough. (Laughter) The Authority is subject to the same control.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, he is not.

1165 Hon. Chief Minister: Of course he is, Mr Speaker, because what the hon. Gentleman has to accept – and I will come to this later on – is that, although there are statutory rights of appeals only for the purposes set out in the Act – statutory rights of appeal with leave – there is always, and he will remember this from his time in practice, that he is now back at, always the right of judicial review, especially if somebody acts unreasonably.

1170 Hon. P R Caruana: But does he accept that that right – and I agree with what he has just said – that is despite the Bill, because the Bill tries to prevent it.

Hon. Chief Minister: No.

1175 Hon. P R Caruana: The Bill says, you will not challenge any exercise of authority by the Authority under this Act, except by an appeal under clause 67.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, for the reasons that I will come to, when I deal specifically with that, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) but that is not the case.

1180 Hon. P R Caruana: I give way.

Hon. Chief Minister: I cannot give way; I gave way to you!

1185 Hon. P R Caruana: No, no, no – ‘we’.

Hon. Chief Minister: Anyway, Mr Speaker, we are not persuaded of that.

1190 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman also referred us to clause 9 and I believe he said he was very concerned about this. Was it this clause that he said caused him to have constitutional concern? This clause gives the Minister power to make particular regulations and the way that it sets out the power to make particular regulations, I need to tell him, is very similar, if not identical, to section 69.(2) of the Transport Act, which gave the Minister for Transport general regulation-making powers, including the power to fix the penalties for the breaches of the regulations that he made. He will recall that members of a certain association with very loud whistles made their way around No. 6 Convent Place for some time complaining in part about that.

1195 That Act survived and that section survived and that regulation-making power survived, but, before I give way – and I will, Mr Speaker – let me tell the hon. Gentleman that this section is not just similar to section 69.(2) of the Transport Act, not just similar to that, it is actually identical to section 9.(1) of the Communications Act 2006 that he brought to this House. It is identical, Mr Speaker.

When I talk about the other sections that he has referred to, where he has expressed some concern, in particular about the creation of a new regulatory framework, I am going to be telling him repeatedly that, actually, we accept that a regulatory-style framework has been established. There is no need, as he said, to reinvent the wheel and a lot of what we are doing here is to take, word for word, the sections that he brought to this House in the Communications Act 2006. So we do not think that there was unconstitutionality in that Act: we did not raise the point in 2006 at the time. Therefore, Mr Speaker, if there was no unconstitutionality in the Communications Act that the hon. Gentleman brought to this House in its section 9, there cannot be – because I move it – an unconstitutionality here, but I recognise the hon. Gentleman has asked me to give way.

Hon. P R Caruana: Of course not, Mr Speaker. Of course the hon. Member is right that what I do cannot be constitutional and if he does the same thing it is unconstitutional, I have not suggested that.

Mr Speaker, I am saying two things to him. Firstly, in respect of his point, I specifically said that I had seen many examples and there is nothing wrong, if you create an offence by regulations, then you have to create the penalty by regulations. That is not what I was complaining about. I made that perfectly clear, I made that distinction perfectly clear. What I am complaining about is that the offences and the rights of penalty establishment created not by the regulations, but by this Act itself is establishable later by regulations.

Sub-clause 9.(1)(b) reads:

‘The procedure and principles for the imposition of financial penalties on a person who fails to comply with an obligation imposed on that person under, or pursuant to, this Act...’

not regulations. Of course, any statutory regime created by regulations will contain the penalties of the regulations. The objection here is that where ‘offences’ – in inverted commas, because they are, if it is penalties – against the regulatory regime is created by this Act, the offences are not created by this Act, they are postponed – the penalties are postponed – to be created.

I believe that that is wrong. Now, Mr Speaker, is no answer, it is not even a matter of embarrassment to me, that I may have done the same thing 25 times. I regret that nobody pointed it out to me, because if the Opposition had pointed it out to me at the time – and this is not a criticism aimed at them – if the Opposition or anybody else had pointed it out to me, he could be very sure that I would never have agreed to legislate it. Of course, he knows how these things work. A lengthy piece of legislation gets brought to the hon. Members by others and if nobody raises an objection, you are too busy to stop them for yourself. Now he is having them pointed out to him. Well, I wish somebody... I wish he had pointed it out to me when I was legislating it. The fact that we – because it was not pointed out to us – did something that we could otherwise agree is not desirable, does not become okay simply by saying ‘but you did it as well!’ Otherwise what is the purpose of us being in this House? So everything that has gone on in the past, whether intentionally, unintentionally, whether by consciously or simply because no-one had addressed their minds to it – anything that we have done in the past is now legitimised for all time in the future.

Mr Speaker, I do not think that that is appropriate. If it would help the hon. Member give this point a little bit more seriousness, if I concede to him that I deeply regret having allowed such legislation to get onto the statute book in my time and if he will move amendments to it now, I will gladly vote in favour of those amendments in all the bits of legislation... if that sort of – I don’t know – will assist him in giving this matter objective consideration, not by reference to whether I have done it myself in the past, but whether it is right or wrong in principle, I would gladly do that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I might be prepared to accept that in respect of the Communications Act, where he rightly points out that I have accepted we did not raise the issue. I said, we did not raise this issue in the Communications Act.

He cannot say that in the context of section 69.(2) of the Transport Act because, as I told him, the GTA were happily deployed around his office, I attended a meeting there myself, there was much opposition to it, he was told that what he was doing was unconstitutional, and plough on he did regardless, Mr Speaker, and section 69.(2) of the Transport Act says:

‘Regulations made under this section may provide for such offences and for such penalties as may reasonably be appropriate in the circumstances’, and that is what we were pointing out to him, whistles and all, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) around No. 6 Convent Place in 1998.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will he give way?

Does he not understand that that is wholly different to what I am pointing out to him now? I cannot think of words in which to articulate my point more clearly, so clearly my powers of articulation are deficient –

Hon. Chief Minister: Rusty!

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not complaining.

There is nothing objectionable to the section 69 of the Transport Act, because that is regulations creating an offence and also creating the penalties attaching to breach of the regulations of the offences created in the regulations. That is not what I am talking about here. What I am talking about here is not regulations that create both the offence and the penalty, what I am talking about here is ‘offences’ – in inverted commas – created by the Act, where the Act does not also create the penalty, so you have an offence created by an Act and the penalty created by the subsidiary legislation later. This parliament is entitled to know before it passes an offence, what the nature of the penalty that is going to attach to that offence, because it is completely germane to the reasonableness of the offence.

He is not comparing the point that I am making with anything that may arise from the Transport Act. He is right to compare the point I am making with the Communications Act, if he says – and I am taking him at his words – that the Communications Act also creates offences in the Act, but not penalties. The penalties are left silent in the Act and the penalties only are created later after the Act. That is not my recollection of it, but my recollection of it is not strong enough to contradict him. That would be a comparison with the point I am making.

Just a point of repetition, Mr Speaker, he knows my views... I cannot do better –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let it be clear in Hansard that none of us believe, or wish, to act in a manner that is unconstitutional and neither do we believe that the provisions in this Act, as they stand –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I have not said that –

Hon. Chief Minister: It is 20, is it not? Later on...

This act is drafted something like... [Inaudible] Neither do we believe that there is anything in the way that this is drafted which creates any hostage to fortune in that way. The hon. Gentleman has said what he has said and that is our position in respect of that section.

Mr Speaker, clause 20, which the hon. Gentleman referred us to, deals with the financial penalties: the right to appeal in respect of those penalties. Our view, Mr Speaker, is that there is always a right to challenge a penalty, even if there is not a specific statutory right of appeal against that penalty. That is often the position in much of our laws. It is not unusual that, in some instances, there should not be a particular statutory right of appeal and that the right of appeal should be left to judicial review.

I have made the point already that I do not accept that judicial review is excluded by the way this Bill is drafted. Therefore, we do not share the concern that the hon. Gentleman seems to suggest there could be, but if it is helpful to the hon. Gentleman, I am quite happy to agree to an amendment, if he wishes to move it, to bring within the provisions of statutory appeal anything to do with the financial penalties imposed. I think nothing turns on it, I have not got the concerns that he has got about it, but I am prepared, if he wishes to move an amendment – which is a very simple one – to consider it with him in committee.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am grateful to the hon. Member for offering –

Mr Speaker: [Inaudible] it is...

Hon. P R Caruana: I beg your pardon, I thought he had sat down.

I am grateful to the hon. Member for his generosity of conceding an unnecessary amendment. I really do not know where the hon. Member, when he says, ‘We have considered’ presumably he means he has considered on the hoof, because I just made the point and I have not seen any evidence of consideration by anybody other than him.

But, Mr Speaker, that is not the point. The point is this: he has said there are other instances in our legislation where there is a public authority entitled to impose a financial penalty without a specific statutory right of appeal. I tell him that he is absolutely wrong and that there is not a single other instance in our statutes where there is a right to fine somebody without a specifically granted right of appeal. Simply to say – even though they have tried to avoid it – that you can have judicial review, he must know is not an alternative, because on judicial review you cannot challenge the quantum of a fine, you can challenge the reasonableness of the decision-making process that led to the fixing of a fine, but if you are fined £100,000, you cannot judicially review it because you think the fine is excessive and it should only have been £20,000! There is a difference; surely he will understand that the principles and the procedures of judicial review exist for different purposes in courts and in the law, than the processes of appeal against the decision.

1325 Mr Speaker, I do not want to convert Parliament into a moot forum between lawyers, but he has made a statement, which is factually incorrect: there is not another statute on our statute book which creates a right to fine somebody a financial penalty. The Financial Services Commissioner does not enjoy a right of financial penalty at all in the area of financial services regulation. Where there is a right of penalty, there is necessarily a right of appeal.

1330 Again, Mr Speaker, his last intervention, I think, is some evidence of the fact that he feels the need to defend this draft, this Bill, despite the fact that I am not subjecting it to political attack. If he is going to concede the objection, the concession, what impedes him from simply saying, 'Yes, we agree that there should be that amendment. No, we think the hon. Member is wrong. We think there is absolutely no need for the amendment. We do not think it is necessary, but we are going to write a Bill, because he has asked us to, that gives a statutory right of appeal for the imposition of a penalty.'

1335 I am glad that he has done it, I am grateful to him for taking the point, but it is the way he has conceded the point does not signal to me – not that he is obliged to view my comments in this light... that these are not political attacks and he should not feel that he has to defend the drafting in terms of our debate across the floor.

1340 If I had had more time, I might have written to him privately about some of these points.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he does not accept my view on what our corpus juris covers and I do not accept his, so one of us is going to have to spend a long time going through a few thousand Acts. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) (Laughter) But look, Mr Speaker, we have considered it, even though he has not seen me confer with others, because obviously I, with others, have sat and looked at this Bill and ensured that we are satisfied with the provisions as they are. We have not considered it in the context of what he has said, but everything that I have considered with others before. Therefore, we... leads me to believe that I should not share the concerns that he now puts, but Mr Speaker, as I told him, it is something that can be cured if he wishes to move the amendment.

1350 Mr Speaker, the codes of practice that are dealt with in clause 22 we believe can be challenged, if they are in some way unreasonable in the hands of the Authority that will make them, by way of judicial review, and he is going to get that answer in many respects – and I am not going to give way, Mr Speaker, because at some stage we have to finish the debate.

1355 Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible] speak, because I have seen the mood he is in!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

1360 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): He has given way a thousand times! (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order!

1365 Hon. N F Costa: [Inaudible] give way!

Mr Speaker: Order!

1370 Hon. Chief Minister: I am in no mood other than in the mood to get to the bottom of the points that the hon. Gentleman has made for the good of our legislation, but I actually do not believe, Mr Speaker, that the point made in respect of clause 22 is a valid one. It is actually an identical position to the position in the United Kingdom as to the way that codes are produced, and there is the ability to challenge the code in the hands of the Authority by way of judicial review if it is in any way unreasonable.

1375 Mr Speaker, similarly, the duties of broadcasters under clause 24. It was the hon. Gentleman who said 'This cannot apply to Mr Paxman', and yet it is verbatim what applies to Mr Paxman. So I am not uncomfortable with a piece of legislation that allows a broadcaster the leeway that Mr Paxman enjoys to scrutinise the current affairs of the United Kingdom. I am actually very welcoming of that sort of regulation now for those in our broadcasting, public or otherwise.

1380 Mr Speaker, on clause 37, which he referred us to in respect of the exclusivity of major events, I think we have already had the debate, because he gave way whilst he was speaking. We read the provision, Mr Speaker, as meaning that there will not be exclusivity for one individual broadcaster or licensee in respect of events, and that 'shall make available' shall not mean pushed down the throats of viewers. It means shall make available to other licensees so that they are able, Mr Speaker, to also relay a transmission of a particular event. The word ‘must’, Mr Speaker, is not in those sections, as far as I can see.

The hon. Gentleman says, ‘Well, it means that they must.’ Well, shall means must, but the word ‘must’ is not here, but it is ‘shall make available’, not shall transmit, which is the damage that the hon. Gentleman was trying to cure. If this said ‘shall transmit’ and ‘must allow or make available to other broadcasters’, you might read what the hon. Gentleman wants to read in it, but if you actually bother to read the section as a whole, what it talks about is one licensee, one broadcaster who is actually there with his cameras, making available to others that audiovisual signal for them to put online or for them to put on in deferred transmission, in whole or in part. So I do not think there is any merit whatsoever to that particular point when you read the section as a whole, and, as I referred to the hon. Member, the reference there to the Commission illustrates the fact that this is a European requirement for there to be competition and for not one licensee or broadcaster to exclusively be able to monopolise one particular event. There is, therefore, no question, Mr Speaker, of forcible transmission of the GSD annual meeting, if there were one, or of the GSLP annual general meeting, of which there is one.

Mr Speaker, in respect of the deadlines provision which the hon. Gentleman identified in respect of clause 39, can I tell him actually that his reaction was my reaction but, having considered it carefully, actually it is very difficult to either put in a regime with shorter timetables, if you are going to allow people to make arguments properly, or to create narrow regime in legislation which is more advantageous than the reality of the libel regime.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said one would not want to revive something 42 days after it had been said – you somehow sometimes make it worse. Absolutely right, and what timetables do, Mr Speaker, or should do, is set out a maximum period of time within which to do things. In the context of libel proceedings, 42 days is actually quite a short period of time (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) because libel proceedings could take years. In the context, therefore, of this Act, Mr Speaker, that the right of reply, which is not just in terms of politics – it can be in many other terms, in terms of reputation etc – to be corralled into a period of 42 days actually, on reflection, is not bad. So, for that reason, Mr Speaker, we do not think that, if the hon. Gentleman gives thought to his criticism of clause 39, there is actually anything in it.

But, Mr Speaker, if I can just refer him to clauses 37 and 39 in this way (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) before I allow him to get up, against my better judgement, clause 37 of this Act, of this Bill, Mr Speaker, and clause 39 of this Bill, are identical to regulation 17.(2) and regulation 30 of the Audiovisual Media Services Regulations, which he made. So these deadlines, these concerns, about ‘makes available’... Mr Speaker, I am taking the language that his Government made and passed in the AVMS Regulations.

I give way, Mr Speaker.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if it is against his better judgement, I withdraw.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in relation to clause 47, what I will tell him is that we are very happy with the way that the provision as to consultation on the appointment of the Board of GBC is now drafted. We think it is a step forward, as I said before, but I will come to this point, Mr Speaker, which is why it should be the Chief Minister and not the Minister for Justice.

Mr Speaker, it should be the Chief Minister, who does not consider himself to be anything other than one among equals, not even first, because issues of public broadcasting have an importance which the hon. Gentleman has recognised in his intervention and, therefore, I think in the same way that it is right to have a Chairman of Gibtelecom who is not the Minister for Telecommunications – something that occurred during their time in office as a result of an issue involving the European Commission – we are now taking the step that the Chief Minister should be the person to appoint the Board of GBC, whether or not he is the Minister for Broadcasting.

In the present instance, the hon. Gentleman will know, all hon. Members will know, that I am both the Minister for Broadcasting and Chief Minister, but that will not always be the case and the appointment of the Board should be something that, in my view and in my Government’s view, comes through the Chief Minister.

Hon. P R Caruana: Not at the time that the Bill was published.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, not at the time that the Bill was published, but as the hon. Gentleman will know, that is exactly what I said during the course of the interview in GBC – or should know, if he is going to make a criticism. I said specifically about that part that I was not happy with it, but that I was publishing the Bill already whilst I took further counsel as to how best to deal with that section, and I am going to assume, Mr Speaker, that he follows avidly everything that I tell ‘Newswatch’.

Mr Speaker, similarly, clause 62 he said gives power only to the Authority to receive complaints of anything broadcast by GBC. Well, Mr Speaker, in the new paradigm that we are setting up... I know he is no longer interested because I am not taking his points and demonstrating that they are not valid, but he might at least do me the courtesy of listening; I listened to every word that he said.

Clause 62, Mr Speaker, of course makes the Authority the person, therefore, that receives those challenges, because it is the Authority that has the control of all the other licensees and it should also have that control in respect of the GBC, but that does not mean, Mr Speaker, that third parties cannot approach the Authority in respect of those issues for the Authority to take action and, where they do and the Authority does not, that they cannot judicially review the Authority for not having taken that action, if not to do so would be unreasonable.

Mr Speaker, clause 63, he is right, is an identical reproduction of the section that is there now, and it is there now, Mr Speaker, because GBC is a public broadcaster and will remain a public broadcaster, but the hon. Gentleman knows that there are ways round those time limits that might create a problem in certain instances, not least because he was the only party that would not agree to GBC including in a leaders' debate in 2007 the leader of the PDP, who enjoyed the support of my party and the Liberal Party, and of all of us contesting the election, except the hon. Gentleman, to appear in that leaders' debate. That matter was brought to the Supreme Court for a hearing very quickly under judicial review procedures. So, again, we are not concerned that in issues, in moments of urgency, there is not the business efficacy in the Act, as it was and as it is, for matters to be brought to the attention of the court timelessly. Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, in that instance the PDP did not succeed in appearing on the leaders' debate. The first time they did, he lost the election, so perhaps, if they had been there in 2007, a happier time would have been had.

Mr Speaker, clause 66.(1) is a serious issue and clause 41.(4)(c) is also a serious issue, so I ask the hon. Gentleman to listen carefully to this part of my reply and, as he did when I was looking for something on my phone, ask him to put down his phone, as he said to me, and listen, because this is about Gibraltar and our differences should not be relevant to it.

I heard everything that he said about clause 66 and everything, if not almost everything, is a matter of agreement across the floor of the House, not just between him and me but, I am sure, every Member, but the wording of 66.(1) is precise and there are no typographical errors in it, and it is there black upon white. He did an analysis, Mr Speaker, of the effect of one particular case on 'colonial legislatures', as some people like to call them, during the course of an intervention at the United Nations, I believe in 2007 or 2008, I forget whether it was at the Committee of 24 or in the Fourth Committee.

Hon. P R Caruana: It was in 2008 and in Fourth Committee.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed.

Mr Speaker, the analysis he makes and the concerns that he airs would have been absolutely right, were it not for the fact that, in 66.(1), it is the Governor who acts in a moment of internal security but it is the Government that takes the power as a result of that action. That, Mr Speaker, is in keeping with the analysis that he did in the United Nations and that, to a very great extent, he and I, and all the other lawyers in this Chamber, likely believe is the reality of the constitutional position very much in respect of all the issues that he alighted on today.

He said that if I had achieved what 66.(1) says then I had achieved something more than he had been able to achieve and I am grateful for him recognising that because this is specific, clear and there are no errors in this section of the draft, believe me – as he will know – because it has been pored over by all the people who would pore over it and who would insist on rectifying that typographical error, if it were a typographical error. So, on that, Mr Speaker I know that we are all united.

But I refer him, Mr Speaker, to the amended 41.(4)(c) because that is equally important. If hon. Members want to look at that section and read it in toto, it says this:

'subject to subsection (5), the Authority shall take a measure pursuant to subsection (2) where the following conditions are satisfied –' and the third one, Mr Speaker, which is the relevant one for national law, which is not Community law:

'where the reason for the intended adoption of a measure is the safeguarding of the internal security or defence of Gibraltar and is of such a nature as to fall within the Governor's constitutional responsibilities and the Governor has informed the Minister that the measure needs to be taken who so directs the Authority'.

Mr Speaker, that is exactly the issue that the hon. Gentleman was alluding to and it is in this context that the Minister, in those circumstances, alerts the Authority. The hon. Gentleman will know from his analysis, having hinted at it, the importance of the way that section is drafted because, in effect, Mr Speaker, 66.(1) and 41.(4)(c) now demonstrate that in a moment when internal security measures need to be taken, when the Governor triggers those parts of the Constitution, of course the Government is not out of the equation. The Government, as would be the Government in the United Kingdom, is the actor through which actions continue to have to occur because, constitutionally, that could always only have been the way it was intended.

There is an element here, Mr Speaker, of the prerogative being engaged: a more interesting discussion might be who can trigger that in the Governor? I hope he is listening, Mr Speaker, because this is fundamentally important. Is this that internal security matters or that trigger for the Governor to press can only be pressed when individuals with political responsibility outside of Gibraltar seek that the Governor engages it, or is it that even Ministers of the Crown in Gibraltar can seek that it be engaged because of information that they have. Mr Speaker, I believe that it can be both under our constitutional set up because we have no responsibility for defence and there may be a defence reason why internal security measures need to be taken. There could even be Foreign Affairs reasons why an internal security measure might be taken, but there are very many other reasons – those that are now at large – which could result in an internal security measure to be taken.

This is where his analysis, which was the academic analysis being made already in respect of Quark at the United Nations, is relevant because, in that instance, I believe that the trigger that the Governor presses to engage 66.(1) or 41.(4)(c) can be engaged on the advice of Ministers – the Governor here is the Crown, the Queen – either the two whose portfolios are not in this House – Defence and Foreign Relations – or any of the ones who are in this House. That is a more interesting debate and I believe, Mr Speaker, that there cannot be any other analysis on that. I am sure that he shares my view and I am grateful that, in analysing 66.(1)(c) and 41.(4)(c), as he has, he has recognised the huge step forward we have been able to take in this short time.

Now, Mr Speaker, on clause 67 which follows immediately thereafter, I have to tell him – and this comes back to the other points he has made about the right of statutory appeal – that, actually, this is also identical to the Communications Act that he made in 2006, in section 91 of the Communications Act – that are in identical terms, – 91.(7) and 91.(8) in particular, dealing with 67.(7) and 67.(8) that he particularly singled out. I do not believe that the analysis done by the draftsmen in 2006 was wrong. I know that he has a higher regard for his legal analysis than he has for mine but I read the Communications Act when I was sitting where he is sitting and I did not think that these points were merited. When he was sitting where I am sitting he did not think these points were merited when he presented the Communications Act to the House, so I believe that he was right then and I believe that I am right now. I believe that we voted in favour of the Communications Act in 2006, so I do not believe that the mischief he says could be there actually arises under the section at all.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said ‘What happens in respect of party political broadcasts and the Governor’s Directions? The Governor’s Directions are there now: how can we ensure that the new regulations are going to be there in the future?’ Well, actually, the position is much more advanced than it was. The Authority – the regulator here because it is the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority – is not just going to make these Governor’s Directions his own in his own way, he has actually got an obligation to do so and I think the hon. Gentleman has missed it. It is in clause 22 that the Codes of Practice have to be created and those are the Codes of Practice – they will no longer be known as Directions – that will govern all matters relating to party political broadcasts etc.

Mr Speaker, I assume that what should, additionally, happen, is that we will adopt Governor’s Directions as the Directions of the Authority so that there isn’t a moment in time where we are left with nothing. But I also would have thought that, as the process of modernisation proceeds, the Authority will seek to speak to all those who should be consulted, not least the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, as much as the Chief Minister and other parties who he might consider it is appropriate to consult.

But may I refer the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, in particular to clause 23, because clause 23 reads

‘Schedule 3 shall apply in respect of radio and television broadcasts and any codes of practice issued under that schedule shall be deemed to have been issued under section 22 of this Act.’

That is in respect of political broadcasting so I do not think that this is a ‘goodwill’ – that the code will be required – my reading of the Act, and I believe the Authority’s reading of the Act, is that there is a moment, when this Act becomes law, where the Governor’s Directions become, in effect, adopted as codes of practice of the Authority and then there is consultation afterwards, if necessary.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, just two small points.

On the codes of practice point again, he has missed the point – I was not saying that there isn’t power for the Authority to make a code of practice requiring party political broadcasts. Obviously, it is there: I pointed it out to him myself. The point is that he is not obliged to do so.

Nothing in this Bill obliges the Authority to have party political broadcasts, still less the terms on which to have them. Therefore, we shall have party political broadcasts if the Authority decides that we should have them and on the terms that the Authority decides that we should have them. My point is that that should not be so. We think party political broadcasts are such an important part of the landscape that he should be obliged to issue guidelines and have party political broadcasts. To point to a section which gives him the power to do so, if he wants to, hardly addresses the point that I made.

On the slightly different point about the reasons why he might not have challenged and queried subsection (7) and (8) of 67 of the Communications Act: there may be many, amongst them may be the fact that, of course, that Act was drafted by the firm of which he was then a partner and he would have to criticise his own work.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is that sort of final snide remark that sometimes brings us to explosions of the sort that we then regret later during the course of the debate, so I shall do, Mr Speaker, what I should have done with the hon. Gentleman many years ago when he started making that sort of snide remark, ignore it and start dealing with the substance of what he says.

Hon. P R Caruana: He is right that he should do that, but he is wrong in the reasons why he has decided he should do that.

Mr Speaker, I have sat here, having given what I thought was a very helpful analysis. Indeed, he recognised that it was a very helpful analysis and I have sat doing exactly what he has now decided he is going to do himself, namely ignore the snide remarks. I have sat here, listening to him punctuate almost every answer that he has given with snide remarks about whether he ever had an AGM and about this and about that. I have not leapt to my feet on the first occasion in which I do what he has done on a dozen occasions today. He takes offence. Methinks the hon. Member takes offence just too easily!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker look, it is just unnecessary to say your partner drafted this and therefore you would not have got up to challenge, which is to impute to me what I can only assume is an improper motive. Because if I had felt as strongly about sections of the Communications Act as the hon. Gentleman does, I would have been doing the people of Gibraltar a huge disservice if not of fraud, for not getting up and making those statements simply because Tony Provasoli might have happened to have drafted the Bill.

That would never have been the case, Mr Speaker, and that is why that sort of snide remark is outside what should be dealt with in this Parliament. If the hon. Gentleman wants to equate that with saying to him 'We have made exactly the same section that you made, so there can't be a concern of yours because you moved the Bill and did not have the concerns'.... or is it that the hon. Gentleman is saying that when he read the Bills before he moved them, he did not apply the level of scrutiny that he applies to them now? Mr Speaker, I am just going to pass from that sort of snide remark, which is totally unnecessary and really serves only to bring this place into disrepute.

Mr Speaker, I also questioned whether restricting religious entities from owning channels was necessary, if only because there seems to be a business in that and it may be wise to have that door open. The reason why we have not done so at the moment is because we are modelling ourselves on the United Kingdom precedent, not the European one. The European one does not require that that door be closed but let us, if the hon. Gentleman would excuse the expression, 'let's suck it and see' if anybody does come with such an application and then, if necessary, consider it. I do not actually think they would come because there are a limited number of transponders available, as he will know, and we already know the sorts of individuals and entities that are being attracted and are more likely to be of the rolling news character than they are of the ... but it is a potential business, actually, for Gibraltar.

If the United Kingdom does not want to have such channels, I have absolutely no objection to them if they are not problematic in their own way – but they would require regulation. (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) The hon. Gentleman will know that there are, for example, if I may call them 'televangelists' in the United States which we might not want transmitting from Gibraltar to the rest of Europe for reasons which are ventilated in the more salubrious parts of the press.

But there are perfectly proper channels which transmit the beliefs of people to those believers and there would be no reason for excluding them from Gibraltar, in our view, if those, potentially, came in the future but, at the moment, we have adopted the model of the UK.

I will allow him to say a few words...

Hon. P R Caruana Yes, Mr Speaker, I am not inviting him, I just wanted to know... The point is this, that I do not know how the UK is affected in this respect by the fact that they now have the Human Rights Act but, of course, we have always been in a slightly different position of having a constitutional right to certain freedoms which include religious worship and things and I think it is only a matter of time before somebody challenges this prohibition as being a violation of the constitutional right not to be discriminated and not to have the rights of worship and religious expression curtailed.

I am not suggesting to the hon. Member that he should now change it. We would not have written this provision into the Bill, had we been on the other side of the House. The fact that it is in the United Kingdom legislation would have been neither here nor there to us.

There are channels that people watch in Gibraltar on satellite in this respect. They are not all televangelists: some of them are just religious programming without being somebody on a stage, sort of preaching. There is one called EWTN, there is another one called The God Channel, there is a Muslim version... I don't know if there is a Hindu version – if there is, I have not seen it. These things now proliferate and the idea that it should not be possible in Gibraltar to obtain... that if there is such a channel... I do not think it is true that such a channel could not exist... it is that it could not be owned by... religious bodies would be disqualified from owning it. I suppose they would have to hide behind some believer, but not being the religious body itself. It just seems, in this day and age, an unnecessarily restrictive provision.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on that we can both agree, to keep that under review.

But paragraph 3 of that schedule – Schedule 2 – I do not agree can create the sort of problem that the hon. Gentleman alludes to with us, or any Government, funding 49.9% of a broadcaster where, by not going over the 50% of funding, we would somehow be able to avoid the licensing regime in an unaccountable way.

It is true that you could avoid the licensing regime by funding 40% of a broadcaster and not more than 50%, but you could not do it in an unaccountable way because the accounts of Gibraltar Plc are such that it would not be possible to hide that contribution. Indeed, when that happened in respect of the media it was not possible to hide it. The hon. Gentleman and I have had this debate on a number of occasions. He funded the Seven Days newspaper to the tune of £150,000 and he was properly accountable in this House for spending the money on it and, therefore, also more publicly to the electorate because the Opposition scrutiny on that subject was put to the electorate. So if somebody were – and, of course, he was saying he recognises it was not the intention it should be – in the future, in Government, to want to contribute just shy of 50% of the funding of a channel in order to somehow get it to do its bidding, I assume, but avoid the licensing aspects which affect public sector broadcasters, where there is an express carve-out only for GBC, well, Mr Speaker, they would be otherwise accountable. That is not something that I think is ever likely to happen.

Mr Speaker, paragraph 6 is also much like the issues relating to religious broadcasters, something that we have considered in the context of it being an identical provision to the UK. It is, actually, not less sophisticated or more sophisticated than the United Kingdom and I take the hon. Gentleman's point that there is nothing to stop broadcasters from becoming newspaper publishers whilst there is something that creates a hurdle, not to stop, but to create a hurdle, for discretion to be exercised when newspaper publishers wish to become public broadcasters. I think that is simply an historical issue. I think the Newspapers Act sets out the regulation of newspapers in a way that is relevant to the time when it was done and this modern media legislation sets out the position in respect of modern media, modern broadcasting media, in this way. It does not cause us a concern and I have specifically, in my speech, alerted the hon. Members to the fact that we would not think it is contrary to the public interest in Gibraltar for a newspaper proprietor to become a licensed broadcaster unless there were specific public interest reasons to kick in.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member could give way, hopefully, for the last time because we're coming to the end. I am grateful to him.

I don't know whether the hon. Member just misses my point or whether he is determined to push this Bill through the House without acknowledging the merits of any of my points. The point that I have made here could not be more simple, could not be more uncontroversial, could not be more helpful and could not be more obvious, which is that, we in this House are – and I am not questioning it – passing a piece of legislation that says if you own a newspaper you are going to have all these difficulties getting a licence for broadcasting, so all people have to do it is in a different order. I will get the broadcasting licence first, then I will go for the newspaper and then there is nothing in the Bill to prevent it.

Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member is not willing to acknowledge even that obvious point, then he must be in the mood of being determined to concede nothing because it is not as if I am criticising. I am trying to make his own statutory measure effective and, even though it is as plain as daylight that it cannot be the intention of this Bill to affect the result depending upon the order in which you do two steps... If you do it in order one, you can have both the newspaper and keep your broadcasting licence but, if you buy your newspaper first, then you have much greater difficulty getting a broadcasting licence. If you do it the other way round, there is no power to revoke your licence, your broadcasting – it cannot be the intention of this Bill to bring that situation about.

I point that out to the hon. Member and, instead of just taking the point on board, he finds a couple of passing remarks to say that he does not agree. This is not something to agree on or not agree on, it is plain fact. It is not a judgement that I am making. I am not expressing an opinion upon which he might legitimately have a different one. It is incontrovertibly so. All I am saying is, does he want to take the opportunity to close the plainly unintended – I can only assume plainly unintended – sort of gap, loophole, to avoid the consequence – which is purely what the Act wants to avoid – of, I suppose, dominant media and dominant press all coming together to create whatever they call it, multi media monopoly, or whatever the phrase is? Even on this, the hon. Member says that he does not think the consequence that I have said could arise. Well, how could it not arise? It will necessarily arise.

Mr Speaker, it will necessarily arise. If GBC tomorrow acquires a newspaper, there is no power in this Act for the Authority to revoke the licence that it would not have given to GBC had it had the newspaper when it applied for a licence. If the hon. Members are content for that to be the law of Gibraltar, given that they have a parliamentary majority, then that will be the law of Gibraltar but I can't imagine that it is what they really intend.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I don't know whether the hon. Gentleman goes back to read Hansard but, if he does, he should look at what I said in my original speech and the first reply that I have given to the point he made before, because I have not said that what he suggested cannot happen. I have accepted that it can and I have explained to him why I think that is the case, in respect of the regulation of newspapers having happened, historically, first, and the regulation on broadcasting having happened, historically, second.

I have also told him that I do not share his concern because all that is happening here, Mr Speaker, is that, whilst a broadcaster can tomorrow acquire a newspaper, or commence publication of a newspaper, by simply paying £5, signing an affidavit and sending it to No. 6 Convent Place under the Newspapers Act, a newspaper proprietor has to go through a hurdle. As I have said during the course of my initial speech, and I have replied, that hurdle should only be there where there are specific instances of the public interest, engaging for a particular purpose. Therefore, we think this is not an issue where we need to depart from what has been a tested transposition of those directed requirements in the United Kingdom. We are therefore going to go with this draft, but I have not ignored anything the hon. Gentleman has said, for the reasons he suggests or otherwise. I have dealt with them.

I will assume he is just not happy with the way I have dealt with them and that is why he has had to say that I have either misunderstood, because I couldn't understand or because I wanted to misunderstand. So Mr Speaker look that is the position, we on this side of the House are perfectly happy with the way this is drafted, we are not being "bloody minded" in inverted commas in not accepting an amendment, it is that we – namely not us who have been sitting here through the debate, but me and the draftsman and the Cabinet when we considered it as it was, considered that it was appropriate to proceed in this way. (Laughter and interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) I know that the concept of Cabinet responsibilities is so alien that it even brings smiles to the hon. Gentleman's face, but anyway...

Finally, Mr Speaker, in respect of paragraph 2.(1) and (3) of the third schedule, I understand what he is getting at in respect of balance there but, again, already issues of balance are taken as a whole. He will know that, in the law of libel, an article has to be read as a whole not seen just in respect of a headline and, in the law of broadcasting, Mr Speaker, one cannot look at one part of a broadcast, or a broadcast on its own, one has to look at a whole series of broadcasts.

If I can just give him an example so that he might understand that I have understood his position, even if I don't share it, despite the continual disparaging remarks that he is making to those that lap them up to his right. The fact is, Mr Speaker, that during the course of an election campaign, for example, there are not just debate programmes, there are not just party political broadcasts, there are also, for example, phone-ins. He will recall that, during the last general election campaign, there were phone-ins and, in the phone-in, there are only members of one political party present, with a presenter from the relevant broadcaster. During the course of a – let us avoid GSD or GSLP Liberals – PDP phone-in, for example, a broadcaster may present a question, or may present the programme, in a way that might by the other parties be considered to be partial to the people who are in the studio: 'Here I am joined by the members of the PDP, who are asking members of the public to entrust them with their vote for this their manifesto, containing a new park etc etc.' On its own, that would be political bias during the course of a general election campaign but, with three political parties, or three political forces, contesting a general election and three similar programmes with three presenters, either the same one or a different one, presenting such a programme, making similar remarks at the beginning of the programme for each of the political parties contesting the election then, on balance, during the course of the campaign there would be no issue of bias. That, Mr Speaker, is one of the sorts of things that would be covered by this Directive, by these paragraphs.

Again, these paragraphs are –

Hon. P R Caruana: Is he speaking to Schedule 3?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

These paragraphs are taken from the Broadcasting Act in the United Kingdom so, Mr Speaker, we are confident that there are, there should be, no concerns in respect of the operation of those paragraphs and 1755 that there will always be free and fair elections in Gibraltar, with broadcasters respecting the rules of ballots.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for him giving way.

1760 Mr Speaker: Order – is the Chief Minister giving way?

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, it is clear that he is giving way, he is sitting down.
I do not want to further controversialise [inaudible]

1765 Mr Speaker: No, I thought he had finished.

Hon. P R Caruana: He is not sitting down to rest.

1770 Mr Speaker, here is an example of what I mean by his failure to deal with my comments adequately. Everything that he has just said is prefixed by the fact that ‘I don’t share his opinion’. I have not expressed an opinion and this is not about ‘balance’ and ‘elections’, it is about a flagrant contradiction in the language of two different bits of law within two inches of each other and within three lines of each other. It is not about opinion, it is about wanting to know which of the two is the law.

Paragraph 2.(1) says:

1775 ‘The code of practice shall require that television and radio services shall exclude all expressions of the views or opinions of the person providing the services...’

In other words, on no occasion may any service provider on any programme express his own opinion.

1780 Paragraph 2(3) a couple of inches further away says the requirement of everything that I have just read

‘...may be satisfied by being satisfied in relation to a series of programmes taken as a whole.’

1785 A series of programmes taken as a whole. If that means, as it can only mean, that there can be an expression of opinion by the service provided in some programmes, so long as he balances it with a contrary expression of opinion in another programme, it is a breach of (1) that says that it cannot happen on any occasion. All I am asking is, which of the two is it? It is not a matter of opinion to be agreed with or disagreed with.

1790 Hon. Chief Minister: It is an opinion with which we disagree, Mr Speaker.

For the reasons I have already explained and I think are clear from the text and the purpose of the text.

1795 So, in the context of broadcasting in Gibraltar, we are convinced that this Bill, despite the issues raised by the hon. Gentleman and with the explanations that I have provided, will improve and modernise the provision of broadcasting from Gibraltar to a very considerable extent, bringing broadcasting and the regulation of it into the 21st century, and finally delivering a digital transmission network properly regulated and exploited for the benefit of our people: something, Mr Speaker, which I will now have no hesitation in saying, given the tenor of the hon. Gentleman’s interventions, as I said during the course of the Budget debate, had been much talked about by hon. Members when they were on this side of the House and yet they have done absolutely nothing and made not a penny of investment, when we were first elected last year. Something, nonetheless that our investment in broadcasting will deliver in time for the analogue shut off on 31st December this year, when we turn on on 1st January to digital broadcasting inter alia, hopefully, including the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation.

1800 For all of those reasons, Mr Speaker, for the reasons I gave in my opening address in the Bill, for all the reasons I have dealt with in respect of the interventions made by the hon. Gentleman, I continue to commend the Bill to the House. (Applause)

1810 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to make provision for the Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation and to transpose into the law of Gibraltar Council Directive 2010/13/EU of 10th March 2010 of the European Parliament and of the Council on the co-ordination of certain provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in member states, concerning the provision of audiovisual media services supplementing Directive 2007/65/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 11th December 2007, and for connected purposes, be read a second time.

1815 Hon. P R Caruana: By Government majority.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if it is convenient for the hon. Gentleman to make a point, I am quite happy to call for a division, if he likes.

1820 Mr Speaker: Is a poll sought?

Hon. P R Caruana: [Inaudible].

1825 Mr Speaker: Yes. The Clerk will call out the names of hon. Members in alphabetical order and Members are invited to respond 'aye' or 'nay'.

Mr Speaker: The Question that I put was, 'Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today?'

1865 Hon. P R Caruana: And all hon. Members agreed?

Mr Speaker: Yes, and all I heard was 'yes'. I did not hear a single 'no'.

Hon. D A Feetham: You did not hear any 'yesses' from this side.

1870 Mr Speaker: I heard only 'yesses' and I did not hear a 'no', therefore I took it that all Members do agree. There is no other interpretation for that, really.

1875 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you are quite right to say that, because this has been the position in the House for some time, both with them there and us there, or some people answer a 'yea' or do not utter a 'yea' at this time, and if there is not a 'no' heard, the matter goes ahead.

Mr Speaker: I can only go by what I hear. If I hear a 'yes' and I do not hear a 'no', I cannot possibly pluck a 'no' out of the air.

1880 Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member [inaudible] slightest provocation [inaudible] (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, order. (Interjections) I think we have got enough sound effects outside these Chambers. (Laughter)

The Births and Deaths Registration (Amendment) Bill 2012
First Reading approved

1890 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Births and Deaths Registration Act and related legislation be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the Question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Births and Deaths Registration Act and related legislation be read a first time.

Clerk: The Births and Deaths Registration (Amendment) Act 2012.

1900

The Births and Deaths Registration (Amendment) Bill 2012
Second Reading approved

1905 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

The purpose of the amendments contained in this Bill are to harmonise the position between the present legislation that governs the registration of stillbirths, as found under the Births and Deaths Registration Act, and the legislation defining a stillbirth for the purpose of employment rights under the Employment, Maternity and Parental Leave and Health and Safety Regulations 1996.

1910 The current position is that there is a discrepancy in the legal definition of stillbirths under the aforementioned legislation. Under the Births and Deaths Registration Act, a stillbirth can only be registered if it occurred after 28 weeks of pregnancy whereas, under the Employment, Maternity and Parental Leave and Health and Safety Regulations, a woman is deemed to have given birth if she is delivered of a still-born child after 24 weeks of pregnancy.

1915 This creates a conflicting situation and can cause distress. A woman may be deemed to have given birth under one piece of legislation, but is then prevented from registering the stillbirth under the other. This Bill remedies this by harmonising the definition of stillbirth to refer to 24 weeks of pregnancy throughout the different laws.

1920 This Bill also amends supplemental provisions as to maternity grants contained in the Social Security (Insurance) Act at clause 3 by substituting 28 weeks of pregnancy to 24, thus bringing it on par with the Employment, Maternity and Parental Leave and Health and Safety Regulations and the proposed amended Births and Deaths Registration Act.

1925 This Bill also contains certain transitional provisions, as set out in clause 4.(1), to allow for the voluntary registration of stillbirths which occurred during the time when the discrepancy was in effect and which fell within that window, i.e. stillbirths which occurred between the 24 and 28 weeks of pregnancy and between 1st January 1996 and the coming into force of the provisions of this Bill. The reason for making this legislation apply retrospectively in this way to 1996 is because this is when the age of viability in Gibraltar was initially changed from 28 to 24 weeks.

1930 It is important to stress that registration of stillbirths that fall within this retrospective window is voluntary and that this Bill imposes no obligation whatsoever to register, in order to avoid further upset to those for whom, 16 years down the line, the process of registering the birth of their still-born child and the emotions that go hand in hand with that, may be more harmful than helpful.

1935 This is of utmost importance and is made clear in clauses 4.(2) and 4.(6). If a person being the person who would otherwise have been required otherwise by the Births and Deaths Registration Act to give information concerning the birth wishes to register the birth of a still-born child in the supplementary register, he or she may apply to the Registrar, providing such information as set out in clauses 4.(4)(a) and (b), provided he does so within 12 months after the coming into force of this Bill, failing which written authority of the Minister responsible for personal status will be required. The remainder of the Bill deals with the form of the register etc.

1940 Mr Speaker, hon. Members will note that the lead in respect of this matter has been taken by the Hon. Dr John Cortes. It was he, as Minister for Health, who received representations from representatives of those affected. Constitutional responsibility, nonetheless, rests with me, as Minister with responsibility for personal status, and I therefore move the Reading of the Bill today.

I commend the Bill to the House.

1945

Mr Speaker: Before I put the Question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Criminal Justice (Amendment) Bill 2012
Second Reading approved

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

1995

Mr Speaker, this Bill introduces several amendments to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 by clause 2 of the Bill and to the Crimes Act by clause 3 of the Bill.

As all hon. Members know, these two Acts were debated in Parliament at the end of July 2011. They were published, after receiving Assent, in the Gazette of 18th August 2011, but have not yet been brought into effect, except for a number of provisions which I will refer to in a moment.

2000

During the course of the Second Reading of these two Acts, I indicated, on behalf of the Opposition at the time, that we welcomed the provisions to a very large extent. However, we were not able to fully support the Bills as a result of the provisions in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act in particular. I am talking of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act at the moment. We were not able to fully support that and vote in favour because of the sections which related to inferences from silence – essentially, what we regarded as the removal of the right to silence, the removal, or the abolishing, of a fundamental right.

In the circumstances, we abstained from the Second Reading in relation to the Bill.

We have done much work since we came into office, liaising with the relevant authorities and making sure that everybody was ready. It would have been our desire to have this not just on the statute books as it is, but commenced earlier, and we have had several discussions across the floor of this House since January of this year. It is now the position that we are ready to commence the two Acts in particular, and it is our intention – again, a slight qualification which I will mention later on – to have the two Acts, subject to the amendments – assuming that these are passed today – commence on 4th October 2012, which is next Thursday, on the publication of a notice in the Gazette. That, again, depends on the passing of the legislation today and the Assent being received and the necessary formalities being done during the early part of next week.

There are some provisions, Mr Speaker, in relation to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, which have already commenced. By notice of commencement, which was published on 16th February 2012, we commenced, in particular, as from 8th March 2012, part 25 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, which deals with rehabilitation of offenders. We also had to commence, in order to make that possible – the effective commencement of part 25 – we commenced section 2.(1) of this Act which relates to definitions, section 698 and schedules 11 and 12. So all of those came into operation on 8th March 2012. It now remains for the rest of the Act to come into play.

It is not my intention, in moving the Second Reading of this particular Bill, to repeat all the arguments on our side that we put forward at the time of the Second Reading of the Bill in July of last year. Hon. Members will recall that the debates largely centred on what I have mentioned already relating to the right to silence and the inferences which could be drawn under these provisions from silence. Members will recall that, during the course of my intervention, I described this right as a fundamental right. I pointed out, in particular, that there was a Royal Commission in the United Kingdom in 1991, which reported to Parliament in 1993, which recommended against any changes which meant the removal of the right to silence or drawing inferences from silence. Notwithstanding those recommendations of the Commission, Parliament in England decided in 1994 to introduce amendments.

It is also useful to recall why those provisions in England were introduced, whereby inferences could be drawn from silence. They originated in Northern Ireland, where it was enacted in the first instance, and that arose simply in the fight against terrorism, where it was felt that inferences from silence should be drawn, specifically because of the need to combat terrorism and deal with terrorists. In England and Wales, again, part of the justification when this was introduced in the 1990s was to deal with terrorists and hardened criminals, criminals who used the system repeatedly and who were able to abuse the right to silence in order to obtain some advantage.

The history of the right to silence goes back a number of centuries, Mr Speaker. It can originally be traced back to the 17th century with the Star Chamber, when suspects were obliged to answer questions and they were locked up until they decided that they wanted to answer those questions. That then moved totally the other way in the history of the 19th century, when defendants were actually forbidden from giving evidence in their own defence. There was a famous pronouncement by a famous US jurist, John Henry Wigmore, when this principle emerged that ‘no man is bound to incriminate himself on any charge, no matter how properly installed in any court, and that led eventually to what came to be known as the right to silence and it was enshrined in the judges’ rules in 1912, exactly 100 years ago.

As far as the Government is concerned, and in line with the position that we took on the debate in the Second Reading of the Bill, as it was then, which is now the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, this is a fundamental right which ought to be preserved for Gibraltar. That is precisely what clause 2.(8) of the Bill does, and that is the fundamental provision, as far as this is concerned. Clause 2.(8) deletes sections 359 to 364. These are the sections which relate to inferences from silence, and therefore, by deleting these sections, it is clear that the right to silence is preserved and no inferences can be drawn from silence.

But that is not the end of the matter, Mr Speaker, because consequential on the deletion of the possibility of drawing inferences from silence, it necessarily follows that if someone has a right to be silent on arrest, at the police station, at trial, and no inferences can be drawn, and then has a right not to incriminate himself in any way and has a right not to give evidence and to put the prosecution to proof of its case – in other words, not to say anything at all throughout the whole trial process – in order for that right to be preserved, we also have to make a number of further amendments to the Act, and in particular those provisions of the Act which relate to disclosure of material. There are provisions introduced in part 12 of the Act which relate to disclosure of material both by a defendant and the prosecuting authority and, in particular, there is a provision which would require the compulsory disclosure by the defendant by producing a defence statement, and a defence statement would be required to set out a number of matters which are set out in the Act, including setting out the defence and setting out the defendant’s... or the facts and points of law which the defendant takes issue with. We consider that leaving those provisions – a compulsory provision for the disclosure of the defence case – to be incompatible with the removal of the inferences from silence. So, if someone is entitled to be silent, then that person should not be obliged, or cannot be obliged, to make disclosure of a defence statement.

We are preserving, nevertheless, in the Act, the provisions which relate to voluntary disclosure or defence statement, because we consider that that is right. At the moment, anybody has a right... It is not a statutory right, but there is nothing that prevents a defendant from showing his cards either at interview or during the course of proceedings in court, or simply by writing to the court and the prosecutor in advance of a trial and saying, 'This is my defence, please take it into account.' Sometimes that is done in an attempt to convince the prosecutor that the case does not stand up to scrutiny and should be withdrawn, but there is nothing preventing, at the moment, a defendant from sending a letter and setting out his defence in advance, if that defendant chooses to do so. What the statutory scheme does is create a mechanism whereby voluntary disclosure can be made of a defence statement which sets out certain matters, and if a defendant wants to avail himself of those provisions and make that voluntary disclosure, then there is no reason why that person should not be entitled to do so.

One of the consequences of removing the compulsory right and leaving the voluntary disclosure is that the defendant may not make voluntary disclosure – in other words, there may be no disclosure at all – and one of the items which is set out in the contents of this defence statement of the Act is the requirement to give particulars in relation to alibis which may be relied on. That is currently part of the common law. At the moment, there is a requirement for a defendant who wishes to rely on an alibi to give an alibi notice setting out certain matters that he intends to rely on, and because there is a possibility, without the compulsory disclosure and without the voluntary disclosure, that there will be no disclosure under the statutory scheme in relation to alibi, then what we do under the Bill which is before the... Act today, by clause 2.(7) is reintroduce the requirements of a notice of alibi if the defendant is going to rely on an alibi. Therefore we felt that that was consequential to the amendments and it was a necessary provision that we should have.

That, in a nutshell, Mr Speaker, is what clauses 2.(6), (7) and (8) of the Bill before Parliament today do.

There are a number of other minor amendments of an insignificant nature in relation to typographical errors, and a number of changes of numbering which we have realised.

We have also added, through clause 2.(2), a number of new definitions. These are simply additional definitions that are included for clarity and for certainty.

The other amendment we are proposing to make in relation to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, Mr Speaker, is in clause 2.(10) and 2.(11) of the Bill. These matters relate to child witnesses, where those child witnesses are, as set out in the Act, the current provisions, in need of special protection. We found that there was no mention in the Act as to when the circumstances arise as to when a child is in need of special protection, and all we have done is clarify the circumstances as to when that child should be considered in need of special protection. That would arise in proceedings which relate to a sexual offence or an offence of violence, and what we have done by adopting that wording is simply reflect the provisions that currently exist under the Crimes (Vulnerable Witnesses) Act 2009, so I would hope that those are not controversial.

Mr Speaker, if I could turn to clause 3, which relates to amendments to the Crimes Act, part 7 of the Crimes Act, Mr Speaker, deals with hate crimes. In particular, it relates to religious and racial hatred. We have a manifesto commitment to legislate in respect of all areas of hate crimes, and therefore we will expand – not in this Bill, but in due course – on the provisions of part 7 so as to include hate crimes in respect of other matters, such as homophobia and disability. We are currently working on amendments to the Crimes Act, but what I wanted to do today, given that we are introducing a Bill to amend the Crimes Act, is simply put the House on notice that we are working on further amendments to part 7 and we will introduce those amendments, hopefully, very soon.

For the purposes of today, and in relation to part 12, which are the current provisions in relation to the Crimes Act, we are proposing an amendment to section 113 of the Crimes Act, and that is by clause 3.(2).

Section 113 of the Crimes Act, Mr Speaker, deals with racially aggravated offences and there is a reference... It creates an offence in its own right, a racially aggravated offence, but in respect of other offences, and the other offences, by 113.(1)(a) relates to an offence under section 166, which is wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, or 167, which is malicious wounding. There is a separate offence... Where somebody commits the offence of wounding with intent to commit grievous bodily harm they commit an offence under section 166. There is a separate offence under section 113 where, in addition to the ingredients of that offence, there is racial aggravation, a separate offence. So it is not just that the aggravation is taken into account for the purposes of sentencing; it is a new, probably considered more serious, offence, because it has an aggravating feature.

What we discovered is, quite simply, an anomaly, which we are seeking to correct in this Act because, under section 166, which is wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, the maximum penalty is life imprisonment whereas, under section 113, which is the racially aggravated wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm, the maximum penalty is seven years, and we therefore felt that it was anomalous, and probably simply an error, that an aggravated offence should have a much lesser sentence than the original offence of wounding with intent to cause grievous bodily harm. Therefore, we are simply seeking to correct that by increasing the maximum penalty for the aggravated offence to the same level as it is for the original offence, which is life imprisonment.

We are also seeking to correct what we consider, again, an error by clause 3.(4) of the Bill where, in section 176.(a) of the Crimes Act we are substituting a sentence of 12 months for what is now considered to be a sentence of six months. Section 176, Mr Speaker, relates to assault occasioning actual bodily harm. We have a further section in the Crimes Act, section 175, which is common assault, and common assault, on summary conviction, has a sentence of nine months, whereas assault occasioning actual bodily harm, which is a more serious offence, we currently have, on summary conviction, a maximum penalty of six months. We consider that section 176 creates a more serious offence than section 175 and if, in 175, for common assault we have a maximum sentence of nine months on summary conviction, then the appropriate level of sentencing for assault occasioning actual bodily harm should be 12 months rather than six months. Again, we regarded this as simply an error which we are correcting.

Mr Speaker, clause 3.(5) of the Bill is an important amendment. It is a substantive amendment. Sections 306 to 316 of the Crimes Act introduce provisions for the first time in Gibraltar requiring notifications for the purposes of being entered into a sex offenders' registry. By section 308.(1), the provisions relating to notification and the requirement to be entered into the sexual offenders' registry have retrospective effect. We had some concerns as to the practical effect of the operation of this and we have consulted, particularly with the Royal Gibraltar Police, on this matter, and the concerns are that there may be persons in Gibraltar who committed an offence, maybe years ago, who are not required, because there was no legislation at the time, to go on a sex offenders' registry. Those persons may well have rebuilt their lives. Those persons may well have children or young families, and for now – next Thursday or next Friday – to have a police officer knock on their door, remind them of that and cause them to enter, go on the sex offenders' registry we felt could have a devastating effect, not so much for the person who committed the offence but for the family and perhaps young children and other children who, for all we know, may even be unaware of what had happened. We consider that the sex offenders' registry is a good thing – not just a good thing, it is a necessary provision that we need to have in Gibraltar – but it is also necessary, in our view, to draw a line and choose a date from which notification for the purposes of entry into the registry should apply, and we considered that that date should be the date of commencement of the Act.

There is an exception which we are introducing to that because there may be persons who are currently serving a sentence of imprisonment in respect of a relevant offence, for the purpose of notification and entry into the sex offenders' registry, and that conviction would have happened already before the commencement of the Act. Therefore, we are introducing amendments to make it clear that the notification requirements arise from the matters listed in the Act – and they have caution or conviction etc, but also on the date of release from prison on the service of a prison sentence. There are, as hon. Members will see, also in relation to the Crimes Act, a couple of other draftings for tidying-up provisions which are actually included.

Mr Speaker, by letter to you of 21st September, which I asked should be circulated to all the Members of the House, I gave notice that I will be moving a number of amendments to the Crimes Act at Committee Stage, and it is probably right at this stage, in looking at the general principles of the Bill, that I explain why it is that we are introducing these amendments.

These amendments create new offences. They are offences relating to pornographic performances involving children. The amendments arise as a result of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children Against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, which we are currently considering and are in discussions for the purpose of having this extended to Gibraltar. All of the provisions of the Convention are already covered in our Crimes Act, except one specific provision in article 21. Article 21 of the Convention deals with offences concerning the participation of a child in pornographic performances and requires legislative measures to be taken for conduct to be criminalised which relates to recruiting a child into participation in pornographic performances or causing a child to participate in such performances, coercing a child into such performance or profiting or otherwise exploiting a child, and also knowingly attending a pornographic performance involving the participation of children.

Mr Speaker, we considered whether the existing provisions in our legislation and in the Crimes Act would be sufficient to encapsulate and cover the crimes which are envisaged and the offences which are envisaged by article 21 of the Convention. In particular, we considered three offences which might actually cover those provisions, and those offences would be causing a person to engage in sexual activity without consent, causing or inciting a child to engage in sexual activity – there is a provision about the ages and, thirdly, pay for sexual services of a child. So it is possible that what we are trying to introduce by these offences is already covered through other offences, but they do not relate specifically to engaging in pornographic performance, and we felt that a crime such as this, an offence such as this, would be so heinous as to justify a requirement to have self-standing offences which we believe strengthen the statutory and criminal provisions in the criminal... the Crimes Act in particular.

2190 Therefore, we are introducing a number of offences which involve intentionally causing, encouraging or assisting a child to participate in a pornographic performance, using threats or coercion and doing that for payment or the expectation of payment, which takes care of the profiting side, which is mentioned in the Convention, and also knowingly attending a pornographic performance. Again, we consider that these 2195 offences are so heinous that they justify a very serious punishment, and a maximum offence which we are setting out in the amendment that I am proposing is of 14 years. Mr Speaker, as I mentioned earlier, it is our intention, subject to everything being in place, to commence this by notice, these provisions, again subject to the amendments... to commence these by notice, which we intend to publish on 4th October.

But I should mention one other provision in relation to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, Mr 2200 Speaker, and that is section 85.

Section 85, Mr Speaker, deals with the right for a person arrested and held in custody in a police station, if he so requests, to consult a legal representative privately at any time; in other words, a statutory right to consult a lawyer. That provision was absolutely necessary and essential in the context of inferences from silences being drawn. It was absolutely necessary, because otherwise the statutory 2205 scheme simply would not work. There is case law and there had been provisions that would suggest that you cannot draw inferences from silence unless somebody has a right to consult a lawyer. So that is the rationale for including that in the first place in the Act.

We are removing the provisions relating to inferences from silence, so there is no absolute necessity, for the statutory scheme to work, for this provision to be there, but we actually believe that it is a good thing. It is good for a statutory right to be given for persons held in custody to have access to legal advice, 2210 to have the right to have access. It is not very different to what happens at the moment, where persons who are detained are informed that they are entitled to call a lawyer if they so choose, but this introduces a statutory right and a statutory right, once introduced, requires the provision of resources in order to make that right effective because, if what you would be saying to persons arrested is 'You have a right, if you can afford it', then it undermines the right or if you have a right, unless you make provision available 2215 for that right to be effective in practice then section 85 could turn out to be ineffective.

Therefore, what this requires is the putting in place of a duty solicitor scheme. We wanted to put in a duty solicitor scheme in any event, regardless of the provision although requirement to do so as a result of the right to the inferences which would be drawn from silence. We have consulted the Bar Council, I have consulted the Chairman and I have had a meeting with other representatives of the Bar Council.
2220 Following my initial consultation with the Chairman of the Bar Council, the Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Court Service sent out a circular to all chambers, inviting practitioners to put their names down for the scheme and setting out the payments which would be required. It is true that, following the issue of the circular, there has been some concern expressed by some practitioners as to the operation of this and, in particular, in relation to the level of fees. I should say that the fees which are set out in the circular 2225 and which are intended to be introduced as from next Thursday are, for all intents and purposes, almost identical and taken from what actually applies in the United Kingdom.

There is a police station advice and assistance fixed fee scheme which was introduced with effect – or rather, this version and these rates – were introduced with effect from 14th July 2008 and, subject to some tweaking because, although in the United Kingdom, they have a fee and five pence, 'We have rounded up 2230 the figures to produce the figures which are actually set out in the circular.

I acknowledge that there has been some concern and I can confirm today the commitment that I have given to the Bar Council which is to review these rates in conjunction with a review that we are currently undertaking in relation to the Legal Aid and reform of Legal Aid. It is important to state, Mr Speaker, that 2235 this scheme has nothing to do with Legal Aid it is something separate. It is a fixed fee scheme which people would be automatically entitled to, if they so request, without the requirement to be means tested or any other qualification – so it is separate from the provisions of the Legal Aid Scheme – it is an absolute entitlement.

But of course the success of the Scheme depends on the availability of practitioners on the list.
Therefore, the qualification that I mentioned earlier is that if, come next Thursday, we find that we do not 2240 have lists, or insufficient numbers to make a scheme workable, then we will commence the rest but not section 85. We do not believe that it would be right, simply because this scheme is either not fully implemented, or not fully implementable, that we should leave everything else in abeyance and, therefore, what we would simply do is postpone the commencement of section 85. That would not mean that persons who are arrested are not entitled to their lawyer. In the same way as happens today persons who 2245 are arrested would be entitled to call a lawyer of their choosing and to engage a lawyer, either for the purposes of a telephone consultation or attendance at the police station. That is what happens now, that is what will continue to happen whether or not section 85 is commenced because someone who is arrested can say, 'Well, I don't want to avail myself of the Scheme. I don't want the next person on the rota system' – because the way this would work is that the Court Service would compile a list of practitioners, 2250 that list would be passed on to the Royal Gibraltar Police and the Royal Gibraltar Police would administer the list by simply calling the next person, if someone wants to avail themselves of this statutory right.

So it is not the case that someone would say ‘Well, I want my own lawyer but I want him under the Scheme.’ If someone wants a lawyer under the Scheme, then the next, the duty solicitor who happens to be on duty on that particular day by being the next person on the list, that person would be called. If there is a call, either the same night or another night, then the next person on the list would be called... so it does not change what currently happens and the entitlement to legal advice at the police station but we simply wouldn’t be able to put in the statutory right accompanied by the duty solicitor scheme.

We are committed to making this Scheme work but it clearly requires, and we trust will have, sufficient support from practitioners. I have consulted with the Chairman, I had a meeting with other members of the Bar Council yesterday, I gave them the commitment which I told them that I would be making also public today, so that it is crystal clear that these are rates that we will give you when we review the Legal Aid provisions.

Mr Speaker, on that basis, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the Question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the amendment to the Bill.

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes.

This Bill amends two seminal pieces of legislation, the Crimes Bill and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Bill – or Acts, because they were passed last year. At the time I described them as the most significant reforms of our criminal justice system in over a hundred years and I stand by that comment.

Mr Speaker, that does not mean that, seminal as they are, pieces of legislation cannot be improved upon and, indeed, my comments on this Bill that the Hon. the Minister for Justice presents to this House today. It could be that my comments – or the general categories in which I place them – could be transposed to other Bills, as follows.

There is a category of case, for example – or category of amendments, for example – where, clearly, amendments improve upon the legislation that we have already brought to this House and passed by this House, albeit with our majority, the amendments in relation to, for example, Child in Need of Protection. I accept that those are improvements that the Hon. the Minister for Justice is making in relation to the Bill – the Act – that I presented to the House last year. Indeed, there may be European obligations and, although the Hon. the Minister for Justice has very fairly outlined the fact that the offences in relation to the amendments that he wishes to bring to the Bill, that he presented before this House, on child pornography, may well be covered already by the Crimes Bill, I accept that it is preferable to actually bring amendments to make it absolutely clear and make the point beyond doubt on something as important as that than not bring the amendments at all.

There are other classes of Bill: there is a second class of case and the second class of case may well be cases where we had made a particular policy decision in relation to a particular area. Often, policy decisions are taken, some of them are often very finely balanced, arguments are very finely balanced: we take a particular view of a particular policy, they are obviously entitled to take a different view. That does not mean that their view is not as valid as ours. The point I am making is that these are very often fine decisions that one makes and I can assure the Hon. the Minister for Justice that if, in future, he brings to this House a Bill or a particular amendment to our legislation that falls on the other side of the policy decision that we have taken, simply because we took a different decision does not mean that we will necessarily oppose the Bill. When one recognises that there are very fine arguments in reaching that policy decision, for the sake of being constructive and for the sake of moving things forward, we would certainly, in appropriate cases, support the Government even though we reached a different decision when we were in Government.

We certainly are not beyond being persuaded by the Hon. Minister or by the Government that the decision that we took, perhaps in the light of subsequent events, should no longer stand. I had hoped, in fact, that the amendments that the Hon. the Minister for Justice is moving in this Bill in relation to the Sexual Offenders Register might actually be one of those. I had hoped to, actually, be able to stand in this House today and say, having listened to the hon. the Minister for Justice, I am now persuaded that, in fact, the Register ought not to be made applicable retrospectively, but ought to be applicable prospectively. I have to say that, having listened to the Hon. the Minister for Justice, unfortunately I cannot agree with the arguments that he has advanced, for this reason: that you may have a very blatant – that probably is the wrong word... if you have been convicted of a sexual offence it is blatant – but you may have a serial sexual offender who has been convicted of a number of particularly heinous offences against children. Are we saying that simply because the conviction occurred ten years ago and the sentence has already been served, that he ought not to go on the Register simply because of the effect that it may have on his family. I do not think that that is a valid reason at all. Here our principal duty as legislators ought to be to protect society, to protect the community and, indeed, to protect also the victims of crime. In that kind of situation, I believe that the case would be compelling for inclusion on the Register, despite the fact that the conviction occurred ten years ago and that the sentence had already been served.

There is a third class of case where the differences in policy, the differences in philosophy, the differences in approach between this side of the House and that side of the House are so marked, are so disparate and different that it is not possible, with all the will in the world, with all the desire on this side to obviously be constructive and conduct politics constructively, to support the Government. I am afraid that that applies in relation to the right to silence, although that is a misnomer because the Crimes Act or the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act did not abolish the right to silence. It gave judges, in appropriate circumstances, the right to draw adverse inferences in the summing up to the jury. It did not abolish the right to silence.

But it is also equally applicable to the requirements that we introduced in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act in relation to defence disclosure and I do not agree and I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the Criminal Procedure – well to section 241 and also 243 of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act – in a moment. I will take him to that in a moment, and I do not agree that it necessarily follows that because the hon. Gentleman opposite – the Government – take a different view on the right to silence that they necessarily have to take a different view to us in relation to advanced disclosure. I will explain my views in a moment.

But, Mr Speaker, the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act was a very carefully – in our respectful view – balanced piece of legislation that sought to balance the rights of the accused and the need to ensure that, as between the defence and prosecution, both parties enjoy, as much as possible, equality of arms in the trial process and also in the pre-trial process. It is also right that it sought to balance the rights of the accused with also the rights of the victims of crime and the rights of society to be protected against potential criminals. But this involved, Mr Speaker, a re-balancing of the trial system away from the accused in certain instances. Yes, it did and we, as a party, and the Opposition of the day, are unapologetic about it. Is it right that a judge, in appropriate circumstances, should be able to refer to the fact that the accused is relying on – I use it as an example, but it applies to other cases – an alibi defence at trial, when he failed to mention to the police in an interview ‘It could not have been me, because I was not there. I was with Mr x, or Mrs x, or somebody else.’ He could have mentioned that at a police interview. Is it right that a judge ought to be able to refer to the fact that he could have mentioned it at a police interview, did not do so, but relied on an alibi defence at trial? In our view, yes, it is. Is it right that the defence should have to provide advance disclosure to the prosecution in the same circumstances, that the prosecution has a duty to the defence? Yes, it is. Is it objectionable that the defence should be required to notify the prosecution of the names of defence witnesses, or the names of defence experts at trial, but before trial? No, it is not objectionable.

Mr Speaker, leaving aside the question of the right to silence, which was very fully ventilated in this House on the merits of the Second Reading of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Bill last year, there is absolutely no conceivable reason, in our view, why the defence should not be subject to the same advance disclosure requirements as the prosecution. It is about time the trial process was, in our view, conducted with cards facing upwards on the table.

Mr Speaker, it is often said, in support of the position taken by the Government today on the obligations imposed on the defence for advanced disclosure that our system is adversarial, not inquisitorial; that we require the prosecution to prove its case and they should not be helped by disclosure made by the defence; that the defence ought to be able to ambush the prosecution at trial, at the eleventh hour with last minute defences.

Mr Speaker, I have always felt – I can see that Mr Costa is nodding, as a defence lawyer, saying, ‘Yes, absolutely right’ – that this argument relegates the desirability of achieving the right outcome based on all the evidence, on an equality of arms basis, to secondary importance. That cannot, in our respectful view, be right.

But can I take the hon. Gentleman to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act and, in particular, to section 241 and also 243. What section 241 does, which is the section on compulsory disclosure by the defendant, I just want to place the debate in context in relation to what the section means and also when it bites. Section 241.(1) actually says this.

‘Subject to subsection (2) to (4), this section applies if –
(a) this Part applies by virtue of section 238...’

and that lists the categories of cases, summary, cases of indictment, in some cases, and

(b)

– this is important –

‘the prosecutor complies with section 239 or purports to comply with it.’

In other words, it only bites if the prosecutor has complied with 239.

Now, 239 then says:

‘The prosecutor must –

(a) disclose to the defendant any prosecution material which has not previously been disclosed to the defendant and which might reasonably be considered capable of undermining the case for the prosecution against the defendant or of assisting the case for the defendant; or

2385

(b) give to the defendant a written statement that there is no material of any description mentioned in paragraph (a).’

It applies in circumstances where the prosecution has been provided with that advanced disclosure. It is not an obligation that applies across the board, but we also need to look at the scope and the extent of the obligation, because the Hon. the Minister for Justice said it necessarily follows, from the position that we have taken with relation to the right to silence, that these provisions ought also to go. I do not agree with that and, in fact, when one looks at the scope of the obligation on defence counsel for disclosure, one sees that they are eminently reasonable obligations on the defence.

They only bite when the prosecution has provided, itself, disclosure. For the scope –

2395

Hon. G H Licudi: Could the hon. Member just give way on that point?

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course.

Hon. G H Licudi: The hon. Member says this only bites when the prosecution itself makes the disclosure, but the first words of section 239(1) are

2400

‘The prosecutor must’.

In other words, it must be assumed that a statutory obligation on a prosecutor will be complied with and disclosure will be given by the prosecution. Therefore, section 241 would always bite.

2405

Are there any circumstances in which the hon. Member can think of where the prosecutor is going to ignore a statutory obligation to provide disclosure? Does the hon. Member not agree, in any event, that the prosecutor currently has an obligation to provide that disclosure? What we are having now is a statutory obligation, which we are retaining; we are not intending to... but the suggestion that section 241 and the obligation to provide compulsory disclosure by the defendant is somehow conditional on something... It is not conditional on anything, because there is a statutory right, which the prosecutor must comply with.

2410

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, my understanding of the position is that it is not across the board that the prosecutor... but it makes absolutely no difference to the point I am making.

2415

Section 241 applies where the prosecutor complies with section 239 or purports to comply with it (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) Right. It is a provision where there is reciprocity on the part of the defence to something that the prosecution has already done. In other words, there is an obligation on the prosecution to provide disclosure. The prosecution provides that disclosure, there is then an obligation on the defence, for the defence to provide disclosure, but we have also got to analyse... so it is not a situation, we are not talking about a situation here where defendants are required to do something effectively unilaterally in circumstances where the other side to that particular case has provided no disclosure itself. It is predicated on that basis, but we also need to analyse what is the disclosure? Is it reasonable disclosure? How onerous is the disclosure on the defence? I think, if one looks at section 243(1) contents of the defence, and in fact, the disclosure is the defence statement. That is the disclosure the defence provides.

2420

The defence statement is then 243:

‘For the purpose of this Part a defence statement is a written statement –

2430

(a) setting out the nature of the defendant’s defence, including any particular defences on which he intends to rely;’

That does not necessarily have an impact on the – it does not at all in our view – have an impact on a defendant’s right not to take the witness stand, for example. Because if directed to a situation – just to give you an example – the defence may be, ‘Well, it is not murder, but it is manslaughter by reason of the fact that diminished responsibility applies’. That does not affect the defendant’s rights in terms of his ability not to go in the witness box, for example. We do not see anything wrong with the fact that a defendant is obliged to disclose to the prosecution the fact that the defendant is relying on a defence of diminished responsibility.

2435

‘(b) indicating the matters of fact on which he takes issue with the prosecution;’

2440

But what are the facts on which he takes issue with the prosecution? Version of events, setting out the case of each matter, why he takes issue with the prosecution, setting out particulars of matters of fact on which he intends to rely for the purposes of his defence... Again, it does not impact on his ability not to give evidence at trial, he may not give evidence at trial but he may have somebody else giving evidence and he is relying on the facts of another witness. What is wrong with a defendant’s providing advanced disclosure of that?

2445

‘(e) indicating any point of law (including any point as to the admissibility of evidence or an abuse of process) which he wishes to take...’

2450

In other words, these are arguments of law that a defence counsel may ambush a prosecution at the eleventh hour and it is dealing with advanced disclosure of that. Then, in relation to 245, all that 245 – which is another section that is being repealed as a consequence of this Bill – all 245 actually does is deal with the notification of the intention to call defence witnesses, and 246 – which is another section that is being repealed – deals with notification of the names of experts instructed by the defendant. I cannot see why advanced notification of witnesses the defence wants to call or the name of an expert that the defence wishes to rely upon, why that has an impact on the right to silence. I do not. I just do not agree that it has an impact on the right to silence. In fact, that argument is even clearer than the arguments that I have postulated in relation to section 243.

Mr Speaker, I do not agree that one necessarily follows from the other and I do think that these are obligations that do balance the process up in terms of the defence and also the prosecution in circumstances where the prosecution has an obligation to provide the defence with disclosure. It is often said that the reason why... it is often said against this question of advanced disclosure and also, indeed, in relation to the adverse inferences that can be drawn – provisions allowing adverse inferences to be drawn from the exercise of the right to silence – that is necessary because the police somehow have huge resources at their disposal, whereas defendants do not. Now, Mr Speaker, in this jurisdiction – it is an argument which has been deployed in the United Kingdom – in this jurisdiction I am not sure that that is an apposite example and it is certainly not true across the board.

Mr Speaker, we have a very small police force; we have a small prosecuting team, as part of Her Majesty’s Attorney General’s Chambers. A team, both in terms of the police and also the prosecution, that does not have the resources, does not have the expertise that is available to counterparts in the United Kingdom. The hon. Gentleman changed, for example, the Legal Aid rules recently in order to allow complex fraud cases, effectively commercial funding of those cases in terms of lawyers here and also lawyers in the UK. There is a judgment from the Chief Justice dating some two years back, which already allowed the commercial... the outside counsel to charge commercial rates in criminal cases – (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi) ...but we do have a situation – (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi)

2475

Yes, but the hon. Gentleman is making – just for the benefit of the public – the point that it is not right to have outside counsel being able to charge commercial rates in criminal cases, but not Gibraltar counsel and Gibraltar lawyers. I accept that entirely, but of course, that is not the effect. The amendments that the hon. Gentleman made to the Legal Aid rules did not cure that particular loophole, because all it did was – in complex criminal cases it did, but not in relation to all the other cases. That is certainly wrong.

What we have is a situation... what we have in very complex fraud cases, for example, you have defendants now being able to charge hundreds of thousands of pounds – or lawyers being able to charge hundreds of thousands of pounds, both local lawyers and, indeed, accused having the benefit of some of the best QCs in the United Kingdom, coming to defend them at taxpayers’ expense on their cases. Indeed, in relation to the effect of the judgment by the Chief Justice a couple of years ago, in non-fraud cases, again that is also possible. We do have a situation where, habitually, you have outside counsel coming into Gibraltar, very experienced counsel, specialist counsel, top counsel, coming to Gibraltar and being used in order to defend the accused in criminal cases.

The point I am making, Mr Speaker, is that that is all fine but I do not accept the argument that the system is weighted in favour of the police or the prosecution in Gibraltar across the board. That is not the case and that is often an argument that is deployed in favour of not having advance disclosure by the defence in criminal cases.

Mr Speaker, our Bill –

Hon. G H Licudi: Would the hon. Member give way on that point.

I acknowledge that the hon. Member simply says that is ‘an argument’ that can be deployed. The hon. Member will not have heard me deploying that argument during the course of this debate for the purpose of presentation of this particular Bill.

It is not our position that, because of that argument, these provisions ought to go. Our position, as I have explained, is that we consider that they are inconsistent with the other amendment we are doing, removing the inference from silence. We may take a different view but we consider these to be consequential provisions on that. We have no point of principle in relation to this matter, no point of policy, but we consider that the scheme, as it stands, without the inference from silence, with the right to silence, would simply be unwelcome. This is the position.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I am very grateful.

The arguments that I have outlined and that I have come prepared to meet in the context of the merits of this particular Bill bearing in mind that, in fact, the provisions about advanced disclosure did not form part of the substantive debate on the second reading of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act –

Hon. G H Licudi: Why is it a consequence of that?

Hon. D A Feetham: – because, as I recall, the Opposition then did not actually take a position in relation to advanced disclosure. Their position was... but I came here, obviously, to also meet the arguments that have been advanced in the United Kingdom by defence counsel in relation to this and also by academics like Professor Zander, who argued against advanced disclosure on precisely that basis but I am very grateful to the Hon. the Minister for Justice for clarifying that point.

Mr Speaker, in summary, our Bill, which was passed in Parliament last year and became the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act – and I concentrate on that because, really, most of the controversy is in relation to that – very carefully balanced the rights of the accused and the need to ensure that the accused did not hide behind a system heavily stacked in their favour and away from protection of society and also from protecting victims of crime.

I think that this is a retrograde step and, therefore, we will certainly be voting against the Bill.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Does the mover of the Bill wish to reply?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker.

The hon. Member starts his contribution – I am grateful for his contribution, which is positive and constructive, where it has been possible for him to be positive and constructive, but clearly highlighting the fundamental difference that there is in terms of policy as between that side of the House and this side of the House... He starts by saying that these two Bills, taken together, represent, as he stated when he originally introduced the Bills last year, the most significant reforms of the criminal justice system.

We recognise that is certainly the case and we acknowledge all the work that was done in putting this in place before December 2011. It was not possible, for reasons that the hon. Member clearly knows, to have introduced this before December 2011. Therefore, it fell to us to do so subsequently.

But these are really monumental changes to the way the criminal justice system has worked in Gibraltar for many, many years. Because they are monumental changes, it has taken, unfortunately, this long to get it right and be in a position to actually commence this. It is not just a question of time, it has taken a lot of effort by a lot of people to get systems in place, in particular Royal Gibraltar Police, Customs and other authorities, who have all been consulted and been part of the process in order to get training up to speed, the processes up to speed, to make sure that the drafting of the codes of practice was in place and could be published. So it has been – because it is such a significant reform – a monumental effort and I want to acknowledge that effort, firstly by that side in bringing this to the House in the first place and, subsequently, since December when all the agencies and professionals that we have dealt with in getting this to the stage where we are today.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I want to associate myself entirely with the Hon. the Minister for Justice's words on that point because it really is a monumental effort by everybody concerned and I acknowledge entirely the work did not finish when we presented the Bills to the House last year.

Hon. G H Licudi: I am grateful for that.

Mr Speaker, there are really two fundamental points – perhaps three – that the hon. Member makes.

The first one is in relation to the sex offenders' registry, in relation to the possibility of retrospective effect. I mentioned that we have carried out consultation; this is a matter that we have deeply considered. It is not something that one does lightly without consideration and giving the matter deep thought. We are clearly on the same side when it comes to protection of victims, when it comes to protection of children, when it comes to protection of vulnerable persons in our society and we need to make sure that everything possible and everything necessary is done. But at the same time, the hon. Member has spoken of balance: we also have to balance rights of other people and that is precisely what we have done.

As the hon. Member well knows, the general principle in relation to the criminal law generally is that it should not have retrospective effect and that is generally applied specifically in relation to offences. You should not introduce an offence now in relation to acts that were done two years ago or three weeks ago, where the person perpetrating those acts did not know that he may have been committing an offence, at the time that whatever person has committed a crime – which is now a relevant offence – these provisions in relation to the registry would not have been there. We are not just thinking – and in particular to emphasise – we are not just thinking of the right of those particular persons but the rights of other people around that person who would be affected and after – I can honestly say to the hon. Member – very, very deep and careful consideration, we felt that the right thing in relation to the Register was to do it prospective rather than retrospective, but with the exception that we did not want to, let me put it colloquially, ‘let off the hook’ people who have been convicted recently and who are currently serving a prison sentence. That is the reason why we have done that.

In relation to the right to silence, we clearly disagreed at the time of the Second Reading of the Bill in July 2011, we disagree now, fundamentally on whether these provisions abolish the right to silence or not. We believe that they clearly do when you have inferences which can be drawn from silence, then that person no longer has the absolute right without consequences to remain silent. A right is a right without detriment. Where detriment is included, then that no longer becomes a right and that right goes out and is abolished.

I acknowledge that that is a matter that we disagree on but we were particularly conscious of, as I mentioned earlier, the provisions of the report which was made by the Royal Commission in the United Kingdom in 1993, which was made to Parliament, and we consider that they put together some very, very powerful arguments in their recommendation against making the changes which this Bill actually introduced causing those inferences and it may well be worth recalling because it is important to understand why we have this right and why we feel it is important to retain these rights. The arguments in favour of retaining the right to silence which was put by the Royal Commission in the report were:

(1) That circumstances of police interrogation are such that there can be no justification for requiring a suspect to answer questions when he or she may be unclear about both the nature of the offence which he or she is alleged to have committed and about the legal definitions of intent, dishonesty etc, upon which an indictment may turn.

(2) Innocent suspects’ reasons for remaining silent may include, for example, protection of family or friends, a sense of bewilderment, embarrassment or outrage, or a reasoned decision to wait until the allegation against them has been set out in detail and they have the benefit of considered legal advice.

(3) Members of ethnic or other minority groups may have particular reasons of their own for fearing that any answers they give will be unfairly used against them.

(4) There is a risk that if the police were allowed to warn suspects to decline to answer their questions that they face the prospect of adverse comment at trial, such a power would sometimes be abused.

(5) It is now well established that certain people, including some who are not mentally ill or handicapped, will confess to offences they did not commit.
