1115 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the Government pledges for all children, you just mentioned, to be assessed for special educational needs on entry into the education system.

1120 Is the Minister aware that this assessment or psychological screening is already being conducted on all children on entry into the education system and that the reporting system does ensure that there is continuous assessment and this stays in place? So what does the Hon. Minister envisage will be extra assessment for these children and will there be any extra work for the teachers to take on?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is not a question of extra assessment. I am certainly aware that there is an assessment panel and that children are assessed.

1125 There is a need for ongoing assessment, not just an assessment at the start of the educational life of the child, but ongoing assessment, because the needs of children can change in one direction or another. There may be a need for a particular child to have a Classroom Aide for a particular year, but not the next year, because of the progress that may be made. So the assessment is, and has to continue (Interjection by Mrs Ellul-Hammond) to be and has been, well, and that is a process that will continue.

1130 What we are also doing, is not just looking at it from an educational point of view, but because we said that we want to have the assessment and continue that through the educational life of the child and beyond, that is a reference that I made to the collaboration that is taking place with the Care Agency at the moment, so that there is exchange of information.

1135 In effect, what there should be, what there must be, in respect of children, is shared information, as to information that the Care Agency has in respect of disabilities – because they are dealing with issues regarding children with disabilities – and information that the Education Department has in respect of the assessment panel and the assessment in respect of special needs. That information is shared, so that there is, firstly, co-operation between the two agencies, the Department and the Agency, during the school life of the child and support is provided to both because, in some cases, we have children that are in the hands of the Care Agency, but they do need educational support. We have already witnessed, in the last few months, a number of examples of that and there are also children, clearly, within the educational system, that need the support of the Care Agency and that collaboration must continue on a hands-on and a shared information basis.

1140 Beyond that, what is also important is that there should not just be shared information and collaboration during the school years, but that, at the end of the day, the child with, perhaps, disabilities, that is going to have continuing needs for services of the Care Agency, they will progress into adulthood and there has to be a transition. That transition has to be managed during the course of the education system and that is why that collaboration is existing, to be able to make sure that we can manage that transition and not essentially leave a child in limbo, once he leaves the educational system.

1150 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Well, Mr Speaker, my understanding is that process already was in existence and there was already collaboration between the Care Agency and the Department of Education and the Health Authority, so my question is how will it be different from what has already been in existence?

We came into office in December 2012 (Interjection) and we have decided – sorry, 2011, thank you – and we had decided to put this system in place to make sure that that exists. I am certain that there must have been some collaboration before, but it is not something that we have said, ‘Well, what existed before, let us just continue’: we have decided to talk about the needs of these children and how we can assist in working in conjunction with the two agencies to assist those children.

1160 Of course, there was collaboration before, of course there was assistance given to children with special educational needs before and, of course, the Education Department did a very good job in doing that, as indeed, did the Care Agency. What we are doing is continuing that work, perhaps enhancing that work by focusing more on that transition to adulthood. Perhaps there was – I will not say a failure – in that respect, but possibly more needed to be done and we are concentrating specifically on that, to make sure that transition is seamless.

1165 I do not want to be critical of the previous administration; I am here to answer for what we are doing and to explain what we are doing, rather than how what we are doing is different from the previous administration.

1170 Whatever happened before happened, and we are certainly grateful for the efforts of the Department of Education and the Care Agency before, in assisting these children and we will continue that process and try to enhance it.

1175 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that acknowledgement and so, just to sum up, you are perhaps reviewing what is already in place and, perhaps, in your mind, if you feel there could be an improvement or more resources or funding could be pumped into the service, that is what you will be doing.

1180 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, not just that. We have not come in and said, 'Well, let's just review what is in place and see how we can improve it.' We have come with ideas as to what we want to see achieved, and we have given instructions so that our system is put in place.

To the extent that that requires speaking of what happened before, that is what is happening. It is not just a question of looking at what existed before; we have decided what we want to do and how we want to achieve it and that is what we are putting forward.

1185 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

1190 Just for my assistance, can the Minister confirm what my understanding is, in terms of the review... and I commend that the review has started and that was one of their manifesto commitments. I commend them for that.

But the features of the review, if I can put it and summarise it in these terms, is a consultation with the head teachers which, presumably, you have confirmed has started and will presumably be ongoing; and, secondly, there will be a data collection in relation to all children with diabetes – sorry, with disabilities – I am thinking about something else! – (Hon. G H Licudi: Special needs.) Sorry, special needs – is that the position? I think you said disabilities but, fine, I accept that.

1195 So is the review going to take other features? Are you going to be looking at different things within the review they are carrying out?

Hon. G H Licudi: With special needs?

1200 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, of course – this arises out of a supplementary question made by my colleague, Mrs Ellul.

1205 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, yes, as I have already explained, what we are doing is looking at specifically what is required by the different schools, what the head teachers identify are either additional resources or additional facilities, or additional equipment. All those matters are subject to... and it is not a review which we say, 'We've started the review and it is going to be an ongoing review.' It is a request that we made – that I made specifically – of head teachers to provide me with what those resources, both personnel resources, material resources, building resources, equipment resources – all those resources – were and all that has been provided. All that information has already been collated and is being looked at, at the moment.

1210 And it is being looked at not just for the purposes of saying we are doing a review; it is being looked at with a view to implementing the additional resources which are required which, as the hon. Lady identified, was a manifesto commitment from us. We immediately implemented part of it by identifying a need for Classroom Aides – and further Classroom Aides, I am sure, will be needed and will be engaged – as well as issues relating to buildings – which we are looking at – and specifically also in relation to equipment – not just equipment specifically for special needs, but generally equipment that is required in schools. All that is currently being looked at and will be implemented very soon.

1220 Hon. D J Bossino: In relation to the second feature which I identified, in relation to the data collection of children with special needs, can he expand on that?

Am I right in understanding that forms part of the review and, if it is correct, what does it mean by that – by data collection?

1225 Hon. G H Licudi: I explained it to a certain extent, before. What I specifically asked was for head teachers to provide to me a wish list of what it was that they required, in terms of resources, both staffing, manning, additional Classroom Aides and other kinds of resources and facilities that they require. That is the data that has been collected, in respect of those wish lists from all the individual schools, which has been put together with an emphasis, on the one hand, for the purposes of staffing and the 47 teachers which we already have touched upon; on the other hand, separately, looking at facilities and resources which are required in respect of special needs, on which we are very interested in implementing as much of that as possible very, very quickly; and, separately, in relation to buildings, maintenance, refurbishment, those sorts of areas.

1230 So there are distinct areas to the collection of that data, which is in a very advanced stage of having been looked at.

1235 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And, if I may, Mr Speaker, I think my hon. Friend perhaps was referring to individual educational action plans for the children with special educational needs and, together with a continuous assessment, the plan will be changed and adaptations or resources will be required for the children as necessary. Is that the plan?

1240 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, as I said, there is an assessment panel. There are professionals in the Education Department that deal specifically with these matters and I have given them instructions to specifically look at all aspects of special educational needs and the plans that are required in respect of the children, with a view to implementing all of that, as I said, very, very quickly.

Schools maintenance teams Policy

1250 Clerk: Question 281, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education explain their schools' 'maintenance teams' policy?

1255 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1260 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government's policy is as stated in its manifesto, namely to provide a dedicated pool of sufficiently resourced maintenance staff for schools. This policy is already in effect, as stated in the Government press release dated 15th February 2012.

1265 The system put in place consists of a team contracted from GJBS. They comprise an experienced foreman and eight skilled operatives working exclusively in schools. They are tackling small scale repair jobs estimated at taking less than five days, and are liaising directly with officers from the Department of Education.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say if this service went out to tender or was it directly given to GJBS?

1270 Hon. G H Licudi: This is a matter that was discussed with the Chief Executive and other officers from GJBS and it was decided that they... or rather they put together a proposal that they could put together a dedicated team for schools, and it was decided that they should be engaged to provide that service.

1275 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain how this policy is now different to the one before, where GJBS staff were called into schools to carry out minor works maintenance projects?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, again, I am being asked to look into the past, and look at the situation before we came into office.

1280 In this particular case, I happen to know how the position is different. All schools have in the past had access clearly to maintenance facilities and, as I understand it, that was traditionally provided by GJBS. That was on the basis that a requisition form was sent to the Department of Education, then onto GJBS, and GJBS, as and when they had somebody available to do that particular job, would send somebody to the schools.

1285 That is quite different from what we have at the moment, which is a dedicated team of GJBS employees and a foreman, dedicated exclusively to schools and who can be called upon. As I understand the position, previously GJBS did act on requisitions, did provide, again, as I understand a good service to schools. They did not have this dedicated facility. Whether it is going to be better or worse, time will tell. What we certainly can say, it is slightly different, and it is a dedicated service for schools, which is what we said we would be putting in place and we did so within a couple of months.

1290 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister say if these maintenance costs are to be paid from the different schools' individual maintenance budgets, as per your new manifesto commitment, the new policy, or the costs are taken from the Department of Education's yearly maintenance budget, which was around £1½ million as per the previous administration's maintenance spending?

1295 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, schools do not have their own individual budget for maintenance.

What we have said in the manifesto is that that is something that we would bring into effect. That has not actually happened yet. What we have done is provide the dedicated maintenance team for schools, but that is being met out of central funds administratively controlled by the Department of Education themselves.

1300 I have discussed the issue of the specific dedicated budget for schools with head teachers. The view that has been taken for now is, 'Let's see how this system operates', and although we are certainly committed, to the extent that there is a need for individual budgets, it is something that we will put in place, but not immediately. I wanted to put in place this system immediately and see how it works, and then discuss further the maintenance requirements of the schools and how much they needed – having regard to how this system is working, paid for by central funds controlled by the Department of Education; then, having regard to that, see what else would be required by the schools by way of individual and dedicated budgets which each headmaster would control. So that would be looked at following the implementation of the system and after the system has been running for a number of months.

1310 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that. Perhaps that would be a topic for a question at a further date.

Finally, Mr speaker, can the Minister explain how the new maintenance team's policy will fit in with the school refurbishment programme – will there be any link at all?

1315 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is a totally different policy and programme. As I explained in the original answer, this is maintenance in respect of works which are estimated at taking less than five days – five days or less – in other words, very minor works.

1320 There are, in addition, minor works plus refurbishment of schools. What we have said we will do is put together a permanent refurbishment programme for schools. What will actually happen will be seen in the context of the new financial year – the allocation of the specific budget for that, but that will be coming on stream very soon and it will be something very different from this, which is purely maintenance of very small works.

1325 Director of Education post
Number of applicants; commencement date of successful applicant

Clerk: Question 282, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1330 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us how many people applied for the position of Director of Education and when the successful applicant will be in post?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1335 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, two people applied for this position. Interviews were held on Thursday, 8th March 2012. I can confirm that the successful applicant was Mr Joey Britto, who is in post as of 14th March 2012.

1340 Mr Britto was Senior Education Adviser at the Department of Education. He has been acting as Director of Education since 3rd January 2012, when the previous Director of Education commenced his new role on promotion to the post of Chief Secretary.

I take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to welcome Mr Britto to his new and important job (A Member: Hear, hear.) and look forward to working with him. (Applause) Certainly, I and the rest of the Government look forward to working with him in relation to the Government's Education Programme.

1345 I also want to take this opportunity, at this stage, of thanking the former Director of Education, Mr Ernest Gomez, for his dedication over many years to education in Gibraltar and, in particular, for the excellent work he carried out over the more than five years that he spent as Director of Education.

1350 Hon. D A Feetham: On behalf of the Opposition, certainly the Opposition would associate themselves entirely with the words of the Hon. Minister and congratulate Mr Britto, and also join with the Minister in thanking Mr Ernesto Gomez for the work that he has done as Director of Education when he was there.

EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Calpe Ward Running costs

1360 Clerk: Question 283, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state how much it will cost to run the Calpe Ward on an annual basis, broken down by staffing costs, equipment and other costs?

1365 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1370 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the cost of running Calpe Ward for 2012-13 will be £774,842, of which £603,360 is staffing – that is personal emoluments, wages-related allowances and social insurance. The recurrent cost of expenditure for the Unit will be £171,482. The cost of equipment has been £136,445. This has been a one-off expenditure to equip the Unit to its present state.

1375 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm that I am right in assuming that her Department has had to reissue the employment advert for registered nurses at levels 1 and 2, to 'man' the Calpe Ward because of a low level of people applying for the first advert that came out about six weeks ago?

1380 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, I am not aware and perhaps if I had been given notice of that specific question I would have been able to reply. I am not... as far as I am aware Mr Speaker, there was an advert placed by the GHA, actually, not the Care Agency and people applied to that advert. In fact, that question is asked by the hon. Member later on and I do have the details for that.

I am sorry, Mr Speaker. Actually, it is asked as a written question!

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise if all the eight registered nurses and the 18 care workers positions have been filled in order to run the Calpe Ward properly?

1385 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, the date of appointment of the registered nurses is contained in the written answer – in the answer to the written question.

Facility for the Elderly Long term plan

1390 Clerk: Question 284, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services explain what the Government's long term plan of 'a made to measure facility for the elderly', is as outlined in their manifesto on the Health page, under additional wards at St Bernard's and facilities for the elderly?

1395 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, our manifesto commitment for a short term policy of adding beds at St Bernard's and having a made to measure facility for the elderly has already been met. This was achieved on the 26th February 2012, by the opening of Calpe Ward for 18 long stay elderly patients, and thereby releasing this number of acute beds in hospital. We will, of course, strive to provide further made to measure facilities for the elderly, and will do so once the feasibility study as to the need is complete. The Care Agency and the Gibraltar Health Authority will work in close collaboration to achieve this aim.

1405 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, for the sake of clarification, can the Minister explain if this is the same after the review will be conducted, high quality, I quote 'high quality cost efficient nursing homes' which is also stated in the same paragraph in that page 30 of the manifesto.

1410 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I have said on previous occasions in this Parliament, the starting point will be to identify the need, and that is what we are doing now. Once we are able to identify the need, then we will move on to step 2, as to the need for residential care, domiciliary care, and any other care for the elderly. We are not yet at that stage because the feasibility study is not yet complete.

1415 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, I am grateful for that Minister, but it is just for the sake of clarification, because it has been brought up by several people while reading this paragraph in the manifesto, under 'Additional wards at St Bernard's and facility for the elderly', because there is a mention, as you rightly said:

1420 'our short term policy will be to add beds at St Bernard's. We will also provide a made to measure facility for the elderly' – which you have clarified is the Calpe Ward, but then it goes on to say,

1425 'It is time to provide high quality cost efficient nursing homes in Gibraltar...'

and we would seek clarification if that means a home in addition to the new Alzheimer and Dementia Hospital that is being built. And it goes on to say,

1430 'We will do so to complement Mount Alvernia and the new Geriatric Care Ward –'

- which I am assuming is the Calpe and Cochrane Wards –

'and Alzheimer's centres we will provide.'

1435 Now, again, there has been question as to what these Alzheimer's centres are. Is this, again, the daycare centre that was already planned up at the Royal Naval Hospital site, or is this a new... so that paragraph is a little confusing and members of the public are not sure how much more the Government will be providing for Alzheimer's and elderly care.

1440 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, for clarification, no day centre at the RNH Unit was planned. What was planned was a very little unit which is not by any stretch of the imagination the type of day centre that would be suitable for the need of Alzheimer and Dementia patients.

Mr Speaker, to clarify once again, before I can answer that question properly, I need to wait for the outcome of the feasibility study.

1445

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, but the manifesto seems to be quite clear of what the Government is pledging. Is the Minister suggesting that you may be reneging on what is stated in the manifesto?

1450

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am certainly not reneging on what is written in the manifesto.

However, Mr Speaker, as to the number of facilities or the type of facilities that we build will depend on the need for each individual facility and I will not know the exact need until the feasibility study is complete.

What this Government will do, Mr Speaker, is assess the need and address the need, not the other way around, because then we find ourselves with a situation that we have found ourselves at the Dementia unit at the RNH, which will be that we may have to incur expense in having the layout of the premises fit for purpose. What we will do first is identify the need and we will work from there.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, expense that the Hon. Minister, having been a Minister now for over 100 days, does not even know what extra expense there will be. She keeps on talking about all these works that need to be done to the Dementia Unit and then, when one asks a very simple question about, 'Well, what's the extra cost?', she does not even know that.

1460

But will the Hon. the Minister, confirm – and I agree with her, that one analyses first need, and then one goes on to effectively meeting those needs – was that equation and that assessment and that analysis not done when you clearly made manifesto commitments that you did, which are clearly making pledges in relation to facilities that you are promising to members of the public? Therefore, you either made those pledges without having done analysis of the need, or you must have done so. Now what is it?

1465

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as we were not in Government more than 100 days ago we could not have undertaken an in-depth analysis as to the needs for the elderly because we did not have access to the information that was required. Now that we are able to access this information, that feasibility study is being undertaken.

1470

Insofar as the costs that the RNH Unit... what I said this morning, Mr Speaker, was that, of course, there will be costs incurred in any changes but I do not know the exact level of those costs because I do not know the exact level of the changes that will be made. And, of course, no architect and no engineer and no builder will make alterations free of charge.

1475

In fact, what I did say was that I have been asking for information of the costs, following on from the four changes that have already been requested to the plans at the RNH Dementia Unit by the previous Government, and I still do not have that, Mr Speaker, so I cannot give any further details.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, this side of the House was under the impression that the manifesto had been costed.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, not only has it been costed, I am very happy to say it has been very accurately costed, from the information that is coming across to us from the civil servants who are now looking at some of the commitments and what we can expect to see in respect of the tenders for construction of some of the projects that are in the manifesto.

But that is not to say, Mr Speaker, that in respect of some aspects of the manifesto, the hon. Lady is going to be unable to give Members opposite a figure of what the costs will be in undertaking certain works, some of which may only have arisen as a result of her own investigations, having arrived in the Department. It could not be otherwise, Mr Speaker.

1490

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Perhaps the Chief Minister can help me with the question that I asked the hon. Lady. The hon. Lady quite rightly says that one has to do an analysis of needs and then see what one has to do, in order to meet those needs. But perhaps, because he was involved in the writing, or he wrote or was the principal writer of the manifesto, did he, when the manifesto pledge was made of

‘We will also provide made to measure facilities for the elderly’, and then there is another – a number of other commitments – had he conducted that assessment of needs when he made those pledges in the manifesto? Because she is absolutely right: you make pledges based on needs, but now, when we ask her about, ‘Well, what extra facilities are you doing?’ she now falls back on having to conduct an assessment, which we would have thought would have been done before writing that manifesto.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I had the opportunity of hearing the answer that the Hon. Miss Sacramento gave whilst I was in the ante-chamber and I thought that she answered absolutely perfectly and demonstrating a maturity beyond her years in this Parliament. (Applause)

You see, Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman needs to understand is that, from Opposition, one is able to make certain assessments and from Government assessments take, obviously, a different shape when one has the information available to one, that the hon. Members opposite, despite being in Opposition, will themselves have at the time that they come to fight the next General Election and whoever it is who may lead that party. As I have said, I am going to adopt the Douglas-Home guidelines to allow members of the principal parties of Opposition access to senior civil servants so that they can make assessments with information available to the Civil Service when the time comes to write their manifesto, in four years time – something which, he will know, his party did not do when they were in office until the 8th December, despite my public request that that should have been the case.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much for that party political broadcast, and, but he has not, with respect, answered the question, and you may every time we ask a question of the hon. Lady, decide to refer to the fact that the hon. Lady has only been Minister for a short period of time, and I accept that, one has to give new Ministers a certain amount of latitude. But one must also accept that we are doing our job and that it is within our job description, of asking questions about commitments that the party opposite made when they were in Opposition. Now can he answer once and for all, what facilities, what, did he have in mind when they made the commitments in the manifesto? It’s a very simple question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am delighted to get up and refer the hon. Gentleman to date to the short period of time that the hon. Lady has been a Minister, but I fully expect that she will be a Minister for much longer than he has been a Minister and, therefore, the time will come when I have to refer to the fact that she has much more ministerial experience than he.

But, anyway, I am delighted for them to come to this House to do their job, to ask us questions, but when it comes to issues of policy and how it is that we are going to implement parts of our manifesto and what it is that we had in mind when we were in Opposition, I will (a) remind him of the debates we have had about me not having to tell him what it is that I have in mind; not having to be answerable for what we did in Opposition; and (c) remind him that he will very soon be seeing statements setting out different parts of our manifesto which are being implemented.

When we come to the point of making a decision to make the announcements of what we have in mind, he will read it in the press.

Hon Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may –

Hon. D A Feetham: He obviously doesn’t have a clue what he had in mind when he wrote the manifesto!

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, I have many clues of many things I have in mind when I did many things including when I wrote the manifesto, not sharing it with him doesn’t mean that my mind is empty, although that may be what happens to him when he doesn’t want to say much more than he has said into the microphone.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister for Health.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may come back to the question of assessing the need for the elderly, 1555 I think it is perfectly logical, as my hon. Friend, Mr Feetham, has pointed out, that when coming into Government, a new Government has to assess what the needs are, what is not logical or even acceptable is 1560 that the former Government who had the information at the time, did not assess the needs, because they have left us with a problem with the elderly, a problem to do with housing, a problem to do with domiciliary care, a problem with the institutionalisation of the elderly, with our hospitals full of elderly people, not allowing acute medicine to take place. We have already started and taken immediate steps to relieve that, I think the shame is that the past Government had not carried out that assessment, had given the false impression that there was a Mental Unit and Dementia Unit that had already been properly designed, when they had not. That is the point that we must not miss, and that is a point that we are going to put right.

1565 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much for that, but does the hon. Gentleman not agree with me that building 86 flats at Bishop Canilla, 145 flats for the elderly at Albert Risso, when, in fact, in the late 1990's only a third of Mount Alvernia had, in fact, been open, whereas now that has triplicated in capacity, would he not agree with me...

1570 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a point of order... On a point of order, Mr Speaker. This morning, when I was listening to a less than edifying spectacle in this House, one of the rulings that you made was that we should not be referring to things which were decades old. If the hon. Gentleman wants to get up and talk about the record of what he called this morning 'my Government' – namely, his Government, the one that ended on 8th December – that is a matter entirely for him, but I thought that, after your ruling he should not 1575 be referring to things older than that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I am actually asking a question arising out of a statement that the hon. Gentleman has made about the record of the GSD in Government. Now, what's good for the goose is also good for the gander. He says that he was listening to it on the radio: well, the only unedifying spectacle 1580 was the fact that the former Leader of the Opposition challenged me to go to the ante-room to have a fisticuff with me. That was the only unedifying spectacle – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Now I think we are going back into recent history... The matter was dealt with this morning: I do not think we need to go back into that.

1585 The Hon. Daniel Feetham is right and, having regard to the fact that the Hon. Minister for Health did refer to the state of affairs that was left by the previous administration, that can form the basis... but, again, aimed at eliciting information or urging a course of action, not for defending previous Government's policies.

1590 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker if I might just clarify, I am not saying he cannot refer to what his Government – what he called, this morning, 'my Government', he talked of the GSD Government that ended on 8th December as 'my Government'... Of course, he can talk about that, but he was going back to 1993 and Mount Alvernia etc.

1595 Mr Speaker: No, exactly, I have ruled that, in the context of remarks made by the Hon. Minister, which was on the state of affairs left by the previous administration, that can form the basis of a question, not –

Hon. D A Feetham: I would not have asked the question had he not made the statement. But, Mr Speaker,
I have already made the point I think that I want to make.

1600 Mr Speaker: Then we can move on.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I would like to make a final point on that statement regarding the state of affairs of the elderly on 9th December, being that this Government inherited a waiting list for Mount Alvernia that exceeded 500 people, a waiting list of people on domiciliary care that exceeded 400
1605 people, over 80 elderly people in surgical beds in the GHA, which resulted in over 100 operations being cancelled a year... (A Member: Shame!)

If we are going to talk about the state of affairs, Mr Speaker, those are the facts on 9th December.

1610 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I would like to add, Mr Speaker, the fact that we have had to assess numerous flats in Albert Risso House because they were not suitable for the elderly.

Mr Speaker: Well, I must allow a question on this side, if it is a question?
Then we shall move on. Next Question.

Children with severe challenging behaviour
Plans for secure unit

1620 Clerk: Question 285, the Hon. J J Netto.

1625 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Service say if any Government property or properties has been, or is in the process of being, prepared and refurbished for the purpose of having a secure unit in the short term, prior to having a substantial property in the long term for children with severe challenging behaviour?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1630 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, options are being considered with regard to identifying an appropriate property to be used as a secure unit in the short term, prior to establishing a property in the long term for children who display severe challenging behaviour, which would require a secure unit.

1635 Hon. J J Netto: If I understood the hon. Lady correctly, she seems to be saying that a property is being identified for the purpose, in the short term, to provide a secure unit.

1640 I understood, from the question from the last month, that some flats have already been identified and some works were in the process of being carried through in order to refurbish those flats, hence the reason why this has triggered my question today. So, let me see if we can get this right: do we have some flats, in the short term, in the private sector... I'm sorry, in Government housing stock, being refurbished, as a short term measure, for the purpose of a secure unit? Is that the case?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I said that flats have been identified, not that they have been refurbished.

1645 We are looking at identifying flats... not flats, premises, for it to be refurbished for the long term. Any short term flats are being identified but do not necessarily require refurbishment, Mr Speaker.

That is what I believe I said on the last occasion and the occasion before that.

1650 Hon. J J Netto: Perhaps, then, Mr Speaker, Hansard will say whether it was 'properties' or 'flats' but, anyway, that is a minor point which I don't want to dwell on.

Can the hon. Lady say whether they will be in a position within, perhaps, the next three months, of knowing whether there are some properties which can be used – notwithstanding the fact that some refurbishment may have to take place – and thereby use these properties as a short term basis for placing some looked-after children with severe challenging behaviour?

1655 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, in fact probably earlier, but certainly within three months.

1660 Hon. J J Netto: Could we also ask the hon. Lady, in terms of preparing for a situation where, hopefully, there will be a property in three months, notwithstanding any refurbishment works, whether some consideration has been given by, perhaps, the senior management, in this case, of the Care Agency, as to what the needs or the package that would need to be put together, in order to deal with the necessities and the circumstances of these looked-after children with severe challenging behaviour?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker that is something that we have already looked at.

1665 Predominantly the most urgent thing in that respect is training, and DCRT training has already commenced. I explained that in the first meeting of this House, Mr Speaker. I am sure that the hon. Member may recall, because I was asked questions specifically on that training.

1670 Hon. J J Netto: By all means, of course, training is a most important necessity in the equation but, given that we are considering looked-after children with severe challenging behaviour, which presumably, in addition to having severe challenging behaviour, may have emotional problems, social problems, is the Care Agency giving thought that these particular children may need, perhaps, a ratio of carers much bigger than the other one? If so, have they considered the number of carers, notwithstanding the training and the level of training that may have been obtained so far, for this purpose?

1675 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and the complement is actually being reviewed specifically for this purpose.

1680 Hon. J J Netto: Could I also ask what specialist provision will be provided for these particular looked-after children as a package?

1685 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I do not really understand the question, but I think that... Well, anyway, the answer is that the whole secure accommodation arrangements are being reviewed, both in terms of the accommodation itself, the legislation that is required and anything else that may be relevant, for Gibraltar to be able to provide secure accommodation.

Hon. J J Netto: I was not referring, Mr Speaker, in relation to any possible amendment to the Children Act for the purpose of having a secure unit because, obviously, I understand that that would be a necessity.

1690 What I meant by a specialist provision of care provision, given the nature of these particular children, whether a programme would be put in place, in terms of having educational psychologists, in terms of anger management, a whole range of different facilities that would be targeted for these particular children. That is what I meant by special care provisions, as opposed to the training, as opposed to the changes of legislation. Could the hon. Member please expand on that area?

1695 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, because all those things that the hon. Member has just mentioned are already provided for, in any event, and it would be a question of enhancing those and making those facilities available to the secure accommodation.

1700 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I understand that those services are already there because it developed as I was there. But, given the fact that we are talking about removing some of these children – and I assume some of these children are in Tangier View right now and, hopefully, will be moving on to a property out there – there will be, perhaps, a question of resources that need to be thought through because, if you have, for instance, one support of an educational psychologist attending there or some particular psychologist attending to the other premises, they may not be able to duplicate that in a different area.

1705 One of the logical reasons behind Tangier View was that the facilities would be available in one particular place but, by having different facilities which, as I expressed before, I am not against the idea – in fact, I see it as a positive move, actually – will that mean that there will be extra resources over and above to the ones that already exist?

1710 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I have said ad nauseam already, in the light of this question, the whole situation is under review, so if resources need to be provided then resources will be provided.

1715 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Lady, I mean, the whole question may be under review but what I am trying to ask the hon. Lady – which I think is a fair and sensible and reasonable question – is whether she thinks, regardless of what the review would say, whether extra resources will be needed as a result of this?

Mr Speaker: She is being asked to pre-judge the review?

1720 Hon. G H Licudi: The hon. Member is asking specifically for that, for a pre-judging of the review, also asking for an opinion by the hon. Lady. The matter is currently being investigated, it is not appropriate to ask for an opinion from Government Ministers, the Government is currently looking into the whole question of resources and, as soon as we are able to identify what is needed then that will be announced.

1725 Hon. J J Netto: Okay, Mr Speaker, fair enough, on and in relation to that, can I also ask in a slightly different supplementary question, are we still talking about, I think it was the figure that you provided in a different session, of five looked-after children are we still talking about that number? Or has the number decreased or increased, which is something that is likely to happen in areas of this issue.

1730 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I don't think that we have ever said that any secure accommodation would provide for five or four. We have never said the number. That was a reply to a specific question of how many children are at present in care, who manifest this severely challenging behaviour.

1735 The unit, obviously, would have to cater for a certain minimum looked-after children but, again, Mr Speaker, that is part of the review, because the review would establish the pattern of the need. We cannot just go by the figures that we have given – the children in care right now – we would have to see the pattern and see whether that pattern shows a consistent figure in the past, so that we are able to cater for enough children in the future.

1740 Care Agency residential homes
Recordable acts of violence

Clerk: Question 286, the Hon. J J Netto.

1745 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency Residential Homes, since this question was asked in Question No. 169/2012 to date and, if so, could the Minister provide a breakdown showing the date of the incident or incidents, whether the incident or incidents were between children or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required either at the Home or in the Hospital and for what purpose?

1750 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1755 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Yes, Mr Speaker, there has been one incident of recordable acts of violence in Care Agency Residential Homes since this question was asked in Question No 169/2012. On 2nd March 2012 there was one incident between a child and a member of staff. No medical attention was required for the incident.

1760 Hon. J J Netto: Okay, Mr Speaker.

1765 Care Agency Residential Homes
Absconding Children

Clerk: Question 287, the Hon. J J Netto.

1770 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if there have been any looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency in any of their Residential Homes who have been absconding since 9th December 2011 and, if so, could the information be provided on a monthly basis, and stating how long the absconding lasted, whether any of them may have been engaged in acts of violence against other looked-after children or staff members?

1775 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker there have been a total of 23 incidents of children absconding since 9th December 2011, 16 of which involved the same child.

1780 I am now handing out a table with the dates of the absconding, the time the absconding lasted, and whether any of them had been engaged in acts of violence against other looked-after children or staff members.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

1785 Whilst the information is coming through, perhaps, I do not know whether it will be contained in the information coming, but can the hon. Member say whether all these incidents of absconding have been within Gibraltar or perhaps some of these looked-after children have even absconded and gone in to Spain?

1790 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I cannot answer that question for certain but I can say that I have not been advised that anyone has absconded across the border. I cannot confirm that for certain but, certainly, I am usually advised when a child absconds and usually given the background, and I have not been informed that anyone has been absconding in Spain.

Hon. J J Netto: Okay, Mr Speaker, we can move on to the next one.

Elderly Persons Domiciliary Care

1800 Clerk: Question 288, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say, what is the total number of elderly persons receiving domiciliary care as at the end of February 2012?

1805 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the number of elderly persons receiving domiciliary care as at the end of February 2012 is 88.

1810 Hon. J J Netto: I'm sorry I missed the... How many?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: 88.

1815 Hon. J J Netto: 88...

Mr Speaker, obviously the figure of 88, which the hon. Lady has just given us, is a figure which is less than the figure than we left of 91 people receiving domiciliary care, as provided by the senior management of the Care Agency to me was 91.

1820 Now, leaving that aside, what I would like to ask the hon. Lady, which is I think much more important than that, is that, given that we have 88 persons who are receiving domiciliary care and given that, last month, the hon. Lady – I think it was last month – was saying in one of her answers to one of my questions that there are elderly people in the community who, I think, were not receiving any help either from the family or from the Care Agency... Shall I give way to the hon. Lady and clarify that before I proceed?

1825 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not have the answer to that question before me but, as I recall, there were no people in the community, according to our records, receiving no domiciliary care or no help from their family. I am happy to, perhaps, go back and check that but, as I recall the table, there were people who were either assisted by way of domiciliary care, assisted by way of help from their family, or by both – not by neither.

1830 Hon. J J Netto: Well, perhaps we would have to look at Hansard, but I do think to recall that there were a group of people, that they were not receiving any help, either from the extended family or from the Care Agency...

1835 Given that there has been no increase, perhaps a decrease, as I would think, in the number of people receiving domiciliary care, would it not be the case, perhaps, Mr Speaker, that the Government – obviously she does not hold the financial purse strings – but if, as the hon. Lady said just a while ago, there are so many people waiting for domiciliary care, would she not, having a collegiate Government, as they have, not inform one of her colleagues who has got the purse strings, perhaps, to ask for a bit of more money in order to allow more people to have domiciliary care?

1840 Because, at the end of the day, if there is no spare capacity to attend the needs of these people, either because Mount Alvernia is full right, perhaps help could be given in the community in order to try and give some domiciliary care. So can they undertake that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if she does, she'll be pushing at an open door.

1845 Hon. J J Netto: I'm sorry, Mr Speaker, I missed that. Will the Hon. Chief Minister repeat that?

Hon. Chief Minister: If she does, Mr Speaker, she will be pushing at an open door.

1850 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, in response to the question, first of all, I want to clarify that I am not aware when senior management informed the hon. Member as to the number of people who were receiving domiciliary care previously but, certainly, my information for the purpose of this question is that, before 9th December 2011, the number of people receiving domiciliary care was 79. That is less than the number of people receiving domiciliary care today.

1855 Obviously, Mr Speaker, I have to rely on the information that is provided to me by my senior management, but certainly that is the information that I have received.

What is significant to note, Mr Speaker, is that not only has this new Government increased the number of people who are now receiving domiciliary care in the last 100 days, but we have also increased the number of hours that are afforded to the elderly, (A Member: Hear, hear.) following individual assessment of their needs.

1860 In addition Mr Speaker, elderly people already receiving domiciliary care hours in the community, of which the maximum under the previous administration was only 2 hours a day, have also had their hours reviewed and increased, if necessary, following individual assessment of their needs.

1865 Now, to put this into context, Mr Speaker, the total number of recipients of domiciliary care prior to 9th December 2011 was 79: they were receiving a total of 420.5 hours a week. From the end of February to date, there are now 88 recipients receiving domiciliary care and they are receiving a total number of 530.5 hours a week. Thus, this is an increase of 110 hours per week, a 26.2% increase to what the previous Government was affording. (Applause)

1870 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, in relation to that particular point, let me tell the hon. Lady that the same senior management that is giving her the figures gave me the figures that there were 91 persons receiving domiciliary care, but that is not the issue here for debate.

Will the hon. Lady, therefore, not provide me a breakdown of the number of people who are now getting more hours than the 2 hours that was previously the case?

1875 Hon. S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I fail to see the relevance of that question. I do not have the exact figures of who is receiving more hours and who is receiving domiciliary care that they were not receiving before. I do not have that specific breakdown, Mr Speaker, therefore I am unable to provide it.

1880 Mr Speaker: The hon. Lady may not be in a position to provide that specific information but it does have relevance, because it is the point made by the hon. Lady... (Interjection) No, the answer was she has not got the information at hand, but I have ruled that it is relevant because she did mention the amount of hours.

Hon J J Netto: Therefore –

1885 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Can you be more specific.

1890 Hon. J J Netto: Therefore, I presume she has not got the information there available in front of her, inasmuch as to how many people now are getting more than two hours domiciliary care – I mean, does she have the information there available? No, you have not. Therefore, if I write to her, will she provide me with that information, Mr Speaker?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, absolutely, Mr Speaker. I understood the question as the hon. Member wanting to know who the people were, not the number of people. That is why I questioned the relevance.

1895 Certainly, in terms of the figures, if the hon. Member were to write to me, yes, I am happy to give him a breakdown.

1900 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, just for the sake of clarification, can the hon. Member opposite just clarify, if it has increased from 79 to 88 patients receiving domiciliary care, with an extra 120 hours per week on average, what has been done in order to enhance the service? Have more staff been employed?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, it is a combination of more people receiving domiciliary care and people who were previously receiving domiciliary care receiving more hours of domiciliary care.

1905 Perhaps I can inform the hon. Member opposite that domiciliary care is sub-contracted to a company in the private sector and these hours are then sub-contracted. There is a contract with a company in the private sector; these hours are sub-contracted to them.

1910 Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask in relation to the context of what she has just said, whether it is just the continuation of one contractor providing that particular service or there are more than one.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: At present, Mr Speaker, as I am sure the hon. Member recalls, Government is tied into a contract with a particular provider in the private sector and it is that contract under which we are working.

1915 Hon. J J Netto: Does the hon. Lady knows until when the contract lapses?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do. (Laughter)

1920 Hon. J J Netto: And would the hon. Lady, perhaps, volunteer, without me having to stand up every 5 seconds, as to when?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, Mr Speaker. the contract that the hon. Member entered into with this company expires in 2013.

1925 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. Mr D J Bossino: Does the increase in hours result in extra costs to the Government?

1930 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, they have to be paid for.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, of course they have to be paid and maybe she can confirm this point. And does she have any information available to announce what that cost amounts to?

1935 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Well, the hourly rate remains the same, so the number of hours would have to be multiplied by the cost of the service. And the price, under the contract is, I think £12.40-something – it is just over £12, I think.

1940 Care Agency Board
Meetings since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 289, the Hon. J J Netto.

1945 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state on how many occasions has the Care Agency Board met since 9th December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

1950 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there have been no Care Agency Board meetings since 9th December. One is being arranged for 28th March 2012.

1955 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Lady aware that the Care Agency Act, clause 5.2, states the Agency shall meet at least once in every three months?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I am sure that the hon. Member was also aware of that provision when the last meeting of the Care Agency Board was on 11th April 2011, Mr Speaker. (Laughter) There was no meeting in September 2011, nor in December 2011, Mr Speaker.

1960 Hon. J J Netto: I certainly don't recall that. I do recall the fact that there was one particular meeting which I could not attend but, obviously, I designated the Chief Executive of the Care Agency to take the meeting for my purposes. I do not know whether she is referring to that particular meeting or not.

1965 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker, the meeting that the hon. Member is referring to – the one that was convened but he did not attend as Chair – was that of April 2011. So, in effect, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member did not attend (Laughter) a meeting of the Care Agency Board since 26th January 2011.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Lady whether she intends to make the meetings of the Board public, as some of her colleagues have stated?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, that will be a matter for the Board.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Lady not agree with me that, and I don't know what the position was in the time of 'my Government', (Laughter) but (Interjections and laughter) a little light humour in a sea of...

But does she not agree with me that, to have not done something not in accordance with the Children Act when we were in Government does not justify the continuation of the practice now that they are in Government?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the Children Act does not dictate the meetings of the Care Agency Board.

Hon. D A Feetham: The relevant statute, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, the Lady knows exactly what I am referring to. If she wants to give an answer, she can, if she does not want to give the answer, she does not have to.

The question is a serious question. My friend, Mr Netto, has asked her whether there have been any meetings, she has said no, my friend, Mr Netto, has then said, 'Well, are you aware of the fact that the statutory obligation is three months?' She has said 'Yes, and when you were the Minister, there weren't any meetings since April!'

1990

I think it is a serious state of affairs if we are all going to be accepting that we are not going to be compliant with our statutory obligations because of what was past practice. Now I ask her again, does she not agree with me that it is not an excuse not to comply with your statutory obligations simply because there has been non compliance by a previous administration?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, can I please remind the hon. Member of my original answer, which said that one is being arranged for 28th March 2012. That is within the first quarter of this Government, Mr Speaker, in compliance with the statute.

The fact that the previous administration did not comply with its obligations under statute is a matter for them, Mr Speaker, not a matter for this Government. This Government is complying with its statutory obligations and, of course, I agree with the hon. Member that it is important to comply with statutory obligations. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, unless my maths has really gone awry – and I know that it is quite late on a Friday afternoon – if it is three months, then it should have been done by 9th March not by 28th March.

2005

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there isn't any statutory obligation to have a meeting within three months of a new Government coming in. Every three months usually means every quarter of the year, and that is precisely what my Government is doing. (Prolonged cheering and applause)

2010

Given that the hon. Member was the Minister for Justice and he refers to it as 'my Government', (Laughter) I am the Minister for Justice and other things and, therefore, I believe I have the privilege of calling it my Government as well. (Laughter) In those circumstances we are compliant with the statutory obligations.

2015

The hon. Member should be asking his colleague why it was that, in the last quarter of last year, before they retired from office – before they were sacked from office by Gibraltar – why they did not comply with the legislation. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, you see, the hon. Gentleman is wrong, I'm afraid. He has intervened and he is wrong.

There is a serious point here, and we will accept, certainly, whatever justifiable criticisms are levelled our way. The statute actually provides, according to my friend, Mr Netto, that it shall be held every three months. Now, if that is the position and the last one was in April, then, of course, there was an obligation to hold one as quickly as possible into your term of Office, not on the 28th! That's not what the statute says.

2025 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is his interpretation of the statute, which is wrong, because the statute does not say ‘as quickly as possible as you come into office. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes, and had we had a meeting on the 9th December, there would still have been a default of the legislation, because the Act says ‘every 3 months’, the previous meeting was in April of 2011, even if we had had one on the first day in office (A Member: Absolutely.) there would still have been a default.

2030 What we have done is decided that there should be – or, rather, the Care Agency has decided that there should be – a meeting every quarter, and the first quarter’s meeting is happening this month, which is within the first three months of this year. That is what is happening.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, I do not agree with that interpretation, but we’ll leave it there.

2035 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask just one more supplementary to the hon. Lady.

The hon. Lady, when I asked her whether she is considering the fact of making the meetings of the Board public, said that would be a matter for the Board. Will she, therefore, take that particular question to the Board, to the next meeting, in order to decide whether they will be making the meeting public or not?

2040 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, as is the policy of this Government and the policy of transparency, which we say did not hitherto exist, not before the 9th December, this is a matter I am happy to take to the Board. However, Mr Speaker, it is a decision that needs to be taken by the Board. It is not a decision that I can take.

2045 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, can I add to that.

The hon. Member will be aware that, clearly, the Board will be dealing with sensitive issues, issues relating to care proceedings, issues relating to children and there will be sensitive issues that perhaps ought not to be made public. So, in the consideration of that, those matters will have to be taken into account.

2050 We do not want to make the Board unworkable, but there are sensitive issues that this particular Board will have to deal with, which may make the position different to other Boards, but we take on board what the hon. Member has said and, as the hon. Lady has indicated, the matter will be taken to the Board for a decision.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, I want to – 2055 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, but I want the hon. Member to understand the sensitivities with this particular Board.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do take that into account, in a similar way as it happens with the Health Authority Board.

2060 Hon. G H Licudi: This one is generally dealing with children and more sensitivities.

Hon. D A Feetham: We certainly agree that that must be the position, and that must be right.

2065 There are possibly ways of dealing with it, by redacting names, by redacting references to circumstances but, certainly, on this side of the House, if the Government were to decide not to publish those minutes, we would not be criticising the Government for not doing so.

2070 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am certainly grateful for that, let me just point out also, it’s not just a question of redacting names in published documents. If the meetings are in public, as has been suggested, then the issue of redactions does not apply, the information becomes public and those are sensitivities. I acknowledge that the hon. Member has agreed with those sensitivities.

Overnight parking provision Identification of additional areas

Clerk: Question 304, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services advise whether the Government has identified other areas to make available for free overnight parking, other than those provided at the Europort Avenue and Bayside Road car parks?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government is presently looking into all parking areas in Gibraltar which are presently being used during the day for a specific purpose, with a view of the possibility of allowing their use by the general public overnight, as was the case with Europa – sorry, with Europort Avenue and Bayside Road car parks: these areas in question were reserved for the specific use of school teachers.

The Government will make this information public if and when areas are found to be suitable.

Hon. D J Bossino: So, presumably at this stage, the answer from the Minister is no.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the answer is that we are actually looking into other areas in Gibraltar. In fact, there are three areas that we are specifically looking into, and until we are sure that they can be used for that purpose, we prefer not to make this information public.

Hon. D J Bossino: The reason why I asked this question, Mr Speaker, is because I have received representations in relation to a specific area in Gibraltar, and there is an interest that a certain location be made available, using a similar regime – nobody wants to consult a regime – which has been implemented in relation to the car parks which have already been freely made available, or released, to the general public during certain hours. This is why I ask the question.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, we would be, actually, very grateful if he could have that information and refer it to us so that we actually take that car park area into account as part of the public consultation exercise. That is what it is, public consultation, and if Members across the floor have any suggestions then, by all means, we are happy to take them on board.

Hon. D J Bossino: Now, in relation to the public consultation exercise, once again, I think I have made this point in previous sessions of this House to the Hon. Minister. Can he confirm that it is the consultation exercise which is being carried out by the Government in relation to the major review of traffic?

Hon. P J Balban: That is correct. That is the review of the traffic plan, yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: And given that we are now on 16th March, can the Minister give me an indication as to when he envisages that he will be able to reach a final decision in relation to the various locations?

Hon. P J Balban: I believe there is a Question further on that actually asks about the Traffic Plan and what stage we are at at the moment.

Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park
Car exporting businesses

Clerk: Question 305, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2130 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services provide the House with details of the arrangements the Government has entered into with car exporting businesses, in connection with the offer of car parking facilities at the Devils Tower Road multi-storey car park?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

2135 Hon. Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government has reached an agreement with Gibraltar based motor car exporters to provide them with space in which to park their vehicles. This is in line with the policy of the new Government to generate revenue from assets which were not producing income before.

2140 Following a study carried out, it was confirmed that the car park at Devil's Tower Road was being under-utilised and it was also confirmed that there was no waiting list for residents of the area wanting to park their cars there. The decision was taken to offer space in the said car park to the Bassadone Group of companies in which to park vehicles destined for export.

2145 This should be seen in the context of both the need to generate income for the Government and also of the delay to the planned Western Beach reclamation progressed under the previous GSD administration in which the Bassadone Group were earmarked a section where their export business could be consolidated, including an area where the company could park their export vehicles. The consequences of the considerable delay in the provision of this parking base at Western Beach is an important factor that the GSLP/Liberal Administration has taken into account throughout the discussions with the company.

2150 The Bassadone Group will make a payment of £150,000 per year for the car parking arrangements. This directly releases land in other parts of Gibraltar which will now be available to the Government for development or for other purposes.

2155 At the same time, the AM Capurro Group contacted the Government in view of also looking for space to park their export vehicles. As a result of the Bassadone Group reducing the space that it occupied in Regal House car park, it was agreed that the AM Capurro Group would occupy an area of this car park in Regal House for their own export parking requirements. They would pay the Government £70,000 per annum in return for this parking facility.

2160 It is important that the Government provides assistance to the companies which are bringing in new business and employing in Gibraltar. It is also particularly important that Gibraltar Car Parks Limited, which is a huge loss-making operation set up by the previous Administration, receives some very much needed income from previously empty car parking space. The deal is, therefore, good for the taxpayer and good for Gibraltar.

2165 Hon. D J Bossino: Much of what the Minister has said was previously set out in a press statement, the Government press statement of 154/2012.

Now, what I was getting at, or driving at, in asking this question is more particulars of what specific arrangements have been entered into with the Bassadone Group. Is it a lease arrangement? Is it a licence arrangement? For how long is it expected that the Bassadone Group will be occupying the area at the multi-storey car park? Things of that nature.

2170 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, this is a licence arrangement and it is on a monthly basis.

2175 Hon. D J Bossino: I am not too sure how much space is now left in the Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park, but what is the Government's intention in relation to the usage of that car park in the future? Will it still be used as a park-and-ride, which was my Government's intention, (Laughter) when it built that construction, or does the Minister envisage that it will be used for different purposes now?

Hon. P J Balban: Well, the car park in question was never used as a park-and-ride facility. It was never up and running, that was the intention but it was never used, it never came to fruition.

2180 As I said, as part of the review we are actually looking at, where we progress... One of our manifesto commitments was, actually, to look at the possibility of building park-and-ride facilities closer to the point of entry to avoid having cars actually come into Gibraltar, and absolutely avoids the problematic Sundial roundabout. It is trying to keep them closer to the frontier area.

2185 Hon. D J Bossino: It was the GSD party's intention to use it as a park-and-ride facility – that is why it was built, so that is the whole reason for it.

Now, in terms of progression, can the Minister – I don't think he has answered the question – can he identify whether that building is now going to be used as the park-and-ride, or are they going to abandon the former Government's policy in relation to that, in relation to the multi-storey car park?

2190 Hon. P J Balban: It is, actually, too early to know, for us to be sure what the final purpose of that car park will be as, again, we are reviewing the whole traffic parking situation in Gibraltar, especially the district parking schemes. Based on that, then we will see whether this will be used as a park-and-ride or not. We still have no concrete plans at the moment.

2195 Hon. D J Bossino: Again, in terms of time, does he know when he will have those concrete plans available?

2200 Hon. P J Balban: The consultation process and, obviously, the review will take a considerable amount of time. Again, I am not sure how long this will take, but until all that process is finished, I will not be in a position to be able to tell you ideas of timescale.

2205 Hon. D J Bossino: With respect, I think the Minister may not have answered accurately. The consultation, as I understand it from his replies in this House on previous occasions, is that the consultation process has, in fact, completed, and what he is now reviewing is the data. So, can he clarify the answer?

Hon. P J Balban: In fact, in my reply to your next question I will be clarifying all these points. It features in our next question.

2210 Hon. D J Bossino: Presumably, the reason why the Government has entered into licence arrangements, as opposed to lease arrangements, with the Bassadone Group is that the licence arrangements can be determined, on a monthly basis, at the Government's will?

2215 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, obviously, it gives us – and them – enough leeway to be able to continue, or discontinue, the arrangement because, if as part of the traffic plan, we find that the car park needs to be used for another purpose then, obviously, we can discontinue the arrangements and continue to use it for what we intend its use to be.

2220 Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry Mr Speaker, staying firmly on the subject of, in respect of the area of, thank you very much.

In respect of the areas relinquished by Bassadone Group, is the Hon. Minister able to provide us with details of those areas?

2225 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, the areas which have actually been, have remained vacant is the ex-MOD trailer park, and an area up by the Bufadero.

Hon. S M Figueras: An area up by the Bufadero.

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, up by the Bufadero, where the band... it's the parade area.

2230 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, presumably there is an element of leeway in this arrangement obviously because it is a monthly licence but, one would also presume that if, Bassadone in particular, are relinquishing the use of the two areas specified by the Hon. Minister, in the event that the Government should decide that the multi-storey car park should be used for the purpose for which it was originally built, that Bassadone will have a new need for an area in which to store those vehicles which are now in the multi-storey car park. Has there been any discussion with Bassadone in respect of the potential for that difficulty in the future?

Hon. P J Balban: Well, our immediate plans for the car park... As I said, because of the review and the 2240 time it will take, we do not believe that we are going to have an immediate need to use that car park. So our idea was to capitalise on the fact that we have a car park that is not being used much and generate some income from it. Obviously in time, in the, hopefully, not too distant future, the area assigned for Bassadone, which is the Western Beach Reclamation, will be, hopefully, up and running, ready for them to move into. That is the plan.

2245 Hon. S M Figueras: Therefore, Mr Speaker, it is not a quantum leap to assume that the Government has no imminent plans for the use of the ex-MOD trailer park or, indeed, that particular area by the Bufadero?

2250 Hon. P J Balban: The Government, at the moment, is actually looking at the areas in question, and because land is not something we have a lot of, there are quite a few ideas for the areas in question.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful.

2255 Traffic Plan public consultation

Clerk: Question 306, the Hon D J Bossino.

2260 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services now provide details of the findings arising from the public consultation exercise the Government has carried out in relation to the Traffic Plan?

2265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker the Government has now completed the first stage of the public consultation process, although it must be noted that any feedback received at any point during the review, even after said public consultation period, will still be considered.

2270 It is the Government's opinion that the process of consultation needs to be fluid in this respect. All the information collected to date has now been catalogued and, once the full consultation is completed, including feedback, suggestions and comments derived from a user and trip survey, the Government will be in a better position to provide details of the findings.

2275 Hon. D J Bossino: I do not quite follow, unless this is some sort of technical jargon, and I have completely missed it... What is the Minister referring to by a user-and-what survey?

2280 Hon. P J Balban: Well, as part of the consultation process we will be actually surveying users as to what trips they regularly take, so it's a consultation exercise whereby people are actually surveyed on 'where are you going?', 'for what purpose you have got your mode of transport?', that sort of question. It is a user survey, a transport user survey.

2285 Hon. D J Bossino: I see, so you are going to be carrying out some sort of questionnaire which is going to be made available to the public at large? Yes? Is that what the Minister is referring by the 'users'?

2290 Hon. P J Balban: That's right, actually see whether we can ascertain why people choose to drive their own cars to work, as opposed to getting public transport or their bicycles, or whatever. It is to see what their customs are, how many people travel in one vehicle. I mean, do they drive with kids to school, even though it is just a ten minute walk away? Really, just to see what people's behaviour is in terms of their transport.

Hon. D J Bossino: Would he describe that as the second stage of the consultation process? The first stage, presumably, was the one that was announced in the press statement issued in January, which allowed a very small window of about two weeks, I think, up to the 30th January, within which people, interested parties –

2295 the Minister will recall the rather controversial issues that arose in the first session of this House, also very late on a Friday afternoon, in fact I think it was almost a Friday night, in relation to that, in relation to the use of that wording by the Minister.

So that would be the first stage. Now the second stage is this questionnaire which is going to be issued by his Department. Would the Minister concur with me that that is a correct analysis of the consultation process?

2300 Hon. P J Balban: The actual public consultation exercise is broken down in different stages. Initially, it was a public consultation exercise, which we launched a press release, and obviously people, anyone, could just come in and participate, inclusive of whether they were part of tenants' associations etc. So that was just a general feedback on the public.

2305 After that now, apart from the user trip survey that we are going to be carrying out as well, we are also homing in on more specific organisations, for example we are homing in on tenants' associations, management companies, we will be talking to the Chamber of Commerce, Emergency Services, and other commercial entities that actually use, or have a need to use, our roads for their business. This survey, or this consultation exercise, will cover as many across the board as it is possible to get – a true idea as to what people's requirements are and needs are, before we finally make a decision as to where we are going.

2310 Hon. D J Bossino: At what stage does the Minister intend, or does he think he will be able, to consult the entities he has just listed by way of example?

2315 Hon. P J Balban: Well as I said at the moment we have actually, we are almost through the different tenants associations. So we have actually seen most of the different tenants associations around Gibraltar, and the management boards of the managing committees, we still have a few more to meet with. Our next stage will be talking to as I said people like the Chamber of Commerce, we have also, the Bus Company, there is obviously bus rides to be included, the Taxi Association, Emergency Services, I have mentioned Emergency Services already, and also Disability Groups because we also want to get an idea as to what other people with different requirements are in need of.

2320 Hon. D J Bossino: So if I took a snapshot of the consultation exercise at the moment, you would be saying that it is in train? You are in train, you are actually carrying out the consultation at this present moment in your department.

2325 Hon. P J Balban: That is right. The consultation process is very wide and far and, obviously, it is not specific to a certain sector of the community. We want to get as wide a picture as possible, to take most people's accounts into consideration. Obviously not everyone's opinions we will be able to take those into account but we want to get at least as much feedback as possible before we actually launch what will be our traffic and parking and transport plan.

2330 Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister, in the last session of the House said, and I quote – and this is really what informed the posing of the question in the terms that it was posed – said:

2335 'Mr Speaker, the data has actually been collated by members of staff', this is the data collated as a result of, if I can, presumably, call it the first stage of the consultation process

2340 'they are actually preparing a summary spreadsheet of all the findings and once that is finished, which I hope they will be finishing shortly, that will be handed back to me and then I will be in a position to be able to give more specific details of the outcome'

Now, is the Minister at this stage able to provide those specific details – at this stage?

2345 Hon. P J Balban: The sheer amount of comments of people that we are receiving would make it impossible for me to actually share all that... Well, I mean I am willing to share a few things, as I said, so you can understand what the comments are because, obviously, there are an immense amount of comments, in all stages. But, in the interim, a few salient comments, as I said, have arisen from the consultation exercise so far, which I am happy to share with Members across the floor.

For example, one of the key problems faced by the general public is the lack of provision of visitor car

2350 parking space within the North District, especially for visitors who need to go and see family members or, even worse still, need to deliver food or even help elderly members of their family. So that is one of the biggest problems that we have, something which has kept on coming back to us. You know, 'I'm going to drop my Mum off at home. I can't stop the car anywhere, and if I do stop my car there, we can get a fine for it!' So that's one of the biggest issues we have seen so far.

2355 Another comment which has been very, very common – a very popular comment – has been the complaints of the lack of regard there has been to the pedestrian, especially along the west pavements in the vicinity of the Trafalgar Interchange because, in the Trafalgar Interchange, if you think about what the traffic interchange is, it might alleviate the flow of traffic but, in terms of pedestrian flow, anyone walking along the west pavement finds it is not a suitable area to cross. You will see people crossing anywhere on the road and there have been lots of complaints regarding that. There is actually no zebra crossing between Ragged Staff Gates all the way up to the Piccadilly Garden Bar.

2360 So these are just some of the comments that we have received. There is loads of feedback and, as I said, this has all been collated now, in spreadsheet format, for us to actually analyse in due course.

2365 Hon. D J Bossino: Will the Minister undertake to disclose the information once it is in digestible, if I can put it in those terms, format?

Hon. P J Balban: We won't undertake but we will agree to do so.

2370 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I would hazard a guess that at least 48% of the users polled, receiving the questionnaire, living outside the city limits, will be rubbing their hands with glee at the prospect of having double the number of car parking spaces at what his Government will hope will be the spectacular Commonwealth Parade Park, for which I will congratulate the Minister for the Environment if it ever comes to fruition.

2375 A Member: In due course.

2380 Hon. S M Figueras: In due course as I'm sure [inaudible], subject of course, Mr Speaker, to geotechnical surveys which have not yet been carried out. (Laughter) Unless, of course, the geotechnical surveys have: it doesn't really matter, I am not going to digress any further than that from the point. However, what I would like to ask the Minister... (A Member: Question.)

2385 I have been absorbing far too much of preambles in the last few sessions and I am afraid it is rubbing off on me.

Mr Speaker: I hope not! (Laughter)

2390 Hon. D J Bossino: One question I would ask of the Minister is whether, despite the observations that may be represented to the Government during the consultation process, whether the Government itself has clear views as to what measures or as to a number or examples of measures that it will be taking to alleviate the historic problem of the school run, the first thing in the morning, and all those other perennial issues that the community has faced, despite the huge investment by my Government during its time. (Interjections and laughter)

2395 Hon. P J Balban: Of course we have. We have great ideas for what we want to do and these will be announced. (Interjection)

Of course, and we will announce these in due course.

2400 Hon. D J Bossino: So the Minister is unable to provide us with any examples of the ideas that you are thinking about at this time.

Hon. P J Balban: That is correct: not at the present.

2405 Clerk: Question 307 –

Hon. D J Bossino: Just one final supplementary, if I may, just to confirm a point which I think he dealt with in one of his initial replies. If I, using myself as an example, have or Joe Bloggs out there, has an interest in making further representations and participates in the consultation process, which was open for that window, two weeks, in January 2012, and he wishes to make further representations, given the ‘fluidity’, using his word, of the process, can that individual still make submissions to his Department?

Hon. P J Balban: By all means, it is happening constantly. I mean, just because the consultation period, as such, ended, it does not mean that I don’t receive comments and feedback on a daily basis at the office – by e-mail or even by regular mail.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, but can he assure this House, in order to have finality to this process, can he assure this House that work is truly underway in relation to the production of the digestible information, like the spreadsheet information which he agreed to make available to me, which will show the results of, as I understand it, the first stage of that consultation process.

Mr Speaker: I think the Minister did say what the hon. Member is asking. He asked for assurance and ‘truly’ I think is rather pushing it more than need be.

2425 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: As opposed to ‘not truly’?

2430 Hon. D J Bossino: Well, well no. Fine, I will withdraw that if it suggests that he was in any way being mendacious previously. I am not suggesting that.

Mr Speaker: No, no, I know, but I was suggesting that the question need not be put, as it is pushing at the same point.

2435 Hon. D J Bossino: I just do not understand... There has to come a point where there has to be finality in terms of receipt of representations from the general public and, in fact, the Government was very clear in its first press statement when they said that they would allow a period of, from issue of the press statement – which, from memory, I think was 15th January – to 30th January, within which representations would be welcomed and received from the public as part of what is now being described as the first stage of that public consultation exercise.

2440 What one would expect is that, after 30th January deadline that would be closed and his Department would be carrying out the necessary administrative work in order to produce the summaries spreadsheet which the Government is, at this stage, not able to provide this House or me with. So I am just slightly concerned that the Government is still in receipt of the data, if you like, which will result in the spreadsheet information, given the fluidity of which the Minister referred to earlier.

2445 So, all I want is the Minister’s assurance that there will be finality to this and that, at some stage in the not too distant future, which is what he said in the session on 15th February, he will be in a position to say ‘Look, my Department has finished the spreadsheet information, the collation, and therefore the production of the spreadsheet information, and it is available.’

2450 Hon. P J Balban: It appears as if he is making... there is actually implicit criticism of the civil servants, that they are actually taking too long in doing this. I mean, this is something –

2455 Hon. D J Bossino: Will the hon. Gentleman give way? No, it is neither, certainly not explicit – and neither was it intended to be implicit – criticism of anybody. I am just simply trying to address the issue that this cannot continue ad nauseam and there has to be finality to this. I just sensed that, given the fact that there was initially finality and now there is fluidity, and collation on the spreadsheet – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister)

2460 Hon. P J Balban: There will be finality on this issue, obviously. When we actually have finalised this then we will give you more information on it. But, I mean, we cannot be pushed to finalise this sooner. What we want to ensure is that this public consultation exercise is what we intend it to be, which is thorough, and takes the time that it needs before we actually take a final decision.

2465 We don't want to rush things, or have to rush things, just in order to be able to present findings.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, on the Hon. the Chief Minister's recommendation, which I refuse to let pass by: in an attempt to define 'soon', are you able to commit to a timeframe within which you expect the process will be finalised and you will be able to publish the findings?

2470 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker the word 'soon' is a word which is to be found in the English Dictionary and has a natural and ordinary meaning. I refer him to the definitions provided by the previous incumbent of the post of Chief Minister, in the past four years. He will find many exchanges in Hansard as to what that word means.

2475 Hon. S M Figueras: And for the avoidance of doubt, Mr Speaker, is the Hon. the Chief Minister saying that he intends to conduct the business of Chief Minister in the same way as our leader did in his time.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, but I intend to continue speaking the same language, which is the one that the hon. Gentleman has asked about.

2480 He has asked for the definition of the word 'soon', and the definition of the word 'soon' is in the dictionary. It is, in fact, a question he therefore cannot ask because there is a published definition and there is, in the lexicon of his party, a definition which I am sure is the one that he believes is the correct one – or is it he is saying that his party defined the word 'soon' in the wrong way?

2485 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, struggling though the Hon. the Chief Minister may be at this time on a Friday afternoon to understand the context of the question that I asked, to clarify just a little bit further, Mr Speaker, all I wanted to do was to try and define, for the purposes of this exercise and in this House in this particular context what meaning we are going to give to the word 'soon', be it end of March, end of April, end of... If you are unable to do so, Mr Speaker, then you are unable to do so.

2490 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker the word 'soon' has a definition, the words 'end of March' have a definition, 'end of April' have a definition etc. If it had been 'end of March' or 'end of April' then that would have been the answer. The answer is 'soon' and the hon. Gentleman can make up his mind for himself of what that will mean, in effect, in the context of what is happening here this afternoon.

2495 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I have the benefit of being one of the newest faces in this House and I am not prone to pushing the matter. I am not prone to pushing the matter any further unnecessarily.

2500 Mr Speaker: Thank you

Hon. S M Figueras: It is obvious that the Hon. the Chief Minister does not want to commit his Government to a specific timeframe, but it would be far more helpful for him just to say so.

2505 Hon. G H Licudi: Neither did your Government for sixteen years, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: The Hon. the Chief Minister does not want to commit his Government to a different definition of the word 'soon', other than that which is published in the Oxford English Dictionary, which is the one I am happy to adopt.

2510 Mr Speaker: I think that – Order! I think we are ready to move to the next Question.

Clerk: Question 307 – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

2515 The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Point of clarification. The word used was 'finish' – or words used were 'finishing shortly'. I don't know whether that changes matters? (Laughter)

2520 Mr Speaker: Is that any sooner than soon? Next Question, please.

2525 Traffic network faults and vandalism
Technical Services audit systems

Clerk: Question 307, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2530 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Technical Services confirm whether there are any audit systems in place at Technical Services with the purpose of identifying vandalism of, and faults developing throughout, the traffic network?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

2535 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, Technical Services has a highways inspection system in place that involves scheduled inspections of our entire road network for any defects and faults. This includes not only roads but also passageways, lanes, footways, as well as bridges, tunnels and any other structures that could be of concern to users of our roads. There is no system, as such, exclusively for vandalism, but any issues arising from this are also picked up as part of the safety inspections.

2540 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Hon. Minister. Is he satisfied that the current system of the highways inspections system is appropriate and adequate?

2545 Hon. P J Balban: This system is actually what we have inherited at the time. I mean, I have actually been in consultation with the Department: we might have to tweak it slightly but, for the moment in time, I am satisfied – reasonably satisfied – that it can progress.

2550 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful.

2555 Factories Inspectors
Inspections during February 2012 and findings

Clerk: Question 308, the Hon. J J Netto.

2560 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many inspections during February 2012 did the Factories Inspectors conduct, showing the industry group targeted, whether any possible contravention has been incurred to the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation by any private company, a Gibraltar Government workplace or of the MOD and whether legal advice is being sought??

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety, and Technical Services.

2565 Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, two inspections on private companies were carried out during the requested period, and both were construction related. No major contraventions to the Factories Act or its subsidiary legislation were identified, and no legal advice had, or has been, sought.

2570 Hon. J J Netto: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2575 Factories Inspectors
Investigations of accidents at work during February 2012 and results

Clerk: Question 309, the Hon. J J Netto.

2580 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if any investigation of accidents at work has been carried out in February 2012 by the Factory Inspector, showing the industry group involved, and whether such investigation may have lead to prosecution or to changes to the workplace involved?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety, and Technical Services.

2585 Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): No, Mr Speaker, no accident investigation has been carried out during the requested period.

2590 Accidents at work
Reports during February 2012

Clerk: Question 310, the Hon. J J Netto.

2595 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state if there have been any reported accidents at work during February 2012, showing the industry group involved and stating which ones were reportable, major and fatal, if any?

2600 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety, and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, it is premature to provide an answer to this question, as the collating of the notification of accident reports for the month of February has not been completed.

Prohibition and Improvement Notices
Number issued and reasons during January/February 2012

Clerk: Question 312, the Hon. J J Netto.

2625

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and Safety state how many Prohibition and Improvement Notices were issued in the month of January and February 2012, if any, broken down by month and industry group, and specifying the reason, or reasons, for issuing the notice in the period which may have brought operations to a halt, until the Inspector was satisfied that the correct standard had been duly complied with?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Traffic, Health and Safety and Technical Services.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand over to him.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 312

Month	Prohibition Notice	Improvement	Industry
January	1	0	Construction
Total	1	0
February

The Prohibition Notice in January was served for not complying with certain provisions of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations, the Construction (Design, Management, Health, Safety & Welfare) Regulations and the Management of Health & Safety at Work Regulations.

The operations were halted for 3 Days.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, at face value at least, what seems to be emerging here is that there is a preponderance by the Factory Inspector to inspect or to carry out most of the work, if not all their time, in terms of the construction industry.

There is very little information that I have been able to gather so far whether time is made available by the Factory Inspector to look to any other industry group or, indeed, in the Government workplace – because it comes under the definition of their involvement – or, indeed, any work place under the Ministry of Defence. Therefore, could the Hon. Minister mention whether, in the nature of the work that the Factory Inspectors are conducting, there is a preponderance just to look at the construction industry or to look at every single industry, including Gibraltar Government and the Ministry of Defence?

Hon. P J Balban: The Factories Inspectorate... the problems we have with the Factories Inspectorate, with the Department, is that there are two members of staff, and because of the amount of work required every time there is an accident at work or what have you – especially what happened in the North Mole – a vast amount of their time is actually channelled towards preparing for the case.

Hence this is the problem we have with them but, yes, they do tend to be quite strong in terms of the construction but they also get involved... we have involved them in other aspects... We involved them in the GSLA swimming pool to give us a – (Interjection) That was also the other part. They actually went to look at whether it was as a result of an accident. There was no accident involving persons and there was a collapse of the duct system, and they were involved in that, too.

Hon. J J Netto: I accept, Mr Speaker, that, obviously, if there is an accident the Factory Inspector, by necessity, they will attend and conduct an investigation, and I am sure they will even have some advice to give to the particular authority and management in that particular place.

I also accept the fact that, by tradition, the Factory Inspector will probably use most of their time to the construction industry, which is one of the industries which tends to have, perhaps, more accidents, and their employers seem to cut corners more than other industries.

Having accepted all of that, and acknowledging all of that, nevertheless the picture that seems to be emanating is that there is very little time that the Factory Inspector is dedicating to all the other industry groups and very little time even to workplaces of the Government and the MOD. Is that the case?

Hon. P J Balban: Well, it is even worse than that because of what we inherited... In fact, what the Factory Inspectorate do is they are just a reactive group. They just respond to accidents and reports.

What is completely lacking is the proactive side of things and this is, unfortunately, something which we inherited and also we will be reviewing.

What is another very important part of health and safety is actually by way of education, and practically getting involved with companies, as they set up, to give them advice. That part of things is also missing: this is what we have actually come to discover when we took office.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I accept that, but given that in the month of February there were two inspections of the construction industry only, and if I remember correctly in the month of January it was a similar situation that the inspection carried was also on the construction industry. Is there not a picture emerging where the only inspection being carried out month after month, after month, after month, despite there being only two Factory Inspectors, is only the construction industry? The point I am making is do they have in their sight, in the months of March, April, May, June, July, as far as inspections are concerned, targeting other industry groups, other workplaces in the Government, other workplaces in the MOD?

In fact, in a very similar vein, in the sense that the construction industry tends to have one of the highest levels of accidents, probably – and I am talking from memory now – the second one that has the highest rate of accidents in the workplace is the dry docks. I cannot remember now the companies working down there – dry docks, no, Gibdock... By the very nature of the activity that goes on, it would seem to me, at face value, that they would bring their inspections into that industry group because, by necessity, that is another industry group that requires inspection, so are we going to have a situation emerging where only the construction industry will be inspected?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the practical aspects of the work that is being done at the moment has not changed since 9th December.

The hon. Member has indicated that that is an aspect that is being looked at – and there may be merits in what the hon. Member opposite is saying – that is a matter that has been looked at. But it has not changed since 9th December, so it is exactly the same practice that his Government was implementing. It is unfortunate, perhaps, that his Government did not give the same level of importance to Health and Safety issues as we were urging when we were in Opposition and which we will provide now that we are in Government.

The hon. Member will recall that one of the issues I raised while I was in Opposition was the fact that a vacancy for a Health and Safety Inspector during the course of his Government had been advertised and then removed, as a result of somebody who had retired. On numerous occasions I asked in this House what was happening and, constantly, for many months, possibly even years, I was told the whole position was under review. The fact is that the practice continues; the fact is that the department was undermanned; and the fact is that the matter is being looked at at the moment, with a view to redressing the situation.

2705 We have been in office... 100 days? 99 days? On Sunday: 100 days. We have done more in 100 days than the previous Government had done in 16 years (Interjections) on many matters!

2710 In fact, Mr Speaker, I am very proud to form part of this Government – this young and energetic Government – and hon. Members will have seen (Applause) only yesterday that we published a list of all the manifesto commitments that we have done in 100 days. (Interjections) Seventy one commitments already carried out! it is the result of tireless, day in, week in, week out, work by this effective and energetic Government. We will continue as we have started and the results will bear fruit. Not only will we see the fruits of these three months, Gibraltar will see the fruits of the next four years and the hon. Members will thank us for it. (Applause)

2715 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I fear that the contribution the Hon. Minister for Justice has just made is a simple smokescreen not to answer my question. My question is a very simple question, which he has not addressed, and the question is whether it is the policy of his Government, in subsequent months to come, that inspection will only be carried out on the construction industry?

2720 That has got nothing to do about vacancies and whether they have done so much in 100 days. The question is, if he wants to address it, or the Minister himself: whether, in months to come, inspections will be just of the construction industry, yes or no?

Hon. P J Balban: No, that is not the policy of the Government.

2725 Clerk: That brings us to the end of answers to Oral Questions, and now Answers to Written Questions, the hon. the Chief Minister.

Orders of the Day

BILLS FOR FIRST AND SECOND READING

A Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2011
Second Reading carried

1. The Hon. the Chief Minister to move:

The Second Reading of the Supplementary Appropriation (2010/2011) Bill 2012. (B01/12)

5 Clerk: The Second Reading of the Supplementary Appropriation (2010/2011) Bill 2012.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

10 Hon. Members will note that this Supplementary Appropriation Bill seeks to provide retrospective appropriation cover for additional expenditure incurred in the financial year 31st March... year ended, sorry, 31st March 2011. It therefore represents additional expenditure incurred by the previous administration, which was over and above the £7 million of supplementary funding that was provided for in Head 15 of the approved estimates for that year.

15 Hon. Members will already have seen the statements tabled at the last meeting of Parliament on 15th March 2012, showing how this £7 million of supplementary funding provision was applied. The Supplementary Appropriation cover now being sought, under this Bill, is for further expenditure incurred during the year amounting to £8.5 million under the Consolidated Fund and further expenditure incurred under the Improvement and Development Fund of £9.3 million.

20 Mr Speaker, in view of the fact that this Bill is for retrospective appropriation cover for additional expenditure incurred by the previous administration, and a breakdown of this is included in the explanatory memorandum to the Bill itself, I do not propose to add anything further. However, I invite the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition to provide such further information to this House as he may wish, in support of the supplementary funding, as this relates to additional expenditure incurred during his own time as Chief Minister.

25 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

30 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, first of all, as I rise, may I congratulate him for the first occasion on which he substantively moves a Bill in this Parliament, as Leader of the Government side.

As he rightly says, given that this House is approving expenditure that we incurred and that, indeed, relates entirely to the, not to the current financial year but, indeed, the financial year before that – the previous financial year – Mr Speaker, he is right in surmising that we would be supporting the Bill, which we are.

35 Mr Speaker, the information, as to the detail of the expenditure, does not need me from the Opposition benches to support, to provide him with information. The Financial Secretary will be able to give him, obviously, as much information as he wants. He is, of course, aware that there is a fair amount of wiggle room and margin available to the Government, as to what moneys from the Supplementary Funding Vote, and from virement, are used, and therefore what elements of expenditure are brought to this House on a Supplementary Appropriation Bill.

40 So, I presume that they have made those selections, in other words which items: I am sure the Financial Secretary has invited him, as he used to invite me, to consider how the existing Supplementary Funding Vote and the virement possibilities should be deployed (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) and how Department... to what – I'll give way to him in a moment – and to what Heads departmental savings, more particularly, can be deployed. Therefore, there will have been an element of discretion on their part, which matters not because I believe it has always worked that way, as to what items precisely are shown as requiring supplementary funds. But we will be supporting the Bill, the timing of which presumably responds to the fact that there was no meeting of Parliament after the summer last year in which the Supplementary Bill could have been taken, which is when it normally would have been taken – but, anyway, we support the Bill.

50 Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merit of the Bill?
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

55 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just to make this comment, first to acknowledge the congratulations of the hon. Gentleman, and, second, to say that what has happened in respect of this Bill is that we have caused to be re-published the Bill that was published during the time of his administration, which was not held over, so any discretions were therefore exercised by the hon. Members opposite at the time that those were available to them, with the Financial Secretary's guidance. And it is, as far as I'm concerned, as far as the 60 Government is concerned, exactly the same Bill that was published, which needs to be passed for the reasons that he is fully aware of.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2011 be read a second time.

65 Those in favour (Members: Aye.); those against. Carried.

Clerk: The Supplementary Appropriation (2010/2011) Act 2012.

A Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2011

Committee stage and Third Reading agreed

70 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee stage and the Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

75 Mr Speaker: Committee stage and Third Reading will be taken today.

Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act
First Reading carried

2. The Hon. the Chief Minister to move:

85 A Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act. (B03/12)

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

90 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act be read a first time.

95 Those in favour (Members: Aye.); those against. Carried.

Clerk: The Gibraltar Savings Bank (Amendment) Act 2012.

Bill for an Act to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act
Second Reading carried

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

105 Mr Speaker, this Bill amends the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act in two ways. Firstly, it clarifies the position regarding the investment of deposits made in the Savings Bank, from the issue of bonds and debentures. And, secondly, it provides for the Financial Secretary to take account of the maturity profile of deposits in the Savings Bank when considering the maturity profile of corresponding investments.

Mr Speaker, as the Act currently stands, under section 7.(1), deposits in the Savings Bank may be made

110 either as ordinary deposits or as investment deposits. However, under section 7A of the Act, deposits can also be made by investors through the purchase of bonds and debentures. As regards the corresponding investment of these deposits, the Savings Bank Act, clearly sets out how deposits are to be invested, both in the case of ordinary accounts, under section 11.(1) of the Act, and in the case of investment accounts, under section 11C of the Act. However, there is no clear provision in the Act for the investment of deposits made in bonds and debentures.

115 The new section 11D now being proposed in this Bill, corrects this anomaly by making a clear provision for the investment of moneys from the issue of bonds and debentures.

Mr Speaker, under the existing provisions in section 13.(3) of the Act, all deposits in the Savings Bank must be invested in cash, or near cash deposits, in terms of protection of their capital value. This restriction has no longer – sorry, is no longer – considered to be appropriate, in the context of this Government’s 120 commitment to the expansion of the role of the Gibraltar Savings Bank. It is this Government’s view that, in directing the investment of deposits in the Savings Bank, the Financial Secretary should take account of the maturities of such deposits and, where considered appropriate, consider matching those against investments of corresponding maturities, in order to take advantage of the relatively higher levels of interest that longer term investments can attract.

125 The existing provision under section 13.(3) is, therefore, being replaced by a new section 13, which does exactly that, Mr Speaker. It increases the scope available to the Financial Secretary, for the investment of deposits in the Savings Bank, and provides for the matching of the maturity dates of investments against the maturity dates of deposits.

130 Mr Speaker, hon. Members should also note that the Government intends to rebuild the reserves of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and, in this respect, the annual surpluses will henceforth be retained within the Savings Bank Fund, in order to increase the capital base of the Bank.

I commend the Bill to the House.

135 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. P R Caruana: Obligated, Mr Speaker.

140 Well, Mr Speaker, first of all, the hon. Member is wrong when he has just asserted that the present Act makes no provision for the investment of moneys deriving from bonds and debentures. If he looks at the existing Gibraltar Savings Bank Act, he will see that section 2 defines the term ‘Deposits in the Savings Bank’, and that reads,

145 ‘means moneys placed in ordinary and investment deposits under section 7 and all moneys received by the Savings Banks from the issues of bonds and debentures’.

150 So, moneys received from the issues of bonds and debentures are deemed to be deposits in the Savings Bank, and therefore are covered by the existing Act, by that provision in it, which deals with how moneys it deposits, how deposits in the Savings bank, need to be dealt with, particularly by section 13.(3), which is the one that they are repealing today – one of the ones that they are repealing today, which provides for how those should be invested. But, anyway Mr Speaker, the Bill purports to repeal section 13.(3) of the existing Act, which we introduced by Act number 15 of 2008. And just for the purposes, if the House will indulge me, of illustrating my points, I would just like to read, for the purposes of the debate, Hansard, what section 13.(3)
155 that we are repealing by this Bill if it was passed in this form, what that clause says. It says

‘notwithstanding any other provision of this Act the deposits in the Savings Bank, which includes, as I have just illustrated, moneys from bonds and debentures, and any other moneys of the Savings Bank shall be employed at interest in cash deposits or in such other manner as the Financial Secretary is satisfied is equivalent thereto in terms of protection of their capital value’.

160 We are repealing that. Therefore, if that is repealed, cash deposits no longer need to be in cash or cash equivalent. But we are not restoring – the hon. Members are not proposing to restore – the statutory requirement that there should be a reserve buffer. In other words, we put in section 13.(3) as a counterweight to the fact that we were removing the section that created the need for a statutory reserve. In other words, there was a need for a statutory reserve, I think it was 10%. We wanted that statutory reserve to fall into the 165 general reserve of the Government and not sit in the Savings Bank. That reserve was there, principally, as a first buffer against loss of money.

170 Loss of money could only really come from loss of capital value of investment, and we said, right, in order to eliminate the possibility of the event occurring for which the reserve requirement existed – which we are removing – let us eliminate the possibility of the event happening. So we said, now you cannot invest in investments that might suffer a loss in the market, now you can only invest in cash or near cash and in a way where the capital value of it is not at risk.

175 If the hon. Members want to remove that section, which is section 13.(3) that they are repealing, then at the very least they should restore the position in the Act to what it was, when that section was put in and the previous one taken out, which was that they require, that the Bank requires a reserve of 10% of the value of deposits. In effect, what they have done is that they have removed our section providing, as it does, a safeguard for the fact that we removed the need for the reserve. So they have removed the safeguard, without restoring the need for the reserve, which is what we introduced the safeguard for, that they are now removing.

180 Furthermore, Mr Speaker... and, therefore, the hon. Members may wish to consider, if they want to restore, as a matter of policy, the position of the Act as it was before we did the changes in 2008, they should go the whole hog and restore the capital reserve requirement.

185 Further, Mr Speaker, the effect of the removal of section 13.(3) is that, when read with the new section 11D and the permissive nature of new section 13A, it results in several possibilities. We cannot say whether the hon. Members will do it, or not, but certainly it is open to them, in the future, to cause the Bank to make investments that will result in capital loss and it is all very well for the hon. Member to say that there is a section there that requires the financial sector to match maturity dates with deposits, but maturity timings and maturity synchronisation and co-ordination cannot be confused with risk of loss. In other words, you can match your assets and your liabilities as to time, in other words, if you have to pay back £15 million of deposits in December 2013, you want to make sure that you have got £15 million of cash available to do it. So you buy an investment that matures at the same time, or just before, and then you have got your money.

190 But that is maturity synchronisation. Quite separate is the question of whether, in the meantime, your £15 million investment has suffered a loss in the market, because interest rates have gone up and, therefore, the capital value of bonds has gone down and when you come to sell it, it is... unless you match to the redemption date. If you match to the redemption date, that is a different matter because it is redeemed at par, but if you do not, then you might have the.... It is true that most matchings are done against redemption dates. 195 It is possible, by use of hedging and things, to try and match, other than at redemption date, but that would be an unusual transaction to perform. Most matching – conventional matching – is done to redemptions at par and therefore that is less likely to be an issue.

200 The other effect, Mr Speaker, that we think it opens the door to, as the Bill is drafted – and I have in mind the hon. Member's press release recently, which opened with the words – I think you were issuing an accumulator bond or something – and the opening words were something like: pursuant to... the Government's policy of extending the role of the Savings Bank, or words to that effect (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) – expanding the role... I have that in mind and, of course, one does not know... one does not know, on this side of the House, until the Government has made an announcement about that, what the expanded role of the Savings Bank is and how that will happen. For example, we do not know whether the 205 expanded role of the Savings Bank that they have in mind will extend, or might extend, to actually making commercial or private loans to people. But given the removal of the need to invest the moneys of the Savings Bank in cash or near cash, and in a way that does not jeopardise its capital value, given the removal of that, in juxtaposition with all the other provisions of the Bill and the existing provisions of the Act, the other existing provisions of the existing Act, it leaves it open to the Savings Bank to lend its deposits to Government or 210 Government companies or, indeed, to private-sector borrowers and we are certainly opposed to Savings Bank moneys being used in that way, without investors being very clear that that is what their money is being used for, even though we understand that, of course, the liabilities of the Savings Bank are guaranteed by the Government, because this would be a form of contingent liability.

215 We are in favour of Government participating in a private bank, or in a wider bank in Gibraltar, and we would hope that, at some point, the Government may bring forward a policy initiative of that sort, but we would wish to do it in a way that does not expose the Consolidated Fund to unlimited quantities of contingent financial liabilities because that is... in our view, might put at risk the fiscal stability of Gibraltar.

So, Mr Speaker, we are doubly surprised by the fact that they have repealed section 13.(2), which is the one that provides for the risk, without restoring the reserve, which was the risk that we are... not least because they have been so heavily critical of that in the past. The hon. Member – I do not remember if he did it himself, he may well have done, but certainly his erstwhile leader used to, when he was Leader of the Opposition – was highly critical of the fact that we had removed the statutory reserve requirement and yet here is a Bill in which they reverse us, but without going so far as to reversing... putting back what they were so critical that we removed, which is a further reason why we think this Bill is objectionable, technically for the reasons that I have expressed, but politically also for the reason that I am now expressing.

So, Mr Speaker, in summary, we will oppose this Bill, unless, of course, the hon. Members feel that there is merit in anything that I have said, and may wish to reflect upon it prior to the Committee stage, in which case, of course, we will rethink our position, depending on what they do: it reverses the safeguards that we put in place to remove the reserve requirement, I will not repeat that, but the reversal of a safeguard point, without restoring the safeguard, it exposes the Gibraltar Savings Bank to the possibility of business which could reduce the financial stability, both of the Savings Bank and of the Government. It increases the Government's exposure and it opens the door for Savings Bank money being lent or used by other than in simple investment placing and, whilst that might not be inappropriate in certain circumstances, we do not believe that this Bill creates with sufficient clarity and transparency the architecture, the statutory architecture, for a widening of the role of the Savings Bank into any form of lender, other than in the form of simple investment, by placing money on deposit, or by purchasing with savers' money market investments.

As I say, we are not opposed to the idea of a Gibraltar Savings Bank participation in a wider role. It will not be the first state-owned bank that deals with business of that sort, but it would have to be much more transparent and I think it would require more specific legislative provision, before this side of the House could support the Savings Bank being used for that purpose, than is contained in this Act at present and even more so in this Act, as it would remain after amendment in accordance with the terms of this Bill, if it is passed in this form.

So we regret that we cannot support this Bill for those reasons.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for the views that he has expressed to the House.

The last thing I said before I sat down was that, as a matter of policy, the Government does intend to rebuild the reserves of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and, in that respect, the annual surpluses will henceforth be retained within the Savings Bank Fund, in order to increase the capital base of the Bank.

That, Mr Speaker, will have the effect of rebuilding what the hon. Gentleman has called a 'buffer' today, which was the buffer provided by this requirement in law, before the Amendment Act 2008, that there should be 10% of the capital of the Bank in reserve. The hon. Gentleman is right, this was one of the issues taken in the debate in 2008, when it was the Leader of the Opposition then, now the Minister for Labour, who was talking about this 10% buffer. He said at the time that there was no need for such a buffer in law, because of the other issue that he has alluded to during the course of the debate this morning, namely that the liabilities of the Bank are already guaranteed wholly under the provisions of the law.

Mr Speaker, we are taking the view that we do want there to be that buffer, we want it to be there as a matter of policy but, of course, if we legislate for that buffer today, we would have to transfer funds into the Savings Bank, so as a matter of policy there is agreement across the floor of the House, legislatively we do not think it is something that can be done today.

The amendments that are proposed, in any event, are not intended to give power to the Government. The hon. Gentleman will see that they are about giving power to the Financial Secretary and it is the Financial Secretary's discretion that will be relevant, except, of course that, under section 11D, there is a double lock. The Financial Secretary has to make a determination and there has to be approval from the Government of what determination it is that the Financial Secretary has considered to be prudent.

Mr Speaker, for those reasons, although we hear what the hon. Gentleman says, we are satisfied that there will not be any cause for concern in respect of these amendments, that they will assist –

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member give way just before he sits?

Hon. Chief Minister: – in the expansion of the Savings Bank and, before I commend the Bill to the 275 House, I give way to the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. P R Caruana: I am grateful to the hon. Member.

280 So, in effect, what he is telling the House, that he is now relying on the arguments that I used to pass section 15, section 11.(3) which they were very critical of and did not then accept so, at the time, they did not accept it, they were heavily critical of it and now they rely on it to perpetuate the position which I introduced and which they were then very critical of. It is not an elegant position. I do, however, acknowledge that doing what I considered to be the right thing – if that is the view that they are of – which is restoring the position to what it was before I did what they disapproved of at the time... but they disapproved of both what I did and the reasons for doing it. So they cannot now rely on the reasons, whilst reversing what I did! I acknowledge 285 that that would require an injection of capital to restore the capital, the 10% buffer.

Of course, they have got to bear in mind that a policy is not the same as a statutory requirement. They also have to bear in mind that, in the current market conditions, particularly when most investments are held in cash, or near cash, and even if they were held in bonds, the market volatility is now so reduced, because interest rates are so statically low, that the scope for capital growth, which is what the reserve... the Gibraltar Savings Bank makes a loss on its ordinary activities, because, basically, it pays out a higher rate of interest than it can earn in the market. So, it cannot make enough capital gain to restore that loss, unless it is going to lower the rate of interest very significantly that it pays to bond and account holders. Therefore, the scope for there being surpluses, which, as a matter of policy, they will leave to gradually restore the buffer, is the emperor's clothes – they are not going to materialise. It will be 20 or 30 years before – in current market conditions, anyway, and possibly never, if they do not reverse the high interest rates that it pays against the low... the high interest rate that it pays to depositors, as against the low interest rate that it receives on its investments – it might never return a profit that would build up a reserve.

Mr Speaker, I would much rather see the hon. Members... I acknowledge there are, as the hon. Member knows, the hon. Member could easily transfer from the reserves this sum of money but, in any event, if they are not willing to do that as a matter of policy, which is what I would recommend them to do, I would... this Bill is not politically contentious, unless it is for specific reason. We do believe there are specific reasons, Mr Speaker, and I believe that the hon. Members should at least write into this Bill a statutory requirement to restore the reserve to 10% within a certain period of time. In other words, I acknowledge that there may be reasons, particularly in the context of all the things that are going on on the capital projects front, and things of that sort, where the Government may now not want to return 50... I do not know what it would be. I have lost track of the figures of the Savings Bank. I do not know what the amount of the deposits are.

We had exempted the Government deposits from reckonability from the reserves, so it is not the Government... The Government and Government company deposits are not reckonable; it is only the external deposits, the savers' deposits. Anyway, it is a sum of money which may be significant. I acknowledge that they might not want to put it in place overnight, but I think it would send the correct signal if the Government were to amend this Bill so that it said that the deposit... there must be... by a certain date, which I would suggest should be no more than three years forward from now, the reserves should have been restored to the effect of the old section... I do not remember the old section number. Anyway, the section... I think it was 13... I think it was, in the old Act... No, I do not have a note of the number, but it was 10%. I am almost certain it was 10% by the end of December 2015 or whatever, three years from now is allowing yourselves a margin. Otherwise, Mr Speaker, it will never happen. It will never happen. No Government will have the financial discipline to do it, no Government will feel the need to do it and, in the end, what we are doing is we are operating a Savings Bank in the way we used to before when it would make losses or profits, but in market conditions without the possibility of profit and without a buffer.

I can justify that more easily than they can because, of course, I did it. They opposed the dismantlement of that very structure. But not even I was willing to do the position... Not even we were willing to bring about the position that this Bill brings around. (Interjection) Well, yes, because we were not concerned with there not being a reserve, provided the funds were not at risk and, provided the funds were not at risk was delivered by section 13.(3), which you are now repealing, so the funds can now be at risk, and yet you have not restored the reserve requirements. We said we were only willing to remove the reserve provided that the funds are not at risk.

So I just leave it to the hon. Members. If they leave it as it is, then we will not be able to support the Bill and they will have to carry it with their own majority, if they are content with that. Then that is entirely a matter for them.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, just dealing with those points before I commend the Bill, we do not share that vision of what will happen in respect of the re-establishment of the reserves of the fund at 10%, or perhaps even more than that, on the basis of our keeping annual surpluses. The hon. Gentleman knows that we have a different vision of what the expansion of the Savings Bank should be. The effect today is that transferring 10% might amount to a figure near £30 million. For the reasons that he has alluded to, having to do that today in respect of capital projects ongoing etc would affect, of course, the net debt and gross debt ratios and that is not something that we consider to be possible, given the economy that we have inherited.

Mr Speaker, sometimes he needs to understand that a challenge from him, saying that 'this will never happen', is perhaps more binding on us than even a piece of legislation, so there is the gauntlet!

The policy will be to re-establish this reserve. It is not that we are accepting his argument at the time. It is that part of his argument was always, of course, legally right – and that was never the issue – that there was a reserve... Excuse me, there was a guarantee in respect of deposits in the Savings Bank – that is already provided for in the law. His argument was that there was no need for a buffer because of that. He did not go on to say 'and therefore, in particular, now that we are doing less risky business...' His argument was – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and I have got the debates and I do not see him connecting it in what I have read of the debates. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) He was simply saying there was no need for such a buffer in a bank which is already wholly guaranteed.

So, Mr Speaker, we take the view that this is not something that has to be written into law at this time. We take the view that it is something that cannot be written into law at this time for the reasons of the amounts involved. Even writing it into law with a future date, should we be wrong about how quickly it is possible to re-establish the fund, or should the Bank grow so greatly that 10% might be an even larger figure, it is not something that, at this stage, we are able to commit to in legislation. But let it be known, Mr Speaker, that him having said it will never happen is a good reason for us making sure that it does, and I commend the Bill.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the hon. Member give way for 30 seconds? I promise not to extend myself very much further. Thank you. I am obliged to him.

Mr Speaker, of course, the wisdom of having a reserve of 10% and the need of having a reserve as large as 10% depends very much on the nature of the activities that the Bank is going to undertake. For example, if it is going to lend money at risk, then the need for the reserve is clearly higher than if all it is going to do is buy market investments. So I am not standing on the figure of 10%. The figure of 10% was there. I think it was always excessive for the way that the Savings Bank used to deal with its money, anyway. There would have to be a catastrophic market loss really.

We reserve judgement. We think the hon. Members are politically wrong in the view that they are taking but, as for the quantum and the need for a reserve and the quantum of that need, we acknowledge that it depends a little bit on what they do with the Bank and how they change the role of the Bank and the nature of the riskiness, or how they deploy the money, either in private lending or in the speculative nature of investments that they may make with it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in fact, in his speech and reply, the hon. Gentleman said this, which shows why I think it was disconnected from the types of investments that would be made. He was answering the then Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Mr Bossano. There must have been something said across the floor, because the hon. Gentleman says:

'Correct. That is why I told him, during the Budget speech, that actually the need for this reserve, except the fact that the law said it, the need for it I could not understand. Perhaps it was never really necessary, given that, coupled with the Consolidated Fund, it did not seem to me to be achieving very much. At least in the sort of times that we are living in now. Perhaps in the 1960s or 1970s, perhaps in those days the economy of Gibraltar and the finances of Gibraltar were such that that measure might have had a certain prudence or a certain significance. I think the Leader of the Opposition and I can at least agree, in the current socio-economic make-up of Gibraltar, that is no longer a necessity. But to the extent that the buffer, as he called it, was there not to protect the depositors, who did not need that buffer to be protected, but to protect the Consolidated Fund from perhaps having to be called upon under the guarantee.'

So that is what he was saying, Mr Speaker. We think that, today, for the reasons I have already indicated, there is no need for there to be, in legislation, that provision, for all the reasons I have already articulated, and I therefore now, hopefully, am allowed to commend the Bill to the House.

Speaker to retire after eight years in post Personal Statement

Mr Speaker: Yes, if I may, with the indulgence of the hon. Members.

The leaking of a confidential report prepared by the Commissioner of Income Tax on my personal tax affairs, and its publication last week by some elements of the local media, prompts me to make this statement to the hon. Members who have placed me in this Chair.

While claiming the entitlement to confidentiality afforded by our laws, without exception, to all taxpayers, I cannot allow to remain unchallenged the serious allegation contained in the report which links my personal tax affairs with my position as Speaker. The report alleges that I have, after making a few initial payments, failed to honour an agreement entered into by me with the Commissioner for the settlement of outstanding tax liabilities and that, as a consequence, the Commissioner has seen fit to withhold my parliamentary salary.

Following the issue by the Commissioner, and acceptance by me, of revised assessments, I entered into a binding agreement with the Commissioner, in terms which I was given to understand are commonly afforded to other taxpayers in similar circumstances for the payment of the amount owed.

Contrary to the misleading impression given by media coverage of the report, I invited the Commissioner from the very outset to apply my parliamentary salary from month to month, after deduction of PAYE, towards the payment of the instalments due from me under that agreement.

The Income Tax Office duly received direct from the Treasury sums representing more than two instalments due from me, but the Income Tax Office, for procedural reasons of its own, which were, for the first time, revealed to me by the Commissioner when I met him yesterday, subsequently terminated that arrangement and replaced it with a direction to the Treasury under section 50 of the Income Tax Act.

I was made aware of the section 50 direction at the time, but since it reflected the very manner which I myself had indicated as my preference for the performance by me of the agreement, I attached no particular significance to it and readily acquiesced. The undeniable fact is that I did not make those initial payments myself and, therefore, there can be no question of my ceasing to make further payments, as alleged.

This has now been incorrectly portrayed by the Commissioner, in his report, as my failure to honour the agreement, after having made a few initial payments, thus compelling him to withhold my net parliamentary salary. What is more, it is clear from my discussion with the Commissioner on 16th April that some of the figures mentioned in his report are incorrect. These are matters I have taken up with the Commissioner and will continue to address them and other issues arising from the report, as I have in the past on all matters relating to my taxation, with the advice and assistance of my professional accountant, and by engaging directly with the Income Tax Office, and not by public pronouncements.

Sitting in this Chair, however, my first and overriding duty is to facilitate the work of this House, whose servant I am. When I was first appointed Speaker in September 2004 – and upon each successive reappointment – I pledged to uphold the dignity of this august body and that has been my objective throughout the years. However, I am conscious of the fact that there will be my detractors out there who are more interested in my personal tax affairs than in the manner in which I perform my duties here. And that will not do for those who have entrusted me with this Office.

When the Hon. the Chief Minister invited me to accept reappointment as Speaker following the General Election last December, I expressed the view that eight years is just about the right length of a Speaker's tenure, as providing a degree of continuity but ensuring that the Office does not become too closely identified with its incumbent.

The events of recent weeks have crystallised that belief in my mind and I have come to the conclusion that, as I approach the eighth anniversary of my appointment, I ought to prepare to relinquish this distinguished Office.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, by your leave.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

65 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government can make no comment whatsoever in respect of matters related to your tax affairs, which you have referred to now, other than to agree with you the importance of confidentiality in respect of all taxpayers' affairs and the need to determine how confidential information relating to one such taxpayer, namely yourself, has been made available to the media.

70 Mr Speaker, you were appointed by us, as Government, for the third time, on the second occasion that you enjoyed our support, because we considered, as I told this House, that you had discharged your functions as Speaker, after your initial appointment without our support, with fairness in dealing with all parties who were before you in this place.

75 I said then, Mr Speaker, that you had, in my view and in the view of the Government, pleased and displeased Members on both sides of the House in equal measure and I could think of no better qualification for an appointee holding your Office. I said then, and I repeat, that I was always very grateful, personally, for how you had dealt with some of the cruellest moments of the last Parliament, which had included me.

80 Mr Speaker, it is in that context when I approached you for appointment, that you indicated to me, as you have now publicly, that you believe that eight years was the right period of time to hold that silent, brooding presence that is incumbent on the Office of Speaker, and that you believe that, having bedded down the new Government, eight years would be the period after which I should, on behalf of the Government, start consulting on who should take your post. In those circumstances, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for your indication today, so that the Government and Members of the House opposite are aware by when we will have to have determined who will be taking your post.

85 Thank you.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

90 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for your indication, as are the Hon. Members on this side of the House – for Mr Speaker's indication of his intention to stand down, in the context of the eighth anniversary of his accession to the Chair.

95 I sincerely hope... Well, I should add, of course, Mr Speaker, you are not an employee of the Government, you are not accountable to the executive, except as a taxpayer. In your capacity and in respect of your functions as Speaker, you are accountable to this House and not to the Government, or to its Chief Minister, and I sincerely hope that, to the extent that Mr Speaker asserts, and until the contrary is demonstrated – if it is capable of being demonstrated – I accept what you have said, solemnly from the Chair about the facts that have entered into the public domain. In those circumstances, I sincerely hope that the Speaker of this House has not to any degree been forced to consider his position, or even the timing of his standing down, by reference to mischievously leaked confidential documents.

100 I accept your assurance implicit in what you have said, that that is not the case and I sincerely hope that commentators outside of this House will not, contrary to what you have said and what both sides of the House, having heard the Chief Minister, appear to accept, I hope that nobody outside of this House will mischievously make the link between the two events.

105 I have said that Mr Speaker is the servant of this House; and I believe that, regardless of Mr Speaker's tax affairs, whether they would, or would not, have raised issues about the appropriateness of him carrying on in this Chair, I think that there are issues which are thrown up by this matter which this House – not the Government – needs to look into.

110 This House needs to be absolutely satisfied that there has been no degree of political or administrative – in other words, no degree of executive in its two branches – behaviour designed to bring about a particular result with a servant of this House. And I believe that, frankly, for the Government itself to call an enquiry into the leaking of a report, a report which can only have been leaked either by a civil servant in the Income Tax Office, by a civil servant in the Office of the Chief Minister to whom the report was sent or, for the sake of equanimity, by the Chief Minister or by somebody to whom the Chief Minister gave a copy – it cannot be anybody else: one of those four must be the source of the leak! – I believe that that is a very serious matter which needs a degree of independent parliamentary enquiry and investigation and not an investigation by the 115 very institution that has to account and explain and justify and demonstrate that its fingerprints are not on this matter.

Therefore I, on behalf of the Opposition Members of this House, call now for a parliamentary investigation of the circumstances in which, not just this document was leaked, but the circumstances and timing of its creation, and the circumstances and timing of its leaking into the public domain. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: I am not sure I should allow a debate on this matter.

I have made a communication from the Chair. I have given both sides the opportunity to express their thoughts.

If the Hon. the Chief Minister wishes to add anything without going into the debate of the matter, of course I will allow him to say it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has strayed from dealing with the issues that you have raised in this House into making what can only be seen to be imputations, if not allegations, about manners in which reports may have been leaked to the press, which he has seen fit to personify, potentially including me as the holder of the Office of Chief Minister.

I think it is incumbent upon me to put on the record straightaway that there is absolutely no question of my, or my office, having been involved in leaking any documentation and hence why I agreed with you, in the context of the first phrase that you uttered, that the Government considers it to be as important as you consider it to be, to get to the bottom of how it was that the confidential information that related to you as a taxpayer was, or came to be, leaked to the press. And that will, of course, include when it was leaked to the press, which is the issue as to timing.

In those circumstances, Mr Speaker, the Government is satisfied that what it is going to do to determine how that breach of confidentiality came about will enable us to be satisfied as to the source of the leak, and the timing of the leak, and that the histrionics from the hon. Gentleman opposite are just designed to try and make a political point when none was due.

Mr Speaker: I think we have to leave the further debate on the matter to a proper motion.

Anyway, I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister and to the Leader of the Opposition for the kind words expressed and for the understanding they have both shown to my position. We shall proceed with the remainder of the business.

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Maintenance of Gibraltar's beaches Long-term policy

Clerk: Question 343 of 2012, the Hon. S M. Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism indicate to this House its policy in respect of the long-term maintenance of Gibraltar's beaches, particularly those affected by severe weather during the off season?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Government is considering its policy on the long-term maintenance of the beaches. I will make this public once this has been determined.

The Government's Technical Services Department is currently developing schemes to provide protection to those beaches that have historically been subjected to storm wave action. These schemes will vary depending on location and, until detailed engineering assessments are completed, it will not be possible to advise conclusively on what is planned.

However, by way of an indication, at Sandy Bay consideration is being given to the construction of an underwater breakwater, which will reduce wave action reaching the shoreline whilst, at the same time, helping to retain the sand.

At Catalan Bay a similar project is being considered, although the addition of groins is also a possibility.

No works are currently envisaged at Eastern Beach, as this has been stable for a number of years, ever since groins were constructed in 1992.

At Camp Bay, the extension of the existing groin and the provision of an additional groin are being looked into, with a view to increasing the size of the beach.

225 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer to the question.

I wonder whether, perhaps, the Minister could provide any further details in respect of Sandy Bay for the bathing season which is imminent and upon us in a few weeks' time: is there any intention – though I suspect it is late in the day – to replenish the beach at all? Is there a need? Has the Minister been able to identify whether there is a need for that?

230 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, there will be.

There has been a lot of loss of sand during this last year. As you know, the previous administration did replenish the beach at quite considerable cost but, because of the absence of any groin or any other facilities stopping the sand from being taken away from the beach, there has been a considerable loss but the public will certainly be able to access the beach. Works are currently being conducted, or will start, next week in order to facilitate that.

235 Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

240 In relation to the other projects – the underwater breakwaters, which we understand certainly from this side of the House will incur considerable costs – is the Minister able to give any indication in respect of the timelines that we are looking at in respect of these measures and any costs at all, any ideas that the technical officers might have given them?

245 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, as I said in the original answer, the scheme will vary depending on the engineering assessment, but works could possibly start after, of course, the official bathing season is over, which will be October.

In terms of costs, I am still waiting for a detailed analysis on that.

250 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful.

Tourism policy New ideas being formulated

255 Clerk: Question 344. The Hon. D J Bossino.

260 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the new ideas it is formulating in the context of Gibraltar's tourism policy?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

265 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N. Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker.

The Government is engaged in considering tourism in the short and the medium-term but also, of course, having to bear in mind the long-term interests of Gibraltar.

270 The Government has, initially, two short-term priorities in the context of the tourism industry: firstly, to invest in badly needed improvements to the visitor attractions in the Upper Rock, some of which have been very sorely neglected for very many years; secondly, to improve as quickly as possible the manner in which Gibraltar is marketed as a tourism destination and the methods employed to market Gibraltar.

275 As the hon. Member is aware, my Ministry and the Gibraltar Tourist Board are currently involved in consultation and feedback with the industry at large. The hon. Member will also have read in the press that we have decided to hold monthly meetings of the Tourism Advisory Council. In addition, teams lead by my colleagues, the Hon. Dr John Cortes and the Hon. Mr Steven Linares, are assisting in formulating policies that this Government can develop, thus reflecting the importance the Government is attaching to the tourism industry.

The hon. Member is also aware of the inter-ministerial committee of the Ministries of the Environment, Heritage, Culture and Tourism, where the Government is engaged in formulating ideas that develop tourism in an environmentally friendly and heritage sensitive manner. I personally have, over the last five months, engaged in very intense one-to-one stakeholder engagements. As and when the new initiatives are finalised 280 and implementation started, the Government will be delighted to provide details to this House and to the hon. Gentleman in particular.

285 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, can the Minister give an indication as to when he will be able to make such a statement?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, my Ministry is working to be able to unveil some of our policy initiatives during the Budget session.

290 Hon. D J Bossino: In relation to marketing – a reference was made by the Minister to marketing – he said... he is quoted as having said in the Gibraltar Chronicle of 25th April that the new Government, which is really what prompted this question,

‘ the new Government is currently formulating new ideas and marketing new ideas.’

295 That suggests that the marketing of those new ideas is already in train. But is that still at the planning stage? Can he clarify what the situation is in relation specifically to marketing?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. It gives me the opportunity to explain the position the Government is at in respect to marketing.

300 The Tourism Advisory Council will be reporting back at the next meeting – which I think is scheduled for next week – with their ideas and recommendations on how best to market Gibraltar, what methods to employ and whom to target, in other words to be able to assist Government to develop a general policy as to how we achieve that.

305 I personally have met with two companies and two entities that have provided to the Government ideas on the website platform that could be used by the Gibraltar Tourist Board in marketing Gibraltar.

310 As the hon. Member is aware now, with new technology there are very interactive websites, there is the use of podcasts and so on, and whereas I have seen two websites in particular, we are in discussions with those entities in order to decide which one would provide the best platform for the Gibraltar Tourist Board to be able to sell Gibraltar as a vibrant city etc.

Hon. D J Bossino: This is just by way of a short preamble to the question I am going to ask now: I just want to congratulate the Minister and the Government generally that it is giving tourism the priority it deserves – certainly our policy when we were in government – and I sincerely hope, for Gibraltar Plc’s sake, that you are able to harness the clear success story that Gibraltar, the running of our tourism policy when we were in government, was a result of.

315 So, in relation, by way of supplementary, can I ask the Minister, who comprises... who are the members of the... is it the Tourism Advisory Council? Who are the members? Can you advise us who they are?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

320 In the first place, I am afraid that I cannot accept the premise of the hon. Gentleman to say that we are simply continuing the ‘success story’ of the GSD.

325 The Tourism Advisory Council is comprised of various people, representatives of the Caleta Hotel, Bland Group International, the Taxi Association, Gibraltar Museum, the Queens Hotel, the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses, and the Chamber of Commerce.

And the reason why I do not accept the premise to the hon Gentleman’s question is because all but one of the members of this Tourism Advisory Council started their introductions by saying ‘not enough priority has been given to tourism in the past 15 years; none of the recommendations have ever been acted on; something actually must come out of these committee meetings, because they never did before; the product was undervalued; nothing seems to get done...’ – so I cannot accept his premise.

Consultation on Upper Rock
Submissions and views relative to tourism

Clerk: Question 345, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the submissions and views received in relation to the consultation exercise recently undertaken in connection with the Upper Rock as are relevant to tourism?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker. The administrative process on the consultation exercise is being taken by the Department of the Environment.

The Department has received a total of 19 submissions as part of the Upper Rock consultation. The process is still in progress and the next step is that a paper will now be prepared by the Department of the Environment, based on the submissions received for discussion with the contributors before a strategy is actually developed.

Specific details on the submissions in relation to tourism cannot be provided at this stage, due to the commercial sensitivity of some of the submissions – in fact, an issue that has been raised by some of the contributors themselves and which the Government must accept, of course, at this stage.

But I can tell the hon. Gentleman that the views received are very varied and they relate to all of the aspects of the Upper Rock and the management of the Rock Nature Reserve, such as the management of the Barbary macaques, the conservation of wild flora and fauna, improving the main tourist sites in the Upper Rock and issues common to residents of the Upper Rock.

Hon. D J Bossino: Do the submissions cover... can the Minister, Mr Speaker, clarify this, do any of the submissions received cover the issue of the access by taxi drivers for the Upper Rock?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may, as this is something that is being dealt with by my Department, there has been a submission by the Taxi Association to the report, so obviously that is one of the aspects that is going to be considered; but they did make representations.

Hon. D J Bossino: Now, there is a point of clarification which I would like to seek from the Minister, who I am questioning at the moment, Mr Speaker, but I must admit that it was the quote in the Chronicle was attributed to the Hon. the Minister for the Environment, where he says, if the House would permit me:

‘It is not just the tourists that need to be looked after’

and this is in relation to the Upper Rock,

‘but locals and workers too.’

The Minister explains that:

‘We are going to be very careful to ensure that anybody who relies largely on the Upper Rock for their livelihood will be able to continue to do so. That is very important, but we have to do it in such a way that does not conflict with the amenity value for other users. It is quite a challenge.’

And then he makes another reference to the amenity value where he says:

‘Like many other nature reserves and protected areas in the world, the number of visitors to these sites can result in unwanted side effects, such as the pollution and excessive wear and tear. Many of these sites now restrict the number of visitors allowed with regards enforcing a restriction in the Upper Rock.’

390 The Minister said:

‘There must be a maximum number of potential visitors, but I do not think we are necessarily there yet. I think what we have to do is manage it in a way which does not conflict with the amenity value of the Upper Rock.’

395 And the question, by way of supplementary, Mr Speaker, is what the Minister means by the ‘amenity value’?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, its value as an amenity. How does one define an amenity? I can probably look it up on my iPad.

400 An amenity, I would have thought, is something that people use and enjoy, so its amenity value is its value as an amenity. I do not really see what the questioner is alluding to. Perhaps he would like to clarify?

Hon. D J Bossino: What interest is he putting into the balance?

405 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Sorry, could you repeat that?

Hon. D J Bossino: What interest is he putting into the balance?

410 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: At the moment what we are doing is looking at all the representations and the exercise is ongoing. It is a challenge and I have used the word ‘challenge’ on a number of occasions because the management of a nature reserve which is accessed by tourists is a challenge throughout the world.

415 It is a challenge, Mr Speaker, that I think that we are certainly up to, but I cannot predict what the outcome is going to be. So I do not really think I can say anything. When the report is actually published, then obviously we can discuss it then.

Hon. D J Bossino: So, clearly, the Government at this stage does not have a policy or a view or, indeed, even a preliminary view as a result of reviewing the data received in connection with the consultation exercise. Is that correct?

420 Hon. N F Costa: Well...

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: A consultation is a consultation in order to form a view. You cannot have the conclusion before you have given due consideration because if you have the conclusion already, then the process is not valid. So we are open to discuss and see what comes out at the end.

425 Hon. N F Costa: Merely to add, Mr Speaker, that the proposals that have been submitted, some of them are actually quite detailed, and the deadline for submission was the 4th of this month. So we have just recently received them. So, of course, we need some time to analyse them before we can present the policy of the Government.

430 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Members concede, and I accept in part the point made by the Hon. Dr Cortes that there is no point holding a consultation process if you are firmly committed, or firmly entrenched, in a particular view or a particular objective.

435 Would he not agree with me that it is not correct to suggest that those who consult others to seek their views are required not to have a view of their own? The Government must have a view of its own. It may rightly and with every good governance justification have decided to test other people’s views to see to what extent other people’s views may cause the Government to modify its own, but the Government surely does not think that it is the only party in Gibraltar who should not have a view on an important matter affecting the public interest of Gibraltar.

440 So I think it is just as well... I mean this is something about which the Government has said things in their manifesto. The Government clearly have a view that they do not want to impose their view without seeking the views of others, to see to what extent they can be accommodated as well, or instead, may well be true, but they must have a view of their own. Otherwise, does he not agree that they would be in dereliction of the Government’s duty to have a view, albeit subject to the views of others?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is no duty to have a view, but I take the hon. Gentleman's point that the Government, if it is embarked on a course of consultation, is embarked on a course of consultation because clearly it is an area of policy that the Government wishes to develop its own thinking on; but, of course, the Government has views on issues on which it goes out to consultation.

But the hon. Gentleman alluded to the reasons why we do not want to be labouring our own views, in saying that the Government does not want to impose its views and, therefore, goes out to consultation to see what it is that either members of the public, or a particular sector or [inaudible] interest, views (Interjection by Hon. P Caruana) believe on a particular subject and then, at the end of that period, taking its initial view in the context of the replies in the consultation, will reach a final view.

I think, Mr Speaker, what we are saying and I think it is an issue that we have had a ding-dong across the floor of the House in relation to other matters on before is that when we were the party contesting the General Election – much as they were and then the other party – we put our views in our manifesto, or we have put our views in public statements, but when we engage in the process of consultation we think it is prudent, from that point on, to say, 'Well, look, we have said what we have said on the subject, but we are now consulting and we do not want, as Government, to belabour that view.'

Hon. P R Caruana: Alright, Mr Speaker. Fine, I can accept in greater part that answer and the previous one, but that, he has to acknowledge, is a different answer to the one that the Hon. Mr Cortes made.

Nor do I think good governance requires, would he accept, the Government to commit not to impose its view. There may be circumstances in which the Government is entitled... Indeed, I think the Government, if it has a majority in parliament, is always entitled to impose its view. The question is not... Consultation is not surely so that the Government does not impose its view; it is so it does not impose its view without, first, having had the benefit of other's views to see to what extent those may influence the Government's view. But the Government is always free, in a democracy, to do as its manifesto says, or as its policy suggests, if they are not persuaded by the views of consultees in the consultation process. That is the normal process of democratic government.

I am not challenging the propriety; indeed, I applaud them going out to consultation on this matter. I was just challenging the odd sounding assertion by a Minister of a Government, in any democracy that, notwithstanding all of that, the Government does not have a view. That struck me as not sounding right, not being right. It may be that Dr Cortes did not mean it precisely in those ways, but that is what he said and I think it has now been clarified.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

I do not think that there is a difference between what Dr Cortes said, taken in good faith on what I said, although perhaps if you were looking at it semantically you could in cross-examination suggest that there was.

But, Mr Speaker, I think that the difference is this: a consultation is not a referendum.

If the Government goes out and puts an issue to referendum, it is saying that it will be bound by the views of the plebiscite in respect of that particular question. In the consultation, the Government is asking for those who are interested, either the general public or those who care to write in, or a particular sector, what their views are on a particular issue. There are two ways of doing that and I do not think doing it in one way or another affects the 'good government' sense in which it is done.

The Government can issue a consultation paper that says, 'The Government believes that this should be done and it should be done for this reason and in this way. What do you think?' Or the Government could simply say, 'The Government believes that this is an area that needs tackling. How do you believe it should be tackled?' Now, of course, in the lead-up to that consultation and since it has been done in [inaudible] the Government will have said in public statements, as a political party or as a Government, or as an Opposition – if there has been the reversal of roles which there has been in the past six months – what it believes on an issue. It does not mean that it has, as part of the consultation, to re-state that, in my view, and I think that we agree that those issues do not go to good government. What goes through to good government is that, in certain particular areas, one should be prepared to consult. But good government in the loose sense of the word good government and not in the constitutional sense of good Government which has completely different implications, and I think the hon. Gentleman would agree with me that what we are talking about here is how one is disposed to govern, rather than whether one is engaged in good government in the constitutional sense.

500 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not want to labour this point too much, although I think it has interest beyond the question of the Upper Rock and its management future.

In the first place, Mr Speaker, I do not agree with what the hon. Member said in the opening of his statement just there. The Government cannot say things in its manifesto and its public statements which reflect its views, have views and then, when asked in this House what those views are, the Minister stands up and says, 'The Government has no view because that would be wrong, because we have started a consultation' – which was the essence of Dr Cortes's question, which is why I stood up. Otherwise, I was not just going to stand up about the Upper Rock. It was about the nature of the answer, if it had been applied to any other subject matter.

510 Mr Speaker, and then I do not agree, either, with what the hon. Member said latterly. Would he not accept that most consultations by Governments do not take the form of, for example, 'The Government thinks something needs to be done about the Upper Rock. What do you think, o citizen? How do you think, o citizen, it should be done?'

515 Most governmental consultation processes, particularly those they envisage may culminate in legislation, set out, for the purposes of the consultation, what the Government's thinking on the matter is, what the Government's tentative proposals are, and asks consultees to comment on those and on any other aspect different, in support, opposing, proposing alterations. They do not send the consultee a blank piece of paper, saying, 'What do you think should happen in the Upper Rock?'

So I do not accept and I do not want to spend all morning – unless he does – debating this. I mean, consultation is good. (Interjections) Any form of consultation is better than no form of consultation...

520 There is no point Dr Cortes shaking his head to people in the Gallery, which, by the way, is in serious breach of parliamentary procedure (Interjections) but, Mr Speaker, these are –

525 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I was not shaking my head at anybody in the Gallery. I was shaking my head and then looked towards the Gallery. If he were to have noted the sequence of events –

Hon. P R Caruana: So only the word 'at' was wrong?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I was not shaking my head at the Gallery, Mr Speaker. I am –

530 Mr Speaker: I have to accept that, as long as there was no intention to communicate with anyone in the Gallery. I have to accept that. No, shaking of head must entail looking in that direction and that direction...

535 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, my head was heading in the direction of my colleague, Mr Linares, and therefore the angle of vision may have crossed. (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker: I think we need not dwell on that much longer!
The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. Has he finished?

540 Hon. Chief Minister: I must say I think I prefer the hon. Gentleman angry, rather than merry, because (Laughter) we get through it more quickly when he is angry than when he is funny.

Mr Speaker, of course there is a technical point and I do not think we do need to labour this. This is not the Government's manifesto. It is the political party's manifesto and that political party then becomes the Government and even if the incumbent Government has a manifesto, when it issues a manifesto it is the party's manifesto and that is what they are saying.

545 But, look, I agree with him. It is not that the Government simply turns round and says in vacuo, 'Oh, something needs to be done about the Upper Rock. What shall we do about it? Ask the public.' The Government is elected to run Gibraltar and to bring those views, which have put it into Government to bear on those matters on which it has expressed those views. Of course, we agree with that; but I think the point is simply this, that, in the process of the consultation although there will be discussions and in those discussions with sectorial interest groups, if you are dealing with three or four and they are meeting with the Minister and the Minister is going to be giving his views, we do not think that the right approach on every occasion is to put out there, 'The Government believes that this is what has to be done. How do you want to influence that?' Although it may be in some instances that that is the way to proceed with a consultation and we will do that in some particular instances.

555 Look, I think the interesting aspect of this – I do not even want to call it ‘debate’, because it is Question Time – but the interesting aspect of this exchange is that we agree that consultation is a good thing, that we believe that consultation in one form or another, in all its different forms, is the right approach in circumstances where the Government considers that it needs to temper the manner in which it will implement its policies, and that I recognise that, in some instances in Government, he did and in some others, he did not, 560 and in some instances in Government, if we consider it appropriate, we will, and in some instances, when we consider it is not appropriate, we will not.

Clerk: Question –

565 Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member has an uncanny knack of preventing me from staying sitting down, as I had intended to!

Mr Speaker, let me see if I can convert into a question just a simple proposition that I want to leave lying on the record.

570 Does the hon. Member, whether he agrees with it or not, at least acknowledge that the Opposition does not accept the repeated theme emanating from those benches, that is that, somehow, a Government can say of the manifesto that elected it into office, ‘That’s the party. Don’t quote the manifesto at me, because I am now the Government; I am not the party.’ It was a manifesto for government!

575 Nobody in the electorate, would he agree with me, is going to be attracted by the proposition that a political party gets elected to Government on the basis of a manifesto and then asserts repeatedly that it is free not to have the manifesto held against it, because it is the manifesto of the party and not the manifesto of the Government? It is not a line that I have seen used in other democracies.

580 Obviously, he will want to reply to that, and I will not rise again on the question – because all I just want to leave on record... I just did not want my acquiescence on that point to suggest to the hon. Member that we think there is merit in that sort of nuance, of the significance for political purpose. Clearly it does not bind the Government legally but, for political purposes, we do not think such a nuance is viable.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am getting worried that our relationship seems to be becoming almost symbiotic: I need to say something for him to get up... I do not want us to have that sort of relationship.

585 Mr Speaker, of course I accept that the party’s manifesto has now become the Government’s programme for government. I was simply taking the point that the manifesto during an election campaign is not ‘the Government’s’; it is the party’s, even though it is of the party in Government and it becomes the programme for government, once the Government is elected.

590 Of course, Mr Speaker, I have here – because I was taken by the candour with which the hon. Gentleman replied to a question by the now designate CEO of GBC in a radio interview in the run-up to the General Election on 5th December 2011, when he was asked about this issue of manifestos, and he very candidly said:

595 ‘All parties now publish manifestos during their campaigns, which are a programme of what they hope to achieve over a four-year period. Almost never is it possible to achieve all of those things, for a variety of reasons: you may run out of time, you may run out of money’

– as he almost did –

600 ‘and there may be technical reasons why things cannot be done. For example, some of the projects that you have mentioned rely on each other: until we have built the new power station, the MOD cannot build its power station, etc. Look, Gerard, I do not hide the fact that there has never been any term of office in which the GSD has managed to do everything that was in its manifesto, and I think that is true of every political party in every democracy around the world.’

605 I am looking forward to proving him wrong! (Laughter)

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

610 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just bringing us back to the question itself specifically, and having failed to get very far with the definition of ‘amenity value’... but I have had an opportunity to review it on the iPad here with me (Laughter) so I may have informed myself appropriately.

Perhaps he will be of more assistance to the House in respect of his views articulated in the quote which I think you accepted was attributed correctly to you, in respect of the limited number of visitors, and although we are not there yet, what the Minister considers the ‘limited number of visitors’ to be – I understand that, and I am not pressing for a number or a moment in time which that will become a reality. However, what I would press the Hon. Minister for are his views on the impact it will have on both the amenity value and the commercial value of the Upper Rock Nature Reserve in due course.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is clear that there has to be a limited number. There is a limited number of people who can fit in this room. It is more clear – it would be easier to find – what that number is in a defined space as this, but it is different in a nature reserve, where the numbers have to be managed in a particular way, too. And the numbers of people who can access an area like this will depend on how they are circulated, on how they visit the different areas and so on.

So I think it is has not reached the limited number, it is only an opinion, but if you manage in a different way, you can actually increase the numbers, so it is not determined at the moment. The numbers of visitors anywhere have to have physically a limit but, in the case of the Upper Rock, I do not think we are anywhere near that, but if we are able to absorb the present and greater numbers, you have to manage the way the visitors use the area in particular ways, which are not yet determined. That is part of the exercise.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

The one point, however, I would like to press the Minister on is whether his view that... and whilst we may or may not agree in that respect, his view is that there is a limited number of people that certainly we can fit in this Chamber, and in the Upper Rock Nature Reserve – when we arrive at that point, whether that will mean that there will be limitations imposed upon the local community in respect of its use of the amenity?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I am convinced that we are not going to reach – convinced, subject to the study going on – we are nowhere near reaching that limit, if we manage the people properly, so I cannot say anything further.

I do not think we will have to close any gate at any particular time, because I think we are going to manage it in such a way that that is not going to happen. So we are speculating without any facts.

Hon. S M Figueras: But the Minister is not able to provide a commitment that there will be no limitations or restrictions imposed on the local community in respect of the amenity?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There will be no limitations imposed on the local community.

Cruise passenger arrivals Promoting growth

Clerk: Question 346, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise this House what plans the Government has to promote the continuation of growth in the number of cruise passenger arrivals?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker.

The Government is currently assessing a number of infrastructural options in respect of increasing the berthing capability for cruise ships in Gibraltar, as well as enabling them to be effectively and safely handled.

In the short-term, the Western Arm is in the process of being tidied up, with the demolition of the derelict Ice Box Building and the resurfacing of that area. The Western Arm, as the House will know, is the first and last impression of cruise visitors and the area has been in desperate need of a facelift for as long as anyone can possibly remember.

As the House will be aware, I attended Miami for two and a half days, during the course of which I personally met with five executives of various cruise line operators. We engaged then in lengthy discussions, canvassing many areas relating to cruise calls, shore excursions, etc.

It has become patently clear to this Government, Mr Speaker, that the single most important failure in the past, in order to be able to attract business to Gibraltar has been the absence of structures that ensure follow-up of the items discussed at meetings; but as a result of structural changes that I have implemented in the Gibraltar Tourist Board, there is now, at an official level, continuity of communication with the people who actually make decisions in the field, to make sure that Gibraltar is always in the minds of those executives who design shore excursions, decide the itineraries of their ships. Moreover, I have arranged a series of nine meetings in the UK at the end of June, with cruise operators based in the United Kingdom.

Mr Speaker, as I have already alluded to the hon. Gentleman in a previous answer, it is the philosophy of the Government to pursue personal relationships with those persons who decide, and equally as crucial, to impress that my Ministry and the Gibraltar Tourist Board have an open door to all of them to discuss any, and all, ideas.

Moreover, Mr Speaker, in my short time in my Ministry, it is my assessment that Gibraltar has, in fact, lost some important opportunities because of this lack of follow-through which I mentioned earlier. The recent return of the French product of Pullmantur, as recently highlighted in the press, is precisely the sort of example to which I am referring. A meeting was scheduled... a technical meeting was held by the Gibraltar Tourist Board, followed by a second meeting with me, that gave rise to the return of the product.

Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, since 2009, Gibraltar has only had calls from Norwegian Cruise Lines... and there has been also a substantial reduction in cruise calls from other cruise lines so, clearly, there is a lot of work to do in order to have those products brought back to Gibraltar.

Since I drafted the answer and as if this executive had heard the question of the hon. Gentleman, I was very gratified to have received an e-mail from one of the executives that we met in Miami, and I will be making a statement in due course to say that we will be adding two additional calls to Gibraltar this year. It is the Azamara Club Cruises. Essentially, there is one ship, the 700-passenger Azamara Journey, scheduled to call once, with a sister ship, the Azamara Quest, who will be visiting The Rock four times – three of them within a week, between 29th November and 3rd December. The Azamara Quest returns to Gibraltar six times in 2013, and that has been a direct result of my discussions with executives in Miami.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can I just take this opportunity, in relation to that last point made by the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, to congratulate him, if it is as he has... and there is no reason to doubt it, that these ships will be coming to Gibraltar.

But will he not accept for one moment, that it seems, in relation to the tourism issue, we are living almost in parallel universes? Now, in fact, it was reported in the Gibraltar Chronicle on 19th April that the visits... I will just quote it. It says:

‘Gibraltar received a record number of cruise passengers in the first quarter of the year, according to the latest statistics released by the Gibraltar Government.
The figures represent a slight increase over the same period in 2011, which itself marked a sharp rise over previous first-quarter cruise business.’

It goes on to say:

‘... the year in 2011, some 21,529 cruise passengers arrived in Gibraltar. This year, the figure for the same three-month period reached 22,063 passengers.
The start of the year has traditionally been slow for the cruise sector, but that has changed in the last two years.’

Then it ends – I will not read the whole article – but it says:

‘The figure is largely in line with market trends in recent years and, in any event, could rise before the end of the year.’

Will he not accept that he has inherited a bonanza?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, to answer the question of the hon. Gentleman, whereas there may be passengers coming into Gibraltar, ships have got bigger, so the fact that there are more passengers coming in 725 is as a result and by virtue of the size of the ships. But, unfortunately, there has been a significant loss of calls by ships, and I can give him some statistics: Costa Cruises called nine times in 2009 and only two in 2011; Louis Cruises called 28 times in 2009, but only once in 2011; NCL called five times in 2009, and no times at all in 2011.

So, as the hon. Gentleman can see, that it is by virtue of the size of the ships that people are coming in, but the number of calls have, as I have just shown him, dramatically reduced.

730 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as I understand it – maybe he can confirm this – the position of Director of Maritime Affairs is now vacant. Is that correct?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

735 Hon. D J Bossino: And is there any intention of filling that post?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker.

Royal Caribbean cruise liner
Commencement of calls at Gibraltar

745 Clerk: Question 347, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise the House when Royal Caribbean confirmed that its cruise liner, the Serenade of the Seas, would commence calls at Gibraltar?

750 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Royal Caribbean booked the berth for the recent call of Serenade of the Seas, which called at Gibraltar on 2nd May, just over a year ago, on 9th March 2011.

Gibraltar Bus Company Limited
Appointment of general manager

760 Clerk: Question 348, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port inform this House whether a general manager has been appointed to the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited?

765 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the job has been advertised internally. The closing date was last Friday, 11th May 2012. There were three applicants. All three applicants are Gibraltarian.

770 A board will be constituted to interview these three applicants and make their recommendations to the board of directors of the Gibraltar Bus Company.

I can add that, since drafting the answer, the board will be held next Tuesday.

775 Hon. D J Bossino: Does the Government have any idea as to what the terms of engagement will be at this stage?

Hon. N F Costa: In particular...?

Hon. D J Bossino: In particular, income. Does the Government have in relation to that or...?

780

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, no, no, I would not like the hon. Gentleman to quote me, but I believe the salary was £40,000. I can check it, but I am quite sure it was £40,000 per annum, with a probationary period of six months.

I can get back to him on the exact amount.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, presumably it would have been advertised internally on that basis?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, of course, Mr Speaker.

Gibraltar Bus Company Limited
Details of independent inquiry

Clerk: Question 349, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide full details of the independent inquiry into the case surrounding the Gibraltar Bus Company and Mr Sardeña, to include who will be leading it; how it will be conducted; when it will commence; what its terms of reference will be; and when it is expected to complete?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, as my press statement of 4th April made clear, any inquiry will be conducted at the end of the case, and any related appeals. At the expiry of such timeframe, consideration will be given to all the matters that the hon. Member mentions in his question.

Mr Albert Poggio's terms of engagement
Gibraltar Office, London

Clerk: Question 350, the Hon. D J Bossino.

815

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the terms of engagement of Mr Albert Poggio, including details of his role and position within the Gibraltar Office in London?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, Mr Poggio was appointed as a political consultant, by virtue of an agreement dated 25th March 2011 between the Government of Gibraltar and Mr Poggio. The appointment is for a term of two years. He is directly accountable to the Chief Minister, directly and through the Chief Secretary and the Chief Minister's Private Secretaries.

He has the use of an office in Gibraltar House in London for the provision of the service and shall also be provided with such secretarial and logistical support for the provision of the service as the Director of Gibraltar House may consider reasonable to provide for that purpose. He is to keep the Director of Gibraltar House briefed in all matters relating to the provision of the service.

830

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister confirm that that, therefore, is the arrangement as we left it, when we were on that side of the House?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, that is the arrangement that we inherited.

835 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that confirmation, Mr Speaker, and the reason why I ask it is because the press is quoting Mr Poggio as saying something quite different.

In fact – you cannot believe what all the papers say all of the time, but certainly the – (Interjection and laughter)

840 Well, Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition will be surprised to learn that I am actually about to quote the Panorama, in its edition of (Interjection) 28th February of this year quotes Mr Poggio, saying that – and this is the title of the article:

‘Poggio says he is “back in full control” at the London Office’.

845 The first paragraph says:

850 – i.e. 27th February –

‘that he is now “back in full control” at the Gibraltar Government Office in London. He said he was very pleased to work for the new Government.’

855 Now that, Mr Speaker, clearly suggests that there has been a change of circumstances in Mr Poggio’s employment and that is why I asked the question.

It goes on, in its penultimate paragraph, where it says:

860 ‘In recent weeks it was being said in unofficial sources in Gibraltar that Mr Poggio had reverted to being the Government’s representative in London –

– reverted –

‘and this was reinforced by his use of the title “United Kingdom Representative, HM Government of Gibraltar.’

865 Maybe if I can just add a bit of humour to the supplementary, Mr Speaker, the Panorama – another edition, and I must say I do not have the exact date – apparently, Mr Poggio was described as the ‘High Commissioner’ of Gibraltar by the Herald Express in the Devon area, and it adds:

870 ‘His Excellency Albert Poggio will be taken on a tour of the recently re-opened Torre Abbey, before speaking at Brixham Yacht Club’s annual St George’s Day dinner.’

There is an editor’s note which interestingly says:

875 ‘Of course, Mr Poggio is not Gibraltar’s High Commissioner and it is to be wondered why he should be so addressed. Why did they think in Devon that such is his status?

More so, how come he was addressed as “His Excellency”, a title not accorded even to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, and reserved for the Governor?

Does it mean that someone somewhere thinks “His Excellency Albert Poggio” is above the Chief Minister?’

880 Mr Speaker: I am not even sure that is an appropriate question! (Laughter) But if the Chief Minister wants to answer it –

Hon. D J Bossino: That was still part of the Panorama quote! (Laughter and interjections)

885 Mr Speaker: Well, I know, I mean I think – (Laughter and interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it was such an opportunity that I had to rise –

890 Mr Speaker: I will just point out that, no matter where it appeared first, it is not an appropriate question, but –

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just to clarify, I was quoting the Panorama –

Mr Speaker: It doesn't matter!

Hon. D J Bossino: It was not a question, but maybe I can quote a question –

Mr Speaker: No, no, the question was put on the terms, and then the Hon. Minister for Tourism explained at length the terms; then the supplementary was about what appeared in the Panorama, which is not an appropriate question.

However, I will not deprive the Chief Minister of (Laughter) the pleasure – I think he would want to say something on that. (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, only because the hon. Gentleman, I think, did the House the kindness of explaining why he felt it was appropriate to put the question in that context, and read the quote to show us what it was that had caused him to draft it.

905

Mr Speaker, put it this way: Gibraltarians have always been known for punching above their weight internationally, so it must be, I think, a good thing that there are Gibraltarians around the world being referred to as 'His Excellency' – nomenclature which has been traditionally, in respect of Gibraltar been reserved for people who were sent over from London to reign over us.

So I think that he is injecting an element of humour to reflect this, because there are people who believe that those who are in offices of other nations, in London or in other capitals, are all ambassadors, and all ambassadors are referred to as 'Your Excellency', in the way that they are referred to.

So I suppose we should thank whoever thought that one of our representatives in London is an ambassador and should be referred to as 'His Excellency', for affording us, as a people, that pleasure. I do not think Mr Poggio himself has ever tried to accord for himself (Laughter) the epitaph of 'His Excellency' or of 'High Commissioner'.

But, Mr Speaker, it is true that, in terms of how to present himself, the Government has agreed that he should represent himself as 'UK representative', for political purposes and for the purposes of doing the political work that he does, without that affecting his job description or the terms of engagement – if I may call them that, although it is a consultancy agreement which we inherited from the previous administration.

920

The hon. Gentleman has made a reference to things said in the Panorama from unofficial sources, which I am not going to deign with a reply, but I will say that, in respect of the quote of the 'full control', which is a quote attributed to Mr Poggio, the only thing I can say is that maybe Mr Poggio was referring to – it does not go on to say what he is in full control of – full control of the political lobbying aspect which is what his contract provides for.

925

I think, across the floor of the House, if there is any measure of agreement, it is that Mr Poggio does an excellent job of the political representation of Gibraltar in London.

Hon. D J Bossino: Just to clarify the points, Mr Poggio does say that he is 'in full control' at the Gibraltar Office in London – that is what he is attributed as saying. The Chief Minister has clarified the position, and I am satisfied.

930

In fact, in other past reports in the Gibraltar Chronicle, he is described also as the Head of the Gibraltar Office in London. As I understand – maybe I can ask this by way of supplementary – is that so? Mr Canessa is the Director of the London Office?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed it is Mr Canessa who is the Head of the London Office – the administrative Head of the London Office, and who enjoys the full confidence of this Government, as he enjoyed the full confidence of our predecessors.

I think 'full control', as I am reading it, and as I read it – despite what I might call the rather unfortunate photograph on the front page of the Panorama which I think included that article – is full control of the political aspects of Gibraltar's representation in the United Kingdom, and not of the office, which continues under the full administrative control of Mr Canessa who, as I say, enjoys our full support and our full confidence – as Mr Poggio does in respect of his role.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the answer has cleared the issue for me. I do not have the benefit of the photograph on the front page of the Panorama, because I have an internet version of the article.

945

Hon. N F Costa: I can pass a copy to you! (Interjections and laughter)

950

Mr Speaker: Was the request for a photograph a supplementary? (Interjections and laughter)

955

GibiBikes scheme
Rental details for past three months

960

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide this House with details of usage of the GibiBikes for the last three months, broken down by number of rentals, location of rentals, length of rentals and fault reports?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

965

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 352 of 2012.

970

GibiBikes scheme
Rollout to rest of Gibraltar

Clerk: Question 352.

975

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port advise whether the Government is committed to completing the roll-out of the GibiBikes scheme to the rest of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

980

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is set out in the schedule which I now hand to him.

In respect of the fault reporting, although there is an option on the touch screen of each individual bike station for a client to report a particular problem, this function of the service has not come online. Therefore, we do not have any statistics available.

The majority of clients communicate with GibiBikes through e-mail.

Given the current situation, with five stations down, damaged locks, sparsity of bikes at peak hours, the fault reports and complaints tend to merge into the same correspondence. Stations out of action and other problems are as follows:

Stations out of action are City Hall; Orange Bastion; Europort has to be restarted manually several times during the day; Frontier 1 and Frontier 2 stations.

995 At the Frontier, from a potential 45 locks available to our clients at present, there are only 12.

Bike availability: from a maximum of 130, 18 are locked, 31 have their anti-tilt tags broken and there are no spares to repair them; 12 require spares to make them roadworthy; 22 are held in reserve, but these may have problems with their anti-tilt mechanisms, which leaves a total of 47 bikes available to our client-base of 419.

1000 Mr Speaker, given that my Ministry, in conjunction with the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited, is in detailed discussion with this private operator in respect of the detailed breakdown that I have just mentioned on the stations and the other problems relating to the stations, it is not appropriate, at this stage, to comment any further, save that – I can say this, because I have communicated this to the director of my bike station – I am nothing short of appalled that these stations, having started operation, I believe on 27th November of last year, should be experiencing such widespread problems already.

1005 The Government is, therefore, closely examining all the available options in relation to GibiBikes. This includes the roll-out of the scheme to the rest of Gibraltar. No policy decision has yet been taken as a result of these commercial discussions.

1010 The Government is further concerned that, as the capital cost of the project to date comes to just over £324,000, there are also serious issues relating to the reliability of the equipment, which the Government has already taken up with the supplier. The recurring operating expenses are also a matter for concern.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, thank you.

I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for Transport for his answer to the question.

1015 You mentioned that there is a discussion of all the available options at the moment, including the roll-out of the system to the other stations, which certainly, on GibiBikes website, are listed as stations that are available and have not been because they were subject to that roll-out phase.

Is it not correct, perhaps... and I do understand, I will declare that I am a user, and perhaps that is why they are in such a terrible state! (Laughter)

1020 A Member: Exactly!

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, before someone else makes the link! (Laughter) I am a user, and I am aware that there are many faults, of which I have reported a number and I am quite surprised to hear that the system for reporting is not actually online and that the time I spent reporting them is actually time wasted!

1025 But conscious as I am of the difficulties that are being experienced in respect of the reliability or otherwise of the equipment in place, would the Minister not agree that, despite those difficulties and subject to the contractual arrangements with the supplier, details of which I am not aware, it would no doubt be of benefit to the community to continue with the roll-out of this system?

1030 Is it not the case, also – and I apologise for the length of the preamble – would the Minister agree that continuing to roll out the system, as had been the previous administration's policy, would be of more benefit to the community... rather, would help to develop the use of the system more, by making it more widely available and as user-friendly as it had originally been intended to be?

1035 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I very much respect that, when Mr Holliday was photographed riding the bike, he did intend the system to be user-friendly.

1040 However, unfortunately, as I have just explained to this House, the system has widespread problems. I have listed some of the most important ones. The fact that installations which were rolled out on 27th November of only last year should be experiencing such widespread problems of bikes deteriorating, oxidation, clamps having to be replaced, locks not being able to be released, software crashdowns, at a cost of already £328,000, the Government, before expending any additional taxpayers' money, has to carefully consider whether or not it must do so, given the cost incurred and the widespread problems that are being experienced.

1045 Look, in a way, it is my view that the previous Minister may have put the cart before the horse, given that there are also safety concerns, of there being no safety lanes for bike users. I for one think that the more that people use the bus, or bikes the better, and that people should change their minds and walk to work is indeed preferable. That, I am sure the hon. Member will agree with me, has to be juxtaposed with the costs to the taxpayer and the problems being incurred. If we can do it at a reasonable cost and being sure that we will not have another systematic failure of the system by rolling out the programme, we will take it into account, but at this point, given the problems experienced, we will have to take the problems strictly under advisement.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just a couple more questions on the issue.

I am just going to bring the issue down to its fundamentals. Is the Government of the view that the concept of a GibiBikes urban bike rental scheme is positive for the community and it is therefore committed to rolling out as a matter of priority a comprehensive system, subject to the difficulties that they are having and those difficulties being dealt with or changed, however the Government choose to deal with it? Is it committed to a useful, reliable urban bike rental scheme for Gibraltar?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I believe I have already answered the question.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has said that, in his view, it is a good idea. I have asked him whether it is the Government's policy to pursue an urban bike rental scheme as a matter of priority.

Hon. N F Costa: And before I sat down, I said we will have to take a policy decision, given the problems being experienced.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker, but taking a policy decision on the basis of the problems being experienced is a different matter altogether to saying, in a vacuum, 'We consider an urban bike rental scheme to be of benefit for the community and therefore, if we can find a suitable system, then we are certainly going to pursue it because we consider it as a matter of priority.'

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, in a fairy-tale land, with no problems, no cost considerations or Health and Safety concerns, yes – in the vacuum.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for that, because I think it is actually very important and certainly it was the previous administration's policy to roll out this urban bike rental scheme, because there is no doubt that usage, despite all the difficulties, according to the figures that the Minister has provided to us, is actually on the up. Certainly it is not hard – it does not take long, walking around – to see that they are actually being used, so whatever limited bikes are available, they are certainly in use. That is a very good marker, certainly, for the importance of it, because of course, the present Government is all about costs. The present Government is all about consultation and ensuring that the cost of the initiative is worth it in the long-run.

I ask the Minister how important, or how highly does he rank the beneficial impact of such an urban bike schemes on the alleviation of a certain amount of traffic on our roads; the fact that it is promoting cycling in the community; the fact that it is promoting a healthy activity; and that, in due course – even bearing in mind the realities of cycling in Gibraltar – it may cause a paradigm shift to come about and the bicycle may eventually become a genuine alternative means of transport in Gibraltar?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it would appear that the hon. Gentleman either has not heard my reply or refuses to accept the reality of the current problems being experienced by the GibiBikes stations.

Look, we have paid to these gentlemen in the UK £324,000 – right? That money could have been used in doctors, teachers, nurses, care workers and other people who are desperately needed by this society.

Now, is a bikes urban scheme a good idea? I have already answered: the answer is yes. In an ideal world, in Walt Disney, where there are no cost implications, where there are no safety concerns, yes, it is a good idea. I have said that in my original answer, in my second supplementary answer and in my third supplementary answer.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, unfortunately, the Minister seems to be expressing the view which is worryingly becoming the trend and that is the short-termist approach of this Government. There seems to be no long-term vision – certainly in respect of this matter – because he refers to £324,000 and he refers to the fact that with that £324,000 you can hire more doctors, more nurses, more teachers, and fund other projects in the community which are just as valuable.

But what is concerning, Mr Speaker, is that there seems to be no long-term vision about the long-term beneficial impact, which I suspect the Minister for the Environment would agree with me – certainly at least in part – is the positive impact of such a scheme and such a paradigm shift towards using the bicycle in respect of the environment, in respect of traffic, and in respect of a number of other issues.

So Mr Speaker, I ask him again: how highly... and perhaps I will wait until he is paying attention, because I would like to afford him the opportunity of answering the question.

It is okay, I am waiting.

Mr Speaker: I think the question has been asked.

Hon. S M Figueras: I just need to repeat the question, because I suspect, Mr Speaker – with your indulgence – that he has not quite grasped the concept of the question itself, and it is really very simple.

How highly does he rank the importance of bringing about a paradigm shift in respect of cycling as an alternative means of transport, in the list of priorities which he is now considering in respect of the bike scheme?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, a paradigm shift, in changing the psychological minds of the people to walk or use the bus or cycle to work is extremely important to this Government because, as the hon. Member will know, we have already issued a tender to be able to be advised on how we achieve exactly that.

The hon. Member cannot tell me that as a result of this bike scheme, that in itself would transform into this paradigm shift that he is talking about. He cannot tell me that and he cannot also accuse this Government of short-termism because we are consulting with the industry or with the general public at large. That one thing does not follow from the other, and we are not obsessed with costs. However, costs are an important consideration and must be factored into any policy decision that the Government makes.

I have already told him that I do think that the bike urban scheme is a good idea, but that is speaking in a vacuum. Government has to consider not just whether something is a good idea or not, but the costs. It also considers other implications as well: the system, etc.

So he does not need to repeat the question or accuse me of not being able to grasp the question. I have already told him that, whereas it may have been a good idea for Minister Holliday at the time to be photographed using a bike for electoral purposes – because let us remember that this was rolled out on 27th November 2011, with an election on 8th December 2011 – in other words a few weeks before, and I am not sure whether Minister Holliday at the time used bikes to come to work or he walked to work or not – but the point I am trying to make is that he did put the cart before the horse, because he cannot tell me that it is not dangerous, in some areas of Gibraltar, to use bikes.

But, of course, this programme was rushed through for electoral purpose, without consideration for anything – cost, safety or anything else. If that is not short-termism, if that is not political opportunity, nothing else is!

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I commend the Hon. Minister for taking all of 10 minutes of resistance to referring to the rolling out of the GibiBikes scheme as only an electoral gimmick.

However, it continues to concern me that this approach to come out in this House and say that cycling in Gibraltar is dangerous, and as simple as that, without referring to –

Hon. N F Costa: On a point of order, I never said dangerous; I said it raises safety issues – quite different.

Hon. S M Figueras: I think, Mr Speaker, Hansard will show that he did, in fact, say that cycling in Gibraltar is dangerous – on that point of order.

Hon. N F Costa: Potentially.

Hon. S M Figueras: Well, so, when I talk about the paradigm shift, Mr Speaker, I am not saying – and I have never said, certainly not in this House – that the introduction of an urban bike rental scheme would bring about this shift. The shift will only be brought about through consistent campaigns of awareness, implication and facilitating and incentivising the use of the bicycle as an alternative means of transport. That is the point I was making.

I am grateful to the Minister for his [inaudible].

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not know if there was a question there.

1160 However, let me tell him this: that if they were so concerned, if they were so obsessed, if it was so important to have this paradigm shift in the psychological maturity of Gibraltar, for people not to get in their cars, perhaps the Trafalgar Interchange may have made use and ability for people to be able to cross and have not created a system whereby it only caters for cars.

1165 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, regardless of the terms in which he alluded to it, the Hon. Minister alluded to the issue of safety – let us put it in those terms.

Can he say whether he is aware... since it was launched as a ‘pre-Election gimmick’ in November, can he say whether there have been any reported traffic accidents involving users of GibiBikes?

1170 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have not asked.

1175 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, if he has not asked whether there have been any traffic accidents involving the users of GibiBikes in nearly six months, then either it is not as dangerous as he thinks, or he cannot be so concerned about the safety implications of the GibiBikes scheme. Does he accept from me that were he to genuinely consider safety to be a consideration in the...?

By the way, I should have prefixed my question by saying that I entirely support him in his view to get the contractor to comply with whatever contractual standard is required and it is certainly unacceptable to this side of the House, as I hope and I am gratified to see it is unacceptable on that side of the House, that a contractor should think that they can sell us a product which is then not operating to the promised or contracted standard specification.

1180 But, that aside, I am questioning him only on his allusion to safety, that if he is not aware whether there has been any accidents – and I certainly have not read of any in the newspaper, but that does not mean that there have not been any – if he were concerned about safety as an issue in formulation of the Government’s thinking – should he not by now have interested himself about what the record on safety is in relation to users of GibiBikes?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

1190 Hon. P R Caruana: The question was addressed to the Hon. Minister – but the Hon. Chief Minister can answer if he thinks the Hon. Minister will not be able to.

1195 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, assuming that the hon. Gentleman has asked the question because he thinks his Shadow Minister (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) for the Environment and Transport (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) was not able to appreciate that nuance either and he felt that he had to get up and ask that question –

Mr Speaker: Order.

We had an issue before. The Government is entitled to choose who answers which questions – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

1200 Hon. Chief Minister: He did it for 16 years!

1205 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, with respect to you, I have not questioned their entitlement; I have made a political comment about what might be a proper interpretation of the fact that he chooses to answer it. It does not raise issues of entitlement.

Hon. Chief Minister: In which case, the political comment is thrown straight back at him, because of his decision to ask the question in relation to a (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) member of his Shadow Cabinet and, of course, Mr Speaker, the point is live as to what used to happen here for 16 years!

1210 Several Members: Hear, hear! (Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, anyway.

Hon. P R Caruana: Of course, of course it is Mr. Speaker but he used to criticize it! (Laughter)

1215 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I have got up to answer this question because I think it is important... I think it is important to link what the hon. Gentleman has now addressed to the hon. – my colleague, Mr. Costa, who I am perfectly happy to allow to answer the part of his question which he may wish to answer.

1220 I am comfortable that he will be able to discharge his function in answering very well indeed to the premise of the Hon. Mr. Figueras's statement about the paradigm shift, but Mr. Speaker; what evidence did the hon. Members opposite, when they made the investment in these schemes, the GibiBike scheme, have, that it would lead to a paradigm shift in the way that people move around (Interjection) Gibraltar? What evidence Mr. Speaker is there even today, in the premise of the Hon. Mr. Figueras's question that it's actually working in a way that affects the way that people transport themselves around Gibraltar, because the figures that we have provided them show the number of trips there are on these bikes, but that does not tell you whether these are people who might have been walking to work before and the bikes are actually creating more traffic. This doesn't tell you whether those people were on the buses before, because if these people are the sort of people who are genuinely and rightly concerned about the way that they transport themselves around Gibraltar and they don't want to use their cars, it is also possible to assume, Mr. Speaker, that these people would have been the ones previously already walking to work or catching the bus.

1230 What statistic did they seek at the time that they were in Government before making this investment? Because, Mr. Speaker, if we are not genuinely concerned with safety because we have not asked for the statistic from the police about the number of accidents involving bikes, then what concern did they have for the paradigm shift if they did not have the mechanisms in place before they made the investment to assess how many people, not would use the bikes; how many people would go from the car to the bike? How many people would go from the motorbike to the bike?

1235 And so, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Gentleman's point about not having sought the statistic, when seen in the context of the other hon. Gentleman's earlier points, I think evidences the fact that either we are both as concerned about safety and the paradigm shift or neither of us are concerned about either safety or the paradigm shift; although I do recognize, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman, when he started his supplementaries on this was deprecatory of himself in a way that he need not be because, having seen the photograph in the Gibraltar Chronicle when this was launched, I am sure that was more responsible for the (Laughter) damage done to the bike than he could ever do to it by simply riding it!

1245 Hon. N F Costa: Mr. Speaker, to answer the (Interjection) question –

Mr Speaker: The question has been answered by the Hon. the Chief Minister –

Hon. N F Costa: Well, not the part about safety –

1250 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker, I do not think that what the Hon. the Chief Minister has just said is even a persuasive attempt to conflate two completely unrelated issues – presumably, for the purposes of trying to muddy the waters.

1255 The debate about the alleged paradigm shift – has it happened or not and what was the evidence, in advance, for the fact that it would or would not happen? – upon which I might express a view, but will not, so as not to further muddy the waters, is wholly irrelevant to the question that I have asked, which is: given that the hon. Member has gratuitously alluded to the question of safety, I asked him what evidence he had, and what steps he had taken to establish, whether there was any justifiable basis for his raising, in this House, concerns about safety.

1260 Would he now please answer that?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr. Speaker, as I was about to say before, at the very first meeting of the Gibraltar Bus Company Limited, where we discussed the GibiBike scheme, the very first thing I did ask for was for the technicians and the responsible people to come back to me as to where we could have safety bike lanes all over Gibraltar.

1265 So you can see, Mr. Speaker, it is not that we have asked for the statistics of accidents, my very first instruction, in relation to GibiBikes, was to see whether, in Gibraltar's narrow roads, we could have safety lanes.

1270 Hon. P R Caruana: So he raises it in this House on the basis that he asked a question to which he has not had an answer, Mr. Speaker. That is all that I was trying to establish.

Can I, therefore, say to the hon. Member; if he is concerned about the safety of grown workers using bikes on Gibraltar's – according to him – inappropriate streets for cycling, what is the Government's policy to prevent our own children from riding their bicycles on the same narrow, inappropriate, and presumably even more dangerous, streets?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the policy of successive Governments, at least since 1982, has been that the Royal Gibraltar Police carry out something called the cycling proficiency test – which I am very pleased to say I passed at the first attempt (Laughter) at Sacred Heart Middle School and I am sure that many of us also here will have done so – and I hope, and we all hope, that that, and whatever other tuition young children are given in how careful they need to be when interfacing with the traffic, when they are riding the bikes, has not resulted, to date, in any serious accidents.

1280

I am sure that we all agree that it never will but, Mr. Speaker, that is not to say, that is not to say that Gibraltar's roads were safe enough for the introduction, not of another young Gibraltarian enjoying his youth and teens on his bicycle, but 300 or 400 – I don't know how many – bikes, all to be taken at once in the morning across our streets and back in the evening, when people were going back to work. That was our concern.

1285

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do hope that it's not just our concern. I do hope – now, look, we call it an electoral gimmick; they say it is the beginning of a paradigm shift in the way that people transport themselves across Gibraltar – but I do hope that we agree on that and, in the longer term, if schemes like this are going to prosper what we should be doing is making this one part of the project and not all of it, and that we should be looking at making cycling on our roads more attractive and safer, etc, etc.

1290

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker, does the hon. Member accept that, just as I have accepted, getting the contractor to comply and all of that are perfectly legitimate things for the hon. Members to require; that it is completely... to say that one of the things that is in the melting pot about the future of this scheme, amongst others, are considerations of safety.

1295

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member – I don't want to get into a debate with him about whether the paradigms have been shifted or not: I think it's far too esoteric a subject for so early in the morning. But, look, paradigms or not, shifts or not, there are 419, presumably adult, members of this community who, in the full knowledge of the length and width of our roads (Interjection) and their appropriateness or inappropriateness for cycling, have become members of the scheme and who presumably use it.

1300

That, coupled to the fact that there is no evidence of accident – I think the Hon. Chief Minister has just acknowledged – should lead the hon. Members to the conclusion that, whatever might be the other criteria by which they might want to make a decision about the future of this scheme, and it is entirely a matter for them and policy, safety would be a bogus one, because the idea that you stop 419 members using a scheme on safety grounds, whilst not replicating the same prohibition – or rather, protective attitude – to all the other citizens of the community who are using our roads would lack a degree of logical application of concern for safety.

1305

The final point I would ask you to acknowledge would be relevant, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that all uses of the road are dangerous, whether you are in a car, whether you are a pedestrian. Look, perhaps that one of the most dangerous things people do on our roads is ride motorcycles. It is part of the risks of living. Nobody said, 'Well, we're going to ban motorcycles, or the Government is going to form a view on an activity on the basis of the safety issues about it.'

1310

Would the hon. Member acknowledge that, except in some capital cities in which on some streets, not all of their streets even, on some of their streets they may have cycle lanes and even cycle pavements, lanes on cycle pavements, in almost every city, capital and non-capital, where this scheme exists, they are used on roads without cycle lanes, on many occasions in many circumstances, and that that is not regarded as being a valid reason for discontinuing a scheme that is thought, if it is thought, by the Government to be valuable in other respects and for other reasons.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I fear this is the sort of debate where we concentrate on disagreement because we are in Parliament whilst, if we were sitting around the table having a coffee, we'd be mates agreeing on much of what we're saying.

1325 The hon. Gentleman prefaces his question by saying 'Doesn't he agree that it is bogus for them to say that safety is a consideration?' Of course, I cannot agree that what we have been talking about is bogus (Interjection) but, Mr. Speaker, look, a Prime Minister – not a Chief Minister – a Prime Minister has said on this subject – which the hon. Gentleman will know, he is quite enamoured of that: 'one takes one's life in one's hands when one gets on one's bike', in particular in London, to go from where he used to live down to Downing Street, or wherever his offices happened to be, probably at Portcullis House at the time, when Security allowed him to go to work on his bike. So we are not saying... this is not a nanny-state approach to the whole thing, where we are saying you can only have GibiBikes if we can put a third wheel on them and you're in cotton wool.

1330 But that is not to say that safety is a bogus concern. Safety is, of course, a concern if you are going to further roll out the scheme and if you are going to try and encourage more people to use this mechanism. If you are going to use it for that paradigm shift and, Mr. Speaker, of course he is right, and we agree, one of the concerns that needs to be put in the mix – it is not the only concern, it's one of the concerns that needs to be put in the mix.

1335 The hon. Gentleman said that one of the most dangerous things that people do on our roads is drive mopeds and we are not looking to 'illegalize' that. I will agree with him to this extent; I think one of the most dangerous things that people do on our roads now is walk because of the way that people ride their mopeds and how that can affect people who are perfectly legitimately walking about their business.

1340 This is not a nanny-state approach to the GibiBikes, which we are not prepared to take in relation to other matters. It is that this is a factor, as the hon. Gentleman has said in answer to the first question, in respect of further roll-out, because Gibraltar is not London, and Gibraltar is not Oxford, but in London and in Oxford there are many accidents involving cyclists, not necessarily involving the public bike scheme: sometimes – in fact, I think even more often – I venture to say, because the schemes have not been around for very long, involving peoples' private cycle bikes that they have been using for many generations. Would that we never see the sort of accidents that have been seen in cities like that.

1345 But Gibraltar is small and injecting 419 bikes, or perhaps going even further and injecting another 400 bikes, could create a number of issues. One of those issues is the safety concern that we, as a Government, believe, as a matter of policy, has to be one of the things in the mix, in the equation, when determining further roll out.

1350 But I want to acknowledge, before I sit down, the hon. Gentleman's positive attitude in respect of the failings of the scheme, and how the Government, whether it is contracted by one political colour and then followed up by a Government of another political colour, is entitled to have got the product that the taxpayer has paid for. I acknowledge his support in that and, whilst I am here – I know there is another question on the Order Paper – it is opposite now, his support also, in respect of the other matter which has been ventilated in public, which is the tunnel under the runway and the claim in that respect, where he has publicly already made the same sort of statement as is made in respect of the contract in respect of these bikes.

City Fire Brigade Installation of smoke extractor system

Clerk: Question 353, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1370

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister with the responsibility for the Fire Brigade tell us if the new smoke extractor system has been installed at the City Fire Brigade?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, the Chief Fire

Officer has already identified the most suitable exhaust system and is in the process of purchasing it, with a view to installing it as soon as possible.

1380 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister elaborate on what ‘as soon as possible’ means; within the next few days, few weeks, few months?

Hon. S E Linares: I am hoping that it will be in the next few weeks, but it cannot be guaranteed. But, yes, in the next few weeks.

City Fire Brigade
Start of audit and site of new fire station

1390 Clerk: Question 354, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister with the responsibility for the Fire Brigade tell us if the City Fire Brigade’s audit has started and where the new fire station will be sited?

1395 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, the Government has already decided who will conduct the City Fire Brigade’s audit.

1400 Sir Ken Knight, who is the UK Government’s Chief Fire and Rescue Adviser for England since 2007, has been appointed to conduct the audit, and will begin sometime after the Olympic Games in London, since he forms part of the COBRA Committee.

As to the second part of her question, Government is not in a position to state where the new fire station will be located.

1405 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, does the Minister have a cost for the audit yet?

Hon. S E Linares: Not exactly, because it depends on how long the audit will take and, therefore... It is on a cost basis. It is whatever it costs to fly people over and the time they take – that is the cost. So we won’t know until they actually do the audit.

1410 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, has the Minister not obtained a quote for this-

Hon. S E Linares: Sorry?

1415 Hon. S M Figueras: – has the relevant Department not obtained a quote of the expected cost for the audit?

Hon. S E Linares: No, because I think what the offer was from the very beginning is a very, very, very good offer.

1420 That means that Sir Ken Knight will not be charging normal charges for his duties. He will just come over on a cost basis, not as a professional, but on what it costs to do the audit, so therefore there is no implication of... as if he was doing it for the UK. So I think it is a very good deal. He is a very professional man and, therefore, we should be grateful at the fact that he is doing the audit in the way he has actually agreed with us.

1425 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, will the audit be tabled in Parliament?

1430 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I do not think that sort of audit is the sort of document that we would table in Parliament but I think it’s not something that we would pretend not to share with Members opposite. Rather, even if we don’t go through formal tabling, I think it is the sort of document that they should have access to, whether or not we decide it should be published.

My inclination, as the Hon. Leader of the Opposition will know, is that reports of that sort should be published. Unless there is a good reason why it should not be published, it will be, but even if it should not be published, it should certainly, in my view, be shared with Members opposite.

1435 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister confirm if, once the audit has been conducted, then he will be in a position to tell us where the new fire station will be sited?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, they do go hand in hand because, depending on the outcome of the audit...
1440 The thing is that the audit should identify our needs – our future needs – and therefore that will help out for us to formulate and to prepare for the new fire station: so, yes.

1445 Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer
Current status of post

Clerk: Question 355, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1450 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies tell us if the post for Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer has been filled, how many people applied, and if this is a newly created post?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1455 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, the post for Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer has not been filled.

A total of six applications were received and interviews were carried out on 10th May 2012. The post is newly created.

1460 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, is this newly created post part of the restructure of the Civil Contingencies administrative structure, and if so, how has it been restructured?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, this post comes about as a result of, I believe, a long-standing request, or a long-standing proposal, by the previous Government's, and the current Government's, consultant on this 1465 issue, Mr. Edmonds, who I understand has long been suggesting that there was a need to have in place the ability, as part of the civil contingency issues, to communicate nationally and internationally in the event of a civil contingency. The new Government's own view is that this was an area that needed bolstering – so it is a combination of both of those factors.

1470 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, was this job advertised with the ETB?

Hon. S E Linares: The job must be advertised through the ETB. It is a legal requirement.

1475 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, is this the position where retired Lt. Colonel Stuart Green is being considered for and he is, or was, the MoD's Press Officer?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to say exactly the names of the six applicants. I don't think it is right, in Parliament, to say who the six applicants were at this stage.

1480 The answer has been that it has not been filled, so I think it should not be the Minister who states who is the person who is going to get it...

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member is aware that the Gibraltar Chronicle has commented publicly on one candidate but not the others so it is a rather peculiar state of affairs, I am sure he would agree.

1485 Mr. Speaker I just, if the hon. Member will allow me, just like to take up the Hon. the Chief Minister on something that he has said. As he knows, the Civil Contingency Committee is a creation of my administration and, indeed, he may also be aware that it is one of those issues that we needed, to struggle with the United Kingdom and its representatives in Gibraltar, to obtain local governmental control over. It was one of the activities – emergency response – that they, in our view mistakenly, held the view belonged to the Convent, even though they did nothing about it, of course.

Mr. Speaker, our experience, will the hon. Member agree to give some consideration to? It was done . . . the media aspect of civil contingencies was done by the Government's Media Officer, just as other aspects of the Civil Contingency Committee was done by people who had another full-time job, so the Government's Technical Department personnel, the Government's Health Department's personnel, the Government's Environmental Department's personnel – these guys all have full-time jobs, and, in the context of the civil contingency, adopt that expertise and deliver it through the Civil Contingency Committee in the context of its work.

Would he consider two things; first of all, that there would not appear to be any particularly logical basis for ring-fencing the media function of the various civil contingency functions for needing exclusive resource; and, secondly, would he consider that if it is true that the successful candidate here is going to dedicate himself to civil contingency media work, and this is not a side door or even a back door to be moved, then, to a more meaningful media job in the Government, that there really is insufficient media work for such a person to do as a civil contingency media –

1500

I don't say this in any way other than just to share with the hon. Member my experience of this – with the best will in the world – that I am delighted they remain committed to the Civil Contingency Committee and I am delighted that it is their policy to increase its resources and to further develop its expertise and resources. But, frankly, Mr. Speaker, I would urge you to consider whether employing a dedicated media officer who, necessarily, will have practically nothing to do for much of the time, is not the first place to start in increasing its resources. Will he put my mind at rest that this will not result in some... order of time that he will, no doubt, ensure were decent, if it happens at all, for this successful candidate, whoever it might be, to move to other media pastures? In other words, this is not a side or back door to a Government media job or to a post for a Civil Contingency media job. Will he also consider that the successful applicant – if they do decide to proceed with this appointment – should be somebody who, as we always used to do when we employed non-Gibraltarians, were completely committed to working on this issue exclusively for the Government of Gibraltar and represent nobody else.

1515

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I understand that not all the six applicants are foreign. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

There are some local applicants –

Hon. P R Caruana: It depends whether you treat British people as 'foreign'.

Hon. Chief Minister: Indeed, but there may be some there who are not British.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that, in the time that he created the Civil Contingencies Committee, he was never criticized by the Opposition for having done so. The idea that in a civil – and that very word gives part of the game away – in a civil contingency, automatically issues of internal security should be engaged is one which makes absolutely no sense and, unless there are clear internal security issues engaged, then all matters in Gibraltar are managed by the Gibraltar Government, which is what the General Election results in. People choose a government in a General Election to run everything that is given to us under the constitution and that includes every civil contingency. If there are aspects of the civil contingency which have internal security connotations, in the same way that there are aspects of daily life which involve the Royal Gibraltar Police which do not come under the control of the elected Government, of course I accept that and I support the fact that a Committee was created for that purpose under the Gibraltar Government, under the new Constitution. So, Mr. Speaker, that he can take from me.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will see from the title of the post that it is a 'Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer' because I hope he agrees with me that we all wish that the person charged with civil contingencies' issues should not have a lot of work to do, other than training when that is necessary.

1535

So, Mr. Speaker, I believe that if there is to be an increase in the civil contingencies compliment, then it needs to be in respect of being ready to deal with a contingency when it occurs, which will not be often. Therefore, we take the view, as well, that whoever is employed needs to be doing a meaningful job in respect of the rest of their time. Mr. Speaker, as a result of that, the job has a dual sense; I think he may know that, since 9th December, there has been a restructuring of the office – what was called the Office of the Chief Minister. We take the view that the Office of the Chief Minister is the incumbent and that it is the Civil Service that provides the service to the Chief Minister... There has been an element of restructuring of the Media Office – of the back of the Media Office – in other words behind Clive Golt, and there may be a need to bolster that service on a day to day basis, not necessarily at No. 6 Convent Place but elsewhere in the wider Government.

So, those issues, which the hon. Gentleman has brought to my attention, I do consider and I am grateful for him having highlighted them.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, in the past, hon. Members, when they were in Opposition, were critical of the Government when we appointed retired persons in receipt of a pension to publicly funded posts, which they took the view should be available to persons in a different stage of their economic life-cycle. It is not a view that, by the way, I entirely share. I think it is 'horses for courses'. It depends on the expertise involved, it depends on the availability of the expertise.

I never shared the then Opposition – now Government's – view that it was intrinsically wrong to engage retired people, or people who were retiring from a post and to claw their expertise back, but certainly we used to take the view that it was subject to the over-riding principle that there was something that prevented somebody from being appointed who wanted a job and who was still engaged in that stage of the working life.

Can I just ask the hon. Member to clarify for me – I am grateful to him for pointing out the reference to the Departmental Press Officer – could he point out whether this is a sequitur or a non sequitur: in other words, 'vacancy for Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer', does that mean Press Officer for the Department in which Civil Contingencies lives, so that he is the Press Officer for the Department in its Civil Contingency and non-Civil Contingency functions, or is this 'departmental' in the plural sense, vacancy for Civil Contingencies and Press officer for all the Government Departments?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I think there are two questions there and I'll take them in turn.

The first, Mr. Speaker, is that he is right. We do not believe that people who are retired and who have a pension and who are therefore economically self-sufficient at that stage should be taking jobs away from people who are unemployed or who are looking to, in a younger stage in life, improve their lot. I agree with that position now, as much as I am in Government as I did when we were in Opposition making the point, but there are some instances where, and I think it is a question of degree between us, where if you are looking for specific sorts of expertise, there may not exist in younger people that expertise,

But, Mr. Speaker, if you do, therefore, find yourself having to take somebody on who is retired, I do not think one should fall into one of two traps that the hon. Gentleman fell into, which I hope I and my Government will avoid. The first is appointing and the hon. Gentleman knows, and it is an issue of dispute between us that, in some instances, we believe people were appointed like this: they were told that they had the job because, politically, the hon. Gentleman took the decision that they should have it. We do not believe that should be the case and, certainly, what we do not, and will not do, is say that people cannot apply for a job to a board that then makes a recommendation.

Mr. Speaker, if somebody were to be appointed who is a retired person, because that person has the necessary expertise and that expertise may not be available from others then, in my view, what must also be done is that we must find somebody who can be appointed with them, alongside them, to distil that expertise so that, at the end of what I hope would be a relatively short period of contracting – that example – there is a younger, hopefully always in our lexicon, Gibraltarian, person or Gibraltar-resident person who will have distilled that expertise and that can then take the job for the longer period. That is the first point and, Mr. Speaker, I told him, in relation to the second point, that there had been a restructuring of what is behind Clive Golt as the Chief Press Officer.

Mr. Golt is the Press Officer to the Government, not just to the Office of the Chief Minister. But it is clear, and I think he will agree with me that it is clearly the case that the Office of the Chief Minister is the one that produces the most interaction with the press when there is not just a civil contingency but, for example, a Royal visit cancelled as a result of something happening on the ground –

Hon. P R Caruana: ... [Inaudible] the case before Dr Cortes was elected into Government. I don't think that is the case any more! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: – but there are, in the Departments, also things going on which need to be communicated to the electorate, to the public and to the wider world.

1600 Therefore, what we are looking at doing here is to keeping some of the Press Office expertise, functions and resource available to the Chief Minister and No. 6 Convent Place, where the Deputy Chief Minister also happens now to be, and making available to the other Departments a co-ordinator for their PR purposes and their – I should not say PR – their communications purposes. So that is how we think that this could work.

Clerk: Question 356 –

1605 Mr. Speaker: Before we move to another topic, would this be a convenient moment for a short comfort break?

The House will recess, say, for 10 minutes maximum.

1610 The House adjourned at 11.20 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 11.35 a.m.

Gibraltar Sports Authority Board
Details of meetings since Question 246 of 2012

1615

Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.
Question 356, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1620 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of dates when the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority Board have met since his answer to Question No. 246 of 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1625 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, the Gibraltar Sports Authority Board met on 4th April 2012. The next meeting is scheduled for 23rd May 2012.

1630 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr. Speaker, and at that meeting did the Hon. Minister, as Chairman of the Board, have occasion to raise and discuss with them what he said in the March meeting that he had no problem with, and that was to consider whether these meetings might perhaps be held in public, or publish the minutes of said Board meetings?

1635 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, we did have a discussion on that issue and the Board was of the view that it should not be a public meeting, but that there could be elements of the deliberations of the Board that could become public. It could well become public because, through the website – the new website that the Sports and Leisure Authority are currently constructing...

1640 The website will have lots of information to do with the Board: they will have an independent website. It is nothing to do, really, with the question but I thought that, because all the other questions that the Shadow Minister is posing to me – which I am happy to answer – will be answered through the website. So this is one of the issues that will be highlighted in the website. Will be in the website.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and any inclination of dates by when this website might be operational?

1645 Hon. S E Linares: Unfortunately, I have not got dates but I can say that the Chief Executive has already identified somebody who is working with the staff there in order to build up the website, so should I say ‘imminent’, ‘soon’, ‘a couple of weeks’, ‘months’, hopefully? So it is coming soon.

1650 Hon. E J Reyes: Okay. I think, perhaps, that one might know the answer but, just for the sake of the record, will the Sports Authority then make it public once the website is fully operational and guide people as to how to tap in and access and so on?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, I hope so.

1655 Websites usually have a lot of links and lots of information on them and I am hoping that by the Sports and Leisure Authority themselves controlling the website, that all the information appertaining to sports and leisure and what is to do with the Bayside Complex will be in the website, so that they will decide what is in the website.

As a Minister, I will not have any input as to the information. I could have input by putting a foreword or some press releases but the control will be from the Sports and Leisure Authority.

Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council
Details of meetings since Question 243 of 2012

1665 Clerk: Question 357, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of dates when the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council and / or any of its sub-committees has met since his answer to Question No. 243 of 2012?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1675 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council has met on the following dates: Sub-committee meeting on 15th February 2012, carried on 16th February 2012; full Council meeting on 24th February 2012; Sub-committee again meeting on 28th March 2012; and the full Council meeting was on 9th May 2012.

1680 Hon. E J Reyes: And, likewise, Mr. Speaker, last time the Hon. Minister did say that he would even dare to propose himself, the public attendance at meetings and publication of minutes, and so on. Do we have any further updates on that issue?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, and I did actually propose it .

1685 The Council thought that we should not have public meetings, as such, for the simple reason that these are people that are selected by the sporting fraternities associations onto the Board, and that they were quite satisfied that information was filtering down. But as I have just answered to the previous Question, I asked them whether it would be feasible – because I wanted it to be more open and transparent – whether information can be put through the Sports and Leisure Authorities website. They acceded to that: they said that they had no problem with that, and that probably even minutes will be published on the Sports and Leisure Authority website.

1690 So I am quite happy that they feel comfortable at how we can have all these meetings more open, more transparent, so that the public can know exactly what has happened during these meetings – at least what in the general terms, rather than in the specifics of what everybody said in the meeting.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

1695 I would record my gratitude to the Hon. Minister for having followed that one up and, likewise, I think I can accept his word that as soon as possible this will be up and running, and I concur with him; I don't think we have ever questioned, on either side of the House, the transparency of the meetings, but rather that people get the correct information because some information is disseminated in an after-meeting coffee or drink and then it becomes second- or third-hand information and sometimes people get a bit upset because they have not quite heard the full deliberations that have been carried out at the Advisory Council level.

1700 So, yes, he can count on my full support just to ensure that all sporting associations, whether they, for that particular year, hold a seat on the Advisory Council or not, so that they are as acquainted with deliberations and recommendations as much as possible.

Thank you.

1705 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr. Speaker; just to add that I thank the Shadow Minister for acknowledging that.

When I said about open and transparency I did not intend to mean open and transparency in a political sense, in any way. I think it is meant for the fraternity of sports, and I concur with him that there are, sometimes, many issues that come up and there is a lot of quarrels, fights, controversies with things that people said or not said.

By doing this, I think it will avoid all these sometimes misrepresentations of what people say, or did not say, in meetings and all that.

So thank you.

GFA application to join UEFA
Details of improvements required to existing football facilities

Clerk: Question 358, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of improvements which may be required to the existing football facilities in order to ensure that the Gibraltar Football Association meets its requirements in respect of the pending application for membership of the European Governing Body of the sport?

1730

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, there are a number of options which are currently being examined by the Government and the Gibraltar Football Association, in conjunction with the requirements of UEFA, and in accordance with the advice that UEFA is providing. A reply to this Question will be provided once a decision on these options is taken.

1735

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr. Speaker, I ask this Question because I know that we have quite good, high level of sporting facilities but yet membership of a particular governing body – and I can think of a sport other than football – sometimes have peculiar circumstances that require them to throw in additional things. And there is a fair amount of talk already happening amongst other sporting associations, feeling that the new sort of impetus and a more realistic pending application from the Football Association might mean that other sports would end up, perhaps, losing out on current existing facilities.

1740

It may be too early a stage for the Minister to be able to commit himself but can I at least get from him some acknowledgement that other sports would not lose out despite whatever additional facilities we may have to provide for the football fraternity.

1745

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr. Speaker, he can get that assurance and I can assure the sporting fraternity that that will be the case, that they will not lose out in any of their facilities.

We are looking at additional facilities and therefore the operative word is ‘additional’; that means that it will not affect what is there currently, and we are hoping that it would be even better for other sports, so it is a question of a balancing act, as to how far we go with one without affecting others and, for sure, this Government will try its best not to affect any other sporting facilities in whatever way that the hon. Member might think that we are taking away from one sport and giving to the other. That will not be the case.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr. Speaker.

I look forward to the hon. Member, even sometimes without waiting, perhaps, to even have to be prompted by me at a particular Question Time, if he does become aware of some developments that would be mutually beneficial to the whole sporting fraternity in Gibraltar, perhaps he can keep me posted through simple correspondence or e-mail so that we may both, together, work as partners in achieving this rightful application that I believe should carry unanimous support from this House in respect of the Football Association’s application?

Hon. S E Linares: Sure, I will do.

Heritage Action Committee
Number of meetings met since Question 240 of 2012

1765 Clerk: Question 359, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Heritage say how many times the Heritage Action Committee has met since his answer to Question No. 240 of 2012.

1770 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr. Speaker, as stated in supplementary answer to Question No. 240 of 2012 the Government agreed to meet the Committee once every three months. Therefore, fulfilling this commitment, the next meeting is scheduled for 31st May 2012.

1775 Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, Mr. Speaker, my copy of Hansard of what was answered in Supplementary to Question No. 240 was that the Minister said that the Heritage Action Committee were now given the opportunity of meeting bi-monthly. Is that the option, bi-monthly or quarterly?

1780 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr. Speaker, what happened was that, in the Heritage Action Committee itself, I put that I wanted it to be bi-monthly. They actually said that it was not necessary and a three month period was enough. I actually offered to say, 'Well, if after two or three meetings we need to have bi-monthly meetings, we will have it.'

1785 Basically, we will have it as many times as the Heritage Action Committee wants to have the meetings. I am not the one to state... They are the ones to say, we, usually, when the meeting is finished, we say 'Well, can we now identify another date?' Sometimes, people say 'Can we meet within two months?' So be it. As long as my diary is available, I will be there to meet them as often as they want.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr. Speaker.

1790 So, in a nutshell, what we are saying is there should be a quarterly meeting but, depending on personal diaries and, in fact, depending perhaps on pending matters that sometimes need to be followed up, the frequency could even be greater than that. So we are establishing that, if anything, there's going to be an increase in meetings over a 12 month period rather than a decrease.

1795 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, sir.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

1800 Tree plantings since 1st January 2012
Details of costs, suppliers and tender processes

Clerk: Question 381, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1805 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide this House with details of trees planted in Gibraltar since 1st January 2012, including details of costs, suppliers and tender processes relevant to their procurement?

1810 Mr. Speaker: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the number of additional trees planted since 1st January 2012 is 103. This does not include any trees that may have been replaced by service providers if they have perished.

1815 I am handing over a list of trees that have been planted.

The cost of supplying and planting the trees was £12888.20, Gibrat-Flora and Greenarc were the suppliers and carried out the planting. Quotes were sought for specific trees in specific areas.

1820 Mr Speaker: Whilst awaiting a Supplementary may I compliment whoever was responsible for the improved plants in the lobby of this building. Is it the Minister's Department?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I would assume it is so but I can assure you I have not been personally involved.

1825 Mr Speaker: Well, you can accept Departmental responsibility and therefore I compliment you.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Thank you.

Proposed Commonwealth Park
Geotechnical surveys

1835 Clerk: Question 382, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether any geotechnical surveys have been conducted in the area of the proposed Commonwealth Park?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1840 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, to date no geotechnical surveys have been conducted in the area of Commonwealth Parade car park. The design of the Commonwealth Park project is underway and any necessary geotechnical investigations will be undertaken at the appropriate time, as the design progresses.

1845 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister can just clarify for me, whether these geotechnical surveys are required before the design process to establish whether or not the project itself is viable, as planned or at all? Or whether they just form part of the project when it commences and there is absolute certainty that it will, indeed, commence.

1850 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, the design is now being tightened up and, depending on where the different items that are going to go in the park are located, the project will have to...

The technical survey will depend: if you are going to put a lake in one area, you need to take on a different kind of survey than if you have to put it in another – so this is part of the process and as and when a necessity for any particular type of survey is identified now that the design is going actually to be laid out, then the necessary investigations will be carried out.

1855 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, my line of enquiries is actually focused more on the provision of the two floors, or rather on the provision of approximately 700 or so parking spaces, which is also approximately double the current number of car parking spaces in the Commonwealth car park, and I am intrigued whether the Minister can shed any light on whether the Government has a better idea, in respect of its ability to provide these 700 or so parkings underneath the Commonwealth Park, as they did in the manifesto?

1860 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, we are considering alternative locations to that car park (Laughter) and, once the decision on that is taken, then we will be able to see whether, in fact, it is going to go under there and what surveys will then be required.

1865 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, it seems rather defeatist – in the absence of any suggestion to the contrary – that the Government has proceeded to consider alternative locations, without actually establishing whether it is appropriate, possible, feasible, for economic or other reasons, to locate the car park underneath the Commonwealth Park, as illustrated so very clearly in their colourful manifesto, and I would ask the Minister whether he has actually given any thought, or sought advice, in respect of locating the parking spaces beneath the Commonwealth Park?

1870 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, it is not just the Minister but also the Chief Minister have sought advice, both technical and financial, about where to put these car parking spaces, both before the Election and after, and I know that the hon. Gentleman likes to refer to our manifesto as ‘colourful’, which I will interpret as brilliant, but the manifesto is very clear about what happens in respect of those car parking spaces; in other words, they will be underground or, if that cannot be the case, they will be provided elsewhere.

1875 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, it is not just the Minister but also the Chief Minister have sought advice, both technical and financial, about where to put these car parking spaces, both before the Election and after, and I know that the hon. Gentleman likes to refer to our manifesto as ‘colourful’, which I will interpret as brilliant, but the manifesto is very clear about what happens in respect of those car parking spaces; in other words, they will be underground or, if that cannot be the case, they will be provided elsewhere.

1880 So, Mr. Speaker, if ‘cannot’ can mean that it is also economically more viable to provide that number of parking spaces – I am not trying to wriggle out of the number of parking spaces – then I am sure they will want to agree with us that that is a much better use of taxpayers’ money. So, as I have had cause to say to him in previous sessions of the House, Mr. Speaker, and as my hon. colleague, the Minister for the Environment, has had cause to say to him in previous sessions of the House, he need not fear, he will soon be able to walk along the highways and byways of a lush garden in the centre of our city to be known as Commonwealth Park

1885 and he will be able to park his seven hundred cars as a resident of Gibraltar for nothing in the parking provided either underground, or elsewhere, at the same time as the park is provided.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, I refer only to the colourful manifesto – and my interpretation is certainly different to that of the Hon. the Chief Minister – because it is very clear in what it says. It says that it will provide the Commonwealth car park... they will create an underground car parking facility, subject to a geotechnical survey.

1890 My question is, therefore: the original question, indeed, sought to elicit from the Government whether that 1895 geotechnical survey was, indeed, carried out and whether it was as a result of that survey that the Government had taken the decision to look at alternatives. Have any geotechnical surveys been conducted to assess the feasibility of locating the underground parking where it was originally intended to be so?

1900 Hon. Chief Minister: It is just that assessing the feasibility – in other words, working out what it will cost – does not just depend on a geotechnical survey and, for that reason, it may not be necessary to get to the stage where a geotechnical survey is undertaken, if the Government is presented with a financially more viable – i.e. cheaper – option which is just, if not more attractive, for the parking, free of charge for residents, of 700 vehicles.

1905 I am sure what the hon. Gentleman is not saying is that we have to do the geotechnical survey at a cost to the taxpayer, if the Government has been presented with a better option to produce the 700 car parking spaces, on the terms provided for in the paragraph of the manifesto.

1910 Hon. S M Figueras: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not saying that they have to carry out the geotechnical survey. I am merely alluding to the fact that the manifesto set out, really rather quite clearly, that the location of the underground car parking was a decision that they would make, subject to a geotechnical survey. That things have changed since, and that I accept entirely.

1910 However, these financially cheaper or more attractive options that the Hon. the Chief Minister refers to as having been suggested – or I am interpreting as having been suggested or proposed to Government – is the Hon. the Chief Minister in a position to articulate, perhaps, some of the details of any of the proposals?

1915 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am, but I will not, because we will make a statement when we have got to the end of that negotiating process that we are undertaking with those who have made the proposal to us. It will become very clear, if we can go down that road, why that is a more viable option, and it will become very clear, if we cannot go down that road, because we will be telling him that we are undertaking a geotechnical survey in order to provide the car parking underground.

1920 So I think, in the fullness of time, all of this detail will emerge but, at the moment, we are not in a position to say, other than a proposal has been made – that is what we are going with. But, rest assured, he will be able to park his 700 cars and he will be able to walk along Commonwealth Park before the Election!

1925 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could just help the hon. Member a little bit further away from a commitment to his own manifesto commitment. I know that there are qualifications in it but the qualifications were much less highlighted than the colour photographs, of which there were many!

1930 Mr. Speaker, I think we can all agree that the introduction of urban green areas and urban parks is not just an amenity – without getting bogged down in what that word exactly means – but both, not just as an amenity but also for urban environmental reasons, it is something that is very worthwhile and very welcome. We had projects to do it in several places, too.

1930 I just wonder whether, if the hon. Members are reconsidering, or considering, in the light of what they claim now to know and not to have known before, despite my telling them in the Election campaign – and being not fooled by them – that they would find precisely this... but, if they are reconsidering their location of the car park, I wonder whether they would be willing to reconsider the location?

1935 I know they are keen to sort of re-brand everything and make sure that everything looks made by the GSLP and not made by the GSD – but I wonder whether they would reconsider even relocating the park, on the grounds that, whilst the natural environmental issues would be the same in the proposed location or in the one that we had proposed, in terms of the urban aesthetic environment, in terms of its contribution to the number of places that it can be seen from and the frequency with which pedestrians traverse that area, would not the hon. Members be willing to consider that where we were going to put it is actually a location for a green park that would add considerably to the aesthetic value, in terms of it being visible from Line Wall Road, from a wide opening, the whole of the Boulevard, the whole of the Palm Tree Boulevard. People – it is a transit area – walk through that area to get from town to all the main new housing estates in the development, there, as opposed to putting it in the Commonwealth Car Park where, really, you can only see it if you are standing immediately above it over the wall and looking down or, if you are driving along Queensway, or if you go to it, all of which have some merit...

1945 I am not saying they have no merit but, in terms of ticking as many boxes as possible, of all the doubtless benefits that an urban park would bring, if the hon. Members are reconsidering the location of the car parking aspects of that project, would they, with an open mind, be willing to reconsider the location of the park element, too, I dare ask.

Hon. Chief Minister: What a strange session of Parliament, Mr. Speaker (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: Sorry?

Hon. Chief Minister: What a strange session of Parliament, where we are working together to make the urban environment (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) better!

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know – from his much more considerable than my experience as Chief Minister of Gibraltar – that Gibraltar is a bit of a jigsaw puzzle, and that moving one thing from one place to another involves other changes to contractual obligations that Government or others may have already acquired so, in preparing the manifesto when Opposition is not privy to all the contracts that the Government may or may not have entered into – some of them may have been publicly announced, but all the details of them may not have been publicly announced – so we knew that, in Commonwealth Park, there was no commitment from the Government to any developer for any building to be done...

Okay, so the jigsaw puzzle that is Gibraltar, when one produces a manifesto from Opposition, is seen in a different light to the jigsaw puzzle that is Gibraltar when one produces a Government manifesto from Government – and we won't get into all the other issues that that might have alluded to. Now, it is not that we did not know something then which we should have known, it is that from Opposition we believed that was the best place for a park, for other reasons. They dove-tailed to something that he had announced, and which is also in our manifesto, which is that there should be an element of a park in the mid-town project, as it had been announced by the hon. Gentleman before there was a display of what their vision for that was in their manifesto: I mean, people will know that parties are running manifestos, preparation of manifestos, at the same time.

1970

Our manifesto says also –

1975

'Naval Ground Park: we will also consider the best ways to increase the green areas to be provided in the city centre in the area of the intended mid-town project. Our preference will also be for a green area to be maintained in the area nearest to the leisure centre with an underground car park to be free for local residents.'

1980

So, Mr. Speaker, I agree with him that having a green area in front of that Boulevard actually would be a very positive thing, and there is also manifesto view for the GSLP now, and the Liberals now, in Government, that that should be part of what is developed for our city in the wider mid-town project.

1985

If he will just agree with me that if we deliver the mid-town project park part of it, and we deliver the Commonwealth Park part of it, then the leisure centre becomes the connecting part of two green urban parts of our city, almost which you could see through to from one side to another. I think, actually, you can, because of the configuration of the leisure centre, and that will make it seem an even larger green area and we would have even more urban value. So I agree with him that the area of what was Naval Ground Number One, as part of the mid-town project – however that may evolve – should be maintained for green because it is central and it is more visible, both from Queensway and from Line Wall Road.

1990

I hope that he agrees with me that there is great value, nonetheless, in also pursuing a different sort of green area park, not just green area, but park, at Commonwealth Park and that if, in the context of Gibraltar's continued social and economic development, which we cannot give up simply because we should have more parks, it is possible to ensure that we do have these two very attractive green areas, then our city will be a much better place as a result.

1995

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr. Speaker, in large measure that is correct. Certainly, having two parks is better than having one.

2000

I think, notwithstanding the apparent influence the Minister for the Environment has in his Government, nevertheless we need to keep Gibraltar's wide range of public interest and needs in mind, and it is not just a question of gorging ourselves on parks and satisfying, in great measure, our instinct as citizens to have as much green area as possible. One virtue of having a park in Commonwealth Parade is that it will discourage for all time any future Government from viewing that as a potential site for a building in proximity to the City wall. That is one virtue of building a park there.

On the other hand, Mr. Speaker, in terms of balancing, we do need to be careful that we do not allocate all 2005 of Gibraltar's open spaces to the same laudable green park agenda. For example, that site is used for the fair and it is one of the few sites that would be available to the Government in the context of a civil contingency. It would be one of the few sites available to the Government as a large open space for doing whatever needs doing. I don't profess now to have anything specifically in mind, but one could imagine that it is better for a community to have usable large open spaces near towns than not have large usable open spaces because we have given them all up to some other use.

2010 The only other large open space in Gibraltar that I think would fit this characteristic is the coach parks. It is not that we are eliminating the only one: there would still be the coach park. Whether the coach park is an appropriate venue for the fair is something for him to negotiate with the nearby residents – but, anyway, that is a matter for him. So that would be a virtue in not giving that particular site over to a park or perhaps not giving it all over to a site. One option may be to replicate a park the size of the one in the mid-town side, symmetrically the same size on the south of the leisure centre, leaving the rest of it available for something else or a playground.

2015 I am trying to address this in as non-partisan fashion as possible to ensure that the best urban use and the best balance of urban uses is decided, in accordance with a rational consideration of all factors, and does not become victim simply to a partisan manifesto... dominance battle.

2020 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for that.

I am not going to assume that he is slowly and artfully luring me into a situation – that, we will provide as fabulous a park as we have proposed for Commonwealth Park somewhere else, only to see him or his successor in the estates just before the next General Election, saying that we failed. I am not going to assume that. I am going to assume that this is a genuine urban planning discussion that we're having about these issues and, let me just say to him that we are alive to that and that it is not a question of simply putting the parks first, it is a question of trying to get the right balance here.

2025 The MoD agreements that were done before 2011, when we were elected, also give rise to certain potential areas coming back around Naval Ground, in particular Rooke. He knows that our approach to GBC is not that GBC should go in there and, without prejudging this, I think he will agree with me that the current footprint of the buildings at Rooke is probably not the best modern use of that space, so that creates another potential issue there. And there are entities being moved just close to Rooke – I'm thinking of the Scouts and the Royal Gibraltar Yacht Club – which will make available an area which is large in that zone, although there may, or may not, be already certain developments earmarked which may or may not go ahead, as he has heard me suggest before, in that area.

2030 I believe that Gibraltar's economic well-being is what is going to allow us to continue as we have always, I think, agreed across the floor of the House, to talk about our self-determination etc . . . That is fundamentally important to our existence as a people, much more so than whether, after 300 years of urban development, we can also have a park in the centre of our city. So we are alive to all of these issues, in particular where do you put a fair? Where do you put coaches etc? That is the jigsaw puzzle that we are now ourselves dealing with.

2040 He should rest assured that the plan for Commonwealth Park and the plan to continue to use part of mid-town for a park does not, in our view, compromise any of those very legitimate issues which he has raised for reasons, that, as we make the announcements, if those proposals which have been put to us do prosper, will become evident.

Achieving a carbon neutral Gibraltar Measures and timescale proposed

Clerk: Question 383, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2055 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, in the light of the Government's stated ambition, as set out in its 2011 Election manifesto, to deliver a carbon neutral Gibraltar, and despite its acknowledgement that it may not be able to deliver that in four years, can the Minister for the Environment provide details to the House of Gibraltar's current carbon footprint, the measures it considers necessary, and how long it considers it would take to achieve this objective?

2060 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, it is the aim of this Government to achieve carbon neutrality although we are fully aware of the difficulties in doing so due to our current dependence on fossil fuels, both for our energy and transport needs, and also the current state of the renewable technology market. Nevertheless, the Government will remain fully committed to this ideal.

2065 At present, Gibraltar does not have the necessary reliable data to determine its carbon footprint. Work will be undertaken to try and obtain this data and establish this figure. Once that has been determined, Government will work to reduce that footprint, implementing the necessary measures which would include, but are not necessarily limited to; the introduction of clean renewable energy sources, the reduction of energy in transport by the creation of a sustainable traffic and management plan, a reduction in energy demand via the use of low-energy lighting, energy efficient building design, and the creation of greater awareness among the general public as to the need to reduce their own energy consumption via more informative feedback.

2070 Government is already actively working on these initiatives, such as by setting example in Government buildings and has engaged with both the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses to take these principles forward. However, as very little work has been done on this in the past it is too soon to determine how long it will take to achieve carbon neutrality. Clearly, it is a long-term ambition. The actual timescales involved will depend upon a number of factors, including how successfully we are able to integrate a mix of renewable energy technologies, in number into our grid and how quickly the international market for renewable technologies and low emission vehicles develop. As these technologies become more advanced, Gibraltar will be better able to meet its goal. We would re-iterate, however, that this is not a pipe-dream but a very real ambition which is at the heart of this Government's environmental policy and ethos.

2075 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. the Minister for referring to it being a 'pipe-dream' and I would ask him-

2085 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Not being a pipe-dream.

Hon. S M Figueras: – Yes, yes, indeed – but making reference to the fact of the 'pipe-dream' because of the exchange – yes indeed.

2090 Will the Minister agree that, along with the future jokes strategy, climate change is one of the signature additions to the manifesto of the GSLP at the last election and that it should certainly be prioritised, and (Interjection) does he consider that creating 700 parking spaces, where once there were 350, is consistent with that approach and its central environmental objective?

2095 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is assuming many things: firstly, that providing 700 parking spaces . . . necessarily means a net increase but, in any case, those 700 parking spaces could, in the fullness of time, be dedicated to hybrid or electric cars so it is something that one thing does not negate the other.

2100 Hon. S M Figueras: The manifesto refers to – sorry, Mr. Speaker – this ambition of carbon neutrality as a central environmental objective.

2105 On that basis, it is a matter of the utmost priority, surely, for the Government to identify that carbon footprint. I understand and take note of the comments that the Hon. Minister has made in that regard, in that it is a complex and complicated exercise, but I would press the Minister for an indication of how long, because I understand that the policy is not that you can achieve neutrality within four years – and I fully understand it, and certainly concur with that view – but establishing the carbon footprint is, and must be, the central priority if the objective is one of the central objectives of the Government.

2110 When is the Minister expecting we will see any development, or us getting anywhere nearer identifying the carbon footprint for Gibraltar?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr. Speaker, he is incorrect.

Establishing the carbon footprint is not the priority. The priority is reducing the carbon footprint no matter what it is, and therefore Governments' policy will aim at the reduction while we try to establish it. We will be

- 2115 able to measure the reduction, and that is a priority regardless of the carbon footprint.
- Hon. S M Figueras: But, certainly Mr. Speaker, in order to measure the reduction in that footprint you must surely establish a starting point; unless, of course, I am mistaken, in which case I am happy to bow to his expertise on the matter.
- 2120 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: When you replace a bulb which is highly demanding in energy with one that is less, you can measure the difference and hence measure that reduction without knowing how much the whole building is using. That is what I mean by that.
- 2125 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, granted then, I accept that.
However, there are other situations in which carbon footprint may be increasing which you have thus far been unable to measure and that is simply the point I am making.
I would also ask that the Hon. Minister referred to the fact that the Government is already setting an example in respect of its own activities, and I would ask the Minister for some details on what those examples may be?
- 2130 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, indeed. In fact a question later on refers to, I think, solar lighting so I will leave that till that.
Government Departments are being encouraged to take all sorts of measures, including double sided printing and photocopying, in fact the Health Authority is doing that and is already showing savings. By making electronic equipment go on standby after half an hour instead of two hours, by automatically shutting down computers overnight, there is a whole list of items. If he were to have given me notice I would have produced the information but we are already taking firm steps and, as I said before, engaging with the private sector with very good response, encouraging them to follow suit.
- 2135
- 2140 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, just one further point to raise. The Hon. Minister referred in his answer to the original question to the fact that certain technologies are not advanced enough yet.
However, Mr. Speaker, there are many cities around the world who are leveraging this technology to great effect, particularly, you know, the use of hybrid vehicles and other alternative energy vehicles on Government fleets and encouraging and incentivizing the use by the general public of those vehicles. How advanced does this technology have to be before steps are taken to adopt or incentivize it?
- 2145
- Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, three words; watch this space.
- 2150 A Member: Oh!
- Hon. S M Figueras: Three words, Mr. Speaker – not helpful at all! (Laughter)
- A Member: That's four!

Renewable energy strategies
EU funding sought since 9th December 2011

- 2160 Clerk: Question 384, the Hon. S M Figueras.
- Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide details to this House of any EU funding sought since 9th December 2011 in respect of renewable energy strategies, as referred to in its manifesto.
- 2165 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.
- Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, during my recent visit 2170 to the UK I discussed the subject with officials at the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC). We are awaiting further information from them, but the matter is being looked into.

Hon. S M Figueras: So it is safe to say there are no complete answers to such requests?

2175 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: At the moment we are awaiting advice and information from this Department. We have not actually progressed on this, other than seek the necessary information so that we can do, hopefully, in the future.

2180 Solar powered lighting
Opportunities identified by the Government

Clerk: Question 385, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2185 Hon. S M Figueras: Have any opportunities for the use of solar powered lighting been identified by the Government and, if so, can the Minister for the Environment provide details of same?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2190 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, a pilot project has been identified which will involve installation of solar powered street lighting in the area of the Frontier loop.

Work is ongoing to identify the most appropriate type of solar fitting, bearing in mind both performance and aesthetic considerations. If successful, Government will then consider employing this technology elsewhere in Gibraltar.

Hon. S M Figueras: I'm sorry. I'm not sure whether you mentioned it, but is there a timeline for the application of this pilot project?

2200 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Very soon. It is actually happening virtually as we speak so, hopefully... the items have to be acquired and installed, but it is very soon.

Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister able to provide the House with any information in respect of the saving it is expected to make?

2205 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Right, I would have needed notice...

I would need to know what is the consumption on the lighting on the Frontier loop, and as the solar lamps will consume zero, then that would be the saving. That information can be made available, if he requests it privately.

Alameda Botanical Gardens
Details of Government management arrangements with Wildlife (Gibraltar) Limited

2215 Clerk: Question 386, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2220 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide details of the arrangements currently in place between the Government and Wildlife (Gibraltar) Limited in respect of the maintenance and management of the Alameda Botanical Gardens, specifically in relation to costs, term of agreement, and whether the Government plans to make any changes to this arrangement and, if so, what changes and when?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2225 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, Wildlife (Gibraltar) Limited holds an agreement since August 1991 for the running and maintenance of the Alameda Gardens.

2230 This agreement was re-negotiated with effect from 1st April 2006 and will expire on 30th March 2016. It consists of costs relating to personal emoluments, which are at scales agreed by the Government at the time, and increase each year in line with the pay review agreement of various other Government contractors, plus a budget set by Government relating to administration, the carrying out of maintenance and refurbishment, beautification and improvement works, as well as developing the Alameda as a botanic garden of value to the community and of International standing.

2235 These additional costs were set in the new contract at £64,500, £50,000 for water, and £50,000 for minor works. Additionally, specific projects agreed by Government had been funded from time to time under the Improvement and Development Fund.

The total costs last financial year, 2011-12, were £760,950. The Government is not considering any changes in the short-term to the arrangement.

2240 Barbary Macaque Management Plan
Past and future costs

Clerk: Question 387, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2245 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm the cost to Government of the management of the macaques over the last three years, whether the re-costing of the Barbary Macaque Management Plan has been carried out and, if so, how much the Plan is due to cost over and above the current expenditure?

2250 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, the cost for the last three years has been as follows: 2009-10, total expenditure £207,170; 2010-11, total expenditure £195,949; 2011-12, total expenditure £208,135.

2255 The Management Plan is being reviewed and a re-costing exercise will be carried out shortly.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, I asked the question because the last time this matter was raised in this House, the Plan was being reviewed, re-costed and updated. Some time has now passed since then and I was wondering whether, perhaps, the Minister could provide details of why the delay?

2260 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Certainly, I am happy to do so.

Mr. Speaker, during my trip to the UK I held meetings with the Born Free Foundation and the International Primate Protection League. who are supporting our work and have agreed to become involved in developing the Management Plan.

2265 As I did mention as well, last time I think it was, Prof. Agustin Fuentes, who is a worldwide expert on macaques and their management will be coming. We now have a date: this is the end of next week. He is already looking at the proposals that were on the table and has given preliminary advice so I hope that, after next weeks' meeting, we will be able to formulate the Barbary Macaque Management Plan, cost it, and then we will be able to answer that question at a future meeting.

Complaints about ape behaviour
Streamlining the process

2275

Clerk: Question 388, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether it has been able 2280 to streamline the process by which the public can file complaints and/or lodge their concern about ape behaviour including, but not limited to; threatening behaviour, ape loitering, defecation on motor vehicles and other personal property, as well as the general nervousness the presence of large numbers of wild apes in residential areas around Gibraltar are causing?

2285 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, not yet.

2290 Calls continue to be received variously via the Police, the Department of the Environment and directly by the contractors. However, we are working on preparing a designated telephone line and e-mail address at which any environmentally related matter, including problems with the Barbary macaques, can be reported.

2295 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, this is a matter of growing concern for the community and it is only for that reason that I press the Minister to provide us with some more concrete information in respect of when this will happen, and an assurance from him that the reports that are being made today – of which I am certainly being made aware of personally, too – are being followed up and are being dealt with.

But I think what is perhaps the most important issue that I would seek to elicit from the Minister in this Question is at what point is the community going to have the one point of contact so that they know that all relevant authorities will be receiving the information and, importantly, acting upon it?

2300 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, we have already improved the way in which action is taken on other environmental matters, such as litter accumulation and so on. We are in the process of setting up the litter committee and we have identified one particular officer who will be dealing with this in the future.

I think that the single contact point for environmentally related matters, including the Barbary macaques, will probably be available within weeks, and certainly not more than a couple of months maximum.

2305 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr. Speaker, I understand the predicament, and I understand that this is, again, another issue that perhaps cannot be resolved overnight. I understand that. But how difficult can it possibly be for the Minister and his Department to issue a statement saying: in respect of any incidents, the number to call is this or the e-mail to get in touch is this one? I mean, I really don't see the complexity.

2310 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what complexities may have been encountered by my predecessors over the last 16 years –

2315 Hon. S M Figueras: No, they are being influenced by you with the Barbary Management Plan, which is taking forever... (Interjection)

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I thought you were talking about the telephone lines, (Interjection) not the Management Plan. That was the last question, Mr. Speaker – (Interjection) 2320 Mr. Speaker: Order. The Minister is answering the question.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: The telephone line is imminent. It require people to be available to do it. It does not take a long time. It's going to happen very soon.

2325

St. Bernard's Hospital
Ape bite incidents recorded over the last five months

2330 Clerk: Question 389, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm the number of ape bite incidents recorded over the last five months at St. Bernard's Hospital?

2335 Clerk: Twelve months?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, was that 12 months. That is what my question says I can-

Hon. S M Figueras: I've got five months in – 2340 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I can provide a breakdown.

Hon. S M Figueras: The original question was 12, actually, yes. I've just read the question-

2345 Mr. Speaker: Well, the original question was twelve-

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.

2350 Mr. Speaker: – and I took the view that the ministerial responsibility dates back only five months, so suggested to-

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I have the data from May 2011 to April 2012. Let me just answer what I've got.

Mr. Speaker: Yes.

2355 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, the number of ape bites recorded over the last 12 months at St. Bernard's Hospital was 105, and I can break it down starting in May 2011 and taking each month in sequence; and the number of bites in May 2011 was ten, then in sequence, six, seventeen, twenty five, twenty, twelve, four, zero, and then January this year one, February one, March five and April this year four – making a total of 105.

2360 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker can I rise on a point of order to which we attach considerable importance.

2365 I think – I beg the House's pardon, I was reading a document and not fully paying attention – but I thought I heard an exchange involving the Chair which suggested that the hon. Members of the House who now sit on the Government benches have ministerial responsibility only back to the date of their election into office.

I do not think that that can be right and I just do not want my silence... we can address it in a different matter, we do not have to address it today –

2370 Mr. Speaker: No, I appreciate that.

Hon. P R Caruana: – but I do not think that that can be right and I would not want my silence to be seen as somehow acquiescence in it. The hon. Members are not in this House exclusively with their political colours. They are the political face of a continuous, uninterrupted entity called the Government of Gibraltar, regardless of the political colour of the Government that occupies those posts.

2375 If what I thought I heard... if I have misheard, please correct me but –

Mr. Speaker: No, the hon. Member heard correctly.

2380 Hon. P R Caruana: If what I thought I'd heard were correct, then an Opposition could never ask in Parliament for information about the public affairs of Gibraltar that preceded their date in office, and there are Standing Orders saying that Members are accountable in this House for the 'public affairs of Gibraltar', not for the public affairs of Gibraltar for which they have political responsibility. So, certainly, I may ask them... I might ask them: 'Will the hon. Members tell me how much the Government collected in Income Tax in the year 2006'. They cannot say 'No' and not give you that information 'because I was not in office at that time'.

2385 They may not have political responsibility for the answer – in other words, they may not be politically criticisable for the answer – but they are still accountable in this House for the public affairs of Gibraltar, regardless of the dates that those public affairs relate to. That had always been my view of the matter.

2390 Mr. Speaker: Yes, I think the point is well taken; perhaps I took too narrow a view and just looked at 12 months – no, five months. I think the point is well taken: where there is information of a factual question, seeking information of a factual nature, as is this case, then there is no reason why the Minister cannot obtain and provide that information. If the question is aimed at policy issues, then... the point is well taken. (Interjection)

2395 Mr. Speaker: I'm probably going to be told otherwise now.

There was a brief conference with the Clerk.

2400 Mr. Speaker: Yes, I am informed that the discussion was held between the Clerk and the Hon. Mr. Figueras on this point and Mr. Figueras did put correctly the point made by the Leader of the Opposition, so the point is well taken now. It was well taken by the hon. Member and I regret my lapse on that.

2405 Moroccan Red Crescent
What medical equipment donated

Clerk: Question 390, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

2410 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain which equipment worth £75,000 was donated to the Red Crescent for use in Morocco?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2415 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, the information requested is contained in the attached schedule, so I must correct the hon. Member. It may have been a typographical error, in that the equipment was worth £750,000 and not £75,000.

Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, the Minister is, of course, aware that the whole process of identifying the equipment, making administrative arrangements for it to be donated to Morocco and the Customs clearances was conducted by his predecessor, Mrs Del Agua.

The only requirement remaining was for the Director of the Red Crescent to arrange the transportation of this equipment. An acknowledgement that this was a GSD initiative would have been welcomed. However Mr. Speaker, can the Minister advise if the equipment is fit for purpose and how many years of usage it has left in it.

2430

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, as I recall I acknowledged the fact that the process had been started by the previous administration during the course of an interview. Whether that was edited out by the media I do not know, but I am happy to acknowledge the fact that the process had started before. It needed a little bit of tweaking, in the sense that I had to sign the authority which I think may have been signed already by my predecessor, that is not an issue at all.

2435

As to the expected life, I am informed that it is a good number of years, particularly in the less delicate equipment, there were beds and so on that were donated, and I can say that the Moroccan communities have expressed to us gratitude for our contribution and there may be further contributions in the future.

Public access defibrillators
Position, cost and how they will work

2440 Clerk: Question 391, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain where the nine public access defibrillators will be placed in Gibraltar, how they will work, and how much they will cost?

2445 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, yes.

2450 On average there are, by way of background, there are 20 cases of sudden cardiac arrest per year in Gibraltar. Over 90% of these can result in death. The chances of such arrest survival go up to 70% of surviving such a cardiac arrest – rather, go up to 70% if an automated external defibrillator is used within five minutes.

2455 Public access defibrillators are safe, effective and anyone can use them. The PADS, as they are called, programme aims to strategically place nine of these in nine public locations in Gibraltar in order to reduce the risk of death from sudden cardiac arrest in public places: these are the Air Terminal; the Coach Terminal; the Cruise Terminal; the Piazza; the ICC; the Tercentenary Sports Hall; Europa Point; St Michael's Cave; and Catalan Bay.

2460 These locations were chosen after extensive analysis of previous cardiac arrest records and take into account pedestrian footfall and distance from medical services. Defibrillator programmes have been well established and successful in both the UK and the United States and is backed by the British Heart Foundation. The model of defibrillator – Zoll – has been chosen for its extensive extended shelf life. Each PAD has a seven year warranty and the minimal maintenance – that is, battery checks and replacements – which will be carried out by the GHA Ambulance Service.

2465 The latest in defibrillation technology means that training is no longer a requirement for the lay person. Once switched on, the PAD will guide the user in simple and clear audio commands, and even coach the user on how to give cardio-pulmonary resuscitation without any prior experience. For information, the cost per unit is £1,295.

Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr. Speaker.
Can the Minister explain how the defibrillators will be protected against vandalism?

2470 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, they come in their own enclosed area, which you can obviously open. Vandalism is something that we can never guarantee will not happen but, clearly, if we don't have a defibrillator, it might not be vandalised, but we don't have it, whether it is vandalised or not. Therefore, this is a problem.

2475 Sadly, there is vandalism in Gibraltar. We hope that even at least a percentage of the vandals will realise that vandalising this could have terrible effects but, clearly, we have to hope that this does not happen. It is a possibility. I would like to think that it will not happen that much but, nevertheless, we think that it is worth having them, even though there might be a threat of vandalism.

2480 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, so what you are saying is perhaps public awareness on the importance of these units could, potentially, reduce vandalism.

Could the Minister outline the GHA's community awareness campaign for the safe use of the defibrillators and obviously to impress on the public: please do not vandalise these very vital pieces of equipment.

2485 Hon. Dr. J.E. Cortes: Of course, absolutely, thank you.

It is intended to have a public awareness campaign once these arrive and once these are set up. Obviously, that's the time to do it, and that will clearly happen.

UK advice services and training
Details of exploratory talks

2495 Clerk: Question 392, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain, as per the Government's press release 158 of 7th March, after the Minister's visit to the UK, which advice services and what training the GHA is exploring for the UK to provide?

2500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2505 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, during my visit to the South-West London Health Trust, to Salisbury NHS Foundation Trust and a number of other locations, advice was obtained on administrative issues, such as the organisation of open board meetings and the development of community-based medicine.

2510 Areas where training is a possibility include stroke care and health care administration, including the running of appointment systems. Possible services include several areas of specialist care, including spinal treatment, where there is a centre of excellence in Salisbury District Hospital, where the Duke of Cornwall Spinal Treatment Centre is located.

Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister now turning to UK experts to advise on how GHA services are to be run?

2515 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, the Minister will turn to whichever experts the Minister feels will contribute to developing the healthcare that Gibraltar needs and deserves.

2520 Medical vacancy adverts
Reason for ten month appointments

Clerk: Question 393, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2525 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain why the vacancy adverts for that of a nurse practitioner, a health visitor level one nurse, a junior occupational health therapist, and that of physiotherapists senior II, state the contracts are only for a ten month period?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2530 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, the contracts were for a ten month period because that was the period for which the employees are required.

2535 School of Health Studies
Student Nurse bursary concerns

Clerk: Question 394, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

2540 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us if he has met with the student nurses from the School of Health Studies and if their bursary concerns have been addressed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2545 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have met with the student nurses and, yes, the bursaries have been increased to match the similar student bursaries in the UK. It has now been increased from £450 to £650.

2550 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Thank you.

Mr. Speaker, will this new £650 a month salary be backdated to 1st February of this year, in line with the start of the new payment scale for all trainee workers under the Future Jobs Strategy?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Emergency ambulances and patient transfer vehicles
Number arrived or on order

2560 Clerk: Question 395, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

2565 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how many new emergency ambulances have arrived for use by the GHA, and whether any patients transfer vehicles have been ordered?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2570 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, first on the new emergency ambulances, the three ambulance vehicles were ordered in October and were delivered to the coachbuilders for conversion to ambulances in January 2012. We have been informed by the coachbuilder that the first vehicle should be ready in the week commencing 21st May – which I think is next week – and the other two by the end of May. We should expect all three in Gibraltar by mid June this year.

2575 Regarding the patient transfer vehicles, apart from the three emergency ambulances, there are, in fact, a further five vehicles in their ambulance fleet; two long distance emergency ambulances and three transport ambulance vehicles. The Government is replacing all these vehicles and has already started the process of tendering and selection of ambulances.

2580 We need to abide by EU timeframes and, because of our very specific requirements, our ambulances cannot be purchased ‘off the shelf’, even to the extent of having a dual system of emergency lights from blue to amber when ambulances have to cross the frontier. The specifications for the patient transport ambulances have been produced by a team from the ambulance service who, clearly, are the individuals that know best. These have been passed on to Procurement, in order that they can advertise the tender and I believe, Mr. Speaker, they have been advertised over the last few days or will be very, very imminently.

We are hopeful that these vehicles will be in service near the end of the year. (Applause)

2585 Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond: Yes, we welcome the purchase of new patient transfer vehicles, Mr. Speaker. I believe the tender process is in today’s Chronicle, in fact, and it refers to five ‘economic operators’. Could the Minister please explain further what or who these five economic operators are?

2590 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the advert. This was prepared by the Procurement Department and it is an expertise that they have.

I believe the wording... because this has to be an EU tender which will be advertised in the appropriate journal, the wording must, I assume, be set.

2595 I would need notice of that because it is not my area. I would be happy to supply that information privately but it is not an area that I would have expertise on.

Health clinics and health service providers expressing interest

Clerk: Question 396, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2605

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how many health clinics or health service providers expressed interest and who will be providing the GHA with a full range of IVF treatments?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, six health clinics have expressed an interest in the service.

A selection panel has been appointed to assess the submissions. It is the intention of the panel to shortlist providers and schedule presentations for the relevant clinicians. A recommendation report will be provided for approval before the contract is awarded.

Once the tender process is complete, the successful tenderer will be announced in the media.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister say if these proposals are all from the United Kingdom, or from Spain or from other places within Europe?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, I as Minister am not directly involved in the selection process.

I am not a clinician and, therefore, it would not be appropriate but I believe there are... I believe, and this is just what I think I have gathered, that there are expressions of interest from Spain and from the United Kingdom. There are no facilities in Gibraltar that can provide this service, but I do not have the specific details: I have not been involved in the actual process.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, are there conditions a couple needs to fulfil in order to qualify for GHA-funded IVF treatment and, if so, what are these conditions?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Again, Mr. Speaker, this is... I would need notice. There are conditions: I think I mentioned them in another question previously.

There is a protocol that has been developed, based largely on the NHS protocol but, as that was not specifically asked, but again, once... It is just being tweaked at the moment, and that will be public knowledge because, obviously, couples will need to know what the protocols are.

Sexual health advisory service
Precursor to offering IVF treatment

Clerk: Question 397, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us if the GHA will be providing a sexual health advisory service as a precursor to offering IVF treatment for GHA patients, or at least in tandem with the IVF service?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): No, Mr. Speaker, sexual health services are separate.

All potential IVF patients will be assessed by GHA gynaecologists following referral from their GPs.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister not aware that unprotected sex can lead to the contracting of sexually transmitted diseases that cause infertility later in a person's sexual life – thus 2655 requiring, potentially, IVF treatment to enable a pregnancy – for example, chlamydia, which remains silent in the body and causes infertility.

Does not the Minister agree that it makes sense to establish a sexual health advisory clinic alongside an IVF treatment programme?

2660 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, what I said was that they are separate, not that they are not justified or, indeed, desirable.

It is a separate exercise that we have to look at because a sexual health advisory service would not just be for couples considering IVF. Therefore, what I said was that it is separate, it is something that we are looking at as a separate exercise.

2665 Obviously, any advice that the gynaecologists provide to couples considering this treatment would involve reference to sexual health but that is not what the hon. Member is referring to, which is a separate sexual health advisory service which will have to follow a procedure and a process of its own, which we will be looking at.

2670 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you for that.

So, Mr. Speaker, can the Minister confirm that you will be seriously considering the introduction of a separate sexual health advisory service for 16-year olds and older?

2675 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, I cannot allow the hon. Member, regardless of my long friendship with her, to dictate Government policy in this way.

I cannot go into specifics about age of 16 and so on. What I can say is that we will be looking at the possibility of providing a sexual health advisory service because it is something which I think is important for members of the community, regardless of their age, but I cannot hold myself to specific details in this exchange: you will forgive me for that.

Primary Care Centre One month advance appointments and group system

2685 Clerk: Question 398, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain the new one month advance appointment system and the group system at the Primary Care Centre which will both be in place by 1st August 2012.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2695 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr. Speaker, the new appointment system is simple and straightforward, although by the time I have finished reading this, it might not appear so! That is my addition, I'm afraid. However the implications and benefits may take a little longer to appreciate.

2700 The new appointment system changes from releasing clinics for advanced and pre-booked appointments for the entire next three months, as we currently do, to opening advanced appointments for the entirety of one month only. For example, every first working day of the month, the Primary Care Centre will release appointments for the following month. The on-the-day appointment slots available every day remain the same, therefore patients can still come in the morning or, preferably, ring the appointment telephone line and have the same chance of getting an on-the-day appointment for the doctor of their choice, as at present. However, the advance appointments are opened a month at a time and can only be booked from one month to the next.

2705 The advantages of this change are; first, patients can try to make an appointment for the month to see their GP and if none are available for that month they will only have to wait until the following month is released to see their own GP, as opposed to waiting three months if all the appointments were full.

Secondly, it should be an end to patients complaining that they cannot book an appointment to see their own GP until three months' time or that their GP is fully booked for three months – a common complaint –

2710 also an end to pre-booked appointments saturation towards the end of the quarter, which currently occurs with GPs with a larger number of regular patients. People book now for the end of three months' time and then, in three months, there are no appointments. Then, also, to patients pre-booking appointments 'just in case they need it', to ensure seeing their own GP... This often results in unnecessary consultations or no-shows and, finally, the 'did not attend' figures are expected to reduce as patients are more likely to remember an appointment if it is the following month, rather than three months later.

2715 On the GP group system, the procedure for patients requesting an appointment in respect of the GP group system is as follows: firstly, every patient is to be given an appointment with a GP that the patient is registered with; then, if there is no availability with this GP, the patient will be given an appointment with another GP in the same group. If a patient wishes to change to another GP group then, following the consultation, they would be requested to complete a 'Change of group' slip, obtained from the main counter and submit this to the clerk in the area of their choice. If there are no appointments available with that particular group, the patient will be offered an appointment with one of the other groups, dependant on availability.

2725 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, again, the Minister has only had to 'launch' a GSD initiative with already everything in place for the new GP Group Practice Scheme...

Can the Minister explain, though, if it would be possible for an individual to change doctors or groups after 1st August, or is this before 1st August, when the initiative starts?

2730 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, they can change groups whenever: this is current.

I would like to say that this initiative – in line with Government policy – was actually... this particular initiative was actually developed by the clinicians and the administrators within the Primary Care Centre and supported by the Government, but it was prepared by the professionals.

2735 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, how will the GHA ensure that the number of patients entitled in Gibraltar are equally distributed among the three GP groups, in order for one group not to be overloaded with patients?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, with some difficulty because we are giving the patients choice.

2740 We are aware that there may be certain doctors who may, for whatever reason, be more popular than others and that could skew the distribution. We have to monitor how this goes and maybe we have to perhaps increase the size of one group or the other, but we certainly, at this stage, believe in giving the patient the freedom to select what GP they see, which I think is quite an important personal choice that people make.

2745 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, with reference to the advanced appointments, any policy that successfully reduces the number of missed appointments is most welcome but can you confirm, as from 1st August, all the appointment slots for September will be made available and could, potentially, be filled up in that day if enough people make the appointments, or will the telephone lines again open on 2nd August and again on the 3rd and so fill up for the 2nd and 3rd September of the next month, if you understand what I am

2755 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the daily appointment slots which are currently reserved for daily appointments will be protected. I believe – and I am using recollection on whether we published this – that, transitionally, we may be reserving some advanced appointments in two week chunks until people get used to the system. The problem is that whereas, before, you could get the three months clogged up, now you could only get one month clogged up and there is always a chance, in a months' time, to get another appointment.

2760 I must say that the whole question of the appointments and the demand on the Primary Care Centre is currently being studied with a view to, perhaps, making some adjustments – but that is something for the future.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, can the Minister explain that if someone needs a repeat prescription and is unable to secure an appointment within a month and that individual has run out of the medication and has no appointment slip; what would that patient do?

2765 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, that can be addressed by the Prescriptions Advisory Service where Mr. Guillem and his team work and he will deal with facilitating that if there is any person in that predicament.

2770 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, so the patient will not need an appointment in order to get a repeat prescription if he or she has run out of medication?

2775 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, it depends. We are reviewing the process for repeat prescriptions: it does depend on whether it is an emergency, if the repeat prescription is necessary in a weeks' time and there is an appointment tomorrow... But anybody who has absolutely got his or her back against a wall will have an avenue for that repeat prescription to be filled.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr. Speaker, will the Minister be considering setting up a separate repeat prescription service which does not require taking up an appointment with a GP, as is the case in the United Kingdom?

2780 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr. Speaker, I probably do not have to... Well, I won't say I do not have to answer it, but this not an obvious corollary of the original question. We are looking at the repeat prescription service very seriously in order to make it more streamlined and more patient friendly, but I think that would have had to be the subject of a separate question to the one strictly on appointments.

2785 Clerk: Question 399 –

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr. Speaker we would like to adjourn.
I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn until three o'clock.

2790 Mr. Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members? Adjournment until three o'clock this afternoon?

It was agreed.

Mr. Speaker: This House will adjourn until 3.00 p.m. this afternoon.

2795 The House adjourned at 1.00 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether the Chief Minister is in a position, perhaps, to say when is the likely date that, maybe in the foreseeable future, when some of these applications may come to fruition and, if so, could he speculate as to the number of successful applications.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, as was the case, I assume, when the hon. Members were in Government, there is a steady stream of applications, about 10 a week – I assume that steady stream will stop at some time. I can tell him that there are 145 persons on the list, as he now knows, and that, since 1st January... nothing had happened between 9th December and 1st January.

55

Since 1st January we have naturalised a total of 106 Moroccans who had applied and 29 other nationals – that is a total of 135 – by applying the same policy criteria that had been used to naturalise before.

60

The hon. Gentleman will not be able to discern from the list I have given him, how many of the people on that list – of the 145 – actually would be entitled to be naturalised based on the criteria used before 9th December – which has been the same one maintained after 9th December – because there are some people there who may have been here for more than 5 years but less than 10, and some people who have been here for more than 10 years but less than 20. Therefore, there may be an issue with different people qualifying for the exercise, or rather for the right, to be naturalised, in that sense. So I do not think it is possible to give any indication in respect of each of the individuals on the list, because each case is different and there may be...

65

What I can tell him is that I meet – I think it's fair to say, on a monthly basis, because Immigration and Civil Status is one of my responsibilities – I meet on a monthly basis with the Principal Immigration Officer and with the Chief Secretary, so that we go through all of the pending applications. If there is a policy decision which affects an applicant coming within the policy which enables them to have the naturalisation, then that is happening on a monthly review basis.

70

Hon. J J Netto: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

GSLP economic growth forecast Government position

75

Clerk: Question 462, the Hon. D A Feetham.

80

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Chief Minister still believe that the Government is on course to meet his party's prediction at the last Election, of 50% economic growth over the next four years?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Well, Mr Speaker, before starting the answer which is written, which I am going to read out I should say, but of course it is not just my party, it's my party and the Liberal Party that fought the Election together and our manifesto was a joint manifesto.

Mr Speaker, this question seeks an opinion which, under the provisions of Standing Order 17(1)(vii), should not be the subject of a Question in this House. In any event, Mr Speaker, I am going to reply and I am going to say that I am happy to disappoint the hon. Gentleman, by reaffirming to him that we, on this side of the House, all remain confident of meeting our manifesto commitments.

European investors
Progress made since answer to Question 81/2012

Clerk: Question 463, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Chief Minister in a position to update this House on any progress he may have made with the European investors he said he had up his sleeve, since he answered Question No. 81 of 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, not in any substantive sense.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, in what sense has he made progress?

Hon. Chief Minister: In a sense that I cannot announce.

Hon. D A Feetham: Why cannot he announce it?

Hon. Chief Minister: For the reasons I gave in answer to Question 81 of 2012.

Defence Transfer Adviser Selection of postholder

Clerk: Question 464, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister confirm whether someone has been selected to the post of Defence Transfer Adviser?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, the recruitment process is currently ongoing. My understanding is that interviews are scheduled to take place on Friday 18th May 2012, and one interview was held earlier this week at the request of one of the applicants because he would have been unable to attend on Friday due to a medical appointment.

Hon. D A Feetham: How many people have applied for this particular post?

Hon. Chief Minister: Seven.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware of the rumours rife in town that a particular candidate has already been selected for this particular post – somebody who was, in fact, working in the MoD and is going to retire on a considerable pension – and that he has already been promised this particular post by the Chief Minister himself. Is he aware of this?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, I am aware of the baseless rumour that the hon. Gentleman decides to elevate to the floor of this House.

140 Hon. D A Feetham: Will he deny it?

145 Hon. Chief Minister: Indeed, Mr Speaker, given that the board that is going to be considering these applications is made up of the Financial Secretary, the Head of the Human Resources Department, and an SEO in his Department, I would have thought that is a fairly strong board to suggest is going to be in any way subject to somebody else determining who the successful applicant is going to be.

Breakdown by Government debenture issues

Clerk: Question 465, the Hon. P R Caruana.

155 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister give a breakdown by debenture issues as at the 31st March 2012, of that part of the aggregate public debt which comprises Government debentures?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

160 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with questions 466, 467 and 469.

165 Aggregate public debt
Unrelated to Government

Clerk: Question 466

170 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say whether, as at 31st March 2012, any of the aggregate public debt comprises debt due other than to banks or holders of Government debentures that are unrelated to the Government?

175 Gibraltar Savings Bank
Breakdown of debentures and other debt security

Clerk: Question 467.

180 Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister give a breakdown, by nominal value and issue, of the debentures or other debt security that had been issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank and remain outstanding as at the 31st March 2012?

185 Tax receipts for the year ending 31st March 2012
Breakdown and inclusion in Consolidated Fund Revenue

190 Clerk: Question 469.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say how much has been collected in respect of (i)

195 Corporation Tax and (ii) Personal Income Tax, during the financial year ended of 31st March 2012, (a) in respect of the current tax year, and (b) in total; and will the Chief Minister confirm that all monies collected during the financial year just ended are included in the forecast outturn of Consolidated Fund revenue for the year ended 31st March 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

200 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, in relation to questions 465 and 467, I now hand the hon. Gentleman a statement giving the information requested.

In relation to 466, the aggregate public debt is comprised solely of debt that is due by the Government to banks and to holders of Government debentures. (Interjection) Yes, of course.

Mr Speaker, on 466, the aggregate public debt is comprised solely of debt that is due by the Government to banks and to holders of Government debentures.

Mr Speaker, in relation to 469 –

Hon. P R Caruana: That are unrelated to the Government [inaudible]?

Hon. Chief Minister: That are not related to the Government.

Is that not what the Question asked for? That is the answer I have been given by the Treasury.

So, Mr Speaker, I can confirm, in relation to Question 469, that all monies collected during the financial year ended 31st March 2012 are included in the forecast outturn of the Consolidated Fund revenue for the said year.

The specific figures that the hon. Gentleman has asked about, as he is aware, are already in his possession and are reflected on page 6 of the Confidential Draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure for 2012-13, at Head 1 of Consolidated Fund Recurrent Revenue, sub-heads (1) and (2).

The figure, Mr Speaker, remains confidential to Members of this House and of the Treasury – and, I guess, the printers who prepared it – until such time as we have the debate on the Appropriation Bill.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, well, if I can just deal with the last point first: that was not the question.

I know that the forecast outturn of Government revenue is to be found in the book: that is not the question that I have asked him. The question that I have asked him is whether all of the income tax collected before the end of the financial year, regardless of whether it is attributable to one tax year or to another, are accounted for in the forecast outturn of the book that, in other words, are accounted for in the number to which he has referred in his answer. In other words that there is no... that the hon. Members have not adopted any practice of saying, “If we have collected money for next year’s tax in advance, we are holding it on account or in suspense, and we will bring it into account next year”. No... that is the question.

The answer is ‘no’, then.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, and I think there is agreement across the floor of the House that it is a cash account and, therefore, we do not do that.

Hon. P R Caruana: Exactly.

Well, Mr Speaker, if I could just have a moment to... If I could just press him to clarify his answer to Question 467, because he quoted back the whole of my question in his answer, except the bit that I am concerned with, which is, ‘unrelated to the Government’, in other words, the banks to which public debt is owed are, for example, Barclays Bank and NatWest, and not, for example, the Savings Bank, so there is no... the Savings Bank is not buying Government debentures. That is the question, really.

Hon. Chief Minister: Actually, that is not an issue that need concern the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. P R Caruana: So the answer is ‘no’, that is not happening

Hon. Chief Minister: No, that is not happening.

Gibraltar Savings Bank Management of expanded facilities

Clerk: Question 468, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say, what is the Government’s intention as to who will manage the expanded Gibraltar Savings Bank for which they have purchased the ex Marrache & Co office building in Main Street? And who will make decision on such things as the making of loans to businesses, or the issuing of credit guarantees to businesses?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

260 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Well, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which will be housed at the ex-Banque Indosuez building alongside the Treasury Department which will also move there, will continue to be managed by the Treasury Department, under the direction of the Director of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, who is a Public Officer, designated by the Government from time to time for this purpose under the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act.

265 At present, as I think was the case when he was holder of this Office, the Director of the Gibraltar Savings Bank is the Accountant General. The provision of loan facilities for small business to help them expand and see them through periods of difficulty and the operation of a loan guarantee scheme for such small businesses are also stated aims of the expansion and the criteria and management of that will be subject of a public statement when it commences.

270 Hon. P R Caruana: So, Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member saying that those facilities will be managed by the Accountant General, too – in other words, the decisions to make small loans and small loan guarantees? And / or, because you could guarantee a loan made by another bank, or you could make the loan yourself, or you could issue the guarantee, so by any permutation, regardless of the permutation, whether it is direct or indirect... The point I am getting to, Mr Speaker – and I will get to it directly, rather than in layers – is, does the hon. Member accept that the questioner is, in principle, in favour of an expanded role of the Savings Bank and is in principle in favour of Government promoting and even taking a minority shareholding in a Bank for Gibraltar because, for any number of reasons, we think that one is necessary. So that is where I am coming from.

280 But does the hon. Member accept that, even if there is consensus on the desirability of such a thing, there are many ways of doing it and there are some ways upon which we might disagree. For example, if you look at the experience of the Spanish local savings banks, the regional, the so-called Cajas, and even the German Länders, wherever, wherever in Europe historically there has been politically controlled financial or banking institutions, it has always resulted in lending decisions or risk taking decisions driven by political considerations and not strict economic, prudent risk management operations, with the taxpayer ultimately exposed to the consequences of it. Does the Hon. the Chief Minister share our view that that is a concern, and a risk that needs to be guarded against?

285 Would he, therefore, not prefer what would have been our approach – because we would have pressed forward with something like this if we had won the Election – along the lines of a more privately managed bank, with professional management and professional private sector risk taker, with private sector capital, with the Government at best in some sort of minority but non-controlling decisions, so that the Government does not feel under pressure – under political pressure – for the decisions that the bank makes, or declines to make, in terms of supporting or not supporting particular potential applicants for small business loans and others?

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he need not concern himself with the idea of political involvement in loaning etc. I don't know that I can accept the premise that he has made. He has drawn it pretty widely, that every bank which has involved... I mean it may be that he is right: certainly, those that have hit the news seem to have had that problem and most of them that hit the news that are of the sort that he describes have involved politicians somehow being in the mix in some sense.

295 That is not what we are envisaging here. We think that there is a different way of doing this. We do not envisage any of the concerns that the hon. Gentleman has articulated being relevant, in the way that this may become a reality. He will, no doubt, agree with me that it is not only the way that the hon. Gentleman has described the potential alternative that could materialise, there are different permutations that could materialise here. You could, for example, have third party lending institutions involved in assessing the risk and granting the loan and the Government – not the Government, the Gibraltar Savings Bank – agreeing, under certain agreed parameters, perhaps involving the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses ticking off what those criteria should be, involved in some guarantee scheme.

300 There are very many different permutations. Many of those are the ones we are looking at at the moment. None of them would give rise to the sort of concerns that he has articulated this afternoon.

Commercial use of airfield
Current status of agreement with MoD

315

Clerk: Question 470, the Hon. P R Caruana.

320

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say what is the current status of the agreement between the Government and the United Kingdom Ministry of Defence relating to the commercial use of the airfield?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

325

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the agreement between the Government and the MoD on the commercial use of the airfield expired on 31st December 2011. The parties have agreed to hold over on the same terms, pending discussions and further negotiations until the end of September 2012.

330

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member confirm that the Government has continued... the agreement has been held over, so it has expired but it continues in operation: in other words, the Government is paying and it continues to operate as if it was still in force?

335

Hon. Chief Minister: We have agreed to extend the period of validity of the agreement, with both parties continuing to talk about how it should be renewed, or not renewed, for nine months, so therefore we have continued, or we will continue, until the end of September 2012, to have an obligation to pay the amounts which are relevant in respect of that agreement, as if it had been continued or expired at the end of September.

340

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member consider that the criteria that the predecessor Government – that is us – applied in entering into the agreement in the first place continue to prevail – assuming that he accepts that they ever prevailed! – but that they continue to hold good, namely that if Gibraltar is to be able to... if his colleague the Minister for Tourism and Aviation – I can't remember which of the two he has given this particular function to – if they are to go abroad with confidence to try and promote the route, to try and develop routes, to try and encourage airlines to come to Gibraltar, it is essential that the decisions as to tariffs and things of that sort that airlines are charged must be in the control of the Gibraltar Government because airlines are increasingly cost sensitive. What is not acceptable is for the Ministry of Defence to do with tariffs what they please, regardless of the implications of those [inaudible] to airlines' willingness to either continue on the route, if they are already here, or to be attracted to the route if they are not. In other words, we cannot go around promoting a resource, an amenity – that is going to become the word that [inaudible] (Laughter).

We cannot go around promoting an amenity, the attractiveness of which, and therefore other people's ability to enjoy, is in the hands of somebody other than the Gibraltar Government. That is what caused the Gibraltar Government to consider it desirable to obtain the degree of management control that we now have over commercial use of the airfield, including setting of tariffs, keeping of tariff revenues, in exchange for contributing half of the operating costs of the runway. Even though I do not know in what circumstances it has arisen, but even if the hon. Members want and attempt to renegotiate some of it, that the underlying premise remains that the hon. Members are not contemplating handing control of it back to the Ministry of Defence who will make decisions by a quite different set of criteria.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman would have known – which we found out – that the agreement that he refers to expired exactly three weeks after we were elected, and part of that period involved the Christmas celebrations and holidays. So, Mr Speaker, we are in the process of discussing with the MoD a lot of the issues that arise. I am sure that even if he had been returned to office he may not simply have asked that it be renewed in exactly the same terms. I accept why it is he said he was concerned to enter in to such an agreement. I think that there are valid concerns that he raises which continue to be valid.

I think the operation of the agreement has thrown up some issues that we need to look at quite carefully in order to protect Gibraltar's interests in respect of such an agreement. But I do not believe, Mr Speaker, that the analysis that the hon. Gentleman does is exactly right. In other words, it is not that the RAF takes control again of the issue, it is that the RAF has control of what they charge at the moment: it is simply subject to the agreement with the Government that that charge is raised as a fee to the Government and the Government then charges... (Interjection)

Yes, I think, Mr Speaker, it is the case for this reason – I will allow the hon. Gentleman to question me from a sedentary position to this extent – there is an agreement now, there is a flat fee paid and the Government fixes landing fees. That agreement was calculated, as I understand it, based on an estimated number of landings and that is how the calculation was arrived at. That is, at least, the impression that we were given, but if the hon. Gentleman wants to say something about it in a minute, I will accept, if he does have something to say, he should tell us.

So, Mr Speaker, that criteria that the hon. Gentleman has referred to is a very important part of what it is that we are looking at. Of course, it is. But there are other issues which are relevant also. I have no difficulty, Mr Speaker, in having a word with him afterwards about what those may be but, although the MoD is not a third party commercial concern, it is on the other side of the negotiating table on this issue. Therefore, I am happy to listen to what he has to say, but perhaps we could have a chat later about some of the nuances of what we are thinking of.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I can tell him that, I don't know who has given him that explanation of how the agreement is structured, but it is certainly not correct.

There is no question here of the MoD establishing tariffs and being a flat fee. It is the fact that the Gibraltar Government sets whatever tariffs it wants, is entitled to the revenue from the commercial use of the airfield, whatever it might be: that is in our hands, so the MoD no longer get a share of... they no longer benefit from... except that there are either some revenue profit-sharing... From memory, there may be some sharing beyond a certain level, but all of that in exchange for the Government's payment of half the opex of the operating costs of the airfield which, regardless of whether that results in a profit or loss for the Government – and it might or might not result in a profit or loss – depending on the success of attracting services to the airfield, especially as the Government also gets other sources of revenue from increased services that can be attracted by cheaper tariffs than the RAF may have established. We get passenger taxes and other things... rather, Gibraltar does. And that is the nature of the agreement,

Mr Speaker, this is not an issue that I have. I mean, I believe that it is hugely in Gibraltar's interests for the Gibraltar Government to be in that sort of operational control of the commercial operations of the airfield so that it is the Gibraltar Government who, in the macro-economic interests of Gibraltar, decides at what level to pitch the tariff. It might want to subsidise them as a means of attracting airlines that would otherwise stop coming to Gibraltar: that decision to do that, or not to do that, has to be a decision taken by the Gibraltar Government and the pricing policy cannot be left to the MoD, that will make it for budgetary reasons, regardless of the macro-economic impact on Gibraltar.

Now that is the objective. For the rest of it, if the hon. Members can negotiate a better deal than we were able to negotiate, good for the hon. Members opposite. I am not concerned with a photocopy extension of the new agreement. Simply, the thrust of my questioning is just to seek from the hon. Member some sort of commitment to the underlying principle of the importance of Gibraltar being in control of what is, ultimately, an important macro-economic factor.

If there is to be a renegotiation, that is a bilateral matter between the Government, in the first place, between the Government and the MoD, but I will say to him this: if he has the slightest doubt or if, in that renegotiation with the MoD, the conversations of the agreement that was first, and what was said and what it meant – if any of that – is not available to him, on our side, I am perfectly happy to provide the Gibraltar Government with such continuity of input, of the history of the original deal, if he thinks that there is the slightest doubt that the original scheme might be being misrepresented to him and that that might, somehow, impair his ability to seek a successful renegotiation.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

You see, I am not suggesting that he could have done a better deal two years ago, or four years ago or six years ago – I do not know what the length of the current agreement had been.

What I am saying is that, having lived out the period of its validity, it is now possible to go back and analyse what were the things that were envisaged, how those have materialised, how they have not materialised, and how it may be possible, for that reason, to seek a more advantageous determination of any agreement that there may be, or a different way of doing what the hon. Gentleman is saying, which we, on this side of the House, agree with, namely that, in terms of the commercial operations of the airport, the Government must be the ones that can go around telling commercial operators what it will cost them to land at Gibraltar. Now there are many different ways of achieving that, and the hon. Gentleman did one of them, which was to do an agreement with the RAF, or the MoD, in effect, to say, right, I will pay half of what you call your opex here, and I will then bear any losses, or pocket any profits, in respect of commercial landing fees that we are able (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to recover from the airlines in that respect. I accept that that was achieved by the first agreement: he will agree with me, not very profitably.

Now, I think that that is an issue that we are looking at in a way that he, I hope, if we are able to deliver a more profitable equation, will agree it is not just good for us, as he said, but good for all of us. I am not pretending that there might have been any negotiating failure on his part. It is only after the agreement had lived out its initial life that it would be possible to analyse backwards whether the cost benefit analysis was based on the equations that he had on the table when he did that negotiation. Those are the issues we are looking at.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not want to risk straying into the public airing of issues that might benefit one side – the other side – more than our side in the negotiation, but as to whether it was profitable or not, that depends on how you measure profitability.

In the first place, it depends on what revenue he is putting on the other side of the column, against the 50% share of operating expenditure. If he is just putting against the revenue, against the operating expenditure contribution, if he is only putting the landing charges or the parking fees – which is what that buys us control of – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) well, obviously, that does not produce a profit. But if he puts in the passenger taxes, the economic benefit of business done through the terminal by passengers and then factors, into both of those, passenger taxes and all of that, the traffic that might not have been generated if the MoD had priced the cheaper airlines out of the market, and then not only would we have lost the revenue but, more importantly – because, at the end of the day, Gibraltar needs to have an airport, like all these other places, even if it is subsidised by the Government: obviously we would like the subsidy to be as little as possible, but I do not think anybody is suggesting, and I hope they are not suggesting, that we do not want an airport unless it is cost neutral – if you measure profitability as a book-keeper would measure it, in our view that would not be the right way to do it.

You have got to value the macro-economic and societal benefits of having multiple services, by multiple airlines, who might not come unless the Government is in a position to give them discounts and deals on landing charges, and have a tariff structure with which they are content to come. He knows just how price conscious international airlines now are, and he knows very well that in most regional airports in Europe – not all – but in most regional airports in Europe, the airport authority actually pays the airline to come to the airport. One famous low cost airline came to us, demanding that, and we said ‘No, thank you’, so the economics of an airport are not as simple as the hon. Member says, and I would ask him to acknowledge that profitability depends on how you measure it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker.

He is absolutely right about that and you can put on the column of profitability just the landing fees, just the parking fees or you can add the passenger tax etc. At some stage, you have also got to say ‘Well, if I take this into the column in the analysis of this agreement’ – and I am going to ask him that we please not carry on, and continue this conversation outside – ‘all of those streams of revenue, then you have got to take it again out of your subsidy to the maintenance cost of the airport.’

In other words, either these things go towards the running of the airport, or they go here towards mitigating what this agreement costs us. But, look, that is the book-keepers’ approach, which I am not taking to the [inaudible]. I am keeping the book-keeper well at bay on this issue (Interjection and laughter). I understand that there are opportunity costs here, I understand that there are wider issues than just pounds, shillings and pence, based on tourism, availability of the sort of flights that we want to have, not just in terms of low cost airlines but also the airlines that provide the sorts of services, as a finance centre, we want to have available.

So it is not just an economic analysis, but there are economics here as part of the analysis, I hope you will agree. Therefore, looking at that equation and the formulae, that is where we are in terms of analysing where this agreement should go in its next incarnation.

Positions filled without advertising or formal selection
Details of all Government or related posts

Clerk: Question 471, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister give details of all persons, if any, employed by, or promoted to, a more senior position within the Government, the GDC or any Government Company, Agency or Authority without a public advertisement of vacancy followed by a selection board?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, in respect, first, of civil servants, a Senior Executive Officer has been upgraded to Assistant Human Resources Manager with effect from 26th January 2012 – and please note that, for pay purposes, her salary is a fixed point between the maxima of the Senior Executive Officer and the maxima of the Senior Officer – having been Acting Human Resources Manager from September 2010.

A Senior Executive Officer has been upgraded to Senior Officer with effect from 3rd January 2012 in the Parliament, upon the post of the Clerk to the Parliament having been upgraded in like manner. Both cases were referred to the Public Service Commission, for their recommendation to the Governor.

In the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, two Clerical Assistants who are GSLA Grade 9s... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana, followed by laughter) – I maintain that the hon. Gentleman is more fun to deal with when he is being angry than when he is making fun of me! (Laughter). So two Clerical Assistants in the GSLA have been employed as from the 1st May 2012. The vacancy was advertised but no selection process carried out because both were long-term trainees through the ETB who had applied for the posts in question. A Sports and Leisure Assistant, who was a GSLA Grade 13, has been employed to commence work on 1st June 2012 – this vacancy was not advertised nor a selection board carried out because, in this case, the person is a long-term trainee on a sheltered employment basis; and an Assistant Pool Manager, GSLA Grade 11, three Pool Operatives/Lifeguards at GSLA Grade 13 and a cleaner have been employed to commence work on 1st June 2012. These vacancies were not advertised: these persons were all ex-GASA employees who have been retained by the GSLA, as the Authority who will be taking over all responsibilities for the running of the swimming pool complex as from that date – from 1st June 2012. However, they were all interviewed to assess their suitability.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, dealing with the civil servants first, I actually was a very strong believer that people should be, in appropriate cases, upgraded in post. The Civil Service Union would come in on behalf of a particular officer and say we think this Officer is doing a job which appertains to a more senior grade, therefore we claim on his or her behalf that he or she be upgraded, and, of course, on occasions the Government agreed and, on occasions, the Government disagreed. That is called upgrading in post, in other words the person gets upgraded with the post because the person is doing a job that appertains to a higher grade or post. But when the Government wanted to do that – I do not know whether he is aware – as a matter of management judgement, rather than as a matter of union claim, this was a bellicose act. So upgradings in post were okay when the Union claimed it, but absolutely verboden when the Government wishes to do it. The question, therefore, is this: has the GGCA or Unite objected to the cases that he has announced, in terms of the Civil Service, of people upgraded in post, have they complained about that? And is he satisfied that it is consistent with his manifesto for the Civil Service which, as I recall, suggested that in future promotions would be on a different basis.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, in respect of the first, which is the Human Resources aspect, we are talking about the person – without naming them because I do not think it is appropriate to do so – who had been the Acting Human Resources Manager for two years, that was put in this position, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Mr Speaker, with close consultation with the GGCA. Mr Speaker, I say that because one of the key things that the hon. Gentleman will have seen in our manifesto was this question of the Civil Service Review and the effect of the Civil Service Review and the filling of vacancies etc etc required that the Human Resources Department should be able to operate, and he will know that in the last 2 years of his Administration there had been no Human Resources Manager, and for that reason Mr Speaker a Human Resources Manager has now been appointed and this individual has been upgraded to Assistant Human Resources Manager with the Union so that was not an issue.

Mr Speaker, in respect of the other post, the issue has been for us that this Parliament is changing. The hon. Gentleman knows that that is the case and we are bringing much more work to the Parliament, we are meeting on a monthly basis and therefore we believed it was appropriate that the post should be upgraded to the post of Senior Officer. I don't see that that conflicts in any way with the approach that we have agreed to take and had set out in our manifesto, would be the way to deal with things in the Civil Service if we were elected. So I don't think that's an issue at all.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the merits or lack of merits of the particular Civil Service examples that he has given is not what concerns me.

I am concerned with process. Either the Government believes that promotions within the Civil Service and, indeed, recruitment into the Civil Service should be by public advertisement and Public Service Commission or departmental – depending on the grade – selection board, followed by PSC approval, endorsement – and therefore it must do so in all cases – or it does not believe in that, and like us – like us, like my Government when we were on that side of the House – it believes that the Government, as a management device, should have available to it the power to upgrade people in post in appropriate circumstances.

Now, Mr Speaker, the practice that he has described, which we did too, is not a practice that the Civil Service union approved of – yes, Mr Speaker – and obtained from us an assurance that we would not carry it out.

Mr Speaker, if I can move on, if I could ask him a supplementary. Yes, upgradings in post... in other words, the Clerk of the House is under-graded for... the Clerk or whoever of the House, for example, is under-graded, for the nature of the work or the nature of the responsibility, or the volume, or a combination of all of them and, therefore, should be re-graded up to a higher post, and then the question arises, whether the incumbent in the original post should either be moved up with the upgraded post, or whether the upgraded post should be opened, with the risk that the incumbent may not win it – which I always thought was a complete and utter nonsense when the reason for the post, amongst other reasons, was that the incumbent was doing, successfully, the work that justified the post being upgraded in the first place.

All I am saying to the hon. Member is that that was hugely objectionable to the Civil Service unions at the time and I resisted them for as long... and one of the issues which did for the Civil Service reform was the widespread criticism of that very practice by the Government. This is the only reason why I am asking him.

Now, if I could ask him a question about the non Civil Service, particularly the GASA ones: these, presumably, Mr Speaker, I think I have correctly understood him to say, that there were two employees of GASA – which is not a Government organisation: I don't know if it is a company or a club or something, that currently runs the swimming pool, the original covered swimming pool which, apparently, the Government is now taking over, which I applaud, because that is something that I would have wanted to do as well, if I had been there. I think it is the logical thing, that that gets incorporated into the Sports and Leisure Authority – what the hon. Member appears to have told me, if I have correctly understood him, is that GASA's employees have been absorbed as part of the takeover, so to speak, into the taking-over organisation.

Mr Speaker, that may be fine and I do not criticise that, either, but when the Government, when my Government did that in respect of the employees of Knightsfield Holdings when its activities were going to be absorbed into the Culture and Heritage Agency, the hon. Member went off to the Principal Auditor and got him to write a report to suggest that there was some irregularity or impropriety about that arrangement, when all we had done was exactly the same thing. Government was going to take over the activities of Knightsfield Holdings, the activities of Knightsfield Holdings were going to be taken over by the Culture and Heritage Agency and the Government simply, therefore, said 'We'll take over the activities and the employees'.

Does the hon. Member accept that it is exactly the same transaction. If the Government takes over an activity, it cannot just leave, high and dry, the employees that used to be doing that activity with the previous organisation: you take over the undertaking, the employees, the activity and the facilities. That is exactly the same thing. (Interjection) Yes, paid employees.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, no I don't accept that premise, for this reason. Mr Speaker it is one thing to on an effective transfer of undertaking to take on 3 or 4 people at the swimming pool to continue to do what they were doing even though the organisation that runs it becomes a different one at the same pay and on the same terms and conditions that they were involved in. It is quite another, Mr Speaker, to take over an organisation not by buying its shares, doesn't have to require, doesn't have to be the position – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) – doesn't have to be the position in respect of a transfer, but taking over its activity and changing the terms and conditions of everybody who is coming over and bringing some new people into that equation as we had the debate in this House some time ago, a dedo, Mr Speaker, and creating a whole new different organisation.

Mr Speaker, that was the equation upon the creation of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency, that is what we disagreed with, that is what we believe the report from the Principal Auditor also highlights and that is why we think there is absolutely no possible comparison between the two. Mr Speaker, in terms of upgradings – and I know that the hon. Gentleman did a lot of it whilst he was in Government, I have just got what he did in the last year Mr Speaker – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) – I'm going to, I mean again Mr Speaker I would rather he got angry, he is easier to deal with than when he is trying to be funny.

So Mr Speaker, I do not recognise any equilibrium between the two examples that he has provided.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, he may not see any equilibrium. I have read the Principal Auditor's report: he was good enough to send it to me privately and confidentially, in a manner that I cannot now allude to, as he does. He alludes to its contents, but I who have now read it –

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of Order, Mr Speaker.

I am quite willing to assist the hon. Gentleman. What I said to him at the time – I said to him across the floor of the House and in the letter that I sent him with the report – was that it was being sent to him on the basis that he would not refer to the names of the individuals who were referred to in it.

Other than that, I have no difficulty with him constructing such defence as he wishes, based on what he has seen of the Principal Auditor's statement. That is what Hansard will show I have said, and what I think my letter reflected.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for his clarification. I intend to do precisely that.

The point, Mr Speaker, is that what the Principal Auditor was commenting on was on the very practice that he has now done with GASA: he was simply commenting that there had been no recruitment process, and I do not understand why the hon. Member is saying that there were people 'roped in'.

The Government was mopping up from within other Government Departments and from Knightsfield Holdings, a Government contractor. The Government was putting all the activities together under the umbrella of a new organisation called the Culture and Heritage Agency and was pooling the premises, the people and their functions and responsibility, and bringing them all under one roof.

Some of those people were coming from the Knightsfield Holdings Limited, others were already in the Government. We selected a CEO from No. 6 Convent Place. That has now been reversed and, of course you cannot bring people in to the public sector and have them all working at different rates of pay, so you have got to harmonise their pay and conditions to what a Chief Executive of an Authority earns, and to what the people who are coming from the Civil Service earn and are going to be working side by side. But the basic activity of getting individuals from the private sector – in your case GASA, and in our case Knightsfield Holdings Limited – and inducting them as part of a takeover of the undertaking, straight in to the public sector, whether it is as an employee of the GDC or the employee of whatever, without advert, it is exactly the same activity.

That we then said, 'Right, you have not had a pay review as employees of Government contractors for quite some time because the contract had expired and the price had not been renewed', well, Mr Speaker, there is no difference between that and renegotiating the price of the contract and paying more to the company for them to pay their staff more, which is how it is normally done and how it would have been done if the Government had not decided to take over the activity, rather than renew the contract.

The idea that the Government could take into the public service employees from a private company that had not been able to keep their income up because the Government had not uplifted their revenue – the company's revenue – and not review the salaries as part of the same activity, Mr Speaker, there are people in this House who know that that is not realistic. For the hon. Member to try and dress that up as some desire to somehow do something for the benefit of those individuals for extraneous purposes is simply indefensible.

The fact of the matter is that he – and I do not criticise it because I do not say it is wrong. It was, in my view, right when we did it, and it is no less right now that they do it. If they take over activities they have to take over the employees that do those activities as well, and I would ask him to agree with me that takeover practice has to include harmonising the pay to the pay that those functions attract elsewhere comparable in the public service. That is what I admit to doing and I am certainly not apologetic or defensive about it.

645 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept that that is what the hon. Gentleman did, but never let it be said that I have accused the hon. Gentleman of trying to be more or less generous to any individual for any reasons which are anything other than him trying to win the last General Election at any price possible, 650 because, Mr Speaker, to say that all of this talk of pay rises, and keeping people at the right level, only crystallised in his mind when he came back from holiday – I don't think that he went on quite such a long holiday in August – and on 1st September started his pay-rise tour of the Rock, when he went around different workshops and they gave 12% here and 17% there, and then absorbed things which had been done outside of Government for the past 15½ years, but which he felt were essential to be done within Government – and with a pay rise – just in time for a General Election, is not to suggest that he is singling anybody out for 655 benefit other than himself, in the attempt to use public money to secure votes!

But Mr Speaker, we do not accept that taking in four or five people at GASA because the GSLA is going to take over the running of the pool, something which he thinks also is a good idea, is the same as creating an Agency to do something that was being done in a company, bring in new people to the Agency from different parts of Government and the Private Sector and creating a new pay regime for that entity, Mr Speaker, it just is not the same.

660 I know that the hon. Gentleman is desperate to cling on to the slightest cover that may somehow obfuscate what he got up to that last quarter, in that attempt to win the General Election. Look, Mr Speaker I don't think
I will ever succumb to that. But look, I salute him for giving it a go, but he should not try and suggest (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) that our taking on these people who were at GASA into the GSLA, to 665 continue running the pool on the same pay that they were earning before, on the basis of what is, in effect, a TUPE transfer, has anything to do with what he did in the Culture and Heritage Agency. They are as different as night and day.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, as much the difference between night is day, as getting 400
670 trainees and doubling their pay just before the Election in order for them to carry on doing exactly the same work (Several Members: Hear, hear.) as they were doing before –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a point of order!

675 Hon. P R Caruana: The only political party –

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker!

Hon. P R Caruana: The only political party –

680 Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker!

Hon. P R Caruana: What the hon. Member is accusing me of...–

685 Mr Speaker: Order! There is a point of order

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, you don't know yet, whether there is a point of order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, there is a point of order.

690 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister has said he wishes to raise a point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, and are you going to let him do it, whether or not – ?

695 Mr Speaker: Until I hear it, I cannot say anything about it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is an obvious point of order and I am sure the hon. Gentleman will accept it.

700 We were not able, however much we would have tried to, to raise the salaries of 400 trainees before the Election, because before the Election, it was only he who had the power to do it, and we who had the power, as any political party to propose it, but we could not raise their salaries.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, that is not a point of order; it is just a reply to an argument!

705 Mr Speaker: No, exactly, it is a reply.

Hon. P R Caruana: Which is what he always does (Interjection by the Hon. Chief Minister) and it is you, Mr Speaker, who always permits it! (Laughter)
You always fall... The Chair always falls for the same trick from the Hon. Mr Picardo!

710 Mr Speaker: Well, I –

Hon. P R Caruana: I know that (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) he was not Chief Minister before 9th December and I know, therefore, that he did not have the power; but does he really think that that distinction is relevant, forensic, to the political point that we are debating?

715 The fact of the matter is that it was he who went around Gibraltar saying to people, ‘If you vote for me, I will double your income for exactly the same as you were doing before for half the income.’ And then he comes to this House and says that I was doing it, which I did not, and then he says that roping in, without advertisement, into the public sector, employees of GASA, because the Government was going to take over the pool, somehow that is different from the Government saying to the employees of Knightsfield, ‘Come in, because the Government is going to take over.’

720 And this business about the pay rise, the Government had two alternatives, Mr Speaker! The Government had two alternatives: it could either renew the Knightsfield contract –

725 Hon. Chief Minister: Where is the question?

Hon P R Caruana: There will be a question. (Laughter) This is as much a question as his point of order was a point of order! (Laughter)

730 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has to understand that there is a choice. The Government could either renew the Knightsfield contract – and by the way, Mr Speaker, the Culture and Heritage Agency was not set up for the purposes of taking Knightsfield; Knightsfield was one of many activities, many already within the public sector, that were going to be roofed in common under the Culture and Heritage Agency. But the Government had about Knightsfield two choices: include them in this new project or leave them out, renegotiate the annual fee payable to Knightsfield, so that they could increase the pay of their staff, because that is what they had to do.

735 That is why, Mr Speaker, if the Government says, ‘Well, alright, I am not doing that. I am going to bring you in to the Government, that the takeover includes, in part, doing...’ Of course, this applies to the operatives: it does not apply to the senior management, who were, in effect, being placed... I do not know, at either Assistant CEO, or CEO level, the Director of the Company. We are talking about the main body of people.

740 So, Mr Speaker, and I am not... Does the hon. Member acknowledge, that my questions are not designed to disapprove of the things that he is saying to me; simply to compare what he has done with what we were doing and with what the unions used to feel before was unacceptable?

745 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, look, I am not going to accept or not accept what it is that he has designed the question for. It is up to him to tell us what he has designed the question for and those who wish to accept it at face value will.

But I am getting increasingly concerned, Mr Speaker, that I see the hon. Gentleman almost demob happy. It is not his usual self. He is being far too friendly in the House today and I am just wondering what it is that is around the corner! (Laughter)

750 Mr Speaker, on the substance of this, look, I know that the hon. Gentleman is embarrassed to have gone around town, just before the Election, with the cheque book, offering always more than 10% –12% here; 16% there; ‘GSD keep trusting, here is your pay rise’, because he had the cheque book before the Election.

Hon P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker –

755 Hon. Chief Minister: But I am not embarrassed, Mr Speaker –

Hon P R Caruana: I have a point of order now.

760 Hon. Chief Minister: Here we go!

Mr Speaker: I must listen to the point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: He must listen to the point. (Laughter)

765 This is the second time, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Member has said that I went round town with a cheque book, offering, between the summer and the Election, pay rises to people above that to which they might have been entitled. I think the hon. Member at least has got to illustrate that, by giving examples of it. He cannot continue to assert something, which I am telling him is not true, and simply assert... He has to take responsibility for the accuracy of the facts that he asserts in this House.

770 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that was definitely not a point of order, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) but a substantive reply to the remarks being made by me, which I am going to continue to deal with, Mr Speaker, by way of what he calls justifications.

775 It is known to all that in those last few months, the hon. Gentleman was offering pay rises. Mr Speaker, he would say, wouldn't he, to people who deserved those pay rises? I make absolutely no qualms about whether people deserved pay rises or did not, but the hon. Gentleman will know that there are a lot of people who he did not get around to in that magical mystery tour with the cheque book, who also feel that they deserved the 15%, the 16% and the 12%. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

780 But, Mr Speaker, for him to try to obtain some element of cover by, first of all, equating what he did with what we have done with GASA and the GSLA and, in particular, the what he calls 'doubling' of salaries of trainees is political desperation of the worst sort. (Laughter by Hon. P R Caruana)

Mr Speaker, these trainees were excluded by him and his Government, and in particular by one ex-trade union official who used to be in his Government, who had responsibility at the time when it happened for Employment – although I do not suggest for one moment it was his idea – from the minimum wage.

785 So it is not that we doubled people's salary – although I always respect the hon. Member's ability to articulate things in such a pejorative way that they seem to suggest that we have done something nefarious. It is not that we went around saying 'Boys, vote for us for double the salary!' It is that, in a modern European democracy, we went around saying 'Boys, it's a scandal that you have been excluded from the minimum wage in 21st century Europe, and if we are elected, you will be given the protection of the Employment Act,' which does not just deal with salary. It deals with all the other protections that are afforded to those individuals who come within the protection of the Employment Act (Several Members: Hear, hear!) – the rights to claim unfair dismissal, etc, etc.

790 To equate that with the attempt – which, as a politician, chapeau! He tried it! – to win a fifth General Election with the pay rise mechanism – I put it no higher and no lower than that – is really, Mr Speaker, comparing apples and pears. The two could not be more different.

795 But if I may say so to the hon. Gentleman, Question Time should not be a pretext for debate. He has asked for information. We have provided him with the information. If he feels aggrieved in this respect and he wants to raise the issue in this House, let him put a motion and let us have a debate – but this is Question Time.

800 Hon. P R Caruana: So it seems, Mr Speaker, I am not going to get the examples of the things he keeps on accusing me of doing and I take note of the fact that he has declined the opportunity to do so. I have a new supplementary for him.

805 Mr Speaker, he has just said that a Minister of my Government, whose idea he does not think it was, has excluded from the minimum wage, youth trainees etc. Can the hon. Member tell this House, when members of the Youth Training Scheme, the Scheme that was set up by the previous GSLP Government, were ever covered by the minimum wage, which was also established by the previous GSLP Government? When was it ever so? Only if it was ever so could anything that we had done have amounted to excluding them from it.

The suggestion that he has made, clearly in ignorance of the history of this matter, is that it was once like this and we changed it and the effect of changing it was to exclude them. I now ask him to say when it was ever so, for us to have changed?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will provide that information to the hon. Gentleman. I cannot provide it on my feet but I will provide it.

Hon. P R Caruana: It is not the case!

Hon. Chief Minister: It is the case, Mr Speaker; he knows it is the case and I will provide it to the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: And, Mr Speaker, if he wants to take the debate further –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: If he wants to take the debate further, let him put a motion. We have provided the information we were asked for in this question. We have had a debate –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, we haven't had a debate!

Hon. Chief Minister: – quite far from the issues that the question raised, and now, Mr Speaker, he has asked me to provide information, which I cannot provide him on my feet, but which I will provide him.

If he thinks that I am going to try and hide by not providing it to him now, I am quite happy to provide it to him by way of press release rather than by way of letter.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, that may be true, but his colleague in Government that he previously referred to as the book-keeper, who was the architect of both the Youth Training Scheme and the minimum wage can tell him right now that his statement is not accurate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will forgive me for now moving that the House do now adjourn for 10 minutes.

I will explain to him – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) I will explain to him why – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and it is completely unrelated to the remarks that he was making a moment ago.

Mr Speaker: Yes, I was aware that the Hon. the Chief Minister would want a short recess. The House will adjourn for 10 minutes, thereabouts.

The House adjourned at 4.10 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 4.25 p.m.

Procedural

Clerk: Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: If the hon. the Leader of the Opposition intends to pose further supplementaries on the last question we were working on, I think I should express the view that we seem to have drifted far away from the original question, and I would ask him to articulate the next question more in keeping with the original question.

May Day and Workers Memorial events Expenditure by Government and Unite

865 Clerk: Question 472, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Will the Chief Minister say what has been the total cost to Government from the May Day and Workers Memorial events, and how much of that represents expenditure, the cost of which has been shared with Unite; and, in respect of the latter, what proportion of those costs did the Government bear?

870

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, the total cost of the May Day event was £19,293, of which £14,293 was borne by the Government and £5,000 by the Gibraltar Trades Council, being half the fee of tax.

The total cost borne by the Government in connection with Workers Memorial Day, amounted to £1,482.

Clerk: Question 473, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say how long he envisages that the consultancy arrangement with former Chief Secretary, Mr E Montado, will endure?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, the consultancy arrangement with former Chief Secretary, Mr E Montado CBE, is not for a fixed period and we have the benefit of it continuing, until such time as the Government and Mr Montado consider it beneficial for Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: Oh, I see, Mr Speaker, so what he told the House the last time, that it was for transitional arrangements purposes, is no longer the case?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is still the case, but those transitional arrangements may take a little bit longer than the hon. Gentleman seems to think transitional arrangements take; or is it that there is a period in which transition occurs? If he can refer me to it, then I will look at the definition that he seems to think is the appropriate one.

Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, the concept of transitioning arrangements is that you transition between one thing and another. Those are not normally open-ended arrangements.

If the hon. Member is saying that what, in effect, is happening is that Mr Montado has returned to No. 6 Convent Place more or less on an indefinite basis, because an arrangement that continues until one or other side no longer wants to continue it, and whilst both remain happy with it, that is true of every employment arrangement, to consult, that is not a transitional arrangement. So, is it a transition arrangement or is it an indefinite arrangement of a return to No. 6 Convent Place?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, it would be a fairly ungenerous contract of employment, if it were a contract of employment, which is how the hon. Gentleman has just characterised it, given that it is for no remuneration, as I did clarify at the last opportunity.

910

Mr Speaker, actually I should not have taken the hon. Gentleman at his word. What I said, in answer to Question 322 of 2012, was that we had approached Mr Montado last month and asked him to provide advice and support, particularly in relation to the transitional period, but not exclusively.

915

So, Mr Speaker, I do not think that the analogy that the hon. Gentleman has drawn is valid in any sense, and I am delighted to confirm to the House that Mr Montado will be available to the Government as long as the Government wishes him to be available and he wishes to be available to the Government.

920

Hon. P R Caruana: So therefore on an indefinite basis?

925

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, because that is what 'indefinite' means, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) but not, Mr Speaker, on the basis of an employment agreement, as the hon. Gentleman sought to characterise a moment ago.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member say, just by way of indication, since he was appointed, how many hours a week on a typical week has he devoted to these altruistic arrangements?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I cannot. I would need to have notice of that question because I am not involved in seeing Mr Montado, when he is at No. 6. He is usually dealing with the current Chief Secretary, Mr Gomez, and other administrative officers, in assisting them.

935

But, if the hon. Gentleman wants me to seek that information and write to him to inform him or otherwise inform the general public of how many hours we, as a community, need to be grateful to Mr Montado, for him agreeing to provide, free of charge, to the benefit of the Government and the people of Gibraltar, I am delighted to do so.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, there is quite a lot in that statement which is not universally a shared view.

The hon. Member appears to think that people who are paid for by one party working free for another... that that is an entirely satisfactory arrangement, regardless of whether gratitude to Mr Montado is called for or not. It is not universally believed that such arrangements are either conventional or appropriate.

945

It is not just a question of a bilateral relationship between the... Clearly, Mr Montado is a greatly experienced, ex-most senior civil servant in Gibraltar, with a huge amount of experience, both in domestic and external matters, and if the Gibraltar Government wants to avail itself of those services, there is nothing wrong with doing so, just as we did so in respect of some other civil servants that have retired at a different level from the public administration. But the Government does it directly, and either pays for it, but does not use people's time which is being paid for by somebody else...

950

Now, the last time I made similar remarks, all manner of people made public statements to the effect that there was some insinuation of impropriety. There is no insinuation of impropriety to the person who is paying Mr Montado, whilst he is advising the hon. Member; but it is not the conventional way of doing these things. The conventional way of doing these things is that the Government engages the consultant directly for a fee, usually, but for nothing, if the consultant wants to do it for nothing; but it is not normal for a private sector entity to deliver the time at their financial expense – which is not to suggest impropriety. There were all sorts of statements about whether I was imputing that this or that was going to happen. I said nothing of the sort, and when the allegations were made publicly, I did not think it necessary to defend myself or to clarify statements that I had not made.

955

But it is not the normal way that things are done; the normal way that things are done would be slightly different. But the Government... the Opposition does not see anything untoward at all, in the Government availing themselves, on a consultancy basis, of whatever advantage the Government may think accrues from clawing back some of the accumulated experience and skill of Mr Montado or any other retired civil servant – except that when we did it, the hon. Members disapproved of it, so the disapproval must have been based on the fact that the Government was paying for it, as opposed to somebody else paying for it.

960

Hon. Chief Minister: I think I discerned a question there, Mr Speaker.

965

It is not all manner of people, Mr Speaker, that raised issues publicly, after the comments made by the hon. Gentleman the last time that this was debated, in March, or was the subject of questions in March; it was the partners of Hassans and Mr Montado himself – not 'all manner of people'.

970

So you see, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said that there are those who believe that this is not a usual arrangement. Well, Mr Speaker, those who believe that, we think are in a very small number. He happens to be sitting opposite and they are not in Government, so we do not think that that is at all an issue to be concerned about, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) because, Mr Speaker, unless the hon. Gentleman has got up this afternoon to be an advocate for a fee to be paid to Mr Montado, then I do not discern anything in what he is saying that could possibly change our mind in accepting Mr Montado's generous approach to this, which is to say, 'Look, I am there to help Gibraltar. I am there to give you the time that you need, to provide the expertise that I have, in order to assist your Government', and to assist not just the political Government but the administrative Government, which is where Ernest Montado's expertise has always been.

So, Mr Speaker, the people who think that this is not normal are not the people sitting here, and they are not the people in 6 Convent Place, who are not politicians, who have welcomed Mr Montado, who, apart from being eminently capable and very experienced, is very well liked, and always has been very well liked by just about everybody who has ever been at No. 6 – although there are some apparently notable exceptions.

So, Mr Speaker, frankly, for the Leader of the Opposition to be making such an issue of the fact that the Government has no –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member care to clarify, the 'notable exceptions' was intended to mean me? Is that what he meant?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I might be able to think of a few others.

Hon. P R Caruana: But including me? What basis does he have for saying that?

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the basis that I have for saying that is that a man who is retired gives his time to the Government – the political Government and the administrative arm of Government – in order to assist by providing his expertise, his understanding and his depth of knowledge, and it is the subject of questions in this House!

Well, Mr Speaker, he is right, the issue that we used to take, when he used to do the same sort of thing, involving highly paid consultants was the 'highly paid' bit because, on many occasions, we believed they were overpaid for the work that they were doing, and in some instances, as he will know, because I expressed it from that side of the House, I believe that the arrangements had been entered into in breach of European procurement rules.

But Mr Speaker, having expertise available for the benefit of the people of Gibraltar and its Government, we think is a great thing. Therefore, I do not know what it is that is making the hon. Gentleman make me stand up to defend these eminently proper and eminently justifiable and eminently advantageous arrangements for the Government and the people of Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, he is not the sole judge of whether things are 'eminently proper'. And, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member who so professes to believe in the importance of transparent parliamentary democracy cannot reduce to a personal attack on the subject the Leader of the Opposition's entirely proper probing of arrangements that the Government enters into for the conduct of the public affairs of Gibraltar.

And it is wholly improper for him to suggest that, because I am asking him, because I want in the public domain and I want to question, query and get to the bottom of the arrangements relating to the use by the Government of an external consultant, that that somehow means, as he has felt free to say, that I am part of the 'notable exceptions' who did not like Mr Montado at No. 6 Convent Place, despite the fact that everybody else did! He has no right to come to that conclusion.

The only conclusion that he has a right to come to is that, notwithstanding that he served my Government for many years, without once opening his mouth to suggest that he was unhappy about anything, he, despite having been a professional secret... civil servant – (A Member: Secret!) civil servant, then made very serious – and may I hasten to add, completely incorrect – allegations against me, in the newspapers, in the context of accepting the arrangements that the hon. Member thinks is conventional. That is the only thing that should surprise him about Mr Montado and Mr Montado's statement.

I have never said anything, either when I was his Chief Minister, or since I have been Chief Minister, or the last time I raised this matter in the House, or today – I have never said anything that entitles the hon. Member or anybody else to conclude that I had anything other than respect for Mr Montado. Indeed, today I have acknowledged all of his skills and experience and expertise.

The hon. Member, as always, in his inimitable spin style, simply blusters and distorts simply to hear himself say the things that he wants to hear himself say. But he must not delude himself. It does not make them true – otherwise, let him point to any remark that I have made about Mr Montado that suggest that I did not like Mr Montado, which is, in effect, what he has said in this House, today.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I am not the sole judge of what is proper, the hon. Gentleman starts by saying. But then he gets up and carries on by saying that something that I have done is improper because, of course, in the world of Peter Caruana, in the world of the hon. Gentleman, he can be the judge of what is improper when I do it, but I am not able to be the judge of what is proper or what is not improper. Mr Speaker, Hansard will be a laugh a minute for those that come behind us, to look at what the hon. Gentleman used to say, when he opened his mouth in this place.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said of those interventions that had been made in the local press by all manner of people – actually, the partners of Hassans and Mr Montado, one in the press statement and one in a letter – that there was nothing that he felt he needed to defend himself from, in respect of those correspondences and press statements. That he said, of course, in his earlier intervention. In this intervention, he has said that Mr Montado made very serious allegations against him, in the letter that he sent to the press.

Well, look, Mr Speaker, he needs to make up his mind. Was there nothing to defend himself against or was there something which was so serious which merits comment? Mr Speaker, clearly we are not going to agree on this issue.

The position of the Government of Gibraltar –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am going to make a point of order.

I am sorry, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is again manifestly confusing and then distorting what I have said. I have said that I did not feel the need to defend myself from any of the allegations that were made, following our last discussion of this matter in Parliament, namely things that were said.

I have not addressed the question of what Mr Montado said about what he thought, what he had said before that, Mr Speaker – nothing to do, one thing with the other.

What I have said to this House –

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order.

Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr Speaker, he has to accept what I said. (Interjection by the Hon. Chief Minister) Yes, Mr Speaker, he may then be as critical with what I said as he wants; but he cannot reinvent what I said, for the purposes of then being critical about his reinvention.

I have said that when I last spoke in this House, I said certain things. I asked him certain questions both primarily and then in supplementary –

Mr Speaker: Well, I think I –

Hon. P R Caruana: – and then in supplementary, and that provoked a pretty furious response in the media from, amongst others, a letter that purported to be signed... well, it was not signed by anybody; it said at the bottom, ‘The partners of Hassans’, so I suppose it was written on their behalf.

The things that were said in that letter, in my view, simply did not reflect what I had said in Parliament and, therefore, I did not feel it necessary to engage with them in defence of those allegations, but I will not be intimidated from probing, in this Parliament, legitimate issues of the conduct of public affairs, either –

Mr Speaker: I think the point of order is that the Hon. the Chief Minister is distorting your line of argument. Is that correct?

My understanding is that we are now in the throes of an argument where we have gone beyond the question. Statements are being made by both sides, which invariably portray what one side or the other intends to convey. I do not see that as a distortion.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am obliged to you, Mr Speaker, so I will continue with my answer to the supplementary.

But, Mr Speaker, moments like this must make you think... I bet you are glad you are going – even if it is in September!

Look, Mr Speaker, our position is very simple. We think that these arrangements are excellent. Not only are they proper, they are absolutely beneficial to the people of Government and administration of Gibraltar, and we think the longer that they can continue and Mr Montado can be persuaded to provide us with his expertise at no fee, we think that is actually a genuinely good thing.

It can only not be a good thing, if the hon. Gentleman is again going where he went, which is to say, in the last exchanges, the last time in the House, ‘Because he is paid by somebody else is he that organisation’s insider?’ Mr Speaker, we do not believe that that is the issue here at all. The hon. Gentleman, in my view, in his first supplementary, has once again raised that spectre by not using those words.

It may be, Mr Speaker, that this is a case of ‘you say tomayto and I say tomato’, and we are never going to agree, because the position of the Government of Gibraltar would be simply to record gratitude to Ernest Montado CBE for giving us of his time, both at a political and an administrative level, for the good of the people of this fair city.

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, since there appears to be no point of order capable of prospering against the hon. Member, can I just limit myself to say two things: first of all, that whether the Speaker is exasperated, to the point where he may be glad that he is going – let us put it no stronger than that – is a matter of complete indifference to the Opposition’s right to ask the Government questions about Mr Montado or any other aspect of public affairs. He can glibly reduce this House to that sort of pantomime, by aside remarks of that sort, if he wants to; but it will have absolutely no impact whatsoever, whether the Speaker wishes he was sitting on the Chair or not, on the way that the Opposition conducts its business.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, will the hon. Member accept and not therefore repeat, that I have not said – as he has just again wrongly imputed to me, with impunity... that I did not say that the arrangements were improper; I have said that they were unconventional? Even he must be aware of the difference between the two things.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will allow me to welcome back the character that I have known for the past eight years and I thought, for a few hours this afternoon, we might have lost! One now knows one’s adversary again.

Mr Speaker, look, it is not a question of glibly reducing anything in this House. It is that simply sometimes one needs to keep one’s feet on the ground and not build an edifice of every argument that we are having, in an occasion when we should not be having arguments, because this is not argument time; it is Question Time – but it turns always into argument time or into debate time.

Mr Speaker, frankly, there is a big difference between ‘unconventional’ and ‘improper’, but I am not going to accept that what the hon. Gentleman was meaning was unconventional, when everything that he was saying was pointing towards improper (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and when he was Chief Minister –

Hon. P R Caruana: I have a point of order!

Mr Speaker: No, no, no!

Hon. P R Caruana: I have a point of order!

The hon. Member cannot impute to me improper motives different to the words that I have chosen to choose! He is not allowed to do that!

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the rule is that I cannot impute improper motive. It is not that I cannot interpret what the hon. Gentleman is saying, otherwise, Mr Speaker, he needs to go back to Hansard for the past 16 years with a blue pencil and put it through most of what he has said in response to Members of the Opposition most of the time, which was to take what we had said, either in the Budget debates or in answers to a question, turn it into what he said we had said and answer that. That is paraphrasing, Mr Speaker – not imputing a motive.

Mr Speaker: On the point of order, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition asked the Chief Minister to agree something, and the Chief Minister replied he does not agree because what the implication of the question was something which was not on the face of the question. That is his means and his manner of answering the question. Surely he is entitled to answer the question. He does not have to answer the question in a manner which is designed to elicit a particular answer (Hon. P R Caruana: No.) and therefore by answering the way he does, he is not out of order.

1140 Hon. P R Caruana: No, but what he is not entitled to do is to say in his answer that I have said that it was improper, when I have not said that it was improper.

Mr Speaker: No, he said that was his interpretation.

1145 Hon. P R Caruana: I am sorry, he is not allowed to mis-... he is not allowed to restate my words, put in inverted commas by attributing to me words that I have not used, simply because he has so interpreted the different words that I used.

And Mr Speaker, if that point of order will not prosper with you, I am not going to bother to make any more points of order in this House.

Several Members: Ooh!

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not know whether that is a point of order, but it sounded to me like an appeal against your decision on a point of order.

But Mr Speaker, look, the hon. Gentleman needs just to go back. Do not go back 16 years; go back eight, in the time that I have been here as a Member of the Opposition! That was the hon. Gentleman's routine attitude, without accepting that that is what he was doing.

I at least have said that I acknowledged that he said 'unconventional' and that he did not say 'improper', but that everything that he said around the word 'unconventional' was designed, in my view, to suggest impropriety.

Mr Speaker, there is nothing wrong with suggesting impropriety, because that is what he is paid for. If he believes that there are arrangements which are improper, he comes to this House, he gets up and he says either, 'Those arrangements are improper', or he couches his language, not using the word 'improper' in a way that suggests it, for those who might care to listen, at this time in the afternoon, to his meanderings.

1165

Well, Mr Speaker, frankly, the position on this question is not going to change. We continue to be exclusively of the view, on this side of the House, that these arrangements are proper and I dare say they are conventional in many respects and unconventional in others, and that has nothing to do with the value of what Gibraltar gets from Ernest Montado, with the propriety of what Gibraltar gets from Ernest Montado and from the fact that we are going to continue to take it.

1170

And if the hon. Gentleman believes that he can bully you, Mr Speaker, into making decisions on points of order the way he wants you to make them, by making threats like the one he is making, I am sure, Mr Speaker, (a) that he cannot, because you are made of sterner stuff than that; and (b) frankly, the Government would be delighted to see him just debate points or ask questions, rather than get up with points of order, just for the sake of hearing the bluster that comes out of that mouth.

1175

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member does not mind, I will continue to conduct the affairs of the Opposition in whichever way I think appropriate. And I am certainly not going to take lessons from him in the conduct of any of my public duties – why should I? I think our respective records speak for themselves and I think those distinctions will speak for themselves even more loudly, as people see how he is discharging his current responsibility.

1180

But certainly, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member feels that it is proper – and apparently, Mr Speaker, thinks it is okay, too, which therefore I suppose makes it okay – for the hon. Member to constantly be making denigrating, derogatory, aside remarks about the nature of how I go about my business. We can reduce this Parliament to that, if that he wants to do, but it is he who is doing that, not me. If he wants me to constantly punctuate my contributions in this House with colourful descriptions of how he goes about the business in this House, he knows very well that I can do that very easily, but I am not going to be dragged down into the gutter with him, by him.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know where the hon. Gentleman has been for the past 16 years! I think he may have – (Interjection by the Hon. P R Caruana) he may be suffering from political amnesia, because he is doing what he is accusing us of doing – the very things that he used to do – which we believe we are not falling into the trap of doing.

1195 But, Mr Speaker, let us put it this way: in both the occasions, one of them happy, one of them less happy, when I have had occasion to address the issue of the Chair, on both of them I have thanked you for the way that you have dealt with issues that affected me and what I had described advisedly as some of the cruellest moments that this Parliament may have seen – cruel, Mr Speaker, because the hon. Gentleman, when he was the incumbent of this Chair, felt that it was up to him to decide the fitness and propriety of people to hold office in this House, to make comment on that publicly here and outside. So, Mr Speaker, for him to now say that he does not do that is really, Mr Speaker, for the hon. Gentleman to have characterised for all of us the Election loss as the biggest car crash in history, in political history, which has given him such political amnesia that he cannot remember how he used to behave when he was the incumbent of 6 Convent Place and of this Chair.

1205 Mr Speaker: Okay, order.

There has been no question. Each side has made a statement of its position. We must move to the next question.

1210 New power station
Plans for building

Clerk: Question 474, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1215 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government envisages that it will build a new power station at Lathbury Barracks or elsewhere?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1220 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, the Government remains committed to the establishment of a new power station for Gibraltar, using best available technology principles. The process of analysing all the options available in respect of which technology is the most appropriate to secure Gibraltar's electricity needs for the coming generations and how best to integrate the use of renewable sources of energy continues and will impact on whether to retain Lathbury Barracks as the preferred site.

1225 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Chief Minister say whether the Gibraltar Electricity Authority advised him against the building of the intended power station, with that technology?

1230 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have met with representatives of the Gibraltar Electricity Authority, with the Government's Chief Technical Officer and with others who were involved in the decision-making process, and I can confirm to him that the decision of the Government – as a result of everything that we were told by all relevant parties, including the Gibraltar Electricity Authority representatives that we have spoken to – the decision of the Government has been not to proceed at this stage, with the proposal for a power station at Lathbury.

1235 I think it is clear in my answer that the possibility of a power station at Lathbury is still very much on the cards, as much as are other potential opportunities, not all of which were envisaged at the time that the hon. Gentlemen was involved in the commissioning of a report that looked at different sites because, of course, technology has changed in the interim.

1240 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, my question is somewhat different to that.

I understand that the hon. Member can take advice from a number of different officials, from a number of different places, as the ones he has listed, and then the Government, taking into consideration everything that it has said, makes its decision, which does not take us very much further into discovering whether a particular official gave particular advice.

1245 The question that I am not even asking for, in relation to a particular official... I am just asking the hon. Member whether, regardless of whether they accepted it or not, it was the position of the Gibraltar Electricity Authority – that is to say, the advice of the Electricity Authority – that the Government should not proceed, for whatever reason, be it for changing technology or cost or whatever, with diesel powered engines.

1250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the advice was not taken on that basis, namely –

Hon. P R Caruana: No, I am asking whether it was given, not whether it was taken.

1255 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, it could not have been given, because it was not asked for on that basis – in other words, we did not go around the table saying, ‘You, the Electricity Authority or representatives thereof: do you say yea to diesel power at Lathbury?’

1260 That was neither put in respect of diesel power or Lathbury in that way, but I can tell the hon. Gentleman that the advice in respect... without disclosing what advice was given by each individual, because I am not going to be drawn across the floor of the House into disclosing what the Chief Technical Officer told me, what the Financial Secretary told me, and what the Gibraltar Electricity Authority told me, when we were having this discussion, because that would, in effect, be to give the hon. Gentleman the transcript of those discussions; but I am prepared to give him the upshot of them. The Gibraltar Electricity Authority neither advised the Government not to proceed, nor did they advise the Government to proceed with that technology in that place.

1265 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, perhaps if I could ask a supplementary question.

1270 Can the Chief Minister say whether the Government in any form, whether in the form of the Chief Minister, the Ministers or officials, has been in discussion or negotiations with the owners of OESCO for the purpose of them actually providing a new power station?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, we have not been in discussion with the owners of OESCO for them to provide the new power station.

1275 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member, then, say to me whether... I do not mind saying to him that I am probing, in relation to the content of his press release – of the Government’s press release of 21st March, if he has it in front of him.

Will the hon. Member say whether the Government would consider a technology for generation of electricity that involves gas?

1280 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is a possibility that that is one of the issues that could be brought for serious discussion, but it has not yet been presented to us in a way that merits any serious discussion, not least because there would be the issue of where the gas comes from.

1285 The discussion that we have had has gone far enough for us to be able to ascertain that gas you either bring in liquid form – and in order to turn that gas from liquid form to gaseous form, again, you need to have very small plants of re-gasification, because larger plants need to be very far away from populated areas – or you need to bring the gas from the north – put it that way, which is the only viable way in which you can bring it from the north – in effect, from Spain. Then you would have the issue which we have always had, and all of us will always have, about whether we would want to rely on supply for something as essential as the generation of electricity from Spain.

1290 In that mix, Mr Speaker, you can put the fact that today Gibraltar gets, I would say, all of its diesel from across the frontier; but we could at any time if we needed to bring it in by ship. And so, Mr Speaker, before it is possible to consider carefully whether gas is something that can be considered as an alternative source of fuel for the engines that might make up a new power station, one needs to deal with all of those issues very carefully, and you cannot have a serious discussion until you know what all of those permutations are.

1295 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the reason why I ask the hon. Member this is because the sense that I got when I read this statement is that the hon. Members must have thought that we woke up one morning, when we were on that side of the House, and we said, ‘Ah, let’s build a diesel powered generating station at Lathbury Barracks’ – assuming that all of these things that they now offer as reasons for stopping and pausing...

Of course, they are entitled to stop and pause, if they were on time to do so, to stop and pause and decide on whether they want to proceed or not proceed. He knows that I believe that a new power station is necessary; but he could take a different view. But on reading the statement, it suggests an assumption that all of these issues were not properly considered a part of the decision that led to the one that he subsequently put a hold on for these and other reasons.

Now, Mr Speaker, will he agree with me – which is one of the reasons that we had on our list, for discounting gas, as well as some of the ones that he has mentioned – the fact that Gibraltar is a small place, without many open spaces that are not close to residential areas, and even if that were not so, by our configuration, transportation would have to be through such areas, and that the transportation of gas, even in its liquid form and then its re-gasification, are not the most risk-free of scientific processes, and that there are, in addition to the factors that he has mentioned, safety considerations to take into account as to whether gas is a medium of energy that can safely be handled in a small place like Gibraltar, not just with confined space, but with very little zoning and de-conflicting of possible conflicting activities?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I can agree with him that that is an issue that needs to be determined before you can be serious about gas – absolutely right – and it is one of the issues that, if you were going to go for gas, might make Lathbury Barracks the wrong place for gas, because to get to Lathbury Barracks, you have got to go through the town, unless you were to somehow have a mechanism for ships to be able to disgorge their liquid gas nearer to Lathbury Barracks, which I do not think is viable. So Mr Speaker, that is very much an issue.

But there are other permutations. The hon. Gentleman will know what energy prices are like in other places, because of the price of the fossil fuels used predominantly for that purpose. He started, Mr Speaker, by talking about diesel power, and the advice that he will have got, I am sure, which is the advice that we have got and have seen – because I think the PB Power Report, as it is referred to is the one that he had available and I think contains this remark – is that diesel, still even today, is the fuel of choice for generating sets for island economies – Gibraltar is not an island, but it is an island economy in many respects. So there are many permutations, therefore, that need to be taken into consideration, if you are going to take Gibraltar out of that equation.

But, Mr Speaker, at the end of the day, I am not saying that, with the information available to him two years ago, the hon. Gentleman got it wrong, because the decision was taken about two years ago and there was much of the financing discussion going on thereafter. But there is a lot that has happened in the two years, affecting technology that might be able to affect the decision-making process.

There are, for example, Mr Speaker, issues relating to the type of engines that you might acquire. So, say, for example, that we were to acquire, or we were to build a power station at Lathbury with eight sets, potentially going to 12 – which was the plan that he had envisaged. In the plan that we found was the subject of the agreements when we were elected, the eight sets and the potential expansion was for four more sets of those caterpillar engines that burnt diesel. Now, the hon. Gentleman will know that there are dual fire engines and that technology has come on a very long way in the past two years, and that those can go from burning diesel to burning gas in a... literally in a flash – in a micro-second – so the fuel that is injected into the set can one moment be diesel and the next moment be gas. The difference in price between a set that only burns gas or only burns diesel and one that burns both of them on a dual fire basis is not so great, and there are other sets that burn gas and burn diesel, but they have to be adapted to go from one to another. The process of adapting them can take months – in other words, it is not, you change the fuel; it is actually you have to almost re-engineer the engine, but it is provided for in the design.

Those things are also relevant because the price of diesel is only going in one direction; the price of gas, although it is going up, is more stable than the price of diesel, and those things are also in the mix.

I do not know, Mr Speaker, if that is an issue that he considered, and he may say to me, ‘We may have looked at it, but getting gas up there anyway would be so complicated that it was not worth doing.’ There may be an argument that getting gas up there in 20 years’ time may be easier and may be economically more viable and not involve such risk, and that therefore why commit yourself to the eight engines only burning diesel or requiring retrofits in order to burn gas?

Issues like that are also necessarily on the table. I am concentrating on gas because the hon. Gentleman has raised that particular point.

There are many other issues on the table, and I will agree with him, if he wants to put the points to me, that one could spend the next four years making this determination. It is like buying a TV set or a video – when do you buy them? Technology is going to be better next week, and if you read up on what it is you are buying, you are going to find out that the Japanese are about to bring something out that may be new.

1360 So a decision has to be taken. We are fully alive to the need to reach the determination that we have to reach as soon as possible, in order to go ahead with ensuring the continuity and the security of supply, looking at both the fuel and the generating style.

1365 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not 100% certain, but is the hon. Member aware – I think the answer is yes – that the PB Power Report, indeed, considers and considered, and I think we did consider, the question of dual switchable fuel burning engines? I cannot remember what the reason was, but I think there is some reason given in the report, why it is not recommended. I cannot remember what it was, nor am I particularly sure, in respect of this part of the debate, so I will not press it.

1370 The next issue, Mr Speaker, is this: is the hon. Member aware – I do not say it for any reason other than to make him aware, if he is not – that the previous administration was, indeed, contrary to what it says in one of the paragraphs of this press release, was indeed planning by way of complying with the European Union Directive, which so requires, to establish renewable source energy production in Gibraltar, in addition to the power station, and that there are reports in existence to that effect, which if he has not seen, I think he ought to ask for and see, lest he should start again in respect of some of the considerations.

1375 But we have been through... I have seen reports – I cannot remember if they were internal Government reports or whether they were prepared for the Government by some external agency – consideration of wind power, wind turbines, tidal, wave, underwater current, and all these things, as a result of which we have concluded that wind turbines, given the state of technology at the moment, and its ability to be put to commercial use, given its degree of development, the only effective technology available, suitable for Gibraltar, was wind turbines, which raised lots of considerations about the location. The optimum locations were objectionable, not least to the previous chairman of GONHS, on the basis that it could interfere with bird migration.

1380 I am not raising that, simply to ask the hon. Member whether he is aware that a lot of this work has been done and must sit somewhere in the bowels, and he may be interested in asking for it.

1385 My final supplementary, Mr Speaker, is this: I note that the hon. Members have said publicly – which we welcome – that the distribution network is going on, the re-cabling. I do not know whether he meant by that the laying of fibre-optic main ring around Gibraltar – but he then goes on to say that this is not going to be done by an external contractor as part of this contract, but rather internally –

Hon. Chief Minister: Will the hon. Member give way?

1390 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: He said fibre-optic.

1395 Hon. P R Caruana: No, not fibre-optic; what is the word? Oh there is a word like that... Some new form of cabling, some new – I am just forgetting now the jargon that describes it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Whatever was planned.

1400 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, whatever was planned, which was a significant project.

Now, if the work can be done locally, fine. But I never received the advice that he says that he has received, that it could be done locally. If it can, nevertheless – notwithstanding that I never got that advice – if it is nevertheless so, is he satisfied that it can be done with the resources that the GEA have currently internally, without significantly disrupting their ability to do what they normally do, for which they always said to me they were already short-handed?

1405 That is the question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Let me try and take those in turn.

1410 I do not recall any part of the PB Power Report that reached a conclusion about the dual fire engines, which put me on notice of anything that I should be cautious about, but I will check it again to make sure that that is not the case. It may be that we do not go for fuel dual fire engines, because there may be a reason not to do that –

Hon. P R Caruana: Dual, not fuel – dual.

1415 Hon. Chief Minister: Dual fire, that is what I am saying.

Hon. P R Caruana: Dual fuel.

1420 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I think they are called dual fire, because they fire one fuel, then the other, but whatever it is, it just seemed to us, when we were looking at this – and we do not seem to have come across the hurdle that he suggests is there – that dual fire at least left certain options open, even if those options might be on the second-hand resale market if we ever came to sell sets, if our economics changed.

Whatever it is, it seemed to us that the difference in price might make that an issue worth investigating in some way.

1425 Mr Speaker, I will tell him that in terms of renewable sources of energy production, we have not come across anything, we have not been provided with any reports that suggests that the hon. Members were doing anything that would put us on the doorstep of starting to produce renewable energy in Gibraltar. I recognise from what he has said, the presentation that was made by the Institute of Engineers at the Mackintosh Hall, some time I think in the beginning of 2011 or earlier, that suggested that their view was that wind was the only possible source of renewable energy based on the technology as it was and that, even then, the best location for it would be slightly offshore on the south of Gibraltar.

1430 But Mr Speaker, we believe that there is now potential for that to have changed, but I am happy to say that I do not think that Government needs to be an investor in renewable energy. I do not think that is the way that our considerations are going. I do not think it is where they were going. In other words, not the Government owning an emerging technology because, apart from wind, they all appear to be emerging to an extent, or solar in terms of heating water for boilers.

1435 Everything else seems to be ‘emerging’. We are not looking at investing in those sorts of generating sets, but it may be that there is some way, nonetheless, to bring in renewable sources of energy, depending on how the advice that we are seeking goes.

1440 Mr Speaker, finally, in respect of the distribution network, the advice that we have got is that it is possible to do all or most of the work locally. That is not to say that the GEA itself will be doing the work itself on all occasions – it may have to go out to tender for other entities in Gibraltar to do parts of the works which, frankly to us, makes more sense than doing it as part of the wider contract now that we are not proceeding with the creation of the generating capacity up at Lathbury under that agreement. Because, of course, we could have said to the proposed joint venturer, ‘Don’t build us the power station, but build us the distribution grid.’ Under the European procurement process, as we understand it, that would have been a substantial change to the contract and would have required a new European procurement process; whilst if we do it in-house, and the GEA feel that they can, by doing parts themselves, and locally tendering for parts of the work where they need additional assistance, then the work will be at least progressing, whilst the other important aspect – and I think we will agree that they are both equally important – which is the generating capacity, is finalised.

1450 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member say whether they are giving any degree of consideration to the importation of electricity?

1455 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not recognise anything in the discussions that we have had in seriousness which suggests that we might be prepared to hock Gibraltar’s need for electricity to our neighbours to the north, who could not be relied on (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to give us oxygen when we needed it, in the 1960s and 1970s.

1460 Is there a possibility of bringing in from the south? Well, Mr Speaker, all I will say is this: in relation to telephones, we do have a lot of resilience; in relation to electricity, we have never had resilience. But my view is that we must not ever import electricity and that we must create our own electricity – even if we have renewable sources which plug into the grid, etc. We must be self-sustaining, in terms of the production of electricity and that must always be the case.

1465 Should we, as we develop as a financial services centre, as we develop as an e-gaming hub, etc, have the capacity, in a doomsday, Perfect Storm-style scenario, to have resilience into our grid? Well, that is an issue that perhaps we do need to look at, but not at the expense of not having, and operating, a free-standing independent generation of electricity capacity that is the main and daily source of our electricity.

1470 Hon. P R Caruana: The reason why I ask, Mr Speaker, is that I am constantly receiving reports which I just put to the hon. Member to confirm or to reject that there are parties, that if these are no more than rumours, the rumour has got to the point of putting a name to the particular parties, who are out to 'the south', as he likes to call it – I would rather call them 'Spain' and 'Morocco'; there is nothing wrong with mentioning the name of the country!

1475 There are people... there are particular corporate interests in Gibraltar, who are actively, supposedly as your agents, as the agents of the Gibraltar Government, exploring these possibilities in Morocco currently. I am not saying today; I am saying currently, these days, these weeks, at this general point in time.

My first supplementary on the subject was just designed to establish whether that is true – whether it is by way of resilience or... Certainly, I would agree with him that it would be folly to do it by way of only or even principal supply.

1480 But regardless of whether it is by [inaudible], therefore without necessarily suggesting that there is anything wrong with it – certainly if it is only by way of resilience, subject to cost, it may be a very good thing – but is it happening?

1485 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is true that the Government has been approached by some who have suggested, 'What about this, would you be interested?' The Government's attitude has been, 'Look, if you brought to the Government, without any capital expenditure on the part of the Government, the possibility of buying electricity for resilience purposes – if you were in, literally, Coaling Island, for example, to suggest a landing point – with a cable, and you were ready there to connect into the Government's grid, into the Gibraltar Electricity Authority grid – for resilience purposes that is something that we would consider and look at.

1490 Unfortunately, it appears to me that the economics of doing that, for the purposes of resilience, really do not work and therefore it is something which, like everything else, is worth it. If there are people who are prepared to consider this and to put to the Government a proposal, the Government will consider it and consider it carefully because, for the Government, the resilience value of that sort of operation may be worth exploring very carefully – but only in a resilience capacity.

1495 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has, I think, almost entirely answered the question, and that is that, throwing a cable for the importation of electricity into Gibraltar from Morocco is itself an expensive capital investment. No-one is going to make it, except against a guaranteed income stream, which means that it would not be resilience; you would have to commit to purchase a proportion – at least a proportion; how much would depend on the size of the investment – of our current electricity demand, from them. That would not be for resilience; that would be instead of the present domestic production of it.

1500 Mr Speaker, I do not say that subject to proper safeguards, that cannot be done, but it would be something pretty controversial, that would have to be very carefully considered.

Tunnel under the runway Decision whether to proceed

1510

Clerk: Question 475, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1515 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say when the Government envisages that it will be in a position to decide whether it will proceed with the tunnel under the runway?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1520 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I indicated would be the case in my answer to Question 223 of 2012, the Government has now instructed that tender documents be prepared for the undertaking of the outstanding works for the road and tunnel project.

This new EU tender will be on the basis of an employer design, as opposed to the previous design and build contract. We have taken advice on why that should be the case.

The tender process will comprise various stages, with the programme date for the completion of the tender evaluation being March 2013. Works would commence thereafter.

1525

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if I have understood his answer, he is suggesting that works definitely will not commence until March 2013, and I do not think the answer means necessarily that it will commence in March 2013. There are mobilisation periods, and all that sort of thing. As I recall, it is a two-year job. I do not know whether the works that have already been done shorten that period, by the works that have already been done but, by that reckoning, we will not have a tunnel under the runway until sometime in or after 2015. Is the hon. Member satisfied that that is quickly enough? He knows that we think it is not. He knows that we believe that we should proceed by the quickest means now to resume works, and therefore my supplementary is this: is he satisfied that that is the quickest lawful means of getting this project underway or does it reflect a form of procurement, a timetable, which may reflect the Government's lack of priority for a project, or may reflect the Government's funding priorities for other projects, or may reflect something other than it being the quickest that can be lawfully achieved?

1530

1535

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman knows that there is litigation in respect of this, and I acknowledge this morning his offer of assistance. I had actually, before I heard that he was making public that offer, written to him, providing with him with a copy of the pleading, so that he could, if he observed anything in there which he felt it was worth commenting on –

1540

Hon. P R Caruana: The letter came afterwards –

1545

Hon. Chief Minister: There you are, you see!

I was working although I was away on paternity leave, so maybe there was some delay, but in any event, I acknowledge that he has offered his assistance. I have sent him, at the same time or just before or just after, the relevant papers, so that he can see from the pleading what the issues alleged against the Government are.

He will know that there are many files in his office which I have had to review also, dealing with the issue here, and he will know that design was one of the issues that might be relevant in any litigation.

So if he will take it from me that this actually reflects what we are being advised is the adequate way to proceed, both in terms of completion of the civil engineering works and the litigation, then I am quite happy to talk to him, behind the Speaker's Chair, in more detail, as to what we think the issues are.

Look, it may be that we have had disputes as to how, when he was in Government, this issue was being handled, etc, of course, and we may have those issues in the future in respect of the way that my Government is handling this issue going forward. But he should rest assured that, subject to cost, etc, we have always said, one can but agree that a longer route that goes under a runway is better than a shorter route, given the traffic problems that go over a runway. So on that there is unanimity.

1560

Mr Speaker, would they be able to deliver this tunnel more quickly if they had been re-elected on 9th December? It may be that they would not have been able to, for reasons that perhaps he was not made aware of at the time and which have come out subsequently in the correspondence and in the analysis that has been done.

1565

The site is not an active site at the moment. Some works are being required and some works will be required, but they will not be works which are involving the digging of the tunnel – again, for reasons that we can discuss outside of this public place.

1570

Purchase of boats for RGP Proceeding with previous Government plan

Clerk: Question 476, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1575

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government intends to proceed with the previous Government's plan to purchase bigger boats for the RGP?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1580 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, since our election, we have agreed the purchase by the RGP of two new and additional vessels at a cost of $789,000 or just over £½ million. These vessels should be available in Gibraltar in the next 40 days or so.

These are two fast interceptor launches – and I say that because the hon. Gentleman may recognise that description from something that was put to him just before the date of the last Election.

1585 The hon. Gentleman will know that, in his Budget reply of 2009, he said that his Government, as it then was, was:

‘certainly intending to upgrade our investment to make much more senior our assets’

1590 – as he described them – to uphold jurisdiction over our waters.

Mr Speaker, for Hansard geeks, that is at page 159 of the Budget Hansard for 2009.

But, Mr Speaker, that position did not materialise in the remaining two and a half years of the hon. Gentleman’s last Government.

1595 Hon. P R Caruana: Given that they were very critical of the fact that they did not materialise quickly enough for their liking, now that they are in position to accelerate its materialisation, do they intend to do so?

1600 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, since our election, we have agreed the purchase by the RGP (Laughter) of two new and additional vessels at a total cost of (Laughter and interjections) $789,000 or just over £½ million. (Laughter)

Hon. P R Caruana: The hon. Member knows full well that those, which are the boats that we agreed that the RGP could buy before the Election, are not the bigger boats to which...

No, Mr Speaker, he knows very well that when they were asking...

1605 When he quotes that passage from Hansard, from the Budget debate in 2009, (Laughter) and the subsequent two years worth of taunting that the Hon. now Deputy Chief Minister put it to, for the next two years – in the context of incidents at sea – by the way, I am not saying I recommend this course of action. But the hon. Members used the matter in the context of ‘our poor policemen are being humiliated by the Spanish Guardia Civil because they haven’t got bigger boats. You promised to buy them bigger boats, you have dragged your heels, you have not bought them and therefore our RGP policemen continue to be humiliated at sea!’

1610 Now, I never agreed with that analysis, because I was certainly not buying bigger boats so that the RGP could conduct naval warfare against Spain. If naval warfare needs to be conducted against Spain, it is the task of the Royal Navy and Her Majesty’s Government and the United Kingdom, whose duty it is to uphold the sovereignty of those waters, not the RGP’s. The RGP’s responsibility is to uphold the law within those waters, and I do not want to pre-empt a debate we may have arising from a question about the fishing agreement in that respect.

1615 But the hon. Members nevertheless thought differently. I used to think in that way then and I continue to think in the same way now from these Opposition benches.

1620 But the hon. Members taunted the previous Government with the link between the lack of bigger boats and the RGP’s ability to stand up to the turbo and all these other large boats, and now that they are in Government, either they have to acknowledge that they were just being mischievous in an Opposition sense, or that they are going to be true to their analysis and public statements and arm the RGP with bigger boats, thus avoiding their humiliation by the Guardia Civil, which appears to me to continue.

1625 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, in fact, I can tell him that the ‘taunting’ in Opposition press releases, as he puts it, only ever used his words. We never used any words other than his own. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

His words were in the Budget of 2009, very much what he is saying now:

1630 ‘The upholding and defence of the sovereignty of Gibraltar’s waters is the constitutional responsibility which they insisted on preserving for themselves in the new Constitution, of the United Kingdom Government. I do not have a Navy and I do not have a diplomatic service’ –

– l'État est moi –

1635 'However, the Government of Gibraltar certainly has jurisdictional competences for official acts in Gibraltar waters, and that we are certainly intending to upgrade our investments to make such more senior our assets to uphold them.'

1640 So he used that context (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) so his analysis, his statement of the bigger boats, the 'senior assets' (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) was in that context (Hon. P R Caruana: Yes.) and it is (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) in that context that all of the Opposition (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) press releases raised the issue.

I accept, of course, Mr Speaker –

1645 Hon. P R Caruana: I concede all of that.

Hon. Chief Minister: – that in a press release of 3rd May 2011, the hon. Gentleman, on behalf of the Government then, said... well, a Convent Place spokesperson; I assume it was the hon. Gentleman:

1650 'The incident also vindicates the Gibraltar Government's position that, since upholding British sovereignty is a UK/MoD responsibility, it is completely inappropriate to call for GOG to itself obtain bigger boats to place our police officers, Customs officers and port department officers in the front line of physical confrontation with armed Spanish Navy and Guardia Civil Boats.'

1655 So, Mr Speaker, in 2009, when he talked about obtaining more 'senior assets' for the RGP, he must have meant obtaining more senior assets for the police to confront those who are committing offences in our waters or confronting (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) other law enforcement agencies, but not the Spanish Navy. Right.

1660 Therefore, Mr Speaker, since our election, we have agreed the purchase by the RGP of two new and additional vessels at a total cost of $789,000 or just over £½ million because those, Mr Speaker, we believe, from the information we have been provided by the RGP, are bigger boats of the sort necessary for the RGP to do the work that they need to do, which is exactly what, from Opposition, the Deputy Chief Minister, who I am happy to disclose publicly was always the author and architect of these statements, having been the person who elicited this statement from the hon. Gentleman in 2009 in the Budget, quoted in our press statements, and therefore we believe we are in the process already of delivering.

1665 Hon. P R Caruana: No, Mr. Speaker, he is not in the process of delivering. What we would have done by way of investment in larger boats, for the purposes set out in...

1670 He knows, because he has found the brochures on my desk, when it became his desk (Interjection) Well, he knows, somebody... There has been an allusion in a Government statement – I do not know if it was by the Deputy – somebody has made an allusion to seeing the brochures for the boats.

Mr Speaker – yes, Mr Speaker, yes, I will point it out to him on that later.

1675 Mr Speaker, the Government's... My view of the share-out of responsibilities and therefore of functions between the RGP on the one hand and the United Kingdom Government on the other are exactly as I set out in that Budget, in that Hansard that he has read, has remained so since, and continues to be the case now. It was in the context of my explaining the difference between sovereignty responsibilities and policing responsibilities that the hon. Members continued to press me to buy the bigger boats for the RGP's constitutional responsibility, not for the ones that I will say was not their responsibility, but the Navy's, and, frankly, simply to buy them – ribs, which are newer and faster and a few feet longer – is not what we were planning to do. We were planning to buy genuine coastguard-type vessels, in which policemen could assert their presence and, through their presence, deter much of the sort of petty interference with our jurisdiction that the absence of a more senior boat prevents them from doing safely.

1680 Certainly, we allowed them, we authorised them, to buy the speedboats, particularly after one of them was rammed and was damaged, shortly before the Elections, but that was not the investment in bigger boats that we had been alluding to and to which this question alludes. That was in addition to the two boats that they have, in fact, bought now.

1685 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think we have been thrown, then, in the question, by the reference to the RGP, because I certainly do not recognise this business of brochures for boats in respect of the RGP. I recognise the request from the RGP for these fast launches, received with him, I think, verbally agreed with 1690 him in a meeting, subsequently also agreed with me and the written procurement process undertaken after we were elected.

But he now steers us in the way of 'coastguard' and that may be referring us to something else, and there is a question on the order paper about the Borders and Coastguard Agency. He has told us about buying a coastguard-style vessel for police officers to do some of their roles. I never got any indication that there was that potential acquisition on the horizon for police officers.

1695 I know that he had put it there for, potentially, the new agency to be doing that job and we will come to that in a minute, Mr Speaker. But he is not going to find us wanting, in terms of investing to ensure the safety of our RGP officers, especially if they have to face operations at sea which are increasingly (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) dangerous, either from the point of view of those who might use our waters for nefarious, illegal drug trafficking or other trafficking activities or because our RGP officers find themselves having to confront officers of another state, not necessarily state actors i.e. navy people, but paramilitaries because, unfortunately, other states do not organise themselves in exactly parallel terms to ours, and if they need more senior assets in that respect, then they will certainly be knocking on an open door, if they seek those.

1700 But in respect of the RGP's policing obligations, we have agreed to this; they are coming soon, and I think it is not just replacing the one that was damaged, because actually there is another one and they are bigger than the ones that were already here and they are faster than the ones that – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Those two – 1705 Hon. P R Caruana: We had authorised two.

1710 Hon. Chief Minister: – had been authorised, but the process had not progressed. We were therefore asked, when we were elected, whether we would authorise them. We authorised them. We quickly undertook the process of the procurement and I think they are not yet here because of some problem with freighting; no other reason.

New Air Terminal Operating revenue and expenditure

1720 Clerk: Question 477, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister provide a breakdown of the annualised operating revenue and expenditure that it envisages for the new Air Terminal once it is open for both arrivals and departures, and the existing Air Terminal closed?

1725

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1730 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, due to commercial sensitivities and ongoing negotiations with airlines and equipment maintenance providers, a detailed breakdown of the operating revenue and expenditure of the new Air Terminal is not available.

However, Head 44 of the Draft Government of Gibraltar Estimates for 2012-13, which hon. Members will have seen, but which remain confidential until the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, set out the contribution of the Government of Gibraltar to the Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd, as it is envisaged it will be in this current financial year.

1735 Can I simply point out to the hon. Gentleman, he has asked me specifically about this, but it is the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister's responsibility. The airport is the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister's responsibility, but I am happy –

1740 Hon. P R Caruana: I was doing my part as questioning the Chief Minister, being the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I am flattered, Mr Speaker.

I am grateful, but (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) ministerial responsibility is with my –

1745 Hon P R Caruana: You were surprisingly elected to the office and I must respect that. (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, you were remarkably elected for 16 years and we all accepted that, so...

1750 But I make the point that it is the Deputy Chief Minister who carries ministerial responsibility for the Air Terminal.

1755 Hon. P R Caruana: Nevertheless, would the Chief Minister say whether his answer means that there is not yet in existence a financial business case model for the operation of the new Air Terminal? So all these statements that are put out about the cost, the operating costs being excessive, are not the result of their comparison against the revenues, because if you have got the revenues and you have got the expenses, then you must necessarily have a business model, simply by putting them together in one document.

1760 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if you decide to build it, you must have the business case, I assume, before you start building it; but the one that he appears to have had – unless he did not have one, when he made the decision to build this €80 million – I am not going to call it ‘monstrosity’, because we are getting on again, so I do not want to go there – this €80 million airport is not available to me or to the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, and the situation we find ourselves in at the moment is that there are a lot of issues indeed about the costs that will be involved in the running of the new Terminal. We have seen quite astronomical figures and we are working very hard to deal with those, in order to bring them down to some sort of manageable level.

1765 In terms of the revenue – and the hon. Gentleman will know what those streams are – they do not appear to us, on the fairest day, to come anywhere near meeting the cost of operating the Terminal. I am only saying that, because he said that you have to have the income and expenditure in front of you in any meaningful business plan. At the moment, Mr Speaker, what we are looking at is how to keep the expenditure down, and it may be, Mr Speaker, that in post-Election mode, even if he had been returned to office, he might have been doing the same thing.

1770 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member must not think that I am agreeing with him to the extent that expenditure has got to balance revenue. Anybody who thinks, including the new Deputy Chief Minister, that a community of 30,000 people with four or five flights a day at this stage can operate any air terminal, even the old one, at a profit or even revenue-neutral, is living in cloud-cuckoo-land. There is always going to be an element of governmental subsidy for the operation of any airport in this community.

1775 And I have to say, Mr Speaker, I do not want to go in a line by line question, supplementaries on the hon. Member’s press release of 25th April, but I want him to understand that the steps that the Government is now attributing to itself by way of cost reduction is exactly the process that we set up – in other words, getting the contractors that had installed the lift, the escalators, that had installed all the plant and equipment, that had installed the handling, that had installed the computer systems, to get them to manage, to operate and maintain – certainly to operate the maintenance of them – during a period – I think the discussions taking place envisage 12 to 18 months – not just because they were best equipped, but because there had to be a learning curve period for local people. So this is not something that the hon. Members intelligently decide to do to rescue the situation from what it was before; that is precisely what all their contracts already required them to do and was already the case.

1780 Of course, the operating cost of the new Air Terminal was always envisaged to be higher than the cost of the new Terminal. That is an investment. The hon. Members may say that they would not have made it. We say it is a perfectly affordable increased investment in having a higher quality Air Terminal in Gibraltar, which could be used by those of his Ministers whose business it is to generate increased economic activity, whether it be in financial services, online gaming or tourism, it is a resource that will allow them better to attract to Gibraltar the sort of enhanced quality and quantity of economic activity that Gibraltar’s future prosperity requires. It is a matter of regret to me that, even in disagreeing with the project, the hon. Members cannot acknowledge that, even though it is more expensive to operate than the old one, obviously, this is an investment in this community’s future, perhaps one that they would have chosen not to make, or perhaps one that they think was unnecessary to make, or in that quantum to make, or made in reduced amounts but, nevertheless, it is simply to consider the cost of operating a new facility. Without factoring the revenue that that new facility will enjoy, including its capacity for enhanced revenue as a result to being able to attract 1800 more services, more business and more passengers is not a meaningful way of evaluating the financial work of the operating costs – I am leaving the capital costs to one side; of the operating costs.

I say that, Mr Speaker, and I ask him if he would agree with me that we are just discussing the length of a piece of string, how much the subsidy is going to be, because the Government subsidises the existing Air Terminal. So if we subsidise – sorry.

1805 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not want the hon. Gentleman to think that I said anything before which suggested that I thought that the books should balance. Of course I accept, and I think I accepted earlier when this issue came up in respect of a supplementary which was not a question on the airport that, when we were talking about the commercial agreement with the MoD, I accept that there is going to be an element of 1810 subsidy in respect of the operation of the airport – of course, I accept that – but we are an island economy for more than just the generation of electricity and we need to have an airport because of our geopolitical needs. That involves a cost, part of which we defray with the Ministry of Defence in the United Kingdom but, in terms of commercial operations is a matter for our community. The question is, Mr Speaker, where does he pitch it and where do we pitch it? By looking at what revenues there would be and how much thereafter we might be prepared to invest in that.

1815 We have found ourselves with this Airport Terminal. This is the one that we now have to operate. So there is no question of us doing anything to ensure that this airport is not a success.

If this Air Terminal is made a great success by this Government, well, look, that is politics, but we just actually did not... It is not that we would not have built this Terminal and the debate between us has always been size and priority of investment. Was it right to build this Terminal – and here we are talking about the 1820 Capex – now, with this size, involving this amount of money or should we have done KGV first etc? Those were the decisions that he made when he was Chief Minister and, Mr Speaker, before the Election, this was almost in fruition. We now inherit that and have to run it.

I think, therefore, if the hon. Gentleman is saying to us, after the Election – or rather, after completion; the Election just happened to be there – I envisaged a period of maintenance [inaudible] by those who had installed them and, thereafter, the takeover of that maintenance by locally employed individuals, a local agent or part... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Well, exactly, or part of GATL or whatever it was, well so be it, Mr Speaker. That is very much where we are going.

I will tell him, Mr Speaker, because he is saying that this was not their idea; it was already envisaged. I will tell him, Mr Speaker, there has perhaps been the biggest try-on in history by those who have the contracts for the period that the hon. Gentleman suggested they had it, by suggesting that they wanted, obviously, to stay on and that there had been no discussion of training locals etc, etc. So we, Mr Speaker, (Interjection) have taken the initiative, in particular through the office of the Deputy Chief Minister, who is comfortably sitting there, whilst I field these questions, (Laughter) that these things should be done in the way that we have set out in our press release they should be done – which it appears to me, Mr Speaker, whether we might 1835 never ever be able to agree on everything, but it really is just a question of degree. We all seem to have been going in the right direction.

Hon. P R Caruana: If the hon. Member has been told that the Government was not engaged at that time with the installers of the equipment for them to do the management for a period of time of these, then he has 1840 been misinformed.

The scheme that was in place and, indeed, I think the contracts, the original procurement contracts were written requiring them to offer that facility if the Government required it and the scheme was – which seems to me precisely the one that they are operating – is use that for a period of... I do not remember if we are talking 12 or 18 months, as it was being done by our agent, to be followed and use that period to set up a 1845 Government-owned facilities-management agency, where the Government would bring in all the resources to do the training and, Mr Speaker, the fact that we were talking to individuals about leading the agency and about personnel, that is exactly the... Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, apart from the fact that the contracts were for a period, that is for sure – a 12-month or 18-month period – but most contracts are for a period and therefore the fact that the contract is for a period does not necessarily disclose what is behind it, because somebody may want to do a contract for a year and simply keep renewing it every year and most, for example, lift maintenance contracts are all, wherever they are, for a year.

1855 I can tell him – and I have just had confirmed that my thoughts were correct by the Deputy Chief Minister – that nobody has told us that that was what was being envisaged by the previous administration, the creation of the agency, the people who you were talking to, and we would be delighted to receive the information, because if wheels have already been set up, reinventing them is not necessary.

1860 If I may allow myself this point of discord, Mr Speaker, perhaps it is because this was not being dealt with by the usual officials for the Government, that this information has not flowed back to us, because we are now working with chief technical officers, etc, in developing this thinking and you would have thought that, in everything else where they have thought that there are things we should have known, they have told us, which is the normal way.

1865 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, but precisely the officials that he has mentioned were well aware of the discussions that the Government was having for the establishment of a facilities-management agency. We were in discussion with a particular ‘seniorish’ senior technical official – I think he is currently in the GHA – who was contemplating leading that. That actually failed in the end.

1870 That failed in the end, but this was the subject of discussions with the unions about whether we would include the garage or not the garage, whether other people would go... No, no, not the garage agency. How many people would be included in the facilities-management agency?

1875 I am not saying that the project came to fruition. It did not come to fruition because it was work in progress when the Election was called. All I am saying is that there are lots of people accessible to him today, whether on the union side or within the Government, who are aware that the scheme was to establish a local, Government-owned, facilities-management agency and that people were being spoken to... Yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, may I just ask him for a personal clarification?
For the management of the airport or more generally?

1880 Hon. P R Caruana: No, for the facilities management of the airport and other facilities that the Government has invested in.

Mr Speaker, the policy position that the Government took in those days was that, in the olden days, you used to build a building and forget about it and if you did not maintain them, well, they just dilapidated and they would eventually give them a lick of paint.

1885 A lot of new buildings now have large amounts of plant, equipment and building assistance that require maintenance. The Leisure Centre, the new Court Precincts, the new Air Terminal and the new Prison: all of these are modern buildings with a huge amount of plant, machinery and operating systems that you cannot treat like you used to treat the old buildings that Government historically...

1890 So the Government said, our policy was – and I had assumed that he might have been exposed to this thinking by now by officials and others – that the way to deal with this was to establish a central Government agency that would deal with the facilities management of all of these, which the GHA has for itself already in a particular Department, but which all these others... oh, the new Hospital has already, but which all these other new facilities that we have built did not.

1895 So the Air Terminal in respect of the facilities management – not the running of the Airport as a terminal, but the facilities management – would have been a customer of the central Government agency in common with all these other facilities. That was the project in hand, otherwise you have got to... If you just do it for the Air Terminal, you have got to say, ‘Well who is going to do it for the Leisure Centre? Who is going to do it for the Prison?’ and you cannot replicate seven or eight, as there are just not enough skills to go around for that in Gibraltar. That was the scheme and I am just surprised...

1900 I had assumed, from reading the press release, that there had been some degree of familiarisation and that the hon. Members were just chalking it up to themselves. I am astonished that no-one has pointed this out to you.

1905 Hon. Chief Minister: That is interesting that sometimes we are... interesting and worrying that we might actually think alike (Laughter) in some respects.

Hon. P R Caruana: More worrying than interesting! (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: More worrying than interesting – absolutely!

1910 Mr Speaker, there is common thinking in that respect and perhaps, to a wider extent, because there are other things that the Government also does, not just manage buildings, which may involve the same expertise as those who manage buildings. So, Mr Speaker, that is an issue that we are looking at, but not because we were trying in this press release to suggest that we had come up with these ideas ourselves, knowing that the hon. Members opposite had done so.

1915 I am surprised, Mr Speaker, because the conventions apply but, in terms of things which are in motion, officers are allowed, and do, and have given advice of where the previous thinking was and why things are at the stage at which they are. It did not, take it from us, happen on this occasion in respect of this. (Interjection)

1920 Hon. P R Caruana: By way of information to the hon. Member, the official of the GHA in question – I am not sure if he is GHA or seconded G... I think it is GHA – actually wrote a report. There is a written report around this matter and it is true that that particular official eventually decided not to transfer to this initiative and to stay where he was, but he actually wrote a very helpful and informative report about how this central... I recommend to the hon. Member that he picks it up because it is certainly something that needs doing. We cannot just leave...

1925 We cannot just invest tens of millions of pounds in buildings without putting in place a resource for their proper maintenance and management. Not the activities within the buildings, but buildings and the systems in the buildings themselves.

New Air Terminal Opening date

Clerk: Question 478, the Hon. P R Caruana.

1935 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say on what date the new Air Terminal will open for departures?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1940 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo):: Mr Speaker, notwithstanding that based on information provided to the Minister for Transport by the Employer's Agent and Dragados, the Minister informed the House in the last session that it was hoped to open the new Air Terminal during this month. It has not yet been possible to set a date for the opening of the new Air Terminal for departures.

1945 A number of issues remain to be resolved at the new Air Terminal before it is possible to give an exact date for the opening of the new Air Terminal for departures.

The Government is, however, moving as soon as possible to open the new Air Terminal for departures in order to reduce the cost of operating two terminals at once.

1950 Hon. P R Caruana: So should I deduce from that answer, Mr Speaker, that it would be wholly unfair to level at the hon. Members opposite even the suggestion, or the suggestion of the accusation, that they are sitting on their hands and not proceeding as expeditiously as possible with the opening of the Air Terminal for political effect?

1955 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, quite the opposite. We sincerely believe that the folly was to start operating one without the other and that you are not going to move back now to the old one. You need to move as quickly as possible to the new one and there is absolutely no question of any political actor involved in this side of the House doing anything other than trying to ensure that the new Airport is available and open for departure business as soon as possible. I think that is in the interests of our community. It is the interests of the administration and – he knows that he and I disagree on this issue – I think that the sooner that members of our community start to go down there, they realise how unnecessary this Airport was!

1960 So believe me, no political approach to try and prevent this from opening.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, as to the 'folly' part, would the hon. Member accept from me – a 1965 rhetorical question – that if a Government had emerged victorious from the polls on 8th December that was more enthusiastic about the Terminal, it would have been ready and open by now, and that the hon. Members have not gone very far out of their way to bring about a situation where it would be ready for opening? Because, certainly, the contractor had with us a commitment for a date which has long since passed, and, of course, if contractors are not pushed they take as long as they like because it minimises their costs.

1970 I am telling the hon. Member that if this party, if the Opposition, had been elected into Government, that Terminal would have already been open for at least one month.

The hon. Member suggests a different view and it remains to be seen whether the difference between our two positions on that reflects absolutely necessary delay caused by genuine non-completion factors, or whether it reflects the fact that the contractor has simply been allowed to finish at his leisure. The contractors, including the subcontractors for computer installations and all of that have been allowed to finish at their leisure. Our view is the latter. Obviously, I do not expect the hon. Member to agree with me, but our view is that if the Government had more enthusiastically pressed for this Terminal to have been finished, we think it would have been open by now.

1980 Can I just add a supplementary for that? I do not want to get into more trouble today. If it is not going to be ready in May, will the hon. Members then consider inviting the Earl of Wessex to inaugurate the new Terminal and perhaps even naming it the Gibraltar International Jubilee Terminal or something to that effect?

Hon. Chief Minister: I will start at the end, Mr Speaker.

1985 The programme for the visit for the Earl and Countess of Wessex has already been settled and, subject to security issues, given that the hon. Gentleman has raised the issue, that is already on their programme and a name which is relevant in some way to what they will be doing here in Gibraltar is being proposed, both in respect of the terminal and the VIP suite. I will tell the hon. Gentleman that I have given specific instructions that, of course, the order of precedence should be followed in every event to which the Earl and Countess are invited but, in particular, that in relation to the Airport, he should be... I am sure that he is one of the invitees because that Airport was not the vision of this Government; it was his vision and he should be there, Mr Speaker. So that much we can agree on.

1990 Now, Mr Speaker, would it have been ready and open for completion if the hon. Members had been returned to Government? Well, look Mr Speaker, I do not know that it would have been, because whatever level of enthusiasm the hon. Gentleman could have brought to the process of completion, by which I will translate, if you will allow me to paraphrase without the excitement that we had earlier when we were paraphrasing, namely whatever level of whipping of the contractor to finish sooner might have been the case or continued to be the case after the 9th of December, if he had been returned to office, which might not have been the case when we were returned to office, there are issues in the building. He may not be aware of some of those issues. There are issues on the roof, there are serious snagging issues which have been truly concerning to those of us who are receiving these reports, and there are changes proposed in respect of some of the areas of the building which may be relevant, but I do not think will delay opening for business. Those things have to be dealt with, Mr Speaker.

2000 Look, the hon. Gentleman knows that I thought that he was excessively enthusiastic about the way that he drove the project. The original suggestion in the placard was that this would be 'landing for business' in 2011, and unfortunately so many projects go overdue, even ones driven as enthusiastically as he drove –
2005 (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) Just for arrivals business –

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, for landing – arrivals is landing. (Laughter)

2010 Hon. Chief Minister: Arriving for business this year, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) or landing in 2011!

Hon. P R Caruana: Departures is take-off! (Laughter)

2015 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to be going down to the Airport, as the hon. Gentleman was wont to do, twice a week, to push the contractor –

Hon. P R Caruana: Three times before the end – three times...!

2020 Hon. Chief Minister: Three times, absolutely – ensuring that the tiling was done in the way that he liked and that the staircase was changed in the way that he liked etc, etc – whatever it was that he did, Mr Speaker. It was his prerogative. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) He held the Chair and, given his penchant for internal decoration, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) he was entitled at the time to do it and he did it. We are not that sort of Government. I do not think that that has delayed the completion. I think that there are technical issues that have delayed the completion, but the completion is necessary because operating two terminals puts a lot of pressure on the people who are on the ground and this needs to be done as soon as possible, and that is the message that everybody is getting from the Government. So there is no question of us not pushing for this to be finished as soon as possible.

2025 But Mr Speaker, I will tell him, snagging is an issue, and better that snagging be an issue and before the Government take the building, these issues are dealt with, than simply for the sake of taking it, we accept a building that, in some respects, the snagging is not satisfactory on and that we wait to ensure that the contractor deals with those points.

2030 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Members have already accepted delivery of the building. Practical completion has taken place. ‘Snaggings’ as he calls them, rightly, take place after the building comes into the hands of the user and after it has been put into use. When people move into a house and the snaggings can go... unless, of course, the snagging is of a sort that is not compatible with the building being occupied and in use.

2035 Mr Speaker, leaving to one side the question on which we clearly disagree, about whether the Government have been enthusiastic about getting this project, or whether they have extended it, simply to make it easier for him to reveal the ‘folly’ argument, about having opened it for arrivals only – leaving that to one side, Mr Speaker – I have to tell him that, in favour of its opening by a member of the British royal family is the only option that I will forgive him for sacking me as the opener and inaugurator of the Terminal – or has he forgotten (Laughter) that he brought out a public statement telling me not to worry, that he would ensure that I did the opening of the Terminal because it was my project?

2040 I can tell him that I am delighted – even though I have been pushed to one side, (Laughter) I would have stood to one side with pleasure – and therefore I welcome having been pushed to one side by him, without furthermore, in favour of the inauguration of this Terminal by the Earl of Wessex and if he will accept the Government’s suggestion that the word ‘Jubilee’ should somehow feature in the name of the new Airport, then he will get double forgiveness from the Leader of the Opposition for my unceremonial sacking as the inaugurator of choice.

2050 Hon. Chief Minister: Round six!
Mr Speaker, I have not sacked him; it is that I made the offer to him in the days when I was Leader of the Opposition and he was Chief Minister and, in those days, offers were made and no replies were to be had, just like the letters I used to send him, to which I used to not get a reply – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) so, absent an acceptance, Mr Speaker, I had to fumble around to find somebody else suitable! (Laughter)

2055 Hon. P R Caruana: Your electoral promises are not to be believed!

2060 Hon. Chief Minister: Even the ones made to you!
I had to fumble around to try and find somebody to open it and very, very, graciously, we found people who I think we can both agree are the best people –

2065 Hon. P R Caruana: Of course, I am not going to suggest for one moment that the delay in opening is to await the Prince’s arrival: he could inaugurate, even if it had already –

2070 Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, he will inaugurate it whatever the position is then, even if it is just open, as it is today, for arrivals.

So, Mr Speaker, I am delighted, actually, that it will be possible to have the royal couple here and to do something as important to Gibraltar as the opening of this and other venues and the laying of foundation stones, etc... I did not want to say much more about it, but because the hon. Gentleman has raised it and – 2075 Hon. P R Caruana: I suggested it, not raised it.

Hon. Chief Minister: – and it is important that it be on the record that that is the case. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

2080 Mr Speaker, there are names in the mix. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) There are names in the mix, which he will be privy to, once they are more public. I am quite happy to tell him – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) I am quite happy to tell him afterwards.

But, Mr Speaker, I will say this – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana and laughter) When the...

2085 Can he go back to nasty, because I need to be able to at least get through the answer? At least when he is nasty, he listens, Mr Speaker!

I will, when we are there, Mr Speaker, make sure that the Earl and Countess of Wessex know that this is his idea of an airport and not ours, because that is the historic position, Mr Speaker.

2090 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, and he's not tempted by the name 'Peter Caruana International Airport'? (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that he needs to think carefully about what the initials of that, which is what appear on the baggage tags, may look like. (Interjection) His middle name is Richard, isn't it? (Laughter)

2095 Hon. P R Caruana: Well, I have got... The hon. Member clearly thinks about an order – (Laughter) What would the order of the initials add to it? (Laughter) So I take it that is a no?

2100 Hon. Chief Minister: It is in all of our interests that it should not be!

Fishing Agreement 1999 Contravention of Gibraltar laws

2105 Clerk: Question 479, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, will the Chief Minister say in what respect he believes that the content of the 1999 Fishing Agreement contravened the laws of Gibraltar?

2110 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this question seeks an opinion and, in our view, is therefore contrary to Standing Order 17(1)(vii).

2115 The fact is that this question is also a pretext for a debate, contrary to Standing Order 16(6), although if the hon. Gentleman wants to debate this issue, I will be delighted to do so on a motion.

Nevertheless, Mr Speaker, I will answer this question by simply saying: in every respect, as, in our view, it was an agreement to allow Gibraltar law to be broken by certain individuals and not others.

2120 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member acknowledge that, far from authorising the breaches of the laws of Gibraltar, the Agreement specifically says that those laws for Gibraltar are valid and effective at which the fishermen acknowledged; that it is specifically said that no breach of those laws is being authorised by this Agreement; and that the essence of the Agreement is to restore the enforcement practices of those laws to what it had been since the day it was introduced by the previous GSLP Government in 1991 to the outbreak of hostilities, if I could call it that, in 1997?

2125 Therefore, to the extent that he thinks – wrongly in my view – that this Agreement authorises by virtue of agreeing a return to the enforcement status quo ante, that it cannot authorise breaches of the laws of Gibraltar any more than the previous GSLP Government had, in effect, tolerated, between 1991 and 1997, after they

2130 had foolishly been allowed to be persuaded by the environmental lobby in Gibraltar to introduce these laws, without regard to the implications that would come in their wake, so that when they realised what the implications were, they themselves, the introducers – that is to say, the GSLP Government in office in 1991 – took no steps whatsoever to secure, or to concern itself about the non-implementation of these laws, and that the sole effect of the 1999 Agreement was simply to say, ‘We will ask the Governor to ask the RGP whether they will go back to enforcing this law, as they have always enforced it from 1991 to 1996’, and that, in it, it says that there is no authorisation of the breach of the law – I will read it to him, if he shakes his head – and that... Yes, Mr Speaker:

2140 ‘The circumstances here described do not mean that any transgression of the Nature Protection Ordinance (law of Gibraltar) is permitted, and the fishermen undertake to respect the instructions of the police authorities in every case.’

which was our assessment, in fact, of what the situation had been before: that Gibraltar believed the laws to be valid and left enforcement to the RGP in whatever way they chose. That is what had happened between 1991 and 1997 and the Agreement merely says that ‘We will revert to whatever it was that was happening before the outbreak of war’ – in other words, we would revert to what the enforcement mechanisms had been.

2145 But, in any case, Mr Speaker, my supplementary question was not what the hon. Member interpreted – presumably the hon. Member does not assert that something is unlawful simply on the basis of his interpretation of the effect, unless he also thinks that there was unlawfulness going on before. The hon. Member has said repeatedly that he thinks that this Agreement authorises breaches of the law. I would ask him to point out what words in this Agreement he believes authorises breaches of any Gibraltar law.

2150 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this debate has been had in this House before. It was had at the time that the hon. Gentleman, as Chief Minister, entered into the Agreement in question and, with questioning, I think he will remember and perhaps fondly recall from Mr Gabay, who is now passed away.

2155 Mr Speaker, the Agreement is, in my view, very clear. The fact of the Agreement in itself says a lot. You see, Mr Speaker, the position, as any first year lawyer would understand it, is that there is a law in Gibraltar which proscribes certain acts in our waters, and elsewhere in Gibraltar, as it does not just deal with fish. We have many laws that proscribe many things in many areas of our community. This is perhaps the only Agreement that there exists about how laws are going to be enforced – certainly the only agreement that I have seen which is subscribed to by the Government of Gibraltar as to what rigour will be applied to the application and enforcement of the law.

2160 My Government has not, in the past six months, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) subscribed to any agreement as to how any law should be enforced, neither does it purport to say to the RGP, for example, in relation to drink-driving or the purchase of drink by people under age, at any time, ‘You, RGP, are required to enforce the law today, in the same way that you have enforced it between 1996 and 2011’, because if the RGP wanted to have a crack-down on drink-driving at Christmas and people who want to drink and drive block the entrance to my office, I am certainly not going to sit down with them to agree a protocol, where I am going to ask the Governor of today, the Police Authority, to tell the Commissioner of Police that he should not police the law on drink driving with any more vigour than he does at any time during the year.

2170 This Agreement specifically provides that the level that the law will be applied with will be the same level of tolerance as during the period between 1991 and 1997. Well, Mr. Speaker this is an agreement, therefore, to restrict how the police enforce Gibraltar law. Between 1991 and 1997 the police, as they do in relation to every other law, decide for themselves how they enforce legislation which creates criminal offences. We, as citizens, may see somebody riding a bike without a helmet and we may think ‘what the bloody hell are the police up to, don’t they see that there is a guy riding without a helmet?’ Now, that does not mean that we are entitled to say to the Police Commissioner, ‘if they stop our son driving a moped without a helmet, how can you stop him and fine him when I saw a fellow driving without a helmet last week? I require you to enforce the law against my son with the same level of tolerance as was obviously being applied to the fellow who I saw driving across the runway without a helmet.’

2180 It is inconceivable Mr. Speaker – and I recognise what the hon. Gentleman is trying to do politically but, legally, it is inconceivable – legally that a Government should defend, as he does now, for the Government that he led, an agreement to tolerate the breaching of the law in Gibraltar, with this added danger: in the annexes there are provisions as to what happens more than 225 metres from the coast and what happens less than 225 metres from the coast and what level of tolerance, which is to accept, without challenging, the RGP

2185 are going to be asked by the Governor to show in respect of the enforcement of our law in those areas under the constitutional arrangements that were current in 1999.

2190 Mr. Speaker, I thought it was common ground between us in this House that Gibraltar has the territorial sea of three miles all around it except where the median lines are shorter and, therefore, the Nature Protection Act, love it or loathe it, is the law of Gibraltar to the three mile limit on the east side and to the centre of the Bay of Gibraltar on the western side and up to the international strait to the south. Now, this Agreement specifically sought to tell the Commissioner of Police, through the office of His Excellency, the then Governor, as a messenger, what level of application of the law there should be by the instrument of tolerance (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) in respect of the Nature Protection Act. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I believe that this is an illegal Agreement, contrary to the rule of law, because why should we agree, why should we agree that certain people should be able to do certain things in certain parts of our territory which this Parliament has proscribed.

2195 If we come to the view, Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman appears to have done, given the way that he has described the Nature Protection Ordinance – then Act now – and the pejorative terms in which he described those who might have had an influence in lobbying for it, if we were to take the view that the law should be changed, as the hon. Gentleman appears to have done, then we have to have what it takes to come to this Parliament and change it. So be it, the person who has the majority on this side of the House can change the law because if you want to put practices in compliance of the law what you do is you change the law, you do not put police officers or others responsible for enforcement in the situation where they are told not to enforce the law in a particular area or in particular circumstances – and this Agreement does just that.

2200 I think it is abundantly clear that the hon. Gentleman, when he was Chief Minister, was saying, ‘Well, look chaps, you had no problems with Spanish fishermen between 1991 and 1997 so if everything goes back to what it was like -’

Hon. P R Caruana: That is not true...

2210 Hon. Chief Minister: ‘It is not true’ No problem.

– which they complained of, at least which gave rise (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) to the dispute between 1991 and 1997, if we go back to that, you will be alright, will you?’ He appears to have got a measure of agreement for that. He does not appear to have been able to persuade them that that could be achieved by any means other than seeking to tie the hands of the police through the office of the then Governor through this instruction.

2215 Mr. Speaker, I think it is important that everybody who is listening to this debate should have access to the Fishing Agreement. They should see what it is and I am quite happy if the hon. Gentleman wants to publish it again, if he has not got a copy easily accessible... But I think, at the time, it was published in the press and it has been put on certain social media sites so that people can see it; it is absolutely clear, the Government of Gibraltar states that it is not its objective to apply the law. But the Government of Gibraltar does not apply the law, Mr. Speaker, it is the police that enforces the law and applies the law with greater rigour than before. Therefore, as in the period 1991 to 1997, there will be fishing through tolerance in the application of that law and not as of rights and not due to the invalidity of that law.

2220 There will be ‘fishing’, Mr. Speaker. Change the word ‘fishing’ for ‘drug-use’: there will be ‘drug-use’ through tolerance in the application of that law and not as of right and not due the invalidity of that law. Change the word ‘drug-use’ to ‘robbery’: there will be ‘robbery’ through tolerance in the application of that law and not as of right and not due to the invalidity of that law.

2225 How Mr. Speaker can somebody defend an agreement to tolerate breaches of the law? Very simple, Mr. Speaker, because the hon. Gentleman has told us, in his analysis, that he believed that the law was wrong and it should not have been done and that it would cause problems. Therefore, he did this Agreement to allow breaches of the law of Gibraltar, contrary to every principle of the rule of law.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr. Speaker, none of what the hon. Member has just said is true.

2230 This Agreement does not authorise the breach of any law of Gibraltar. What this Agreement says is ‘Look, here is a law that has been in place in Gibraltar since 1991 and which the Royal Gibraltar Police, who are independent law enforcers constitutionally have chosen to enforce in a certain way. I did not know what that way was.

It is not true that they could fish wherever they liked. It meant that they respected the validity of the law, 2240 that they respected the authority of the RGP between 1991 and 1997 and, on all the occasions the RGP considered it between 1991 and 1997 – to spring traps to catch Spanish fishermen, and they were caught and thrown out and/or prosecuted – whatever was enforcement practice, freely without duress, without unlawful instructions through messengers that live in the Convent to the Commissioner of Police; whatever it was that they had decided as an enforcement approach to take between 1991 and 1997 we were going to ask the RGP – not order – ask the RGP, through the Governor, whether they would agree to revert to that, which is what they had chosen, and it was not that they could fish whenever they liked. It was that they were bound by the law and that if the RGP chose to enforce it against them, they could and would and did on occasions.

2245 Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member can if he wishes place the protection of fish in the same category as robbery and drugs but a more appropriate analogy, given the serious consequences of the hon. Member ventilating his first year law student interpretation of this highly complex situation, Gibraltar is about to discover, but a more proper analogy would be not murder and robbery but driving offences. There is a law that says that you won't drive down Line Wall Road, I don't know what it is, forty, fifty kilometres an hour? Well, Mr. Speaker, the RGP does not police that on a zero tolerance basis and therefore turns an element of blind-eyeness, because everybody knows that people speed along Line Wall Road every day, a zero-tolerance policing practice would mean that they would be there every day, all hours of the day catching all the infractors that they know for certain is taking place every day. But they don't enforce because this community's wider interests do not depend on a zero-tolerance enforcement of laws – and all laws have the same status – but some laws protect society to a greater extent than others and therefore the RGP rightly devote their policing resources to those laws upon compliance and policing of which the safety and security and conviviality within this society depends, and that does not include catching every speeder, and it does not include protecting fish above everything else, important as protecting fish might be.

2255 Everything in life has a relative order of importance and for him to choose to categorise the public interest in protecting fish with the public interest in preventing murder and drugs is a monument to his exaggeration of the bad reason why he has chosen to interfere with this Agreement at the cost to Gibraltar which I fear, even though they have got no right to do it and it is a sign of everything that is unacceptable, everything that the Gibraltarians find unacceptable about the Spanish Government, this has nothing to do with accepting that their reaction is justified, but there will be a reaction and, in our view, it was unnecessary, completely and utterly unnecessary.

2260 Will the hon. Member acknowledge, just as he has done a balance sheet in terms of law and order and respect for the rule of law about what he thinks, how he has chosen to interpret the legalistic effect of what the Government did in 1999 with this Agreement; will he accept the following balance sheet of some things which are also important to Gibraltar; that here was the first and only agreement in which Spanish citizens have by agreement acknowledged, genuflected to, acknowledged and accepted (Interjection 'hear hear') and recognised British sovereignty of these waters manifested through the validity of our laws, the right of our Parliament to make laws in them, the right of our police force to enforce those laws which they agree to recognise and acknowledge and that by tearing this Agreement up he has forfeited that and that he will never be able to recover that.

2270 Mr. Speaker I think that this is one of the unfortunate consequences. I don't agree. I don't agree with his analysis of the reasons why he thinks that this Agreement is either bad or illegal or a violation, so he is describing the effect of the Agreement not the Agreement itself. The Agreement itself does not purport to authorise or permit a single act of violation against any of the laws of Gibraltar. What it does do. I make absolutely no apology for it and would do it again today and encourage him still to do it today, is to simply ask the RGP, not order the RGP, ask the RGP whether they would exercise their discretion to enforce the law as they had – not as I had told them to – as they had chosen to enforce it with the same degree of priority, the same degree of rigour, the same degree of consistency, the same degree of laxity, the same degree of strictness, whatever it was, as they had chosen to do it before the crisis arose.

2285 So it is not my decision as to the degree of enforcement that I was imposing. I was simply inviting them to agree to restore their assessment before the armada invaded – and the Guardia Civil – and everybody ratchets up, so will he accept that what this Agreement did, first of all, was not to order, but secondly whether it was to order or to ask or, indeed, whether he is willing to acknowledge there is a difference? He may say, 'Well, Chief Minister – then Chief Minister, now Leader of the Opposition – that's all very well but that's a distinction with [inaudible] difference.' Will he acknowledge, nevertheless, that what the RGP were being asked to do was not to adopt a particular enforcement method chosen by the Government of the day but simply to revert to what had been there, for seven years, chosen method of enforcement.

2295 Hon. Chief Minister: No Mr. Speaker. No, because the letter of the Agreement says something different-

Hon. P R Caruana: It does not...

2300 The Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it says here:

‘Both sides have discussed in depth what a return to the status quo means in practical terms, in terms of the nature and level of firmness of the enforcement of that particular Gibraltar law. The Gibraltar Government will ask His Excellency, the Governor, to ask the Royal Gibraltar Police to enforce the law on the basis of this understanding -’

2305 and then sets out what it is, Mr Speaker, that that understanding is:

‘ANNEX

2310 After having discussed in detail what a return to the status quo and therefore to the 1991-97 situation is, both sides understand that the law will be applied strictly in the following circumstances:

AREA – WEST OF THE BAY

Distance from the coast 225 metres.

Number of fishing boats: no more than four. (In this respect the luceros are not considered boats actually fishing).

At no time can any entrance of the port be obstructed.

2315 EAST SIDE

In less than 225 metres from the beach or coast.

The circumstances here described do not mean that any transgression of the Nature Protection Ordinance is permitted, and the fishermen undertake to respect the instructions of the Gibraltar police in every case.’

2320 Well, Mr Speaker, is it not obvious? I have too much respect for him intellectually to think that he does not understand this – of course, he does – (Interjections) but let him just get up and say, ‘It’s an agreement to breach the law and I did it, because politically it was expedient.’

Mr Speaker, what happens outside those strict areas of enforcement? It is an agreement for not strict enforcement outside those areas, for tolerance – in other words, allow without challenge, outside those areas.

2325 He might say, ‘Yes, but only to the extent that that was the case between 1991 and 1997.’ I would accept that argument: if we were saying zero tolerance in these areas of this law, but normal policing thereafter outside it, I would accept that principle, because you see, Mr Speaker, I do not purport to tell the police zero tolerance on one, no zero tolerance on the other. It is a matter entirely for the Police, but this Agreement went further! (A Member: It didn’t.) Through the office of the Governor, it purported to tell/ask... well, what it should be that the police should be doing, in respect of the enforcement of a particular law.

2330 Now, the hon. Gentleman may not like it, when I compare it to the law of murder or the law of robbery or the laws against the abuse of drugs. He may prefer to compare it to driving offences; but as he has acknowledged, because he wants to diminish the importance of this, all laws are the same and he takes us to the law on driving, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) because it is, of course, easier for him to make the point in respect of the laws of driving.

2335 But, Mr Speaker, that is exactly the point to take. In a state governed by the rule of law, what is the Government doing, asking, telling or otherwise influencing the police in respect of how it should enforce the laws? The Government is more powerful than the police. It can come to the Parliament and change the law and say that the offence is no longer on the statute book and then the police have nothing to enforce. That is why we are the executive and the police are the enforcers.

2340 This Agreement transgresses that line and, Mr Speaker, that is why it was an issue that we considered important enough to put in our manifesto and the people knew that this was one of the things they would be choosing, if we became the Government.

2345 Now, Mr Speaker, I want to take some of the other points that the hon. Gentleman has made, in turn. One of them he made outside of this House, during the course of an interview with Gibraltar Broadcasting Corporation. He said, Mr Speaker, that, although he believed that the Agreement was an important thing, he would not side with Spain, of course, on these issues; but the fact is, that the only two people, aside from the mayors and the fishermen who have come to my office, I have heard in the media saying, ‘Stick to the 1999 Agreement’ are Sr Garcia-Margallo and Sr Peter Caruana. So there is an element of confluence between the two of them, that the 1999 Agreement should be kept to.

2350 Now, I will tell the hon. Gentleman that I do not believe he achieved anything with this Agreement by getting Spanish citizens to genuflect to our jurisdiction. I will come to why in a minute. But he will know that one of the sticking points at the time was that the Spanish central government and the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores would not recognise this Agreement, and he will know that they would not, because of their intellectual approach to the Gibraltar issue, in particular of the waters. Their position has historically been, under the Treaty of Utrecht, Gibraltar was not ceded with waters, and therefore Gibraltar's position under the United Nations Convention of the law of the Sea does not give it anything other than the port waters and not the three miles of sea around it.

His Agreement in 1999 did not change that position and the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores has never recognised this Agreement – until, Mr Speaker, we have been very clear in saying that we believe this is an illegal Agreement.

At least, Mr Speaker, he will recognise that we have achieved one thing: that Sr Garcia-Margallo, in a moment where I think his officials, once again, lost control of him, went on TV and recognised the Agreement, and said that we should have it. That is not a good reason for having it, but at least our attitude to it has got the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores to recognise the existence of this Agreement.

But, Mr Speaker, why do I say that nothing was achieved, in terms of the Spanish fishermen's subscription of their signatures – although I have not seen a signed copy – acceptance of this agreement, as the hon. Gentleman says was the case? Why do I say that there is no genuflection to the jurisdiction of Gibraltar at all to be proud of? Because, Mr Speaker, the only recognition that they give, in the first sentence of the Agreement, is:

'The fishing sector of the Campo de Gibraltar'

– which is not a unincorporate person, it is not a legal body, it is disparate, it has no legal personality –

'respects as fact that the Gibraltarian authorities have the right to legislate in relation to fishing as they see fit...'

Right? Well, Mr Speaker, acceptance as fact of the jurisdiction of Gibraltar, of the existence of this Parliament and of our Supreme Court by Spain is around us every day, because the tanks have not rolled. They have accepted our de facto right to occupy this land. They have accepted our de facto right to legislate. They have accepted our de facto right in so many other respects. There is no de jure recognition, which is what he knows, Mr Speaker, would have been of value, so to get a few Spanish fishermen to accept what the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores has recognised, even when Franco was there, is no genuflection. The genuflection here, Mr Speaker, was that a few hotheads blocked the frontier on that side and, no sooner had they done so, than our then Chief Minister was ready to do an agreement that our laws should be breached.

Mr Speaker, taking the example of the policing of driving at 30km an hour along Line Wall Road: whether you were booked at 31km an hour, at 50km an hour, or not booked at all at 100km an hour, is not a matter for the Government of Gibraltar – not a matter for the executive; it is a matter for the Commissioner of Police and his officers and now the highways enforcement officers, if they have powers in relation to speeding. If we believe that you should be allowed to drive at 50km an hour, it is not appropriate for me to call Eddie Yome or to call the Chairman of the Police Authority and, in those days, to call the Governor and say, 'Go on, Guv, let us speed up to 50 and don't fine us!'

The appropriate thing for the Chief Minister of Gibraltar to do in those circumstances is to come to this House and say, 'You should be allowed to drive at 50km an hour in Line Wall Road.' That is not what the hon. Gentleman did.

Mr Speaker, I want to address a number of other issues that arise.

The hon. Gentleman has talked about the storm that may be unleashed. The hon. Gentleman did this Agreement. He entered into an agreement, under the Tripartite process, for the payment of very large amounts of money by the United Kingdom, not us, of pensions to Spanish pensioners who have worked in Gibraltar before 1969. He entered into an agreement, very early on in his tenure for the changing of the Gibraltar identity carnet as a result of pressure being put by Spain. He agreed that the stamp of the Hague Convention, used by Gibraltar notaries, should in some way change, as a result of pressure that was sometimes put by Spain; and, Mr Speaker, in the past 16 years, the hon. Gentleman will at least recognise that he faced as many challenges as any Chief Minister of Gibraltar is likely to face, from our northern neighbours.

He faced queues of five or six hours on some occasions. He faced cruise liners being told that they could not come to Gibraltar, if they wanted to touch at a Spanish port. He faced challenges to our Gibraltar ID cards even then and, on all of those occasions, he faced those challenges, including royal visits by Spanish princes, cancelled for reasons related to Gibraltar, even though he had done this Agreement.

2410 Mr Speaker, I think every Gibraltarian knows that, with Spain as our neighbour, the storm will inevitably come. I, actually, Mr Speaker, want to give Spain the benefit of the doubt – when I say Spain, I do not mean el ciudadano de a pie; I mean the Spanish Foreign Office and the Spanish Government – that they are actually going to wake up soon to what behaviour is expected in 21st century diplomacy and in a 21st century world, which they expect should be accorded to them around the world and which they accord to most issues that they deal with, given the nation that they are, except, of course, when they turn to this blind spot, which is Gibraltar.

2415 I do not believe, Mr Speaker, that the Government of Spain will be foolish enough to turn this into an issue of the sort that we have seen before, where, if you do not allow our people to fish, the Guardia Civil will confront the RGP, the queues will be five hours, etc because – perhaps you might not expect to hear me say this – I have a lot of respect for the people who make up the Ministerio de Asuntos Exteriores, and I believe that they will not fall back on those ways, which are the ways of the tyrant and the ways of the dictator.

2420 But if they do, Mr Speaker, in the same way that he had to face them down, even though he had done the Agreement that is so clearly contrary to the rule of law, even though he had helped them with a deal to put millions of pounds into the pockets of Spanish pensioners as a result of the Córdoba Agreement, even though he had agreed the change to the ID card and he had agreed the change to the Hague Convention seal, even though he had created, with the Spanish foreign ministry at the time and the British foreign ministry, the Tripartite process, all of those challenges came: the four-hour queue; the five-hour queue; the problem at the border; the problem with the cruise ships.

2425 So, Mr Speaker, is it that I am being told that, simply because I seek that all our laws should be respected, if I do, I am going to confront something novel, something new, a new type of storm? Well, Mr Speaker, I just do not believe that – anybody who has lived in this place, as I have, for 40 years, as he has for 55 or 56 – anybody who has lived here for any period of time can believe that the road to respect for our laws, our city, our Parliament, our people and our rights is down to genuflecting to what we are required by our Spanish neighbours to do, namely, in this case, an agreement that our laws should not be observed.

2430 I remain available to continue discussions with representatives of the Spanish fishermen and representatives of the Ayuntamientos in this area and always available to meet with the Spanish foreign minister, Mr Margallo, should he so wish, as the maximum representative of his country's diplomacy, should they wish to engage us on this or any subject. We do not seek confrontation, and a government that seeks the observance of a law that has been there for 20 years cannot seriously be told that it is seeking confrontation.

2440 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I hope the hon. Member learns as soon as possible the science of realpolitik because, if he does not, then he had better advise his fellow citizens to get ready to man the barricades, as once they already had to do, when the GSLP was last in office.

Mr Speaker, look, the hon. Member says that he does not expect to face any new type of new storm, and that he does not seek confrontation. Well, Mr Speaker, I like to think that I demonstrated –

2445 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I hope that those who are in the Spanish foreign office today do not behave in a way –

Hon. P R Caruana: Alright, I acknowledge that that was insensitive.

2450 Mr Speaker, I like to think that I did not run away from any fight, regardless of the consequences for Gibraltar, when there was something genuinely at stake, which was more important to Gibraltar than the consequences of standing up.

2455 But Mr Speaker, the responsible way to do those right things is to do them whether there is a basic and fundamental political or legal or economic or social interest of Gibraltar; not unnecessarily, to provoke those consequences by unnecessarily undermining an arrangement that was in place and of which there was no fundamental interest of Gibraltar at stake. I do not accept, therefore, that he has not sought or has sought to avoid confrontation. I think, as I have said publicly, that, in unnecessarily, for the almost sixth-form moot reasons that he has given today by way of explanation for having done so, (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) that he should have chosen – Yes he said ‘first-year law student’ and I said ‘sixth-form moot’: it is not too much difference –

Hon. Chief Minister: It is decidedly time for [inaudible].

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I believe that to have done what he has done for the reasons that he has given that he has done them is to unnecessarily bring about for Gibraltar whatever the consequences are, however unjustified – and in this I agree with him – the other side may be in reacting in that way.

The fact that they are unjustified in reacting in that way and that it amounts to ‘un-21st-century’ European bullying does not alter the fact that, if it happens, it is self-inflicted to the extent that it is the result –

Hon. Chief Minister: No, it is not.

2470

Hon. P R Caruana: – it is the result of an unnecessary – for unnecessary reason – undermining of an arrangement that was working and that was not more important to Gibraltar. Whatever the reasons he may have had for doing so were not more important to Gibraltar than avoiding the wholly bullying and unjustified reaction of a newly elected right-wing government in Spain.

2475

I say that to him genuinely and sincerely. That is my view, and he is wrong in asserting that the Spanish fishermen have not... have only recognised this Agreement de facto and not de jure. The use of the word ‘fact’ in this Agreement is not ‘fact’ as in de facto as opposed to de jure; it is:

‘The fishing sector of the Campo de Gibraltar respects as fact’

– namely, as fact, (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) that it exists –

‘that the Gibraltar authorities have the right to legislate in relation to fishing as they see fit and therefore, as such, respect the validity of the Nature Protection [Act]’.

Mr Speaker, if you respect something de facto, you do not respect the validity in law of the laws that the de facto occupier promulgates. You respect the facts but not the laws, Mr Speaker, and he is wrong – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) and he is wrong, Mr Speaker, in saying that he cannot agree that this Agreement was just a return to the status quo ante enforcement because in the annexes, it purports to describe what those status quo ante was and that therefore we were going more than just the status quo ante; we were actually setting out what the method and the degree of enforcement and tolerance would be. That, which he so mischaracterizes – namely the content of the annexes – was the status quo ante. It was simply a description of the status quo ante: ‘this is how they used to enforce it’, and just to demonstrate that point, Mr Speaker, the 225 metres was the status quo ante because that was the limit of Admiralty waters and the only police that used to rush out, if they came closer than –

Hon. Chief Minister: That is not true – not on the east side. I am sorry that is not true.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker –

2500

Hon. Chief Minister: That is not true on the east side.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it is on the west side.

Hon. Chief Minister: There is no Admiralty water on the east side and there is a reference –

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, on the east side was the – (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Let me finish, Mr Speaker! (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) On one side, it was the MoD, with their concerns for Admiralty waters and on the other side, it was proximity to the beach. The RGP did used to go out and enforce incursions, when there was danger to swimmers and things of that sort.

This was not a new agreement of degree of toleration; this was a description of the status quo ante and therefore it was not more proscriptive or more ordered or new, in terms of defining what the degree of...

Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member may profess to know more about it than I, on the matter, but he is wrong!

Mr Speaker, I know that the UK Parliament encouraged the Gibraltar Government to change the law, for the reasons they set out in the report, after they had applauded the Gibraltar Government for entering into the Agreement. The Governor applauded the Government for entering into the Agreement. The RGP were entirely appreciative of the entering into the Agreement. The UK Government were entirely supportive and 2520 appreciative of the Gibraltar Government in entering the Agreement. (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) Does he really think that all of those institutions – the Parliament, the Government of the United Kingdom, the Queen’s Representative in Gibraltar then responsible for law and order and the judicial system, the RGP then still the constitutional independent enforcement authority – all of those people welcomed and applauded and congratulated the Gibraltar Government for entering into an agreement, which he says is an illegal agreement in violation of the law and improper?

2525 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will forgive me if we do not accept that, of all the people that have opined on this matter, he should be the only one that is right and that all these other institutions, not just in Gibraltar but in the United Kingdom, were actually endorsing an act of illegality!

Mr Speaker, this is simply just not... It is just not a credible use of the circumstantial evidence at his disposal.

2530 Hon. Chief Minister: Where is the question?

Mr Speaker: I was allowing him to finish. I have got to – 2535 Hon P R Caruana: Does the hon. Member finally accept, Mr Speaker...?

I agree with one thing that he has said: that Sr Margallo must have been rapped on the knuckles by his officials for coming out, calling for the restoration of the Agreement – which is, by the way, what I still urge the hon. Member to do.

2540 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will recall that there was a PP Government in Spain, at the time that we did this Agreement, and that his predecessor, as PP Foreign Secretary, Sr Matutes, said of the Agreement, that ‘it was not worth toilet paper’ or words to that effect – that he would not put it up in his bathroom or... He made some allusion to the sort of paper that one uses in bathrooms to describe this Agreement, such was their state of unhappiness about it! Well, he knows very well that if the Spanish foreign ministry is so unhappy about something, there must be something good in it for us.

2545 Hon. Chief Minister: The question.

2550 Hon. P R Caruana: The question is does he accept the possibility, Mr Speaker, that what he... (Interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, it is all very well to... It is clear we are now having a debate, as we were when he was giving his 25-minute exposition, and that when I start to continue to take part in the debate, (Interjections) it is all of a sudden glances at the Speaker –

Mr Speaker: I have not heard the question yet!

2555 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, does he acknowledge that the fact that Sr Margallo and I both urge him to restore this Agreement might actually be because we both agree, whatever else we might think about the Agreement, that it enables an equilibrium with which all sides can, and have, lived, and that it is the way of avoiding unnecessary conflict between us?

2560 I just want to say one more thing and then I will sit down. Mr Speaker, I do not accept the underlying premise of his statements today and his statements publicly, recently, that the GSLP Government is not the sort of government that instructs the police as to the degree of tolerance or the degree of enforcement of laws – or does he not recall the GSLP Government in those days instructing the RGP not to enforce strictly our tobacco laws?

2565 Several Members: Hear, hear. (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Before the Hon. the Chief Minister rises to reply, I have allowed, as both sides will appreciate – 2570 Hon. P R Caruana: I have appreciated.

Mr Speaker: – a lot of latitude in the discussion of... (Interjections) It was really a question of –

Hon. Chief Minister: I have not answered a question until fairly late on...

2575 Mr Speaker: Well, anyway, I have allowed latitude, even though the Hon. the Chief Minister invited the Hon. Leader of the Opposition to bring this debate in a motion. Having regard to the subject matter and its importance, I have allowed the parties to conduct this as a debate (Interjection) under Standing Order 24A, so I have allowed a lot of latitude on that.

2580 It has been a very interesting discussion. It has been conducted in a very constructive manner, without sounding patronising, but I would invite the Hon. the Chief Minister now to reply, as if he were replying to wind up a debate, so that could be the end of this discussion.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am very much obliged, Mr Speaker.

2585 I am afraid that, starting at the end, I may be about to change the tenor (Mr Speaker: Oh dear!) (Laughter) of the way that the debate has been held, because I have read all –

Hon. P R Caruana: You can change the tenor, but not the facts!

2590 Hon. Chief Minister: I have read all of the debates in this House since 1999 – in fact, they were all question-and-answer exchanges which read like debates – and the hon. Gentleman raised that point about the GSLP tolerating breaches of the law and asking police officers to turn blind eyes. I will tell you, Mr Speaker, what the then Leader of the Opposition, Joe Bossano, said to him at the time, that he did not accept his premise, Mr Speaker.

2595 His reply to that was to say, ‘Well, everybody in Gibraltar could see what was happening and they could make up their minds for themselves.’

2600 Because I am not answerable for what the GSLP did between 1988 and 1996, I am going to leave it at that, but I am going to say to him – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) I am going to say to him, Mr Speaker, that actually everybody could see what was happening after 1999, when he did his Agreement, which he says was not an agreement for the laws of Gibraltar to be broken: namely, that there were Spanish fishing vessels in our waters, under the supervision or within the sight of Gibraltar Police vessels, breaking Gibraltar laws, as a result of the effect of the Agreement he says is not an Agreement to break Gibraltar laws.

2605 So, you know, we can take different attitudes as to which party (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) in Government has said what to the RGP. This Government is saying nothing to the RGP, other than asking them to do their jobs and they can come back to us if they have any resources issues –

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, then, change the law.

Hon. Chief Minister: – as is normal in any democracy.

2610 Well, Mr Speaker, realpolitik involves many things, not just the realities that are coming towards you. It is an understanding of the nuances of what government is about and what politics is about.

2615 But, Mr Speaker, underlying all that must be one cardinal rule, that everyone is equal before the law and that the executive does not promote that citizens of one nation or another should be able to disregard the law. It is, in my view, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and it will be, Mr Speaker, forever in Hansard, to his eternal discredit, to have got up in this House today, because he has nowhere left to run on this Agreement, to help – as he has done – to help Spain, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, to justify the actions which he says they will now unleash. (Hon. P R Caruana: You!)

In other words, he is saying, ‘Picardo, you have brought it upon us – (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) if it comes, you have brought it upon us.’

2620 Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely right.

Hon. Chief Minister: ‘If the queues are there, it is your fault’ –

2625 Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely right.

Hon. Chief Minister: So, Mr Speaker: Landaluce, Margallo and Caruana – all on the same side of this issue! (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Applause) All of them calling –

Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely right.

2630 Hon. Chief Minister: – all of them calling for the same thing –

Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely right.

2635 Hon. Chief Minister: – all of them justifying it on the same basis –

Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely right.

2640 Hon. Chief Minister: As a Member of this House, for him, Mr Speaker, to have got up today, simply for the purposes of protecting such political legacy as people may still want to ascribe to him, to have said, as he has said and now emphasised, that because the Government of Gibraltar of a new political colour and a new political complexion is not prepared to subscribe its name to an Agreement that some and not others, and in some places and in not others, and in some circumstances and in not others, our laws should be broken, well, Mr Speaker, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) that, I think in the realpolitik of this, in the history of this, when his career in politics is analysed, that will be the point of the final full stop. When he got up in this House to side with the Mayor of Algeciras, with the most aggressive Minister of Foreign Affairs (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) that Spain has had in the past 30 years, against the Chief Minister of Gibraltar – against the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, on this issue, which as he said, is not an important thing! This is fish! With a bigger, important issue, economically or legally, I would have been there fighting like a lion, as I have on other issues.

2650 Well, Mr Speaker, that is such a misnomer. That is such an attempt to pull the wool over the eyes of our citizenry that it must be answered, because this is the most important issue, (A Member: Hear, hear.) – whether it is the Nature Protection Act or whether it is (Interjections) any other piece of our law, how can there be seriously an Agreement that some be allowed to break our law in some circumstances, but not others, and how can that not be important and how can that not go to the root of the Rule of Law.

2655 I say this, Mr Speaker, confident that whether they liked it in Parliament, they liked it in the Foreign Office, they liked it anywhere else, and they liked it anywhere except in Madrid, I know, Mr Speaker, as he knows, my analysis is the correct one, and the analysis of my Government is the correct one. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

2660 Mr Speaker, it is not that Mr Matutes was so unhappy with the Agreement that he felt it was toilet paper and that therefore if the Spaniards are unhappy with it, it must be good for us. No, Mr Speaker, he – I have too much intellectual respect for him – knows that they were not unhappy with it; it is that it does not fit in, in the lexicon of the analysis that they have consistently done, based on Utrecht: ‘You have no waters, you cannot do an agreement. Whether one of my citizens de facto recognises it or not, I as the party responsible in international law for the state do not recognise it and therefore I consider it toilet paper.’ It is not that they were unhappy! How could they be unhappy? Their citizens, above ours, were going to be allowed to break the law of Gibraltar, so that is a ridiculous suggestion to pray in aid.

2665 Mr Speaker, he does not agree that I have tried to avoid confrontation. Mr Speaker, that is another agreement between him and those of our detractors (Laughter by Hon. P R Caruana) in Spain. Is he, Mr Speaker, going to end his political career by surprising me in New York in June, when I thought he did not want to go to the Committee of 24, but actually to deliver the speech for the Kingdom of Spain, rather than the speech of the Leader of the Opposition of Gibraltar? (Laughter) Is it going to come to that? Because to have stood here...

2670 He has said nothing which Sr Margallo has not said and which Sr Landaluce has not said (A Member: Hear, hear.) What he has unleashed today, Mr Speaker, in this House, in this debate, if I may call it that, is actually quite unprecedented.

2675 Mr Speaker, the analysis that he has made of what de facto means is – again, I am very sorry to say, because I know that he knows this, Mr Speaker, but he is just saying it because he has to – absolutely and completely incorrect in law. Moreover, the analysis that he does now, knowing the truth as I know he knows it, about the 225 metres, is equally ridiculous. He knows, Mr Speaker, because he said it on one of the question-and-answer-session-cum-debates, that the limit for this type of activity in Spain is 220 metres! He said, ‘and I added another five so it wasn’t identical to Spanish law’!

2680 So Mr Speaker, everything we have heard today from the hon. Gentleman is designed only for one

2685 purpose: a final grapple, a final attempt – ‘It doesn’t matter, Gibraltar, that I did an Agreement contrary to the rule of law to ignore the laws of Gibraltar. Keep listening to me saying the opposite. You’ve always believed me, when I have said one thing and done another. Give me, please, one more chance, one more breath – can I survive a moment longer?’

The fact, Mr Speaker, is that he has done his ego a great service and Gibraltar a great disservice.

Environmental zones in Overseas Territories
UK intention to designation

2695 Clerk: Question 480, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, you do not need to have the last word to win an argument. This is the mistake that he makes. You do not have to speak last.

2700 Hon. Chief Minister: He used to have the last word before and that is why he thought he used to win the argument.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister – ?

Mr Speaker the last word on this subject, regrettably for Gibraltar, has not been uttered. (Interjections)

2705 Mr Speaker: Order! Question 480.

Hon. P R Caruana: Can the Chief Minister say whether the United Kingdom government has raised with him its intention to designate environmental zones in Overseas Territories?

2710 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the issue has not been raised with us. In fact, we have raised it with the United Kingdom, based on the Sunday Times article that alerted us to the issue – I do not know whether he has had an opportunity to review it.

2715 I would say, Mr Speaker, that this raises a lot of constitutional issues.

2720 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I agree that it raises a lot of constitutional issues. There was a time that the United Kingdom government tried to add ‘environment’ to the list of things that it thought belonged to it, so external affairs, defence, emergency management and the environment. It was clear as daylight to everybody that the Overseas Territories Consultative Council had, in effect, become a vehicle for doing that, which is one of the reasons – not the only reason – why the Gibraltar Government declined to carry on going to that forum. It was not a forum, as we were concerned, in which the Government of the United Kingdom could, by creep, help itself to subject matter jurisdiction.

2725 Mr Speaker, our Constitution says... and remember, as I am sure he will, that our Constitution is not law of Gibraltar; it is law of the United Kingdom. It is a legislative Act of and in the United Kingdom legislative process and, therefore, it binds the United Kingdom Government as much as it binds the citizens and institutions of Gibraltar; and that, in that, it reserves, not to the United Kingdom, certain... to the Governor who represents the Crown, the Queen.

2730 Hon. Chief Minister: The Queen in Gibraltar.

Hon. P R Caruana: Absolutely, Mr Speaker.

2735 And does he further accept that what is not reserved to the United Kingdom in that Constitution is not available to them by way of...? In other words, our Constitution does not say that matters are the preserve of Gibraltar Ministers unless UK Ministers decide that they want to exercise them instead.

They had no legal vires under United Kingdom law to do this, Mr Speaker, and therefore, will he agree with me – as I think he will – my interpretation of what of he has just said: that it would not be admissible for 2740 the United Kingdom Government to usurp any aspect of the statutory...? The United Kingdom Parliament may be in a slightly different legalistic position, but the United Kingdom executive, and certainly UK Ministers, may not usurp environmental competence in Gibraltar, unless it be by means of a legal instrument that overrides the Gibraltar Constitution Order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker.

2745 Now, I think it is fair to say that this article does not talk about Gibraltar; it talks about other islands. But it must be clear, Mr Speaker, to Ministers that, when they are talking about Overseas Territories and issues like this, they can never talk for Gibraltar – unless, of course, Mr Speaker, there happens to be an agreement that we might want to do something with them on a particular issue.

2750 There is absolutely no question whatsoever of a UK Minister having the right or authority to say anything about Gibraltar's environmental protection, let alone that they might be thinking of creating something around Gibraltar.

2755 Mr Speaker, there are, as the hon. Gentleman knows, at a European Union level, issues relating to the environmental protection of the seas around Gibraltar, which are the subject of the famous legal case; but there is no question, Mr Speaker, of Mr Letwin, who is the mentioned Minister who is actually in Downing Street, as I understand it, being entitled to make any such remarks about Gibraltar.

I think, Mr Speaker, there was a lot here of journalism in this article (Interjection) and very little directly attributable to a UK Minister which one can actually take issue with, but if there were to be an idea, somewhere, that from Downing Street we could be told which areas of our territory we are to designate in one particular way or another, for constitutional reasons, Mr Speaker, they would have something else coming.

2765 Clerk: Question 481, the Hon. P R Caruana.

2770 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Foreign and Commonwealth Office of the United Kingdom has provided him with a copy of the long letter which Sr Margallo has recently said he sent in response to Mr Straw's final letter to Sr Moratinos and is the Chief Minister aware whether the Foreign Office has replied to that letter?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2775 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that I am aware of the content of the letter which Sr Margallo sent to the Foreign Secretary upon his appointment and I am also fully aware of the content and terms of the reply sent to him by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

2780 Hon. P R Caruana: Just for the record, Mr Speaker, will he say that he has chosen the words 'aware of the content' ... he has copies of the letters? Yes. Can he say yes for Hansard?

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Yes, Hansard would like to know! (Laughter)

2785

Spain's renunciation of Trilateral Forum Foreign and Commonwealth Office reaction

2790 Clerk: Question 482, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: And I hope that he was sent them at the time and not just when he told the Convent that I had asked this question. Well done, as it should be – as it should be so, Mr Speaker.

2795 Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether he has received the express assurance of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that it has not expressed to Spain any degree of contentment, acceptance of, or acquiescence in, Spain's unilateral renunciation of the Trilateral Forum?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2800 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Absolutely, Mr Speaker, and I will say this: as I assume was the case when he was in No. 6 Convent Place, the content of the letter that was sent in reply to Sr Margallo's was fully consulted on with me, and I am very content with the language, as I am sure he would be, insofar as it relates to the issue of the Trilateral Forum.

2805 He will have seen that the Government issued a press release when Mr Margallo said something suggesting that the letter he had received said something different to that which we knew it said, which also included reference to what the United Kingdom position was, and that that was, if there was anybody renouncing the Trilateral Process, it was the present Madrid Government – because it is not even the Socialist Party that was in Government when he and Mr Miliband were involved in creating that process – and that the United Kingdom and Gibraltar remain equally available to progress the Trilateral Forum.

2810 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I did not ask the question because I doubted that that would be the UK's position, which I am very happy to see has not changed, but rather to give us an opportunity to place on the public record a response to Sr Margallo, at least as he is reported as having said in the press – it may be an inaccurate report – that actually the reply that he had received from the UK was very satisfactory or words to that effect. He may not have used the word 'satisfactory' – 'a good reply' or something like that.

2815 Let us make it clear that that does not mean that the UK gave him any comfort whatsoever on his renunciation of the Trilateral Forum.

2820 Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to have that on the record and that what was said in the press release, which I think that the hon. Gentleman would agree with us is the right approach, not just from Gibraltar but also from the United Kingdom, is what was said in the letter, which expressed strong commitment to the Forum and to its continuation.

Borders and Coastguard Agency
Government intentions for Coastguard Agency role

2830 Clerk: Question 483, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government intends to proceed with the Coastguard Agency role of the Borders and Coastguard Agency?

2835 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government will make an announcement in respect of this matter in due course.

2840 Hon. P R Caruana: So, the answer is that he cannot now say; or if he can, that he will not now say.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is one of those two.

2845 Hon. P R Caruana: It is one of those two – probably a bit of both.
Well, Mr Speaker, can I just say to the hon. Member that it would be my hope that he does. Will he just accept from me, so that I know that he is aware of it, the reason why the previous Government added the 'Coastguard' bit? That is that it is a means of creating an umbrella organisation in which all of Gibraltar's waterborne assets can be pooled together, and after each doing their own role, for Department people, 2850 manning the boats in a seafaring sense, RGP officers and Customs officers and Port Department officials in respect of the law enforcement, because if we buy bigger boats – if we buy bigger boats! – the RGP can man them from a law enforcement point of view, but cannot necessarily man them from the marine point of view, from the port. This is a way of getting all the resources together and making them more credible and senior, rather than having four or five agencies floating around.

2855 So that was the reason. It seemed popular at the time. We would have done it, if we had proceeded. Certainly, it is not universally liked outside of our shores, this initiative, but I think it is a good way of marshalling and harnessing and enhancing the presence role of all our various waterborne assets, some of which now are difficult to deploy, in support of this function.

2860 Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful for that indication. I think the hon. Gentleman said as much in the debate on the Agency, when he brought the Bill. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) But I am grateful for that.

2865 I am going to resist saying that, of course, now the RGP are free to enforce the Nature Protection Act, there are things that they could do with the bigger boats, even if we do not go ahead with the Coastguard parts of it, but anyway... (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana)

North Mole sullage plant Government intention to allow reopening

2870 Clerk: Question 484, the Hon. P R Caruana.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister say whether the Government intends to allow the sullage plant to reopen on the North Mole?

2875 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2880 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as has recently been announced, Government is conducting jointly with the owners and operators of the plant a thorough assessment of the facility, which will determine whether or not it would be viable to resume operations at the Western Arm. Until this assessment is complete, Government will not be in a position to state whether any such operation can continue and, if so, under what conditions and restrictions they would be allowed to continue.

2885 Mr Speaker, I have said to him before that it is... I have not used the example before, but it is almost like climbing Everest without oxygen, the hurdles that the operators would have to surmount in order to satisfy us, given the present configuration of the Western Arm and the proximity of residential areas, in any event, that those operations should once again be allowed.

2890 Hon. P R Caruana: In any assessment – I do not want to add to the lack of oxygen near the peak of the summit – but amongst the issues, Mr Speaker, I have no doubt that the Minister for Tourism will be urging upon him is the reaction to any such step by the cruising industry, who have supported us – Gibraltar; I do not mean ‘us’ – who have supported Gibraltar and who must not be put offside Gibraltar by doing anything with which they are not content.

2895 It is up to the Government, therefore, whether it allows them to reopen there, whether it ends sullage operations in Gibraltar altogether, or whether it says, ‘You can’t open there, but here are facilities elsewhere,’ so that sullage facilities... That may be an acceptable way forward.

But I am content, because this is not an anti-sullage-plant stance that the Opposition takes now, or that we took in Government, but rather to ensure that the horizontal damage to other macro-economic interests of Gibraltar are kept well to the forefront of any consideration of whether to allow it to re-establish there or not.

2900 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman started by saying that he did not want to take oxygen away from those who might be near the summit. I do not even want us to go near that analogy, because I would say that, if I had to assess this, there is nobody even on the lower slopes of Mount Everest, because there would have to be so much persuasion of the Government to allow this activity to occur again, given the present configuration of the Western Arm, that I do not think they have even taken off in the process.

But, look, it is right that we should do an analysis of what is happening in the activity, but that analysis, in any event, would be ad referenda the cruise companies, because of the importance of that. (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) That has been made very clear to the people, who we have said, 'Let's stop the judicial review, let's do this exercise', but even then, it is ad referenda the cruise companies and the insurance companies, which are more or less assessing the same level of acceptable risk, which I think may lead to this never being able to be done in that place, given the present configuration of the Western Arm.

2910

Gibraltar Identity and Civilian Registration Cards Erroneous charges for renewal/changes

2915

2920

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister explain the nature and circumstances of the error that led to people being charged for renewal of, and changes to, Gibraltar Identity and Civilian Registration Cards – and which, I might have added in the question, they then reversed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, whilst revising the internal process for issuing Identity Cards and Civilian Registration Cards, with a view to maximising efficiency and cost-effectiveness, the Civil Status and Registration Officer decided to issue all cards with a validity of ten years and five years respectively, including those requiring renewal and the change of particulars, and charge the statutory fee of £5 to everyone with effect from 2nd April 2012. This was erroneously implemented without reference to the Government who, upon hearing of this, immediately issued instructions to rectify the situation.

2930

On 10th April 2012, the practice was discontinued and the Civil Status and Registration Office issued a public apology. Those concerned were contacted in order to refund the monies.

2935

Hon. P R Caruana: Well, now, you see, Mr Speaker, that is what happens when you decide to let the Civil Service run the country, as a manifesto commitment!

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, it is right that they should run the administration, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) but in the context of what it is that the administration is – in other words, give effect to the policy of the Government.

In relation to charging, I think he will agree with me, that charging citizens for things is not an issue of administration; it is actually a political issue, which requires a decision to be taken by this House because we are going to spend a long time debating the Book, (Interjection by Hon. P R Caruana) and for good reason.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Debilitating diseases Sufferers by age band

Clerk: Question 399, the Hon. J J Netto.

5 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government state how many persons there are with a debilitating disease, either occupying a bed in St Bernard's Hospital, the Care Agency, in the community, or in the UK, specifying their medical condition (albeit on a confidential basis), broken down by age bands of those under 17 years, between 17 and 59, and over?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and Environment.

Minister for Health and Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the following table – I will read it out but, for ease of reference, I have made copies – shows the breakdown of persons suffering from a debilitating disease on the basis of the information available on 16th May 2012:

15 Beds in St Bernard's Hospital: under 17, 1; 17 to 59, 8; over 59, 67; total 76.

Beds in Care Agency residential: under 17, 3; 17 to 59, 2; over 59, 201; total 206.

Community: under 17, 4; 17 to 59, 19; over 59, 211; total 234.

20 Just as an aside from the prepared answer – I am going to list the diseases – but it has not been possible in the time available to provide a breakdown of medical conditions because of the large number of medical records that would have had to be examined, and that would have taken... The process has been started, but it is rather complicated.

25 However, in order to assist you, I am going to read out the list of illnesses that are included in this breakdown, which are: frailty, Alzheimer's/dementia, arthritis, stroke, cardiac failure, chronic lung disease, complications of diabetes, cancer, long-term congenital illness, Parkinson's, osteoporosis, epilepsy, mental health problems, severe arthritis, cerebral palsy, multiple sclerosis, motor neurone disease, Huntington's Chorea, acquired brain injury, amputees, Menière's disease, chronic renal failure, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, Paget's disease, hypothyroidism, liver disease, hearing impairment, visual impairment and muscular dystrophy.

30 In some cases, particular patients may have more than one of those, which adds to the difficulty of doing a breakdown by disease, but certainly the figures by ages are given in the table.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for the amount of information he has supplied there.

35 I wonder whether I can ask a supplementary question in relation to the 19 – in the table he has just shown me, in the column of people between the age of 17 and 59 – 19 in the community. I just wonder whether the Hon. Minister for Health or his colleague, the Hon. Mrs Sacramento, would know whether those 19 may have a mild form of illness or an acute form of illness. I know that perhaps she may not have the information readily available, but whether the Care Agency might have it within their own records, or not, because we are dealing with people who are in the community, as opposed to being in specific care, either by the Health Authority or the Care Agency, and I just want to know whether it is possible to gauge whether it is a mild form or an acute form in that regard.

45 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I believe it is a range of conditions, but I cannot give you that answer now. However, with 19 it is easier to find the information than with 500, so perhaps if you ask separately we may be able to obtain it for you.

50 Hon. J J Netto: Fine. Obviously, it was not anticipated that I was going to ask that question. Perhaps if I had asked the question in the original form, the information would have been there. Perhaps if I write to... I do not know whether to write to the hon. Lady or to the Minister for Health. The hon. Lady might be able to provide that information?

I am obliged, Mr Speaker.

55 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Government have any plans to provide a sheltered and supported residential unit for the 17 to 59-year-olds who are not catered for by the psychiatric hospital or the Care Agency facilities that exist at present?

60 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, they would be ordinarily catered for by way of domiciliary care. There has, as far as I am aware, been no indication by any of the people in the community that they have expressed a need for any alternative provision of care, Mr Speaker; but again, if it were, then that would be considered at that juncture.

65 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may add, Mr Speaker, the new mental home will have an adolescent unit which would cover youngsters with mental illnesses, so that partly would cover that gap.

70 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I could be a little bit more specific perhaps: debilitating diseases such as MS, MND – the neurological diseases that are debilitating and perhaps require more than just domiciliary care.

75 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, so far there is no evidence that people suffering from very severe debilitating diseases will require more than domiciliary care. In fact, Mr Speaker, the requests that we have had from people who are suffering from quite severe debilitating diseases is that they would much rather remain at home for the time that they have left.

EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

EU Directive 2010/18/EU Scheme for transposition

Clerk: Question 400, the Hon. J J Netto.

85 Hon. J J Netto: If you will just give me a second; I am getting a note here.
Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state when will the Government be in a position to implement EU Directive 2010/18/EU, which implements the revised Framework Agreement on Parental Leave, and could the Hon. Minister provide a brief outline of the Government scheme for the transposition of the said Directive?

90 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

95 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the transposition date for the Directive is 8th March 2013 – and I note that there is a typo in the written answer.

In accordance with Article 3(2) of Directive 2010/18/EU, the UK requested that the Commission provide an additional period of a year to comply with the Directive and the Government plans to transpose the Directive by 8th March 2013.

100 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that and for the fact that the Government is working towards the date of implementation of 8th March 2013.

105 In continuation, I think part of my question perhaps, sir, has not been answered, and that is whether the Government, in the manner in which it would wish to try and transpose this particular Directive, has given any thought as to how the general scheme would work? Is she in a position to be able to give Parliament, perhaps, a very brief general outline of how the Government intends to transpose the Directive?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Not at this stage, Mr Speaker – the transposition date is almost a year away.

110 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, presumably, given that we are talking about having parental leave being applied throughout Gibraltar – which obviously means the private sector, because obviously civil servants in Government Departments do have parental leave – one of the things that may be of concern to employers in Gibraltar, particularly in the private sector, given that many employers only have very few numbers of employees, is whether the parental leave, once the Directive is transposed into Gibraltar, is going to be a financial burden for employers in the private sector.

115 I say this because when we transposed the maternity directive into Gibraltar, we – the GSD, when we were in Government – took the view that the Government would pay for this in order not to create a financial burden on employers in the private sector. So the reason why I am asking this – and I have to translate this 120 into a question – is whether, by the time the Government wishes to transpose this particular Directive, will consideration be given as to whether the Government will be the one actually paying for the paternity leave, as opposed to employers in the private sector, which is a kind of analogy with the way we did it in relation to maternity leave.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, consideration will be given as to how best to transpose the requirements of the Directive. It is still early days.

125 Hon. J J Netto: Has the hon. Lady – perhaps in conjunction with the Minister for Employment, because this will have a crossover with employment matters – started a process of discussions with the Employers’ Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Small Businesses because, no doubt, they will have views on these matters; and if they have not started the process, do they intend to start one?

130 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I imagine that the people in the Chamber of Commerce know that this is a requirement of the EU that has to be transposed. We have had no indication that they consider it a burden. It does not seem to me a very wise thing to do to go telling them, ‘Is it a burden and would you like me to give you some money?’ because I can imagine what the answer is going to be. I would expect them to take the first 135 move if they had a problem.

World Health Organisation Report on Dementia Plan for implementation

140

Clerk: Question 401, the Hon. J J Netto.

145 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the Government press release with regard to dementia – that is press release 241/2012 – will the Minister for Social Services state which aspects of the World Health Organisation Report has the Government introduced already, which ones are envisaged that they will implement in due course and which ones, if any, they think they will not be in a position to implement at all?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

150 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the WHO Report concludes with a list of key messages, among which is that dementia needs to be recognised as a public health priority.

155 This Government has, in the short period in which it has been in office, already made dementia a priority.
An inter-ministerial committee for the elderly has been formed and the GHA and Social Services have been working closely together on developing various strategies and strategy groups to deal with dementia. The working groups are collecting data and studying the impact of dementia locally in order to be able to put in a national dementia plan in place so that we can look to improve the lives of people with dementia. People can live for many years after the onset of dementia and this Government wants to enable them to have a good quality of life.

160 The Report also recommended improving the understanding of dementia. Government is in the process of formulating an awareness campaign.

The Report further recommends that caregivers be involved in formulating policies. This Government has involved the Alzheimer’s and Dementia Society and both the GHA and the Care Agency have met with its caretaker committee on a number of occasions.

165 The Report also recommends that dementia be included in the public health agenda – it certainly is now.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect, the hon. Lady seems to be saying, ‘Well, we have had the World Health Organisation Report and, as a result of this Report, with regard to Alzheimer’s and dementia we have got a committee organised and we are going to work towards the objective.'

This is what the hon. Lady seems to be saying and they are bringing the association which represents the interests of Alzheimer's and dementia patients into the fore, but my question is prompted by the fact that, in their press release – perhaps the Minister for Health might be able to come in here because it has got the logo of the GHA – it says in the fifth paragraph:

'The Committee has considered the WHO Report and is pleased that in the short period in which it has been in office it has already put in motion a lot of the matters which the Report highlights...'

My question is intended to try and find out which are the things that the... between the Care Agency and the Health Authority have already done, given what they have said in the press release, what is in the pipeline that obviously needs doing, which they are working towards, which is basically what the hon. Lady seems to be saying now, and the thing that, for some good reasons, they might not be able to do.

So therefore can the hon. Lady, or perhaps her colleague to her right, be able to tell us or indicate to me which are the things that are already ticked, have been done, which are the things they are working on and which are the things that cannot be done?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I think that the answer has been very clearly given.

I wonder whether the hon. Member has actually read the WHO Report and the recommendations of the WHO Report. Had the hon. Member read the recommendations of the WHO Report, then he would have realised that I have actually gone through the checklist of the recommendations.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, regardless of whether I have read the Report or not, can the hon. Lady in Parliament state the things that they have done already with the WHO Report?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: The question is how this Government has dealt with the recommendations of the WHO Report. Mr Speaker, I have been through the WHO Report and I have listed the things that this Government has done.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect to the hon. Lady – and I do not want to get embroiled with any controversy so early in the afternoon! – but the question, with respect, goes further than that.

The question is not only as the hon. Lady has rightly just pointed out, but then it says 'and the ones which, if any, they think they will not be in a position to implement'. Now, I do not think that she has actually dealt with that aspect of the question.

If the answer is 'No, no, we are going to be implementing the entirety of the Report', then fine, that is the answer. But if the answer is 'some of those'... well, with respect, you have not answered the entirety of the question.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: With respect to the hon. Member opposite, I would suggest that he may look at the WHO Report and he will see that the WHO Report does not actually have recommendations as such. What it has is key messages. Basically, it is a running theme of things that need to be done. Now, as such, there is nothing in the messages where we can categorically say, 'No we cannot do that', or 'No, we will not do that', because all it is is general guidelines that countries need to follow.

To cut a long story short, then, at the moment we do not envisage that there is anything that we cannot do. We do not intend not to do anything, but to be clear, the WHO Report does not actually have a schedule of recommendations.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when will the Government be in a position to publish the national strategy for the treatment of care of people with Alzheimer's and dementia?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it was a question relating to our Dementia Strategy. We have a working group on it. I think I may have mentioned it at the last meeting, that I think that July comes to mind, but it is certainly in months rather than any longer.

There is a working group on it. There is, I think, a fifth draft which I received just the other day, so we are on target. I think it should be sometime in the summer, but it is from memory and I would need to confirm that.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Government be ringfencing funding to provide resources and facilities for dementia care?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That is one of the considerations that may come up in the report, but I think it is early days yet.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Government be providing a dedicated medical team of a consultant psychiatrist specialising in old age psychiatry, community psychiatric nurses specialising in old age psychiatry, physiotherapists, psychologists and home carers, all specialising in old age psychiatry?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady is doing it again: she is trying to dictate Government policy from the Opposition bench.

Thank you very much for those suggestions.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am just referring to the wishlist of the support group that you are working closely with.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: That is fine. Those suggestions will obviously all be borne in mind, but we have to wait for the report to be ready.

As I say, I only received the fifth draft a few days ago. I have not read it yet, so I am not able to answer that but, no doubt, we will bear that wishlist in mind.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, no doubt Mr Speaker, I was just wondering, in the last five months that he has been working so closely together to put a strategy together, whether you have committed to the wishlist that they have asked for.

Mr Speaker, will the Government be investing also heavily in the training of professionals, nurses and carers specialising in dementia?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Health Authority and the Care Agency have been working very closely together with the Dementia Support Group, but the Ministers themselves have not been involved in the working group. The Ministers receive the Reports, the drafts and then may be able to make comments on it, but I have not been individually and personally involved in that. Other people have been working on that, particularly clinicians.

But as I said before, all the components of the Society's wishlist will be considered as we develop the Dementia Strategy.

Care Agency residential homes Recordable acts of violence

Clerk: Question 404, the Hon. J J Netto. Sorry, I beg your pardon – Question 402.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency residential homes since this question was asked in Question No. 286/2012 to date, and, if so, could the Minister provide a breakdown showing the date of the incident or incidents, whether the incident or incidents were between children or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required, either in the home or in the hospital, and for what purpose?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there has been 280 one recordable incident of violence in the Care Agency residential homes since the question was asked in 286/2012.

The incident took place on 16th March 2012. It was between two looked-after children. No medical attention was required.

285
Care Agency looked-after children
Number absconding to Spain; review of Care Plan

290 Clerk: Question 403, the Hon. J J Netto.

295 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if any of the looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency who absconded, as provided in answer to Question No. 286/2012, had absconded in Spain, and in relation to the one child who had absconded 16 times, how many times, if at all, had the Care Plan for this child been reviewed and changed to reflect this constant situation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

300 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, Question 286/2012 was in relation to recordable acts of violence. I am assuming that the hon. Member is referring to Question 287/2012.

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry, which number?

305 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No. 287.

With reference to Question 287/2012, the Care Agency has no knowledge of any absconding taking place in Spain.

In relation to the child who absconded 16 times, the Care Plan changed for this child on numerous occasions, each time to reflect their current situation.

310 In addition to this, the Residential Plan was updated on a monthly basis, to outline tasks that Agencies were required to complete. This also filtered into the child's Daily Plan, which was reviewed each day by a member of management to risk assess the current situation and make any necessary arrangements.

The Plan around this child is under constant assessment, remains robust with continued working together, and the last incident for absconding for this child was 13th February 2012, and has not absconded since.

Care Agency looked-after children
Number absconding; track record of violence

320 Clerk: Question 404, the Hon. J J Netto.

325 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency in any of their residential homes who have absconded since this question was asked in Question No. 287/2012 and, if so, could the information be provided on a monthly basis and stating how long the absconding lasted, whether the absconding was in Gibraltar or Spain, and whether any of these children have a track record of engaging in acts of violence against any other looked-after children or staff members?

330 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there have been six incidents involving three looked-after children who absconded since the question was asked in 287/2012.

One of these looked-after children has a track record of engaging in acts of violence against other looked-after children and staff.

I will now hand the hon. Member the requested information.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 404 OF 2012

Date	Length of time absconded	Was the absconding in Gibraltar or Spain?	Does the LAC have a track record of engaging in acts of violence against other LAC or Staff?
21/03/12	11 hours 30 minutes	Gibraltar	No
20/03/2012	7 hours 45 minutes	Gibraltar	Yes
21/03/12	11 hours 30 Minutes	Gibraltar	No
13/04/2012	17 hours 45 minutes	Gibraltar	Yes
28/04/12	7 hours 5 minutes	Gibraltar	No
29/04/2012	8 hours 10 minutes	Gibraltar	No

In addition to the looked-after children, a 17-year-old from the Republic of Guinea was charged for being in Gibraltar without proper documentation. He was bailed by the Magistrates' Court to the care of Social Services on 26th March 2012. In keeping with good practice, Social Services held a LAC review and he absconded from care on 14th April 2012, and his whereabouts are unknown.

It is thought that he is not in Gibraltar, and the Royal Gibraltar Police and Spanish authorities were notified.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but could I ask the hon. Lady in relation to this one particular looked-after child who seems to be part of the group of six who are always absconding, but has also had some act of violence in relation to some other people, is in relation to this particular child a case where perhaps there is a greater need of more effort being placed in relation to the needs of this particular child, either by some specialised professional bodies, or is it perhaps as well a question that the ratio of people working for the particular child needs to be increased as a result of that?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I mentioned in answer to the previous question, the Care Plans and Daily Plans are reviewed constantly on a daily basis, on a weekly basis and on a monthly basis. As a result of that, staffing issues are taken into account and staffing levels are increased where necessary and where appropriate.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I accept that the Care Plans will be reviewed, sometimes even on a daily basis, if not a weekly basis, but what I am asking is, in relation to this particular child, where there seems to be a bit of a history in the sense of absconding and in relation to acts of violence, does the Care Agency feel that this particular child is in need of perhaps greater specialised professional services to tackle some underlying issue that there is within the child?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am loath once again to engage in details of particular children. Having said that, I do not think that the hon. Member has understood the answer to the question, because there have been six incidents involving three looked-after children. None of these three looked-after children 365 are the child who used to continually abscond. As I said in the answer to the previous question, that child has not absconded since February, so we are not talking about one child who continuously absconds.

Now, in that context, I am reluctant to go into further details in relation to children in care.

370 Care Agency residential homes
Incidents of violence

Clerk: Question 405, the Hon. J J Netto.

375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Minister for Social Services now in a position to answer the supplementary to Question No. 169/2012 which sought to know if the incidents of violence stated in the February session of Parliament are the same of those stated in the January session of Parliament?
Also, if the same is true for the figures given in the March session of Parliament?

380 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am happy to provide this information only on a confidential basis, given that the children may be identified, and I will pass this information to the hon. Member opposite on a confidential basis.

385 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, while the information is coming through and I have a chance to have a look at it, could the hon. Lady say why she has not answered my letter of 29th February, in which I sought to provide an answer to this information which obviously, if she had answered my letter, I would not have had the need to ask the question in the first place?

390 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and for that I have to apologise, in that my office did not provide the answer, but the answer is now provided.
What I have provided in the letter has now been provided to the hon. Member on a confidential basis.

395 Hon. J J Netto: Does this also apply to the other two letters which have not been answered? (A Member: Ooh!)

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker.
One of the others also formed part of another question in this House, which was actually subsequently withdrawn. So I am assuming that the hon. Member no longer requests a reply. (Interjections)

405 Looked-after children
Training programmes

Clerk: Question 406, the Hon. J J Netto.

410 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is the Minister for Social Services now in a position to state if the six looked-after children referred to in Question No. 171/2012 are now being provided with training programmes; and, if so, what will the training consist of, what was the start date in which the training began, and who will be providing such training?

415 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, with regard to the six looked-after children referred to in Question 171/2012, one of them has now been employed through ETCL. The placement commenced on 7th May 2012, details of which I am providing to the Opposition on a 420 confidential basis. The other looked-after children remain unemployed and are being assisted in finding other employment.

425 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in trying to get the mathematics correct, I think we were dealing originally with a figure of six, one of which went to the UK, so we have got a remainder of five, of which one of them... Ah, the one in the UK has come back. So, okay, we have got six, out of which one is in some kind of training or employment prospect, which means that we have five who have not been placed in any form of training or employment.

430 When I first asked this question, way back in January at the commencement of this year, the answer in a supplementary that the Minister for Employment said that at the time there had been confusion between officials of the Care Agency and officials of the Employment Service in passing the paperwork, so to speak, in relation to these five children; hence the reason why the five had not been allocated a training place.

435 The fact remains that, as a result then of that lack of communication between officials of both Departments, we have five children who are in the care of the Care Agency who are not being provided with any form of training or at least employment training – there could be another form of training, of course – but at least no employment training and no job prospect.

435 It does not look well on the basis of the Care Agency, given that we are talking about looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency for which it does not seem that a lot of priority has been given to try and find a suitable place for the children. What is being done by the Care Agency and the Employment Services in order to deal with this situation?

440 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, again, I am loath to go into detail in relation to looked-after children. There is a pathway that has been established (Interjection) –

A Member: It is not political. It is not a political question.

445 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: There has been a pathway (Interjection) that has been established between Social Services and ETB and the ETCL. What we cannot do is force children to accept jobs that are available, which they may not at the time wish to take, but I can tell the hon. Member opposite that he can rest assured that everything that can be done for these children is being done and I am sure that he can congratulate the work of both Social Services and the ETB, in that they have now secured a placement for at least one of them.
450 (Applause)

455 Hon. J J Netto: I will certainly not congratulate either the Care Agency or the Employment Services on the fact that here we are, five months later, and out of a group of six looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency only one has been placed with an employment opportunity. That is a very bad record, not a very good record to congratulate the Government.

460 The Care Agency has a responsibility – it has parental responsibility – for these five children. It is not good enough to say, ‘We are doing excellent work. We have an excellent relationship with the staff in Employment Services.’ It is your responsibility to find places for these particular five children. So I hope that when the next month comes she is in a position to say that these five children, who have been outstanding for a place since January, will be able to be in one particular employment programme.

465 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, perhaps the hon. Member might wish to refresh his memory and recall that these children did not work when they were under the care of the previous Government.
(Interjections)

And, Mr Speaker, once again, (Interjections) I am loath – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

470 Hon. J J Netto: Point of order, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: – when these children can be easily identified, Mr Speaker – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: A point of order has been raised. I will allow the hon. Member to respond. A point of order.

475 Hon. J J Netto: I have not asked the hon. Lady over there what happened in the period when I was the Minister. I have been asking the hon. Lady since January this year what has happened with six looked-after children in the care of the Care Agency, for whom I am trying to find out when they are going to be in an employment programme. Can she put the time and the effort in dealing with that aspect and not spend her time (Interjection) in looking back to what happened four years ago?

480 Mr Speaker: I have heard the point of order. Where there is expressed or implicit in a question criticism of the administration for any act or omission on its part, it is not out of order for the administration to hold up the questioner's record and say, 'Compare that.' It is not out of order.
The Hon. the Minister.

485 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, Mr Speaker, and I only limited it to the hon. Member's track record on employing looked-after children. I did not go into the Hon. Minister's track record of Social Services. (Applause)

490

Care Agency Board Meeting on 28th March 2012

495 Clerk: Question 408, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if the Care Agency Board did meet on 28th March 2012 and, if so, what issues did it discuss, and if consideration has been given to having the possibility of open meetings in the future?

500 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Care Agency Board was unable to meet on 28th March 2012, as planned, due to unavailability of members. A meeting of the Board took place on 24th April 2012 instead.

505 As promised in the last Parliament in answer to Question 289/2012, it was put to the Board whether meetings should be held in public or that the minutes of the meeting be made public and the Board resolved unanimously that it should not.

510 Hon. J J Netto: Not to be public? Sorry, I am not quite clear.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: That it should be not either be held in public or the minutes be made public. Clearly, the hon. Member will recall, and if not, we can refer to Hansard where the Opposition, when this question was asked the last time, did say that there would be no criticism from the Opposition benches if the answer was no.

515

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do not recall saying that, but what I do recall is that, in supplementary questions, the Hon. Minister for Justice, Mr Licudi, who is not in the Chamber now, stood up and he actually said he would certainly look into the matter and he actually went as far as saying that one of the things that had to be considered was that, from time to time, in the agenda of the Board there may be issues with a particular child, which obviously the members of the Board and the Care Agency would not want to put in the public domain.

520

As I see it, normally the Care Agency has another particular Committee, which is a multi-agency Committee, which is a Child Protection Committee, which normally determines and looks into the minutiae of individual cases. So it is not really the Care Agency Board which normally deals with that kind of information. I could understand the logic of the hon. Lady that she would not want to put in the public domain information about a particular looked-after child.

525

I am just failing to understand the reason behind the decision that the hon. Lady has just given. Perhaps she might wish to elaborate, given the fact that sensitive information with regard to children normally is not 530 discussed in the Care Agency Board, but rather in the Child Protection Committee. What is the reason, then, for not allowing the meetings of the Board to be public? Could she perhaps elaborate there?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, first of all I think we need to clarify that it was not my decision, it was a decision of the Board, which is something that I said in answer to the question at the last Parliament, that I would take it to the Board and it would be the Board who would take the decision. The Board resolved not to hold meetings in public or to make the minutes public, unanimously.

I have a copy of Hansard from the last occasion, from which I am happy to read out the extract which relates to the Hon. Mr Feetham, where he says:

540 ‘...but, certainly, on this side of the House, if the Government were to decide not to publish those minutes, we would not be criticising the Government for not doing so.’

If it is of any comfort to the hon. Gentleman, this matter, when it was discussed in the Board, the Board did resolve that certain matters would be made public if the Board felt that it should be made public.

545 If the hon. Member feels so strongly that the Care Agency Board minutes should be made public, then perhaps he would agree to the Board minutes of the last 15 years being made public.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I have not imputed in any form or shape that it is her decision. I take in good faith the fact that it is a decision of the Board. All I am trying to do in my supplementary question is to understand the reasons why the Board, not she, has come to that conclusion. That is all I am trying to understand, and I am trying to understand that from the point of view that if she were to say to me, ‘Well, look, I am afraid the Board has thought that we cannot make the meetings public because they are discussing, every time they have a meeting, detailed amounts of information of a particular child,’ I can understand that. I can accept that she will not want to put that information in the public domain. But given the fact that the amount of detailed information is not discussed normally in the Care Agency Board, but rather in the Child Protection Committee, which is a meeting of professionals, a multi-agency... it covers the Police, the Care Agency, the Health Authority, Education. I am not asking that the Child Protection Committee should be made public. All I am saying is I just want to understand the decision of the Board – why she thinks, or they think rather, that it should not be made public. That is all I am trying to find out, if she can give an explanation.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker: (1) the Opposition is now taking a position which is completely contrary to the position it took on the last occasion; (2) Mr Speaker, I am not at liberty to give the reasoning of the Board because the Board has resolved that it is in private – therefore the reasoning behind the decision is a private decision and I am not at liberty to disclose that; and (3) it is ironic that the hon. Member recognises that the Child Protection Committee is one which should be afforded privacy, given the sensitive matters that it discusses, yet he asks me for what was discussed at the Child Protection Committee as well.

Care Agency
Changes to contract staff contracts

Clerk: Question 409, the Hon. J J Netto.

575 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if the Care Agency has been changing the terms of contract to contract staff members and reducing such contracts to 11 months; and, if so, could the Minister state how many staff members are affected by this measure, broken down by grade and location?

580 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, no existing contracts have been changed and no contracts have been reduced to 11 months.

585 Hon. D A Feetham: What about contracts in terms of future contracts, future recruitments?
Has the Government taken a policy decision to engage people in 11-month contracts?

590 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, there were quite a number of contracts in the Care Agency and in other places registered with the ETB which were 46-week contracts, entered into prior to 8th December. Those contracts, when they expire, are being renewed for a period of months which is no longer than the original one, and any new ones are being made for periods of 46 weeks.

595 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: To be helpful, I think that, under the previous Government, something in the region of 80 contracts were given for an 11-month period. It is not new contracts given by this Government; it was actually a matter of policy of the Care Agency under the previous administration.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, my understanding was that they were... My understanding was not the 11-month contracts, but 12 months' probationary agreements.

600 May I finish, sir? I know that the hon. Lady is keen to answer the question, but perhaps she ought to listen to the question first. They were, effectively, probationary contracts. Whether they were 11 or 12 months, are we talking here of 11-month probationary contracts, or are we talking about fixed-term contracts?

Hon. J J Bossano: Fixed term.

605 Hon. D A Feetham: Fixed term, 11 months.
Thank you.

610 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Yes, to clarify, the practice, which was the practice employed by the previous administration, was to issue people with initial fixed-term contracts of 46 weeks and they were then renewed with probationary contracts after the 46-week period.
I hope that clarifies the answer.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, there was a question yesterday... With the indulgence of the Speaker... If they do not want to answer, they do not have to, but there was a question yesterday asked by my hon. Friend, Mrs Ellul-Hammond, about 10-month contracts in relation to the Health Service: Health Service visitor level 1 nurse, junior occupational health therapist, and a physiotherapist senior 2. Are we seeing... I am just trying to get to whether there is a policy decision behind these contracts, and I think the hon. Gentleman said the reason for that was that they were only required for 10 months. Is that also part of this policy of granting people 10-month or 11-month fixed-term contracts, or not?

620 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the previous administration, on more than one occasion in this House, in answer to my questions told me that when vacancies arose and they took people from outside, they normally tried to time the contracts so that the people who came out of the school or the people who were training in the United Kingdom would then find vacancies here when they got back.

625 The position is that there are a lot of people in the system who came in on that basis, and certainly we are continuing with the policy that, when we have no choice but to bring in people from outside, we bring them in with the intention that they should not remain permanently and block the returning... We have got about 200 graduates coming back this year, and then we have got all the ladies and young men that he has asked me about before, who are in the school, where we had a problem that they are doing a degree for the UK and, in some instances, the UK had a problem with them being employed by the employment company and getting a wage. So there are all those people in the pipeline whom we want to retain, and clearly the timing of the contracts was something to do with that, but it is a policy that was announced a long time ago and which we are still continuing with.

635 Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask the hon. Lady, the Minister for the Care Agency, whether she has had representation from Unite the Union in relation to people who may have been on a three-year contract, whose contract has been unilaterally changed by the Care Agency to 11 months, and Unite the Union is concerned as a result of that?

640 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the answer is no, because no-one who was on a contract for three years has had their contract unilaterally changed for 11 months. I do not see how I could have had representation on something that I can categorically state has not happened.

645 Hon. D A Feetham: Have there been no representations at all from Unite about this policy of giving people 11-month contracts, and no meetings have been arranged with Unite in order to discuss this particular policy at all?

650 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I understand that some of the people who were there had expectations of being made permanent and pensionable, and those people, I believe, have had meetings with their union, but that is not something that I would deal with, because I am only looking at the labour market point of view, not the industrial relations side.

I do not want anything to do with it.

655 Care Agency care workers
GCSE qualifications

Clerk: Question 410, the Hon. J J Netto.

660 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if the previous requirement for applications for the post of care worker to have at least two GCSEs has now been dropped and, if so, do we have new entrants to the Care Agency as care workers who have been employed and do not have two GCSEs?

665 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the policy for admission to the post of care worker has not been changed. Therefore, the two GCSE requisite has not been dropped.

670 HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

675 Government housing waiting lists
Allocation of homes since 9th December 2011

Clerk: Question 411, the Hon. E J Reyes.

680 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state how many of the 962 applicants on the Government's housing waiting lists as at 9th December 2011 have since that date been allocated a flat, giving a breakdown of the size of home and indicating which housing category type they pertained?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

685 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested. However, as it makes its way round to the other side, I can give you the totals, which I think would be helpful.

690 The total of post-War homes is 90 and pre-War 9, so that gives us a total of 99 Government flats that have been allocated since 9th December to people who were actually on the list on 9th December.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 411

A total of 99 of the 962 applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists as at 9th December 2011, have been allocated a flat, as follows:

	Post-War	Pre-war
1RKB	2
2RKB	13	2
3RKB	43	4
4RKB	29	2
5RKB	3	-
6RKB	-	1
TOTAL	90	9

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but perhaps my wording was not entirely clear. I have got here the size of the home and so on, but when I said which housing category type, I thought the Hon. Minister might understand from there, were they as a result of coming up through the normal housing list and it was their turn, or were these people who entered through another list, such as on medical grounds or social grounds or whatever. That is what I meant by the category type.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I understand you now, Mr Speaker, but I just thought you meant the room compositions.

Hon. E J Reyes: Well, Mr Speaker, given that I have now clarified and the Hon. Minister seems to understand what I mean by 'category type', rather than having to wait a full month or whatever, could the Hon. Minister just simply try and locate that information when he goes back to his ministry, perhaps on Monday, and forward it to me, and deposit a copy as well in Parliament, rather than making me wait for a whole month for this information?

I am sorry I was not entirely clear, but I think Mr Speaker might accept that I did give due notice.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I would be happy to do that, but I would request the shadow Minister to write to my office, please.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, that is exactly what I am trying to avoid. I have posed a question. I do not wish to enter now into further delays by having to write and so on. I think the question has been posed.

I accept the genuine, frank reason that the Minister did not quite understand what I meant, but now that he seems to be understanding, I do not think there is a need for me to put anything further in writing, sir.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Could you then, kindly, for the sake of clarity, tell me exactly what you require, and I will make a note straightaway?

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker. What I meant by 'housing category type' is whether they came from the medical housing category list, the social category list, or whatever nomenclature he may give to the list.

Mr Speaker: I must say the question, as posed, 'housing category', may be understood by the hon. Member, but it is pretty wide and it is not quite a... I cannot really hold the Minister to blame that he did not quite follow the question, but –

Hon. E J Reyes: No, I know, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: – if there is a measure of agreement between the two, far be it for me to upset that.

Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps reading very old Hansards as well, when the Hon. Minister was sat on this particular seat where I sit today, he did refer at times to category types, so I thought he might have interpreted it the same way that he used to when he sat on this side of the House.

735 Mr Speaker: But there is a measure of agreement between the two, so I need not add anything to that.

Government housing waiting lists
Reduction in numbers due to house purchase

740

Clerk: Question 412, the Hon. E J Reyes.

745 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many of the 962 applicants on the Government's housing waiting lists as at 9th December 2011 have since that date been removed from the waiting lists due to purchasing their own homes?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

750 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Nineteen applicants have been removed from the lists.

Government housing waiting lists
Allocation of housing to those registered after 9th December 2011

755

Clerk: Question 413, the Hon. E J Reyes.

760 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many homes have been allocated to applicants who registered for housing after 9th December 2011, giving a breakdown of the size of home allocated, broken down into the categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stocks and indicating whether they were assigned on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee or for any other reasons?

765 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, four homes have been allocated to applicants who registered for housing after 9th December 2011. All flats were post-War flats. All of them were allocated by the Housing Authority, in accordance with established procedures.

770 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister did clarify to me last time round that he was the Housing Authority.

775 What I am trying to get at is were they given by the Housing Authority, namely himself, on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee, or, like last time, he happened to just inform the Housing Allocation Committee later that he had approved certain... because someone was handing in a flat and getting another one. What I am trying to get at, really, Mr Speaker, is whether, pre-allocation, the Housing Allocation Committee have been involved in the process, or not.

780 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the reason why I have re-phrased my answers in the way I have done today is because I was the creator, if you like, of the question, which I used to ask the Government. The reality is that the Housing Allocation Committee does, indeed, advise the Housing Authority, but mainly in matters concerning who should go on the medical lists, who should be socially categorised, how many discretionary points should we give to a particular applicant.

785 Therefore, the Housing Allocation Authority does not sit down with me in my office every time we get keys brought from the Housing Agency. We look at the system, we look at the lists, and then whoever's turn it is to get the home gets it, and I sign them all.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that, which he had already clarified in the March session, and he has, for the sake of clarity, repeated again, but my question was not allocated by the Housing Allocation Committee, but assigned on the advice.

What I would repeat – perhaps the Hon. Minister might now understand – is were these applications first viewed by the Housing Allocation Committee, who said, ‘Right, put them on the medical list, or whatever, with this type of priority,’ and then when their turn came they got it; or was it, for some other reason, that they were not necessarily involved prior to allocation, the Housing Allocation Committee advising or guiding the hon. Member how he should allocate?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I really do not know what to add to my previous answer, except to explain to the hon. Member that, whereas many, many years ago it was the Housing Allocation Committee who actually allocated the two or three houses a month that were available, now in fact what happens is we have the Housing Allocation Committee, who are the custodians of the scheme and therefore they are used and their services are very much appreciated. They help the Housing Authority to put the actual scheme into practice.

But, as I say, we, the Housing Authority and the Minister, that Housing Authority allocates every single home for which we get keys given to us.

Hon. E J Reyes: I understand that part, Mr Speaker, but I am still none the wiser. The four that were they were allocated in the manner that the Minister says and so on, before that allocation, had the Housing Allocation Committee offered any advice to the Hon. Minister before that, or not?

That is what was given due notice in my question, whether they were assigned on the advice of the Housing Allocation Committee, and I am just asking, did they offer any advice on those four, or maybe those four had not been referred to them for advice. Whichever the answer I will accept, but one way has to be the answer.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will do my best to give an answer, Mr Speaker, because I am not trying to hide anything.

The reality is that the Housing Allocation Committee does not allocate houses, even though that is what they are still called, and that is where it is misleading. It is now an advisory committee and, of course, they do help the Minister and my staff to allocate points to accept who should be medically categorised, but if what you want to ask me is did the Chief Minister or did the Minister for Housing have a special involvement in any of these, then the answer in this case would be no. The answer is still no if you ask me how many were allocated in accordance with the advice of the Allocation Committee, because they have not been advising me to allocate these homes.

I follow the scheme, and therefore whoever is next on the list will get the home. That is basically it, Mr Speaker.

Hon. E J Reyes: I think we may have understood it now, Mr Speaker.

Yes, I was not asking whether it was the Chief Minister or the Minister for Housing or whatever. What I was getting at was whether these four applications for housing, and the houses have been granted, whether through that process there had been any advice offered by the Housing Allocation Committee. I think I have interpreted that the answer is no, they were not involved in the process. I am not trying to find out who gave whatever. You are the Housing Authority, and I accept you are there, like a marriage – for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer.

Government housing waiting lists Applicants' requirements

Clerk: Question 414, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants are presently on the Government's housing waiting lists, giving a breakdown of their housing size requirements and in which housing category type they are registered?

Again, Mr Speaker, I do not want to create any controversy and I am willing to wait if the hon. Member is now aware of what I meant by 'housing category'. If he does not have it now, we will accept it and put on record that he will furnish me with that information when possible.

845

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, there are currently 1,638 applicants on the Government's housing waiting lists.

850

The breakdown is as follows. I will just read out the answer, even though I think I know that it will be phrased differently next time: 1RKBs – on the waiting list 791, pre-list 433; 2RKBs – waiting list 49, pre-list 42; 3RKBs – waiting list 101, pre-list 71; 4RKBs – on the waiting list 80 and on the pre-list 47; 5RKBs – on the waiting list there are nine, and 11 on the pre-list; and as far as 6RKBs are concerned – that is five-bedroom flats – there are two on the waiting list and two on the pre-list, giving us a total on the waiting list proper of 1,032 applicants, and on the pre-list we have 606.

855

Hon. E J Reyes: I accept that answer, Mr Speaker, and I think we do have on the record that the hon. Member will furnish me with the information, when he gets back in his office, into the housing category types.

860

Housing pre-waiting list Expected date of elimination

865

Clerk: Question 415, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing indicate by what date he expects the housing pre-waiting list to be eliminated?

870

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): We shall be doing this, Mr Speaker, within the current term in office.

Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, if my mathematics are right, it could be any time between now and the next three years and seven months?

Hon. C A Bruzon: That is correct.

880

Government flats
Number available for reallocation since 9th December 2011

885

Clerk: Question 416, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many flats in total have become empty and therefore available for reallocation since 9th December 2011?

890

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, up to 244 flats have become empty and therefore have become available for reallocation since 9th December 2011.

895

Government flats
Number empty and awaiting repairs

900

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs, giving a breakdown in respect of pre-War and post-War flats, flat size composition, the dates as from when these flats have been empty and the category/type of repairs required before they may be reallocated?

905

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 417

Up to 168 flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs.

Table 1 shows the number of empty flats for cleaning/refurbishment (post and pre-war) prioritised by room composition.

Table 2 highlights the number of empty flats per year and room composition. Specific dates per flat cannot be provided.

Clerk: Question 418...

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker.

Clerk: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask the Hon. Minister for Housing what is the average number of flats that, at the 915 moment, the Housing Works Agency is actually refurbishing within a month? Does he know? Has he got an average of what is the output in refurbishment at the moment?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I really would need notice of the question, but off the top of my head I would say that we are getting between maybe 20-25 keys returned to us every month for allocation.

920 There are, in fact, around 130 empty flats as we speak that need to be cleaned up or refurbished. The refurbishing process, of course, takes longer; the cleaning of the flats is much simpler. I would really need notice.

925 Hon. J J Netto: I accept the fact, obviously, that he would need notice of this particular type of question, but he mentioned that, from the top of his head, he reckoned there could be an average of about 20. I am not going to pin him down with this –

Hon. C A Bruzon: I am not 100% sure.

930 Hon. J J Netto: – whether it is 15, whether it is 25, whether it is 30 or not, but when he says 20, accepting that it is from the top of his head, does he mean that those keys which he is getting from the Housing Works Agency includes refurbishment works, includes perhaps flat keys for which there has been no refurbishment but it has just been a question of cleaning the flat? Does it also include keys in which there has been no refurbishment in no flat but perhaps some electrical works, because of some electrical repair that needs to be done?

935 Does he know, does it include – whatever the figure is, whether it is 20, 10 or 30 – all the different matters upon which, at the end of the day, the City Hall, the Department, gets the keys, and it combines the whole lot – the refurbishment, cleaning, electricity etc? Is that correct?

940 Hon. C A Bruzon: Well, today – let's give you an example – I was told that there were seven keys available and, as a matter of interest, as there was a fire alarm in the City Hall and I was doing nothing waiting in the piazza, I got one of my technical people to take me round to have a look at some of these flats. The four that I visited in Laguna Estate had been recently refurbished but, of course, it could have taken a few weeks, if not months, and the ones I saw had been refurbished in the sense that they had a new bath fitted and kitchen units according to the Government standards. So, really, I cannot give you an exact answer.

945 When we get the keys to allocate these homes, whether the flats have been six months empty because there has been refurbishment work being carried out, or whether they have been cleaned out and that has only taken three weeks, in a sense, at the end of the day, all I want is to get keys so that I can allocate homes, so I do not really know when I get the keys whether, in fact, they have been as a result of a long drawn-out refurbishment job or just because they have been cleaned out or painted.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

955 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, sir. Although I accept it and I am grateful to the hon. Member for the schedule here, in my original question there was a specific reference to the dates as from when these flats had been empty, to give us all a better picture to be able to see, if there is some type of pattern, how long it is taking to turn around the handing in of the flat and its completion.

960 The Hon. Minister, in his reply, has kindly stated that the dates had not been possible to obtain as the information was not readily available – I know he has only had one week's notice – and he concludes by saying this will be supplied as soon as possible. I would like to leave it with you, Mr Speaker, that that information will be provided without my having to table a question again here formally in Parliament, because it has been requested –

965 Mr Speaker: That is agreed.

Hon. E J Reyes: – and I accept, in gentleman's terms, the hon. Member's non-availability of the information to date, but his commitment is that it will be furnished to me –

Mr Speaker: That is the way it reads.

970 Hon. E J Reyes: – as soon as possible.

Mr Speaker: Do I have to add anything else?

975

Government housing tenants
Tenants requiring works to properties

980 Clerk: Question 418, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, broken down into categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stock?

985 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 1,627 tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, of which 256 reside in pre-War flats and 1,371 reside in post-War flats.

990 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Housing says, if I understood him correctly, there are 1,627 tenants awaiting repairs to their flats but, of course, a tenant in a particular flat may have reported more than one particular aspect of repair, so the total number of outstanding repairs would most probably be more than 1,627. Does he have the overall figure for the total number of outstanding works that need to be carried out?

Hon. C A Bruzon: If I am not mistaken, there is something on the Order Paper which may provide information.

1000 Hon. E J Reyes: I beg your pardon.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Otherwise, I certainly would need notice of the question.

Hon. E J Reyes: I beg you pardon, Mr Speaker.

Government flats
Previously empty flats repaired and allocated

1010 Clerk: Question 419, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1015 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many of the 149 empty flats awaiting repairs, as identified in answer to Question 290/2012, have now been repaired and allocated to applicants on the housing waiting lists, giving a breakdown in respect of pre-War and post-War flats and their size composition?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1020 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 14 of the 149 empty flats have now been repaired and allocated to applicants on the housing waiting list.

The following provides the repair breakdown: one-bedroom flats, which is commonly referred to as 2RKBs, post-War there are two; 3RKBs, that is two-bedroom flats, post-War nine; and then the 4RKB, which are three-bedroom apartments, we have one pre-War and two post-War.

Homeless persons
Housing allocations

1025

Clerk: Question 420, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1030

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how many housing allocations have been made to homeless persons, since his answer to Question 292/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1035

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, four housing allocations have been made to homeless persons since the answer to Question 292/2012.

Government housing
Applications from homeless persons

1040

Clerk: Question 421, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1045

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how many applications from homeless persons are currently being dealt with, giving a breakdown of dates as from when these applications were made?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 18 applications from homeless persons are currently being dealt with by the Ministry.

The breakdown of the dates is as follows: June 2010, two; October 2010, one; November 2010, four; December 2010, one; March 2011, one; May 2011, one; December 2011, one; January 2011, two; March 2012, three; and April 2012, two.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, for the sake of clarity, the figure two, pertaining to January, is that January 2012 or 2011?

If the Hon. Minister would like to read for me the last three – January, 2012 was two...

Hon. C A Bruzon: Sure. January 2012, two; March 2012, three; and April 2012, two.

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. My figures do not quite tally up, and perhaps the Hon. Minister may have some information that would enlighten me.

In March 2012, there were 25 applications from homeless persons and if we are currently left with 18, one would have assumed automatically that seven have been allocated; but in answer to previous Question No. 420, earlier on this afternoon, only four have been allocated, so there is a discrepancy of three. Can we tally up those figures somehow?

1065

Hon. C A Bruzon: If you would be kind enough to just put it on a note and give it to me in the ante Chamber and I will investigate.

1070

Hon. E J Reyes: Good enough, Mr Speaker.

Housing tenants
Pending repairs completed

1075

Clerk: Question 422, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants, since his collective answer to Question Nos. 295 to 298/2012, have had their pending repairs completed, giving a breakdown of how many were internal or external repairs, broken down into categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 422

Since the collective answer given to Question No. 295 to 298 of 2012, there have been a total of 252 tenants that had 326 jobs completed, as follows:-

Internals
Pre-War	7 completed jobs for	4 different tenants
Post-War	133 completed jobs for	120 different tenants
Total	140	124

Externals
Pre-War	20 completed jobs for	17 different tenants
Post-War	166 completed jobs for	111 different tenants
Total	186	128

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will just read out some information as we wait for it to be circulated.

Since the collective... there have been a total of 252 tenants that had 326 jobs completed.

The rest of the information is on the... (Interjection) You have got the information now in front of you – I think. No, it has not got to you yet.

Government rental flats
Repairs completed

Clerk: Question 423, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs, since his collective answer to Question Nos. 295 to 298/2012, have been completed in respect of Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of how many were internal or external repairs and the nature of works undertaken, broken down into the categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I have just handed over to the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 423

Since my collective answer to Question Nos. 295 to 298 of 2012, there have been 784 jobs completed in respect of Government rental flats.

Out of this total, 598 jobs were internal jobs completed by the Housing Works Agency and 186 were external jobs completed by the Ministry for Housing. These are further broken down as follows:

Work category - Internal repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bathroom unit replacement	1	21	22
Carpentry repairs	13	49	62
Cleaning of flat	5	18	23
Drains, rodding and cleaning	5	4	9
Emergency repairs	41	204	245
Masonry repair	2	18	20
O/T repairs/refurbishments	-	12	12
Other - asbestos removal	1	5	6
Painting	-	21	21
Plumbing repairs	13	156	169
Refurbishment - empty flat	1	8	9
TOTAL	82	516	598

Work category - External repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
General	19	111	130
Drains	1	4	5
Lifts	-	49	49
Electricity	-	2	2
TOTAL	20	166	186

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can I ask nicely: the Hon. Minister might be able to identify a typographical error. In the schedule he has handed over to me, it says:

1110 'Since my collective answer to Question No. 291...

My question posed collective answer to question 295 and a quick looking back at what question 291 was, 291 referred to additional applicants for housing and so on.

1115 So am I correct, shall we amend it for the record today – that it is a simple typographical error and should reflect 'Question Nos. 295 to 298' in the schedule handed over?

The Clerk will have to really find this extremely useful when he comes to compile the Hansard, for which he is extremely efficient.

1120 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. Minister for Housing, within the information he has provided, in the first column in which he actually put the works category, the breakdown there amongst those particular building elements of what category he has amongst the others, emergency repairs – one of the many which is listed there – does the Housing Works Agency record a response time for everything that comes under the emergency repair category, in order to respond to do this particular work – even though we are dealing with whatever it is, emergency work?

Hon. C A Bruzon: There is, in fact, a question that maybe will answer that, later on in the Order Paper.

Hon. J J Netto: I am jumping the gun too soon.

1130

Housing Agency
New jobs added to list

Clerk: Question 424, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many new jobs have been added to the list requiring the attention of the Housing Ministry, since the answer given to Question No. 298/2012, stating the nature of the work required to be undertaken and broken down into categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 424

Since 15th March 2012, there have been 870 new jobs added to the list.

137 appertain to external works and 716 to internals, which are as follows:-

External Works
Work Category	Pre-War	Post-War	Total
Window, Shutters	11	57	68
Plumbing	9	10	19
External	9	25	34
Making Safe	1	7	8
Letter Boxes	-	25	25
Total	30	124	154

Internal Works
Work Category	Pre-War	Post-War	Total
Bath or Shower conversion	-	19	19
Bathroom Unit replacement	4	27	31
Carpentry repairs	21	60	81
Cleaning of flat	7	25	32
Drains, rodding and cleaning	7	8	15
Emergency repairs	48	235	283
Masonry repair	5	12	17
Other	1	4	5
O/T Repairs/Refurbishment	1	11	12
Painting	1	24	25
Plumbing repairs	20	163	183
Refurbishment – Empty flats	2	11	13
Total	117	599	716

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Housing Minister, within the schedule he has just provided us with, on the ones on internal work, if he goes down to where it says 'Bath or shower conversions' and then he has 'pre-War' and 'post-War', the one thing that comes to mind – and I wonder whether he has got the information – was that I think it was in one of our first parliamentary sessions, either in January or perhaps February, I did ask from the elderly side, that I was concerned of the delays in actually taking away all baths which were broken and fixing new showers, which was a demand by the elderly people and I remember quite... The answer that the hon. Gentleman gave me was that within three months – it was quite a bold answer, I thought – all the showers that the elderly people have put requests in to have fitted would be done.

1155 I was now wondering whether he is now in a position to state whether all those requests for showers to be installed by the elderly have now been done within... Well, I thought it was too bold to say three months; it would have been better to say a much longer period, perhaps – it would have been fantastic – but is he now in a position to say that all the outstanding work has been done?

1160 Hon. C A Bruzon: No, I am not in a position to say that.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, perhaps, if I do remember and I write to the hon. Gentleman, requesting this information, could he provide it for me?

1165 Hon. C A Bruzon: I certainly will.

Hon. J J Netto: I am much obliged, Mr Speaker.

1170

Housing Authority contracted work
Details of jobs

1175 Clerk: Question 425, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs have been contracted out, stating the date, nature of work, estimated cost and to which companies, by the Housing Ministry, since the answer given to Question No. 299/2012 and broken down into categories of both pre-War and post-War housing stock?

1180 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 425

Since the answer given to Question No. 299 of 2012, the Housing Ministry has contracted 6 jobs as follows:-

Date	Work Category	Estimated Cost	Company	Type of Housing Stock
09/03/12	Plumbing repairs	£690	Gemini	Post-War
26/03/12	Plumbing repairs	£780	Gemini	Pre-War
27/03/12	Plumbing repairs	£800	Gemini	Post-War
03/04/12	Plumbing repairs	£700	Gemini	Pre-War
03/04/12	Plumbing repairs	£700	Mersey Castle	Pre-War
26/04/12	Plumbing repairs	£800	Gemini	Post-War

1185 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if I may, perhaps the Hon. Minister does have the information and could enlighten us.

1190 This list provides information I did ask for and, in the breakdown, he kindly categorises it, that they have been planning repairs. Was this because the Housing Works Agency does not have the workforce available at that particular moment in time to carry out these works, or is it because, due to some sort of exceptional circumstances and deadlines in which to meet emergency repair, whatever, that is the reason why they were contracted out?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I believe we did discuss this last time, and the reality is that the aim of the Housing Authority is to allocate as many homes to the applicants as quickly as possible, so there are times when we 1195 do, indeed, have to employ small companies to carry out work for us – mainly the external works.

1200 Hon. E J Reyes: Alright, Mr Speaker, but we can certainly deduce from there that, if at all possible, the priority to undertake this work is first looked into by doing it from existing workforce within the Housing Agency, before contracting out and this contracting out, is it determined because of the cost level and that has been an influencing factor that the Minister has then decided, ‘Right, let’s contract out’ or what has influenced the contracting out, rather than leaving it for the workforce to handle?

1205 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the original agreement entered into by the previous administration divided the work as to external and internal, and the people who were retained in the Housing Department were responsible for supervising the work of contractors who were all doing external work. The people who were retained in the Agency were all doing internal work.

1210 We have reviewed that on the basis of size and complexity so that if, given the fact that there was an early exit package, and that in some areas the numbers that left were such that are very few of that particular trade left behind, it means that in some areas the direct labour sometimes is not enough to deal with everything and, therefore, that is contracted out.

1215 But the original thing was based on whether it was internal or external, whereas now it is based on the capability of the numbers that are in the Agency and the magnitude or complexity of the job. It does mean, of course, that most of the external things that require scaffolding and all that sort of thing goes outside. But it can also mean there can be a complicated inside job like lifting up the floorboards, for which we may not have the manpower.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you for that, Mr Speaker. Yes, that answer is acceptable.

1220 So when he came to these particular cases, I think the Hon. Minister may have mentioned, although it is not written here... I think they refer to all external cases, don’t they?

It is not written down here but I think in passing, in his oral contributions to this, I think he mentioned the word ‘external’ –

Hon. C A Bruzon: Your interpretation is – 1225 Hon. E J Reyes: – so can I add that here, as de facto that they were external works?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes.

1230 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask, because in listening to the comments by the Minister for Employment, I accept the fact that the particular job may be complicated or specialised, maybe the need that the Housing Works Agency may have to outsource a particular job to a private sector contractor, that when we look at these particular lists, in the schedule which has been provided to us, and we look at the estimated costs, it is quite low – all of them, in fact, less than £1,000, and all of them are dealing with jobs that are not complicated, because they are planned jobs. Then, in my mind, the question that arises is that this is not a job that has been contracted out because it is complicated and equipment or resources may not be in-house. So there must be some other reason, other than being complicated for which the Department has contracted work.

1235 Is it perhaps – and I am asking in the form of a question – that these particular jobs, although the first column provides the date when the jobs were done, have been outstanding for a very long period of time from the date in which the tenant may have reported initially and, as a result of the long delay that the tenant has been waiting for the repairs, that the Housing Works Agency may have taken the decision to contract it out? This goes back to the question I am trying to establish whether the Housing Works Agency has a particular response time for every particular type or category of work – in other words, if it is an emergency and the emergency needs to be done because the nature of the emergency is that it may need to be done in 48 hours – but if for whatever reason the Housing Works Agency cannot do it, then these particular jobs, which are an emergency, need to be carried out for the benefit of the tenant, and then the Housing Works Agency may decide that if the Housing Works Agency cannot do it, then it needs to be contracted out – I can understand that logic.

1245 But one cannot derive from the information supplied here, given that we are talking about jobs which are very low in monetary value and – I am not trying to degrade plumbing jobs, but plumbing jobs are not 1250 something which require a lot of people. It is probably done by one particular person, as opposed to a team of plumbers, which can be more complicated in terms of doing a big installation.

So I am trying to establish the reason behind why the jobs were contracted. Can the hon. Member perhaps provide some sensible, logical reason?

1255 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, on the basis of what I am trying to do, it is provide a sensible logical reason, which may or may not be correct, I will point out that, in every case, the contractor is a scaffolding company. Therefore, if these are all jobs that have been done by scaffolding company, it is possible that although they are called plumbing repairs may have to do with things like gutters and downpipes.

1260 All the companies there, all the contractors, in every single case is a scaffolding company.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, when I looked at it, that is what I thought this might relate to, and in fact you can actually see that the amounts are pretty uniform.

1265 Unfortunately, the actual answer could have been phrased better because all it needed to have said is 'scaffolding for plumbing repairs' and we would have all been... It would have answered the question.

Clerk: Question 426, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I come back on this, please?

1270 Mr Speaker: Yes, certainly, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just in relation to this, and assuming that, of course, there is scaffolding, how does one determine who actually gets the contract in relation to these particular jobs – is this done on a roster, is it done by tender, is it done by direct allocation, at the discretion of the Minister, or somebody within his Department? How exactly is it done?

1280 Hon. J J Bossano: In all the cases where it is possible to use the scaffolding that is owned by the Government, the scaffolding company has just paid for putting it up or taking it down, and there is a standard charge, which they all charge the same. So, basically, it is shared around so that ...

In fact, if too much was given to one company, it would not be able to do it. There is a limited number of scaffolders in the market, and they are spread across four companies and the work of the Government keeps them going all the time.

1285 Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is, effectively, that there are four or five of these companies and then there is a rota and they share the job in accordance to whether somebody has done a job before, then it is somebody else's turn, and somebody else's turn – is that how it is done?

1290 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not quite like that. It is not whether it is a roster and they take a turn because, in fact, it is just that the work that is put out, you could not put out more scaffolding work than the market can do because, otherwise, you would then finish up bringing in people from outside, which is not something we particularly want to encourage.

So the fact is that if somebody, for example, has got the contract to put up a lot of scaffolding in the Alameda Estate, that is quite a big scaffolding job. So you could not say 'You are number 4 and it is your turn again', because it could be a long time up there.

1295 It is really... the fact is that when they start running out of work, they come back asking for more. It depends on the size of the job they are doing, they are working on.

Hon. D A Feetham: And, hopefully, we are talking about standard fees – that is why these are, in fact, very close figures that we are talking about in this schedule that was handed by the Hon. Minister.

1300 Hon. J J Bossano: Where there is a difference, it is because, in fact, they are providing the scaffolding and then as well as putting it up, and taking it down, they provide for hire. Clearly, the Government seeks to avoid hiring scaffolding for as long as it can do the work with the stuff that it already owns and therefore it is the one that it owns, the rate for putting it up is so many pounds per metre and everybody charges more or less 1305 the same. I doubt if there is more than a few pennies between one company and the other.

1310 Co-ownership housing estates
Meetings with management companies

Clerk: Question 426, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1315 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state if he has, since his answer to Question No. 301/2012, held meetings with any management companies of co-ownership housing estates in order to address the issue of increasing service charges and/or other concerns?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1320 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): I will read out, Mr Speaker, exactly what I have got here and then I will give an explanation, because I am sure there will be a supplementary.

Mr Speaker, no member of any such management companies of co-ownership housing estates have yet approached us to have such a meeting.

1325 I would like to explain to the hon. Member that we did say, some months ago, that we were trying to organise such a meeting, but that we have been unsuccessful in getting down to the bottom of who are these people? Really, the procedure should be that whoever wants to see the Minister – whether it is the Alameda tenants' estates or whether it is a Home Ownership Association, the procedure is that they phone or write to my secretary and I would most certainly fit them in.

1330 So, really, I have still been unsuccessful in having such a meeting, but I would encourage whoever is interested in seeing the Minister just to ask for a meeting and I will give it to them.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I think that that is a slight variation from what I understood in the answers given by the Hon. Minister last time round. The Hon. Minister did say, in the last parliamentary session, that – to use his words:

1335 'What I am doing is that I am meeting a number of representatives of housing estates –' – hundreds and hundreds of individuals and so on–

1340 '– and the reality is that I know that the Chief Minister is interested to be present at this meeting and, therefore – he is not in the House now – but I would suggest that... or if I could ask a rhetorical question... if the Member is speaking on behalf of a particular group,' that he writes to us and I clarified that I was not speaking on behalf of any group.

1345 So I was led to believe, Mr Speaker, that this was work in progress or a matter at hand, and I accepted it in the Hon. Minister's explanation that it was more a question of co-ordinating dates with the Chief Minister, when he could be available, and so on.

1350 Now it seems to have taken a different turn, and now it seems that, if I have interpreted his answer correctly, we do not have any pending requests to meet with anyone from these co-ownership housing estates.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I did succeed in having a meeting with Brian Francis Associates, who apparently are managing agents of some of these associations. But that is as far as I have got, and I think the Chief Minister has also had a meeting with them.

1355 But, really, as far as meetings with home owners who are dissatisfied with any increase in service charges, I imagine that the onus will be on them to try to come to us, because there is a mention in our manifesto that we will do our best to help in any way we can.

1360 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, if we go right back to Friday, 20th January, when I raised the matter of increasing service charges and so on and I even made available to the Hon. Minister, just outside your office in the antechamber, an example of a copy of these sort of increased service charges and so on, he has been leading me to believe that it was a matter that would be tackled and that he was going to meet with the groups and, looking here at the questions and answers all the time, there is no signal here at any stage, other than to say that it is a matter at hand and I am just waiting to see what developments there have been.

1365 So I am still taken a bit by surprise to realise now that... Am I correct in saying that now, in order to tackle the issue of increased service charges, it is up to the management companies or these co-ownership housing estates to have to request a meeting with you? Am I correct in that interpretation?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the truth is that I have tried to get my staff to see if they can establish who the contact people are and they have not been successful.

1370 So that is the simple truth, Mr Speaker.

Again, I repeat there is a mention in our manifesto that should there be any members of such associations who are concerned about unreasonable increases in service charges, then we will see if we can help. But as Housing Minister, my responsibility is really to look after the rental accommodation of Government housing.

1375 I sometimes wonder where I fit in, in all this, except that there is a mention in the manifesto and it falls into my... It is close to my photograph! Maybe that is why they want to come to me, and I shall be happy to receive them and see them.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, can I remind the hon. Gentleman of the manifesto commitment:

1380 'We will work with the management companies in all Government co-ownership housing estates where there are problems with the level of service charges in order to address the issue and consider ways of containing costs.'

1385 Does he, in light of the fact that he has not received representations from management companies on the issue of service charges, concede that, in fact, there appears to be no problem with the issue of service charges, much like there was no problem with all those battalions of Gibraltarians living in Spain (Laughter) – which he conceded on the last occasion? There were only two or three people making demand of the Hon. Minister. (Interjection)

1390 Hon. C A Bruzon: Well, I made no reference to 'battalions' but if the member of the Opposition wants to be poetic, I would prepare to accept that and smile!

The answer is that there does not seem to be serious problems – at least they have not come to my ears. I do acknowledge that the hon. Member sitting opposite – my opposite number – did share with me some concern, but that is as far as it has gone. The actual managing agents – maybe that is what they probably would say – they say here that the service charges are quite low, as they have not increased in around 20 years, with the exception of a recent 3.8% increase, in line with the cost of living.

1395 Of course, some people obviously are not happy with that, but I repeat, Mr Speaker, I receive hundreds of tenants, I receive a number of associations, and these meetings are arranged. I do not go out of my office: 'Does anybody want to talk to me? Is anybody interested to come to me with a problem?' I do not do that, but I shall be happy if somebody...

1400 If you know the names, give them to me and my secretary will phone them and I will genuinely try to see if I can offer help.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I know the Hon. Minister was just referring to information passed on to him – I do not know if I am correct in saying – I doubt the veracity: there has been no increase in service charges for 20 years? In respect of what estate is he talking about?

Hon. C A Bruzon: This quotation may refer to some specific area, so I would qualify that – in other words, it may not refer to the one that you are thinking of. We had better leave it at that!

1410 Hon. E J Reyes: Certainly, Mr Speaker. I wanted to go down on the record. Certainly the one where I live there have been annual increases for the past twenty years and so I cannot accept there has been no increase.

1415 Yes, Mr Speaker, for the record – and I know the Hon. Minister accepted this last time – there are concerns amongst residents here of increased service charges and there is a record from the hon. Member, especially when he was sat on this side of the desk, he did go out on balconies and rooftops and say, 'Here I am. If anyone has any problems, come and look for me.' So he cannot now pretend to be doing otherwise, otherwise he is failing the electorate because that was his style and was why people chose him to sit on that side of the House.

1420 Hon. C A Bruzon: Whether his comparison is valid or invalid, I would suggest that we move on.

I do repeat that I get many, many requests from tenants, many requests from associations, and I receive them into my office and we look at their concerns and we try to help and the same would apply to the homeowners.

1425 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I accept that, Mr Speaker, and I also know that he does get many requests and they are still waiting five months on for at least to be given an appointment time, but I suppose that is the nature of his workload and I accept that the Hon. Minister means well. I think he can conclude this exchange by at least reassuring me and the public at large that he will do his utmost to see as many people as soon as possible because some of have been waiting for at least an appointment time for quite some months now.

Government rental flats
Details of pending or incomplete repair jobs

1435 Clerk: Question 427, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1440 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs are currently listed as pending or incomplete in Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of internal and external repairs, as well as stating the nature of these works and by whom they are or will be carried out broken down into the categories of both Pre-War and Post-War housing stock?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1445 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I am now in the process of handing over to the hon. Members a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 427

I submit a reply to this question primarily broken down by (a) internal jobs and (b) external jobs, as follows:

(a) There are 680 internal jobs currently listed as pending within the Housing Works Agency. These jobs are categorised as follows:-

Work Category – Internal Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bath for shower conversion	1	24	25
Bathroom Unit replacement	7	46	53
Carpentry repairs	37	100	137
Cleaning of flat	7	11	18
Drains, rodding and cleaning	2	7	9
Emergency repairs	7	51	58
Masonry repairs	13	40	53
O/T Repairs/refurbishments	3	40	43
Painting	7	71	78
Plumbing repairs	25	149	174
Refurbishment – empty flats	6	26	32
TOTAL	115	565	680

(b) There are 3034 external jobs currently listed as pending to be carried out by external works contractors. External jobs vary in nature ranging from repairs to building fabric, to waterproofing/roofing. It is impossible to deliver a detailed categorisation of all 3034 jobs within the required timescale. The following condensed categorisation applies:

Work Category – External Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
External Building Contractors	571	1857	2428
Windows Replacement Contractors	-	606	606
TOTAL	571	2463	3034

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that, Mr Speaker.

1450 I know I did not ask for it and I am just going to ask in case the Hon. Minister does have some further information pending... Any idea of how long, perhaps, some of these jobs have been? I think I had better, Mr Speaker, give due notice of that question for next time round so we can try and emerge a pattern to see how long, justifiably or not, some tenants are saying that they are having to wait a bit too long.

1455 Hon. C A Bruzon: I appreciate that, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

1460 Hon. J J Netto: If I could ask a supplementary question to the Hon. Minister?

1465 From the information provided in the schedule, it is stating down in (b) that there are 3,034 external jobs can be listed, as pending to be carried out by external work contractor. External jobs vary in nature ranging from repairs to building fabric, to waterproofing/roofing. Given that we are now entering the better weather in the cycle of the year, is there within the Housing Works Agency a programme to prioritise, perhaps, all these external jobs, particularly if some of the jobs outstanding, external ones, are roofs, because this would be the time of the year to do it, as opposed to doing it in the winter months?

So could the Minister perhaps provide information whether, within the schedule of works being organised by the Housing Works Agency, priority will be given to external work, particularly to roofs?

1470 Hon. C A Bruzon: As it happens, Mr Speaker, when I talk to my Technical Department we often consider that point, exactly as the Shadow Minister has, in fact, indicated. Before the rains come next winter, let us get on with the job of repairing roofs and any cracks on the side of buildings which will create problems for the tenants. So I do not know if that is a satisfactory response?

1475 Hon. J J Netto: Well, it goes somehow to answering the supplementary question, but perhaps what I was trying to obtain was whether, within the workforce of the Housing Works Agency, perhaps there is a dedicated group of tradesmen who are now given this type of work to prioritise in order to ascertain that, before the winter comes along, at least for works to do with roofs that are leaking, water penetrating through perhaps, that that particular job is done now, with the good weather, as opposed to doing it in the months of January, February or March. Is that the case?

1480 Hon. C A Bruzon: I believe the answer should be yes, and I hope it is yes, but I do not want to give a categorical ‘yes’ because I would have to check with my people. But I imagine that there must be people with the technical skills to talk about these things and to ensure that whatever jobs can be done before the winter rains come, will be done.

I could add, Mr Speaker, just for the... that we are still catching up with a backlog of jobs. In fact, since April 1st to October 30th in 2011, the previous administration did not execute one single outstanding or new report appertaining to external defects. This increased the already substantial backlog of reports. (Applause)

1490 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, my hon. Friend, Mr Reyes, has had to leave the House. He has received some news that a family member has had to be taken to hospital, so he has asked me to ask the questions of the hon. Gentleman.

Mr Speaker: Most certainly. Yes.

Reports of unsafe dwellings
Numbers pending completion; decanting of tenants

1500 Clerk: Question 428, the Hon. D A Feetham, on behalf of the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Housing state how many reports of unsafe dwellings are currently pending to be completed and how many of these require urgent decanting of tenants due to Health and Safety regulations... or considerations? I beg your pardon.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): There are no pending dwellings requiring completion that are deemed unsafe and none requiring decanting due to Health and Safety considerations.

Clerk: Question 4 –

Hon. D A Feetham: Sorry, my friend, Mr Reyes, for listeners into parliamentary proceedings, is now back. I am glad to say that everything appears to be okay.

Can Mr Reyes have a moment to consider whether he has a supplementary question?

Mr Speaker: Yes, of course. I understand the Hon. Jaime Netto has a question in the meantime and that will give the Hon. Edwin Reyes some more thinking time.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask the Minister for Housing, although I believe he has just stated that there are no unsafe dwellings that require urgent decanting of tenants due to Health and Safety considerations, could I perhaps ask the supplementary question in a slightly different way, whether he has received any reports perhaps, by the Housing Inspectors, to the effect that there are some dwellings which are not fit for purpose for which there are sitting tenants?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I can confirm, Mr Speaker, that there are a number of tenants that are down for decanting, either because there are continuing problems with dampness, bad smells and all that kind of thing; but that does not come under the category of requiring completion... unsafe. Sometimes a building is unsafe and if a building is going to collapse then, of course, that is different.

So the answer is what I have been given, which I am happy to read out again for the benefit of the Hon. Edwin Reyes: there are no pending dwellings requiring completion that are deemed unsafe and none requiring decanting due to Health and Safety considerations.

Housing Agency Response time targets for repairs

Clerk: Question 429, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Does the Ministry for Housing have specific response time targets in respect of the different categories or types of repairs to be undertaken and are these targets presently being met?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, in the case of emergencies, the Ministry for Housing will attend on the same day and make safe.

Other works are attended to as soon and as efficiently as possible.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I take on board what the Minister has said in relation to emergencies, that personnel will attend within a particular day and make safe. However, there are – just looking at the information given during the course of this afternoon by the hon. Member – some other categories of work, for instance OT repairs/refurbishments and perhaps even asbestos removal.

I am surprised that, perhaps, the Housing Department is not necessarily working or liaising as closely perhaps as it should with the Health Authority and perhaps the Care Agency, because one of the things in my experience is that there are referrals either done by the OT in the Health Authority, which are then passed on... well, used to be passed on, actually, to the Social Security Department rather than to the Social Services Department for which there are tenants, either in Government dwellings or perhaps even residents in home ownership schemes for which some repairs or fitting some equipment from the OT is concerned that needs to be carried out.

So the point I am trying to make, perhaps, if I can change it into the form of a question, is whether the Housing Department or the Housing Works Agency will not consider working closer perhaps with the Health Authority and perhaps the Social Security in relation to having a response time for the work coming out from the occupational therapies included into this field. I think that when there is a referral by the OT, by definition there is a medical issue involved and I think that we would all welcome, both sides of the House would all welcome, if there is a response time to execute such work.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I am not too keen, Mr Speaker, on exact response times – one week, one month, three months. I am a great believer that if the job has to be done it has got to be done as efficiently and as quickly as possible. I do not want my workforce to say, ‘Ah, I have still got another six weeks to do this.’ That is why the culture that I try to create (Interjection) is that jobs have to be done as quickly and as efficiently as possible and I encourage the labour force, the workforce that work under me, to get on with the job and earn the bonuses that they are being offered and that kind of thing, but I have not got...

The question itself, if I may say so, Mr Speaker, refers to types of repairs, and there are thousands of different types of repairs. Lots of different categories, targets, you know... and the answer is that if it is an emergency, like a burst pipe, the plumber will go and turn off the mains. So the emergency is over for that moment. Then, as soon as possible, they will go and repair the plumbing.

Other jobs, Mr Speaker, they have to be addressed by the workforce as quickly and as efficiently as possible. I do not have information as to exact targets in terms of weeks, months or years. The question maybe should have been rephrased or put before me a bit better, if I may suggest it, because there can be external works, external repairs. You cannot give a target. You give a completion date, roughly, you know, but you cannot say that it will be ready in three weeks or in one year. You just do your best. If it is a small job, then it should be done asap.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect to the Hon. Minister, no-one is trying to suggest that the wheel should be invented, in the sense of being able to collect information and then translate that information into categories of response time.

Look at local authorities in the UK: this is already done. In fact, the people who probably provided the answer to the legal questions, are very much aware of the kind of language that I am referring to, when I say ‘response time’. So perhaps they should have prepared you a little bit better, in the sense of knowing what other building elements would constitute a response time to attend, as opposed to the completion of the job, which is a different thing, because that would depend on the specification of the job, but I would have thought – and I just leave it for him to take it away and have a discussion with the Minister for Health, in particular – that there will be within the workload of the occupational therapies – and I know this from experience – a number of jobs of individuals, either in Government dwellings... or residents in home ownership schemes, who have a number of medical ailments and they need to do work in order to accommodate the medical evidence.

I think all of us would agree that people in those categories would need to be prioritised. Now, to the degree they are prioritised is a matter for the Government to decide, so I think that a priority should be given.

So that is one category of people that I think he ought to take away and consider. The other one, of course, is the question of asbestos removal, because if the Hon. Minister for Housing has on his desk a report that has been given by officials, whether they are housing officials, or officials from the factory inspectors, in fact, on the question whether asbestos has been tampered and there is airborne fibre on the particular premises, then you have got to have a response time to deal with that because, again, you are dealing with health matters, so can I just end up by saying to the Hon. Minister, will he not consider going back to his officials, looking at areas where he needs to prioritise in accordance with the type of work it is and perhaps have a discussion with the Minister for Health in relation to work being provided by the occupational therapist?

Hon. C A Bruzon: I know that, in the reports, when reports are put forward, there is a distinction between very urgent, urgent and routine – that kind of thing. Maybe that is what you are getting at and you should make sure that if something is very urgent, it should be done within a specific period of time, if it is possible.

That is what you are getting at.

1615 I am sure that that happens. It is just that I would need to look into the subject matter more thoroughly to be able to provide an accurate answer but I think, Mr Speaker, that is my contribution on that Question, so I think my colleagues may want to say something else.

1620 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, although this is not a direct supplementary, I can inform the House that adjustments in the workload of the occupational therapists means that now we have occupational therapists dedicating much more time than before December to assessments in people's homes. There are regular meetings of multi-disciplinary teams and a number of repairs have been carried out, and are in the process of being carried out, including the famous Albert Risso House, which was not fit for some of the elderly people who were put there and we are putting that right.

1625 Hon. J J Netto: With respect to the Minister for Housing, he seems to be more concerned with scoring a cheap political point than addressing the issue which I am saying.

1630 The issue I am saying is not whether he has more occupational therapists to do more surveys. If he has them, good for the Health Authority, good for the people of Gibraltar. The issue I am raising is that, once the services are done by the occupational therapists, there is an amount of jobs on all the service of people that work needs to be done and I am saying, the only thing I am saying in my supplementary is that there need to be, once the service is completed, a response time for all those services of all those people which have outstanding work to be done and that is the point I am making.

1635 The point I making is, will he not, regardless of the amount of people he must employ, regardless of the amount of service done, that once the service is done, is not lying idle on a table, but that there is communication and prioritisation of the work from the Health Authority and the Housing Department for the benefit of the people that are working to be done? That is the point I am making.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I can assure you that things lie idle on our tables much less than they used to lie idle before. (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

1640

Housing Agency staff
Retirements and transfers; new employees

1645 Clerk: Question 430, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1650 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many employees have retired or transferred, indicating effective dates, from the Housing Agency since 9th December 2011 and how many new employees have been engaged by the Agency since then in accordance with the agreement reached between Government and the unions?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1655 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, since 9th December 2011, a total of nine employees have been retired or transferred as follows:

2 – 31st December 2011

1 – 6th February 2012

1 – 13th March 2012

1660 2 – 14th March 2012

2 – 19th March 2012

1 – 6th April 2012

As to new employees, none have been engaged since 9th December.

Hon. E J Reyes: Just for the sake of clarity, all the nine have been transferred, none are retired?

Hon. C A Bruzon: The answer that has been given to me – I have got to be honest, it says here, 'number 1665 of employees transferred/retired' so if he wants further information on that, I can provide it.

Hon. E J Reyes: My question did ask how many have retired or transferred and I would have thought it was not unreasonable to know the breakdown of who was retired and who was transferred.

1670 I have to accept the hon. Member does not have that fact but, again, under the previous gentleman's understanding, he can furnish me with that information, when he is available in his office next week.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I will provide the information to my hon. opposite number.

1675 Clerk: Question 431.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a supplementary question to the Hon. Minister?

1680 My understanding, unless I am mistaken, is that the agreement reached between the union and the Government, the GSD Government at the time, was, if I am right, for every two employees that retired, the Agency would employ one. So therefore is that still standing? If we find out once this clarification on how many are retired or transferred, once we find out, for argument's sake, that out of the nine, four have been retired, so leaving aside the ones transferred, will it therefore follow that two people would be employed for the Housing Works Agency in accordance with agreement with the union?

1685 Hon. C A Bruzon: We shall have to wait and see.

1690 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I am not asking him to wait and see for the clarification how many are retired or transferred, all I am asking is whether the present Government will honour the GSD Government agreement with the union that, for every two persons that retire, one would be employed. You do not have to 'wait and see'. It is either a yes or a no.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the answer is, Mr Speaker, the Government will honour the agreement, it does not mean that we are accepting that the agreement is as the hon. Member says. It may say that, or it may not. I do not know what it says.

1695 Hon. J J Netto: If it does say that, will it be honoured?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, if it does say that, then it will be honoured, but it may not say that.

1700 Hon. J J Netto: Fine.

Housing Agency Employee in charge

1705 Clerk: Question 431. The Hon. E J Reyes.

1710 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say which employee is presently in charge of the Housing Agency, stating his or her grade, salary scale and date of appointment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1715 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the employee who was deputy in January this year, is presently charged with the day-to-day running of the Housing Works Agency, and there has been no change to his grade or salary.

Hon. E J Reyes: When the Hon. Minister says this person was deputy in January, is it that the appointment of deputy was made in January, or he happened to be appointed before and was just incumbent in January?

1720 Hon. D A Feetham: So is he doing it on an acting capacity?

1725 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, there is no vacancy to be filled in which anybody is acting. The decision that was taken was that the post would not be filled and would be discontinued and, consequently, the person is doing the job that he was doing before, which, in the judgement of the Agency and the Government, did not require two people to do. It only required one.

1730 Hon. D A Feetham: And is it the Government's intention to come to this House and amend the relevant Act to do away with the post of Chief Executive of the Agency, because that is a statutory requirement. So, at the moment what we have is, there is a statutory requirement that you have a CEO, I think it was, and that post... they have taken a political decision, effectively, to abolish the... not to fill the post, but still there is a statutory requirement to have that particular post, so one would have thought that – and I am asking – are they going to come to this House to amend the legislation to, effectively, do away with that statutory duty, or statutory requirement, I should say?

1735 Hon. J J Bossano: That and much more.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

1740

Old Age pension Proposed changes

1745 Clerk: Question 361, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Social Security state what changes he proposes to introduce to the old age pension on 1st July 2012, as stated by the Hon. Minister in answer to Question No. 125/2012.

1750 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the target date of 1st July may not be possible and it was, in any event, chosen as a preferred date to coincide with the start of the next tax year.

1755 No-one currently covered by the existing scheme, which will continue in place, would be affected, since the proposed fully-funded scheme will apply only to persons entering insurable employment when the new scheme comes into operation.

1760 Hon. J J Netto: The hon. Gentleman speaks in terms of target dates and now he seems to be saying that the target date for this, 1st July, will not be met. My question was not so much about target dates, as to what is it that the hon. Gentleman wishes to change? Could he perhaps specify or clarify that?

1765 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I am neither specifying nor clarifying anything because when we come with the legislation that is required, the hon. Member will have had 10 weeks in which to look at any changes. It will be put out as a Command Paper, so if it requires a change in the law which, in any event will not affect anybody who is now working and paying insurance, only people who start working after the date when it comes in, but certainly, I am not prepared now to speculate on something that is not yet ready.

1770 Hon. J J Netto: But, Mr Speaker, can the hon. Gentleman say why he thinks there is a need to change the old age pension legislation?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, Mr Speaker, for the reasons that I explained in this House, when I was in opposition and when I recommended it to the Government and during the Election campaign, which is that when the previous Government used to say that the Civil Service Pension Scheme was a potential millstone around the necks of the future generations of Gibraltarians, I used to say, from that side of the House, that the 1775 deficit we have got today in the Social Insurance Fund – which is £10 million a year – will be a monumental millstone if we did not do something to address this issue in the future.

I think, in the last meeting of the House, in fact, the Leader of the Opposition agreed with me that, in fact, this was something that needed doing, and what we are doing is, if you like, trying to do a damage limitation exercise, so that the fact that we have got a scheme now where the numbers of people who are receiving benefit are receiving it funded by a ratio of 5:1 – that is to say, there are five people paying for every one being paid – and not withstanding that 5:1 ratio we have got a deficit of £10 million. Since all the people paying will eventually be pensioners, if we were to extrapolate that, it means that if you have got 25,000 people paying for 5,000, when the 25,000 people become pensioners, if nothing was done about it, you would need a workforce of 100,000 paying insurance for the 25,000 pensioners. Therefore, it is something that, if we look into the future, potentially it is crippling.

We cannot do very much about what is already there, because that is something that involves acquired rights. What we are trying to do, or we will do, and what I wanted to do by 1st July and may not be able to do – simply because preparing the legislation is not something that I do personally and there is little I can do about it except asking for this to be done, and it has to take its place in the queue – but I wanted to do it by 1st July because that is when the tax year and the social insurance year now start, because they are both together.

It would make sense to say, ‘Well, look, if we had had it for 1st July, and if we manage to have it for 1st July, what would happen would be that people who start working after 1st July would be contributing to a fully funded scheme, and that fully funded scheme will work in a manner that does not leave the unfunded liability that we have got today, which we can do nothing much about but, at least, we can stop it being added to by new people coming in.’

Hon. J J Netto: So do I take it, then, that he is trying to work towards a timeline in which this change to the legislation will probably be brought about during this new financial year, 2012-13, for the purpose of being introduced – the changes – on 1st July not of this year but next year. Is that correct?

Hon. J J Bossano: It is just administratively easier if we do it on 1st July. There is nothing to say it has to be done on 1st July; it can be done on the 1st of any other month.

I would not want to delay it until 1st July next year, because this is something that we want to do to protect Gibraltar from having an open-ended commitment that gets bigger every year. Clearly, the sooner we get it done, the better. What we are trying to do is put something in place which means that all the people who are now in the existing scheme, and all the people who come from outside who are contributing, all of whom will acquire rights, wherever they may be when they retire, that will continue to be the case and there is nothing we can do about that.

What we want to do is, from a given date in the future, the people who start on that day in the future will be contributing to a different scheme with different rules, which avoids the problem that we have today, which I have been suggesting, in a number of Budgets, to the Government previously needed to be addressed because, in my estimates of the liability, the liability will be growing at a faster rate than the old discontinued final salary scheme was growing, and the proof of it is that it has already hit the £10 million mark, the deficit.

Clerk: Question –

Hon. D A Feetham: So, are we talking about a situation where the legislation that you are envisaging would be backed up, by necessity, by a transfer of money out of the Consolidated Fund into a particular fund; and if that is the case, how much does the hon. Member estimate we are looking at on a yearly basis?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, it does the exact opposite of what the hon. Member says – the very precise and exact opposite.

The one that requires money from the Consolidated Fund every year is the one we have got today and that... We are voting £10 million and it is likely to grow bigger every year. The one that comes in will not require subsidies – that is why it is fully funded.

1830

Old Age Pension Increase

Clerk: Question 362, the Hon. J J Netto.

1835

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security state if the Old Age Pension has been increased from 1st April 2012; and if not, when, if at all, does the Government intend to increase the old age pension and by what amount?

1840

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question together with Question 364.

1845

Minimum Income Guarantee

1850

Clerk: Question 364.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security state if the Minimum Income Guarantee has been increased from the 1st April 2012 and, if not, when, if at all, does the Government intend to increase this benefit and by what amount?

1855

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the increase in the Old Age Pension and the Minimum Income Guarantee is scheduled to take place later this year.

1860

Hon. J J Netto: Meaning 1st July?

Hon. J J Bossano: Probably in the quarter that starts on 1st July, yes.

1865

Hon. J J Netto: And is there any particular yardstick by which the hon. Member will determine the amount that will be increased?

Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell him that the yardstick that I intend to introduce is to avoid the situation that he had, which I criticised him for, which is that he raised it on one date and then had to recover it at a later date. So what I am doing is bringing it together so that does not happen any more.

Hon. J J Netto: But that is not my question. My question is –

Hon. J J Bossano: No, but that is my answer, Mr Speaker, I know... (Laughter)

1875

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, but my question which I think I am entitled to try and pursue it, whether he wants to answer the question or not, which is a different matter altogether – is whether he has any formulation as to the amount of money that will be increased, particularly in the Old Age Pension?

1880

The last time that the Old Age Pension was increased was on 1st April last year, so it means that if, hypothetically speaking, the next increase will be on 1st July this year, it will be something like 15 months later. Does it mean that, in assessing how much it would be increased by, will he take consideration, for instance, of the RPI figure increases for the 15 months? That is what I am trying to get the hon. Member to answer.

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I know what the hon. Member is trying to get me to do – to tell him what I am 1885 going to do before I do it – and the answer is I do not recall any Government in any year in the 40 years that I have been here announcing what it intended to do to raise pensions until the time came that it was done. When we have decided to do it, we will do what has been done always, which is bring in the changes and implement them, like it has been done in the past.

1890 What I am doing is bringing the dates together so that we avoid a situation where people got an increase and then they found that, subsequently, the Department came in and reduced the amount that they got as a Minimum Income Guarantee to offset the increase it had had before. I think that can be avoided by bringing them together and introducing the increases at the same time. It avoids the hassle that was happening before.

1895 Hon. J J Netto: Just to point out, as a matter of fact, that there were times in which both things were increased on the same date in the same year and there were other occasions where it did not.

It does not necessarily follow that it happened all the time every year. It happened on some years but not all. He can find the information from his own civil servants.

1900 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, I am well aware that it happened some years and some it did not, and the ones it did not were the ones when people complained, so the answer is – since I do not want people to complain about me, like they did about him – I am going to avoid it.

1905 Registered unemployed
Income details

Clerk: Question 363, the Hon. J J Netto.

1910 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Employment and Social Security state, of the Gibraltarians registered unemployed, as answered in Question No. 250/2012, how many of them are in receipt of any of the following: Social Assistance, Minimum Income Guarantee, the Community Officer's Wage, the Household Cost Allowance, and of any other source of income, or none at all, if this is the case?

1915 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, of the Gibraltarians registered as unemployed provided in answer to Question 250/2012, one was on Social Assistance.

1920 Any other source of income is not information that is available to the Employment Service in respect of persons registered as unemployed.

1925 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, yes, I do know the fact that it is not available to the Social Security Department, but just in the same way that there are questions which are being asked in relation to trying to get information of perhaps benefit, even when there are companies which are liquidated, perhaps the information is not given or collected by the Social Security Department but by the Treasury.

What I am trying to say is that, although it is not within the Social Security Department, it does not mean, for instance, that the officials cannot ask some other Government Department or agencies who may contain the information and be able to provide the information.

1930 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, people are not required to make a declaration of income in order to register as unemployed.

1935 The Social Assistance is different because, in fact, when people register in the Employment Service, they are either getting Unemployment Benefit or getting Social Assistance, or they are getting nothing, so they fall into one of those three categories. If people have got a pension from work, we do not keep track of that, and I am not sure that the Income Tax Office is entitled, under the Data Protection Act, to provide information about people's sources of income, simply because they happen to be registered as seeking employment.

Hon. J J Netto: Obviously, Mr Speaker, what my question was designed to do was to find out, those

- 1940 people who are registered unemployed, particularly the age group that we are talking about in this particular question, whether they have a normal, decent level of income to be able to sustain themselves. That is what I am trying to get the hon. Member to state, but I can see that the hon. Member is saying they have not got that information and that is the end of the matter.
- 1945 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if by a normal, decent level of income, the hon. Member presumably means the Minimum Income Guarantee then, clearly, the answer to his question would be that all the people concerned must either be on the Minimum Income Guarantee or above it – that is to say the Minimum Income Guarantee.
- 1950 Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member would give way, that is part of the question, but the answer you gave me in your original answer was there is only one who is on Social Assistance.
- Hon. J J Bossano: Absolutely.
- 1955 Hon. J J Netto: Right, so at least we know that one is on Social Assistance. Does it mean that all the other ones are in receipt of the Minimum Income Guarantee? Does he know that? That information is contained in the Department of Social Security.
- 1960 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, short of the Department providing the names of the people who are –
- Hon. J J Netto: I am not asking for the names.
- Hon. J J Bossano: No, and you are not going to get them, even if you did. (Laughter)
- 1965 Hon. J J Netto: No, but I am not, Mr Speaker.
- Hon. J J Bossano: The point is not... Short of –
- 1970 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!
- Hon. D A Feetham: May I ask for the cheerleaders in the gallery to observe, to have respect for the proceedings and not to constantly laugh every time Mr Bossano makes a comment?
- 1975 Mr Speaker: The members in the public gallery are informed that you are welcome here to observe the proceedings but keep your participation to nil.
The Hon. the Minister.
- Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think we should thank the Hon. Mr Feetham for reminding you how to do your job.
- 1980 I would not be able to give the hon. Member the information, or intend to do it. What I am saying is that the Department would have to say, ‘Well, look, let’s look at these 12 particular individuals and go to the Social Security people who operate the Minimum Income Guarantee.’ I do not think that it is right for the Department to do that.
- 1985 If the hon. Member is worried that these people are seeking employment because they cannot make a living or they are on the breadline, then the only thing I can tell him is it can only be because they do not know that they can get the Minimum Income Guarantee. If they have no other income, they can get the Minimum Income Guarantee, unless the individuals... I do not know who they are, but unless the individuals are people who are not entitled to the Minimum Income Guarantee because of their nationality.
- 1990 Hon. J J Netto: Fine, Mr Speaker, but if he goes to the original question, I am talking about Gibraltarians registered unemployed. I am also talking about a very small number of people. We are not talking in the hundreds – I think we are talking about something like 40, if I remember rightly – and I am flabbergasted to know that the Minister for Employment, who is the Minister for Employment and Social Security, will not tell his own officials, both in Employment and in Social Security, to be able to work together to provide 1995 information, whether they are in receipt of the Minimum Income Guarantee or not. I am flabbergasted at his obstinacy in not providing the information.

2000 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, no. The fact that the hon. Member chooses to want to know if 12 people who are registered unemployed are getting the Minimum Income Guarantee is neither here nor there. I do not think... For all I know –

Hon. J J Netto: Why?

2005 Hon. J J Bossano: I will tell him why: because there are 1,200 people unemployed, so why is he only interested in 12 of them? What about the other 1,998? Does he care if they are on the Minimum Income Guarantee?

2010 He gets it into his head that, because there are 12 people who are over 60, they must be on the Minimum Income Guarantee or they may not be on the Minimum Income Guarantee. I am telling him the only information that people are required to provide when they register is whether they are getting Unemployment Benefit or they are getting Social Assistance, and the Department is not going to go on an expedition to find out if they have got the Minimum Income Guarantee, Social Security pensions, Elderly Persons Allowance, occupational pensions, part-time jobs, money in the savings bank, all of which may or may not be the case. These people are registered. They are resident, they are entitled to register and they are treated as people seeking employment, irrespective of their income.

2015 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not asking the hon. Gentleman what could be categorised as being a question which provides an enormous amount of work that the civil servants trying to extract information say, ‘This is too much in the period of five days.’

2020 We are talking about people, Gibraltarians – only about a group of 40 – who are registered unemployed in the Employment Service, and part of the question relates to the fact of whether they are in receipt... Given that they are between 60 and 64, whether they are obtaining the Minimum Income Guarantee. That part of the information is contained not in the Employment Service, but is contained in Social Security. Both Departments come under his Ministry. It does not take much for him to inform his senior civil servants on both sides, with the small number of people that I am talking about, whether they are in receipt of the Minimum Income Guarantee or not.

2025 It is not for him to tell me whether it is unreasonable, because other people – the 1,000 he is talking about – may wish to know, or not. It is me that asked the question and he who has to provide the answers. It is a very reasonable and fair question, given that we are talking about Gibraltarians between the ages of 60 and 64 who are registered unemployed, and part of the question is to say are they getting the Minimum Income Guarantee, or not?

2030 All that is required is for either a fax to be sent, or through those fantastic iPads that the Government seems to have, to inform one Department to the other as to the nature of the 40 people registered unemployed.

2035 Mr Speaker: I have understood the question and allowed it on several occasions, and the Minister has given an answer. You may not like the answer –

Hon. J J Netto: He will not give the answer.

2040 Mr Speaker: But that is the answer. If he wishes to –

2045 Hon. J J Bossano: It is not that I do not want to give the answer; it is that it is information that is not in the Department because people who register for unemployment over 60 are not required to declare sources of income any more than people under 60, and just because he has got into his head to put this as a supplementary to a previous question, where he cannot even remember how many there were... There were only 12, and he thinks there were 40: that is how much interest he has got!

Hon. J J Netto: Then it should be even easier to get the information...

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! Order!

2050 The Minister to reply.

2055 Hon. J J Bossano: It has nothing to do with whether it is easier or difficult, Mr Speaker. It is a piece of information that he has got it into his head to put a supplementary, thinking there were 40 – which means he cannot be over-interested in their predicament because there was only 12 – and the information that I have given him is that the information in relation to employment that is relevant is Unemployment Benefit and Social Assistance. There is one on Social Assistance. The rest – something like 800 out of the remaining unemployed – we have no idea what income they have. They may all be on the Minimum Income Guarantee or Supplementary Benefit. The only people that we have got information about are Social Assistance, and the Department will not go to find out whether the particular group of 12 people over the age of 60 has any other source of income.

2060 Presumably, if I considered that this was a legitimate expedition to engage in, tomorrow he can come back and say what about the incomes of the under-25s or the incomes of the 15-18, or the incomes of any other age group. This is a completely arbitrary question, which is invented, to come up with, and the only relevance that there can be is that people who are unemployed presumably are seeking employment because they need it or seeking employment because they would rather be working. They may not be in need; they may simply want to work because they are over 60, they still feel fit, and they still want to work. After all, I am 73 and I am still here.

2070 Mr Speaker: I think that we must accept that as the... There must be a different supplementary now.

Hon. J J Netto: No, I am just going to end up by saying I am quite – 2075 Mr Speaker: No, with respect, supplementaries are to ask a question, not to end up by ‘saying’. Is there a question?

Hon. J J Netto: Yes: so much for the transparency of the new Government.

2080 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have to answer that.

The transparency of the new Government is far far greater than anything they did before because, in fact, from whether they want meetings to be public, minutes to be published, or anything else, the amount of information that they get is more than they were ever willing to provide.

2085 All I need to remind the hon. Member is the lies in the House when I was told that the information on all their labour statistics could not be provided on a monthly basis and had to be provided quarterly, and now that I am there, I know from the staff that this was not true, that they were provided for the Minister every month and the Minister did not choose to share it with the Opposition.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I –

2090 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. J J Netto: In point of fact, Mr Speaker, those are the same officials who told me the opposite.

Mr Speaker: Well, let’s not get...

2095 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

2100 Hon. J J Bossano: – They could not have told him the opposite because, in fact, I have got the files with the monthly figures from his time.

Mr Speaker: Order! We are not going to go into what the advisers told the Minister at the time, or now. Question 364.

Statutory Benefits Fund
Payments re employers' insolvency

Clerk: Question 365. The Hon. J J Netto.

2110

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment provide a statement of the payments made from the Statutory Benefits Fund in respect of employers' insolvency since this question was last asked, showing the amount paid due to redundancy pay obligations, the amounts paid in respect of other sums payable to employees, and the numbers of companies involved?

2115

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2120

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, since this question was last asked, the total amount paid in respect of redundancy pay was £163,329.20; in respect of annual leave, £1,596.49; in respect of notice of terminations, £45,112.39; in respect of an award from an Industrial Tribunal, £46,004.80; and in respect of wages arrears owed, £217.76.

In total, six companies were involved.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, normally, in the past when we have asked this question, myself or when they were in opposition, they normally provided the information in a schedule form because there are so many details there. Would the hon. Member not perhaps provide me with a copy of the answer just read?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, if somebody photocopies this, he can have it, yes.
It is for oral answer, actually, the question.

2130

Mr Speaker: There is no procedural requirement of any obligation to give it in writing. (Interjections) No, it is a matter of convenience and courtesy between both sides.

A Member: [Inaudible] provided before.

Mr Speaker: It is not being withheld now. Let's keep it at that.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in relation to the six companies involved, could the Minister perhaps indicate from which particular industry group they emanate from?

Hon. J J Bossano: Two were car sales companies, with almost identical names – I think they were related; one was a transport company; one was a nursery; the other I cannot tell what it is from the name; and the other one was a printing company.

I am quite happy to give the names. I have got no problem with giving the names, but they are people who have gone bust, anyway.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

2150

Victor Ochello, Unite
Meetings with Minister for Employment

Clerk: Question 366. The Hon. D A Feetham.

2155

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many times has the Minister for Employment met with Victor Ochello of Unite?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

2160 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this Question together with Questions 367, 368 and 369.

2165 Unite officials
Requests for meetings with Minister for Employment

Clerk: Question 367.

2170 Hon. D A Feetham: In his capacity as Minister for Employment, how many requests for meetings has he received from Unite officials, indicating on behalf of whom those requests were made?

2175 Unite officials
Meetings with Minister for Employment

Clerk: Question 368.

2180 Hon. D A Feetham: How many times has the Minister for Employment met with Unite officials in his capacity as Minister, identifying the person he met with, the date of the meeting and its purpose?

2185 Trade union officials
Meetings with Minister for Employment

Clerk: Question 369.

2190 Hon. D A Feetham: How many times has the Minister for Employment met officials of any other trade union in his capacity as Minister, identifying the person, his or her union, the date of the meeting and its purpose?

2195 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the answer to Question 366 is a few times, and the answer to Questions 367, 368 and 369 is none.

2200 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he elaborate on 'a few times', because the last time that I asked this question about the former regional officer of Unite, he had not met him a single time. How many is a few times?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am not sure if it is two or three. I do not keep a record. (Laughter)

2205 Hon. D A Feetham: Has he met with the convener of the GDC?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer is I do not have meetings with union officials. Industrial relations is not my prerogative, and, as far as I know, the representative of the GDC staff works in my Department. I see him every day, but not in his capacity as a union official.

2210 Hon. D A Feetham: What about Mr Robba, who is the shop steward for the GDC? Has he met Mr Robba in his capacity as Minister?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, that is what I have just told him. I have got somebody who is a union representative of the GDC. There are people who are no longer in the GDC and therefore cannot be conveners 2215 of an organisation which does not employ them. So he may be acting under a misapprehension.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman accept that he has presided over, and has been responsible for, some very significant – albeit we have criticised some aspects of it on this side, but pretty significant – developments in the area of employment in his time as Minister for Employment, ranging from the Future Jobs Strategy to the transfer back from the Civil Service of the GDC, the introduction of changes to the pensions legislation, to the Superannuation Fund that he has introduced? Does he accept that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I accept that I have done quite a few things from the manifesto already – not as much as I would have liked; I think I have been quite slow, actually – but I am glad to hear he thinks I have done a great deal.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not think that, perhaps, it is unusual, given the fact that he has done all those things, but even if he had not done all those things, that there is this dearth, lack of contact between yourself and officials of Unite and, indeed – but Unite in particular – in relation to these areas, I mean for example, in relation to the GDC?

There were a lot of concerns in the GDC about the amount of time that the hon. Gentleman was giving them to make a decision and there does not appear to have been any meeting with the convenor of Unite. Indeed, there was no meeting between the hon. Gentleman and, of course, the former regional officer, despite the fact that meetings were requested of him in order to discuss – does he not think that that is unusual?

Hon. J J Bossano: Not in the least. I do not think it is unusual at all.

Let me remind the hon. Member that Unite was defending the agreement that they entered into with the previous administration and all I did was to offer each individual, in an individual capacity, which was not a collective agreement with the union, the opportunity of staying in the organisation that they had previously been employed in on the basis, logically, that if there was any legitimacy in what the previous government had done, then it could only be that they had told people you are forced to vote for the Civil Service because the intention of the government is to discontinue the entity that is employing you.

Therefore, since we had a commitment not to discontinue, I thought that people who had been forced to make that decision on the basis that they could either choose to go, or choose not to have an employer, might want not to go if they knew that the GDC was going to continue. That did not require negotiation with anybody or representation from anybody because everybody was allowed to keep what they had which the union was responsible for negotiating and telling them that they had automatically all been made civil servants on 1st October.

The union got a letter from Mr Caruana which they took to a union meeting and they told the staff that the Leader of the Opposition and the union were both in agreement that they had all ceased to be employees of the GDC on 1st October. So, the man that wanted to see me could not be the convenor of the GDC, when he had ceased to be an employee of the GDC on 1st October. The people that had moved out were told that they could either keep what they had or, if they wanted, they could come back.

In my judgement, giving somebody more than he has already agreed to accept from a previous administration does not require a negotiation or a time to think, even though they had six weeks to think about it whereas, in the previous instance, according to them, – I was not there to see what they pursued – they were just told to go to the union and sign the agreement. There was no option: they signed it or they did not sign it. Even those that did not sign it were told that it still applied to them.

So my answer is I do not agree at all with his analysis but I can understand why he is making it, but not because it is a logical one.

Hon. D A Feetham: But is it not the case that all they were asking was for an extension of two weeks and a meeting with the hon. Gentleman to discuss several issues that concerned them. That was the – can he please confirm that that was all that these – a union official on behalf of their members were asking the hon. Gentleman to do?

Hon. J J Bossano: No... they were asking...

Mr Speaker: Order, Order.

2270 Before the Minister answers may I just – my memory may not be very accurate but before I invite the Hon. Daniel Feetham, was a similar line of question (Hon. J J Bossano: Exactly the same), proposed at the last sitting because there is, under Standing Order 17, a prohibition on raising matters which have been answered in the last six months. Does the hon. Member share my recollection?

2275 Hon. D A Feetham: There was questioning in relation to the GDC.
I am actually getting to....

Mr Speaker: Are we talking about the two week extension?

2280 Hon. D A Feetham: I am talking about... My line of question is going to go to a different matter now, but I do not think that I actually asked him this precise question that I have asked him now and, in any event, the line of questioning is not strictly about...

The point I am going to try and make is not about the GDC, it is a different point altogether.

2285 Mr Speaker: I will allow the Hon. Minister to answer. He seemed happy to answer it, but I just want to remind the Member, further questions will have to be avoided.

Hon. J J Bossano: If he wants to ask me the same question all the time I have no problem with that. I will give him the same answer.

2290 Mr Speaker: I do not wish the Hon. Minister to be bored with the same question.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well the answer is that what he has just said is not correct.

2295 It is not true that all they were asking was for a two week extension. They were asking for a minimum of two weeks without a maximum, and, in any event, they were asking that after they had already had six weeks and after they had a four hour meeting with me when I answered hundreds of questions.

2300 Therefore, since I was giving something to people to which they were not entitled and which they were not asking, and it was simply a gesture on the part of the Government of saying, on the premise that the previous government bulldozed you into going into the Civil Service because you had no option, because ‘I told you the GDC is going to be abolished, and if you are working in the GDC and I move you to the Civil Service and I say to you; you can either accept the new employer or you can stay in limbo because the old employer is disappearing – but then what choice do people [inaudible] – On the premise that, to be fair to the previous government, and say ‘Well, perhaps they were telling you, you had no choice because there was no alternative.’

2305 Since there is an alternative now, ‘You are being given the opportunity of changing your mind and saying I now want to leave the Civil Service’, given that the position of the union put in writing to me was that, whether they liked it or they did not, they had been made civil servants by fiat through the Public Services Commission approving a list provided by Mr Caruana to them – the first time that I have known, in all the years that I have been in this Parliament, that the Public Service Commission accepts a list of names and puts them all into the Civil Service, without vetting, without qualifications or without scrutiny. (Applause)

2310 Nevertheless, there were people who were not happy and they came back, and the answer was that those who wanted to come back came back, and those who wanted to stay, stayed, it was a completely free and democratic decision made by each individual. It was not a question of the majority taking a vote. If the majority had taken the vote, they would all be out of the Civil Service – because the people who wanted to stay in the GDC outnumbered the ones in the Civil Service by two thirds.

2315 Hon. D A Feetham: Is he aware that those individuals are so dissatisfied that they are now seeking a meeting with the Chief Minister of Gibraltar? My understanding is that meeting has been granted.

2320 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not know whether they are or they are not but, of course, given that the Chief Minister of Gibraltar is, in fact, responsible for industrial relations and I am not, if they wanted a meeting with me to discuss industrial relations, the answer is I would direct it to the Chief Minister.

But I do know that he has got a number of people who are very close to him who keep him informed of every detail of every move I make in the office, whether I have tea, or I have coffee (Laughter) – the time I 2325 get in and the time I leave. I know that.

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman should not be so paranoid –

2330 Hon. J J Bossano: I am not.

Hon. D A Feetham: ‘Infamy, infamy! They’ve all got it in for me!’

Mr Speaker – is it not the case, and without beating around the bush, is it not the case that the hon. Gentleman simply has it in for some people within the leadership of Unite and, by hook or by crook, he is not going to meet them? (Applause)

2335

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not think the leadership of Unite feels that I am somehow mistreating them by not having a meeting with them. All I can tell him is that poor Mr Sisarello suffered for years at the hands of Mr Caruana, who actually refused to meet with other officials unless they kicked him out of the meeting.

2340

The only reason why I am not meeting the officials of Unite is that I am not meeting the officials of Unite, or the GTA or the GGCA or anybody else. I can tell him that there are union reps that do come and see me and I see them informally and not officially because, usually, they come because they come for my help and advice with their problems, given my experience in this business.

2345

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. (Interjection)

Is it the case that the ones you do not want to see, you cannot see because you are not the Minister responsible for industrial relations but the ones that you do want to see – the ones that happen to be card-carrying members of the GSLP – you see them informally? (Applause and laughter).

2350

Hon. J J Bossano: I can tell him that there are more card-carrying members of the GSLP every day – I sign the cards! (Applause) Therefore, by natural progression, I will have to see practically the whole of Gibraltar in a few years’ time.

2355

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept that, in fact, choosing... the Chief Minister used the term a dedo yesterday during the debate, I am going to use the same term. Choosing, a dedo, the trade union official who he wants to meet with and those that he wants to shun is capable of amounting to interference within the union because, at the end of the day, those union officials have to represent and do their best on behalf of their members, and if they cannot get access to the Minister for Employment those members are going to say ‘Well, look, how are you representing my interests if you can’t get a meeting in front of the Minister for Employment?’ or is it that, in fact, that is precisely the effect you want to bring about? That you want to send a clear message to union members that these are the ones that I am prepared to deal with but not these?

2360

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker I do not know who has put these strange ideas into the hon. Member’s mind or whether it is just that he makes them up as he goes along.

2365

I have told him that the people that come to see me are the ones who come to see me because they want my views or my advice on problems, not because they are coming to see me to negotiate with me on anything. I do not negotiate with any union on anything because industrial relations is part of the responsibility of the Chief Minister.

2370

In the previous administration, Mr Montiel had the title after his name that he was responsible for industrial relations but we all know that, in fact, everything was done in 6 Convent Place, and now everything is done in 6 Convent Place, and I do not have the title, I do not have the responsibility, I have got other things to do, but any trade union official that thinks that I can be of help to him on any problem he has got – from Mr Ochello down is welcome to give me a ring to get my assistance and my help but not to come and negotiate with me because I am not responsible for negotiating with any union. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

2375

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. So, therefore, he must accept, arising out of the answer that he has given me, that you do not necessarily just simply see a trade unionist in order to negotiate terms on behalf of their members but you can have a situation where trade unionists want to sit down with the hon. Member, so the hon. Member can explain to them what his plans are and, indeed, vice versa, if, for example, they may have a concern.

Or is the hon. Member suggesting that if a trade unionist in Gibraltar... in fact, we are talking about Unite here, because that is the aversion that the hon. Member has – it is to the leadership of Unite – but if the leadership of Unite, or the convenor of Unite for the GDC, has a particular problem that he may want to air, not necessarily an industrial dispute, is he seriously suggesting to this House that he should go to No. 6 Convent Place and see Mr Picardo?

2385

Hon. J J Bossano: We do not have a convenor of Unite for the GDC. I do not know where the hon. Member gets this strange idea from.

2390

I can tell him that the two people that came most recently to see me came to see me about getting my views on some problems that they had with other employers, nothing to do with me or the Government, and I said, look... I mean, sometimes, people come and ask me about agreements that have been done many years ago, or stuff like that. Now, that kind of relationship I am happy to have with anybody. But if somebody comes and says 'I want to put a claim for this', I say this is not the place where we will receive claims. It is as simple as that.

2395

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, in fact, the convenor for the GDC is Mr Albert Hewitt unless, of course, Unite in their correspondence to the hon. Gentleman – which I have copies, have copied to Mr Albert Hewitt, Convenor of the GDC, – unless they are themselves mistaken about what their convenor actually does, there must be a convenor for the GSD. (Laughter and interjections)

2400

Hon. J J Bossano: But, Mr Speaker, (Interjections) I mean it is not for me to pass judgement on the expertise within Unite but, at the same time as they were sending that letter, that there was a convenor for GDC, they were sending the letter that nobody was employed in the GDC any more, that the GDC had no employees and that everybody was a civil servant.

A civil servant cannot be the convenor of an employer that does not employ him.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker will the hon. Gentleman accept at least this from me today, that it is both desirable and, indeed, necessary for the Government and, in particular, its socialist Minister for Employment to have good relations with the leadership of Unite and can I urge upon him to perform a U-turn in his attitude to the leadership of Unite and ensure that, going forward, there are those good relations?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I can well understand that he should recommend to me that I should do U-turns, given the number of U-turns that he has done. But I do not believe in doing U-turns, so I am afraid I am not going to take his advice.

2415

Hon. D A Feetham: Just, finally, this question – if he once said, in fact, that he made Margaret Thatcher look as if she was in kindergarten, in response to a question from GBC?

Is he now taking a leaf out of Margaret Thatcher's book and using the words that she used to some Members of the Conservative Party in 1986 and saying:

2420

'You turn, if you want to. The lady'

– in this case, the hon. Gentleman –

2425

'is not for turning'

in his attitude to the leadership of Unite?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am telling him that I do not do U-turns not because Margaret Thatcher did not do them but because I have never done them.

Therefore, the answer is that if the hon. Member thinks that I am going to take his advice and change my mind on something that I think I am right in the position that I am taking, which is that people who are in the union – in any union, including Unite – or in no union at all, can continue to come to see me, not in my capacity as Minister for Employment, which does not deal with unions – the Department is not the 2435 Department that deals with unions – but in the same capacity as they used to come to the GSLP offices before, when Mr Ochello used to come there for advice and Mr Sisarello used to come there for advice and the only problem they had was that they had to come in through the back door because they knew the risk that they were running if the message (Interjections) got back to Convent Place.

2440 Mr Speaker: Would this be a convenient moment for a short recess. We have been at it for three hours. This House will recess for ten minutes.

The House recessed at 6.30 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 6.45 p.m.

2445 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): After the tea break, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 22nd May 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 22nd May 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

2450 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 22nd May 2012 at 9.15 a.m. Those in favour; (Members: Aye.) those against. Passed.

Questions for Oral Answer

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Questions 411, 414 and 430 Supplementary information

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Tuesday, 22nd May. Answers to Questions continue.
The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Good morning, Mr Speaker, sir.

With your leave, I would like to record in the House that, further to the question-and-answer session of last Friday, the Hon. the Minister for Housing has already furnished me with some information that I had requested and we had mutually agreed to make it available. These refer, sir, to Questions 411, 414 and 430, and with your approval, I will let the Clerk have a copy of the information provided to me by the Hon. the Minister for Housing, so that they may, as well, be included in the Hansard record.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for having clarified that the information has been provided.

Just a procedural point: I do not know that it is possible for us to record in Hansard something that has been given outside the House, other than by tabling it here, not simply by saying that it has been passed to the Clerk.

In future, perhaps the way to do it may be if the hon. Gentleman has the information... Does he have it with him now? I propose that he table that information now, rather than simply just provide it to the Clerk afterwards and that, as a result of this exchange and the tabling of it, it is therefore necessarily included in the Hansard as the document to which we are referring in this exchange.

Mr Speaker: Yes, I think that might be a preferable method, a more formal method. Perhaps the hon. Member would formally table.

Hon. E J Reyes: I agree, Mr Speaker.

To be further clear on this record, the Principal Housing Officer did call me up yesterday and said they had information available – ‘Do you wish to collect it from the office?’ – and I recommended that the Hon. the Minister for Housing actually handed it himself into the House. When I came in this morning, the Clerk very kindly said, ‘The Hon. Charles Bruzon has left an envelope with your name on it’, and I have opened it, which is why the Clerk was unable himself; but I tend to agree that that, in fact, was my initial reaction.

As for the record, what should have happened, we both understand the same thing. It is really the Hon. Minister handing me the questions via the Speaker’s Chair and that is the correct way for recording it, so I agree and thank the Hon. the Chief Minister for that clarification.

What we all want is, since the information has been provided, it is only fair that it be recorded that the Minister for Housing has kept to his word and has been rather efficient for handing it in by first thing on Tuesday morning.

So thank you.

Mr Speaker: Obligated. Formally tabled, then.

TRAFFIC, HEALTH & SAFETY AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd

Number of applications for parking spaces pending

45

Clerk: Question 432/2012, the Hon. D J Bossino.

50

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services state how many applications are pending the provision of parking spaces by Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

55

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand over to him.

[see Table overleaf]

Answer to Question 432 of 2012

Current waiting lists are as follows:

Devils' Tower Road	6 (non residents)
New Harbours	39
Ragged Staff	27
Sandpits	33
Willis's	47
Eurol plaza	63
Total	215

In total there are 215 people on waiting lists for the different car parks operated by Gibraltar Car Parks Limited.

60 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister clarify? There is an entry here which refers, at the very top, to Devil's Tower Road and it has six applicants on the waiting list. Can the Minister clarify what is meant by the words '(non-residents)'?

65 Hon. P J Balban: In the particular case of Devil's Tower Road, because the take-up for parking spaces was so few, in that not many people actually wanted a parking space there, the offer was actually extended to people who were not resident in that particular area, which means to say that people from the south or people from other districts in Gibraltar could apply to take up one of those parking spaces. That is what is meant by 'non-residents'. It means non-residents of the particular area of the North District.

70 Hon. D J Bossino: By the North District, does the Minister mean the North District Scheme, under the Parking Scheme? Is that what the area around the Devil's Tower Road encapsulates?

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, that is right.

75 That was what was inherited. That was the area which was the area for the car park, so when we say 'non-residents', it means non-residents of that particular area who were assigned the possibility of using that car park for monthly rentals.

Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister says that it was then opened up to applicants in other areas. When did that change of regime occur? Does he know?

80 Hon. P J Balban: I believe that was already happening prior to 9th December. There were already persons in that car park who were not part of that area. With the car park being so large, and because the take-up was so poor, other people applied and they were granted places in that said car park.

85 Hon. D J Bossino: Is the Minister able to indicate to the House now whether there has been an upward or downward trend in the numbers of people waiting for parking spaces?

Hon. P J Balban: Are you referring specifically to that car park?

90 Hon. D J Bossino: By way of clarification, I am not: generally.

Hon. P J Balban: Waiting lists for that car park... Devil's Tower Road car park has always been a problem to try to use to maximum capacity. As I said, not many people want to use it. In fact, every single resident who wants a space there has been granted one.

95 In other car parks, turnover has been generally slow because, obviously, the car parks have been smaller and residents in the surrounding area have taken up those car parks, so really the trend has remained the same. In some areas, the waiting lists can be as great as two years, to get a parking space in a particular car park.

Hon. D J Bossino: It may be the subject of questions in relation to another question which is on the Order Paper, but is it right for me to assume and to anticipate that the six non-residents who are waiting for parking 100 spaces in the Devil's Tower Road are likely to receive a positive result of their application?

Hon. P J Balban: What has happened there, because obviously... because there are people that move households, it would be unfair for us not to allow a certain... We have actually allocated a few parking spaces which are vacant, in case people decide that they want to have a... This is why there are six on the waiting list at the moment, because there are a few parking spaces which have been left there, just in case.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Minister can provide a little bit more clarification in respect of the mechanics of the waiting lists themselves.

110 He has, in fact, referred to the fact that there are people on waiting lists for different car parks, as they have expressed an interest in being there. Are all those individuals on these waiting lists? Or rather, have all the individuals on these waiting lists expressed an interest exclusively for the specific car park under which they are listed, or is the Minister aware of any proportion of the individuals that would be happy to obtain a car park elsewhere, or anywhere for that matter, from this particular list?

115 Hon. P J Balban: I am not entirely aware of that part of things. I am aware that, obviously, there are some, for example, in the park-and-ride down Devil's Tower Road. People from other areas have applied for that if they have failed in another area.

120 In the south, I believe residents have a choice because the car park down in New Harbours and the one at Sandpits are really in the vicinity. They have a choice of two parking spaces there. That is as far as I am aware.

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, just for clarification... So, then, depending on the area in which you live, you are given a choice of parking as to the waiting list on which you can go. Do I understand correctly?

125 Hon. P J Balban: There has been no change of policy. What we inherited is what we do at the moment, which means that when we came into Government I checked the lists and there were areas – there were parking garages, car parks – where not everyone there was a resident. They came from other areas.

130 For example, I believe in Willis's Road there were a few areas in which there were persons there renting who lived further out. So there has been no change in that respect.

Pelican crossing, Europa Road Government plans

135 Clerk: Question 433, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise the House whether the Government has any intention of installing a pelican crossing at Europa Road in the area of Brympton/Mount Road?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

145 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government will be placing a new pelican crossing at Europa Road in the area of Brympton/Mount Road. This will be undertaken as soon as the equipment arrives.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Minister for that.

150 The reason why I asked this question was because I received representations from residents in particular of the Brympton area. I am aware that there are elderly people who actually take the bus going in a southerly direction, to eventually go into the centre of town, in order not to cross the road because it is simply so dangerous for them, so I am grateful for the confirmation that I received this morning from the Minister in the House.

The obvious supplementary to the answer he has just given is can he give an indication to this House as to 155 when he expects that the equipment will be readily available?

Hon. P J Balban: The equipment has actually been ordered by the GEA and that equipment obviously comes from the UK, so it generally takes around four months for this system to arrive. So, obviously, we do not have a definite date for that as yet. Okay?

160 Hon. D J Bossino: He has given an indication to the House as to how long it normally takes and he says four months.

Do you know when the equipment was ordered? Does the Minister know when the equipment was ordered?

165 Hon. P J Balban: I am not entirely sure of the exact date, but I would assume it was within the last month.

170

Pelican/zebra crossing, access road to Coaling Island
Government plans

175 Clerk: Question 434, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise the House whether the Government has plans to set up a pelican or zebra crossing by the access road to Coaling Island?

180 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government does not have plans to place a pelican or zebra crossing by the access road to Coaling Island.

185 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, interesting response – I expected that the answer was going to be completely different, only because, Mr Speaker, the infrastructure seems to be in place already, where there are... maybe this is not the correct jargon but, basically, the pavements on either side are dented.

I think... I am not sure whether the Minister is aware of the exact location I am thinking of and it is certainly not set out in the question, but I think it would be a very useful place to have a zebra/pelican crossing. Would the Government reconsider its current position?

190

Hon. P J Balban: Can the hon. Member actually specify where exactly – I am assuming that this is between King's Wharf and the new Mid Harbour Estate?

195 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am sure that is correct.
Mr Figueras has assisted me and, as he quite rightly says, the location is just off the roundabout.

Hon. S M Figueras: And if it might be of further use to the Minister, the infrastructure my hon. Colleague has referred to is the indentation in the road to give access to wheelchair users to the road – hence the question, I suspect.

200

Hon. P J Balban: Normally what happens in these cases is a member of the public, or somebody actually writes a letter into the Department. It is tabled at the Traffic Commission and the Traffic Commission, the highways inspectors and technical staff go on site to assess whether there is a need for some sort of crossing in the area or not.

205

What happens is that they take statistical data by way of traffic counters and then if there is a sufficient amount of pedestrians crossing, then the view is taken as to what sort of crossing system is required, be it a zebra crossing, a pelican crossing, or what have you. So that is how the ball starts rolling.

Hon. D J Bossino: So just to interpret the initial response from the Minister: the position is not that the 210 Government has no plans because it has taken a firm decision that a zebra crossing was not to be placed there; it is simply that it has not considered it.

Hon. P J Balban: It is simply the case that the issue has not been highlighted: there has been no request for it and as such, there is nothing...

215 My particular view is I would assume that very few people use that crossing, personally, compared to others but, again, that would have to be evaluated by means of collecting data and ascertaining.

Again, it has not been tabled to the Traffic Commission, because a request has not come forward.

220

Eastern Beach parking provision
Government plans

225 Clerk: Question 435, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services provide this House with details of the provision the Government will be making in respect of parking at Eastern Beach and how soon it is expected this provision will be made?

230 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the total parking provision derived from the Eastern Beach beautification scheme currently being undertaken is 158 car-parking spaces, which includes two disabled bays. This is scheduled for completion by 8th June 2012.

235 Following the demolition of the Mediterranean Hotel building, the area will be embellished and an additional seven car parking spaces, including one disabled bay and 36 motorbike spaces, will be provided. This is scheduled for completion in July 2012.

240 In addition to the foregoing, the following additional spaces will be available: 122 car parking spaces on the Eastside reclamation area; seven car parking spaces, including one disabled parking bay, opposite the northern changing rooms; 18 motorbike spaces directly opposite the northern changing rooms; 30 motorbike spaces at the entrance to the beach; 16 centrally located along Eastern Beach Road near the substation; an unquantified number on the Aerial Farm, as has been the case in previous years.

245 In summary, there will be provision for approximately 294 car parking spaces and 100 motorbike spaces, plus an unquantified number on the Aerial Farm.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, by way of clarification, in relation to that last list the Minister has just read through, starting from the 122 car parking spaces, I think the total the Minister mentioned was 194.

250 Hon. P J Balban: The whole total?

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, what was the last figure the Minister...? Maybe I can ask that.

255 Hon. P J Balban: I said that in summary, there will be provision for approximately 294 car parking spaces and 100 motorbike spaces, plus the unquantified number at Aerial Farm.

260 Hon. D J Bossino: In relation to that last bit, the Minister has not given a date as to when it is expected that these will be available. He has given dates in relation to the seven car parking spaces and 36 motorbike spaces for some date in July and then, prior to that, there will be 158 – he mentioned there would be 158 parking spaces, which would include two disabled car-parking spaces to be made available on 8th June. But in respect to the last batch, is the Minister able to advise this House as to when those will be ready?

What concerns me, what is playing on my mind, just to assist the Minister, is, given the impending bathing season, whether he thinks that these will be available for Eastern Beach users by then?

Hon. P J Balban: Parking facilities will be as every other year.

265 It is only those that I have given specific dates to which are the ones, obviously, which will not be ready by the commencement of the bathing season. Other than that, all other parking spaces mentioned without the given dates will be available by the start of the bathing season.

270 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Minister for that confirmation.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I take it from the omission from the Hon. the Minister's response to the original question that no bicycle parking facilities will be provided at the beach?

275 Hon. P J Balban: That is right.

Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park
Use by vehicle importer companies

280 Clerk: Question 436, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services provide this House with details of the average waiting times it takes vehicular traffic to cross –

285 Clerk: Question 436.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am asking the wrong one, am I? (Mr Speaker: Yes.) I do apologise, Mr Speaker. I have not woken up yet. (Laughter)

290 Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services advise the House how many parking slots have been allocated for use by vehicle importer companies at the Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park pursuant to the licence agreement it has recently negotiated and, consequently, how many are available for public use?

295 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, in total, 500 parking spaces have been allotted for the use of vehicle importer companies at the Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park. This leaves 170 spaces available for public use.

300 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I take this opportunity to ask the Minister whether the Government has, at this stage, reached a final decision as to whether it intends to proceed with the use of that parking facility as a park-and-ride facility.

305 The answer, I think, at the last session of the House, which was now two months ago, was that no final decision had been made by the Government.

Hon. P J Balban: The position remains the same.

310 Hon. D J Bossino: Given that two months have transpired since I last asked the question in a supplementary, can the Minister give this House an indication as to when he thinks that the Government will be in a position to have a firm policy with relation to this issue?

315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is an issue here which cuts across a number of ministries. There are issues relating to what will happen to the north of the runway, which may impact on where the best place to locate park and ride schemes may be; and also, of course, the issue of what you might call the Western Beach reclamation, although it does not impact the beach – the hon. Gentleman knows which reclamation I am referring to – the one that comes from the windsock down to what was the old slipway there, which was a matter that was being pursued by the previous administration, in discussion with the vehicle importer that is now using a number of spaces in the Devil's Tower Road car parks, which impact on the 320 ability to use those car parks as a park-and-ride.

In the event that the Western Beach reclamation, as it is known, were to be completed, then you would see the vehicles that are there from the importer going to that reclamation as part of that scheme, which would free up a lot of parking spaces up there. But, in any event, there may be other issues, north of the runway, which may make it easier to have a park-and-ride scheme very close to the frontier, which would decongest even Devil's Tower Road from vehicles coming in that far.

Those things are the ones that are in the mix. One of them will happen sooner than the other – or one determination will happen sooner than the other – and those are the issues that impact on what happens to the Devil's Tower Road car parks.

330 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Chief Minister for that reply.

It is, in fact, as I understand it, his party's, the GSLP's, commitment at the last General Election to build park-and-ride facilities closer to the border. Presumably, that is still going ahead and the only issue which the Government is considering is the location of those facilities.

335 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is right; but of course, as I was saying to the hon. Gentleman and he, the present Leader of the Opposition, knows better than me, given the time that he has been in Government, Gibraltar is a jigsaw puzzle.

So, a tunnel under the runway, or some other mechanism that is going to cut through Winston Churchill Avenue may determine what you can do in the area from the frontier to what are presently the northernmost barriers to cross the runway. If you do not have that, then you have still got a dual carriageway, north and south, coming up to the area of the Rotunda, that you need to provide for.

340 If you do not have that road and it is going somewhere else, then you have got a greater margin of flexibility as to what you can do in that area north of the runway. So the tender that is being issued in respect of the tunnel, the redevelopment of the area of the Rotunda, the Western Beach reclamation, all of these things are in the mix and have to be determined, in order to have clarity as to what might happen inter alia in respect of the Devil's Tower Road car parks, as they are at present.

350 Hon. D J Bossino: It may be unfair and unreasonable to pose this question to the Chief Minister, Mr Speaker, but perhaps he can assist this House: the original supplementary related to timings. When does the Government envisage that there will be a conclusion and a determination as to what is going to happen in relation to the issue I have just been posing questions on?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will tell him honestly, that 'as soon as possible'.

355 But there are issues, as the hon. Gentleman and the Leader of the Opposition will know, about environmental impact assessments etc. which relate to the Western Beach reclamation, which will take some time to determine. There is the issue of the tender documents in respect of the tunnel, etc. All of those things are not things that will happen immediately and they are, as I told him, in the mix.

So it may be that you do not have to wait for all of those things to be determined to be able to move on, but some of them do have to happen.

360 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful to the Chief Minister.

365 Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, there is a commercial arrangement in place with a particular party who is involved in that reclamation which serves what I believe is one of the most worthwhile industrial projects in Gibraltar. That is in the mix, too, as is the fact that he knows there is severe political opposition from other places, for that reclamation to go ahead. All those factors were taken into consideration by us and the decision made to proceed.

370 He has invoked me and my presumed knowledge. As far as I was aware, all the environmental questions that have been raised by the environmental impact assessment had been resolved and all that was at stake was the final Ministry of Defence... in connection with the proximity of the airfield type issues, but that was that.

I think the project was slightly more advanced than the hon. Member's answer suggests.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will forgive me for saying that the understanding I have been given is not that, and that there are issues as to the shape of the reclamation.

375 I think there was more than one shape proposed, so that other industrial activity might also be able to happen in that area, related to yachting, and that the environmental impact assessments varied, and that we do have to go through another process there. But I think that what is clear is that we both agree that that is an area where that sort of activity should be ongoing.

380 We have now received – I do not know whether it was at the tail end of his time – the MoD’s concerns about that, which do not impact as to the... The MoD’s concerns do not impact as to shape; they impact only as to the distance between the runway and where the active industrial activity needs to be, so there is a bit of a corridor that needs to be left relatively vacant; and the mechanism for reclamation, which is also a relevant issue, given that – and I do not know whether he was aware of this or not – the reclamation cannot be done in the way that the Westside reclamations were done because that could attract to the dead molluscs in the area a lot of birdlife, which near the runway you cannot have.

385 But this reclamation, as far as we are concerned, is a runner. We are talking already to the principal party commercially involved – because there are others – and it is something that should happen, in our view, as soon as it is possible to start work.

390 Hon. P R Caruana: Yes, well certainly, Mr Speaker, that is very welcome news.

I suspect that this was one of those issues where Gibraltar might benefit from a private conversation between us. There are people who adopt positions and they are not necessarily what they appear, in terms of whether they would like to see this happening or not, and the mechanisms that they use to delay it or bring it about, and it is just as well that the hon. Member is aware of those. He can assess them for himself. He can decide whether I was paranoid or realistic but, certainly, I would be grateful for the opportunity, which I can do here in the anteroom, just to give him one or two indicators that he might want to look out for.

But certainly, the Opposition is delighted that the Government is committed to reclamation in that area for those purposes.

400 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that indication and I will be taking the Leader of the Opposition up on the offer of a private chat about it.

He will know that, at the time that we were on the Opposition benches, we were not raising any opposition to this proposed reclamation, and our questioning about the issue used to be about timing as well. So on that issue, I think, both sides of the House would see this as a reclamation which is in the economic interests of Gibraltar and should go ahead.

410 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just bringing the issue back to the original question and to the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, were individuals on the waiting list, however long or otherwise the waiting list would have been at the time of the change in use of the multi-storey car park, consulted as to whether they may be interested in taking a space at the Devil’s Tower Road car park before the change of use?

415 Hon. P J Balban: There were adverts in the press regarding the take-up of any offer, if anybody actually wanted a parking space but, really, that car park has just never had the interest shown by residents in the area. So we have seen that it was just becoming an empty car park. The Government decided to use it for alternative reasons.

420 Hon. D J Bossino: Following on from my hon. and Learned Friend’s question, given the information we received, which is that there are 170 car-parking spaces available and given that the total number of applicants on the waiting list amounts to 215, I wonder whether the Government would seriously consider and make perhaps a greater effort to open up these parking spaces to anybody who is currently on the waiting list. That would, I think, go some way to reducing the waiting list quite substantially.

425 Just if I may, Mr Speaker, one of the reasons why we have asked this question is we have received representations from individuals who were potential applicants, but they were really put off by the information that they had received, which was that the waiting lists were quite long, and therefore they never bothered to apply. But if the Government has available to it in its resources, 170 spaces, it may make life easier for those current applicants and those who may wish to apply and have not because of the information that they have been receiving from the relevant authorities.

Hon. P J Balban: You are obviously referring to people who do not live in that area. The people who 430 have shown interest have been people who are not residents of that area, I assume. Is that right?

Hon. D J Bossino: The hon. Member is asking me the question, but I... (Interjection) It is irrelevant. (Interjections) It is irrelevant to the question which is posed.

435 The question is would the Government consider opening up the 170 spaces to the other 215 applicants and thereby assist in the reduction of the waiting list and make the life easier to those applicants?

Hon. P J Balban: Well, in fact, the 170 spaces which are available are available for people who go to the area, be it for funerals or be it for commercial purposes, to buy or whatever, or visit the family at the estate. So those 170 spaces are not up for grabs. They are part of the pay-and-display or the actual pay-as-you-go system in the car park.

440 Hon. D J Bossino: So the answer would be that, as far as the Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park is concerned, it is fully booked at this stage?

445 Hon. P J Balban: There are just a few spaces available, as I said, for any person living in the area who decides that they want a parking space. As I said, there are a few spaces available for that purpose. Other than that, it is taken, yes.

450 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister advise this House what he means by 'a few' and whether this could go some way to tackle the six applicants who have expressed an interest in the Devil's Tower Road multi-storey car park?

455 Hon. P J Balban: No. Actually 'a few' means three to five parking spaces left available and, as I said, they are specifically just in case someone moves dwellings and decides that they want parking in that area. That is what it is there for, just to keep the buffer there.

Vehicular traffic crossing the frontier Average waiting time

460 Clerk: Question 437, the Hon. D J Bossino.

465 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services provide this House with details of the average waiting time it takes vehicular traffic to cross the frontier, broken down on a monthly basis over the preceding five months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

470 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand over to him.

Frontier area policing
Officers deployed over last five months

Clerk: Question 438, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services provide this House with details of the manpower deployed at the frontier area over the last five months, to include the number of RGP police officers and Highway Enforcement Officers, the hours spent policing by these officers and the consequential costs incurred as a result of such deployment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the RGP has recently undergone an HR restructure and some officers have been redeployed to police traffic matters, including the frontier queues and security in the area.

From 0700 hours to 2200 hours on a daily basis, there are always two permanent police officers deployed to the area. This, however, is augmented during the course of the weekdays, particularly in the afternoons after 1600 hours when there is greater volume of traffic and diversions are implemented for phase two of the frontier loop and Devil's Tower Road. To achieve this, three police officers are deployed to the frontier for phase two implementation and a further three officers are deployed for the Devil's Tower Road/Sundial/Third Lane implementation. The length of time that these officers spend at this location depends entirely on the volume of traffic and the duration that the diversions are maintained.

Police deployment for these diversions can vary on a daily basis, so to obtain an accurate figure is impossible.

With respect to the Highways Enforcement Officers, they commenced frontier queue duties during the last week of January 2012. On average, there are three officers on duty only when the queues are formed. So figures for January, for the last week only, through to 9th May, the total hours worked are 500 and the total direct costs are £8,350.

Hon. D J Bossino: From the information there, Mr Speaker, would it be possible – I know it is going to be recorded in Hansard and we expect Hansard to be printed very soon – can the Hon. Minister perhaps provide me with a copy of the reply? I would be grateful for that.

Hon. P J Balban: Yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: Whilst I wait for the reply, I know it is not his area of responsibility, certainly not the Government's, but does the Minister know when the Human Resources restructure of the RGP took place?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is a matter which is work in progress. It has started. It has not been completed. It is a matter that I have been discussing with the Royal Gibraltar Police for a number of months.

I should add that, in particular, the discussions on the restructure have taken place since there has been a change of Commissioner and Commissioner Eddie Yome has taken over.

Hon. Chief Minister: It is his plan.

Hon. G H Licudi: He is the one that came up with a plan for restructure, particularly with emphasis being placed on community policing, with a number of officers being redeployed to create a Community Policing Unit. That is generally part of the restructure, with redeployments being done in order to achieve that purpose.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, in relation to frontier queues, which is the subject of this question on the Order Paper, can the Minister clarify whether he personally has had any involvement – the Minister for Justice, who has just risen to reply – had any involvement in relation to the restructure which would have had an impact on Police presence at the frontier area?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, this is purely an operational matter for the Royal Gibraltar Police. They handle that and I have not had any involvement or been asked to contribute to that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Indeed, Mr Speaker, one would expect that the Government would have had no involvement in relation to that issue.

Register of asbestos in public buildings Progress in starting

Clerk: Question 439, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state if a register of asbestos in public buildings, which would be a public document that people can refer to at any time, in accordance with their manifesto commitments, has started?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): The Government, in discharging its obligations as an employer and in fulfilment of its manifesto commitment, will shortly be initiating the process of establishing an asbestos register for all of its properties and will further be creating a central database where all such information will be held.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman for the fact that he is about to embark on providing this register, but could I try and seek some clarification?

When he talks about Government properties, can he expand what he actually means by that? Did he actually mean, for instance, like Parliament, which is just a public building, but in extension to public buildings, is he also referring to the Government housing rental stock, for instance?

Hon. P J Balban: The scope of the register is to include all public properties in which asbestos is found. This will include all Government offices, as well as Government housing stock. The Ministry for Housing has advised that they have been compiling a register of the latter since November 2006, which is updated on a yearly basis.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in relation to this exercise to provide the documentation to service for the register, does the Hon. Minister know how long such an exercise could take?

Hon. P J Balban: It is actually not possible at this stage to advise when this will be completed, because it is dependent, obviously, on the collection of all the data and its collation.

In any case, this document will be a live document, which means the register will, I suppose, one day, may finish, but it is something which will continue as more properties are identified as containing asbestos.

Hon. J J Netto: Could the Hon. Minister indicate, given that this must, one assumes, be a mammoth task almost, in terms of providing surveys to every Government public property, which will require a considerable period of time... Will extra resources be provided to the Factories Inspectorate for the purpose of doing this actual work?

Hon. P J Balban: No.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, can I just add, because there is a separate question in the Order Paper in relation to the Schools' Health & Safety audit, and I will be addressing the issue of the asbestos matters in schools in answer to that question, and it has an impact on what the hon. Member has asked because we... specifically in schools, and I will deal with this later on, but just to clarify this particular answer, particularly in schools we are engaging someone to carry out an asbestos survey for school buildings and that will clearly have a cost.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do not necessarily want to dwell too much on the question of extra resources, because I think there is also another question on the Order Paper, but I am a bit concerned that if the answer that the Hon. Minister has provided is that no extra resources will be provided for conducting such a huge task, and given that, in the past, the Hon. Minister has said that the work that the two existing Factories Inspectors have has been very much on the reactive side of doing things, as opposed to being proactive – which one can assume the service will be on the proactive rather than reactive – I think that if no extra resources are provided for, this particular exercise is going to take a huge amount of time.

Leaving that to one side for a minute, so I can put a supplementary question, what I would like to ask the Minister is that... As and when surveys are conducted, in terms of a building which has asbestos in the property, and provided that, as we all know, that asbestos has not been tampered with, then it is fine, there is no Health and Safety risk to be concerned about; but whenever there is asbestos which has been tampered with, which is broken and may be releasing some airborne fibre content into the atmosphere, obviously that means that there is a need to carry out the work as soon as possible, because of the health implications of finding the asbestos in such condition as a result of the survey.

So what I would like to ask the Minister is whether the Government has a commitment to ensure that, whenever there is asbestos which has been tampered with, they will carry out the works within a very short period of time.

Hon. P J Balban: The whole point of this register is actually for us to know exactly where the asbestos is so that, hopefully, does not occur, which means to say we will know exactly where the asbestos is so they will know exactly how to treat and how to embark on those works, knowing, obviously, where it is located.

Hon. J J Netto: With respect, my question was pointing in a slightly different way and perhaps prompted when I was asking a supplementary question to the Minister for Housing, from my hon. Friend, the shadow Minister, Edwin Reyes, and I was actually looking at, for instance, the Housing Works Agency, when they are conducting their own works. I was trying to ascertain from the Hon. Minister for Housing, Mr Bruzon, whether there was a particular response time for a particular category of works. He seems to indicate in his supplementary that there is not, apart from whatever is constituted in the category of emergencies. I was trying to bring out the question of [inaudible] works and asbestos removal; but the impression I got from the Minister for Housing was that it was not an emergency, it was not an urgent thing to do.

So, I would obviously argue the opposite. I would argue that if there is asbestos which has been tampered with and is releasing airborne fibres into the atmosphere, that the works need to be conducted as soon as possible. So there needs to be very close liaison between your own people and the Housing Works Agency, if it is a Government dwelling, or even perhaps GJBS, if it is a public building like Parliament, etc.

So what I am trying to find out is what discussions there have been between different Departments that belong to the different ministries in making sure that the response time for urgent work of this nature is done very soon.

Hon. P J Balban: I totally agree.

At the moment, the minute that asbestos is found, obviously something needs to be done urgently because they are airborne fibres and it is obviously detrimental to health. So the moment it is actually discovered and disturbed... because, obviously, the asbestos could be there and if we do not tamper with it, it is perfectly fine for it to remain there, but the moment it is tampered with, there is the risk of airborne fibres and the obvious detrimental risk to a person's health and obviously action should be taken immediately.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, perhaps one more final supplementary question.

Although I am sceptical on the question that no extra resources are going to be dedicated to do the surveys, one assumes, of course, on the other hand, that if there is any particular sitting tenant in a Government flat, or if there are some civil servants working in any public building, and if they were to report the fact that they are concerned that there may have been some asbestos contained within that particular building and the asbestos is broken and it may constitute a Health and Safety risk, one presumes, of course, that within the existing factory inspectors, they will immediately come to ascertain the degree of seriousness of the asbestos in order to carry out the work as soon as possible. Is that the case?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, not only is it the case, but we have had occasion, since being elected, to face such a scenario, and the work has commenced within 24 hours.

Hon. J J Netto: In a Government property?

640

Hon. Chief Minister: In a Government property, and the work commenced within 24 hours.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful to the Chief Minister.

645

When the work is actually being done, in terms of allocating who is going to do the work, if it is a Government flat it goes to the Housing Works Agency and if it is a public building – I keep saying Parliament, but I am not actually referring to Parliament – does the work then automatically go to GJBS, or perhaps it could be put out to tender, or... What is the system in place?

650

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman cannot do is say, ‘This is something which is very urgent. Don’t you agree if we discover it we have to do it quickly?’ – with which we do agree – and then say, ‘How are you going to allocate it? Are you going to go out to tender?’

655

Obviously, if it is something that you need to deal with within 24 hours, you have to use the Government’s own resources to deal with it very quickly. What we have done in those circumstances – because there is the expertise, as the hon. Gentleman will know, in GJBS – is the only thing that really we could legitimately do quickly was have GJBS deal with it.

We have not yet had to deal with it being in Government housing stock – it has really just happened in an administrative building of the Government – and in those circumstances a proper and appropriate way to deal with it quickly was to call in Government’s maintenance company, GJBS.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, perhaps one final question.

Mr Speaker: That was promised three ago. (Laughter)

665

Hon. J J Netto: With your indulgence, Mr Speaker!

I keep coming back to one of the original answers provided by the Minister in relation to no extra resource is going to be provided for conducting the survey. Does it mean, therefore, that the Government is thinking of outsourcing into the private sector the execution of the surveys to do the register?

670

Hon. P J Balban: I think we need to clarify to the hon. Gentleman that it is not the intention for us to go out and generate surveys and inspections. The point of the asbestos register is if works are carried out, as recently happened in one of the Government buildings, and asbestos is discovered, then obviously that building will be listed within the asbestos register and any other building will be, as is already... There are a number of buildings, in terms of the housing stock, which have already been identified and that information, since 2006, has already been part of an asbestos register, as such.

675

So it is not the intention for us to go seeking and hunting for dwellings. It is just as they are discovered they will form part of our asbestos register in the future.

680

Factories Inspectors Making work proactive

Clerk: Question 440, the Hon. J J Netto.

685

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the comments made by the Hon. the Minister for Health & Safety on the launch of IOSH Branch in Gibraltar on 22nd March 2012, in that the work of the Factories Inspectors was solely reactive, what plans does the Minister have to make their work proactive?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, at present the role of the Factories Inspectors in the Department is being assessed to see ways in which this side of Health and Safety may be targeted. By increasing manpower within the Department, as a first step, the Government plans to be able to engage in more proactive work.

695 This has, in fact, already commenced by way of Health and Safety audits which are intended to help increase awareness within these environments, with the aim of helping to reduce the risk of potential injuries in the workplace.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

700 Could the Hon. Minister please indicate or expand as to who is assessing the Department?

Hon. P J Balban: The Senior Factories Inspector has been tasked to look at his proposals for review, what his suggestions are for the Department so we can provide the other wing, the other facet of Health and Safety which has not been targeted in the past. That is the proactive side.

705 Hon. J J Netto: So, basically, what the Minister is saying is that this is an internal report that the Senior Factories Inspector has provided to the Minister and that is what the Government is considering at the moment, as opposed to being an external... looking from the outside at the whole range of duties that the Factories Inspectors are conducting.

710 The Minister also mentioned, in his first answer, that they are conducting, I believe he said, Health and Safety audits. Could he expand on the type of audits that they are conducting?

Hon. P J Balban: The one that immediately springs to mind, obviously, is the Health and Safety audit being carried out at schools at present. That is one of the audits being carried out.

715 Hon. J J Netto: Is it the intention to proceed to do other audits, not just necessarily within Government workplaces but perhaps outside places, whether to do perhaps with the dry docks or with the construction industry or some other ones which, in the opinion of the Factories Inspector, may be in need to spend some time looking at the workings of their practices perhaps in the private sector. Would that proceed then?

720 Hon. P J Balban: At present, obviously, before the review is carried out and we decide how the Department is going to be structured, it would not be possible with the resources at the moment, human resources are just not sufficient enough to be able to carry this out.

725 Clerk: Question four hundred and –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

730 Hon. J J Netto: So is it then, therefore, the hope of this section – Department, if I can call it that – that as and when more people are employed as factory inspectors, to be able to expand this particular role into other industry groups?

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, we will be considering that.

735 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does the Government have an idea at this stage as to how many Factories Inspectors they intend will be employed?

Hon. P J Balban: Not at this moment in time. At the moment, there are two Factories Inspectors, but there is no idea at the moment.

740 Hon. D J Bossino: The Minister, Mr Speaker, made reference to a review. Presumably that is going to be a review of the Department. If my assumption is correct, does he know when that review will conclude?

The reason why I am asking that, following on from my earlier supplementary, is that the results of the conclusion of that review will determine how many Factories Inspectors the Government intends to employ.

745 Hon. P J Balban: At the moment, I am not able to actually give you an idea as to how long this review will take.

750

Inspection of work equipment
Transposition of EU Directive 2009/104

Clerk: Question 441, the Hon. J J Netto.

755

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, has the Minister for Health & Safety a target date for the transposition of EU Directive 2009/104 on the inspection of work equipment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

760

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, Directive 2009/104/EC is a recast of Directive 89/655/EEC, as amended by Directive 2007/30/EC.

Directive 2009/104/EC has no transposition date. However, the transposition date in respect of Directive 2007/30/EC is 31st December 2012.

Her Majesty's Government plans to transpose Directive 2007/30/EC by its transposition date.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I was trying profusely to write down all those dates of all those Directives. I wonder whether the hon. Gentleman would not mind having the paper actually, a photocopy, with all those particular names of the Directives, so I can actually follow them, if he does not mind.

770

Perhaps while that information is coming through, can the hon. Gentleman tell me what this particular Directive, even though it has been superseded, or is part of the previous one, is basically to ensure, obviously, there will be some kind of another register, if I can call it that, where the Factory Inspector will know in all work places throughout Gibraltar, public and private, where all equipment is and is working to the satisfaction of the Factory Inspector, so that following, at the end of the day, what is the push of Health & Safety, to ensure that proper conditions are maintained and a log book, perhaps, is maintained to ensure that the work equipment is provided.

775

So my question is does the Factory Inspector have some kind of a log book register to ensure where the work equipments are and that they are maintained to the proper standards?

780

Hon. P J Balban: I will actually have to ask my Factories Inspectors that question but just for clarification, this is the same – it is a recast of the previous Directive, so it is just organising the same Directive in a different form, so it follows on from the last one.

785

Factories Inspectorate
Provision of requested statistical data

Clerk: Question 442, the Hon. J J Netto.

790

Hon. J J Netto: Is the Minister for Health & Safety now in a position to answer Written Question Nos. W5/2012, W6/2012, W7/2012, W8/2012, W9/2012, W11/2012 and W12/2012?

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): No, sir.

795

Two software programmes have been tried and tested by the Factories Inspectorate and both have failed to fulfil their statistical requirements. The Factories Inspectorate are still pursuing other software providers in search of a software that provides the statistical data requested.

800

Hon. J J Netto: Do I then take it from the hon. Gentleman that the software programme that was purchased, in probably December 2011 or January 2012, is not up to the standard that the Factory Inspectors would have liked and, as a result of that, they are abandoning that software programme and they have purchased another one? Is that the case?

Hon. P J Balban: No, sir, it was actually a trial version of the said statistical software. In fact, they have trialled two softwares of this type and they have not been successful in providing the information, as requested by yourself.

The sad thing here really is that the original software programme – which is the one that worked well, apparently – its licence agreement was terminated in June 2009, because if that had not happened in 2009, they would still be benefiting from that programme. We have actually gone back to the same suppliers of the programme because, obviously, that worked for them then, and the actual company has changed the way it does its software and it is no longer suitable for us.

So, had we not terminated that licence agreement, then we would not be sitting here today discussing why this information is not available.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, I can understand what the hon. Gentleman is saying. I remember the software programme that he is actually mentioning now was a software programme that was purchased in my time, way back in our first term of office, so it has served its purpose for quite a number of years. Obviously, at the end of the day, whether they have renewed or not renewed the licence, and that caused a problem, I think you said in 2009, it has led to the situation we are in now.

Can I ask the hon. Gentleman whether the software programme that is being contemplated, is it a software programme that has been produced, if I can call it that, by the Health and Safety Executive in the UK? In other words, is it purposely designed by the Health and Safety Executive, albeit that it has to be tweaked for the local circumstances in Gibraltar?

Is that the case, or is it a software programme where you have to get a technician to actually start from scratch, not necessarily one that is modelled on the Health and Safety Executive in the UK?

Hon. P J Balban: I will need to ask the Factories Inspector exactly what it is, but I would assume that it is something that comes off the shelf. Otherwise, if it was something that was tweaked and done for our specific purposes, then we would be tweaking it in the right way so that it could perform the functions that we want it to perform.

So I am assuming that what is happening is that they are purchasing software which is just not doing what they request it to do.

Hon. J J Netto: Perhaps one more final question on this one.

Given that it is not my intention to ask this particular question every month, perhaps if the hon. Gentleman can indicate to me when he reckons that the current work which is being done now will pay some dividends and provide the information which I have been asking for. Can he indicate whether, perhaps, in two months' time or in four months' time he will be in a position to provide the information?

Hon. P J Balban: How long is a piece of string? What I am trying to say is as soon as... We are obviously actively pursuing getting it, because obviously this will help the Department. The Department has been without this facility since 2009, when the contract was terminated. The sooner we have that, then obviously it will serve our purposes as well as the Department's.

So really the answer to the question is the sooner the better, but I cannot tell him when they are going to pinpoint the right software programme.

Factories Inspectors Inspections in March/April 2012

Clerk: Question 443, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many inspections during March and April 2012 did the Factories Inspectors conduct, showing the industry group targeted, whether any possible breach of the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation may have been committed by any private company at a Gibraltar Government or MOD workplace, and whether legal advice is being sought?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

860

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 444 to 446/2012.

865

Health & Safety
Reported accidents in March/April 2012

Clerk: Question 444.

870

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state if there have been any reported accidents during the months of March and April 2012, showing the industry group involved and stating which ones were reportable, major and fatal, if any?

875

Factories Inspectors
Site meetings and advice in March/April 2012

Clerk: Question 445.

880

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many site meetings and advice were given by the Factories Inspectors during the months of March and April 2012, broken down by month and industry group?

885

Factories Inspectors
Prohibitions and improvement notices in March/April 2012

890

Clerk: Question 446.

895

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many prohibitions and improvement notices were issued in the months of March and April 2012, if any, broken down by month and industry group, and specifying the reason or reasons for issuing the notice in this period which may have brought operations to a halt, until the inspector was satisfied that the correct standard had been duly complied with?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedule which I now hand over to him.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the first thing is I would like to give my thanks to the Minister because providing the information in this manner is quite helpful. So I would like to give him my thanks for that.

In relation to my supplementary question, if we look at the page on inspections, we see that there is a preponderance for the Factory Inspectors to focus their inspections almost, one would say, on the construction industry side. This is something which I have referred to in the past. What I would like to ask the Minister – because I have to put this in the form of a supplementary question – is why is it that they are concentrating almost exclusively on the construction industry and perhaps not distributing the time that they have available, given that there are two Factory Inspectors, to do a much wider search of inspections to other industry groups?

In the past, when I have asked that question, the Minister has said, ‘Well, because normally there is a higher incidence of accidents in the construction industry,’ which is true – that is true – but just in the same way that that is true, it is also true to say that the second highest level of accidents is also in the dry docks, so I just do not see any sort of inspection by the Factory Inspectors on perhaps what is the second highest industry group.

So could the Minister provide some clarification as to why there is almost exclusive focus on the construction industry?

Hon. P J Balban: As you rightly said earlier, it is their perception of where risk is greatest and, although I accept that you have also mentioned the dry docks, construction is clearly evidently the place where accidents happen with the greatest frequency, so this is why – I assume this is why – they are targeting the construction industry more than anything, but obviously I will look into...

I am aware that they have carried out something recently at the dry docks as well. They have been there. It might not appear in these statistics yet – perhaps next month, the month of May, because this runs all the way till April, but I am aware that... I believe they have been involved with the dry docks recently, but I need to confirm that and, if that is the case, obviously, these will appear in next month's statistics.

930 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does the Minister know whether these inspections take place after accidents occur, or is that not necessarily an assumption that one ought to be making?

Hon. P J Balban: No, the inspections are instigated for different reasons. Sometimes the general public calls in and says, 'There is some scaffolding somewhere and there are people walking too close to the edge, please inspect it', or there is rubble falling from building sites.

935 So, many of these inspections are actually instigated due to public reports, or even reports from other [inaudible] persons around the area, be they professionals or the general public.

940 Factories Inspectors
Recruitment

Clerk: Question 447, the Hon. J J Netto.

945 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state if new Factories Inspectors have been employed recently and, if so, could the Minister state if such vacancies were trawled through the Civil Service Bulletin or not? If not, what was the recruitment process involved and the qualification criteria used, if any?

950 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no new Factory Inspectors have been employed recently.

955 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, what prompted me to ask this question in the first place was because, Gibraltar being such a small place, I actually saw in one of the Government public vehicles one of the Factory Inspectors, along with a Health & Safety – not the representative, but the other ones – who normally works, or used to work in the Housing Works Agency. In fact, he was wearing one of those luminous jackets and it had said something like, 'Health & Safety Inspector' or something like that, so I thought to myself, 'Yes, this particular person that was doing this type of work for what used to be Buildings and Works, now the Housing Works Agency, and perhaps he is working closer.'

960 Even though I take for granted that there has been no person employed recently, is the Minister perhaps trying to maximise the views of other Health & Safety inspectors – not the Factory Inspectors, Health & Safety Inspectors, from other Government Departments – in the work that the Factory Inspectors are doing? Is that the case?

Hon. P J Balban: I must say, well spotted, first and foremost, having spotted the gentleman with his green jacket!

970 But that is the case, yes. There were some members of staff from the Housing Works Agency and they have shown an interest in being deployed to help out in the Health & Safety Department. Because, obviously, we are lacking resources, then the Government is happy for this to happen, as long as the staff are happy to do so and that the members of staff are, in fact, capable of doing so. That is the case.

975 Hon. J J Netto: Could the Minister perhaps indicate, then, how many Health & Safety Inspectors from other Government Departments are, actually, if I can call it, seconded to the Factories Inspectors. Is he aware of that?

980 Hon. P J Balban: As we have two individuals who are – one of them is seconded, one is not – the first one does other things apart from that, but there are two members of staff, apart from the input we have from Technical Services, Health and Safety experts, who actually conduct the Health and Safety audits of schools as well.

So, there are the two Factory Inspectors, plus the two gentlemen from the Housing Works Agency, plus our in-house Technical Services Department as well, who are all involved, either fully or somewhat, in 985 providing support to the Department.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, obviously there is nothing wrong necessarily with other Health & Safety inspectors being seconded with the Factory Inspectors and, in fact, going out with the Factory Inspectors, because, obviously, they have got much to gain from such skills and knowledge that the Factory Inspectors do have.

990 What I would like to ask the hon. Gentleman is, given that he is thinking about employing more Factory Inspectors, will there be a certain criteria in terms of qualifications that will be the prerequisite for being able to apply for the post?

995 Hon. P J Balban: Obviously, persons who are to apply for this post, if, obviously, this materialises, will have to have, obviously, all the qualifications needed to be able to apply for the post in question.

Hon. J J Netto: But does he know which are the qualifications that will be the necessary ones?

1000 Hon. P J Balban: No, I am not entirely sure what the necessary ones would be.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not going to dwell more with this, suffice to say that perhaps that I will write to him separately, to try and understand what the qualification may be in the future.

KGV works investigations
Unsafe practices; breaches of Factories Act

1010 Clerk: Question 448, the Hon. J J Netto.

1015 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state if, as a result of my letter to the Senior Factory Inspector with regard to the unsafe practices at the KGV works, he has inspected the site and, if so, has he seen any breaches of the Factories Act or any of its subsidiary legislation, and whether he has recommended any improvements to the work environment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

1020 Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Principal Factories Inspector did not consider that unsafe practices were being carried out at the King George V Hospital and therefore it was seen that there was no need to inspect the site.

However, he made further enquiries and met with the management of the above mentioned project to discuss the issues raised in your letter, and they were satisfied with the measures that were in place.

1025 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, that was a very predictable answer! (Laughter)

Hon. P J Balban: It is true, though.

1030 Hon. J J Netto: But, while I can understand it is predictable in the sense that, perhaps, the Hon. Minister may wish to shield himself from the legal niceties of saying no unsafe practices did emanate, what I would urge the Hon. Minister is to leave the legal niceties for protecting himself and perhaps provide a more commonsense answer to the question.

1035 I say this, Mr Speaker, because the fact of the matter is that, much as he would like to say to the contrary, there were many occasions in which those particular youngsters were not supervised at all. We have reports, not of one day but many days in which they were not supervised.

The fact of the matter is that in work like this, normally, under Health and Safety, you look for best practices. If you look for best practices, he would know, as the Factory Inspectors know, that kids, or youngsters, should have had hard helmets on and the proof of that is that people have seen the youngsters, not only unsupervised on the scaffold, but they have seen them leaning with their body outside of the scaffold.

They have been seen on the roofs, chasing seagulls away from the roof of the KGV Hospital.

Mr Speaker, I am not trying to score any party political points at all, in relation to this, much as the Chief Minister seems to indicate that he is not satisfied with that, by his gesture. What I am concerned is, because we have all been youngsters – I have been a young person myself and I have not been an angel, I can say that – but when young people are left to their own devices, they will do things that will increase the risk that they pose in the workplace. The last thing I would want to have is a situation where an accident were to happen, something which we would all be very sorry about and then I say, ‘Well, I warned you about it.’ I would not want that to happen.

What I would want to happen, for the good sake of the young people there, is that when the Hon. Minister goes away and, in fact, the Minister for Health, as well, given that this is property that belongs under the auspices of the GHA, is that they ensure that the people that have to supervise the youngsters are supervising the youngsters and that best practice, regardless of whether the law tells you that they should wear hats or not, is adopted, so that the youngsters ensure, when they become craftsmen, that they take the best practice, as far as Health & Safety is concerned.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the Factory Inspectorate actually applies best practices. Obviously, people working there, they cannot be nannied and they cannot be held by the hand to make sure... I have been assured that they were supervised at all times, whether the supervisor popped in for a coffee and came out, this is what...

The best practices are sought at all times and, in this particular case, because the work involved collective protection overheads, there was no need and they were still painting. They were painting the façade: there was no need for protective helmets. This is the advice that I have received from the professionals. It is not something that –

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I –

Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member poses... or makes a statement, I observe that the last time there was no question; this time there must be a question. [Inaudible] not repeating the same advice.

Hon. J J Netto: My only question, Mr Speaker – I can understand the response that he is giving me, for the sake of Hansard – but my question is, when he actually goes back and when he actually goes and talks to the Factory Inspectors, please ensure that best practice is not what they are practising in Gibraltar, but is the commonsense practice applied in local authorities in the UK, which is that youngsters on a scaffold will wear hard hats to ensure their safety at all times.

So can I ask the Hon. Minister, not for the purpose of Hansard, that when he goes away, he actually ensures that all protection that is necessary, even if it is going beyond what the Factory Act says, is provided for.

Hon. P J Balban: As I said previously, I am satisfied with the response given by the Principal Factories Inspector, but the Department will always strive to find the best, or to enforce the best working practices possible in that respect.

Hon. G H Licudi: Can I just add that responses given by Government Ministers are not just given for the purposes of Hansard, they are given in response to a particular question and are given honestly and truthfully?

In this particular case, the issue arises out of professional advice received by this Minister in particular, and if the professional advice is that the practice that has been adopted was best practice and there was no unsafe practice, then that is what the Minister has indicated is the Government’s position. I hope the hon. Member will accept that, because that is the advice of the professionals.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with respect –

Procedural

1095

Mr Speaker: Order. Order. The point has been made, a well-made point. We move to Question 449.

1100

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I am not entitled to...?

Mr Speaker: No!

Hon. J J Netto: Thanks very much, for not being able to – 1105

Clerk: Question 449, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, why is one Member of the House entitled to make a speech and another not entitled to react to it? That also is a novel practice from the Chair.

1110

Mr Speaker: No, the point that the Hon. Jaime Netto made in his supplementaries –

Hon. P R Caruana: I am not talking about that, Mr Speaker; I am talking about the last exchange.

Mr Speaker: Well, I am talking about what I see going on in this House.

The point that the Hon. Jaime Netto made was that an answer was aimed at satisfying the requirements of Hansard and so forth. The Hon. the Minister for Education and other responsibilities made the point that answers given in this House by a Minister are not aimed at Hansard, but are aimed at answering the question.

That, in my view, is a valid point to make and there was no need for further discussion of that subject. That is why I said there was no need for further discussion.

Hon. P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, a subject is either appropriate to be discussed, in which case it is appropriate to allow both sides of the House to discuss it, or it is not appropriate to be discussed, in which case neither side of the House should be allowed to discuss it.

1125

What I cannot understand is a situation where a subject is appropriate to be discussed by the Government side, but not by the Opposition side.

Mr Speaker: With respect, the Hon. Jaime Netto made a statement that an answer given by the Minister was aimed at satisfying Hansard. That is a point made by a Member on this side of the House.

1130

A Minister on this side of the House has risen to make the point, quite properly, that the answers are not aimed at Hansard but aimed at answering the question. The matter has been discussed. Each one has had his say on the matter. It has been discussed. We could go on, and on, and on forever.

What will the Hon. Jaime Netto say? He was probably going to say something else, but it would never end that discussion. It is not for discussion really.

Question 449.

EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

1140

Schools' Health and Safety audit Completion and findings

Clerk: Question 449, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1145

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education state whether the schools' Health and Safety audit has been completed, and what the findings are?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1150

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, as previously stated in answer to Question 25 of January 2012, the first site visit took place in January 2012. As I also indicated at the time, it was envisaged that the process would run for several months. The audit has not been completed.

1155

I am, however, pleased to say that the following schools have been audited: Gibraltar College; Bayside Comprehensive School; Westside Comprehensive School; Bishop Fitzgerald Middle School; Sacred Heart Middle School.

The findings of the schools' Health and Safety audit will be released on completion of the whole exercise.

I would also say, Mr Speaker, noting part of the answer that I gave in January – which was the fact that the process will take several months – does not mean that Health and Safety issues are not looked at in the interim.

I can say, in particular having regard to the discussion this morning on asbestos, that there are two matters which have been recommended for action, in respect of the schools that have been audited. One was a fire door which was locked in one of the schools – I believe it was the College – and that matter was recommended for immediate action and that has been actioned.

The second matter was a recommendation that an asbestos survey be carried out in the schools that have been audited. I am pleased to say that our arrangements are being made at the moment for an asbestos survey to be carried out in respect of each of those schools. The purpose of the asbestos survey is quite simply to facilitate the identification of asbestos-containing materials that could possibly be contained within the building's fabric.

1170

There are three schools at the moment that have an asbestos register: Bishop Fitzgerald Middle School; Governor's Meadow First School; and St Bernard's First School. So of the five that have been audited already in this Health and Safety audit, one of them already has an asbestos register and we are in the process of looking at carrying out an asbestos survey in respect of the others so that an asbestos register can be compiled in respect of all the schools.

1175

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that.

Mr Speaker, can the Minister then confirm if there are any other recommendations that have been made so far or issues highlighted from the audit that has taken place so far? Those were the only two that you mentioned that have been highlighted.

1180

Hon. G H Licudi: Those are the only two for immediate concern and our aim in carrying out this process is twofold. Firstly, we have a Health and Safety audit going forward, reporting all the results of any issues that may be raised; and, secondly, if there are any matters that are raised which require either immediate action or are recommended for action to be taken straight away. Those are the only two items that have been recommended for immediate action and we are taking immediate action on those things.

1185

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Health and Safety audit be finished before the end of this academic year?

1190

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker. My understanding is that it is expected that this will be completed some time in the autumn.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when the audit is completed, will the findings be tabled in this House?

1195

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have not contemplated tabling the findings in this House, but, as I have said, the findings will be released on completion.

1200

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister advise when he envisages next year's Health and Safety audit of all schools to start, as he mentioned in answer to Question 25 in January that this is intended to be a yearly audit?

1205 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes. Next year's audit will start next year.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, if the schools' audits are to be yearly, can the Minister advise how many months of the year that the schools will not be in audit mode or implementing the recommendations?

1210 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is intended that this is done by calendar year, rather than academic year. We have started this year's audit in January and it is going to take a number of months. We do expect that – I cannot say on 1st January of next year; in fact, the schools will be closed on 1st January of next year – but as from January, we will be looking at carrying out the 2013 audit – in other words, organising the 2013 audit.

1215 As I stand here today I cannot say, 'Well, we are actually going to do it on 15th January or 17th January or 1st February', but there will be an audit in 2013.

1220 I believe I also indicated, when this matter was last raised, back in January of this year, that once the first audit has been completed, then we envisage that it will be a simpler process to carry out a second audit, because a lot of the groundwork will have been done. A lot of the identification process will have been carried out and it will simply be a question of revisiting those issues and seeing whether there are any new issues which require any action at all; but it certainly will be an easier process second time around, which will take place in 2013.

1225 University of Gibraltar
Plans for setting up

Clerk: Question 450, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1230 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us what the plans are for the setting up of a University of Gibraltar?

1235 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Government has commissioned a study, exploring the different options available.

1240 A variety of alternative pathways associated with degree-awarding powers are being explored. The study is being carried out by Professor Daniella Tilbury of the University of Gloucestershire. Is it anticipated that Professor Tilbury will report to the Government in the autumn of 2012.

1245 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister tell us what the options are for the setting-up of the University of Gibraltar, in particular the one given to the Government by the Liberal Democrat MP, Simon Hughes, when he brought with him a proposal from the University of London, I believe?

1250 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Hughes, as I believe I explained in an interview with GBC at the time, is a good friend of Gibraltar and is assisting [inaudible] has come to the Government voluntarily with his views on this. He had had some contact with the University of London and, in fact, I followed that up myself.

I had a meeting in London with the Chief Executive of the International Programme and his senior staff of the University of London, to see exactly what it is that they offer, and there are a number of options which are available.

1255 That is one of the aspects that has been looked at in this study: whether we do associate ourselves with the University of London and whether the degrees which are awarded here are University of London degrees and, because there are a number of different options available, in what way we are associated as a College with the University of London...

So the hon. Member asks, what is actually being considered, what options are being considered, and that is clearly one of the options in terms of the degree-awarding powers. Are we going to have our own degree-awarding powers? Are we going to delegate that and enter into an arrangement with someone else?

The other options that are being considered clearly involve what courses are going to be given, which courses are going to be full-time, which courses are going to be part-time, staffing arrangements which may be necessary. Location issues are clearly being considered.

So there are a whole range of options that are being considered as part of the study and that is why we felt it was necessary to commission a proper study, to look at all this and advise the Government,

School secretaries
Additional full-time employed; cost

Clerk: Question 451, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us how many more secretaries, or the equivalent, are being employed to service the schools on a full-time basis and how much will this cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the school secretary complement in December 2011 was the following: four full-timers – two in each of the comprehensive schools, that was the four full-timers; and 11 part-timers, with some schools sharing a part-time secretary.

Of the 11 part-timers, 10 have indicated that they wish to take up full employment and are actually already carrying out a full school day.

The pay and conditions for the full-time post is currently being discussed with the secretaries concerned and their union officials.

The eleventh person of the part-timers is actually retiring at the end of August of this year and is therefore not interested in becoming a full-timer.

The Government intends to employ three additional full-time secretaries: one to fill the vacancy created by the person that is retiring and two new posts, so that no school will have to share a secretary, as has happened until now and is still actually happening because the posts have not been filled.

The additional cost of having all schools with full-time secretaries will be determined once the current discussions with the union have been concluded.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker.

So what you are saying is that the full-time equivalent is eight: ten part-timers going full-time, so that is half each, plus another three. Am I correct?

Hon. G H Licudi: I am not sure that I follow the ‘full-time equivalent’. Can the hon. Member clarify what she means?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, part-time is considered half a person and ten part-timers will be going full-time, so that is the equivalent of five whole, and then you are employing another three new full-time secretaries. So five and three is eight.

Hon. G H Licudi: Five and three is eight, plus the four full-timers that currently exist. There are four full-timers already: two in Bayside and two in Westside.

As the hon. Member rightly says, of the 11 part-timers, 10 have indicated that they wish to go full-time and we have already made arrangements because we wanted immediate cover on the schools. We have already made arrangements and those are actually working the full day already. So that cover has already been provided.

But, yes, we will need to employ a couple of extra, one for the retiring and a couple extra simply because 1315 there are four schools sharing two secretaries at the moment. Therefore, on those two secretaries becoming full-time, two schools are left without a secretary and we will need to employ two extra to cover those two schools.

1320 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I ask, as well, the Hon. Minister for Education, with all the statistical figures we have been given, is the College of Further Education and their secretarial support team, are they included in those statistics or are they being treated as a separate entity?

Hon. G H Licudi: The College is certainly included.

1325 Hon. E J Reyes: My understanding is that there was a full-time secretarial support at the College and there has been no reference made to that.

Hon. G H Licudi: My understanding – the information I have – is that the College actually shares a secretary at the moment and the College will be getting a full-time secretary.

1330 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I understand because I think the Minister is talking ‘secretary’ by classifying nomenclature, because College should have... and I purposely use the words ‘secretarial support’ because it has got someone from a clerical grade there. (Interjection) Yes?

1335 So perhaps for future statistics – I am not too bothered now – the Hon. Minister might be able to provide us with details of school secretaries and/or secretarial support, which means they are non-teaching staff. They are not involved in any classroom support, but rather within the administration.

It does make a very big difference within a school, if you have a clerical officer there. In fact, the clerical officer, by job descriptions themselves, can carry out far greater ranges of tasks than a school secretary who normally does more telephone, receptionist type of work.

1340 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, the hon. Member... it is true. There is clerical support in the College; but the question has nothing to do with that. One thing is an AO that may be engaged in the College... The question was specifically about school secretaries, which is a specific post, and that is the answer that I was addressing.

1345 Certainly, I can confirm that the College does have additional clerical support, which other schools do not have.

New teaching posts Distribution

1350 Clerk: Question 452, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1355 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education explain how the 47 new teaching posts have been distributed among the schools and the Department of Education?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1360 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the 47 new teaching posts will be distributed on the basis of the process explained in answer to Question 278/2012 of March 2012. They will address the specific needs of schools and the Department of Education, as discussed with head teachers. Interviews for these posts have already been held. The process of selection has not been completed and it is envisaged that this will occur within the next month.

1365 As a result of this process, as we have already said, the teaching complement will be increased from 333 to 380.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education advise when he will be in a position to tell us how these 47 posts have been distributed?

1370 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, as I have indicated in the answer, it is envisaged that the whole process will be completed within the next month.

I should add, Mr Speaker, that there are a number of issues which the hon. Member may want to be aware of because the previous question which dealt with this also asks whether the 47 teachers were in addition to any retiring teachers that may be engaged and I confirm that that was, in fact, the position.

1375 In fact, I can say today that we have confirmation of 10 teachers retiring this academic year. So the process that is actually being done and the interviews that have been conducted are for the recruitment not of 47, but of 57 new teachers – 10 to take up the 10 retiring posts and 47 new additional teachers.

1380 There has also been, quite recently, a batch of nine TLR promotions and that often leads to transfers within schools. Those matters, that process... interviews for that were held on 24th and 25th April and, as a result of that process, there will be some movement within schools. All that also has to be taken into account, as part of the consultation process with head teachers in deciding which posts go where.

The hon. Member will understand that I am reluctant to go into any specific detail as to which post arising in which particular school, when candidates have been selected and do not currently know the outcome of that selection process.

School class numbers Maintaining optimum level

1390 Clerk: Question 453, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1395 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us what the Government's policy on maintaining an optimum number of children in classes at each level of the education system is, what these numbers are for each school and year, and how any shortfalls will be addressed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1400 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the policy for maintaining an optimum maximum number of children in classes at each level of the education system is based on the following: First Schools, to work with a class size of approximately 20 pupils; Middle Schools to work with a class size of approximately 25 pupils; Secondary Schools, Years 8 and 9, approximately 25 pupils; Years 10 to 13 will depend on year group and subject.

1405 Head teachers will have some flexibility and discretion as to how they deploy their teachers, having regard to subject needs and based on educational grounds.

Class sizes is one of the factors which is being considered in relation to the distribution of the 47 new teaching posts that are currently being engaged; but this process – the whole process of the number of children in each class – will be subject to ongoing review and discussions and the Government may have to revise the policy, taking into account feedback from the Department of Education and school heads.

1410 Finally, I would stress that the numbers that I have given are optimum numbers, not fixed numbers, and clearly head teachers, on educational grounds, would have to decide how they deploy their teaching complements.

1415 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is any special consideration being given to St Martin's School, in terms of optimum size of classes there?

1420 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is a matter that I will need to take up with the Government officials. It is not a matter that I have initially discussed in the context of preparing this particular question; but, clearly, class sizes will depend on the needs of the children in that particular school.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, Mr Speaker, perhaps I will write to the Minister requesting that information.

Mr Speaker, if it transpires that some schools are to add extra classrooms, in order to lower the 1425 teacher/pupil ratio to the optimum number or very close to that optimum number, which rooms will be used? Will specialist teaching rooms be used if the school physically, the building physically, cannot take the extra classrooms?

1430 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Member talks of pupil/teacher ratio. We have not worked on pupil/teacher ratio. We believe that that is the wrong way of looking at this. There are in each school a number of teachers that either do not have a full timetable, like heads and deputy heads, and therefore to look at a school and simply count the number of pupils and the number of teachers and do a ratio is not, I believe, the right way of going about it. We prefer to look at the optimum number of children in each particular class, rather than the overall ratio. So I thought I would just clarify that particular point.

1435 With regard to classes, that is certainly something that the head teachers will have been considering in putting forward their staffing requirements for the school and those have been discussed with the Department of Education.

1440 There has been, as far as I am aware, no identification of a specific problem with classrooms which might be available in order to accommodate the extra teachers and these classes, and, as I said, head teachers will have flexibility.

There are plans for refurbishment and creating extra classrooms in some schools, which we are currently working on and which we will announce in due course, but not specifically in relation to this particular process, because that is not an issue that has been highlighted as being particularly problematic.

1445 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful that refurbishment will accommodate it, because representations have been made to us about concerns that extra classrooms could be at the expense of specialist teaching rooms, and this is obviously something that parents and teachers will not like to see happen.

1450 So can the Minister assure us that, at all costs, art rooms, libraries, kitchen labs and so on will be protected?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of those representations and no such representations have been made to me of specific concerns. These are matters on which I have been in ongoing discussions with the Department of Education.

1455 If the hon. Member is aware of any specific school where parents have raised specific issues, then I would certainly want to know about it, but no representations have been made to me about that particular concern.

1460 Self-funded postgraduate students in UK
Reimbursement of costs by Gibraltar Government

Clerk: Question 454, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1465 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us how many self-funded students undergoing postgraduate studies in the United Kingdom, which started this academic year in September 2011, have been reimbursed under the Government's new policy of all postgraduate studies being granted as a mandatory entitlement, as for first degrees, and how much this has cost?

1470 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, no students have been reimbursed, since no such requests have been received.

1475 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does this policy also apply to distance learning postgraduate courses?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. The question specifically talked about 1480 postgraduates and that is the area that I have discussed.

I am not aware of – the hon. Member will not hold me to it – any requests for reimbursement of distance learning; but, certainly, for postgraduate studies there have been no requests at all for reimbursement.

1485 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Government's new policy that discretionary grants will now be mandatory?

Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker. What we have said is that postgraduate studies will now be mandatory. That does not take care of all possible discretionary grants which might exist or which anybody might apply for and, therefore, it does not mean that everybody who applies for absolutely anything will be given a mandatory scholarship. This policy specifically refers to postgraduate studies, in the nature of a Masters or a Doctorate.

Hon. E J Reyes: May I ask, Mr Speaker, in respect of postgraduate studies, does that mean residential and distance learning, both?

1495 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes.

Clerk: Question –

1500 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, just to clarify the point I was making earlier, if I may quote from the manifesto. It states, under postgraduate studies:

1505 'Postgraduate study will cease to be discretionary and will be granted as a mandatory entitlement, as is the case for first degree courses.'

1510 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is precisely what I have said: that, in terms of postgraduate studies, they will be mandatory. It does not mean that all applications which might be made for some sort of funding for any type of courses are necessarily within that category. But certainly, postgraduate applications will be considered mandatory.

1515 St Bernard's School
Plans for re-housing

Clerk: Question 455, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1520 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education explain what plans he has for the re-housing of St Bernard's School?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1525 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government is currently exploring a number of sites and options. A final decision on the re-housing of St Bernard's School has not yet been taken.

1530 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm that the school will be re-housed, given the grave concerns that were highlighted by his colleague, the then Opposition spokesman for Education, at nearly every one of his Education Budget addresses?

Hon. G H Licudi: That is certainly the Government's intention.

1535 Court Maintenance Orders
Numbers breached and details

Clerk: Question 456, the Hon. J J Netto.

1540 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice state how many Maintenance Court Orders are in breach for non-payment since this question was asked in Written Question No. 31/2012, broken down by sex and length of time, and in how many of these cases are the courts intending to enforce the Order, in accordance with Part V of the Magistrates' Court Act?

1545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1550 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Magistrates' Court currently has 71 Maintenance Orders on its records. This is a reduction of 19, since I responded to Written Question 31/2012.

The court is aware that 10 are currently in breach, which is also a reduction from the 29 cases, since I last reported.

Of the 10 in breach that the court is aware of, the breach is due to non-payment by males.

I have a breakdown of the length of breach in these 10 cases that I am happy to pass to the hon. Member.

1555 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the –

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I have not finished. There is still – 1560 Hon. J J Netto: Oh, sorry.

Hon. G H Licudi: I am midstream! (Laughter)

I am passing that information specifically in a table, but of the Maintenance Orders in breach, six are being considered for enforcement action by the court. The remainder are either subject to committal orders or enforcement has been stayed, pending a change of circumstances by the parties involved.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 456

Table 1: Breakdown of Maintenance Order breaches known to the court, by length of breach (month ending April 2012)

Number of cases	Length of time in breach
2	Not paying full amount
2	4 weeks
1	5 weeks
1	7 weeks
2	8 weeks
1	19 weeks
1	148 weeks
10	Total

1565 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, that does away with my supplementary questions, so that is fine! Thank you.

1570 Complex criminal cases
Cases other than fraud

Clerk: Question 457, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1575 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for Justice accept that there can be complex or exceptionally difficult criminal cases other than fraud cases?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1580 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Yes, sir.

1585

Crimes Act; Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act Commencement by Government

1590 Clerk: Question 458, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when does the Minister for Justice envisage that the Government will be in a position to commence the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act?

1595 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government is aiming to be in a position to commence the Crimes Act and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act on 1st October 2012.

1600 Perhaps it might be useful if I explained to the hon. Member and the House why that particular date.

The hon. Member will be aware of the previous questions that have been asked in relation to the Government's intention in respect of these Acts. I have made clear that some amendments will be necessary, particularly to the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act, in relation, specifically, to the right to silence and some consequential amendments that would be necessary.

1605 The amendments which will be required are currently being drafted. We will have to publish a Bill and because it amends the Act, we will have to bring it to Parliament. It is envisaged that, because of the six weeks which are required for publication, it will not be possible to bring that amendment before the summer recess. Therefore, the first opportunity that will be available will probably be September this year.

1610 In the likelihood that that happens in the September sitting, then whatever changes are necessary will have been made and we will then be in a position to commence the Acts, as amended, on 1st October 2012. So that is the thinking as to why that particular date has been chosen.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, of course, in relation to the right to silence, the Government could take the course of action of not commencing those provisions relating to the right to silence. You could do it that way.

1615 But is the position that has been brought into the mix as well, the question of the age of consent? Does the Government envisage that there will be amendments to the Crimes Act consequential upon this issue of the age of consent and the Government's consultation exercise that it launched a number of weeks ago?

1620 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, certainly, part of the consideration of this process in terms of the timing and commencement of the Act, is the issue, clearly, of the age of consent and the provisions, specifically, of the Crimes Act, which deal with those issues.

1625 As the hon. Member has indicated and knows, we issued a consultation process. The process finished on 9th May, as I seem to recall, and the Government is currently considering the representations that have been made during that process, so that a final decision can be taken. Whatever decision is taken, if there are any amendments, we will have time to make amendments and bring them to the House in September; but that will depend, clearly, on whatever the Government's decision is. It may be that there is no need for an amendment in relation to that specific issue.

Confiscation proceedings
Introduction of enabling legislation

Clerk: Question 459, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1635

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Government intend to introduce legislation allowing for confiscation proceedings to be brought to court, depriving defendants living a criminal lifestyle of the financial benefit that he or she has obtained from criminal conduct?

1640

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the confiscation of assets, where there has been a benefit obtained from criminal conduct, is already covered by two Acts in Gibraltar.

1645

Under the provisions of the Crime (Money Laundering and Proceeds) Act 2007, the court can make a confiscation order against a person following a conviction for an indictable offence, other than a drug trafficking offence, if it can be shown that the person concerned has, as a result of that offence, benefited from criminal conduct in the sum of at least £10,000.

1650

In addition, under the provisions of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1995, the court can make an order for confiscation of assets, if a person is convicted of a drug trafficking offence.

These two Acts also provide for the registration of external confiscation orders, if an application is made by a designated country and certain conditions are met. The Government is aware that, in the United Kingdom, there is provision under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, to seek the confiscation of assets which arise from criminal conduct, even if no criminal proceedings are brought against a person. The Government is currently considering the introduction of similar legislation for Gibraltar.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I did not mean the first two, because obviously I was aware that those are on the statute books. It is the latter.

1660

Is the Minister in a position to state at what stage the Government is at with consideration of introducing legislation similar to that in place in the United Kingdom in relation to the third aspect? Will he give an indication today to this House whether the Government feels that such legislation, or a similar type of legislation, is appropriate to be introduced here in Gibraltar?

1665

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, with regard to the stage that we are at, we are at the stage of discussing with people within the criminal justice system about the need for such legislation in Gibraltar.

I would not want to give an indication of the final decision, because that final decision has not been made, but I can tell the hon. Member that a final decision will be taken imminently and if we decide to introduce legislation, then we will ask for the necessary drafts to be prepared. But this is being given very active consideration by the Government at this very minute.

1670

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he confirm that, apart from considering the legislation itself, that the Government has also considered the question of the resources that have to be in place in order to make something like this workable?

1675

Certainly, on this side of the House it is something which we considered during our four years, but it involved the ploughing in to a project of this nature of considerable resources and the pooling of resources from the RGP, Customs, from the Attorney General's Chambers, so there were resource implications in relation to this.

Can he confirm that that is something that he has also, or that the Government has also considered?

1680

Hon. G H Licudi: It is something that the Government is considering. It is part of the mix at the moment. The legislation is being considered – the possibility of the legislation is being considered. No final decision has been taken, but clearly the issue of what additional resources might be necessary in order to make such legislation work is a matter that is currently in the melting pot and being considered by the Government.

Questions for Oral Answer

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING AND EMPLOYMENT

GASA club premises
Meeting held by Hon. J J Bossano

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Friday, 25th May. Answers to Oral Questions continue.
Question 370/2012, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, we appear to have been relegated or exiled to the political equivalent of Siberia – Friday afternoon at five o'clock!

Mr Speaker, was the meeting which the Minister of Employment held recently at the GASA club premises, where he addressed some fifty individuals, a meeting held by him in his capacity as Minister of Employment?

10 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

15

Workers' Memorial Day event; May Day rally Invitations to Minister for Employment

20 Clerk: Question 371, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Was the Minister for Employment invited by UNITE to the Workers' Memorial day event organised by UNITE in the Lobby of Parliament and by UNITE or the Government on the May Day rally?

25 Mr Speaker: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Not to my knowledge, Mr Speaker.

30 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman not think it very odd indeed that he appears to have been the only person – Member of Parliament – not to have been invited, for example, to the Workers' Memorial day?

Does he not think that it is also even more odd that he has not been invited to the Government's own event held jointly with UNITE, the May Day rally?

35 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, to my knowledge, these were public events which required no invitations.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I was certainly invited to the Workers' Memorial day event and so were Members on this side of the House. Is it not the case that his non-attendance at both of these events shows an almost pathological dislike for the leadership of UNITE?

40 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker.

45

Companies employing trainees
Contracts with Employment and Training Company Limited

50 Clerk: Question 373, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: How many companies have signed contracts with Employment and Training Company Limited agreeing to pay back the wages of a trainee if that trainee is not employed permanently by that company since the last question and answer session of Parliament?

55 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): As at the end of April, Mr Speaker, an additional 24 employers have signed the partnership agreement.

60 Hon. D A Feetham: So that is 29 in total?

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.

65 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Hon. Minister still believe that he is on course to meet his now varied manifesto commitment of employing all those people on the unemployed list – there is another question on the Order Paper on that – that will be invited on to the Future Job Strategy, plus also all the remaining trainees in private companies?

70 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the biggest difficulty we have got are the people that we inherited from the VTS Scheme, of whom there are still 226.

All the ones that have come in new have all got a job at the end of the training, because the employer selects the trainee, not us. We send him a group and he selects one. So, on that basis, clearly, I want to go as fast as it is possible to go, but this is demand led. I cannot go faster than there are employers willing to take trainees.

75 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but he devised this particular policy. We disagree on what exactly was promised to the electorate: we say that it was clear that what was promised was a job in a Government-owned company; you say no, the guarantee was a guarantee in a privately owned company.

80 Now, assuming the latter, is he happy that he is on course to be able to effectively meet what he says was the manifesto commitment, a guarantee of a job in a privately owned company for all those people that were trainees, effectively, that he inherited, plus also the unemployed by, for example, the end of the year, which is what he said in a recent Viewpoint programme that we both attended.

85 Hon. J J Bossano: What I said in the recent programme was, Mr Speaker, that, every month of this year, I would be able to report lower unemployment and higher employment levels. So there is a trend in which the numbers out of work are coming down and the numbers in work are going up and that is true of every month.

The speed at which that happens depends on the demand for labour in the economy, which we will not attempt to manipulate artificially. The jobs are there or they are not there. But certainly the response given, that this has been going on... The first people were required to sign up in March – five actually did it before they were required to do so, in February. There have been 24 further, coming up to 29, and what I am hoping, 90 and indeed confident, is that we will be signing them up at the rate of four or five a week. We will see whether that does the result that I want it to have.

95 Hon. D A Feetham: Do I detect another U-turn in the statement that the hon. Gentleman has made just a few moments ago, from the statement that he made in the Viewpoint programme, which is to eliminate unemployment by the end of the year?

100 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether the hon. Member... The hon. Member seems to be so familiar with U-turns that he detects them at every corner! He can detect whatever he likes and maybe he is better at detecting than at being a politician.

I am telling him that, as far as I am concerned, I made it very clear that the unemployment would go down every month and the employment would go up. He can hardly expect me to be able to predict, without knowing how many of the people that are due to reach school leaving age this year, which we still do not know, are going to be joining the unemployment list or not. We will not know that until August, but it could be that we will be having a requirement for another 400 jobs, as a result of this year's school leavers – but it 105 could be 200.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is certainly giving me a lesson or two – or three or four – on how to perform political U-turns. That is for sure. But he has not answered my question.

110 My question is: is he in a position to say to this House, as he said to the people of Gibraltar on the Viewpoint programme, that he will eliminate unemployment by the end of the year? Yes or no?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I did not say there will be zero unemployment in 2013, and if the hon. Member believes I said that, then he did not understand me properly or he is making it up, so that he can 115 accuse me of doing a U-turn.

But I can tell him one thing: I can promise him that the number of Gibraltarians in employment will be higher than it ever was in the 15 years of the previous administration.

Several Members: Hear, hear! (Applause)

120

Gibraltar Development Corporation Human Resources

125

Clerk: Question 374, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state whether there is a Human Resources Department of the GDC, the number of GDC employees in that Department, and the grades of those employees?

130

Mr Speaker: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker, there is no such department.

135

Hon. D A Feetham: So is the position that the hon. Gentleman is effectively the Human Resource Department of the GDC?

140

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, given that there was no such department in the last 15 years, that would only be true if the Hon. Mr Caruana had been the Human Resources manager of the GDC previously, which I do not suppose he was.

145

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman knows that that is not the case, because there was a Human Resource Department of the GDC. It appeared on their letterheads and, in fact, Mrs Eleri Surrey was the person that effectively ran that Department. Whether Mrs Eleri Surrey was the only person within that Department, I cannot tell him, whether that is the case or not; but he knows, as well as I do, that in fact there was a department and that she effectively ran that Department.

Is that not the case?

150

Hon. J J Bossano: There was one person employed, but there was no Department because there was nobody else there.

The person that he is talking about continues to be employed in the Human Resources Department –

155

Hon. D A Feetham: Of the Government.

Hon. J J Bossano: – of the Government, because she chose to stay as a ring-fenced civil servant.

The Human Resources issues that require the use of that Department are accessed by the GDC from the Government, and the Government charges the GDC.

160

Hon. D A Feetham: So can the hon. Gentleman confirm to this House that, effectively, he is the person who is fulfilling the role that would be otherwise fulfilled by a proper Human Resources Department; and that he is responsible, effectively, for making decisions of hiring and firing within the GDC?

165

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, how can I confirm that? I have just told him the very opposite!

I told him the GDC uses the Civil Service Human Resources Department when it needs to. What the hon. Member does not seem to understand is that the GDC does not employ anybody in any GDC activity. It supplies labour to Government departments.

170

Registered unemployed
Numbers as of 30th April 2012

Clerk: Question 375, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many people were registered unemployed on 30th April 2012 between (a) 0-3 months; (b) 3-6 months; (c) 6-12 months; (d) 12-24 months; and (e) above 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, between zero and three months, 361; between three and six months, 132; between six and 12, 66; between 12 and 24 months, 46; and above two years, 35.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the figure above two years is actually higher than when I last asked the question.

Can the hon. Member just enlighten the House as to why that is the case? Also, could he perhaps provide an explanation as to what he intends to do, in order to obviously ensure that these people are in gainful employment? It appears to me that, if a person is unemployed for longer than two years, there must be some very substantial reason for that, and I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman has actually made that analysis.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have got the answer that I gave him to 143/2012. That answer says, above 24 months, 35 – which is the same figure as this one. So it is not true or correct, shall we say, that in fact the figure is now higher than it was.

You would expect that if the same number of people in long-term unemployment are there, then the time that they have been there will grow with every passing month. They will have been there one more month. So, obviously, if the people who are in the 12 to 24 months do not get employed this month, next month some of those will have gone past the 24 months. The fact that they are in the higher category simply means that the group before them contains the same people, but the question has come three months later.

The other element that I think the hon. Member should take note of is that what the figures do indicate is that where there is greater movement, as one would expect, is in the people who have been under six months out of work – that is to say, they have been sufficiently recently out of work to be able to get... I think that there is more resistance on the part of employers to take somebody on, if he has been a very long time out of work, presumably for the same reason that the supplementary question has been phrased: is there something wrong with the person? There can be numbers of things. One of the things that can be wrong is that it is an older employee. For example, in the construction industry, we find that, after the age of 55, it is much more difficult to place people. Even though they have the experience, where it involves labouring work, clearly they are not going to be as capable of maintaining what is a tough job physically, as somebody who is in his 20s or 30s.

Apart from those characteristics, we have not done any other analysis, other than to monitor the extent to which the age groups are affected. But the facility of being able to place somebody with an employer and effectively have him employed for a number of months and paid for by the Government, does not have an age limit. So, in fact, not many, but a few, of the people in the longer term employed... One particular case in the last two weeks is somebody who had been for five years out of work, and we were able to place him somewhere, by using the Employment Training Scheme as a way of getting the employer to accept him and give him a trial.

Hon. D A Feetham: I understand that. I appreciate it is not an easy job, and I understand it.

I understand because, certainly when I was involved with the previous Minister for Employment in conducting an analysis in relation to long-term unemployed – and I have said this, I think, to the hon. Gentleman either in debate or on debates on television – a substantial proportion of those, for example, had criminal convictions which were preventing them from effectively accessing the job market in the same way as somebody without a criminal conviction, or there was certainly a handicap.

But does he not think that perhaps he ought to undertake that kind of analysis to, for example, find out or see whether you can come up with an analysis as to whether the rehabilitation of offenders legislation, which was only commenced – and I understand that – a couple of months ago, whether that is actually working – whether some of those people you were able to place because employers cannot refer to their criminal convictions and employees do not have an obligation to refer to them; or whether that piece of legislation needs further amendment?

I have always been of the view, although... When we introduced the legislation, we effectively adopted the UK model, I remember the hon. Gentleman saying, ‘There are all these exemptions – is this usual?’ he asked me during debate. I said, ‘We are adopting the UK model’. There are an awful lot of exemptions that may, in fact, not be appropriate for Gibraltar, whereby, for instance, somebody who might be employed in security or immigration, in theory those people have to disclose their criminal records, because they are caught by the Act, but it may strictly not be necessary.

Will the hon. Gentleman at least take on board what I am saying and conduct an analysis of these 35 individuals, to see whether, in fact, we are dealing with that kind of problem? I know that, after two months, it is again premature to look to determine with any certitude as to whether the rehabilitation of offenders legislation is, in fact, doing the job that it was designed to do, but certainly, I do think that that kind of analysis ought to be undertaken in relation to the 35, and perhaps even the 46.

And if I can ask you just another supplementary question, as well – and I apologise, I thought that it was slightly less than 35 last time round – but out of the 35 last time round, does he have a figure of how many of those 35 that were unemployed for more than two years, you have managed, or your department has actually managed, to find employment for with employers?

Hon. J J Bossano: I cannot give him a figure with certainty, but I think it is probably the case that about half a dozen have been removed from that group and half a dozen have joined it – it is not that it is the same 35 people.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, can I deal with the other point that the hon. Member makes in relation to the rehabilitation of offenders provisions, which have been commenced, which were the first part of the Criminal Proceedings and Evidence Act, which we commenced?

The hon. Member may well have a point that that list is extensive and, in a place like Gibraltar, we should look, but that is a specific list which was put together for Gibraltar purposes. It might be a UK model, but the actual list is a list of Gibraltar entities, Gibraltar agencies and therefore some thought must have been given to including or not including relevant entities in the list. But the point is that there may be a need to look at and revise the need, having regard to employment policy in particular, and that is an exercise that we will be happy to do.

But let me say this: the fact that a company or an agency or an entity is included in that particular list, does not preclude that person from employment. The effect of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act is to set time limits at which a conviction becomes spent, and therefore cannot be taken into account at all. The fact that a conviction might not be spent does not preclude the person from obtaining employment. In other words, the fact that an entity is on a particular list is not a bar; it is certainly not a legal bar to entry into the employment market in that particular area. It simply means that a conviction is not spent.

I thought I would clarify this.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I quite understand that. I drafted the list (Laughter), so I understand!

I understand, but what happened when we drafted the list, we effectively included within the list organisations or authorities that were equivalent to the ones that existed in the UK, so as near as possible UK equivalents.

Now, I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman that he says the Government is going to be looking at that, because certainly we would have done so, after a passage of time, to see how the legislation bedded down. I also, of course, accept the point that he makes that the fact that you disclose a criminal conviction does not mean, in theory, that the employer cannot or should refuse to employ that person, because clearly you could have a criminal conviction that occurred 15 or 20 years ago and, in fact, may not even be relevant to the job that you are applying for.

The reality of the situation actually is – this came to my attention when we were recruiting in some areas – that the Human Resource Department of the Government, in relation to privately owned companies, often take the decision, if you have got a criminal record, you are not suitable for the post. You do not even get to interview. That is actually happening.

285 Now, the hon. Gentleman, if he is under the misapprehension that the system is operating in a particular way, he ought to perhaps have a meeting, himself and Mr Bossano, with the Human Resource Department of the Government, to actually pan this out, because it actually does not work that way in practice.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what I have said is not how it is working in practice, but that it is not a legal bar to entry into the employment market, as a result of that particular provision.

290 Hon. D A Feetham: I have said that.

Hon. G H Licudi: Given that we agree with that, if there is a practical issue which needs to be addressed, then certainly that is a matter that we will be happy to look at.

295

Job vacancies
Numbers filled by registered unemployed since December 2011

300 Clerk: Question 376, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: I think I have asked 376; it is 377.

305 Mr Speaker: No, it was 375.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I beg your pardon.

310 Can the Minister for Employment state how many job vacancies have been filled since 11th December 2011 and how many of those vacancies have been filled by people who were registered as unemployed between (a) 0-3 months; (b) 3-6 months; (c) 6-12 months; (d) 12-24 months; and (e) above 24 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

315 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the numbers employed between zero and three months were 2,442; from three to six months, 85; from six to 12 months, 30; from 12 to 24 months, six; and over 24 months, two.

320 Employment Training Company Limited
Grants scheme for graduate trainees

Clerk: Question 377, the Hon. D A Feetham.

325 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please provide details of the scheme announced to the Institute of Chartered Accountants of England and Wales (ICAEW) on the payment of £16,000 a year to graduates who wanted to change careers?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

330 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, there was no such scheme announced at the ICAEW meeting.

335 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, has he announced at any other meeting a scheme of this nature – or on any other occasion?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker.

What happened at that meeting was that I explained to them how the existing ETCL and grad schemes work. Therefore, if people are graduates, they are on 50% above the minimum wage and if people are not graduates but have O- and A-levels, they are in the other scheme and that the accountancy firms would be able to access those schemes, if they wanted to use those schemes to recruit trainees – but it is not that there is a special scheme for accountants.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, it is the reporting of it that has been inaccurate.

Applying for jobs with Government Eligibility

Clerk: Question 378, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment say whether it is true that some people who have gone to the ETB to enquire about applying for jobs with a Government agency have been told that they were not eligible to apply because they were already working and had to be unemployed to be eligible?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): No, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: So the hon. Gentleman is saying that when somebody actually makes that allegation, and I have read it because somebody – I am not a member of Facebook myself, but somebody who is – printed out a thread in relation to this, where they said, where two people said that they had approached the ETB for a job that had been advertised in a Government agency, and had been told, ‘No, you have got to be unemployed in order to apply’.

So the Hon. Minister is saying that when those people say that, they are not telling the truth – is that the position?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, either they are not telling the truth or they are deliberately lying for reasons best known to themselves or, in fact, they do not know what they are talking about. It can only be one of those three, because it is not possible for anybody to go to the ETB and say, ‘I want to apply for a job that has been advertised in the Government agency.’ If the job is advertised in the Government agency, apply to the agency! It is as simple as that.

Now, somebody may have gone and said, ‘I want to join the Employment Training Programme of the Government’, in ETCL, which is a Government company. Well, we do not encourage people to resign from a job in the private sector, so that we can then train them and send them back into the private sector, but unless that is the agency which they are talking about, the answer would have been there is no requirement to be unemployed in order to apply for a Government job.

Hon. D A Feetham: But is there not another potential scenario: that these two people are not lying; that they have been to the hon. Gentleman’s department and at the hon. Gentleman’s department, someone there has provided this particular answer? That is a possibility, is it not? They do not necessarily have to lie or not know what they are talking about.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I will tell you why it is not possible: because, frankly, all the people that are working in that Department have been working in that Department for a considerable number of years and I would expect them to know better than to say something which manifestly cannot be true.

I mean if somebody goes to the counter and says, ‘I want to apply for a job in a Government agency, which is advertised, x y z’, the answer he would get: ‘Apply to x y z – we do not take applications for Government agencies here, either from the employed or the unemployed.’

So to suggest to somebody, ‘If you were unemployed, we would accept your application, but because you are not unemployed, we are not doing it', would show that the person that was answering that, if that were true, has not got a clue how the system works – which is how it has been working for the last 15 years and they have been there for that long. Somebody who has been in the job in the Employment Service for a few weeks might not know how these things work; but the people that are there, dealing with the counter all know – well, they have been doing it longer than I have! Why should they get it so wrong?

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I will tell them that the hon. Gentleman said that they were lying –

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I did not say that.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is what you said in Parliament!

Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: That is what you said!

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I have not said that!

Mr Speaker: No, there were three alternatives. (Interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: If the hon. Member wants to quote me, then he should say, 'Either they are lying or they do not know what they are talking about or they have misunderstood what they were told.' (Interjection) Now, if he picked in the lying, maybe he knows the people well enough to know which one fits better.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, he can rest assured that I will give him the two alternatives that he first gave, plus the third one that I postulated to him – that was not his own initiative. But aren't all vacancies advertised via the ETB, anyway – or not?

Hon. J J Bossano: No. There is a requirement to notify the Employment Service of a vacancy, and that requirement, in fact, carries a penalty, which the Department has frequently, since 9th December, imposed on Government departments which, in the last 15 years, were frequent abusers of the system and recruited people without opening the vacancies. That can no longer happen.

Therefore, whenever a Government agency advertises a vacancy, they do two things: they put an advert in the press and they place the information with the ETB. People will look and see that the vacancy is there and they can apply for it, or they see it in the press and they can apply for it. Normally, the vacancies require people to address the application to the employment entity, not to the ETB. The ETB does not accept applications from people.

Hon. D A Feetham: I quite understand that, but is it not the position that, when the vacancy is opened with the ETB, it is common that people will actually go to the ETB asking, 'Well, what are the vacancies that exist?' Is that not common?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr. Speaker, the vacancies... There are boards on which there are 600 vacancies put up. It is a system that I am having reviewed because there is a constant stream of complaints from people that the vacancies do not get removed when they get filled because the employers do not get round to telling us, and people get sent from pillar to post – and that happens with both the public and the private – but at the moment the boards are still there, like they used to be, and at any one time there will be between 600 and 800 jobs on those boards.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but your position is – and you have said it outside this House and inside this House – that, before, we had a system that did not work, now we have a system that works because vacancies have to be advertised, they have to be opened with the ETB and you do not have the situation where those vacancies are filled before they get to the ETB.

Ergo you have a situation where people can go to the ETB and find out what vacancies there are at the ETB. If that is the position, don't you think it is reasonable for somebody, if there is a vacancy in a Government company or a Government agency, for that person to actually first make an enquiry from the ETB – hence, the answer that they got when they went to the ETB?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I do not believe that that is true. The ergo is not the ergo that the hon. Member wants it to be.

The ergo is that, before, 80% of the jobs were filled first and notified afterwards, and now 20% are filled and notified afterwards. We have reversed those ratios, and that is what I have said on many previous occasions, or at least since it has started reversing, which was in about March or April this year.

The vacancies that are there. The people say, ‘I am interested in applying for this vacancy,’ and they get the address of the place that they have to apply to, public or private. Whether they are working or not working, there is nothing to stop anybody saying, ‘I am interested in applying for the job.’ In fact, the reality of it is that something like 70% of the jobs that are filled every month are filled by people who are not registered unemployed – 70%.

Future Job Strategy Eligibility of unemployed

Clerk: Question 379, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr. Speaker, when will the Future Job Strategy be open to the unemployed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, it has been open since 1st February 2012.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman not agree that cannot possibly be the case in the light of the answers to questions given at the time when I asked about this and he said that the Future Job Strategy would first start with those who were in training, would only become open to the unemployed in the summer, and in the summer it would become open to the unemployed effectively by invitation. In other words, if that person comes to the ETB and says, ‘I have an employer who is willing to take me on as a trainee’ or, alternatively, your department matches that person with a willing employer, what is it? Is it the answer that he has given today, or the answer that he gave to me in February?

Hon. J J Bossano: The answer is that, since 1st February, the people who have got job guarantees are, in the main, the people who have joined after 1st February and not from the VTS. I have already told him in several meetings, Mr Speaker, that the ones we are having most difficulty in placing, for the very obvious reason that the employer was not involved in selecting the individual, are the people who were there already, whom we do not want to put back on the unemployment list and we are still carrying them, hopefully finding them a slot.

But, in fact, in February, in March and in April, in those 24 new employers that I have mentioned, the five original ones in February were five employers who took people from the existing VTS pool, and the 24 that have taken on trainees subsequently are all people who were not in the original pool and they have taken them from the unemployment list.

Hon. D A Feetham: What is the unemployment figure, can you remind the House, at the present moment?

Hon. J J Bossano: The unemployment is in the region of 1,200.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not accept that he has an obligation, which was the promise that he made at the last General Election, of allowing all those unemployed people onto the Future Job Strategy, enabling them to earn the minimum wage?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member first of all accused me, during the Election, of bringing about the ruin of Gibraltar by saying I was promising to do what I was not promising to do, and now he is urging me to do something which he described then as the ruin of Gibraltar – that is to take 1,000 people, pay them £1,000 a month, even though I have got no work to give them.

The people who are being taken in the Scheme are being taken in the Scheme because what we do is we match the unemployed with the vacancies. We call up the employers, we send them people we have pre-selected in the department, and then the employer says, ‘I want to keep so-and-so and so-and-so,’ and then we take that person into the company and we pay them the £1,000. That system ensures that all the concerns the hon. Member had about ruining Gibraltar are no longer true. Therefore, since he wants to be able to attack me, he will attack me if I do it for ruining Gibraltar, and if I do not do it, for letting down the people who are unemployed.

I can promise him there will be less people unemployed than there were on 8th December, come next 8th December. There will be more Gibraltarians working on 8th December than there were last year, and that that progress will continue throughout the next four years. (Applause) That may not be enough for him, but it is a lot more than the previous administration, of which he is so proud that he defends their entire 15 years, including the eight years before that he used to attack –

Hon. D A Feetham: The short [inaudible].

Hon. J J Bossano: They did not do it. As simple as that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, every single time that the hon. Gentleman feels uncomfortable with the questions he is asked, he refers to my political past. Let me tell the hon. Gentleman (Interjection) that he is going to feel far more uncomfortable with my questions during the course of the next four years. Let me tell him that.

Why did the hon. Gentleman not speak to the people of Gibraltar with the candour that he has spoken with in the House today, which is, ‘Look, I’m sorry, I cannot employ 1,200 people, because it’s the ruin of Gibraltar.’ Why didn’t you do that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have not said I cannot employ 1,000 people because it is the ruin of Gibraltar. I am saying that he claimed in the Election... The hon. Member seems to think that he is entitled to make allegations of things that I am supposed to have said, that I have not said, and attack me for those things which he has invented, but I am not entitled, on this side – and I was not entitled when I was on that side – to say to anybody on the other side of the House anything about anything they have said in the past.

If the hon. Member chooses, in his latest reincarnation, to be critical of everything that the GSLP did, even when he was in the GSLP, and to praise everything that the GSD did, even when he was attacking it. (Laughter) I am entitled to remind the people of Gibraltar of that, and that is all I am doing. It is not that I am worried or affected by his presence here to the extent that I have to react by reminding people of his past – the people of Gibraltar know his past as well as I do – but he chooses to say that I said something before, and I am as entitled to remind him of the things that he said when he had different views. Or is he the only one who has got the prerogative to do that?

The answer is he said that to do what he is egging me to do now would be the ruin of Gibraltar, and therefore... It was never going to be the ruin of Gibraltar, because I never said that is what we would do. I said that people would get a job in a Government company, and they have got it. There are 500, or 400, or 350 people in there at one time. The people will only be put in there not so that we can send a pay cheque to their house while they are unemployed, because that would simply mean that we would increase the unemployment benefit to £1,000 a month and make it limitless in time, and that was never anything that we committed ourselves to doing. What we committed ourselves to was addressing the employment problems that we inherited, which they claimed did not exist. It was only in the Election campaign for the first time that, in order to attack what the Scheme would cost, they themselves revealed that they were well aware that there were 1,100 out of work, because the hon. Member was the one who put in the Chronicle ‘it will cost £11 million’, and if you are going to pay £1,000 a month, then that is what £11 million represents – 1,100. It was as a result of that knowledge being made public that we realised that the 400 figure was only the tip of the iceberg.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. The reason why I referred to the £11 million – and it is true it was my figure; I am glad that the hon. Gentleman recognises that it was an accurate figure, at the very least –

Hon. J J Bossano: It was a bit more, actually.

Hon. D A Feetham: – was because, in the hon. Gentleman's manifesto, he committed himself to employing 450 people who were on existing training schemes, those on sheltered employment, plus those on the unemployment list, which was 421. That is where the figure of 1,100 came from.

In other words, I was taking my cue from the promises that he made to the people of Gibraltar, which was to employ 1,100 people in a Government-owned company; hence, my arguments that you were on the road to ruining Gibraltar. But, look, what is it? Is it ruining Gibraltar to employ all these 1,100 people, or is it not ruining Gibraltar employing 1,100 people? Does he plan to allow these people onto the Future Job Strategy Scheme, or is he going to continue to break promises to the unemployed of Gibraltar because he is the socialist Minister for Employment?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am glad at least we agree on the last bit of that: (Laughter) I am the socialist Minister for Employment.

Mr Speaker, in the statistics he has forgotten one tiny element: as well as all those components that he mentioned, there were 60 on the waiting list at Bleak House which did not appear in any other category and presumably were treated as non-existent. That is, they were not unemployed because they were waiting to be put on the VTS, which gave them no security, no future, £400 a month.

However many failings he may want to find in what is there now, I can tell him that the people who are in and the people who are looking forward to being in do not agree with him and think we have done more in the last five months to improve their prospects of getting a job than was done for them before, and that the judgement of that only time will tell.

I am happy that he should bring the matter up every month and give me an opportunity to update the people of Gibraltar on the progress that we are making, and I can promise him that every month the figure will show an improvement. That may not be enough for him, because presumably he would prefer that it was not so.

Hon. D A Feetham: Just one final question: does he sleep well at night for breaking his promises to the unemployed of Gibraltar?

Several Members: Shame!

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have never slept better since the day that he left the GSLP! (Laughter and applause)

Future Job Strategy Trainees temping in GDC

Clerk: Question 380, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment state how many trainees under the Future Job Strategy are temporarily filling vacant jobs within the GDC?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): There are none.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I can see that with the hon. Gentleman I have got to be as precise as possible, otherwise he will not answer my question, despite the fact that he understands perfectly well where I am coming from and what the question is.

What about in relation to filling vacant jobs within Government agencies or Government companies?

Hon. J J Bossano: None, Mr Speaker.

615 Hon. D A Feetham: And within the public service generally?

Hon. J J Bossano: None, Mr Speaker.

620 All the people who are in Government areas... I have explained to him many times, but the hon. Member either does not want to understand the answers that he is being given, or maybe he is being misguided by things that other people tell him.

625 I have told him that we have got 226 VTS. VTS inherited 226. Of those, 83 are still left in the private sector. The remainder, whom we are paying, we have distributed in public entities, not because there are vacancies – the vacancies are not there. If and when a vacancy happens, the vacancy is opened and everybody, including the people who are ex-VTS or anything else, are entitled to apply, just like people who are working are entitled to apply, but it is not the case that they are filling any vacancies. They are all supernumerary, the posts that are there.

630 In the case of the GDC, for example, the lowest entry grade is Grade 1, AA. We have got young people in the Employment Service and elsewhere under the GDC, but the vacancies are now currently being advertised and filled. They are not debarred from applying, but they are not guaranteed that they are going to get it.

Hon. D A Feetham: So can the hon. Gentleman confirm that it is not Government policy, nor that the Government will, in future, allow trainees to temporarily fill vacant jobs within all the organisations – I do not want to repeat them – that I have mentioned in my question earlier?

635 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not think I have to give any guarantees about anything that is going to happen in the future. I can tell him the policy is not that and that, in any event, the hon. Member does not understand that any jobs above the entry grade can only be filled from the existing permanent staff. It does not go out of the Service. We do not import people in higher jobs in the system.

640 Therefore, the only grades that can be filled are Grade 1 jobs. The Grade 1 jobs that exist are currently being advertised. Notwithstanding the fact that there have been people, for example, in the Employment Service, there are no Grade 1 vacancies, so all the guys who are there cannot be filling Grade 1 vacancies because none exist – all the Grade 1s are full, and that is true of everywhere else.

645 The only place where there is an automatic job guarantee at the end of the training is in the Health and Social Care, in the courses, some of which were already in place and, as far as I am concerned, I imagine that it was always the intention that if you are sending somebody to the School of Nursing it is in order to employ them at the end of the training, although we found that some of the people who were being paid as VTS, the £400, to be nursing assistants, were at the end of the training sent home and a new lot taken in. Therefore we found, in the Health Service, that in 2011, in effect, VTS on £400 were being used as filling vacancies in the wards, but when they finished their training they were replaced by a fresh lot. That has been brought to an end, and therefore all the people who are training in those areas are being offered a job, for the very simple reason there is no other health authority for them to go to.

650 You cannot treat the School of Nursing as training nurses and putting them on the market. The only guy in the market who is buying is the Health Authority. But if we are training somebody to do clerical work, then there are a thousand clerical jobs in the economy of Gibraltar and therefore the training that he gets with us, or with a private sector firm, for as long as we are... With this mix that we have inherited – people without guaranteed jobs and we have got people with guaranteed jobs – we are trying to give priority, as far as we can, in trying to persuade employers to access, first and foremost, the people who were there before February. Unfortunately, we are not being as successful for the reasons that I have explained. Those people were selected by Bleak House.

660 The employers now have an input before the selection takes place. Because they have that input, they are more keen to select for themselves than to be told who they have to take on. Apart from that, the only exception to the system is in the case of training for nursing assistants or care assistants or registered nurses. That is the only area where, automatically, the trainees will get a job at the end.

665 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and can he also confirm that no vacancies will be held back because there are trainees in supernumerary posts that may be doing, between them, the work that may have been required by the vacancy? Could you also tell this House that the Government is not going to go down that road?

670 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, we inherited 90 vacant posts in the Civil Service, which we are now in the process of filling. I do not know whether the previous Government was holding them up for us to fill them or holding them up for some other reason, but held up they were. It is not the intention to perpetuate the policy of the previous administration in holding jobs up.

675 In areas like the Care Agency or the Health Service where, in fact, the manning levels are determined by the number of beds that are occupied, we will continue with the previously announced policy of employing short-term contracts in order to match the contract termination dates with the completion of the training programmes.

680 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, and two more questions: can he also confirm to this House that there is no intention to dumb down the entry requirements into the public service, be it in the Civil Service or within agencies or Government-owned companies; and has he had any meetings with Mr Tampin – GGCA’s union leader – in relation to the issue of cadets and Civil Service posts?

685 Hon. J J Bossano: The last time I met Mr Tampin was at Forty Steps on my way here, but we did not talk about any of those. I think I have not had a meeting, before that, for a very long time with him – I think probably around Christmas – but then I do not deal with industrial relations, as I have told the hon. Member many times. So, when we meet, we talk about the weather, we talk about this, we talk about that, but not about any of the issues that the hon. Member has referred to.

As regards ‘tamping’ down or ‘tamping’ up... Was it ‘tamping’ or ‘dumping’?

690 Mr Speaker: Dumbing down, he said.

Hon. J J Bossano: Dumping?

695 Mr Speaker: Dumbing.

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not understand the terminology.

700 Certainly, my view is the fact that somebody may have, for example, a GCSE in mathematics, does not necessarily make him a better information officer in the coach park and, therefore, the relevance of some of these things is questionable, as far as I am concerned, in being an indicator of how good a civil servant or public servant the person is going to be. In my view, in fact, the more opportunities that we give for everybody to apply, the better – the more choice the employer has and the more chances the individual has to progress.

705 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I know precisely what your views are in relation to this and, if the Chief Minister allowed you to get your way, precisely what your intentions would be. But I have asked you about Government policy: you are here to explain Government policy.

I am repeating the question –

710 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I... If he –

Hon. D A Feetham: Is there a point of order?

715 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, on a point of order, the Member is entitled to ask me about the things for which I am responsible. If he says that the Chief Minister will allow me or not allow me to do something which I may or may not like, then in fact what he is saying is that is not my responsibility but the Chief Minister’s responsibility, and therefore he should address the question to him.

I do not set the entry requirements for the Civil Service or anything else, so either he asks me for my opinion or he asks the person responsible for the policy.

720 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just in response to the rather nervous point of order that the hon.

Gentleman has made, the Chief Minister of Gibraltar could very well overrule any Minister in relation to any area within his ministerial responsibility, because the Chief Minister of Gibraltar has the authority to do that, so there is no inconsistency between the question that I have asked him and the answer.

725 Is the position this: that the hon. Gentleman himself, his own preference is effectively yes for a dumbing-down of the entrance requirements into the public service? Is that what he is saying?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I am not saying that, Mr Speaker, because I refuse to allow the hon. Member to put words in my mouth. I will not express myself in the terminology that he uses.

730 What I have said to him is that I myself question the necessity for somebody... For example, if you want an information officer to produce leaflets for tourists, you might decide that you want everybody to have a university degree to do that, but it is questionable whether that is a necessity or whether necessarily the person with the degree would do a better job than one who has not. That is a matter of judgement and a view that I have expressed.

735 I am not responsible for 'dumping' or 'undumping' or upping or lowering anything to do with entry requirements, and therefore, since it is not something that comes under my ministerial responsibility, the hon. Member is not entitled to ask me and I have got no obligation to answer him.

740 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he not tell me whether it is Government policy whether the views that he has expressed today to me, very candidly – and I thank him for the candour that he has shown in the answer to the question that I have asked – can he not at least say whether those views represent Government policy, or not?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I am not here to give him a statement of Government policy in an area over which I am not responsible.

745 I have equally clear views on education, the need for so many lawyers, the medical services, and I can spend a lot of time, if he wants, sharing my views – because, clearly, since he has not had an opportunity to hear it for so many years since he left us, it may be an opportunity to update him – but he knows that my views are fairly steady over the passage of time, so I do not think he should be surprised by anything that I tell him now. But that does not mean that he can try and seek that to convert it into a rift on policy – heaven forbid – between me and anybody else, and the fact that he thinks that the Chief Minister can, at the blink of an eyelid, overrule everybody, does not surprise me at all. He may well have experienced that in practice. (Laughter).

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the signs of a rift between him and the Chief Minister, he says. (Laughter).

755 But look, every time I hit a raw nerve and every time I make the hon. Gentleman nervous with a question, he brings up my political past. I know that the hon. Gentleman is nervous with my questions. In fact, it gratifies me that the hon. Gentleman refers to my political past, because I know that my questions are having the desired effect and it is making the hon. Gentleman nervous.

760 But is not the position this: that the hon. Gentleman does intend to dumb down entrance requirements to the public service generally, because he has all these people unemployed and all these people on training schemes that he promised, at the last Election, to employ them at the minimum wage? Isn't that the case?

765 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, but I am glad that he has now revealed his own twisted thinking on the matter, which has led him to all these questions. Before, I was being candid in giving him my views because I thought this was a genuine exchange and he wanted to know how I felt about something or other. Now it turns out that it had nothing to do with that. What he has now invented, and will no doubt propagate, is that what we are trying to do is to allow everybody, without qualifications, into the public service, as if the public service could absorb another thousand people. That shows –

770 Hon. D A Feetham: That's what you promised at the last Election.

775 Hon. J J Bossano: That is what you say I promised at the last Election, Mr Speaker, and which you said would ruin Gibraltar. So now, first of all, he says I was going to ruin Gibraltar by putting a thousand people in. Then, he attacks me because he says now I am not going to do it anymore and therefore I am going back! And now he goes back to accusing me that I am going to do it and I am now taking the entry qualifications away so that I can put a thousand people in and ruin Gibraltar!

Look, Gibraltar is not going to be ruined by anything we do in employment, or in the debt over which you used to be so concerned, or in the management of the public finances. I can tell the hon. Member that if he thinks that my answers are making me nervous and that is why I am reminding him of the contradictions in the statements that he makes and the way that he used to express himself before, then if that is the measure of his powers of analysis he must be as wrong about 99% of the stuff he says as he is wrong about that, because on that point he is completely wrong.

He does not make me nervous. I just remind him of things because he chooses to say things that compare the present with the past, and every time he does that I will take advantage of the opportunity that he gives me to also compare his present and his past position. We all have to live with the things we have said before, including him.

Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed we do.

Just one final supplementary: does he not accept that all the things that I have said to him about what he promised in the Future Job Strategy – that he did say it, that he has not done it and he simply will not concede the point – that is the reality, isn't it?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I will not concede the point, which is that he chooses to invent what I have said and then expects me to admit it, and he expects me to admit it on the premise, presumably, that if he asks me the same thing enough times he will wear me down and I will eventually say yes. Well, the answer is no, I do not accept anything he says. I do not accept...

If he wants me to predict it, I can tell him I will not accept anything he says in the next three and a half years. (Laughter)

60 (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.

40th anniversary of first election to House
Congratulations to Hon. J J Bossano

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, before we start with Answers to Oral Questions, and taking my cue from the oath to lay aside partial prejudices – may I congratulate the Hon. the Minister for Employment, Mr Bossano, on his 40th anniversary of first being elected to this House.

He was elected to the House, of course, on 23rd June 1972, so Saturday will be his 40th year since he was first elected, and we hope, certainly, that he remains a Member of this House for many years to come. (Applause)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, it is very much on the agenda that that is a matter to be mentioned during the course of this meeting of this House.

We have not yet got to that date and that is why the anniversary was not yet current but, certainly, an issue that the Government was – without consulting Mr Bossano, who would otherwise have ensured that nobody in the Government said a word... An issue that is very much on the Government's agenda but, given the opportunity that the hon. Gentleman raises the issue now, and in the absence of the Leader of the Opposition – which is unfortunate, because I am sure he would have wanted to join all of the House on this occasion – I want to record that there are few public servants in Gibraltar's history who have given as much for Gibraltar as the Hon. Minister for Employment, the Hon. Joe Bossano, has given.

It is, indeed, incredible that somebody could have given 40 years of their life to be in this Parliament in an uninterrupted manner: not just because of the level of commitment that that reflects, on the part of the Member, but also in respect of the level of support that he enjoys in the community, as a result of the selfless way that he has conducted himself in politics since the very day that he was elected.

In the time that I have had to prepare for my speeches at the United Nations – both as the Leader of the Opposition and as Chief Minister in recent weeks and, last year, as Leader of the Opposition, I had occasion to review the speeches made both by the now Leader of the Opposition and by the now Minister for Employment. In reading the speeches of the Hon. Mr Bossano, it became clear that his pull to politics was never about personal ambition and it was all about defending Gibraltar's place in the world. Part of what he said at the Quito seminar and part of what he said when he first addressed the United Nations, and made that a regular occurrence from 1991 or 1992, was to say that he was drawn to politics by the battle for self-determination in the 1960's.

Anybody who works with him, or knows him well, will know that that is still the main motivation that drives him in politics, as well as protecting the rights of those who are less well-off in our society and those who are now the subject of his Ministry in respect of employment. I think everybody in this House is humbled by the contribution that Joe Bossano has made today, and will continue to make to the life of this community and to the life of this Parliament.

I pause there, Mr Speaker, also to record that it is 40 years on the 23rd that Mr Adolfo Canepa was also elected to this House who, Mr Speaker will know that, given your own announcement about when you will be standing down, will, I hope, shortly be taking over as Speaker in the October session. That both Mr Canepa and Mr Bossano were elected on the same day in the same election, shows – and I say this for myself, not for anybody else – that the calibre of man that was elected to this House 40 years ago is much better than the men that find themselves here today – in my own humble opinion about myself... (Applause).

Hon. D A Feetham: If of course, I had been aware of the Government's agenda and the Government's intention to make a statement about Mr Bossano's 40th year of his election... (Interjection) I would, of course, have allowed the Chief Minister to lead on the issue – he can be assured about that.

But, Mr Speaker, I also wish to add that, of course, I have discussed it with the Leader of the Opposition, and the Leader of the Opposition wishes to associate himself entirely with my words.

Thank you very much.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joe Bossano.

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, all I can say is that I am speechless for the first time in 40 years! (Laughter)

120 Mr Speaker: Incredible.

Hon. J J Bossano: And that certainly, if there was a democratic process the victim should have been consulted and I would have then exercised my right to veto this!

125 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No collegiate government...

Hon. J J Bossano: This is the second time they play a dirty trick on me. The last time was when they put me in that chair. (Laughter).

130 I hope this is not going to be a sign of things to come, otherwise I will not stay the 20 years that I promised that I would! I am very grateful for the Opposition, in particular that, we can all consider that whether we agree with each other or not on every item on policy, we are all here to defend Gibraltar.

Thank you. (Applause).

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

140 Tourist Map of Gibraltar
Installation of map dispensers

The Clerk: Answers to Oral Questions.

145 Question Number 486/2012, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, yes, now for more mundane matters.

Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, advise when the initiative to install the Tourist Map of Gibraltar and location map dispensers was taken?

150 The Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, this initiative was taken by a company named Cityscape Maps Ltd of the United Kingdom in a proposal made to the previous Government in 2009.

155 The company continued working with the Town Planner and the Gibraltar Tourist Board on this project, together with the Ministry of Tourism, Public Transport and the Port and the Office of the Deputy Chief Minister. The licence to install and operate the map dispensers was approved and signed by LPS on the 1st February of this year.

160 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just by way of a very short preamble can I congratulate the Minister for proceeding with what was, in fact, by the timeline that he has just enunciated to this House, a GSD initiative. But does he have any feedback from tourists and the like – is it possible to collate what the response has been to the maps and the map dispensers?

165 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, so far the feedback has been quite positive. There have been the usual representations about spelling mistakes here and there, and the fact that the maps do not have a spot of 'you are here' at the location – that has been the recurrent criticism. But, other than that, the fact is that they have been quite well received.

170 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, are there plans to signal a 'you are here' point on the maps?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, following the production of the map and after having spotted a few spelling mistakes, and the absence of that spot, I have asked that, at the next run, the map is produced to the Ministry before it is actually printed. Not just for the spelling mistakes but for things like the spots, which indicates where the person is.

Beach refurbishment programme Details of work and cost

The Clerk: Question 487, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the refurbishment programme to the beaches he announced would take place to include details of the beaches it encompassed, the start and end date of the programme, particulars of the works to be carried out at each beach and its cost, broken down in respect of each beach?

The Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the details of the refurbishment programme, particulars of the work carried out at each beach and its cost are provided in the schedule I now hand over to the hon. Member.

16 PVC cladding of toilets at Catalan Bay North	£1,206.00

Point no. 10 represents an approximate cost as GibElec still have additional associated works which need to be verified.

We have also been furnished with a new lifeguard boat store at Eastern Beach, capable of holding two vessels mounted on their corresponding trailers. This structure has been constructed as part of the on-going refurbishment and beautification programme of Eastern Beach. We have no costing for these works.

Whilst the schedule is being handed over, Mr Speaker, since the Government took office in December of last year, it has been working to improve the facilities that are available on Gibraltar's beaches. Innovations of this year include weekly cleaning of the beaches from 1st February of this year up to the Easter holidays. The beaches were cleaned twice monthly before, after 1st February, then three times a week from Easter until 28th April, when they have been cleaned daily since.

We have made provision and servicing of beach bins as from Easter. We have re-positioned the toilets at Western Beach to the entrance, where it was previously 200 metres away in a small car park. There has also been the laying of beach walkways at all beaches from mid May, which is earlier in the season than usual. There has been extra access at the beach at Sandy Bay. There has been the purchase of new lifeguard boats, that will, I am told, arrive in around two weeks time. There has also been the erection of new beach front railings at Little Bay, on both levels. There has also been the provision of street lighting in public areas at Little Bay, where none have existed before. There has also been the extra beach concession kiosk at the north end of Eastern Beach and the employment of senior lifeguards to improve the service.

Mr Speaker, the beaches on the eastern side have been operational since the Easter weekend whilst both Camp Bay and Little Bay are kept open all year round. This means that many of the refurbishment works carried out were of a routine nature, with a specific focus on building up to the official bathing season. With this in mind, many of the costs are shared by all of the beaches, which include items like paint, cement, sand, plumbing equipment etc. There is also generic refurbishment work carried out at all of the beaches and involves the relaying of buoys, walkways, refurbishment work by the GTB maintenance team that carry out the replacement cost of part of the toilets and changing rooms, lifeguards posts and store rooms.

Lastly, Mr Speaker, as I have just mentioned, there have been specific major works carried out that involve either Government or external agencies and contractors. These include, for example, the replacement of railings and the provision of street lighting at Little Bay or the re-positioning of toilets at Western Beach.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, presumably the cost of the list of the items that the Minister has just given this House is set out in the schedule which he handed to me a few moments ago?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Just by way of a point of clarification – I have not had a full opportunity to consider the schedule in the time available, but can he perhaps confirm to me that item no. 7, which is described as 'disabled toilet fittings Camp Bay' correlates with the last figure in the first page of the schedule which is £399, or have I got that completely wrong?

The reason that I raise that is because, on the first page, you have six items of expenditure but on the correlating column you have seven figures listed.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the way I read the table is, for instance, in relation to Camp Bay, there is a second column which reads repairs and it says £26,000: if we go to the item 7 on the second page which says 'Disabled toilet fittings Camp Bay', £28,001.84. If the hon. Member, whilst going through the table, notices any inconsistencies I will be more than happy to look at them and then get back to him.

Hon. D J Bossino: But he cannot at this stage, in this House, advise me what the expenditure of £399, Mr Speaker, is – which is the last item of expenditure on the first page of this schedule which does not have a correlating item description. Is he able to do that in this House now?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Gentleman referring to Camp Bay £399 on the table, second to the right?

Hon. D J Bossino: After the table there is a sentence which reads

'The following are some of the extraordinary works/services included within the above schedule' and then we have a list of six items, but the figures on the extreme right, in respect of which there ought to be a correlation between the description and the figure – there are seven figures. And it is the last one where we have a figure of £399 and I just wanted to know what that cost relates to – because there is not a correlating description of that cost.

255 Hon. N F Costa: As I understand it, Mr Speaker, it is on item 6, on the first page of the schedule 'repairs to lifeguard posts, switches and sockets'. The figure of £399 relates to the equipment.

Hon. D J Bossino: I do not want to delve in pedantry, Mr Speaker, but it really isn't.

260 At the moment, even if that is true – and there is no reason to doubt the veracity of the Minister's statement – there is still a problem with the others because then it has a knock-on effect. There is basically still one figure which does not have a correlating description to it, even if you deal with the £399 item in the list.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I have told the hon. Gentleman I will look into it and get back to him.

265 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, fair enough, Mr Speaker. The Minister does not have that information available, I wish not to put him under the spotlight unnecessarily and maybe we can have a word later.

270 Mr Speaker, by way of further supplementary I wonder if I could probe the Minister in relation to one issue which was raised in the May session of Parliament, where my hon. and learned friend, Mr Figueras, asked him, by way of supplementary, a question in relation to beach replenishment at Sandy Bay. The answer came from the Minister, and with your permission, Mr Speaker, I will read the answer, it is a very short answer –

275 'there has been a lot of loss of sand during this last year. As you know, the previous administration did replenish the beach at quite considerable cost, but because of the absence of any groin or any other facilities stopping the sand from being taken away from the beach, there has been a considerable loss. But the public will certainly be able to access the beach' and then, importantly, he says –

280 'works are currently being conducted or will start next week in order to facilitate that'.

Now that would have been at the end of May. Can the Minister advise this House whether the works, which I assume, given the nature of the supplementary and the context in which this line of questioning was raised – is he able to confirm that the replenishment of sand at Sandy Bay has, indeed, commenced?

285 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the latter part of my answer related to the fact that there will be extra access to Sandy Bay.

290 There were wooden stairways set up during the length of Sandy Bay. But at its southernmost point there was not a wooden stairway access down to the beach. Because of the loss of sand, the stairway access that was there was no longer able to be of use: as a result of the loss of sand the step would have been too... and therefore, as a result, what we did, we installed an additional wooden walkway at that end of the beach.

295 In respect of the replenishment of the sand, as I pointed out to my hon. and learned friend, Mr Figueras, we will start looking at engineering assessments to be able to start beach replenishment works as from the end of this bathing season. If I recall correctly, I said there were various technical procedures that had to be satisfied and investigations carried out as to what sand etc to use, and what technique would be used, and that we also had to receive reports on what was the best form of breakwater or groin in order to avoid beach diminution, or sand diminution, once the beach was replenished with sand.

300 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am grateful for that clarification and that reply from the Minister.

Bus and lorry theory tests
Details of training available

305 Clerk: Question 488, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port provide details of the training measures which are intended to assist applicants wishing to undertake bus and lorry theory tests?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Schedule 4B of the Traffic (Licensing and Registration) Regulations introduced major changes to the manner in which theoretical tests for lorries and buses are conducted.

These changes are intended to set and maintain higher standards of safety, knowledge and skills among drivers of these vehicles and improve road safety through better qualified drivers. In addition, the introduction of Traffic (Drivers' Qualifications and Training) Regulations 2008 requires all professional bus and lorry drivers to obtain a Driver Certificate of Professional Competence to be able to drive professionally, as well as passing their driving and theory tests. Therefore, every driver who intends to drive professionally, as well as passing the relevant theory and practical tests, must also pass a case study theoretical test and a practical demonstration test.

These tests are aimed to improve driver knowledge and road safety among professional drivers. It was as a result of these more stringent, theoretical tests, which were introduced in the regulations that I have just cited, there has been a decrease in the number of applications for driving tests in these categories. It is in these circumstances, and in response to requests by employers in the transport sector that Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, in an effort to reduce unemployment, took the initiative of introducing training measures to assist applicants wishing to undertake both bus and lorry tests. So, at present, driving and vehicle examiners will be providing the training for the theoretical tests at no cost to the applicants.

Consideration is also being given to the practical test for lorry drivers: practical bus driver training is already being conducted by the Gibraltar Bus Company. Government at present cannot provide assistance with the practical lorry driving test because the Government currently does not own a lorry that complies with the requirements of the test vehicle, as prescribed by law. The training modules are as follows: Module 1 is a theory test consisting of 200 multiple choice questions, Module 3 is a case-study consisting of multiple choice questions – it is for professional-only drivers – and Module 4 practical demonstration test, consisting of 70 verbal questions, again for professional-only drivers.

Moreover, the Government will be subsidising the test fees and the licence costs for the registered unemployed. People in employment will be provided with the free training, but will have to bear the costs of the tests and the licence.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am grateful to the Minister for setting out all the requirements, as set out in the relevant legislation, but can he confirm or advise this House, whether the regulation transposes what are EU requirements, in any event?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I would have appreciated notice of that question but my understanding is, yes, that they do transpose EU requirements. But if he were to give me notice, or I can write to him to confirm the point, but I am quite sure that it does.

Hon. D J Bossino: Well, I will just read back to the Minister the statement issued, I think conjointly, with the Minister for Traffic, Mr Balban, where they say these tests will enable drivers to drive professionally throughout Gibraltar and the rest of Europe, and have been developed as a requirement of an EU Directive which is designed to improve the knowledge and skills of professional bus and lorry drivers.

Really what I am driving at, Mr Speaker, is the Minister's confirmation that the regulation does not, if you like, impose more stringent requirements than are set out in the EU Directive which, of course, a national legislature or Government and executive in this case can do.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I did not quite catch the last supplementary but, in answer to his second supplementary, simply to confirm that the regulations do transpose the Directives in question. I have the legislation in front of me.

Hon. D J Bossino: I need to press this issue because it could lead on to another issue which I may raise, depending on the reply in a further supplementary. But I will repeat the question, which he may not have caught when I put it to him. Mr Speaker, all I want to know is whether the national legislation imposes stricter requirements than are set out in the Directive itself?

365 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I say, I wish that I had notice of that question. My advice is that it does not. I remember having a very detailed discussion with a senior motor examiner and my Principal Secretary and my advice at the time was that the regulation simply transposes the requirements of the EU Directive.

370 I did not go any further. However, I would need to confirm that to be absolutely certain. But my recollection is that, no, it simply transposes the requirements of the current EU Directives and does not go any further.

375 Hon. D J Bossino: Does he accept, should that last answer be accurate, Mr Speaker, does he accept that it is an obligation of the Gibraltar Government to have to transpose this legislation, in any event – an EU obligation?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, yes, if it is an EU obligation, of course we have to transpose it. Absolutely.

380 Hon. D J Bossino: Given that we have established that point, Mr Speaker, can he advise this House why it is – it may be an obvious question and I have had the obvious reply – but I just wanted to set it out for the record... how is it possible, then, that in the same press statement which was issued by the Minister he says that:

385 ‘as part of its manifesto commitments to reduce unemployment, the Government has introduced training measures to assist applicants which is to undertake bus and lorry theory tests’

Can he explain how he can make that political statement if it was an EU obligation, in any event.

390 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place, I do not think that the hon. Member has established any point. If it is an EU requirement that we have to transpose it into national legislation, I think that is the first point and I think it is fair to say. Secondly, what the press release says is that, as a result of the transposition of EU law into national legislation, there has been a decrease in the number of applications because the theory tests have become harder.

395 What we have done, in order to be able assist the reduction of unemployment, and for people to move into the transport sector, is for the Government too, at no cost, assist people who may wish to become lorry and bus drivers with free training. And, of course, the free training is not something that is required by either the EU directive or the regulations. This is an initiative that has been taken by this Government to make sure that we equip our home grown people with skills.

400 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that reply, Mr Speaker, and it does clarify, perhaps, an issue which was not clear on the face of the press statement issued by the Government.

Hon. G H Licudi: It was very clear to us!

405 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I cannot accept that premise.

Flights to Gibraltar in 2013 Details of new airline proposals

410 Clerk: Question 489, the Hon. D J Bossino.

415 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port confirm whether another airline from East Midlands will commence flights to Gibraltar in the summer of 2013 and whether he is able to announce details further to those which have been made public in the press?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

420 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes, I can confirm that an airline is scheduled to operate flights to Gibraltar from East Midlands, in the UK, as from the summer season of 2013, but I am not able at this point to announce any further details. My Ministry is finalising operational details with the airline in question.

425 Entitlement to Club Card
Method of monitoring current holders

Clerk: Question 490, the Hon. D J Bossino.

430 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port, advise how the Government proposes to monitor continued entitlement to the Club Card by current holders?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

435 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker there are two mechanisms in place to monitor continued entitlement. The first is that the Club Card will expire up to 12 months from the date of issue. Therefore, holders of the card will have to validate their information before the card is re-issued. In the second place, the Employment and Training Board will inform the Gibraltar Bus Company when there is a termination of employment of the holder of the card.

440 There was a long pause.

Mr Speaker: I think we will have to move on to the next – Supplementary...

445 Clerk: Question –

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for the reply, Mr Speaker.

450 The information which travels from the ETB to, presumably, the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd, which is the entity which issues the Club Card: is the Minister satisfied...? I do not know the legal position: I am wondering whether he has received legal advice as to whether he is satisfied that there are no data protection issues which arise as a result of that travel of information, if you like.

455 Hon. J J Bossano: The information is a weekly return on the number of people who are no longer employed. I do not think there is anything there that... we get terminations from the employers. It does not give anything about the individual, other than he is either still employed or not employed. It does not give any other information about his income or age or anything else. It is just whether he is employed or not.

460 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, from my legal practice, the information which is handed over by the employer – just by way of clarification, as I understand the position, to the ETB – is the notice of termination of terms of engagement.

465 Now, the information which is set out in that form is in excess of what the Hon. the Minister for Employment has just set out in this House. So, for example, one thing that automatically comes to mind is the reasons for termination, which may be – which will be – a reason which the employer is relying on as a cause for the employees' termination, but that reason may be hotly contested by the employee and may be the subject, therefore, of Industrial Tribunal proceedings. So it is more information than the Minister has just given this House.

470 Hon. J J Bossano: None of that information is passed on to anybody. The only information that is passed on to the bus company is a list of names saying these people stopped working with us on such a date, so that they know that if somebody comes on a bus who is no longer working... that is the whole purpose of the exercise – and they only get the information that they need, which is just the names and the termination date.

The only problem is that, of course, not every employer gives the information within the seven days that is provided by the law, so until the ETB gets the information, we cannot pass... we cannot say so. There will be probably a time lag between the actual termination and when the information is passed to the bus company, determined simply by how long employers take to inform the ETB that the person is no longer working. Some employers actually do it before the employment ends and some do it weeks later, or much later!

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, if I could home in then on that, Mr Speaker, I am not sure that I received confirmation as to whether the Government is satisfied that even the information, however limited, which is provided to the Gibraltar Bus Company by the Employment and Training Board does not breach the data protection legislation. Is the Government satisfied of that, in respect of that limited information which the Minister has helpfully told me is provided to the Gibraltar Bus Company?

Hon. J J Bossano: Yes. I am satisfied, being the provider of the information, that my Department is not breaking the law by saying that a person is no longer working in Gibraltar, which is the only thing we are telling the bus company.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am just going to... I have got a copy of the...
Within the 12-month period of validity of the bus card, in the event of termination... let us say, within two months from issuing of the bus card, there is a termination of employment, how does that information then get fed through the system?

So I am an employee, I am employed now in Gibraltar – I live in Spain – I am therefore entitled, as a result of Government initiative to use the bus service free of charge, and issued to me is a bus card. Two months thereafter, my employment is terminated. The only qualification which entitles me, as a result of Government policy, to use the free bus service is employment. So therefore, if that criteria is no longer present, then I am therefore not... I think we all agree that that is the correct understanding of the position.

How, then, is that information fed through to the bus driver? Because I have a photocopy of the bus Club Card which is issued by the Bus Company, and on its face all it has is a photograph of the individual, a PCC number – I am not sure what that is – and the person's name. Other than that, it is in form – and I think pretty much in respect of a lot of the detail – exactly the same as a Club Card, which the GSD, when in Government, issued at the relevant time.

So I just wanted clarification in respect of that issue, which I think must be an important issue and must have been an issue which taxed the Government.

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, it did not so much tax me, save that I did ask the question and, of course, if the information arrives at the administration office of the Gibraltar Bus Company, the way that the Club Card works is it is actually swiped through electronically. So if a person is no longer entitled for the Club Card, then I am not entirely sure what the terminological process is, but it will not be accepted, so the person will not be able to go onto the bus.

GibiBikes scheme Progress with provider's contractual duties

Clerk: Question 491, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port inform this House what progress has been made to ensure that the company which provides the facilities for the GibiBikes scheme complies with its contractual duties?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, Government officials met recently on 24th May with the suppliers of the scheme. At the meeting, all issues regarding the scheme were discussed. This included the problems that have been encountered to date and the proposed way forward.

The Government expressed its concerns at the problems that have been encountered and which the contractors undertook to rectify. My information is that the defects have now been rectified.

It was agreed that a contract was in place for the supply of the scheme and therefore the remainder of the contract would be carried out. The contractor is currently mobilising and works will commence shortly to finalise the project.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Minister has just said that the defects have now been rectified. That certainly confirms the anecdotal evidence that I am receiving from people who are users of this scheme.

In his reply to one of the questions which was posed, again by my hon. learned friend, Mr Figueras, in a supplementary, there was a point made when we were trying to press the Government as to the level of commitment, if any, that they were lending to the GibiBikes scheme which was, of course, started by the previous administration. One of the points made by the Hon. Minister, Mr Speaker, as I understood it, was that no firm policy decision would be made until the commercial discussions and issues had been raised with the company which supplies the service.

Given that that seems already to have taken place, and that there has been a happy resolution, it seems, also – or am I going too far? – (Hon. N F Costa: A resolution.) a happy resolution of the issues which were plaguing the GibiBikes scheme and which the Minister set out in his reply at the last session of Parliament, is he able now to advise this House, what the Government's policy decision is in relation to the scheme?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I believe I answered the question when I said that, given that there is a contract in place with the supplier of the scheme, and that taxpayers' money had been spent to quite a large extent, in the way that I detailed in my last answer to the House, it was decided, as Government, that the remainder of the contract will be carried out. But, of course, we were not in a position to be able to carry on with the project until we were assured, and it was confirmed, that the work that the defects – the many defects which I listed on the last occasion – were rectified. Moreover, we had to receive assurances that the defects and software problems that literally plagued the system would not occur a week or two after the UK supplier had been over to rectify the problems.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, in relation to the former of the points he has just raised, which is the rectification of the defects, he has already confirmed that that has been done, and they have been rectified, and presumably it is the latter point which he still needs to be satisfied on, which is that there will not be a recurrence. Is that a correct interpretation of the Minister's answer?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, it is, Mr Speaker.

We have, obviously, sought assurances that there will not be another systematic widespread failure of the system as happened just shortly ago.

Hon. D J Bossino: Okay, and the assurances that have been sought, Mr Speaker, presumably have not been received. Is he able to provide that answer?

Hon. N F Costa: I think, Mr Speaker, at this point, because I am still in discussions with the company, it is safe to say that I shall leave no stone unturned in making sure that Gibraltarians do not suffer at the hands of the defects that were previously experienced.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this side of the House is very keen that the GibiBikes scheme should continue. We think it is good for Gibraltar, and that is why it was launched under our watch.

So can I ask the Minister this question which is, given the defects are now rectified and once he has received the relevant assurances, can he confirm that he will be able thereafter to come to this House and confirm what the Government's policy decision is, in relation to the further roll-out and continuation of the GibiBikes scheme?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as usual, the hon. Gentleman cannot help asking me a supplementary without first prefacing the question with remarks that really do demand an answer.

If the hon. Gentleman tells me that the Government was so keen with a bike scheme that had 15½ years in which to do it, and they only decided to roll it out on 27th November of last year, so they could not have been that keen on an urban bike scheme.

To answer the question, yes.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for the reply, Mr Speaker, and he can rest assured that I will continue pressing him on this issue, as we move along.

Hon. N F Costa: I very much look forward to it, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: There really must be supplementaries within questions, not statements to end a discussion.

Hon. N F Costa: I will take that point of order, Mr Speaker.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

World War II blast wall at Grand Battery Demolition

Clerk: Question 492, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Technical Services confirm the date on which works to demolish the World War II blast wall at Grand Battery began?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, this question will be answered by me in my capacity as Minister for Heritage.

The demolition of the wall commenced on Monday, 21st May 2012.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, it appears that the Minister for Technical Services is somewhat surprised that the question was directed at him. Simply to clarify: I have raised the question so that it be asked of him, but it was the Government's decision to allocate the question to the Minister who has answered the question.

I asked the question originally to the Minister for Technical Services simply because it was in relation to the demolition of a wall, and I assumed – some may argue perhaps in error – that it was the responsibility of the Minister for Technical Services. It appears that it is not and I am grateful for the answer.

However, in relation to the answer, it is surprising, certainly to Members on this side of the House, that given the current Government's policy of openness, transparency and their stated policy of running certain Government projects through the DPC for consideration in the first instance and then approval at a later stage, that the demolition of the wall started on 21st May when, in fact, the application was set down in the agenda for a meeting of the DPC on 24th May. (Several Members: Ooh!)

Perhaps the Hon. Minister can answer this question: does he not consider (Interjections) that it is rather embarrassing in fact that, having this policy of running these projects to the DPC, having had that project on the agenda – a copy of which I have here, and could pass on to the Minister if he needs to have sight of it – that it was on the agenda, that works began without actually having had it considered, because it may well be that they did not seek the approval, but that the DPC did not even get the opportunity to consider it.

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Speaker, on his first point, not only is it the prerogative of the Government who answers your questions, but you were directing it to the wrong person. It does not mean that Technical Services always demolishes all the walls in Gibraltar, and therefore there is a process in which demolition of walls take place.

But in answer to the second part of his supplementary, this project was started by Carl Viagas on behalf of Government's consultation with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. The scheme was presented to the Board of the Heritage Trust on 10th May 2012, as required by the Heritage Trust Act, and confirmed that a consensus of the approval of such a wonderful scheme was reached by the Board on the same day.

640 The scheme was also presented for planning approval, with approval issued by the DPC – and I am correcting him – on 18th May – ‘Ooh!’ then (Laughter) – by the Chairman of the Planning Commission and the demolition permit was issued on 21st May.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for those details. (Laughter)

645 The premise of the question in the first instance, Mr Speaker, was that the project was down for consideration by the full DPC, of which submitting applications to or projects to this Government is very fond, on 24th May. I certainly was not aware that these permits had been sought prior to the project being undertaken, nor that the Heritage Trust had been consulted.

650 Now, be that as it may, Mr Speaker, it is rather hypocritical of the Government to say, ‘We will run Government projects by the DPC’, albeit for consideration, if not approval, which is the subject of discussions that we have had in this House in the past, and then to say that it is okay to just do it by consulting with the Heritage Trust and not giving the DPC the opportunity to formally, in open session, open meetings which they themselves created, give the approval, or at least the nod, for the works to begin.

655 I also understand, Mr Speaker, that there were time constraints and that there were time pressures in respect of this particular project, and it is the prerogative of the Government – and it was certainly the policy of the previous GSD administration – that when Government needs to take action, it will take action and therefore no Government projects went to planning; but it is rather hypocritical to criticise that policy for many years in Opposition and then for the Government to do precisely the same, when they enter office.

Will the Minister not concede that it is, in fact, rather hypocritical of him to take that process?

660 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): No, Mr Speaker, the Government will not concede.

665 I will not concede for the very simple reason that this project was conceived and started when his party was in Government without going to the DPC. We continued with the project, we then went to the DPC before the demolition started. So it is obvious, Mr Speaker, that the Member has not got his facts right, I am sorry.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker –

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker – (Interjections)

670 Mr Speaker: Order, order!
I will allow the Minister –

675 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: – just an expansion on that: the project was, in fact, discussed... well, approved, by DPC by way of round-robin, previous to the – (Several Members: Aaah!) (Interjections) (Mr Speaker: Order!)

680 Absolutely, all members of the DPC were consulted and approved it, and then the decision was ratified although, as the hon. Member says, it does not yet require approval, but all members were consulted before the demolition and it was approved and then it was ratified at the next meeting – the next available opportunity, precisely because of the time constraints.

So not only is my hon. friend correct, in that it was already a project conceived by the previous administration, but it actually resulted in the whole of the DPC having an opportunity to express its view before it started.

685 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Well, Mr Speaker, I am at a loss to understand how anyone in the public would have objected or posed any kind of objection to this project in the round-robin exercise. This, Mr Speaker – and I wonder whether the Minister will agree – (Applause) has shades of the North Gate of the dockyard.

690 Several Members: Hear, hear! (Interjection by Hon. S E Linares)

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the point here is – (Interjections) Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: Order, order, order!

I want to hear the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The point here is, Mr Speaker, that this project started and was conceived under his party when they were in Government, that they did not believe in going to the DPC, that we simply continued with the system that was already there, with a project that was already there which had not gone to the DPC, but we decided that it should go to the DPC as a round-robin. More than that, the Heritage Trust, GONHS and the Department of the Environment were all consulted and went on site to examine it before the demolition happened.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I hate to be the one to point out that it appears that the Deputy Chief Minister is confused at this stage because, upon taking office, Mr Speaker, their policy, as stated in this House, was to adopt the policy of the previous GSD administration and not run for the time being any Government projects by the DPC.

However, in this instance, that particular Government project was set in the agenda for the meeting of 24th May – and let us not forget, work started on 21st – and no consideration was allowed by the open meeting of the DPC prior to work starting. This, Mr Speaker, and I am certain he will not agree, but I will ask him whether he accepts that it is in stark contrast to the policy of openness and transparency, (Interjection) that you allowed this project to continue the way it did, without consulting the DPC. (Interjections)

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The Government does not accept that. The Government accepts that there is a measure of confusion, but that confusion is not on the part of anyone on this side of the House, Mr Speaker.

I think the hon. Member has to understand that our commitment is that projects will go to the DPC for an advisory or for informational purposes at this stage, and that is within the term that the projects could be subject to planning, in the same way as any other application.

Now, at this particular juncture, this project was inherited from the previous administration, where they did not believe we should have gone to the DPC, so what is hypocritical is that the hon. Member should himself accuse us of hypocrisy when they themselves do not believe in the course of action they are now advocating, Mr Speaker!

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, notwithstanding the manifesto commitment of the now current Government, where on page 45, every person who has filed an objection to any development will be entitled to be heard by the Commission, will the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister confirm what the point was of putting the application through to the agenda of an open meeting of the DPC, if it had already been pre-approved?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member does not understand that works had already started under his administration. We simply inherited the project that was already ongoing! (Interjections) So in other words, it goes to planning, it goes to the DPC, before work starts. Works had already started under his Government, when his party was in Government.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, with all due respect to the Deputy Chief Minister, works for the demolition on the wall started on 19th May – five days before the scheduled meeting of the DPC.

Hon. S E Linares: No! Mr Speaker –

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, in your original answer –

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, 21st May.

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, 21st May. (Hon. S E Linares: Yes, yes.) I mean, Mr Speaker, the wall had been demolished before the matter went before the open meeting of the DPC!

I ask again: what was the point of even keeping the matter on the agenda, for a wall that had already been demolished?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, he does not seem to understand that – (Interjection and laughter) Is that a nervous laugh, from the person who does not even ask questions.

Mr Speaker, in my supplementary, I actually said that the scheme was also presented for planning – was presented for planning – on 18th; not on 24th like he is saying. It was approved on 18th by round-robin. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, order, order! The Minister is answering.

Hon. S M Figueras: [Inaudible]

Hon. S E Linares: Right, so it meant that everybody in the DPC had their say – everybody. Every member of the DPC was aware of this. And then it was ratified in the open on the 24th.

So what I am saying is that it did go to the DPC, it did actually go to the DPC, unlike when your party was in Government – it did not go to the DPC, it did not go to the Heritage Trust. It was already an ongoing project, so we carried on with it.

Hon. S M Figueras: But that, Mr Speaker, was the policy of the GSD at the time, and at least we had the political honesty to be consistent in respect of it – (Several Members: Hear hear!) (Applause)

What the Hon. Minister does not seem to understand is that their policy of openness and transparency contemplates the participation of the public in meetings of the DPC – and presentation on the 18th to the DPC itself, without the public being present, is not an observation of that commitment. That is what we are complaining about. What, Mr Speaker, was the point of the matter going before the open meeting of the DPC set down for 24th May, when the wall had already been demolished?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: The hon. Member very clearly does not understand the process or the procedure involved in planning. Normally, an applicant comes with an application – in this case, it is the Government – the application is discussed and then work starts.

In this particular case, works had already started (Interjection) under the previous Government. This was simply a continuation of the works which they had started and for which they did not seek planning. There have been many Government projects since we have been in office now that have gone to the DPC.

Recommendations have been made and those recommendations have been accepted by the Government, without being obliged to do so. So the hon. Member should not stand there and accuse us of being hypocrites because, really, the ones who are being politically hypocritical is them. They are asking questions on a totally false premise, that is to say, the works on the project as a whole had already started by the time this –

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am at a loss to understand how they can continue to make that particular point.

What was the point of the matter even so much as going before the open meeting with the DPC if the works had been completed, because they are saying that the works began – which they were not, because they were only begun on Monday, 21st May, as confirmed by the Minister in his original answer? I cannot understand how they seek to pursue this point of demolition.

Mr Speaker, I will say little more on this because the point has been made and it is obviously lost on the hon. Members opposite, but one last time: will the Minister not accept that it is... I will not say the height of political hypocrisy, because I don't want fisticuffs, (Laughter) but is it not at least slightly hypocritical to say that we are going to go to the open meetings of the DPC with Government projects and then do this exact thing in respect of something that was as high profile as it was?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister for the Environment is dying to say something.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the object of having this at the open meeting was, in fact, openness and honesty.

A decision had been taken without any objections by round-robin. It could have been easily hidden away, like used to happen in the case of the former administration, but, no, the Commission felt that it had to be consistent with its policy, that it had to be discussed at a public meeting – or a meeting in public, which is different to a public meeting. It was discussed and no objections were raised.

Had there been objections, then perhaps we would have been in some difficulty, or perhaps the works would have stopped and have been altered, but there were no objections because, Mr Speaker, the only people who could have objected had already been consulted by round-robin and had included all the non-governmental organisations who have a role in this, and they had all approved.

So the fact that it went to the open meeting was a logical consequence of openness and honesty.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman accept that, in fact, in relation to World War II heritage sites there is capable of being far more emotion attaching to World War II heritage sites than perhaps heritage sites that are much older, because there are, for example, retired servicemen or serving servicemen who may well take a different view to the position of the Heritage Trust?

In the light of that, doesn't he think that it is not acceptable, when you have a policy of consulting relevant stakeholders, when you have a policy of having an open, transparent planning system, which is their policy, of just simply consulting the Heritage Trust and not consulting the general public and therefore allowing servicemen or retired servicemen or members of the public to actually make any comments in respect of a project? Does he not accept that?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, Government does not accept anything of the kind. While there may be an emotional attachment on the part of certain people to the World War II fortifications, the fact is that we did consult all the relevant stakeholders, both in the DPC round-robin and earlier when they went on a site visit to look at the project.

They must remember that this was started under their administration, Mr Speaker. This was a project that they started. They had a commitment to a secretive, closed planning process, and they conducted it in that way. We came in, we inherited the project, and we simply continued with what was already there, but we included an element of consultation which did not exist before.

Hon. S M Figueras: But, Mr Speaker, their administration entered office on 9th December 2011. They had every opportunity to consult the public on this project, which the GSD had allegedly chosen to do in secret and without consultation.

Isn't it the case, Mr Speaker, that the Deputy Chief Minister, or any other of the Ministers, could have brought this matter to the public's attention in an open meeting of the DPC if they had wanted to or they had not run out of time?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the project was discussed by all the relevant stakeholders. They were all consulted, they gave their consent – primarily, the Gibraltar Heritage Trust, whose role and whose statutory duty it is. So that consultation did take place, so the element of consultation which the hon. Member is complaining about simply is not the case. There was consultation, the relevant bodies were involved in that consultation, and the works were carried out.

Again, he has to remember that this project started under their administration when they were in government, with the closed and secretive planning process that they had.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister consider the public a stakeholder?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we consider the public a stakeholder. We give a far more serious approach to the views of the public as a stakeholder in the planning process over the last six months than they ever did in 16 years. (Applause)

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, with all due respect, that is really rather weak. (Interjections and laughter)

Their policy was at the other end of the spectrum to ours, according to them, and they are the ones who are all about consultation, consideration and the public's consternation. They are the ones who are about openness and transparency. Now, it is not appropriate, in my view, for the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister to continually refer to the practice of a previous GSD administration whose policy was in stark contrast to theirs – and we have no issue accepting it – to then say, 'We only did what the GSD administration was doing for 16 years and what we complained about for 16 years.'

860 Is the public, in the Deputy Chief Minister's eyes, a stakeholder –

Hon. G H Licudi: He has answered that point already.

Hon. S M Figueras: – and does this foreshadow –

865 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, on a point of order, the hon. Member has asked the same supplementary previous to this one on a number of occasions, that very same one.

Now he is asking again the same supplementary as to whether this side of the House considers the public a stakeholder. That question has been asked and answered; we should simply move on.

870 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is not a point of order, (Interjection) and unless the hon. Gentleman wants to change places with the Speaker of the House –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

875 The Standing Orders do provide that a question that has been asked and answered... However, I will allow the hon. Member to finish asking the question before I can rule on that. Now that he is on notice, he might probably phrase his question accordingly.

880 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. Deputy Chief Minister concede that this foreshadows a Government policy of not consulting the public in respect of the treatment of World War II heritage sites? (Interjection)

885 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answer once again is the same: the Government attaches a considerable degree of importance to consulting the public in relation to planning applications. This is why meetings of the Development and Planning Commission are now held in public. This is why the minutes of the Commission and the agenda are now published online. None of this used to happen when I was sitting on that side of the House asking the questions, Mr Speaker.

890 The hon. Gentleman should consider, in relation to this particular project, it was a project which started under their administration, when they were in government, under the rules that existed at the time. When we came in, we simply took on the project and decided to introduce a greater element of consultation than had existed before by consulting all the relevant stakeholders and by consulting the Development and Planning Commission by round-robin. It was then included in the agenda of the DPC, for reasons my hon. friend, Dr Cortes, has already explained. So the answer is the same answer: yes, we attach a considerable degree of public importance, certainly much more than they ever did.

895 Mr Speaker: I think the subject has been thoroughly aired. A supplementary must be a distinctly different question now.

900 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker. I asked the question in respect of whether the public was a stakeholder. We got the answer; that much was granted.

Mr Speaker: It has been dealt with.

905 Hon. S M Figueras: The Hon. Deputy Chief Minister has said that they attach considerable importance to the views of the public. However, he has not answered the question in confirming whether or not they consider the public's views important enough to consult them in respect of the treatment of World War II heritage sites.

There simply was no answer, Mr Speaker, and that is all I am after.

910 Mr Speaker: Again, I must remind the hon. Member there must be a question in a supplementary. There is no point in standing up and making a concluding summary of what has been discussed. There was no question there, and I think that is very clear. There was no question there.

Next Question, please.

Old airport building Fire certificate

915

Clerk: Question 493, the Hon. D J Bossino.

920

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Government advise when the fire certificate at the old airport building expired and when it was renewed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

925

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, a fire certificate for the old terminal has never existed. The building had a certificate of fitness issued when it was built.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, for the sake of clarification, the Hon. Minister said that, instead, what it had was a certificate of fitness. Can I ask the Minister whether that certificate of fitness has expired in the last few months, perhaps?

930

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because what happens usually is that a building gets the certificate of fitness and then it is maintained, and through the maintenance they look at how the building is. You do not get a certificate of fitness for a building and then it expires.

935

What has happened is that the old terminal has always had maintenance contracts to ensure that the fire extinguishers, the emergency lights and fire alarms are functioning and maintained properly. So once the certificate of fitness is given, then the rest is maintained adequately and checked, obviously, but it is not a certificate of fitness, as such. The certificate of fitness is given when the building is done at the beginning.

Clerk: Question –

940

Hon. D J Bossino: Is it the intention... Sorry, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Given the fact that we have the new airport building and both buildings are now currently operational, is it the Government's intention to continue carrying out these checks which the Minister is talking about, and for how long?

950

Really, the point I am trying to drive at is at what time will the operational aspects of the old building cease, if at all, once the new airport building is fully operational? Can the Minister answer that question?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I have not got the information as to when all the operations of the old building will be transferred to the new one, but what I can assure him is that whilst the old one is functioning the maintenance contract still exists. So that is as far as I can answer the question.

955

It implies, therefore, that when the functions of the old building move to the new building then the contract for the maintenance will not be necessary because the old buildings are not there any more... we do not use it any more as a terminal.

960

Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer Appointment

Clerk: Question 494, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

965

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Civil Contingencies tell us who has been selected for the position of Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

970 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, Mr Stuart Green has been selected for the post of Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer.

Hon. P R Caruana: Surprise, surprise, surprise!

975 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, Mr Green is a retired Lieutenant-Colonel and former MoD press officer. He is non-local and he now takes up a new Gibraltar Government post. Were there no young locals looking for work suitable for the job who would want to start out a career as a press officer?

980 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, there were applicants and the board actually selected Mr Stuart Green. I can give her a little bit more information – Mr Stuart Green has been given a contract for three years in order to start a training process, or at least a succession programme, and he was obviously deemed by the board to be the person to do that job at this moment in time.

985 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does not the Minister agree that it is the height of hypocrisy that, after years of his Government (Interjections) when in Opposition, criticising the GSD Government for employing retired and non-local individuals, that they are now doing exactly the same?
If it was wrong for the GSD, it is wrong for the GSLP.

990 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I do not agree with that at all, because the difference is that this gentleman is on a three-year contract to do that job, in order – as opposed to what the GSD used to do – to retrain people in Gibraltar so that they can do that job. So it is not a question of this gentleman getting a full-time job, like the previous administration used to do to every Tom, Dick and Harry.

995 Hon. P R Caruana: Tom, Dick, Harry and Stuart!

Hon. S E Linares: Or Stuart, yes, (Laughter) for three years, as opposed to... Yes, Mr Speaker, and Stuart, for three years. The difference with Tom, Dick and Harry, as opposed to Stuart, is that Stuart is for three years and Tom, Dick and Harry were enchufao by you. So let's not go any further.

1000 Mr Stuart Green also went through a process – as opposed to what the GSD used to do – of interviewing and selection, so that is the difference. So there is no height of hypocrisy at all.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask the Hon. Minister – because he did mention in his earlier contribution that there were other applicants who went for an interview, I think he said – could he tell us how many local persons went for the interview?

1005 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I need notice of that question and I have not got that information.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: I should add, by way of additional information, that the Government has also appointed a deputy press officer who is a young Gibraltarian, who will be starting work on 2nd July.

1010 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I acknowledge the fact that he might need notice of the question for him to be able to give me an answer but, if I were to write to him, perhaps, would he be able to tell me how many local people applied and whether, in the view of the board, they felt that the local people were either not qualified or not experienced enough?

1015 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I am willing to give him the numbers of applicants, but I am not willing to give him the second part. That is up to the board.

1020 I am not going to give him what the board has discussed or said about the actual interviews. That would be data protection in itself. So we cannot disclose. I will disclose the number, but not even the names of the people who applied. It is a data protection issue.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister tell us who the local deputy press officer is who will be starting on 2nd July?

1025 Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it would not be appropriate to tell the House before the person actually starts. So, if the hon. Member would like to ask that question again next month, I am sure we will be able to answer it.

1030

Culture and Heritage Agency
Details of trainees

1035 Clerk: Question 495, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Culture and Heritage provide details of trainees presently assigned to the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency, explaining the arrangements/terms and conditions under which training is taking place?

1040

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, the total number of trainees assigned currently to the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency are as follows. And this again, they are from the trainees... We are training them. They can come in and out, but the numbers are five Grade 1s, four Grade 2s and five Technical Grade 1 – maintenance.

On the second part of his question, the terms and conditions are as the Gibraltar Training Scheme. Maintenance staff will carry out general maintenance courses at the Gibraltar Training Centre, and other staff – accounts, administration and reception – are carrying out on-the-job training.

1050

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member please clarify for me: he said there are five Grade 1s and four Grade 2s, for example, who come and go, so they are not people who are permanently attached there, but sort of can vary on a day-to-day basis as to who the individual is?

1055

Hon. S E Linares: That depends on the ETB. They are there for... they might be three or four months in the training and then we might have another few. It depends on the ETB and on what has already extensively been explained here in this House.

1060

Hon. E J Reyes: So, Mr Speaker, am I correct in assuming from there that what the Agency then is doing is, it is accepting trainees sent in from the Future Jobs Strategy and so on for an agreed period of time, and when that time is completed they go back and so on? It does not necessarily mean that those individuals are being trained so that after x number of months they will become employees of the Agency?

1065

Hon. S E Linares: It could well be, if the vacancies come out, and until the vacancies come out, no; so if there is a vacancy, I am sure that those trainees will be the first ones to apply, because they have already got the training, which is what has been explained previously.

What I am saying is that those trainees are there on the job and if ever the Culture and Heritage Agency brings out the vacancies, I am sure all those trainees who have had on-the-job training will be the first ones to apply. It is obvious. That is what has been explained ad nauseam in this House, how the system works.

1070

Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker – I am a bit confused – what has been explained is that the trainees have entered into a sort of a contract with the company that is giving them training, and that company has to sign on a dotted line at the end of a period of which they have to employ them. Is this not also applicable, or am I just being confused?

1075

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Government Departments where people are placed do not have to sign anything saying they will take on the trainee because, as I have made clear in answer to previous questions in previous meetings of the House, it is not the case that the people who are being put in Government Departments are being put in the Government Departments in anticipation of joining the Government service.

1080 The reality, as will be obvious from the answers to the questions that are down to me to answer, is that the numbers that were taken on from the VTS Scheme included people who were in the private sector, where the employer in the private sector was not willing to enter into an agreement to give them a job. Therefore, rather than have somebody perhaps learning less in the private sector than he might be learning if he was in a Department, those people... I think there are only 88 now left who are still in the private sector because we have not been able to slot them elsewhere, but the bulk of the people who are slotted in Government areas are 1085 people who were originally in the Scheme but where the employers with whom they were placed were not prepared to give them a guarantee of employment. Therefore, they are no worse off because they have not got a guarantee of employment... and they did not have one before.

1090 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker. So, then, for the purposes of what the Minister for Employment has explained, the Culture and Heritage Agency is taken as any other Government Department and, therefore, when a vacancy arises, it will not necessarily go to this individual, he has to apply.

1095 However, Mr Speaker, I also implied, in explaining the arrangement terms and conditions... What I am trying to get at there is the Culture and Heritage Agency, by the very nature of its work, its duties and responsibilities, has to organise a series of events that mainly take place outside normal office hours so, if these trainees, in undergoing the training, attend these types of events and so on, they will be working alongside a normal permanent and pensionable employee of the Agency who, perhaps, is being paid overtime – there could even be a premium rate because it is a specific bank holiday and so on. Are these individuals then entitled to any sort of additional payment from the Agency as such, or how is the training scheme catering for that?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the employer is the Employment Training Company Ltd or the Graduate Company, depending on whether people have got a degree or not, and that employer only employs him for the basic week of 39 hours. If the person with whom they are placed wants them to do extra hours, then they have to be paid by the placement and not by the employing company.
1105

1110 I am not sure whether instances like that occur in this area, but I can tell him, as a parallel example to what he is pointing out that, for example, in the case of the trainees that we have got in areas like the Care Agency, who are trainee carers, there the shift allowance that is paid to normal employees is paid by the Agency to the trainees from the ETB. The ETB does not pay them the shift allowance. The ETB pays them a basic wage because the ETB does not have, in their system of employment, provision for shift allowances for people. So where people are being asked to do something above the normal requirement that others are being asked, then it is a matter for the employment area to pay. Clearly, I would imagine no Government Department is going to be expecting people to work for free.

1115 Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Daniel Feetham...

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, can I ask the Hon. the Minister for Culture... He said that it is obvious... I have a note of what he said: 'It is obvious that those people doing on-the-job training will be the first to apply.' I think that is what he said.

1120 Does the Government envisage that those people who it is 'obvious will apply' for the jobs that they have been doing in training will be given an advantage in the selection process?

Hon. S E Linares: No, there is no advantage at all. In fact, it depends on whether the vacancy comes out in the first place. If the vacancy does come out, there is no advantage given to anybody. They go to the board.

1125 What I am saying is that it is obvious that, if you have done the job, it is probable that within the selection board they will look at you in a different light, but there will not be anybody saying to them, 'Look, this is the person who...' It is part of the CV and it depends on the CV.

1130 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that it is part of the CV. I was not suggesting that the Hon. the Minister is going to be talking personally to any member of the board.

What I am asking is about Government policy. Is it the Government's policy to actually give these trainees an advantage over those who may apply from outside the service by actually giving them that on-the-job training? Because that is what it appeared that the hon. Gentleman was actually getting at when he gave the answer to my hon. friend, Mr Reyes.

1135 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, can I remind the hon. Member opposite that the view of the previous administration was that the VTS trainees had a better chance of getting a job precisely because they were being given training. There was no guarantee that they would get a job, but their prospects of getting it were improved. We believe that the prospects of those we have inherited are continuing to be improved as a result of the opportunity they are getting to be at work.

1140 Clearly, if we have got somebody, for example, who has not worked in an office at all before, he is less likely to impress the selection board than if there is somebody who has worked, in the space of a year, in half a dozen different offices. To that extent, one assumes that they are better placed, but it is the judgement of the people who do the interviewing, not of the Government.

1145 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I quite understand that there cannot be any guarantee, and I repeat that I understand that the board undertakes the selection process, but I am asking about Government policy and Government intention. Is it the Government's policy and is it the Government's intention, bearing in mind that there are so many people who are under the Future Jobs Strategy Scheme, to effectively give them an advantage over somebody outside in relation to these particular jobs? That is the question.

1150 Hon. J J Bossano: It is a question, Mr Speaker, that seems to be contradicted by what the hon. Member understands, because if the hon. Member understands that they are not being given any indication that the job is waiting for them, guaranteed, or that... The only advantage that they have, in the view of the Government, is the advantage that they had when the previous Minister who was responsible for training claimed that there was an advantage.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

1160 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I just really wanted to get some clarification from some of the comments of the Minister for Employment, because he did say, at some point earlier on, that some of the trainees are being sent to the Care Agency. From memory, I think some of the trainees were sent to the Calpe Ward in St Bernard's Hospital.

1165 He has also been mentioning the fact that this is just for the purpose of giving them an opportunity to do some training on site in the particular environment where they are working to gain at least some experience of the nature of the work that they are undertaking. As I remember – and I wish to be corrected if I am wrong – in the Calpe Ward they did send a number of care worker trainees, if I am correct. Do I take it, then, that part of the policy of the Government is that, while giving the opportunity to those trainees to be there, they will not necessarily be guaranteed a job, so that when vacancies do arise in the Care Agency in the future, everyone in the labour market will be allowed to compete for the particular job? Is that the case?

1170 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I think the reference that I made to the parallel with the question from the Hon. Mr Reyes was in relation to getting extra pay, not in relation to the employment prospects.

1175 In the cases, for example, where people are training to do the SRN or training to be carers, they are being trained because we know that they are needed and there are vacancies there, and the purpose of the training is that, at the end of the training, they will be taken on. But in places where there is no vacancy and we are not training people specifically for a vacancy, the position is about training them to give them skills that will improve their prospects of employment.

1180 So I think, outside the area of health and social care in the Care Agency or in the GHA, there are no people being trained for a specific job at the moment. There may be in the future – like there are in the private sector, there may be opportunities in the public sector – but, at the moment, the only two areas of the public sector where there is specific training designed to produce people with skills that will enable them to occupy vacancies that we know will exist in the future, are in those two areas.

1185 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in the normal course of events, the vacancies that may come out in the Hon. Minister's Department – the Minister for Culture and Heritage – would be advertised and everybody would have an equal advantage in relation to that particular vacancy, depending on their experience. Does he not agree with me that by placing these individuals from the Future Jobs Strategy, which has become a 1190 necessity in actual fact, because you have so many of them and you have made so many promises to them in relation to guarantees of jobs... By actually placing them to acquire these skills in the hon. Member's ministry, are you not effectively giving these people an advantage in respect of others outside who may be applying for those jobs, and is it not as a consequence of a flawed policy – in other words, the promises that the hon. Member made at the General Election time to all these trainees and all these various people?

1195 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the 'flawed policy' is flawed in the eyes of the hon. Member.
Presumably the hon. Member prefers that we should not be providing training to the unemployed, notwithstanding the fact that they justified what they were providing under the VTS as doing precisely what he says the present Scheme is doing, which is to provide people with training so that, as a result of the training, their prospects of obtaining employment would be increased over the advantage of those who were not getting the training.

1200 The only difference between what they were doing and what we are doing is (a) that we are paying more, and (b) that it is more specifically related, in the private sector in particular, to people not being used as free labour and then being returned back to the pool to be replaced by a new guy, and that was one of the big things that was undermining the credibility of the Scheme in the eyes of many of the users. They were being constantly rotated in the private sector because there was no real control over the fact, because simply these people were being removed from the books.

1205 Can I remind the Member once again that, in December, not only were there x numbers of people in the VTS, there was a waiting list of 70 who were not deemed to be either employed or unemployed or training or getting paid. I suppose he thinks that is a better system than the one we have got today, but I can assure you that people in the system would not agree with him.

1210 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, the difference between this side of the House and that side of the House is that you were the ones who guaranteed everybody a job at the end of their training. Hence why you are now left with the situation where you are having to park all these people in the public sector. (Hon. J J Bossano: No!)

1215 Mr Speaker, may I ask the Hon. the Minister for Culture, to whom the original Question was directed... I know that I asked this question to the Hon. Minister for Employment at the last session, but he gave me his own personal view. He did not give me a Government view. Can I ask the Hon. Minister for Culture whether it is the Government's intention to dumb down entrance into the public service, and in particular into the hon. Member's Department?

1220 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member made a statement before he went on to question my colleague and, therefore, with your indulgence, I will answer what he made, which is completely false.

1225 The reality is that there is not an issue here of having to put people in places because of promises we made; it is because we inherited from his administration, the administration of which he is now so proud, a huge number of people who were in non-jobs in order to keep down the unemployment figures. Perhaps he would have preferred us to put them on the scrap heap, which presumably is what would have happened on 9th December if there had not been a change of Government.

1230 I can assure the hon. Member that those who are involved are clear in their own minds that the system that we are operating now is an improvement on the one we inherited, and every time he puts a question here he convinces me more that he wants to see it failing. He is due to be disappointed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister for Culture now answer my question?

1235 Hon. S E Linares: My answer is the same as the Minister has just answered.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect, you have not answered the question.

The question is this, and I will repeat it: is it the Government's policy to dumb down entrance into the public service, and in particular the Minister's Department.

1240 Hon. S E Linares: That question has already been answered.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know what the hon. Member means by 'dumping down' –

Hon. D A Feetham: Dumbing down.

1245 Hon. J J Bossano: – but the position in respect of vacancies in the public sector is that vacancies in the public sector are advertised and the requirements for the jobs are no different from what they have been in the past.

1250 The fact that we are giving people the opportunity, who are unemployed, to be trained in order to be better equipped to get jobs is what the Employment Service exists for and what the taxpayer is paying for the Employment Service to do, and the end result will be, when the time comes, that we see the decline in the numbers of unemployed and the increase in the number of Gibraltarians in employment. I would have expected him to be looking forward to a situation where we have got more Gibraltarians working than we have had in the past. I cannot imagine why anybody in this House should not want to see that result.

1255 Hon. D A Feetham: This is turning into quite a curious ménage à trois. I ask questions to the Hon. the Minister for Culture and it is answered by the Hon. the Minister for Employment.

1260 Hon. J J Bossano: I will tell him why: (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) the Minister for Culture is not responsible for employment – I am.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask a question?

1265 Maybe he can answer this. Does he agree with Mr Bossano's personal view that he expressed to me – because it was a personal view that he expressed – that if you are good enough you should be allowed into the public service regardless of the entrance requirement into the public service? Does he agree with that?

Hon. S E Linares: The question has already been answered, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1270 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, can I take you back a little while?

I am grateful to the Minister for Employment, who explained to me that any extra hours worked was not going to be paid for. Therefore, can the Minister for Culture now answer me: is his Agency paying these trainees for extra hours worked?

1275 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I do not know exactly whether this is happening, but because they are not employees of the Agency I am sure they are not; but I will check on that and I can give him an answer if he gives notice of this question.

1280 Hon. E J Reyes: I have not quite understood the answer, Mr Speaker – because they are employees, or they are not employees of the Agency?

1285 Hon. S E Linares: They are employees of the Employment and Training Ltd from the ETB, employees from them. I do not pay them. The Culture and Heritage Agency do not pay these trainees. They come from the ETB and, therefore, because they come from the ETB, the overtime and all that is not paid by me.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is that answer not contradictory to what the Minister for Employment has just said?

1290 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, it does.

Hon. E J Reyes: Could the Minister for Employment please enlighten me further?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, just a correction: it is not the ETB; it is the ETCL that pays them.

1295 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the Employment Training Company employs people for 39 hours and places them with employers in the public or the private sector. Whether in one or the other, if the placement, if the place where they are working requires them to do above the 39 hours, then it is the training provider that has to pay those hours.

1300 I do not know whether anybody in Culture is being paid extra or anybody anywhere else, but in terms of the application of the Employment Act, it would be in breach of that Act to expect people to work more than 39 hours for nothing. So, clearly, if anybody is working more than 39 hours, we do not know where they are, but if they are, they do not have to come back to the Employment Training Company to clear everything with us. If somebody wants somebody to stay beyond his 39 hours, they have to be paid, clearly, by the recipient, not by us.

Hon. E J Reyes: Fine, Mr Speaker, I have understood that.

Therefore, given that answer and coming back to my original question, I was asking for explanations of the arrangements and terms and conditions, therefore are these trainees assigned to the Culture and Heritage Agency, whose very nature of work requires them to work many hours outside normal office hours and so on... My question was: are these trainees then being paid extra, like those who are in the permanent and pensionable establishment of the Agency, in receipt of overtime and so on?

1310

Can the Hon. Minister with responsibility for the Agency please explain that now?

1315 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I need notice of the question because I do not know exactly the rate they are being paid or whatever. I need notice of that question.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the notice was given. I asked for explanation of the arrangements, terms and conditions.

Are arrangements in place so that these individuals receive overtime payments? I have given notice of the question, Mr Speaker.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member gave notice of a particular question, which was answered both by the Minister for Culture and then the matter was expanded by the Minister for Employment.

Now the hon. Member is asking for a very specific issue relating to overtime. What the hon. Member has said is that he does not currently have that information with him and if the hon. Member wants to give notice of that question then that question will be answered, but it certainly was not considered in the ambit of the original question. Whether that is right or not, the fact is that the hon. Member does not currently have that information before him and therefore he will need notice.

1330 Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker, sir, specific is if I had, without due notice, asked him now to give me a breakdown of how much payment was made last month in overtime. I have not asked that. What I gave due notice of was for details of the arrangements, terms and conditions.

Can the Hon. Minister for Culture confirm to me the arrangement is that when these individuals work outside normal hours, for example public holidays, remuneration will be paid? If I then want to know the exact details, then I will give notice for the next session, but at least confirm to me that there are provisions within his Agency to pay these individuals.

1340 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, details of the arrangements, terms and conditions were given, and details of the employment relationship have been given. Now the hon. Member is condescending to very specific details about overtime.

We have already said that the hon. Member does not currently have that information. There is nothing we can do. The hon. Member can ask the same question 20 times: we do not have that information, but we will give it whenever the notice is given. What the Hon. the Minister for Employment has clarified is that the responsibility of the company is to pay what the Government has already said the company will pay, which is minimum wage for trainees for 39 hours. If a specific arrangement with the placing entity is different, then that will have to be taken into account by the placing agency and not the company. We do not have the specific information about overtime in respect of these individuals.

1350 Mr Speaker: I think, before anyone else rises, there is a danger we are running round in circles.

The original question asked about the terms and conditions and the original answer says the terms and conditions are as per the Gibraltar Training Scheme. That was further explained by the Hon. Minister for Training, so I think, in general terms, we have got the answer.

1355 The specific question about overtime being paid by the Ministry of Culture for the trainees in his particular jurisdiction, and his answer that he does not have the specific information about overtime being paid, so, in general terms, it has been explained by the Minister for Training that overtime must be paid by the placement area, and the Minister has said he has not got specific information.

I think that is as far as we have got. Rather than going round in circles, the next supplementary must be addressed to –

1360 Hon. D A Feetham: The answer suggested that... Just so that we understand, the answer is that the other side do not know whether, in principle, trainees are paid overtime, if they do –

1365 Mr Speaker: No, no, (Interjections) that is not my understanding of the answer. My understanding was they should be paid under the Employment Act. That is the answer.

When the Hon. Mr Reyes asked the Minister specifically whether trainees in his Department are being paid, he says he needs notice of that question. So I did not understand the answer as they do not know; the answer is they do know, under the Employment Act they should be paid. That is what I understood.

1370 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I am grateful, Mr Speaker, and I accept that, but I am a bit confused in something the Minister for Culture said before. In keeping with what the Minister for Employment said, can he then confirm that arrangements are in place so that if these trainees are required to work extra hours, then the agency will actually cater the payments for them?

1375 Hon. S E Linares: That is the law! It has been stated.

I have not got the information with all the arrangements and the overtime and all that, so, yes, if they... that is the arrangement, it has to be. It is in law. It has been said.

1380 Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority
Details of trainees

Clerk: Question 496, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1385 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sport and Leisure provide details of trainees presently assigned to the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, explaining the arrangements/terms and conditions under which training is taking place?

1390 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, one trainee is in place since 1st May 2012. This person is being trained to carry out as many duties as possible as a sports and leisure officer. The terms and conditions are as per the Gibraltar Training Scheme.

1395 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

When he gave me the Culture and Heritage one, he actually specified there were five Grade 1s and four Grade 2s. Under what grade would this one be?

1400 Hon. S E Linares: It is a sports and leisure officer, within the Sports and Leisure –

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, but there are grades within – 1405 Hon. S E Linares: No, this person is different, because the answer said the person is being trained to carry out as many of the duties as possible. So he or she is doing as many things, so there are different grades, she – it is a ‘she’ actually – is training in all aspects.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but I have had... from previous schedules of written questions that I 1410 have had before, there are many different grades within the Sports and Leisure Authority, so is this person, for example, also being trained for Grade 1, who happens to be the Chief Executive, or is it being limited more to say the Grade 9 or Grade 11?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, the answer is still the same.

1415 That person is attached to the Sports and Leisure Authority as an officer, and that person is learning – is on training – to do different things within the Sports and Leisure Authority. I cannot tell him whether she is at one point attached to a Grade 11 or attached the next day to a Grade 10 or a Grade 9. She will do what the managers ask her to be training on. One day she might be with a Grade 11, learning something and then a Grade 10 or a Grade 9. That is the answer to the question, Mr Speaker.

1420 It is not a question of her doing one specific job with a Grade 11 or... It is more holistic, what she is doing.

Hon. E J Reyes: That may be the answer, Mr Speaker, but certainly not consistent with the other one, where in one agency, they are attached to learn particular grades and here it seems that the trainee is being trained to become the next Chief Executive Officer!

1425 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, when you go into an office or a place of work, you can do different types of work at different grades. I am sure she is not sitting beside a CEO to learn how to run, as he is now implying, the Sports and Leisure Authority tomorrow. What she is doing is general office work and general work in the Sports and Leisure Authority.

1430 Hon. E J Reyes: And I take it, Mr Speaker, does the hon. Member have some information, or will he require further notice in respect of...? Because you see the sports and leisure officers, in their conditions of employment, have conditioned overtime and so on. Is this individual, this lady, also subjected to that; or would he require further notice?

1435 Hon. S E Linares: Exactly the same as I answered before.

Hon. E J Reyes: What, Mr Speaker, for my clarity?

1440 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, look at answers – go back to answers and look at what was done, but I am not going to go through the whole debate again.

Hon. E J Reyes: I will look at Hansard – but a rather ungentlemanly reply, Mr Speaker.

1445

Children's play parks
Cleaning, upkeep and maintenance

1450 Clerk: Question 497, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details, inclusive of recurring costs, of the arrangements currently in place for the cleaning, upkeep and maintenance of children's play parks?

1455 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, the playgrounds and the ball-playing areas are cleaned and generally maintained through Government's (Ministry for the Environment) generic cleaning services' contract with Master Service Ltd.

1460 Currently a three-man crew, seconded from the Gibraltar Community Projects Ltd assist the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, in providing for minor repairs which cannot be carried out by Master Service Ltd. These services are not being paid through the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority. The cost of spares, tools, etc is, on average, £1,000 per month.

1465

Gibraltar Rugby Football Union Provision of facilities

1470

Clerk: Question 498, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the facilities the Government/GSLA is planning to provide the Gibraltar Rugby Football Union in order to further develop the sport locally and ensure they meet requirements in respect of their pending application for membership of the International Governing Body for the sport?

1475

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

1480

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the Government will be providing the Gibraltar Rugby Football Union with facilities which will enable them to have international tournaments locally, and further provide them with the training and development facilities which they require to develop the sport much better than they have had to date.

1485

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but my question was, can he provide details? He said they would provide, but there is no detail there in anything.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, it says, 'to have international tournaments'. That means that we are providing the facilities, so the detail is that we are providing the facilities. There is no more detail than that.

1490

Hon. E J Reyes: There are no more details than that because he has no plans or because he does not wish to disclose them?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because we have very, very exciting plans.

1495

A Member: So what are they?

Hon E J Reyes: So, therefore, he does not wish to disclose them, Mr Speaker.

1500

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because we have not decided on the plans yet. They are exciting because we have got about six or eight different ones and we do not know which one to decide yet.

Clerk: Question –

1505

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Damon Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the hon. Member indicate to this House when the decision will finally come?

Hon. S E Linares: Very soon.

1510

1515

Married women's social insurance
Paying difference between reduced and full contributions

Clerk: Question 499, the Hon. J J Netto.

1520 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security say how many married women have registered an interest in the Department of Social Security for the purpose of seeking an assessment of the cost of paying the difference between the reduced married women social insurance contribution and the full social insurance contribution and, if so, could the total number of enquiries be broken down between those who are still working and those who are now retired?

1525 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as at 12th June 2012, 134 married women have registered an interest at the Department of Social Security for the purpose of seeking an assessment of the cost of paying the difference between the reduced married women social insurance contributions and the full social insurance contributions.

1530 Out of the 134, 81 continue in employment, and the remaining 53 are either retired or not working.

1535 Statutory Benefits Fund
Employers' insolvency payments made since Question 365/12

Clerk: Question 500, the Hon. J J Netto.

1540 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment provide a statement of the payments made from the Statutory Benefits Fund, in respect of employers' insolvency, since this question was last asked, in Question No. 365/2012 showing the amount paid due to redundancy pay obligations, the amount paid in respect of other sums payable to employees, and the number of companies involved?

1545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, since the question was last answered, the total amount paid in respect of redundancy pay was £11,271.47. Only one employer is involved.

1550 In respect of annual leave, it was £92.02; in respect of notice of terminations, £2,990.40; in respect of arrears of wages, £322.07.

1555 Statutory Benefits Fund
Employers' insolvency payments made, January-May 2012

Clerk: Question 501, the Hon. J J Netto.

1560 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Security and Employment provide a statement of the payments made from the Statutory Benefits Fund, in respect of employers' insolvency, from January 2012 to the end of May 2012, broken down monthly, and showing the amounts paid due to redundancy pay obligations, the amounts paid in respect of other sums payable to employees, and the number and names of companies and numbers of employees involved?

1565 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1570 Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the payments made are as follows: in January, none; in February, there was a payment in respect of a company called Straits Installations, which involved four beneficiaries. This was made up of a total, in respect of the four redundancies, of £3,948.96 and payment in lieu of notice of £1,586.88, making a total of £5,535.84.

In March, the numbers of companies was five. Overseas Motors Ltd involved 16 redundancies. The cost of the 16 redundancies was £147,527.20. In respect of annual leave, the payment was £1,596.49. In lieu of notice, payment came to £42,214.24. The total cost of the Overseas Motors payment was £191,337.93.

1575 There was a payment in respect of three employees of Zenith Promotions, in respect of redundancy, which came to £9,322.40. There were no other payments for Zenith Promotions.

In respect of Transport Services, there was a settlement of an award by the Industrial Tribunal which the company did not meet and which was claimed from the insolvency fund, which came to £46,004.80.

1580 In the case of Right Start Nursery, there was one employee that was paid £658.64 for redundancy, £589.77 in lieu of notice; £217.76 in lieu of wages. The total payment to that employee came to £1,466.17.

The fifth company was Pussers, with two employees. The redundancy came to £1,872.00, in lieu-of-notice payment came to £721.50, making a total of £2,593.50.

In April, there were no payments.

1585 In May, there was a payment to one company, Gibraltar Secretarial Services Ltd, which amounted to £11,271.47 for redundancy, £92.02 for annual leave, £2,990.40 in lieu-of-notice payment, £322.07 for arrears of wages, making a total payment to that one employee of £14,675.96.

The total payment from January to May, therefore, comes to a total sum of £270,936.60.

1590 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the amount of information contained in the answer that the Hon. Minister has just provided, I wonder whether it would have been better if he had just given in the schedule. It would have saved him the five minutes in giving the detailed amount of pounds and pennies and perhaps it would have been even better for myself, as used to be in the past, to be able to see it all at a glance than try to profusely write as much detail as possible.

So can I ask the hon. Member if he can ask the paper usher to photocopy his answer so I can have it all in one glance?

1595 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member should know, and as you know and can corroborate, I am a very law-abiding Member of this House, and since the question is put down for oral answer, I have given him an oral answer. If he wants it in writing and if he puts it down for written answer, he will get it in writing.

1600 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, all I am trying to say is will he afford us the same treatment as we used to afford them when in the situation that we were in Government. That kind of information, as he is well aware, was provided to him when he was asking – well, he was not asking; it was the Hon. Minister, Mr Bruzon, who was asking – in a schedule form.

1605 That is what I am trying to say: could we have equal treatment in terms of passing the information?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, it is not a question of equal treatment.

1610 The fact that the hon. Members, when they were in Government, chose to say, 'I will answer Question 1 to Question 200 and I will now hand over a schedule,' which meant that nobody else in this Chamber had a clue what was going on, because nothing else was said, and that went on all the time, does not mean that I agree with that system.

Therefore, as far as I am concerned, if the hon. Member is putting down a question for Oral Answer, then I think the correct way to deal with the oral answer to the question is to provide the information orally, not simply to say, 'The answer to the question is that I now hand him a schedule.'

1615 Hon. D A Feetham: I do not think anybody disputes that. The question has been put for oral answer; therefore, you answer it orally.

What my hon. friend is asking is, because it has been a very long answer, could he please have a copy of the answer that is in front of you. That is all he is asking.

1620 Hon. J J Bossano: No, no –

Hon. D A Feetham: He indeed said could you, in future, hand over schedules...

I accept that. That is a matter for him as to whether he hands over schedules or he does not.

1625 In relation to this particular answer – which is a very long answer – what he is asking is, 'Could I please have a copy of that, and could you ask the paper usher to photocopy it for me?' That is all. If the hon. Gentleman refuses, he refuses.

1630 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, maybe the hon. Member heard what the Member said better than I did, because he is sitting next to him but, certainly, what I understood the Member to be saying is that I should follow the practice of the previous Government in saying, 'I will answer this question by handing over a schedule.' That is what I understood him to be suggesting that I should be doing. There is no problem with him, in fact, having my copy of the answer, and therefore he does not even have to wait for a photocopy.

1635 Mr Speaker: I think there was an invitation by the hon. Member to provide such answers in the future in the form of a schedule, but it is perfectly in the discretion of the Minister how he chooses to answer, whether in terms of a schedule or to provide a full answer as he has, and he has.

While the hon. Member is digesting the information, without wishing to make any ruling on this matter, Erskine May, 22nd edition, at page 305 – and this is not a ruling from me –

1640 'The Speaker suggested that lengthy answers should be circulated with the Official Report, instead of being given orally.'
– for what it is worth, but that Official Report will obviously come much later when Hansard is printed.

1645 Employment and Training Company Ltd
Contracts signed

Clerk: Question 502, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1650 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please state how many companies have signed contracts with the Employment and Training Company Ltd since this question was last asked?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

1655 Hon. J J Bossano: Sixty-two, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is that 62 in respect of 62 trainees, or 62 in respect of more than 62 trainees?

1660 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the answer that has been prepared for me is the answer to the question that he has asked, which is how many contracts have been signed. They do not tell me whether each of the 62 has got more than one.

I would suspect that the bulk of them would be one, because that is the normal pattern, but there may be the odd one in the 62 that has taken on more than one.

1665 Employment and Training Company Ltd
Companies and trainees

1670 Clerk: Question 503, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please provide a breakdown of the activity of each company which has signed a contract with the Employment and Training Company Ltd, indicating the number of trainees placed with each company?

1675 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Hon. D A Feetham: I hope I get an answer.

1680 Hon. J J Bossano: Exactly!
The breakdown is as follows, Mr Speaker: electrical supply, one company and one trainee; in the construction sector, there are four companies with one trainee each, two companies with two trainees each and two companies with three trainees each; in the wholesale trade, there is one company with one trainee and one company with two trainees; in the retail trade, there are 14 companies with one trainee and four companies with two trainees; in the hotel trade, there is one company with one trainee; in repairs of consumer goods, there are six companies with one trainee each; in sea transport and related services, there are four companies with one trainee each; in road transport and related services, there is one company and one trainee; in post and communications, there is one company with two trainees and one company with three trainees; in banking, finance and insurance, there are 20 companies with one trainee each, three companies with two trainees and one company with three trainees; in police and fire services, there are two companies and one trainee; in education, there are three companies with one trainee, one company with two trainees and one company with four trainees; in medical and health services, there is one company with two trainees and one company with three trainees; in other services, there are 14 companies with one trainee and one company with two trainees.

I will now ask somebody to make a photocopy.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Gentleman surprised that, in the construction sector, for example, there are only eight companies, in respect of six trainees, that have, in fact, taken... Well, it cannot be six trainees, it must be... Sorry, it is four... nine trainees. Is he surprised by the apparent low levels of numbers in the construction sector, bearing in mind that there are other sectors that have taken on more trainees?

Hon. J J Bossano: This does not include, of course, the people who are in training in the Construction Training Centre. These are mainly people who are, if you like –

Hon. D A Feetham: On the job?

Hon. J J Bossano: – on the job, in the sense that, in many cases, what we are trying to do is get construction workers who have been doing unskilled or semi-skilled work and give them an opportunity to upgrade their skills. Therefore we do that by providing an employer with an incentive.

There used to be a system in the old days where there was a craftsman A and a craftsman B and the craftsman B was an adult who did not go through the official three-year apprenticeship schemes. The fact that that no longer exists means that there are people who may have been all their lives in the construction industry and actually cannot move into better paid jobs, simply because they have not got paper qualifications.

This is something that we are now looking at to see if it can be addressed, but there are a number of local firms that have agreed to take on existing construction workers who were unemployed in an area where they are giving them the opportunity to move up, say from being a skilled labourer to being a bricklayer or a mason, and that is really where this group falls into.

In addition to this, of course, the construction industry is being encouraged all the time to take on unemployed construction workers who do not need to go through the training scheme because they are already trained.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is he finding that, in relation to the construction sector, there is an uptake in relation to... We have seen there is a small number of trainees here, but in relation to the unemployed, for example?

I can tell you the purpose of... the motive or the rationale behind my question. I am very concerned about the construction sector in Gibraltar. I think that... and I do not want this exchange to be controversial. In no way, shape or form, but I have been critical of how the Government just simply put a stop to all the projects, rather than phasing them out, and I think that the industry is going through a tough period of time at the present moment. What I am asking, really, is: is he finding that there is a lack of uptake from the construction sector of unemployed people? Perhaps not as many as he would have thought there would have been?

Hon. J J Bossano: I think if I can first correct the incorrect impression that he has, Mr Speaker, the reality of it is that, although the construction sector is, in fact, saying that they are not getting enough work to keep their workforce, it is in the context that, of course, in 2007-08 the Government was spending £40 million and in 2011 it was spending £200 million, and that it is not possible to keep on spending £200 million a year on Government construction works.

So I can tell him that the growth that has happened in the construction industry has been fed by importing workers. That is to say, in October of last year, the figure was something of the order of 3,500 people in the construction industry, compared to 1,500 in 1996. So the truth of the matter is that, although there are less people working in the construction industry now than there were a few months ago, there are more Gibraltar residents in the construction industry now than there were a few months ago, and I assume that that is something that will be as welcome to him as it is to me.

1740

Hon. D A Feetham: It is certainly welcome that more Gibraltarians are employed in Gibraltar. We all welcome that on both sides of the House, but if construction companies go under, then neither Gibraltarians nor foreigners are going to be employed in those jobs because we are going to lose those jobs permanently.

1745

Is he at all concerned about the state of the construction industry? That is the question. Let me also add this, that yes, it is certainly true that you cannot keep up Government expenditure at the levels that we had because of the amount of projects that we had – the airport, the law courts, the prison, the number of projects that obviously contributed to the figures that the hon. Gentleman has outlined. The point that I was making is that there are other ways of, instead of switching the tap off completely and abruptly, which caused huge redundancies at the beginning of the year in the sector and has placed construction companies in difficulty – and let's not forget that there is a seep-down effect on other sectors of the economy that depend on the construction sector. The people who come to me are saying that that is causing huge hardship, and I was wondering whether, in fact, that had seeped through into the type of recruitment and figures for recruitment that the hon. Gentleman is seeing in his Department.

Hon. J J Bossano: First of all, Mr Speaker, I do not agree with the analysis with which he prefaces his remarks. As I have already told him if, two years ago, the construction industry was smaller than it is today, then two years ago, when the previous administration was in Government, they were in a worse state than they are today. That is to say, although the level of employment has shrunk since last December, it is still well above what it was two years ago, both in terms of employment and in terms of the amount of Government work being paid out. That is to say, if we take the amount that was paid to the construction company doing Government work in 2007-08 and 2008-09, the figures in those two years, which is immediately after the preceding Election, were lower than they are today.

1760

There has been, historically, in the last 15 years, a building cycle, where there is a building boom just before Elections and a building decline just after Elections. What is happening this year is that, although it is smaller than it was before the Election, it is still higher than after the 2011 Election. So if they were all going bust now, they would have gone bust then.

1765

What is happening is, of course, that people build up and naturally they have a problem in that, having built up, they are having to adjust to the situation. I can tell the hon. Member that I have met with the industry and I have told them, 'Look, the level of work that is going to be available is going to be less,' and consequently, in reality, the industry has got two options open to it: either the number of players in the industry stays, but they are smaller and they share the work; or some will not stay and the work will go to the remaining ones.

1770

But that is no different from what has happened in the past, and I can assure him that there are currently – because I monitor this regularly – more people employed overall in the industry than there were up to 2008-09 and that there are now more residents of Gibraltar, including Gibraltarians, in the industry because the industry is co-operating with the Government, but they are not reflected in these figures because this is limited only to people that we are actually providing, paid for under the employment training schemes. The people that the industry has taken on, and paying them the CATA rates, are not reflected in the figures that he has asked for, because he has asked for the people who have been taken on as trainees specifically.

1780

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask a supplementary question, bearing in mind that I was two minutes away from the Chamber and when I got back I saw this paper on the question of Question 503. I suppose that we are still discussing this one?

1785

Mr Speaker: Yes.

Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member looks at the first column, there towards the end, he has got 'Medical and Health Services' as an industry group. Does he mean by that the GHA on its own, or the GHA and the Care Agency?

1790

Hon. J J Bossano: Neither, because the question is about companies and it is limited to the question.

1795 Hon. D A Feetham: So really the answer to my question is that any difficulties that the construction sector is encountering is cyclical and the hon. Gentleman is not really concerned about the sector in terms of any difficulties that are out of sync or any abnormal difficulties that one would not expect in a cyclical situation? That is the answer, isn't it?

1800 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, the answer to that is that the level of work at the moment in the industry and the level of employment at the level in the industry is no different from what it was. If anything, it is higher than the level at which it was after the 2007 Election.

1805 There is a tendency for a lot of the projects to get bunched towards the end of a term of Government – and that has happened before – and then, even when the new Government is returned, it goes down, and that has happened before. So even when the Government that comes in after an Election is the Government that was there before, there is less work provided immediately after the Election, I suppose because people have got time to be complaining for two or three years and then they get work in the final year.

I imagine that that is the explanation of the building cycle in Gibraltar, because it happens that we have a four-year term and there is a four-year building cycle. Presumably, if we had a five-year term, there would be a five-year building cycle.

1810 But the answer to his question is that it is not a question of being concerned or being unconcerned. What is happening is what has happened after every Election in the last 15 years, that the amount of work in the industry is, in fact, less after the Election than before the Election.

1815 On this occasion, at present, the level of work is, in fact, higher than it was after the 2007 Election. The numbers employed are greater and therefore I cannot evaluate the situation as one where the industry is 'going down the tubes' because then it would have 'gone down the tubes' in 2007 and it would not be there today.

1820 What is positive in the situation is that, in fact, we have been able, because a lot of the companies have signed agreements with us, to persuade them of the necessity to build up a resident workforce for the industry, particularly because there is inevitably going to be a volume of increasing work in the maintenance of buildings, the more buildings that there are. So one thing is that you need to bring in people to do a specific contract on a new site, and they come in and they go; and the other thing is to have the capability in Gibraltar to maintain buildings without having to rely on imported labour. That is something we want to achieve and therefore I hope that I will be able to inform the House at some stage that we have been successful.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask a further supplementary question?

1825 I take on board the comment that the Hon. Minister for Employment said that we are talking about companies – companies which have signed a contract with the Employment and Training Company Ltd – but, of course... and perhaps this is an unreasonable question on my part because he would need notice of the question, and I appreciate that, but just in the same way that we are dealing with private companies here, there are also trainees who are being seconded, or placed rather, within various Government Departments, Authorities and Agencies, which probably would have signed contracts with the Employment and Training Company itself, just in the same manner as we have these.

1830 Therefore, could I perhaps, if I write, because I do not expect the Minister to have the information with him there, but if I were to write to the Hon. Minister in relation to trying to mirror image the information provided here but, instead of being in private sector companies, can he instead provide information with Government Departments, Authorities and Agencies? Will he be able to provide me with that information?

1840 Hon. J J Bossano: The difference is, of course that, in the case of the Government Departments, the information would only be true on the day that I provide it. That is to say, for example, the four construction companies that have got one guy each have got a contract with us saying the person they are training will get a job at the end of the training. The people we have got in different Government Departments are not there for 11 months; they are being moved around.

So if you ask me today to give you a distribution, what I am saying is that that will be true of the day that the hon. Member gets the information, whereas this is true, as it were, until the training is finished. That is the difference between the two.

1845 Hon. J J Netto: I accept that, Mr Speaker.

Employment and Training Company Ltd
Details of trainees

1850 Clerk: Question 504, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Employment please state, on a month-by-month basis, details of how many people have been employed by the Employment and Training Company Ltd since 1st February 2012, identifying what training scheme they were on or whether they were unemployed before being employed by that Company?

1855 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment.

Minister for Enterprise, Training and Employment (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, in the month of February when the Scheme started, 331 were employed from the vocational training schemes that were in existence. Obviously, since those came to an end in January. In March, April and May there were no new entrants from that source.

In February, 69 unemployed persons came into the Company; in March, 54; in April, 53; and in May, 76.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the hon. Member repeat those last figures again?

1865 Hon. J J Bossano: Seventy-six unemployed persons were taken on in May.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. February, 69. March?

1870 Hon. J J Bossano: In February, we had 69; in March, 54; in April, 53; and in May, 76. The only two sources are either people who are unemployed or people who were in the Scheme, but the ones who were in the Scheme all came in at the beginning in the first month.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, on 1st February it is 331, and they are accounted from the VTS Scheme –

1875 Hon. J J Bossano: That is right.

Hon. D A Feetham: The on-the-job training, effectively.

1880 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, no – everybody who was on the VTS Scheme means including, for example, the people in Gibdock and the people in the Construction Training Centre. All those people were paid as VTS. They are all VTS.

1885 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Member have the figure of how many trainees there are now, as at today's date, or at the beginning of the month, whatever relevant sort of date mark he may have there?

Hon. J J Bossano: I do not have a figure, but I would have expected that, in fact, the figure is very likely to be very close to the total of these figures, because, as far as I am aware, in the short time that this has been happening, we have not had people who have concluded their training and entered into full-time employment.

1890 There may be people who have not lasted the course, so the figure that is currently under the Employment and Training Company may not be as high as this because, in some cases, some people have abandoned the Scheme – not many, but some have. I do not think that any people have stopped being in the Employment and Training Company because they have now been taken over by their training provider. Of course, as I mentioned, I think, earlier, out of the 331 who came in in February, we still have 88 in the private sector, where the private sector is effectively telling me to take them away, but I have got nowhere yet to put them.

1895 So that is the position.

Hon. D A Feetham: At the time of the General Election, the figure that the hon. Member was quoting – and I think that it accorded with my figures at the time – was around 450 people in what he has described as the VTS, but it is VTS plus the Construction Training Centre and Gibdock.

1900 What has happened, between the General Election to 1st February, to those 450 people, because you have taken on 331? Is it that those people have actually found employment? What accounts for the lower level of recruitment into the Future Jobs Strategy?

1905 Hon. J J Bossano: I think, in fact, some of those would be included in the 69 because, between December and February, the six-month period ended and they came back and registered as unemployed.

 Therefore, the 331 were the ones who in February were still being paid the £400. We had people who had been paid the £400 at the time of the Election, but who completed the six-month cycle between the Election and February, and those people have been treated, for the purpose of the provision of this information, as being unemployed because that is what they were the day they were taken on.

1910

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, because when I asked the same question – in February, I think it was – just before the start, or just after the start of the Scheme, the hon. Gentleman told me that the Scheme would not open for the unemployed until the summer and that it had only been started as of 1st February for those people who had been on the Scheme at the General Election. So my next supplementary would have been are those 69 effectively the people who were there in these training schemes at the date of the General Election?

1915

Hon. J J Bossano: I suspect that that is the position. That is to say they were the same people, but they were not getting paid at the time. That is to say the 331, Mr Speaker, were people who, at the end of January, were still getting paid under the Scheme, and therefore, on 1st February, continued where they were but simply were paid the new rate.

1920

 In the 69, most of them, I imagine, were people who had ended the Scheme and therefore they were caught. Some people, because it was a six-month thing with no extension, we had situations where somebody, by a week... That is to say because they finished a week before, would not have been able to enter into the Scheme. What we did was, in fact, we took them in as unemployed, but technically they were unemployed at that point, but they had been in VTS maybe a fortnight before.

1925

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, because if you add 331 and 69, it is 400. It is very close.

 In relation to the figures – March, 54; April, 53; and May, 76 – are those people who also may have come from the VTS Scheme or are those that had been on the unemployment list prior to the General Election?

1930

Hon. J J Bossano: I think it is a mixture of the two, in the sense that those are people who had been in schemes perhaps earlier in the year, not people who had finished between December and January, but people who might have been in the Scheme, say in August or September, and were now no longer in the Scheme. Because the Scheme was not, in fact, continuing after February, it meant that those people then were required to register. Under the previous system, those who went to Bleak House did not appear in the register of unemployment so, in fact, the register of unemployment picked up a number of people who were previously not working but previously not registered.

1935

 Where the figures of 54 and 53 and 76 come from is that the vacancies that have been opened in... The Department approaches a prospective employer to say, 'Well, look, we can offer you a trainee for this job because we have not got anybody trained with the specifications that you are setting out, and in order to encourage you to take the trainee, we will pay the minimum wage while the training takes place.' That has been offered to people who are... say in the 54, there would have been people who were unemployed but who might have been in the Scheme in the previous September or August. The numbers in the Scheme in those figures, of course, are now out of the system. I would say that, by the time we have got to the 76, they are all people on the unemployment list, period, but there would have been, as it were, returning VTSs in the two other figures.

1940

1945

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman have a waiting list of people who are unemployed, wanting to go onto the Future Jobs Strategy, and what is the criteria for allowing those people to go on?

1950

Hon. J J Bossano: It is not a question of allowing them. This is why we think there has been a better success rate with this scheme than with the previous one, because in the previous one, from the information that I have got from the employers that have still got 88, is that they were not involved in selecting the person. The person was selected by the Department and placed in what they thought was a suitable environment to learn.

1955

1960

1965

1970

What we do now is we give the employer a choice and we send maybe... For example, we have got a pool of people who are either existing construction workers because their employment shows that they have been in construction, or young people who have been interviewed and said they are willing to go into the construction industry. We have got a dedicated officer, who is the Construction Employment Officer, who only deals with construction workers and with construction companies, and his job is to make available to every construction company that has vacancies the opportunity of taking on trainees from this pool of people, but the individuals are not selected by the Employment Officer, although they are, in fact, if you like, shortlisted in the sense that, since the Employment Officer we have got is somebody who used to be in the Construction Training Centre and has got a lot of experience of construction, he knows the individuals, then he is in a position to send people that are likely to be suitable candidates, rather than sending everybody who is on the list and then the employer says, 'I have asked you for a driver; you have sent me somebody who has been a waiter.'

So, what we do now is we send construction workers or people interested in construction to construction companies. The person who is responsible for doing that picks the people he thinks the employer is likely to find suitable and then the employing company decides who they want to take, and that is how the figure is arrived at. If you match this one with the answer to the previous question, the answer would be, in the example that I am giving him that, if there are four guys in four construction companies, it would be a construction company that picked the person they wanted from the sample that we sent them. But the only selection that takes place is a selection based on identifying the skills' suitability to match the skills on the supply side with the demand side.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have not done the calculation, but can he tell me what is the total number of trainees who are actually employed by private companies? Does he have that at hand, the total number?

Hon. J J Bossano: I am afraid they have not put the total number on.

I think I told him the last time, Mr Speaker, that when we had 29, there were 39 employees in 29 companies. So I think the figure that we have now, with the extra 62, is probably not all that much different. That is to say if we have got an extra 62, we may have a total of something like 80-odd employers and maybe 90 or 100 employees.

1985

That would be the order of those figures. They are not exact, because I have not been provided with them.

1990

Hon. D A Feetham: I make it – I stand to be corrected by the hon. Gentleman – just over 40 employees employed in these private companies. If there are only just over 40 employees employed in these private companies and you have been recruiting effectively into the Jobs Strategy at a rate of 54 in March, 53 in April, and 76 in May, where are they going? Are they going into... For example, part of them are going into... Are they going into the public service, in Government-owned companies?

Hon. J J Bossano: They are not, no.

1995

Mr Speaker, the question has been dealt with by the Department on the basis of the way that it has been asked, and therefore the table is the table of companies, not necessarily private companies but certainly companies. In the total that we have, we have got people who are not placed with companies but may be placed with partnerships or placed with departments or placed with agencies or placed with somebody else. One is companies and one is not.

2000

Hon. D A Feetham: When I say trainees are placed with companies, the last person I would have thought would take a difference and a distinction between a company and a partnership is the hon. Gentleman opposite, who constantly argues and constantly says that we are stuck in this House with too many lawyers and too many legal arguments!

2005

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, maybe the Employment Service must be full of lawyers like him, then!

Hon. D A Feetham: It just strikes me that we have got about 42-44 trainees who are employed with companies, who have signed these contracts with Employment and Training Company Ltd, and that that is a small number in proportion to the number of people who appear to be going onto the Scheme – again, 54 in 2010 March, April, 53 and May, 76.

I do not know whether legal partnerships, for example, or accountancy partnerships, if there are any accountancy partnerships, have recruited anybody, but is the vast majority of these people being recruited into the public service or Government-owned companies?

2015 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not know what [inaudible] I mean. If the hon. Member says that there are 40 employees on this list –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I said how many are there? A cursory glance at it seemed to be just over 40.

2020 Mr Speaker: I make it 117, if that is of use. You have got to multiply numbers by companies, so you get a larger number. I make it 117.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, shall we take 117, then?

2025 Hon. J J Bossano: This is why I said I thought it would be about 90 to 100, given the fact that there are 80 employers and the fact that when there were 29 employers there were 39 trainees.

So now if we have got 80 employers, I would expect that the figure would be of the order of 90 to 100. That is the answer that I gave the hon. Member. They have not given me the total, but that is the answer that I would expect.

2030 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I did not quite collate the... because one has the column of the number of companies on the left hand side.

2035 Does he accept that a significant proportion of the people who are being recruited in March, April and May are effectively being recruited into the Future Jobs Strategy but being placed in the public sector? Is that the position?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the position.

2040 The position is that if I have told him that there have been 62 employers, the 62 employers have taken on, in May, the bulk of the 76 employees, and if they have taken on more than one in May, then they account for almost all the 76. The hon. Member has to remember that, in the original figure, we are including, for example, 40 people who came in last year into the Construction Training Centre in one intake only. We are including the people who are in the nursing training. We are including the Elderly Care Agency. All those are part of the global figure, but if he actually looks at the number of private companies that signed a partnership agreement with the ETB and took on employees, there were 62 employers in May and 76 employees. The bulk of the 76 will be in those 62.

2045 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but can he confirm this, then: I understand that, in terms of the public service, some of them would have gone into nursing, some of them would have gone to the Care Agency, but there has been no recruitment into the Future Jobs Strategy for the purpose of those individuals being placed, for example, in the, say, Culture Department, just for on-the-job training. If they have been taken on into the public service, they have been taken into very specific training areas – for example, trainee nurses or in the Care Agency – but not for just simply on-the-job training, which was what I have always understood the VTS to have done. It has placed somebody with an employer to do on-the-job training but there is no formal training done for that individual, with the hope that person is then taken on at the end of it.

2055 Can he confirm that, in relation to that, there has been no recruitment in March, April or May, to do that?

Hon. J J Bossano: First of all, Mr Speaker, it is incorrect to say that it is in the hope that they will be taken on. That is to say, it is in the legal expectation that they will be taken on, because the 62 people in May signed an agreement that if they did not take them on they would pay the money back, so it is more than hope.

2060 Secondly, within the system of the recruitment from the labour pool and the VTS pool, there have been some cases where trainees have been placed in areas of the public sector in order to give them training in those areas. This is an ongoing process that will continue to be the case.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I quite understand structured training. That I understand and the recruitment by 2065 using the Future Jobs Strategy into structured training schemes. But what I am talking about is on-the-job training, just simply placing somebody in the Culture Department – learn the ropes under somebody doing whatever they are doing in the Culture Department – are people still being recruited for that purpose?

2070 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, they are still being recruited because they were being recruited before 9th December; that is to say, we had, throughout the Civil Service, VTS trainees on £400 per month. Those people are still in the system and the bulk of the people in the system are the ones that were there from the 331 that I have told him.

2075 Of the 331, there were people in dedicated training and people not in dedicated training, who were working in different areas as Vocational Training Scheme trainees. Those people are still in the Government, and that system has continued to operate, where a Department has said ‘well look, the trainees are now due to leave, can you send me somebody else?’

2080 The position has been that people have been offered either somebody from another place, preferably from the ones in the private sector, where we have been reducing, or from the pool of the unemployed. But they have been given a choice in the Departments, like they have been given a choice in the private sector – they pick who they want.

2085 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but you see, if you recruit somebody from the unemployment list with the idea of placing them in a private company, now there is a limited number of private companies that are going to sign these contracts, and, indeed, the number of employees, the number of trainees appertaining to these private companies in proportion to the whole, is actually lower than those that are placed in the public sector.

2090 But is it the Government’s policy to continue to recruit people from the unemployment list, then, for the purpose of actually placing them on on-the-job work experience, effectively, in Government Departments? And how does the hon. Member’s Department actually decide who to take from the unemployment list to place in those Government Departments? Because it seems to me, that if I were a trainee that is precisely the type of training opportunity, even though it involves no structured training, simply because once you are in system and once you in a Government Department and on-the-job training, it is going to be very difficult for the Government to get rid of me and I am probably going to end up in the system – as a Government employee.

2095 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I understand where the hon. Member is coming from because that is what he said during the Election campaign was going to happen, that would ruin Gibraltar and, having made those crystal ball predictions, he is trying to do everything in his power to be able to say ‘I told you so before the Elections’.

2100 I know what he is up to – but the answer is he is wrong. He is wrong like he was wrong in counting the list because he cannot say the bulk of them are in the public sector, having just acknowledged that there are over a hundred in the private sector and that if you take the structured employment that was already there, and the fact that we inherited 331, the reality of it is that the new entrants from the labour pool is minimal. If there are a total of 400 I doubt if there as many as 40 that have come in through that – so it is not true that the 5,000 public sector jobs are going to be filled from the 40 people that have come from the pool of the unemployed.

2105 Hon. D A Feetham: You seem to know what the motive behind my question is but you are masterful in not answering the question.

2110 Now, the question was very simple – what is your Government Department’s criteria for taking somebody from the unemployment list and saying ‘you are the lucky guy, we are now going to be placing you in Mr Linares’s Department’. What is the criteria?

Hon. J J Bossano: The answer to that is something that I have already told him at least three times, Mr Speaker.

2115 I do not know how many times he can ask the same question to get the answer because he just rephrases the question and adds adjectives like ‘you are the lucky guy that I am picking’. Well, perhaps that is what was happening before 9th December, that there was somebody sitting in some Government office picking ‘lucky guys’, and in the run-up to the Election, promising them jobs after the Election!

What is happening now, as I have already explained to the hon. Member, is that, whether it is the public or the private, a pool of names is given and the recipient entity decides who they think is going to be the best guy 2120 to take, and they decide that. I have also told him that no more than 10% of the total, in the private and in the public, that is to say the people that he has mentioned in the Culture, were not people selected as suitable for learning in the Culture or in the Tourism by the people in the ETB. The only selection that is taking place in the TD at the moment – we will be able to do more in the future, because I want to go down that route – the only area where I have got the expertise in the Department to do pre-selection is in the construction industry.

2125 So in the construction industry it is the Construction Officer that used to be in the Training Centre, which is now in the Employment Service, and has got a lot of experience, that assesses the suitability of the potential candidates. In the other areas, when somebody says ‘have you got some trainees that you can place with me?’ we send them a selection of people and they pick who they want... And I have already told him that three times.

2130 Hon. D A Feetham: Who picks...

Hon. J J Bossano: The recipient. The entity that is asking.

2135 Hon. D A Feetham: Who within the recipient? Is it the Minister that picks them? Who is picking them?

Hon. J J Bossano: To my knowledge Ministers are not involved in interviewing applicants. I do not know whether that is a practice that was there that has now been discontinued.

2140 Hon. D A Feetham: Alright, so are you saying that... we are now getting somewhere. Are you saying that, effectively, there is an interview process in the Government Departments so you send them 20 people – they interview all those 20 people – and then they make a decision and that is done via a board. Is that what you are saying to me?

2145 Hon. J J Bossano: No, no, I am not saying that because these are not vacancies that are being filled and there is a selection board. They pick people on the basis of assessing if the people are going to benefit from the training.

2150 The hon. Member opposite is determined to make believe something invented by him and therefore trying to get me to admit to what he has invented. The answer is he is wrong. His invention is wrong. His prediction was wrong when he said we were going to put 1,100 people in the public sector and ruin Gibraltar. He was wrong then and he is wrong now. And he is still trying to prove the same thing, and time will prove him, as he sees the result and the effectiveness of this, that we are increasing constantly the number of Gibraltarians in the private sector, not in the public sector.

2155 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, don’t blow a gasket but are these the same people...

Hon. J J Bossano: I will blow as many gaskets as I want. (Laughter). I am entitled to blow gaskets after he welcomed my being here for 40 years. (Applause).

2160 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Member is taking too many legal points. I should have really added a legal caveat at the end of my tribute to the hon. Member this morning!

But are these people, by any chance, card carrying members of the GSLP – those people who signed for the Future Jobs Strategy at GSLP headquarters during the General Election? (Applause)

2165 Hon. J J Bossano: I do not know whether they are or they are not because they are not selected on that basis but I would strongly recommend to all of them that, if they are not, they should immediately apply. (Applause)

2170 Clerk: Question 505, the Hon...

Mr Speaker: Would this be a convenient moment for a ten minute break?
The House will recess for 10 minutes.

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Barbary Macaque 'threat' Remedial action proposed

2185

Clerk: Question 505, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2190

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide details of the action he is taking to deal with the threat the Barbary Apes represent generally and, specifically in light of the many daily complaints communicated to the Opposition by residents in the Gardiners Road area?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2195

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as explained previously, a plan has been compiled that can take account of the general situation regarding the macaques and will address many of these problems.

In the meantime, responses to call-outs are continuing, as in the past, with management staff trying to move the monkeys away and explaining to residents what action they need to take to discourage them. I would ask the Opposition to pass details of the 'many daily complaints' to Government to ensure that a response is initiated and that a proper record of incidents can be kept.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer and I will certainly pass the message on and enquire as to the specific nature of the complaints and certainly advise them to pass them on. It is just that the complaints we are made aware of are those that are, essentially, duplicates of the many complaints that are already being lodged.

2205

In respect of the specific area of Gardiners Road, which is one that is very much in the limelight because I do not know whether perhaps the Minister will be aware, but there is this group on Facebook called the 'Gibraltar Apes Problem'. I am not certain whether he is a member or not (Laughter) – it is apparent that, in this session of Parliament, Facebook will be quite a common feature. I wonder is the Minister aware of the nature and regularity with which complaints are lodged, published or talked about on the forum?

2210

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is interesting that the hon. Member should have the impression that I frequent Facebook at all. (Laughter). However, I am aware of the group and I am aware of the instances.

2215

This is something that has happened for years, in fact probably for decades. Splinter groups of the apes tend to move down into the Trafalgar Cemetery, St Jago's area, on a regular basis – daily basis – and they move through Gardiners Road. So this is a problem that has been witnessed in the past.

2220

In fact, I remember when the Hon. Mr Reyes had an office there as Minister for Culture we had numerous conversations about tackling this. It is a problem which has been tackled as I described and will be caught, we hope, in the general management plan about which I have a question – 509. If he wants to ask any further questions on that, perhaps we can leave it until 509 shortly.

Control of seagulls Management plan

Clerk: Question 506, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment indicate to this House what action is being taken in respect of the control/management of seagulls and can he confirm whether reports of dead 2230 and injured seagulls recently frequently appearing around Gibraltar has anything to do with the deployment of seagull population control initiatives other than controlled culling?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2235 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the ongoing gull control programme by local operators is continuing as usual, with much of the time at this point in the season being dedicated to call-outs in built up areas.

In addition, the last phase of a four year programme for the management and control of the yellow legged gull population has only recently been completed by FERA, the UK Food and Environment Research Agency, who were initially contracted by the previous administration for four years. This final phase was conducted through a period of 23 days, with a total of 2,477 seagulls culled and 179 eggs removed.

2240 I can confirm that no control initiatives, other than the properly controlled culling methods, have been carried out, to our knowledge.

2245 Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Specifically in the area of Schomberg/KGV, we have had representations made to us from residents in the area of the particularly difficult situation in which those residents find themselves, in respect of the, what I understand to be, annual cycle of chicks and that particular aspect of seagull management.

2250 Is the Minister aware of the physical harm with which they are threatened and, in fact, that residents in the area have sustained as a result of that problem in that particular area?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Probably more aware than most. Of course, I am aware of the possibility of – I use the word ‘attacks’ with caution, because normally seagulls are trying to scare you off, and it can be quite scary, particularly if you do not have a knowledge of the way they behave. It is very, very rare that they actually have an impact on you but, of course, I am aware this is precisely the reason why culling is carried out now, as it was by the previous administration.

2255 It is a problem in Gibraltar, as it is in many other coastal cities around the world and, obviously, is one that is being tackled. We hope, as I think I may have said in answer to previous questions, we are going to be re-deploying resources that were dedicated by the previous administration to FERA, now that their programme is concluded, to enhance the local programme so that more resources are put into it in the coming years.

2265 Hon. S M Figueras: Does the Minister concede that, or rather believe that, it is satisfactory that, in recent weeks certainly, as communicated to us by concerned individuals, the contact number provided for GONHS in the directory, which people have been trying to contact, furiously in certain instances, has provided little more than an answerphone at the end of it, confirming that there will be no one available to take calls on that number for two weeks and offering an alternative number which then turns out to be the number for the Botanical Gardens... at the end of which there seem to be representatives who explain that seagull control actually has nothing to do with the Botanical Gardens!

2270 Now, I am aware, only today, that the number for GONHS is now re-directing, or was certainly yesterday, to the Botanical Gardens: no answerphone. Is the Minister satisfied that the access to experts, or access to people who can help, is satisfactory at this moment in time?

2275 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I suspect that, as those calls used to be directed to me personally, when I was working on contract with the Ministry for the Environment under the old administration, as I had been for many years, perhaps the link is still going to my old office. However, I am glad to say that I will be announcing, in response to the hon. Member’s question – the next question, in fact, on an environmental hotline – that this has now been resolved.

2280 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in a previous session in this House where we talked about the seagulls – I believe it was the March session – there was reference to there being ‘enhanced resources’ provided to the local culling operation which the Hon. Minister has referred to again in previous answers.

The operation by FERA having been completed, is the Minister able to describe or explain to some detail what these enhanced resources for GONHS, the contractor I understand he identified at the last session, will in fact be?

2285 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Not yet, Mr Speaker. These are issues that are being considered and will be discussed with the operators, but we are not...

I have some personal ideas, through my own experience in the matter but, certainly, we have not yet decided exactly how this will work but, no doubt, when the decision is made I will be more than happy to share that with the Members opposite.

2290 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware of any secret weapons, explosive, natural or otherwise, that GONHS may have been deploying in the last few weeks in the control of the seagull population?

2295 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I am not, Mr Speaker.

I do not know what the hon. Member is referring to. I am aware that, as part of their programme this year, FERA, together with GONHS, were testing the use of laser, which is obviously not an explosion, it is a visual disturbance at night to nesting gulls which had the desired effect of displacing them from their nests. Therefore, if this happens regularly enough, particularly in the cooler period of the night, it could decrease nesting success.

2300 It may be, if sounds have been heard, that that could be FERA who do use shotguns and that may explain if any explosive sounds have been heard. That would be the FERA operation which, like in years past, have had shotguns licensed appropriately and that may be if some sounds are being used. Other than that, I have no knowledge.

2305 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker I am fully aware that I may be letting the cat out of the bag and that there is a question in the Order Paper on cats later on but to let the secret out, the 'secret weapon' which has been referred to us in the Opposition, is the use of a hawk by members of GONHS.

2310 Is the Minister able to provide us with any further information in relation to this?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. Sorry, I thought as he said 'explosions'... I was thinking of noise.

Yes, the use of falconry has now been carried out for five or six years and the falconers are licensed under the Nature Protection Act, as are the birds in question: and they are used to disrupt, again, disrupt the nesting of gulls.

2315 We all know how gulls do not like the presence of birds of prey so there are two purposes here: either a hawk is flown, then the gulls are displaced and, the more disturbance, the less likely they are to succeed in the nesting. But also in built up areas where they cannot use rifles and so on to cull, then the use of hawks is a preferred option, as is the case in other places, for example in airfields in other parts of the world.

2320 Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister aware – and, perhaps, I am calling upon his expertise when in GONHS prior to his current role as Minister for the Environment – is he aware of any negative effects, any potential dangers, for the population, the community as a whole, stemming from the use of the hawk?

2325 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The community of wildlife?

Hon. S M Figueras: No, the human community.

2330 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Any detrimental effect on the human population: these hawks are this small, I do not think they could carry you away! Sorry, I don't think they could carry the hon. Member away. (Laughter)

If he is implying anything else, instead of implying it, if he asks it directly then I will attempt to answer it.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I was not talking about the British Aerospace Systems Hawk, the training aircraft, the Red Arrows, I was referring to hawks occurring in the natural context.

2335 By my question – and, perhaps, it was a little too general – I was referring to the appearance frequently recently of maimed animals, dead animals, on the road, in terms of the health hazard, in terms of animals falling on you. Perhaps some more details in that respect would be helpful.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, certainly not from the use of falcons or hawks. In fact, I think, if they are still using the same bird they used to use when I was involved in the operation, they would be

- 2340 American Harris Hawks, captive, bred for the purpose.
They are specifically trained to attack or catch only gulls. They are trained by the operators, who are very well experienced in this sort of matter and they are specifically trained to take yellow-legged gulls. Once they have a specific search image, it is highly unlikely they will go for anything else.
- 2345 Any maimed animal or whatever would have to have other –
- Hon. S M Figueras: Perhaps the Minister will give way... Just to clarify, I am not talking about risks, Mr Speaker, to the human population directly from the hawk but as collateral damage – and I was not even referring to that – but as collateral damage from seagulls being injured, then causing injury or risks to the general population.
- 2350
- Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Alright. There has been no change in the methods used to the previous administration and I am not wanting to make this a political point, I am trying to stick to the technical aspects. Not from the use of hawks... perhaps if an injured gull, which may be injured by whatever reason, either naturally by one of the wild hawks, for example, or falcons or perhaps as a result of another operation, like shooting or whatsoever: if a gull is injured it might fall on the ground in front of somebody. That might be unpleasant. Those situations have occurred particularly when FERA has been here, with the use of shotguns, and it is regrettable, but that is not going to happen again because they will not be coming back. But certainly not from the use of birds of prey.
- 2355
- Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, not meaning to delve into the political pre GSLP-type discussion that we have had very often in this House recently, is the Minister satisfied that this approach, as one of the solutions for the seagull management and control, is an appropriate and perfectly acceptable measure for this Government to undertake.
- 2360
- Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The hawks? (Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.)
Yes, it is not going to solve the problem. It can reduce breeding success in built-up areas, which is a problem because they cannot be approached in any other way, particularly if the nests are not accessible to the operators. Therefore, if it reduces nesting success and does take out certain pairs, then the long term benefit will be that those pairs would not be there next year and perhaps they will be discouraged from nesting in particular areas. It is a legitimate method.
- 2370
- Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister explain whether the hawks would be successful in clearing gulls from the airfield in terms of air safety?
- 2375
- Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, how long has the hon. Lady got for this answer?
Yes, the view is, yes. Again, purely on the technical side and from the experience I have in my previous occupation, not to say profession – I hope the profession continues beyond your occupation – there have been initiatives in the past to introduce falconry in the airfield. In fact, the latest initiative was in conjunction with the development of the new air terminal, but the previous Government did not approve those proposals.
- 2380
- Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Minister be consulting with air traffic control about the introduction of the use of lasers in order to disperse gulls?
- 2385
- Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.
- Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham:
- Hon. D A Feetham: It is just out of interest – the hon. Gentleman and I share an interest – him more than me, obviously, in wildlife, particularly in the Upper Rock, but he may recall the conversation that we had, that the red fox had been re-introduced into Gibraltar. Does he think that the red fox population is going to be impacting on the population of gulls? Is that the idea and can he provide some information to the House as to how he believes the population of red foxes are actually doing since they were introduced?
- 2390
- Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think next time I will bring a PowerPoint presentation and I am sure 2395 we would all enjoy what I have to say on the wildlife.

It is not particularly... well, it is relevant – the success of the re-introduction programme of the red fox of some years ago is in question. The experts tell me that they are not sure whether it was successful or not so, therefore, I cannot really answer whether there has been any impact or not. It is a matter that will be taken into consideration as we develop an Upper Rock plan.

Upper Rock feral cat population
Method of management

2405

Clerk: Question 507, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment confirm what, if any, action is being taken to control/manage the feral cat population in the Upper Rock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Government is currently considering what action can be taken to deal with this matter since it is committed to the protection of the natural environment of the Upper Rock.

2415

Government is committed to the enhancement of the biodiversity of the Upper Rock Nature Reserve. It is currently considering, in this context, what action can be taken to deal with the feral cat population and, before I am asked any supplementary, the answer is we are considering it: we do not at the moment have a defined plan.

2420

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in this context, does the Minister – I suspect he will, but I will ask the question just to be on the safe side – accept that the Barbary Partridge is an iconic species for Gibraltar?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.

2425

Hon. S M Figueras: And further in that context, does the Minister accept that the feral cat population is responsible for the decimation ongoing of that Barbary Partridge population?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, with this – in replying to the affirmative – I know that the hon. Member next to Mr Figueras shares this concern, as a resident of the Upper Rock.

2430

Reporting of environmental issues
Hotline and central e-mail address

2435

Clerk: Question 508, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for the Environment confirm whether an environmental hotline and central e-mail has now been established for the purpose of reporting environment related matters?

2440

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I am going to slightly change my prepared answer because of developments today.

I was going to say Government will shortly be issuing... I am now going to say the Government will, within the next 24 hours, be issuing a press release that will provide details of the counter address, telephone number and e-mail address that will be provided so that the public can register any environmentally related issues.

2450 The public will also be reminded of the various contact details already at their disposal in respect of specific matters. The press release, as I say, is going to issue very, very shortly.

2455 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, does the press release cover and, in that event, will do away with the need for the Minister to answer the question in substance; does it cover the response, reaction, action that will be taken in response, to matters lodged with that hotline?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is a short press release. I am happy to read it – I am not sure it answers all the questions.

2460 'The Department of the Environment has set up an Environmental Complaints Section for the purpose of providing the general public with a one-stop shop in respect of the reporting of environmental matters. The Section's core function is to gather information received from members of the public and pursue action directly from the respective service providers. A register of all issues raised will be established that will assist with monitoring the services provided. Feedback will be crucial to this process.'

2465 And then it goes on to explain when it will be manned, when there will be an answerphone, the telephone number and an e-mail address.

2470 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Minister for reading the press release, as it does answer a number of questions that I had. However, it omits to deal with one or two particular issues that I would like to raise in addition by way of supplementary.

When will the hotline be manned is one question and, more importantly, perhaps, is what will the public be able to... or what can the public count on, in terms of the response where there is an emergent situation?

2475 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The line will be operational immediately. It already exists. It is just that it has not been publicised, until this press release issues.

2480 The unit that is dealing with this, which is the Environmental Monitoring Unit at New Harbours, will log and refer the complaints to all the respective operators. For example, if there is a complaint to do with gulls then they will call the people for dealing with gulls. If it is a complaint which is more related to the Environmental Agency, they will continue with their numbers and so on but then they will be directed to the Environmental Agency or they will take the call and process it themselves.

Obviously, it is a new system which, as it develops, will mature, but the intention is that anybody who has an environment related concern will have one point of reference.

2485 Hon. S M Figueras: I commend the speaker for establishing the system because it is certainly something that there is no doubt the public will be able to avail itself of and benefit significantly from.

2490 However, there is one omission in the answer which I would just like to probe that little bit further, which is what will happen in the emergent situations where there is a current emergent need for some kind of assistance by the relevant officer? I know that officers have been loath in the past to be available on a 24-hour basis, to publish their mobile phones even, but I just really wish to put on record the concern of some residents that there is little or no response in specific instances of danger.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, it really depends on what it is. What is 'urgent' is hard to define: something that is clearly urgent and, in other cases, it is more a matter of opinion.

2495 Certainly, the 24 hour on-call Environmental Agency Officer will remain. The Police is always a point of contact that furthers contact. Those things will all remain and, as I say, as we develop this system and see what problems there are then, hopefully, we will be able to, as I say, develop it and improve it, but all the existing emergency support for environmental matters, which essentially is the Environmental Agency – they remain in place.

2500 Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask, in order to try and clarify some of the things that the Hon. Minister has said, because he did say that the environmental hotline would be based in New Harbours, where the office is of the environmental monitors? Now, to my recollection, they normally work normal working hours, but what happens, for instance, where someone is calling to the hotline after normal working hours or even the silent hours? How is this system going to work?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: At the moment there will be a voicemail that will operate.

2510 Clearly, the options that are being considered is whether, during the silent hours, the call could be diverted, for example, to the Environmental Agencies call or to the Police but that is something that we are considering at the moment. This is not meant to replace any emergency situation, this is meant to provide people with ongoing concerns a point of contact and we will develop it and, hopefully, it will be an improvement.

2515 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just one supplementary, I hope, because I really hate to labour the point. It is just that the Hon. Minister has said that, initially, the hotline will be a voice message. Now, in emergent situations who will be on hand to listen to the voicemail to determine whether or not it is an emergent situation, in the first place?

2520 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: As I said, this is not supposed to be dealing with emergency situations. I understand the concern. I have not heard the message yet, but it can be made clear in that, that emergencies can be referred elsewhere or we re-direct. I will take that up right away.

Clerk: Question five...

Beach refurbishment programme
Details of work and cost
Revised schedule

2530 Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, before we move on to the next Question, with your indulgence, perhaps we can move back to Question 487/2012, where the Hon. Mr Bossino asked me about a discrepancy on the schedule that I handed him and the hon. Members opposite.

2535 Just to say that I have had the situation rectified. Essentially, there was a misalignment on the right hand side of the schedule that had the figures mismatching with the items. I have shown the revised schedule to the hon. Gentleman: he is satisfied that it is now correct.

I am grateful to the hon. Member for pointing it out and I now hand over the revised schedule to the hon. Gentleman opposite.

SCHEDULE TO QUESTION NO 487/2012Beaches Expenditure 2012 (FROM JANUARY TO 13TH JUNE 2012)

TOTAL	£63,737.64	£27,137.40	£2,016.24	£20,535.00	£6,843.14	£1,206.00	£13,430.73	£134,906.15

The following are some of the extraordinary works/services included within the above schedule:

1 Lifeguard uniforms	£2,507.55
2 Repairs to lifeguard boats	£900.00
3 Repairs / servicing of outboard engines	£421.10
4 Binoculars for LGs	£299.50
5 First order of 1st Aid stock for LG posts	£1,298.50

16 PVC cladding of toilets at Catalan Bay North	£1,206.00
	£124,705.30

Point no. 10 represents an approximate cost as GibElec still have additional associated works which need to be verified.

We have also been furnished with a new lifeguard boat store at Eastern Beach, capable of holding two vessels mounted on their corresponding trailers. This structure has been constructed as part of the on-going refurbishment and beautification programme of Eastern Beach. We have no costing for these works.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just to point out, for the sake of the record and, therefore, for the sake of Hansard, I think, if my memory serves me correctly, the £399 expenditure, in fact, relates to disabled toilet fittings at Camp Bay and not to repairs to LG posts, switches and sockets, which I think is the explanation which the Minister on his feet offered to me.

Mr Speaker: Well, I think the Hansard will disclose that, but the Minister at this stage rose to rectify the answer given to Question 487 with an amended schedule.

Hon. N F Costa: That is correct.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman states the position correctly. The amount relates to disabled toilet – Camp Bay – fittings. As a result of the misalignment, I thought it related to item 6, which were repairs to lifeguard posts. Now that the schedule has been revised, it does correctly refer to disabled toilet fittings at Camp Bay.

I am grateful to the hon. Gentleman.

Barbary Macaque Management Plan
Re-drafting and re-costing

Clerk: Question 509, the Hon. S M Figueras

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, my last question for the Hon. Minister.

2565 Can the Minister for the Environment now state, following his planned meeting between last month's session of Parliament and the present one, whether the Barbary Macaque Management Plan has now been re-drafted and re-costed and can he give an indication as to why this exercise has been necessary?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

2570 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, work is still in progress. The exercise has been necessary in order to extend the plans and incorporate elements that were discarded by the previous administration and include new elements brought on board by additional expert advice.

2575 The Barbary Macaque Management Plan is currently being re-drafted with international NGOs, sorry, and with input from international NGOs and Professor Agustin Fuentes, following his recent visit, and will be discussed with local experts before it is adopted.

2580 The re-drafting will include a re-costing exercise. I hope this process will be complete by the end of the summer. The exercise has been necessary due to shortcomings of the former management regime under the previous administration which was under-resourced and under-supported. This meant, for example, a lack of supervision at the sites, a lack of interpretation, no support for research, failure to discourage illegal feeding, lack of financial support to improve facilities at the site for the monkeys and visitors, slow or non-existent decision making.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

2585 The Minister explains that the BMP – and I make no apologies for any innuendos that may come out of that – but he refers to re-costing of the BMP, that previously it was under-resourced and that there were failings under the GSD Administration.

2590 One would imagine that if the re-costing exercise is revealing, or certainly it was clear to the Hon. Minister that it was under-resourced before, that there is going to be a need for more resources going forward. Is the Hon. Minister able to give an indication of those resources that will be required and, further, whether provision for that has been made by the Government already?

2595 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, I am not able to say what resources are going to be needed and, therefore – I am just trying to remember – provision has not been made for the full Plan because we still do not know what provision we will require.

2600 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister having understood, for as long as he had been involved in GONHS in a professional context, prior to taking up his role as the environmentalist Minister for the Environment, one would imagine that a certain provision would be made, on the basis that there is an understanding that some extra resources will be required and even though the exact number is unknown as yet because the re-costing exercise is taking a long time to be done, that some provision would be made. Has none at all been made or has some of it been included?

2605 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think this discussion should be more appropriate during the Budget session, when I will have the information at hand and not rely on memory as to whether or not a token or otherwise... I would rather, and I would be happy to discuss this at the appropriate time. I do not have all the information available.

2610 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the confirmation that he does not have the information available and I look forward to discussing the matter at the relevant session, as he says.

Now you mentioned that there has been consultation with many NGOs, international, and that there will be consultation with local experts' as well. Could the Minister confirm whether there has been cost involved to the Gibraltar Government or to GONHS in respect of the advice received by all those NGOs, including Professor Fuentes?

2615 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the only costs that one could relate directly or indirectly to this was the fact that I met with the Born Free Foundation and the International Primate Protection League in London as part of a visit to different environmental departments and organisations, so it would be my travelling costs for that.

2620 Professor Agustin Fuentes had his flights and accommodation – I think it was for two nights – paid for his visit, but he is not charging any fee for this service.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful and I commend the Hon. Minister for being able to leverage that kind of resource on a pro bono basis. It is certainly welcome.

2625 However, have any local experts, of which there are some certainly, been consulted during the re-drafting, or would they only be consulted once it is completed?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: They have been consulted during, and they will be consulted at the latter stages of, the drafting. In other words, the revised draft that Professor Fuentes will provide will be presented to local experts before the final version is presented to Government.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I expect the re-drafted plan will be circulated in a round-robin-type exercise, as was the case (Laughter) with the World War II Blast Wall.

2635 However, would the Minister be able to enlighten us as to the identity of the local experts who have been involved, if it will not take too long?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, certainly. The local experts who have been involved include... Let me just think. Apart from GONHS, which has several, Mr Brian Gomila, whom I assisted at the time of the previous administration in getting funding for a Masters. I have not yet spoken to John Fa, but I will be doing so. I was hoping to be able to visit him, but time did not allow. So, apart from those, within the Natural History Society... I am just trying to think. Other people who have an interest in the Upper Rock have also been consulted, but at the moment I think the only name I can remember is Brian Gomila.

Hon. S M Figueras: One final supplementary, which may inevitably lead to another one or two: the Hon. Minister mentioned illegal feeding as one of the failings of the previous administration, and one would assume that, being a failing, it is one of the matters that are being dealt with actively in the newly being re-drafted plan, which is still under consideration. Is the Minister able to provide this House with a little more information as to how they propose, how he himself would propose, or GONHS or whoever the NGOs are, to deal with this particular matter moving forward?

2645

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: On dealing with illegal feeding? Again, it is a complex issue which will involve the co-operation of different users of the Upper Rock so, at this moment, I would just like to say that there are ideas on how this could be done but, certainly, there is a law that has to be enforced and we hope that all – we know, in fact, that all – the stakeholders will be happy to go along with it.

2650

2655 Obviously, there will always be individuals who will choose to do differently – individual tourists who might want to feed monkeys and so on – but, hopefully, we will be able to control that by supervision at the site, and so on, but as I say, it is a developing process.

I cannot really say any more because I cannot be held to any more, because we are still developing the programme.

2660

Hon. S M Figueras: Granted, Mr Speaker, but in relation to... and in the avoidance of doubt in respect of the identity or nature of the stakeholders in this particular process, will the Government be consulting the public in relation to those measures in relation to the feeding, given that the public themselves are users of the facilities?

2665

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the public has been consulted in relation to the Upper Rock management, which is a parallel process to the Barbary Macaque. There have been representations made by the public on the Barbary Macaque, and those are being shifted sideways to be part of this process, yes.

The answer is, yes, they have been, and any other comments will always be more than welcome, either directly to my office – or even on Facebook.

2670

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that this House do now adjourn until three o'clock.

Mr Speaker: Is that convenient to all the hon. Members?
This House will adjourn until 3.00 p.m. this afternoon.

Questions for Oral Answer

CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Albert Poggio
Consultancy arrangement and remuneration

Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.
Question 563, the Hon. D J Bossino.

5 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Government say how long it envisages that the consultancy arrangement with Mr Albert Poggio will endure and the remuneration he receives?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

10 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as to how long the consultancy arrangements with Mr Albert Poggio will endure, this question was answered in the answer to Question 350/2012 and I am surprised that the hon. Member has not appreciated that.

As to remuneration, the answer is that the sum paid, as provided for in answer to Question 350/2012, is exactly the same as was agreed by his Party Leader in the agreement of 25th March 2011.

15 I am nonetheless happy to give the information, which is that the sum of £65,000 per annum is paid to Mr Poggio under that consultancy arrangement.

20 What I will say, Mr Speaker, given the plethora of questions from the hon. Members of the Opposition on this matter and on this gentleman, is that I share the views expressed by the now Leader of the Opposition, that Mr Poggio has done a tremendous job over many decades and we are delighted that he continues in his role. I would for myself, Mr Speaker, add that Gibraltar owes Mr Poggio a debt of gratitude of immense proportion for the work he did in 2002 in defeating the joint sovereignty proposals.

25 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does the Government at this stage have a firm view as to the continuance of the consultancy arrangements, once the current arrangements are concluded – I believe it would be around about 2013?

Hon. Chief Minister: Not at this stage, Mr Speaker.

30 Hon. D J Bossino: And does the Government have a view, at this stage, at what stage in the future it thinks that there ought to be a conversion – if a conversion there is to be in the future – between the responsibilities currently being carried out by Mr Canessa as Director of the London office which, as he explained on the last occasion, are administrative in nature and those currently being undertaken by Mr Poggio, which are purely political in nature?

35 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is not a question of at what stage it would happen; it is a question of whether it will ever, in fact, happen.

40 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am thinking particularly of the current beneficiary of the consultancy arrangement with Mr Poggio, given the wealth of experience, and both direct experience and because of the contacts that he has with various MPs. Presumably there is going to be at some point a hand-over to somebody else. It may not necessarily be a person who is currently charged with the administrative responsibilities of the London office; it could be, and hence the question in relation to convergence, but the Chief Minister said that that may not necessarily converge, but whether it is convergence or whether it is, at some point in the future, a handing over to somebody else – Mr Poggio is of a certain age – does the Government have a view in relation to that, as to how the transition, if you like, is going to take place?

45 I am just concerned that we have Mr Poggio, who has, as I said earlier, a wealth of experience and information at his fingertips, which he ought to be, I think, in a position to hand over to somebody else in the, I would have thought, not-too-distant future.

50 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if Mr Poggio has the same attitude to life that the present Minister for Employment has, it may be that we are lucky enough to have him around for many years (Interjection) – for many years, although I think he is quite a bit younger than the present Minister for Employment. So it may be that we have him around for quite a bit of time still, and that would be a very good thing, for the reasons that the hon. Gentleman has touched upon – the level of contacts that Mr Poggio has.

55 I think to an extent that is to underestimate what Mr Poggio does. Mr Poggio is not just a 'Rotadex' of contacts of friends of Gibraltar. There are certain things that Mr Poggio does for Gibraltar in London which relate to the abilities that Albert Poggio has, not who he knows, and those issues I think are issues that are or those things that he does because of who he is, not issues that are as simple as handing over a list of contacts or introducing people to a new man in London.

60 So I think it is an issue which the hon. Gentleman can rest assured the Government is fully aware of, and I am sure the previous Government was fully aware of. It is not as easy to resolve as simply converging the role of one party at the London office with Mr Poggio's role, in the hope that from there will emerge a successor to Mr Poggio. I think there is much more to it than that and, therefore, it is not something which we can easily debate across the floor of the House. There are many intangibles, many soft issues here that are not just 65 resolved by the transfer of contacts.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, just as a point of clarification, Mr Speaker, I did specifically mention the contacts he would have available to him, as well as his experience.

70
Moroccan Workers' Hostels
Closure and transfer of residents

75 Clerk: Question 564, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state if it is the intention of the Government to close the two existing Moroccan Workers' Hostels and to transfer the current residents onto a ship which will be anchored by Coaling Island and, if so, by when does the Government intend to do this?

80 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this is an issue that has been discussed with the representatives of Moroccan workers. There is no fixed plan in this respect at this stage.

85 I would also add, Mr Speaker, that it is not a ship which was being considered, but a floating hotel that might have been considered and is in the process of discussion.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer.

90 The Chief Minister has actually said that it is something which is being considered – presumably something that, perhaps, the Government is pursuing, with a view to try and get this floating vessel, as he calls it, and thereby close the two existing hostels. Could the Chief Minister provide a kind of dateline upon which he would like this discussion to come to an end, with a view of carrying out the Government policy?

95 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman prefaces his question with a lot of assumptions, including that it is Government policy to do the things that he suggests.

It is not an issue of Government policy. I told him that we are discussing with the Moroccan Workers' Association and the Moroccan Community Association a possibility which is similar to the issue that he has raised in his question.

100 It is not a vessel that we are talking about, but a floating hotel. A floating hotel is not a ship. In other words, it cannot sail. It has to be towed and anchored and set almost in stone in a particular place, until it is once again pulled to another location for future use. In any event, it would not be a long-term solution. What we are talking about here is having to deal with issues at the hostels and in the period whilst you construct something else, etc, having a better facility than the ones that are presently available.

I am sure the hon. Gentleman knows why this issue arises.

105 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may, could I ask the Chief Minister whether in the process of this discussion which is taking place... does he envisage the discussion to finalise perhaps within the next three to six months and, therefore, at the end of those three to six months, the Government may be able to proceed with this particular policy?

110 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I confirm to the hon. Gentleman, this is not an issue of policy. This is an issue of having to deal with a problem.

Now, it is very likely that in the next three to six months, perhaps even within the three months, this issue will have been resolved, because it does involve... I am not saying negotiation, because negotiation means 115 one thing; I am saying discussion – and I am saying that advisedly – with the Moroccan Community Association and with the Moroccan Workers' Association, to see whether they feel that this is something that they can get comfortable with.

120 The hon. Gentleman needs to ensure that he does not overlook why this issue arises. Of course, he and I would probably be very easily in agreement that the existing workers' hostels are not necessarily as one would wish them to be. They are not of a standard that one would wish to be providing. I have visited the workers' hostels, without advising that I would be on my way to visit it, to see it as it is. He and I will, I am sure, agree that we should be, if possible, providing better. This is one potential way of providing better whilst a new solution is provided.

125 But he will, know, Mr Speaker, that the reason that this is urgent is because the Government when he was a member of it, just over a year ago, entered into an agreement to vacate the Buena Vista Hostel not later than 30th June 2012, but did nothing to relocate the people who live there. It is not possible to build a hostel in 20 minutes. It is not possible to build a hostel in six months and, therefore, if the Government is going to be not in breach of its obligations under this agreement – which I can tell the hon. Gentleman in the next six days, I reckon we will be in breach – if we are not going to be in breach of this agreement, then we need to provide an interim solution, whilst new facilities are provided for. Hence why this has been put on the agenda.

130 It is only because the agreement signed by the GSD on 12th April 2011 with BV Homes provides in clause 2A(3) that the Government will give vacant possession of the workers' hostel at Buena Vista by 30th June 2012.

135 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I agree obviously with the hon. Gentleman that you cannot build a hostel in 20 days.

140 Given that that is moving ahead as a possible option, to try and provide what he calls floating vessels, I presume that he must have in his mind an idea at least who will conduct the administration service on behalf of the Government. Will it be conducted in-house or will it be outsourced to the private sector to do the administration of this floating vessel on behalf of the Government?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are a number of different options being considered in respect of how that might occur.

145 I am sure that what he would agree with me would be the best solution would be (a) the one that is more financially advantageous to the Government, whilst (b) using those Government resources that are already available in-house to the Government for the administration of the current Government hostels to the best possible use.

150 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, no doubt about that; but one of the things that I am interested in knowing is that who will be – in this likeable scenario that the Chief Minister is referring to – the one setting the level of rent, hypothetically speaking, that the Moroccans will have to pay in this floating vessel? Will it be the Government setting the level of rent that the Moroccans will have to pay in this new hostel, if I can call it that, or will it be a private sector company? That is what I...

155 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think what the hon. Gentleman is trying to get to is what will the level of rent be? What I am quite happy to tell him is that we are not envisaging that Moroccan workers, or other users of Government workers' hostels, should be paying more if they are existing tenants of the Government, under the existing arrangements, than they were paying to date.

160 Mr Speaker, this is about getting the Government out of the bind in which it finds itself because, a year and a half ago, his administration signed an agreement to vacate a hostel by 30th June and did nothing about relocating the people who were there.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the guarantee that the Chief Minister gives in relation that this is not an exercise to increase the rent per se to existing Moroccans who are living in the current hostels.

165 But if I can ask one further clarification: obviously, Moroccan nationals – I am not talking about the Moroccans who are naturalised, but Moroccan nationals per se – they do not have the opportunities like we Gibraltarians have – at least those who live in Government properties – that whenever we become unemployed, we get rent relief to the extent that sources of incomes are taken into account in the formulation that we apply in the Ministry for Housing.

170 Now, my concern, which is the kind of clarification I am trying to seek from the Chief Minister, is that if we were to have a situation in the future, whereby a Moroccan worker, because of the employer he is employed by, he is made redundant, and he happens to be living in these floating vessels, will the Government take into account some form of rent relief just in the same way as we Gibraltarians have a form of rent relief which is applied in Government properties? Will the Chief Minister look into that?

175 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said 'Moroccan nationals' – and I know what he means because that is a constituency he has shown concern for before – it is not just Moroccan nationals but any nationality of worker that happens to be in the hostel: predominantly, I accept they are Moroccan nationals.

180 Mr Speaker, this is a situation that the present Government finds itself in because of something done a year and half ago by the previous administration.

185 I might ask him – rhetorically, because he is not here to answer questions – what was he doing to protect people in that hostel before 8th December who were going to find themselves in this situation? As I cannot ask him the question – because I am here to answer questions and not ask them, I will not – but I will say to him that he can have the confidence that the position as it was in at 8th December, under the regime that he was responsible for, or was part of the administration that had responsibility for it, in respect of nationals of any state who are resident as workers in a Government hostel who become redundant, will continue to be the case. So we will not change it from the position as it was, when he was in Government for 16 years.

190 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I appreciate that.

195 That was the situation on 8th December, but what I was trying to elaborate was that, in a new situation, in a new environment, where he takes decisions as a Government and, if he outsourced the whole administration of this service, the new private sector company may not have the same attitude as a Government – whether it is his present Government or the previous Government – in relation to matters like rent relief, when a Moroccan or any other non-EU national who is in a hostel...

195 This is what I am trying to get: whether, if the Government wishes, as a matter of policy after them, whether to outsource administration to a private company that the Government, as a Government, will ensure that there is that kind of protection as existed today and before.

200 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think that the hon. Gentleman and I are not on a different wavelength, but we have not quite understood each other, and I think I can now see where he is going.

205 Whether it is a private entity that the Government uses in part or in whole to help us to administer these arrangements, if they are entered into after the discussions et cetera, the regime that that entity would apply will be the regime that the Government wishes applied. The regime that the Government will seek to have applied will be the regime exactly as it was as of 8th December 2011, so he can have the comfort that the position will be exactly the same in respect of people who become redundant, as might have been the case when he was in administration.

Hon. J J Netto: Okay.

210 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isabel Ellul-Hammond? No?

215 Community Care payments
Discussion with Moroccan Workers' Association

Clerk: Question 565, the Hon. J J Netto.

220 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state if he has had any request by the Moroccan Workers' Association to have a meeting with him in order to discuss, amongst other things, the Community Care payments?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

225 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have met with the Moroccan Workers' Association on at least two occasions since the General Election, the last as recently as 7th June. I have discussed with them many issues.

I have also met on a number of occasions with the Moroccan Community Association. I have also discussed with them many issues.

230 Community Care, Mr Speaker, is an independent charity, registered under the Charities Act. The Government does not have any standing to discuss matters related to Community Care in any authoritative manner.

235 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, of course the Government has not got any standing in relation to Community Care payments, but that does not stop the Chief Minister from standing up in Parliament and actually stating whether he has discussed the issue in this particular case, as he mentioned, the Moroccan Workers' Association, and for him to express a view in Parliament.

So my question to him is whether he has a view on the matter, regardless of the fact whether there is any standing or no standing between the Government and Community Care.

240 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is an issue which is sensitive and I am quite happy to have a conversation with the hon. Gentleman afterwards, if he likes.

245 But the position of the Government, is (a) that the Government is only answerable in Parliament for the things for which the Government is responsible, and the Government is not responsible for Community Care, which is an independent third party charity; (b) Mr Speaker, I think if the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition were here today, he would be urging him to leave it at that because I am not going to be getting up in Parliament to give opinions on who should or should not be receiving Community Care, because it is an independent third party charity.

250 I hope the hon. Gentleman understands why I am giving him the answer I am giving him and why I am quite happy to have a discussion with him later, if he wishes.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, I will take the offer up.

255 Moroccan workers long-term resident in Gibraltar
Entitlement to Minimum Income Guarantee

Clerk: Question 566, the Hon. J J Netto.

260 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state if his Government intends to provide Moroccan workers who are residents of Gibraltar and who have been working in Gibraltar for the last 25 to 40 years with the Minimum Income Guarantee?

265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 567.

270 Unemployed Moroccan workers in Gibraltar Entitlement to Social Assistance Benefit

Clerk: Question 567.

275 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state if his Government intends to provide current unemployed Moroccan workers who have lived and worked in Gibraltar for between 25 to 40 years, and other Moroccan workers who may become unemployed in the future, with the Social Assistance Benefit payable by the Department of Social Security?

280 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will be delighted to know that the position remains exactly as when he was the Minister responsible.

285 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, that is not the question I am asking for.

It is not a question whether I am delighted or not delighted that the position is now as it was when the GSD was in Government. I am asking the Government whether they intend to allow Moroccan workers who have lived between 25 and 40 years with the Social Assistance Benefit – obviously when they become unemployed – and with the Minimum Income Guarantee, as when they are 60 years of age. That is the question and this is what I am trying to get an answer from the Chief Minister. So I would be grateful if he can address that issue.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is that we will not be changing the eligibility criteria that he set out when he was a Minister, or that was in place when he was a Minister for many years.

295 I am sure that that will be something that the hon. Gentleman will be happy with – unless he was not happy with the regime that was in place whilst he was a Minister.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I think I have understood the Chief Minister to say that he would not change the eligibility criteria. I think he said that.

300 My understanding, from recollection, in regard to the eligibility criteria for the Minimum Income Guarantee, is that it has to be (a) any person who is residing in Gibraltar or who has either a certificate of permanent residence or indefinite residence; or (b) who holds a resident permit which, at the date of issue of the current permit, was valid for a period in excess of one year.

Now, if he is telling me that that criteria has not changed, and that criteria remains valid today because nothing has changed, as he has said, it seems to me that Moroccans may be entitled because, nowadays, Moroccan nationals do have a renewable five-year residence permit, which is renewable every five years, despite the fact that they have been here now for 40 years.

So if I am correct, will that mean then that they are eligible to apply for the Minimum Income Guarantee?

310 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not the person who makes assessment as to who is or is not going to be eligible, but the eligibility criteria that the hon. Gentleman has read out, as I understand it, is the correct one.

I am not going to answer his hypothetical case of a Moroccan national who might be entitled, because there may be many other criteria of such a particular Moroccan national which might take him out of other eligibility sub-criteria. But given his understanding and my position as set out before, that the eligibility criteria have not changed, I will let him make up his mind for himself.

315 I will tell him that there are very few people now who have been here for 25 to 40 years who have not been naturalised. The ones who have not, either have not been in good standing for a particular reason or have not applied to be naturalised.

320 Mr Speaker, I think he can work out for himself what I am saying.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, generally speaking, what the Chief Minister seems to be saying is that nothing has changed. We are carrying the same policies that were introduced by the GSD Government.

Now, they are a party who accused the GSD of being some kind of a right-wing Conservative party. Instead we have a Socialist Party along with a Liberal Party. Does the Chief Minister, as a Socialist, have a view as to whether it is morally correct that unemployed Moroccan workers who have been living probably on average 35 years, some even 40 years... that they should not be entitled to Social Assistance because he can argue that he has a Conservative right-wing thinking, like the GSD has, but he cannot argue that, as a Socialist, he has no moral regard for unemployed Moroccan workers, that they should not be entitled, when they become unemployed, to Social Assistance? Does he have a view, as a Socialist?

330 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think the hon. Gentleman understood what I told him.

First of all, I do believe that the hon. Gentlemen are all part of a right-wing Conservative clique. I do not always see them as conspiring, but they are all the right-wing Conservative clique come together under the 335 banner of a party. (Interjection)

But they used to say, when they were on these benches, that actually they were the only Socialist Party in Gibraltar, inter alia praying in aid the presence of the hon. Gentleman amongst their ranks as evidence of the fact that they were a Socialist Party (Interjection) because he had at one stage been a trade unionist.

340 So, Mr Speaker, you see, the position is this: the Minimum Income Guarantee was set up by the hon. Gentlemen when they were in Government. They set out an eligibility criteria. The eligibility criteria is not changing. Our allegation that they are a right-wing Conservative clique has nothing to do with the Minimum Income Guarantee; it has got to do with many other things.

345 But, in this instance, Mr Speaker, if he had worked out what I told him, he would have worked out that in that sort of example – and I am not the one to determine eligibility, because somebody else looks at a particular case and applies the criteria to it – the person would have been entitled to the Minimum Income Guarantee.

So, as a Socialist, which I am very sure I am, Mr Speaker, the person would not be left without an income, because they would be receiving the Minimum Income Guarantee.

350 Hon. J J Netto: So has he said that they will be getting the Minimum Income Guarantee? Were those his final words?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not in Parliament to assess for him what the hypothetical individual that he proposes is or is not eligible to. I have confirmed to him that the eligibility criteria is as he set out and I have confirmed to him that it has not changed since he was there.

355 What has changed, Mr Speaker, is the period of the permits which are granted. Therefore, Mr Speaker, given that the periods are likely to now bring people within the eligibility criteria, the person who determines eligibility (Hon. J J Netto: Yes.) will be giving an answer to that hypothetical Moroccan worker which, in my view, is very likely to be in the positive. But there are other sub-criteria which may take a particular individual out of eligibility, whilst allowing it to another – other income etc.

360 So, Mr Speaker, in those circumstances, that hypothetical individual, given only the characteristics that have been put out there by the hon. Gentleman, without addressing the other criteria, would likely be told by the person who does assess eligibility that he would be receiving the amounts. Therefore, Mr Speaker, as a Socialist, I have no concern for the hypothetical unemployed Moroccan that the hon. Gentleman has posited in his example.

365 Hon. J J Netto: Can I, just for the sake of clarification – I think it is important that when we are talking about criteria or the criteria that I set out, that was a criteria in the context of the Minimum Income Guarantee, but the criteria for the Social Assistance, which is not something which was introduced by the GSD Government – in fact it was introduced by the GSLP Government – is a different kind of criteria.

370 In those criteria for Social Assistance, it makes it very, very clear... well, not just to Moroccans but to any other nationality, if I remember right – certainly from memory, all other non-EU nationalities, but it may even go to the extent of saying, all other, even European, nationalities – so I just want to make it clear to him that, when I was speaking before about criteria, I was talking about criteria of the Minimum Income Guarantee, which was something which was done by the GSD Government, but the criteria for eligibility for Social Assistance was something that was done between 1988 and 1996. There it is very, very clear that, under that criteria, unemployed Moroccan workers would not be entitled to Social Assistance.

375 This is why I am asking the question – obviously, I was trying to separate the two issues, but the Chief Minister has answered the two questions together.

380 Now, given that for Social Assistance, to allow Moroccan workers to get Social Assistance if they become unemployed, the criteria, which is an administrative criteria and not by legislation... it would require a policy decision of the Government. Therefore, can I put it to the Chief Minister, whether he would look at the criteria for Social Assistance, in order to allow what I would call long-term workers, regardless of nationality, who have lived and worked in Gibraltar for considerable periods of time to be entitled to this kind of benefit? Surely he must agree with me that this would be something that he could look into as promoting equality in Gibraltar and fairness – there is no doubt about that. It is a glaring omission as far as inequality and fairness.

385 We are talking about people who have worked probably 35 to 40 years. They have paid the same level of social insurance as we pay, the rest of us in the community, and the same level of taxation that we pay in the rest of the community, but they have not enjoyed those benefits. I am sure, or at least I hope, that the Chief 390 Minister would think in the same way as I do and allow them even to get not just the Minimum Income Guarantee, but the Social Assistance.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand the second part of the hon. Gentleman's question is now just about the Social Assistance.

395 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman was in government for 16 years, pretty influential. He was the one that they held up as evidence of the fact that they were socialists, so I would have thought that he had quite a lot of influence in the previous administration. So, Mr Speaker, given that, I am surprised that he is left to put it to the leader of the party that he recognises introduced this system between 1988 and 1996 to now consider amending it in a way that he was not able to collectively convince his colleagues of the right wing conservative coalition that they make up to amend in the time that they were in government.

400 Mr Speaker, I will tell him this, that there are already criteria which would make that sort of individual eligible, in some circumstances, to receive Social Assistance payments.

So, Mr Speaker, what I will answer substantively to his question is that I will consider it, which is what he has asked me to do.

405 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, will the former Liberal, now Leader of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party and Leader of the Liberal Socialist Alliance on that side of the House, not agree with me that, in fact, when one talks about the rights of individuals and when one talks about the rights of Moroccans, which is the example that my hon. Friend has asked questions about, we talk about evolution of those rights, and that simply because we may have taken a particular position when we were in government and that they took a position during eight years that they were in government, it does not mean that the position needs to remain static, that either we on this side of the House cannot change our previous policies, nor that they on their side of the House have to follow our lead?

410 Has he got any plans for looking at this and making sure that Moroccans have greater rights in the areas that my hon. Friend has asked him questions about?

415 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I wonder whether the former Socialist and then Labourite, and now Social Democrat could not have had the patience to wait (Interjection) for the next question to get up to ask something. But, then again, Mr Speaker, impatience is what has put him where he is.

420 Mr Speaker, I would have thought that it would have taken longer than the four hours that Mr Caruana has been absent from this Parliament for the hon. Gentleman to try to distance what he obviously now sees as his party (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause) from the 16 years of hard work of his former – his current, sorry – leader.

425 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, Mr Netto, whom I actually have never myself accused, nor do I, because I consider that he is part of that rightwing Conservative coalition, believe has ever been right wing. I believe the Hon. Mr Netto is only and can only ever be described as being left wing... has asked me to consider something and I have told him at the end of my answer that I will.

The hon. Gentleman, perhaps in his impatience, did not hear that and now wants to ask me to consider something which I have said a moment before sitting down I will consider. So there you are, Mr Speaker, I am going to consider it.

430 Therefore, for him to get up and ask me would I have any plans to do something which I have just agreed to consider, is for him to afford me a level of intellectual ability to consider and plan so quickly, which even my worst enemies do not ascribe to me, although he sometimes considers me to have an ability to connive even beyond that which I have.

Cordoba Agreement Policy re implementation

440 Clerk: Question 568, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes. Will the Chief Minister state what is his Government's policy in relation to those aspects of the Cordoba Agreement which remain to be implemented?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has referred to press release 110/2006 of the GSLP Liberal parties, which sets out the position of the parties now in Government. I also refer the hon. Gentleman to the third paragraph of page 15 of the GSLP Liberal manifesto.

Hon. D A Feetham: I think that is, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, a totally unacceptable answer on something as important as this. I do not want to have a spat with the hon. Gentleman so early in questions, or at all; all I want is to elicit information and for the hon. Gentleman to answer that in a way that does not demean this Parliament.

Now, could he please state, for the benefit of all those listening, what his Government's policy is in relation to those aspects of the Cordoba Agreement that remain unimplemented, please?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes. I do not know why it is that a two-sentence answer to a one-sentence question is considered demeaning, but Mr Speaker, my policy is as set out in press release 110/2006, which sets out the position of the parties now in government and is more particularly set out on page 15, third paragraph of the GSLP Liberal manifesto.

Hon. D A Feetham: Let me ask some more specific questions, given that he is referring to a 2006 press release, which I think is absolutely outrageous as an answer to a question, a quite legitimate question, by me in this House.

What is the party opposite's policy in relation to the Schengen arrangements, as set out in the Cordoba Agreement – in particular, obviously, the advance Schengen entrance and the deferred Schengen exit control?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that for him it is outrageous that somebody should continue to hold, in 2012, the same views that they held in 2006 because, for him, views are things which are obviously fluid enough that he can go from one party to another without any concern.

Mr Speaker, our position on those issues is exactly as set out in that press statement, which specifically addressed those issues.

Hon. D A Feetham: He obviously seems to be concerned with providing me with the actual answer in this House. I do not know why.

Is the position this: that the party opposite will not abide by those parts of the Cordoba Agreement relating to the Schengen arrangements? Is that the position?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman thinks I am not providing him with the answer in this House. It must be that he does not think he is in this House to ask the question and I am not in this House when I am giving the answer. I am in this House, giving him the answer, which is that the position is not as he sets out, necessarily; it is as set out in the press release.

I am quite happy for him to say that he wants to read the press release and ask me more questions about it next time, if he wishes. The position is very clearly set out in our press release of 2006. We are consistent in our policy position and, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman needs to refresh his memory, it is fair enough, he can go and check it if he likes. I am quite happy to recess for five minutes, if he wants.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on a point of order – and again, I am trying to keep temperatures to a reasonable level in this House – I am not here to ask questions on a press release. I am here to ask questions on Government policy.

It is not right for this Government, or for the Chief Minister, to refer me to a press release that was made public in 2006. It simply is not. It is a derogation of the Government's duty to this Parliament and to the people of Gibraltar for the hon. Member to respond in that particular way and, given that the hon. Member was swept to power by 350 votes on arguments about transparency and more democratic accountability, I do think it is outrageous that the hon. Gentleman should give me the answer that he gives me.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in answering that point of order, I would say this: the hon. Gentleman is not entitled, under the rules of the House, to ask questions about things that are public, but has asked us 500 what the Government policy is, and he might not have known that our policy was as set out in our Opposition statement.

505 What I have confirmed to him, Mr Speaker, in this House, so that he has the benefit of it, is that the Government's policy is as set out in the statement that we provided in 2006. Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can now go and read the policy statement of 2006 and he will have an answer. It is not a derogation, Mr Speaker, to stand up in this House and refer somebody to a document that contains the policy very clearly and very explicitly set out.

I would say two more things, Mr Speaker. First of all, transparency and accountability is not about being forced at the whim of an Opposition Member to read out one's press releases because he wants you to read them out to him –

510 Hon. D A Feetham: I didn't ask you to read them!

Hon. Chief Minister: – because he decides that that is what today transparency and accountability means to him.

515 Second, Mr Speaker, thank you very much for having recognised that we were swept to power on 8th December 2011 (Interjection) because, at the last session, his previous... his current leader, sorry, said that we had just 'inched' our way in, but I prefer the description that he has very kindly now afforded us.

520 Mr Speaker: Unlike a court of law, the Speaker has no power to judge the quality of an answer given. The Speaker can judge the quality of the questions put, but not the answers given.

As long as the answers given comply with the practices and procedures, the Speaker has to accept the answer. The answer given by the Hon. the Chief Minister on three occasions to three different questions refers the questioner to two public documents. If that is his answer, that is his answer.

525 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Chief Minister think that Spain's non-compliance with part of – because there are obligations on the Spanish side that have not been complied with on certain aspects of the Cordoba Agreement – does he think that is a good thing or a bad thing for Gibraltar?

530 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are aspects of the Cordoba Agreement that Spain has not yet complied with.

Mr Speaker, one would expect that parties who sign up to international agreements comply with the obligations which are extant on them under those international agreements, or go back and discuss with the parties who are signatories to those agreements why they do not wish to comply and try to renegotiate those parts of the agreement that one does not wish to comply with. One should not simply not comply with agreements.

535 That is the position of the Government and I am sure that he will want to agree with that.

540 Mr Speaker: Before the hon. Member asks, may I just correct terminology on my part in my earlier ruling. I referred to two public documents, but they are not strictly public documents; they are documents in the public domain. A press release by any political party nor a manifesto is not a public document as such, but documents in the public domain. I just stand corrected.

Hon. Chief Minister: They are both, Mr Speaker, as you know, available on our websites and very easily accessed.

545 Mr Speaker: Yes, but they are not public documents as issued by the Government as such; they are documents in the public domain.

The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

550 Hon. D A Feetham: I will come back to the point that I was making before but on another question.

So, is it the Government's policy that, from now on, Members of the Opposition ought to look at the GSLP website, and if the information is on the GSLP website they will not answer any questions on Government policy? Is that the position?

555 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. I know that the hon. Gentleman, when things are not convenient to him, would like to change reality.

560 The reality has been, for the past 30 or 40 years in this House, that if information is publicly available one is not entitled to ask about it. But, of course, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman's question was what was the Government's policy, and he was entitled to ask about that because the Government had not made a policy statement on these issues, so I have told him that the Government's policy is as set out in the press release. That is why I have referred him to the press release. I know that he might tremble at the thought of having to click on gslp.gi – but look, it's not so bad!

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the internet surfer; he is more attune with internet surfing than I am.

565 He said before that countries must comply with their international obligations, when I asked him about whether he thought Spain's non-compliance was a good thing or a bad thing. If Spain were to comply with their side of the Cordoba Agreement, would a GSLP Government comply with our side, which are contingent on their compliance?

570 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I did not say that Governments had to comply with their obligations; I said that Governments had to comply with their obligations or go back to the parties with whom they had signed agreements and attempt to renegotiate those parts with which they were not comfortable, but that parties should not be able to simply not comply with their obligations.

575 Mr Speaker, in case he wants to look it up, this is the concept of pacta sunt servanda under public international law.

The question that he poses, Mr Speaker, nonetheless, is hypothetical and, under the Standing Orders of this House, I am not required to answer hypothetical questions.

580 Hon. D A Feetham: So is he happy with the position that if Spain were to comply with those parts of the Cordoba Agreement that it needs to comply with, the only party that would be non-compliant would be his own GSLP Government, bearing in mind that, of course, it does not seem likely that the tripartite talks will be revived and that the hon. Member will be able to go back and renegotiate the Cordoba Agreement?

585 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, now the hon. Member is going from hypothetical question to hypothetical assumption, something which I am also, I think, not required to deal with, because it all deals with hypotheses.

Mr Speaker, I will tell him this: I thought tonight he was holding brief for the Leader of the Opposition, not for the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Spain. I am starting to get confused!

590 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman does not need to give me or my party any lessons in defending the interests of Gibraltar. Let me remind the hon. Gentleman that it was the Leader of the Opposition who actually very successfully stood toe to toe against both the United Kingdom Government and the Spanish Government on the Joint Sovereignty Agreement.

595 Let me remind the hon. Gentleman that it was this party, not that party, that introduced the new Constitution to Gibraltar, a Constitution that the hon. Member now says provides the people of Gibraltar with the maximum level of self-government short of independence.

Let me remind the hon. Member that it was this party that managed to obtain undertakings from the United Kingdom Government that it would not enter into a process, let alone any agreement, in relation to Gibraltar with which the Government of Gibraltar is not content.

600 Is it not the case that the hon. Member has a problem with the Cordoba Agreement because, in 2006-07, the hon. Members opposite essentially told the people of Gibraltar that they were not going to be abiding by the Schengen arrangements, amongst others – the others were the Permanent Joint Liaison Committee and I think there was something else that they were not going to be complying with in relation to the Cordoba Agreement – and that the reality of the situation is that that is not beneficial for Gibraltar to have a situation where a Government of Gibraltar unilaterally turns round and says, 'We are not complying with this international agreement that has been reached between the Government of Gibraltar, the United Kingdom Government and the Kingdom of Spain,' and that it is just another example of the philosophy underpinning the party opposite, or the parties opposite, which is confrontation rather than seeking normality in relations between ourselves and our neighbours, and the proverbial sticking two fingers up at Spain rather than finding sensible solutions and sensible agreements that benefit both sides of the frontier.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I forget which party the hon. Gentleman was in in 2007, but it is a matter of historical record so I am sure I can check.

Mr Speaker, the policy of the Government is not to capitulate when Gibraltar is put under pressure. Let me remind the hon. Gentleman that it was the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition who has the distinction of being the only politician in Gibraltar's history to have told a Spanish audience that he would consider recommending to the people of Gibraltar in referendum an Andorra-style solution.

Hon. N F Costa: Shame! Shame!

Hon. Chief Minister: Rent-a-mob!

Let me remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that the memoirs of a Minister for Europe recently published suggest that similar suggestions were made to him at the time, in 2001, before the joint sovereignty proposals were concocted, and that, therefore, those might have been the very kernel of the proposals that the hon. Gentleman now tells us the Leader of the Opposition went toe to toe with the United Kingdom and Spain on and won.

Let me remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that I thanked Albert Poggio, in answer to the first question I was asked today, for the immense gratitude that the people of Gibraltar owe him, advisedly, about how he helped to ensure that we defeated the joint sovereignty proposals.

Let me remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that there is nothing better, when one is Chief Minister – as the now Leader of the Opposition, then Chief Minister, had in the Hon. the Minister for Employment – to have a Minister or a Leader of the Opposition who was so staunch and so clear on the fundamentals that one could go to the United Kingdom and clearly say, 'Well, look, guys, I'd do it, but Bossano won't wear it,' and that that was the happy situation in which the hon. Gentleman took on 'the United Kingdom and Spain' for having given life to the Andorra-style solution that he might have proposed to Peter Hain.

Mr Speaker, let me remind the hon. Gentleman that it is not his party that selected the Constitution or imposed the Constitution or brought the Constitution, but it was the people of Gibraltar who selected that Constitution in the referendum.

Let me remind, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, although he does not like to hear it, that what I said at the United Nations is not what he says I said. I asked the Committee to tell us whether or not they believed that this Constitution delivered the maximum possible level of self-government to the people of Gibraltar, and if it did not, to tell us why it did not.

So, Mr Speaker, it is all with the hon. Gentleman – 'let me remind, let me remind, let me remind' – but he does not like to be reminded himself.

It is all with the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, how staunch a defender of the interests of Gibraltar the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is today because he comes to praise him, allegedly, not to bury him; but in previous years he might have said the opposite.

Let me remind the hon. Gentleman, Mr Speaker, that I am not here to answer hypothetical questions, so all the ifs and all the buts that he puts lead to a question which does not require an answer in this House.

Let me suggest to the hon. Gentleman that he consider two things. Is he saying that the people of Gibraltar, apart from having built a terminal that has cost us about €83 million, should also build el voladiso in Spain? And is he saying, Mr Speaker, that he is one of those Gibraltarians who will be delighted to show his passport to a Spanish Civil Guard once he is in Gibraltar in order to get the permission of the Spanish Civil Guard to continue to walk along his homeland? But, then again, he is not here to answer questions, thank God. I am here to answer them; he is here to ask them.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, the hon. Gentleman questions what party I was in in 2007. Well, I suppose that, not long ago, being a member of the GSLP and being Leader of the GSLP was but a twinkle in his ambitious Liberal eye because, of course, he started off being a member of the Liberal Party.

I wanted to avoid these type of exchanges with the hon. Member, because I wanted to concentrate just simply on the issues, but it is very difficult with the hon. Member because he continuously degrades the quality of the debate in this House by constantly personalising the debate and constantly referring to the political past of Members on this side of the House.

Let me read to him an interview that he gave with a mutual friend of ours, Dominic Searle from the

Gibraltar Chronicle (Interjection) and I quote:

‘We are condemned, if we choose the GSLP, to confrontation with Spain.’

It is a question that he was asked.

‘Of course, nothing could be further from the truth. I also think that we need to be diplomatic in the way that we deal with our neighbours and that banging the drum does not unnecessarily assist us to progress in our relationship with them.’

Does the Chief Minister think that, in the first seven months of his Government, he has not condemned us to confrontation with Spain, that he has not been undiplomatic and that he has involved himself in a great deal of banging of the nationalistic drum, and does he think that that is to the benefit of Gibraltar?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am relaxed about how history is going to judge these debates and, therefore, the person who one day reads Hansard – I know he and I probably read it, but then again, we don’t matter – will see that all the suggestions and innuendos about who was in what party when, all of that came first this afternoon from the benches of the Opposition. (A Member: Oh!)

So, Mr Speaker, with that relaxed view of what history will determine about whether or not it is I or anybody else who degrades the quality of debate in this House, let me answer the hon. Gentleman by telling him that I am very satisfied with the way that this Government has dealt with all matters since it was elected on 8th December, in particular our relationship with Spain.

But, Mr Speaker, I recognise, from what he is telling me, that it appears that he would have taken a different attitude to somebody saying ‘Gibraltar español!’ Mr Speaker, maybe he might have said, ‘Okay’; not me, Mr Speaker.

It may be that he might have taken a different attitude to that same person saying, ‘El chiste ya se acabó’ – the joke is over. He might have said, ‘Okay’; I say, ‘The joke’s on you, mate.’

If that is banging the nationalistic drum, if defending my country and my people is banging the nationalistic drum, well, Mr Speaker, he and I have very different interpretations of what banging the nationalistic drum is.

I do not believe that we are condemned to anything other than to success under this Government, both in our relationships with Spain and with the many other kingdoms and republics around the world, in particular, Mr Speaker, our best friend in the world, the United Kingdom.

755

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, in relation to Questions 569 and 571, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule with the information requested.

760

ANSWER TO QUESTION 569

Guardia Civil incursions into British Gibraltar Territorial Waters:

2002 - 5 recorded incursions
2003 - 7 recorded incursions .
2004 - 8 recorded incursions .
2005 - 3 recorded incursions.
2006 - 1 recorded incursions.
2007 - 5 recorded incursions.
2008 - 4 recorded incursions.
2009 - 0 recorded incursions.
2010 - 82 recorded incursions
2011 - 280 recorded incursions
2012 up to the 15 June 2012 – 161 recorded incursions

Answer to Question 571

2008/9 no warnings, report for processes or arrests were made.
2009/10 One Spanish National was arrested for fishing whilst using breathing apparatus at Rosia Bay and for being in possession of two illegal nets.
2010/11 Two hundred and four Spanish Nationals were reported for process for fishing from the beach and all persons were cautioned for the offences.
2011/12 Forty six Spanish Nationals were reported for process for fishing from the beach and all persons were cautioned for the offences.
1 April to 19 June 2012 fifteen Spanish Nationals were reported for process. Twelve of these persons were reported for process for fishing from the beach and all persons were cautioned for the offences. Three fishermen were reported for process for using illegal nets and are currently being judicially processed.
The above statistical data is for the period 1 April to 31 March.

In addition, the following fishing "incursions" have been recorded by the RGP since 2004 and were reported to the Cofradia by No. 6 in accordance with the fishing agreement between the Govt of Gibraltar and the Spanish Fishing Cofradia. In this context, when the data was recorded, an "incursion" was an "incursion" in breach of the 1999 agreement. There are no records of data available prior to 2004.

In 2004, 114 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2005, 228 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2006, 122 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2007, 105 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2008, 75 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2009, 33 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2010, 9 fishing incursions were recorded.
In 2011, 12 fishing incursions were recorded.

I must tell him, Mr Speaker, that Spanish fishermen in British Gibraltar territorial waters – it is important that he remember this – has been interpreted to include individuals of Spanish nationality in Gibraltar fishing from Gibraltar, either from the beach or elsewhere.

765

In relation to Question 570, Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the Government has not directly or indirectly, or in any way, urged or suggested to the RGP that it enforce the Nature Protection Act in any particular way, and I can confirm that I am not aware, in my capacity as Chief Minister or otherwise, of any such suggestion to the RGP from what the hon. Gentleman generically calls 'the Convent'.

770

In answer to Question 572, Mr Speaker, I can confirm that no warrants of arrest have been issued against Spanish fishermen for illegal fishing in British Gibraltar territorial waters.

In answer to Question 573, Mr Speaker, no announcement as to the 1999 Fishing Agreement was made on Facebook. The premise of the question is therefore flawed.

Hon. D A Feetham: I note that the figures do not go further back than 2002. Is that because the figures are not available pre-2002 because, in actual fact, I think, from recollection, from my time as Minister for Justice, I think I have seen figures pre-2002.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have asked for all the figures available and, as he can imagine, it is an issue as much of interest to the Government as it is to him. I am told that this is what is available.

If more information is brought to me – and I understand that in the time available what I have been given is what is available in data form; it may be that it is possible to extrapolate for earlier years what data is available into a manageable form – then I am quite happy to share it with him in the next few days because, if it is going to become available, it is going to become available very shortly.

But this is what I have been given as being available. I would not want the House not to have this information. I think it is important information and it helps us to consider the debate. He should, of course, know – if he is talking about 569 – he should know that I have sought from a number of sources that information, not just, for example, from the Port Department but also from the RGP and other sources.

In relation to 571, Mr Speaker, the information there relates to breaches of the 1999 agreement, as it was interpreted at that time and that if something was in keeping with the 1999 agreement it would not have been recorded as an incursion.

Hon. D A Feetham: Could he repeat for my benefit the answer to the question about Facebook, please. I was going through the schedule and I did not quite catch that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Of course, Mr Speaker.

No announcement as to the 1999 Fishing Agreement was made on Facebook. The premise of the question is therefore flawed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he agree that the first time that any Government Minister announced or spoke publicly about whether the Government would be adhering to the 1999 Agreement since the General Election was on 11th March, when the Hon. the Minister for Health, Mr Cortes, answered questions from Mr Kaelan Joyce on Facebook. Does he accept that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that may very well be the case but that is not to make an announcement.

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he accept there is a distinction between a manifesto commitment and the actual announcement of the Government having complied with the manifesto commitment? I note, for example, that the Deputy Chief Minister is phenomenally fond of coming out with a press release listing the many manifesto commitments that they have complied with.

Does he not accept that there is that distinction?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am here for information to be elicited on behalf of the Government not to give opinions about distinctions between announcements and when something is in a press release.

You see, Mr Speaker, our position has been, and is, that we stick to our manifesto. That is what our policies are and I have set out on a number of occasions that this policy is set out in our manifesto, so anyone who knows us knows that our manifesto are our policies. We do not change our policies the day after the Election, as some might.

So, Mr Speaker, I think the position was very clear to everyone.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, look, the Government is constantly boasting about its manifesto commitments that it has been complying with and every single time the hon. Gentleman, Mr Garcia, issues a press release that seems to be a ticking of a box, that is one more manifesto commitment.

Now, does he not accept that, in relation to something as important as the 1999 Agreement, there was at least an obligation on the Government to make some kind of announcement, preferably in this House that, from this day on, the Government is not abiding, or has directed that no one abides, by the 1999 Agreement. Doesn't he agree with me about that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept that what he calls the 'tearing up' of the 1999 Agreement is something of the importance that he tries to give it today in this House for his self-serving purposes because although, of course, that was a very important plank of policy on which we were elected, which was clearly set out in our manifesto, it was so clearly set out in our manifesto that unless the hon. Gentleman is saying that I should have asked the town crier to take our manifesto on 9th December, stand at the Piazza and make and read it out in the form of an announcement... well, Mr Speaker, that is our manifesto, those are our policies.

But, look, I have told the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition in this House and he was here, so he must have heard it, but I know that he wants to have the debate himself on the issue now that Mr Caruana is not here. I have told him that my view, and any independent third party legal observers' view' would be that (a) that was not an agreement and (b) it was void ab initio because it offended the constitution and the rule of law.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not here to defend the 1999 Agreement or debate the 1999 Agreement. We had a debate about that.

We are actually looking at the process that led us into the mess that we are in now. That is what I am asking questions about.

Now, let me just take the hon. Gentleman through the chronology. The hon. Gentleman opposite got elected, got elected... (Interjection by the Chief Minister). I will ask him a question, I'll ask him... he seems to be unduly angry today and it really does not suit him to be angry. He is actually much more effective when he is his jokey self. Let me just give him that advice. (Hon. Chief Minister: He is much more effective when he is quiet!). Alright, but you have to listen to me and you have to answer my questions. Let me take you through the chronology and I will then ask you the question.

The hon. Gentleman opposite got elected into Government on 8th December. Nothing happens in terms of the way the police enforce the Nature Protection Act, absolutely nothing, until Mr Kaelan Joyce, on 11th March asks Mr Cortes, 'Look here, nothing has happened about this. The police continue to enforce the 1999 Agreement in exactly the same way as prior to the General Election. What is going on?' The hon. Gentleman, Mr Cortes, says 'No, no, no, we have directed the police to do x y and z' – and all hell breaks loose.

Now can the hon. Gentleman tell me what was different from Election time to when Mr Cortes made his comments on Facebook. What was different, or what was done differently by this Government that was occurring or what was being done differently in Gibraltar than what was being done prior to the General Election?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to fall into the hon. Gentleman's web because I am not going to base my answer on the false chronology that he has set out.

First of all, there is no 'mess', there is not 'all hell breaking loose' although, clearly, the hon. Gentleman's premise is to try and prove that the answer I gave our mutual friend Mr Searle is contrary to what is happening and therefore he needs to build up, at whatever possible loss or damage to Gibraltar there may be, that it is the Government of Gibraltar that is somehow to blame for what is happening at sea.

Mr Speaker, first of all, anybody who has been observing British-Gibraltar territorial waters for the past 14 days would not describe what is happening there as a 'mess' or as 'all hell breaking loose'. Second, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman obviously does not like my interventions in the Spanish media but clearly follows them. He will know, Mr Speaker, that when I appeared on a television programme late in the evening on a Saturday from the north of Gibraltar, an intervention which he described as not statesmanly because his definition of statesmanly is the only one that matters in his world – so be it. What was said on that programme was that Gibraltar was divided on the issue because they – the GSD, Mr Caruana in particular – had brought the Fishing Agreement to the House and were defending it. Today he says he is not defending the Fishing Agreement. (Interjection) Well, Mr Speaker, he might like to know that the Spanish media do not take that approach – the mere fact that he is asking these questions is being referred to in the Spanish media as him and his party continuing, as they had set out to do last time, to defend the 1999 Agreement in this Parliament.

Well, Mr Speaker, so be it. That is what they are elected for. They are elected to defend in this Parliament the things which they believe are right and if they did an agreement in 1999 as a Government, although he then, although he does not like to be reminded, was a member of this party not of that party, but they did an agreement in 1999. Well, look Mr Speaker, so be it. Let them defend it, but let them at least have the political integrity to say that they are defending it.

And, Mr Speaker, if Gibraltar is divided on the subject because they are taking the same line as Señor Landaluce and as the Palacio de Santa Cruz and as Mr Margallo, (Members: Oh!) look, so be it, Mr Speaker. Spain...

It is a shame indeed, Mr Speaker, but so be it. It is a shame that Gibraltar is divided but they are the ones dividing and so be it!

But, look, Mr Speaker, Spain is divided on the trilateral because the Partido Socialista Obrero Español – the PSOE – presently the Opposition, in many instances continues to defend the trilateral and says only that it was suspended because the now Leader of the Opposition, then Chief Minister, wished to bring sovereignty into the discussions. Mr Speaker, our position on that is well known, and I am not going to repeat it here because, if I repeat that, why should I not repeat our press release of 2006?

I do not recognise any of what the hon. Gentleman wants to set up as the hypothesis into which he draws me for an answer, which will give him the self-serving result that he is seeking. For us the position is so naturally and intuitively clear that we have made the position known, in Gibraltar in this Parliament, in Gibraltar in our manifesto, in Gibraltar in press releases, in Gibraltar in Facebook, in Gibraltar in face-to-face contacts with people that we meet and explain our policies to; and, internationally, as well.

We do not mind defending the position that we have taken, that the 1999 Agreement is void ab initio, that it is contrary to the rule of law and contrary to the Constitution. Why doesn't he want to get up and say that he is defending the 1999 Agreement? Let him have the courage of his convictions and say to this House that he sides with Margallo and Landaluce and Arias Cañete, and everybody else – there is no shame in that. If you believe it, you believe it!

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he really has learned well at the feet of the master, Mr Bossano, because he really does not give me a straight answer to a question. (Interjection by the Chief Minister)

But, Mr Speaker, he knows as well as I that, in 1999, I was not a member of the party opposite and I was not even in Gibraltar. But let me tell you – because I was in the UK, as he often is very fond of actually pointing out – let me tell you one thing, that if, in 1999, I had considered the terms of the 1999 Agreement and if I were to be intellectually honest with myself, I would have come to the conclusion that the principles underpinning the 1999 Agreement were good for Gibraltar. And they were good for Gibraltar not least because, in fact, they were the same principles underpinning enforcement of the 1991 Nature Protection Act from 1991 to 1995 or 1997, five of whose years Mr Bossano was Chief Minister of Gibraltar; and, of course, as a good socialist, I would have supported, actually, yes – the principles underpinning the 1999 Agreement are good for Gibraltar because it is simply a re-statement of what was happening when Mr Bossano was Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

He says that I criticise him for being unstatesman, well look, I criticised him for being unstatesman for criticising Mr Caruana on a Spanish programme, that he has done twice, without Mr Caruana being there, and I tell him again in this House to his face that that is unstatesmanlike and it is not about – I can defend the 1999 Agreement but we have already had a debate about the 1999 Agreement – but let me tell him this, that I do not say that the 1999 Agreement, and the Leader of the Opposition does not say, that the 1999 Agreement was the only way that you could skin this particular cat. No, that is not what we are saying. We would not have resiled from the 1999 Agreement because we would not have touched something that was not broken. But there are other ways that he could have dealt with the problem, but what you do not do is make an announcement on Facebook! What you certainly do not do is not give any kind of advance notice to the people that had been affected by this. Now let me ask him this – did he actually talk to the mayors of La Linea or Algeciras, or the fishermen, or did he, more importantly, communicate to the Convent so that the Convent could communicate, or to the United Kingdom Government, so that the United Kingdom Government could communicate to the Spanish Government that your Government was, from a particular date, not going to be abiding by the 1999 Agreement. Now, did he do that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I did not know that the hon. Gentleman had, as his main constituency of support, Spanish fishermen. Alright, well let me try and answer the many points that the hon. Gentleman has made in the lead-up to his question, as follows: Did I communicate to the Convent etc, etc?

Mr Speaker, I believe and I have a lot of respect for the people who make up what the hon. Gentleman generically calls 'the Convent': not enough of them, because I think if there were more of them here it would be even easier to interact with a Government as open and transparent as ours is... I have a lot of respect for them and, therefore, I believe that they will have read our manifesto. Therefore, they will have had communicated to them not just that but so many of the other things that were going to happen on the new dawn of 9th December. They certainly were ready for so many of the other things that we were ready to do on that day.

A Member: So?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I believe that I communicated with the Convent by way of the manifesto. That, and so much else, and everybody else who read the manifesto can understand Mr Speaker that our manifesto, excellent document that it is, leading manifesto ever to have been presented to the people of Gibraltar that it is, has been read far and wide, well beyond the frontiers of Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, I have just bought – and I do not usually share my purchasing foibles with all Members of the Parliament – but I have just bought – and it has been an ambition of mine for many years – the 20 volume Oxford Dictionary, and I bought it Mr Speaker just before Oxford University Press decided that they were never going to print it again. This is the last edition: from now on they will only be available on CD-rom. I will allow the hon. Gentleman to come to my office to peruse the definition of ‘announcement’, if he wishes. It does not mean what the hon. Gentleman would like it to mean for the purpose of this question.

When you repeat something, you are not announcing it Mr Speaker. So, is it, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Gentleman does not just introduce us to a new constituency that is relevant and has to be consulted in Gibraltar when the Government of Gibraltar determines what it is going to do with Spanish fishermen. Is it that he is introducing us to a new concept of Damascene conversion: you see, a Damascene conversion usually happens in the future. One has a Damascene conversion as one goes forward, but the hon. Gentleman is now telling us that he would have had a Damascene conversion (Laughter) if he had read the 1999 Agreement at the time. An Agreement which the party of which he was then a member – unless he allowed his membership to lapse when he was in the United Kingdom, but he came back to form part of its Executive as if he had been a member throughout – was then totally against, and the party which is he is now a member, was totally in favour of.

Is he telling us that this historic Damascene conversion, or Damascene conversion in reverse, would have meant that if he could make a quantum leap he would have made the political leap four years before he did. It is a fascinating concept, Mr Speaker. There are better theologians among us than me, who might want to consider it in careful detail, but what really, Mr Speaker, is worthy of analysis is the fact that anybody who is intellectually honest, and has, not just first year legal training, A level legal training – I do not know whether they do GCSEs, Mr Speaker, GCSE legal training – would know from a cursory perusal of the 1999 Agreement that it is an ‘agreement’ in inverted commas, because it is not signed by anyone, it is a statement by a particular government. It is clearly a document, a policy, that the law of Gibraltar should be broken, by a certain class of people, at a certain time, in a certain place, in a particular way, by the use of nets more than 225 metres from the shore after that date in 1999.

Mr Speaker, that is to drive a coach and horses through the concept of the rule of law. It is to drive a coach and horses through constitutionality and, Speaker, the thing I find most troubling is that (a) he who took an oath for four years not just like I have taken in all the time that I have been in this House, but like only three people have taken – the Hon. the now Leader of the Opposition, himself and the Hon. Mr Licudi, not just to demean ourselves for Queen and country but actually to uphold the rule of law, an oath beyond the oath that normal parliamentarians take, should be defending not just today the 1999 Agreement, but say that he would have defended it back in 1999, that is, Mr Speaker, difficult, if not impossible, for me to reconcile with what is my reality. But the hon. Gentleman may have another reality, and he might want to explain it to us, but perhaps somewhere else, Mr Speaker, because here he is to ask questions and not to explain reality.

And (b), Mr Speaker, the other thing that I find difficult to comprehend, and I consider dangerous is that anybody who has glanced at the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, who has looked both at the Montego Bay version and the 1958 version, who understands customary international law and how it applies to the seas around any territory, not even necessarily anything other than a territory, will know that, from time immemorial, the territorial waters around the shoreline were three miles, based on the cannon-shot rule, and this 1999 Agreement, beyond being a breach of the rule of law, beyond being unconstitutional, actually creates a regime that might be interpreted by our enemies falsely – let me put down that marker – falsely, even though they allowed it to happen for the twelve years they were in Government since it was signed, and I say falsely, Mr Speaker, in the interests of Gibraltar because it is important that I say falsely, in the interests of Gibraltar, but not because of anything they did, that the territorial ambit of Gibraltar law extended only to 225 metres from our shores.

The danger for Gibraltar in respect of the international legal position and the protection of British-Gibraltar territorial waters, our jurisdiction and control over them, the habitat issue on the East side, and the whole jurisprudence which we defend, and have defended, and every Chief Minister in the history of Gibraltar since the 1960’s when this issue became live, has defended, is clearly imperilled by that. (Applause)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if it were somebody on this side of the House that sought to re-open the debate that we had a month ago we would have been brought to order because the reality is that I have asked different types of questions and the hon. Member is seeking to have a debate on the 1999 Agreement.

I do not mind having a debate on the 1999 Agreement but we have had it a month ago, but I am certainly not going to allow the hon. Member, whatever his platitudes and his speeches, off the hook in relation to how we have got into this mess in the first place. Now, does he not accept that, looking back in retrospect, this issue of the 1999 Agreement and how one tears up the 1999 Agreement – call it a memorandum of understanding or whatever it is that you wish to call it – but it has not been dealt with well by the Government side because, for example, you could have actually called in the Mayors of La Linea and Algeciras, the fishermen, in the same way as you are having discussions with them now, because you are having those discussions with them now, and say to them ‘Look here, as from six months’ time the 1999 Agreement is out of the window: we have six months within which to come to an agreement. If we don’t come to an agreement within six months, that is the end of it, chaps.’

Does he not think that is a more intelligent and a more reasonable way of dealing with this particular issue than just simply have Mr Cortes making announcements on Facebook?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, obviously never the twain shall meet.

Mr Cortes did not make an announcement on Facebook and my invitation stands. I am expecting it to arrive – hopefully in the next seven days – I am ‘frasmotie’ with excitement about its arrival and he can come and check the word ‘announcement’. I am sure there will be every possible definition except the one he wants to give it – which is to repeat something that one has already said.

Mr Speaker, he needs to understand that intellectual rigour does not allow somebody to say this memorandum of understanding arrangement policy etc, etc offends the rule of law, let me negotiate with you for the next three months or next six months, or next twelve months how we correct the position. Because then, Mr Speaker, one becomes a participant in the rule of law being broken, that is why, Mr Speaker, our policy, set out in our manifesto, is in explicit terms – it says immediately. Because one cannot tolerate a breach of the rule of law if one is committed to the rule of law and constitutionality. One does not negotiate how to redress unconstitutionality or breaches of the rule of law. One may sit down to discuss new regimes, but one cannot perpetuate, if one has any intellectual rigour, such breaches.

But, Mr Speaker, let us take the hon. Gentleman and his example, and apply it to the manner in which the people who he seems to be holding a brief for have themselves torn up the trilateral agreement – ‘torn up’ is a figurative. Unless I missed it, because the Partido Popular were elected before we were in post, although they were sworn in more or less on the same day as we were elected. I have not seen any correspondence with the previous administration from the Partido Popular saying, ‘Look, chaps, we are thinking of tearing up the trilateral process. Shall we talk about it for three months, or for six?’ No, Mr Speaker, not at all. I will do the Honourable His Excellency the Foreign Minister of the Kingdom of Spain, which I understand is the correct way of referring to a Minister of another country in a Parliament, at least the intellectual honour of saying that he has explained his position. He has said publicly on a number of occasions the trilateral process broke the Spanish dogma on what the position was in respect of recognition of Gibraltar, it elevated it, in his view, to the level of the United Kingdom and Spain and ‘that was anathema and unacceptable to us and the first thing I had to do was to deal with it before, then, writing to Mr Hague, setting out our position in that respect, starting to redress the balance from where the PSOE left us and starting to get the position back for Spain.’

Of course, Mr Speaker, for anybody reading Hansard in 20 years’ time, I do not agree with that position, but that is the position that Mr Margallo has put in the public domain. This Government in respect of the fishing thingy, the memorandum of understanding, agreement, policy etc, whatever you want to call it, took a very clear position. Breach of the rule of law, breach of the constitution, immediate rescission – set out in our manifesto! If people do not read our manifesto, Mr Speaker, so be it. I read the Partido Popular manifesto. The position was set out in their manifesto. Wherever I go, I say that the issue of the trilateral process was set out in the manifesto of the Partido Popular and the issue in respect of the fishing agreement was set out in our manifesto. The people of Spain chose the Partido Popular manifesto and that has to be respected and the people of Gibraltar chose the GSLP Liberal manifesto and that has to be respected.

Mr Speaker, that is the position, so I do not accept any of the premises on which the hon. Gentleman wishes to hang his question. Mr Speaker, frankly, we are having this debate not because I want to have it, because he knows that everything we say here is read in the Palacio de Santa Cruz and is read in both the party headquarters of the PSOE and the Partido Popular and it is demonstrated by the fact that when I was on 1055 that particular programme, the senior Partido Popular international affairs adviser said ‘Caruana ha defendido en el parlamento de Gibraltar el acuerdo de 1999’ – ‘Mr Caruana has defended in the Parliament of Gibraltar the agreement of 1999.’

1060 So, Mr Speaker, it is up to him. We can continue to have this debate here or, if he likes, despite the many years since we have done this, I will have him downstairs for a beer and we can continue it downstairs. I do not think that they can hear what we say over a lager!

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, when he said ‘I’ll see him downstairs’, I thought for a moment that he was going to do what the Hon. the Minister for Employment did a number of months ago and invite me to the ante-room of this Chamber – 1065 Hon. Chief Minister: It’s unlikely to be a mano a mano. Chips and lager, rather than anything else!

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, a glass of wine for me, lager for you. I am partial to wine, rather than larger...

1070 But, look, I have here a dictionary definition of ‘announcement’. It says ‘a notice appearing in a newspaper or public place and announcing something’.

The words that were used by the Hon. the Minister for Health were these, on Facebook:

‘Government does not support the 1999 Agreement and has given a direction to this effect.’

1075 Does he not agree with me that that is an announcement? And does he not agree with me that it is a derogation of everything that is what it is to be parliamentary, to make an announcement of this kind on Facebook, rather than in this Parliament? And does he not agree with me that there is a fundamental distinction between what is in a manifesto commitment and just simply saying to people, ‘No, you read my manifesto,’ and making an announcement about... ‘Well, look, as from this particular date, we have taken this particular position in relation to that manifesto commitment.’

1080 It seems to me that he has a very strange way of dealing with international diplomacy, just simply saying, ‘No, hang on a minute, let the Spaniards read it in our manifesto,’ despite the fact that, perhaps, these individuals – and I am not here to hold a brief for these individuals – I am here to hold a brief for the people of Gibraltar because you have placed us in a monumental mess. That is the reality. And the reality is also that, over the next four years, we will see played out in this House and in politics in Gibraltar a clash of philosophies: the philosophy of this side of the House that says that you fight the battle that is vital to Gibraltar and you do so with intelligence and you do so with reasonableness; and the philosophy going back to the 1980s and Mr Bossano, which basically says that conflict with Spain is the best type of policy with regard to Spain. That is the reality.

1085 Does he not agree with me that that is an announcement, and looking back in retrospect, that you should have dealt with this in a different way?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that the hon. Gentleman wants to say the same thing on a number of occasions and he does not get tired of hearing himself, even if we do get tired of hearing him!

1095 Mr Speaker, I may have a strange way of handling international diplomacy, according to the hon. Gentleman. It appears to be as strange a way as the Hon. His Excellency the Foreign Minister of the Kingdom of Spain, who did not follow what the hon. Gentleman believes to be the right model of international diplomacy. He announced, as his party had done already in its manifesto, what his view was, in keeping with the hon. Gentleman’s definition of ‘announcement’, in relation to the trilateral and that Gibraltar was Spanish and that this ‘joke’ is over etc. So, Mr Speaker, my definition of international diplomacy appears to be the same as that of the Foreign Minister of one of the major European powers, as Spain undoubtedly is.

1100 Mr Speaker, that may be a clash of philosophies, it actually may be a clash of ideologies, but so be it. That is what Parliament is about: debating those issues and those differences. But what I will not accept, however upset the hon. Gentleman may be in his presentation in order to impress the public, is that John Cortes made any announcement.

1105 I am not going to repeat the invitation to come and look at the definition of ‘announcement’ in my dictionary. It is still there, but if he pushes me, I am going to withdraw it, Mr Speaker, because I am very proud of those volumes that I have bought and do not want anybody just thumbing through them.

Mr Speaker, this is not an announcement. The Hon. Mr Cortes said something on Facebook which was 1110 about having given effect to our manifesto. Our manifesto is clear on all of these issues. I do not consider that we are making announcements when we are giving effect to the things in our manifesto. That is just not the way that we understand it.

The hon. Gentleman seems to want me to get up in this House, or in the piazza, and start reading the manifesto. It will then be set out in stone, he will then have considered it announced, and then we can be repeating it.

1115 Mr Speaker, by the definition of ‘announcement’ that he has given to this House, this manifesto has been in the public place, in every letterbox in Gibraltar from which it was not pulled out by people who might not be identifiable. It was read by everybody in Gibraltar who wanted to read the manifesto. It is available online at change.gi and at gslp.gi and at liberal.gi.

1120 I am not going to read from it, Mr Speaker, in order to ensure that everything in it is now deemed announced and only repeated thereafter. It is deemed announced the day that it was published. Otherwise, Mr Speaker, they have to start with ‘It’s time for change’. This manifesto does not contain every commitment we have etc.

1125 Mr Speaker, we made the announcement in exactly the same way as the Partido Popular made their announcement as to the trilateral. In fact, Mr Speaker, as I referred to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, at the last session in this House there were press releases, there were answers to Questions, there were debates, I even think there were motions in 1988, in 1999, in 2000, thereafter. Mr Speaker, the position could not have been clearer. Now what the hon. Gentleman is doing is becoming an apologist for those who might not have read the manifesto and have been caught by surprise. So be it, Mr Speaker.

1130 What we are going to do for the next three-and-a-half years in government, as I have said in every intervention I have made before the Election and after the Election, is always defend the interests of Gibraltar and the people of Gibraltar first and foremost; and second, Mr Speaker, in relations with our neighbour to the north, extend, as we do to every kingdom and every republic in the world, the hand of friendship, co-operation and understanding and, at the same time as I deal with the attacks upon Gibraltar which the Kingdom of Spain unleashes regularly, whether they are in government or we are in government, with what they say is the way that they deal with international diplomacy or what they say is the way we deal with international diplomacy, the attacks are constant. We will rebut the attack, Mr Speaker, and at the same time, as we say to Goliath, ‘You are wrong on that,’ we will extend the hand of friendship, co-operation and understanding. That, Mr Speaker, is the best way, in our judgement, to defend the interests of Gibraltar and the Gibraltarian people.

1140 We are very proud of the work that this Government has done on this and every other issue since 9th December.

The hon. Gentleman can now set up another premise to try and ask me another question to try and catch me out on the basis of his hypotheses, which no doubt will delight those who read this Hansard or hear this debate from Madrid. Up to him – or we can have that beer.

1145 Hon. D A Feetham: If the hon. Member thinks that what he says is in the best interests of everybody in Gibraltar and what he says is in the best interests of Gibraltar has to be accepted as gospel as being in the best interests of Gibraltar, or when he says, ‘We have got to defend Gibraltar in this particular way,’ that everybody has to accept that as being gospel, well, he has got another think coming. I am afraid that we will do our duty, as an Opposition, to point out what have been glaring inadequacies, glaring fluffing of lines by the Government, and by the Chief Minister in particular, in relation to how this issue has been handled.

1150 But look, I note, and I am giving him one more opportunity before I sit down –

Mr Speaker: I do not think you –

1155 Hon. D A Feetham: – and I do not ask him –

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

1160 Hon. D A Feetham: But he has not answered this question, Mr Speaker!

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, I have.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, he has not answered.

Mr Speaker: I heard a question, but I may not –

Hon. D A Feetham: What actually has happened? What happened from the day that the hon. Member was elected as Chief Minister on 8th December, to March when the Hon. Mr Cortes made his comments – let's put it neutrally – on Facebook, what actually happens, in relation to the enforcement of the 1991 Act, which was different to the way it was being done before, because even Kaelan Joyce was actually complaining 'nothing is happening'.

The hon. Member may refuse to give me an answer – he has already refused to give me an answer on something as important as the Cordoba Agreement, but that is to the detriment of proper debate, it is to the detriment of the people listening who actually want to know the answers to this question, and it is also to the detriment of the democratic process – and he claims to be a defender of democracy in Gibraltar!

Hon. Chief Minister: Look, but Mr Speaker, nobody who is listening is foolish enough to think that what we are doing is in any way affecting the quality of democracy in any manner other than to improve it so substantially that the hon. Members opposite now get 10 chances a year to ask this Government questions, when we used to get two or three to ask the hon. Gentlemen questions. (Applause)

Nobody who is listening is foolish enough to think that we give less full answers than the hon. Members gave when they were on this side of the House. Nobody who is listening is foolish enough to think that the hon. Gentleman is doing anything other than seeking the immediate oxygen of publicity for his ambition to lead his party and to try and win a General Election.

Nothing that he is doing or saying in the premise of his question is true because, Mr Speaker, just because I do not read out to him the press release from 2006 does not mean I am not giving the information. Nothing about that, Mr Speaker, suggests that I am trying to thwart the democratic process.

Mr Speaker, it is quarter to five in the afternoon on the first day of summer. To have to sit here and listen to this is not to be seriously challenged by an Opposition asking questions; it is to be teased by somebody who is intent on throwing more bait about this Chamber than a Spanish fisherman needs to throw when he casts his nets illegally in Gibraltar waters and, really, Mr Speaker, I am not going to fall for any of that bait.

Hon. D A Feetham: So the answer is that you refuse to give me an answer to a quite reasonable question.

The hon. Member is very good at the wide platitudes and speeches in this House, but the purpose of the process in this House is for us to ask questions. It is a perfectly reasonable question, and the Hon. the Chief Minister has completely refused to answer it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have answered it in a way that the hon. Gentleman does not like, namely we announced in our manifesto what our policy was. It was set out previously in answers to Questions and in this House. That would have been communicated to the law enforcement agencies with immediate effect on 9th December 2011, as the regime that now was relevant.

That issue was confirmed by the Hon. the Minister for the Environment in a communication on Facebook, and that is the position. The hon. Gentleman asks me again and again and again the same question, in the hope that maybe, if he shakes the tree enough, an apple might fall, which, if he eats it, might convert him from an electoral frog into an electoral prince, so that he could become the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. Well, it is not going to work, Mr Speaker.

The answers have been given. A proper debate is always a delight for the Government, if the hon. Gentleman wants to put a motion, but in this place where we are now on the Agenda, Question Time requires that they seek information. We have given the information. Just because they do not like it does not mean that they come back again and again and ask the same question.

Commissioner of Income Tax Arrears agreements

Clerk: Question 574, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister confirm that the Government has instituted a policy to allow 1220 the Commissioner of Income Tax to have discretion to enter into arrears agreements in appropriate circumstances?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1225 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he elaborate on the principles underpinning those circumstances in which arrears agreements will be entered into?

1230 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that is a matter for the Commissioner of Income Tax because the discretion is his to exercise.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, not exactly.

In his manifesto, (Interjection) the hon. Member... He is talking to the Minister for Justice.

1235 Hon. Chief Minister: I am allowed to – (Interjections)

Hon. D A Feetham: In his manifesto, he said that this would be limited to circumstances of hardship. That is the principle underpinning the circumstances in which these agreements would be entered into.

1240 Is he now saying that there is a different principle, or no principle at all, because it is the Commissioner who simply exercises discretion and that is it – that the principles are to be determined by the Commissioner of Income Tax?

1245 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is none of those. It is that the Commissioner of Income Tax exercises his discretion in cases of hardship.

Hon. D A Feetham: So, effectively, the principle underpinning these agreements is if there is genuine hardship. That is the principle underpinning it.

1250 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I really think that the hon. Gentleman needs to give some thought to things. If there is no hardship, then how would the Commissioner of Income Tax have his discretion engaged? Because the individual does not wish to pay, and the Commissioner for Income Tax might want to consider whether he allows him to pay in a different way, or not pay at all? It must be, Mr Speaker, perforce, a discretion that is engaged on hardship.

1255 If the hon. Member stops and gives it some thought, he might not get up and ask the same question again.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say that the hon. Member... It is taking him all of seven months, since he became Chief Minister, to exhibit the kind of characteristics that he was criticising the now Leader of the Opposition when he was Chief Minister, because he is high-handed in the way that he answers the questions. It is a perfectly legitimate question to ask. You could have other criteria, other than hardship.

1260 So the answer is, effectively, it is limited to circumstances of hardship – that is the answer, is it?

1265 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether to take that as a compliment, because the hon. Gentleman spent most of September to December saying that the characteristics he now accuses me of having, which I accused the Hon. the then Chief Minister of having, were the ones required to run Gibraltar effectively and that people should ensure that they voted for him. So I do not know whether he is saying that he is going to go out and campaign for me... I do not know but, frankly, it might be the kiss of death, and that may be the last thing I need.

1270 I have made the position very clear. If you have some intellectual rigour, you will understand that hardship needs to be engaged in these circumstances before a discretion can be exercised. The hon. Gentleman's question is generic. I will give him at least the opportunity of saying that the way that he has phrased his question might engage corporate entities and corporate entities cannot feel hardship, because hardship is an emotion or an issue which is engaged when dealing with human beings. But financial hardship would be something that involves a corporation.

1275 There is no intention, Mr Speaker, on the part of the Government, to ever create a discretion in policy or in statute which can be exercised by a senior civil servant in cases where people have the ability to comply with requirements of the law, whether it is payments or otherwise, and they do not wish to do so with the alacrity that the law requires. That is not something we would ever consider. But where there is hardship, Mr Speaker – and it must be financial hardship – then the senior civil servant should have a discretion, in our view. The senior civil servant in this instance is the Commissioner for Income Tax, Mr Speaker.

1280 I think it is pretty clear now, unless the hon. Gentleman just wants to have an argument for the sake of having one. Anybody who has seen the Monty Python sketch where somebody knocks on the door that says ‘Arguments’ and is told by the person sitting behind the desk, ‘No, I’m afraid this isn’t Arguments,’ and the fellow then says, ‘Yes, it is!’ – ‘No, it isn’t!’ etc... Unless that is what he wants, Mr Speaker, the discretion is for cases of financial hardship, in the case of individuals’ hardship. That is it, Mr Speaker.

1285 That is the position. Why should it be otherwise?

Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Member is like an onion: you peel away the layers and... you have to peel away the layers before you actually get to the answer.

1290 Hon. Chief Minister: I just said this to make him cry, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: He started off... At least now I have got the answer, but he could have answered in this particular way at the first attempt.

1295 First of all, the Hon. the Chief Minister started by saying to me, ‘No, no, it’s a matter for the Commissioner of Income Tax.’ Then, when I said to him, ‘Well, actually, your manifesto says that it is going to be limited to circumstances of hardship,’ he said, ‘Yes, yes, it’s hardship.’ (Interjection) Then, in the middle of the answer he talks to me about emotional hardship and he ends up by concluding, ‘No, no, no, it only applies to financial hardship.’

1300 I do not want to have an argument with anybody. I have tried to be restrained in the way that I have conducted the questions this afternoon, despite the fact that the hon. Gentleman has peppered his answers with huge amounts of personalisation directed at me. Look, I could have, in fact, at any point mentioned and reminded the hon. Member of the role that he played in my exit from the GSLP and the letters of resignation that he drafted –

1305 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. D A Feetham: – of the then executive members, but I did not, because I want to keep this just simply on the issues. That is all. Nobody is trying to argue here.

1310 Mr Speaker: Okay, the –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just deal with this. First of all, I am not going to get involved in debating his version of things that happened many years ago, which is as warped and as thwarted of reality as everything else that he says in this House, about the letters which he probably drafted etc.

1315 The hon. Gentleman compares me to an onion. I am not going to compare him to any vegetable in particular. Well, in fact, Mr Speaker, I should probably not go any further in respect of that analogy.

We have made the position very clear in respect of what the discretion is and the Commissioner of Income Tax. He was asking us about the manifesto. The position is clear: the discretion is there – how could it be anything other than hardship?

1320 I think he and I owe the listening public in Gibraltar not to continue to play out those issues which he has with me, which I certainly do not have with him, as the pretext (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) for every question that we are going to have in this House and every debate that we are going to have in this House. Can he just, please, keep it to asking questions, because, Mr Speaker, I am very keen to keep it to answering questions.

1325 But look, Mr Speaker, if he wants to put things, to needle and to push and to suggest que el que tira la piedra y esconde la mano and he throws it there and he thinks I am not going to pick it up, Mr Speaker, I will give him back as hard as he throws, but we owe the public to leave those public issues aside, to debate matters in this Parliament with maturity and with respect, and to respect Question Time as what it is and not to turn it into a debating time.

1330

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I associate myself entirely with the words of the Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker: Thank you.

1335

Hon. D A Feetham: Let's hope that he does as he has so eloquently outlined just a few moments ago.

1340

Tax breaks
Software/IT and media industries

Clerk: Question 575, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1345

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state what tax breaks the Government envisages introducing for the use of Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for research and development in the software/IT industries which are now established in Gibraltar, as well as productions by television, cinema and the music industry?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1350

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, when the Government considers it appropriate, we will make announcements about tax breaks in this and any other areas.

1355

Hon. D A Feetham: But the Government, in principle, is committed to effectively doing what I have asked him in that particular question, is it not?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Government, in principle, is committed to doing what it says about these particular areas in its manifesto, where we have announced our policies in respect of this matter.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can he tell me whether there is any particular timeframe that he has in mind in relation to this particular commitment?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only thing I would tell the Minister is that it is usual for announcements in respect of taxation to be made at Budget time.

1365

Office of Fair Trading Timeframe for introduction

1370

Clerk: Question 576, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state when the Government will be in a position to introduce an Office of Fair Trading?

1375

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1380

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, one is tempted to remind the House of the answer given by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister, about Members of the Opposition not being timekeepers of the Government's manifesto commitments; but so be it.

Mr Speaker, the Government is in the process of drafting the necessary legislation to create an Office of Fair Trading. This will result in a Command Paper being published to allow consultation in respect of the manner of establishment of the Gibraltar OFT.

1385 Unite and GGCA representatives
Meetings with Chief Minister

Clerk: Question 577, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1390 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state how many times in an official capacity he has met Victor Ochello of Unite and Michael Tampin of GGCA Prospect?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1395 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I think it is just GGCA, by the way.

Mr Speaker, it is not possible to provide an accurate number for this question as I have met both Mr Ochello and Mr Tampin on very many occasions indeed since 9th December on official business, either on the basis of pre-arranged meetings or because they have asked to see me at short notice or have attended meetings I have had arranged with others. The non-numerical answer is on very many occasions indeed; but, anyway, who's counting?

Hon. D A Feetham: Has he spoken to either of these two individuals – or have they raised with him, I should say, the use of cadets from the Future Jobs Strategy within the public service? Has that been something that has been discussed at all between you?

1405 Hon. Chief Minister: I am not going to come to this House, however transparent and accountable I may be, to tell the hon. Gentleman the content of my conversations with every trade unionist that I meet, but I can tell him, Mr Speaker, as this is a very specific question, that it has not been raised with me at all.

Engagement of private consultants
Details

1415 Clerk: Question 578, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state how many private consultants have been engaged by the Government since 9th December 2011, providing details of the areas where they have been engaged and the cost in relation to each engagement?

1420 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question with Questions 579 to 581 and 587 and 589.

1425

Ministerial travel costs
Details

1430 Clerk: Question 579.

1435 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister provide a breakdown of travel costs of each Minister, including the Chief Minister, on official business since 9th December 2011, giving a breakdown by Minister, the purpose of the trip, the accommodation stayed at by the Minister, the cost of air fares, chauffeur-driven cars, accommodation and subsistence?

1440

Clerk: Question 580.

1445

1450

Clerk: Question 581.

1455

1460

Clerk: Question 587.

1465

1470

Clerk: Question 589.

1475

1480

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, in relation to Questions 578, 587 and 589, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule with the information requested, which is winging its way to him.

In relation to Question 579, the information requested has already been published online on the Government of Gibraltar website.

Mr Speaker, in answer to Question 581, since the General Election, there have been a total of 107 property sales, amounting to £6,322,714.58 for the credit of Government-owned property companies.

1520 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to the travel costs of Ministers, I did actually look at the website, and the information provided on the website only went up, I think, until March. Is he certain that that is the position at the present moment? For example... and I do not know... An interesting question would be whether the 1525 obligation of the Government to provide the information is at today's date or at the date that the question was actually asked. But is he saying that the information, for example, in terms of the cost of the hon. Gentleman's visit to the United Nations, is also now currently on the website?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether the information relating to my trip to the United Nations is on the website. I know that when the costs are invoiced and they are processed for payment and the payment is made, those costs are then put on the website. Whether that is happening now on a 1530 quarterly basis, because of the new arrangements that we have as to purchasing and travel, I do not know the answer to that and I am quite happy to find out. It may be that there is now more information on than when he checked when he asked the question but still not information which is correct for the past four weeks or five weeks because of the way that the billing happens.

The hon. Gentleman will know that I used to ask these questions when I was in Parliament and that, very 1535 often, two or three months after a trip had occurred I would be told by the then Chief Minister, 'Well, look, yes, I did go on that trip but we don't yet have the final costs in because we haven't had the invoices processed for payment.'

What is processed for payment is reflected online as paid and as cost incurred. So, Mr Speaker, if he wants to review what those costs are on the website and then ask us questions about it, or if he wants to call me in 1540 my office, Mr Speaker, I will always take his call if he is concerned that there may be something... Perhaps not immediately – I may be negotiating with Spanish fishermen! If he is concerned that there is a cost which might have been incurred which is not up on the website, I am happy to look at it but, as far as I am told, Mr
Speaker, all of that information is now, when processed, put up.

1545 Hon. D A Feetham: Is there any reason why, at this particular session of the United Nations, the Hon. the Chief Minister also travelled with, from the photograph I saw, Michael Llamas, Clive Golt, Gareth Flower, Ernest Gomez and also the Deputy Chief Minister; and does he think that so many people going on a trip of this nature provides the taxpayer value for money, though the necessity issue probably answers the question 1550 about the taxpayer getting value for money.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do, but I am very disappointed that we took that many people. I was very keen to take one more. I extended an invitation, as the hon. Gentleman knows, to the Leader of the Opposition to travel with us, and he refused the invitation for reasons that I think he should be allowed to deal 1555 with, not us.

I considered everybody who came on the trip to be central to the trip. The cost of travel, he will be delighted to know, is per individual about a third of what it was when the Hon. the now Leader of the Opposition used to travel, because we shop around for our tickets and, therefore, taking a larger number has cost much less than it would have under the old regime.

Mr Speaker, I think it is very important in the way that this Government is going to continue its fantastic 1560 international diplomacy, to engage with the United Nations, also with the Chief Legal Officer, to engage with the Deputy Chief Minister, because we met also, he will know, with the UK mission representative in New York. We met with other individuals from the Committee of 24 as we progress our policy, Mr Speaker, of expanding representation of Gibraltar at that august body, including taking young individuals and pursuing the possibility of legal challenges etc.

1565 Mr Speaker, I am now paid to make these judgements. I made it; I think it was appropriate. I wish I could have taken one more. I hope I can take one more in October. That is the way that we believe that we best defend the interests of the people of Gibraltar at the United Nations.

1570 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, he does not appear to have liked my comments about the way that he conducts diplomacy. There is no need for the hon. Gentleman to be offended by it; I did not mean it in an offensive way.

But is it the intention, in the future, of the Government to be taking as many as, effectively, six individuals to the United Nations? Is that the policy for the future as well?

1575 Hon. Chief Minister: I am sorry to tell the hon. Gentleman, and disappoint him, but he is not able to offend me.

But anyway, Mr Speaker, the position of the Government has been explained on a number of occasions and I am surprised that he is asking me about it. Our position is to take many more Gibraltarians to the United Nations to expose them to the work that the UN does. So, not only am I intending to take my Press Officer, my Chief Legal Officer, my Deputy Chief Minister, my Chief Secretary etc, for all the reasons that that is important, Mr Speaker; I am also intending to take young people from the comprehensive schools at a time which does not interfere with their exams, which now, unfortunately, every year seems to include exams in June, whether one is in what we might have called the third form or the fifth form. I am intending to take, if other NGOs want to take up the offer, other NGOs both to the C24 and to the Fourth Committee. The issue this time was to engage with the secretariat in order to open up those possibilities for Gibraltarians.

1580 Mr Speaker, I think this is one of the real clashes of philosophies, if he wants to call it that – I call it a clash of ideologies – between the two parties. We believe in the value of addressing the United Nations and engaging with the United Nations, and that, Mr Speaker, is what the people of Gibraltar have chosen, because we specifically set that out in our manifesto. Sorry – I should have said announced in our manifesto.

1590 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I doubt whether we will be quibbling about clashes of philosophy in relation to how many people travel to the United Nations. (Laughter) When I spoke about the clash of philosophies, I was speaking about something a little bit more fundamental than that.

1595 Mr Speaker, I also am very grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister for the answers in relation to the official cars. Is his Government continuing with the policy that was in place when we were in Government in relation to how official cars are actually booked out to Ministers, which is through the Chief Secretary's Office; or has he set up a different criteria for the booking of cars for Government Ministers?

1600 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the way that cars are booked for Ministers I do not think is one of the big ideological differences between us. As I understand it, this was the mechanism that was in place and the information has come from the Office of the Chief Secretary, because that is where the central booking system is for Ministers' cars.

1605 Hon. D A Feetham: So, effectively, the system in place – because, of course, this is an asset at taxpayers' expense, effectively, the use of an official car – was that one had to make an official request to the Chief Secretary's Office for the use of the official car for a particular function or in a particular way. Is he saying that continues to be the position today?

1610 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am in the happy position of not having to do any bookings for an official car, as the hon. Gentleman will know, but I am reliably informed by all my colleagues that that is the position that is in place, or the standard that is in place, namely that one fills in a form and submits it to the Chief Secretary, and that is how one obtains a vehicle if one is a Minister.

1615

GDC employees
Representations re grievances

1620 Clerk: Question 582, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state whether he has received any representations or requests for a meeting concerning any grievances by GDC employees; and if so, by whom and when were the representations or requests for a meeting made?

1625 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have been requested by Unite to meet in respect of some issues arising at the GDC.

The request for the meeting was made by one of the GDC shop stewards some two or three weeks ago for 1630 a date to be fixed as soon as possible after they send me the list of issues for discussion, which I might add, Mr Speaker, has not yet been received by me.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I appreciate what he is saying, that the list of issues has not been received by him.

1635 He may have heard some of the exchanges between myself and the Hon. the Minister for Employment, Mr Bossano and, effectively, there are two issues. The principal issue is the issue of the inability, as a consequence of a policy that has been instituted by Mr Bossano, of GDC employees and Civil Service employees who were formerly GDC employees not being effectively able to compete for the posts that are GDC posts, or formerly GDC posts, whether they be within the Civil Service that those posts were formerly GDC, or within the GDC, and the GDC employees at the time, through their union, felt that not allowing cross-promotion prospects was a unilateral variation of their contract.

1640 I note that on 27th January 2012 a letter was written on behalf of the union and it was copied... It was a letter written to Brenda Cumbo, and it was in fact copied to you, the Chief Minister of Gibraltar. It followed a letter of 26th January, which was to Mr Bossano, copied to the Deputy Chief Minister, and it said this:

1645 'This has obliged many affected members who required further clarification of their terms and conditions to take a decision under duress.'

1650 – because Mr Bossano was only giving up to 27th January in order to make the decision as to whether to stay in the Civil Service or to cross over to the GDC, or vice versa.

1655 'The fact that their genuine and reasonable request for further information and time to consider the same had been dismissed out of hand and without even the courtesy of a written reply has left many of the said members very distressed. Many of these members feel that they have been bullied into making an abrupt decision and go forward in an atmosphere of uncertainty, distrust and fear.'

Mr Speaker: I think there was –

1660 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Chief Minister join with me to condemn any conduct, whether it be from his Government or wherever it may be, that effectively makes GDC employees feel as if they are moving forward in an atmosphere of uncertainty, distrust and fear and that they have been bullied into making decisions that are important to their future?

1665 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will discuss with Unite what they consider to be the issues in relation to the GDC when they give me a letter telling me what they think those issues are, not on the basis of what the hon. Gentleman tells me he says the two issues are.

Mr Speaker, he has had the debate on this letter and all the rest of it with Mr Bossano on a number of occasions in this House, but there are many other things that we could debate. He could bring a motion for things, if he wants to debate them. This is Question Time, to elucidate information.

1670 Mr Speaker, my position is that I will meet with Unite to discuss the issues in respect of the GDC, such as they may be, whether they are the ones the hon. Gentleman has mentioned or others.

1675 Frankly, it was this Government, when in Opposition, that circulated a leaflet saying 'Ban the bully' because we believe that bullying has no place in the workplace. Mr Speaker, we believe we achieved that on 9th December and we will soon be bringing to Parliament, as soon as we are able, the laws on banning bullying in the workplace, which would, in effect, outlaw all the sort of behaviour that the hon. Gentleman is saying is referred to – not that I recognise that any behaviour of that sort has occurred since 9th December.

1680 Spanish-national public sector workers
Grievances re terms of engagement

Clerk: Question 583, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1685 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state whether there has been, or whether he has received, any representations or requests for a meeting concerning any grievances by Spanish nationals engaged in the public sector about their terms of engagement; and if so, by whom and when were the representations or requests for a meeting made?

1690 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, no such representations or requests have been received.

1695 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the hon. Member aware – or the Hon. Chief Minister, I should say – is he aware of a discontent within certain Departments, one of them being the Care Agency, and in particular amongst... The employees who feel most vulnerable are, in fact, Spanish nationals in respect of the renewals of their contracts, which include... I will read the clause to the hon. Gentleman. I quote:

1700 ‘You agree, pursuant to section 63B of the Employment Act, to exclude and waive all claims in respect of rights under the provisions of sections 59 and 64(2) of the Employment Act to have this agreement renewed upon expiry. Please note that this extension of employment does not give rise to an expectation of permanent employment at the expiry of the term.’

1705 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am aware of that concern. It was raised with me and with the hon. Lady, the Minister for Social Services, by officers of Unite. Those clauses actually come from contracts and renewal letters which were in place when what he likes to call his Government was in office before 9th December, and Mr Speaker, as a result of representations from Unite, both of those clauses have been removed from contracts going forward.

1710 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well, I congratulate the Chief Minister in relation to that. (Interjection by the Hon. the Chief Minister) No, these particular clauses may have been included in first contracts, not in second contracts.

1715 Can he confirm this: that there is no general policy, by the Government that he leads, of effectively – I am looking for a less emotive word, but none comes to mind – the culling of Spanish workers from the public service in order for them to be replaced by Gibraltarian labour? Can he say that there is no such policy?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Gentleman seriously alleging that the Government of Gibraltar will put itself in breach of the Treaty of Rome? I am sure he is not. There will never be any discrimination on the grounds of nationality in employment by this Government.

Public sector
Grievances re terms of engagement

1725 Clerk: Question 584, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state whether he has received any representations or requests for a meeting concerning any grievances by workers engaged in the public sector about their terms of engagement; and if so, by whom and when were the representations or requests for a meeting made?

1730

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1735 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, other than in respect of the answer given already in respect of the GDC, let me assure the hon. Gentleman that, as I am sure was the case before the Election, the Office of the Chief Minister receives almost daily representations of grievances by workers engaged in the public sector. I deal with all of those that have an industrial relations aspect, and the Chief Secretary or the Head of Human Resources deal with any which involve administrative concerns.

1740

Spanish mayors Discussions re Gibraltar issues

1745

Clerk: Question 585, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1750

Hon. D A Feetham: How many times has the Chief Minister met a mayor of Spain since the General Election where he has spoken about issues affecting Gibraltar, identifying the mayor, the location of the meeting and the date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1755

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, all meetings I have had with any Spanish mayor have been disclosed in the media.

1760

Hon. D A Feetham: Does he not have the details in front of him so that he can at least account to the Opposition in this House by providing the answer to the question in this House? Or is it again evidence of a change of practice by the Government, by the Members opposite, of effectively not answering the question and referring to press releases or information that is in public... (Interjection)

Surely the hon. Gentleman must recognise that he is, here, accountable to this Parliament and is, here, accountable to us on this side of the House. Does he not have the figures there with him so that he can provide me with the answer?

1765

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am really quite taken aback by that question, for this simple reason. When I read this, Mr Speaker, I thought the hon. Gentleman was trying to get me to disclose any secret meetings I might have had with any Spanish mayor and account for a secret meeting: 'Ah, so you met Mr Bosch, who is the Mayor of San Roque, and you didn't say that you were doing so. What did you talk about? Why didn't you publish it?'

1770

Mr Speaker, I did not imagine for one moment that what he wanted was that I should bring a list of the... from memory, I think it is two or three occasions I have met Miss Araujo; on one occasion I met Mr Bosch; I think on two occasions I have met Mr Landaluce. If what he wants is a list and then he wants to go through the list and say, 'What did you talk about on the Thursday that you met Landaluce? What did you talk about on the Friday that you met Araujo?' I do not think that is the sort of debate that Parliament is about. I do not consider that is what openness and transparency and accountability to the Opposition is about.

1775

The hon. Gentleman knows, because he is deemed to have access to the media, all the occasions on which I have met Spanish mayors. He knows from the media what it is that I have discussed with them. If he wishes to ask me anything about that, I am quite happy to disclose information or have a debate with him about it, but if what he is saying is, 'You've got to come with a list,' he knows what the information is, because it is not being hidden, it has all been disclosed.

1780

What he cannot do, Mr Speaker – what he cannot do, Mr Speaker – is ask me about things which are in the public domain and force me to bring a list of things which are in the public domain. Otherwise, Mr Speaker, his next question could be, 'Will the Hon. the Chief Minister say how many press releases the Government has issued since 1st January?' and I will be forced to come to this House and say – 'I don't know; Mr García is now in charge, so there are many – Three hundred and fifteen since 1st January up to the date of the question.'

1785

That is publicly available information. That does not mean that I am not accounting to the Opposition. I would not be accounting to the Opposition if there had been a meeting with a Spanish mayor that has not been disclosed and I am trying to hide it, but that is not the situation. That is not how I do business, Mr Speaker. I am totally accountable, I reflect in the media any of these meetings, and the hon. Gentleman is free to ask me about those meetings and I will answer.

1790

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is not here to speculate about the purpose of my Question. That is not his job. Indeed, he talks about debate: the purpose of Question Time is not, as he has emphasised on a number of occasions, to have debates. It is about me asking questions and him providing me with the answer.

1795

Does he really expect me to effectively collate every single article – every single article – that comes out in the Chronicle (Interjection) – every single article that comes out in the Chronicle (Interjection) – and say, ‘Alright,’ and then not be able to ask a reasonable question about, ‘Well, look, how many times have you met the mayors of these –

Hon. Chief Minister: Point of order, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Order! Point of order.

Hon. Chief Minister: Standing Order 17.(1)(xv) provides that:

‘a question shall not be asked seeking information set forth in accessible documents or ordinary works of reference.’

Therefore, Mr Speaker, given that I have confirmed to him that I have not had any meeting which has not been disclosed in the media, the Question seeks information which is set forth in accessible documents or ordinary works of reference. That is why I am refusing to answer it.

But, Mr Speaker, I am saying that if he wants to ask me about the substance of those meetings, which he must have followed like every other member of our community, I am happy to engage with him on those issues.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is just simply not acceptable to have a situation where you are expecting somebody to effectively collate every single article that has come out (Interjection) and then, because you can collate every single article (Interjection) that has come out, on that basis I would have to collate every single article in four years’ time, over four years, and say, ‘Right, well, there have been 19 meetings with mayors on the other side of the border.’ I do not think that that is a proper interpretation of Standing Orders, with respect to the Chief Minister.

It is not a difficult question. He has proved true to form yet again, because the Hon. Chief Minister... It is not only on this particular question, but it is on other questions during this session of Parliament. He had refused to answer perfectly reasonable questions, indicating that I should go back to 2006, rather than indicate what Government policy is on something as important as the Cordoba Agreement. If today was a test of his democratic credentials, then I am afraid that he has failed them abysmally.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, today was a test of his industry. He has failed it abysmally, because he has shown how lazy he wants to be. He does not want to research (Interjections) what the policy is; he wants it en bandeja, on a tray. He does not want to go back to the policy statement of 2006; he does not want to read the manifesto. He wants me to get up in this Parliament, as if I did not have better things to do, and read him a press release and read him my manifesto. He does not want, Mr Speaker, to engage on the substance of what I discussed with the mayors. He wants a list, Mr Speaker. That is what he is reduced to, Mr Speaker. He is asking for lists. That is the Opposition that Gibraltar will have if he succeeds in his ambition and becomes the Leader of Her Majesty’s Loyal Opposition, because I do not think he will go much further than that.

Mr Speaker, Parliament is to debate issues, not to provide lists. We are trying to give agility to this Parliament so it becomes about debate. Every time they ask for something which is statistical information, we either say it is available online or we provide it and we say, ‘Look, we didn’t used to ask for this. We are providing it to you now. It will be available online from now on.’ Why, Mr Speaker? Because this place has to be a place of substance. They did not provide the information, so we had to ask for it and our substance had to come from the information gleaned as a result of a question. They have the benefit, Mr Speaker, of a Parliament now that is so open and transparent that the Government puts the information on its website, he can go download it, put his feet up, read it and come up with a political question based on the statistics that are available online.

What I am not going to do, Mr Speaker, and what none of my colleagues in Government are going to do, and what none of the public servants of Gibraltar are going to do for him is what he says he is not prepared to do, which is to keep a list. So it is too good for Daniel Feetham to keep a list and make a note; somebody else should do it for him, and I should be the one to do so.

Mr Speaker, he got it wrong. On 9th December, I became the Chief Minister, not him! (Applause)

Mr Speaker: Ruling on the point of order: the question is perfectly valid to ask the question that it does pose, but the answer is:

‘... all meetings I have had with any Spanish mayor have been disclosed in the media.’

That is the answer and, again, looking at the Standing Order cited by the Hon. Chief Minister, which is 17

Hon. Chief Minister: 17.(1)(xv).

Mr Speaker: Sorry, 17.(1) and it is subtitle (xv)... go back to it. I am sure the hon. Member knows where I am referring to:

‘The right to ask questions shall be governed by the following rules, as to the interpretation of which the Speaker shall be the sole judge’

— and (xv) says:

‘a question shall not be asked seeking information set forth in accessible documents or ordinary works of reference.’

The question has been asked and the answer refers to the accessible documents where the information is contained and, really, no matter how unsatisfactory the hon. Member may consider the position to be, that is the answer and the Standing Orders do cover that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has made a number of statements. If he got to be Chief Minister, quite frankly, I fancy the chances of many other individuals. That is —

Mr Speaker: Order! (Interjections) Order! Order! Order! (Interjection by the Chief Minister)

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker —

Mr Speaker: Order! I think... Exactly. Let’s stick to the questions, please.

I think if we are going to get down now to descend into whether the Hon. Chief Minister is good enough to be Chief Minister or not, that is really not the subject of the debate.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I hope that what is good for the goose is good for the gander, ((Interjection)) because —

Mr Speaker: It will be.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, because his answers have been peppered with a number of almost Hollywood-style comments and personalisations, and I have been very restrained in the way that I have conducted myself during this session.

What about... and I hope that he does not get unnecessarily angry by this question, because he has got a... (Interjection by the Chief Minister) Unfortunately, he seems to be very angry today. (Interjection by the Chief Minister) What about the meeting that he had, from my reading of the Gibraltar Chronicle, in Algeciras with Landaluce, where they met by chance and had a coffee? Was that one of these meetings that he expects me to read about and that would have been included here? Did he discuss anything about Gibraltar then?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a meeting with a mayor disclosed in the media. It was disclosed not just in the Chronicle, but in other sources of information, so what is the issue?

Mr Speaker: May I again interject over there?

Following on from my ruling, the answer being the meetings were disclosed in the media, we also, in this

1910 House, do have a practice that we do not necessarily believe and accept everything that has been reported in the media so, to a certain extent, it may not be enough to say they are disclosed in the media and then turn round and say ‘Don’t believe everything in the media.’

Hon. Chief Minister: But I specifically said that they have all been disclosed in the media. (Interjections)

1915 Hon. D A Feetham: The Hon. Mr Speaker makes a valid point, because, for example, one of the meetings that I was thinking about was this particular meeting. It could be completely and utterly fictitious that he has had that particular meeting with somebody in Spain, or it may be true.

1920 What the Hon. the Chief Minister is asking me – effectively, is establishing as a practice in this House – is for me to take my cue, or my party to take its cue from whatever Mr Reyes here writes, or whatever Dominic Searle or whatever GBC might care to report upon, and I do not think that it is satisfactory that... If that is the quality of the democracy that the hon. Gentleman stands for and wants to reduce proceedings in this House to, that is his position; we take a different position altogether.

Hon. G H Licudi: That is why we are here and you are there.

1925 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, they take a different position altogether from 9th December, because he was in this House before and he knows what the position was.

1930 Mr Speaker, we have answered questions from the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, who is not here today, who has referred us to statements in the Chronicle, whether written by Mr Reyes – who I recognise now at the Bar of Journalists in this House – or any other member of the media who has reported on them, and the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is himself – and I have been given to describe him as empirical, but he is himself – not too grand to ask a question based on something he has read in a newspaper and to ask me about it, and Hansard will show that he has done so on numerous occasions since 9th December. What is wrong with that, Mr Speaker? Absolutely nothing is wrong with that.

1935 Mr Speaker, every time that we come to this House, the hon. Gentleman wants to say ‘That is the quality of the democracy; this is a U-turn Mr Speaker.’ If he wants to do that, Mr Speaker... I am not going to give him any political advice, because (a) he would not take it, and (b) I do not want to help him in his political endeavour. But one thing I will say is that politicians who cry wolf at every session of a Parliament will, in 48 months’ time, have been heard so often that, when they might have something serious to say, people will just say, living in a free society as transparent, open and democratic as it is, ‘Ahi está Feetham otra vez, diciendo que no estamos en una democracia’ – ‘There is Feetham again, saying that we are not in a democracy’ – and that, Mr Speaker, just will not make any sense. It will not ring true to anyone who has lived through the past 16 years and the most recent six months, because the quality of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to say, has improved no end since the new dawn that broke on the morning of 9th December when the GSLP Liberal parties formed Government for the first time in 16 years. (Applause)

1945 Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say that not even Steven Spielberg holds a candle to the hon. Gentleman in the Hollywood style of the way that he answers some of these questions and the speeches that he actually gives.

1950 Can the hon. Gentleman at least help me with this: how many times has he met with mayors on the other side of the border to discuss the fishing dispute? Or is that something else that I have got to look up in the media?

A Member: Yes, yes.

1955 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman can call me Spielberg, or he can call me any of the other great directors that one would recognise. It really belies his own position when he gets up and he says, ‘Oh, you’re so Hollywood,’ and then he compares me to a Hollywood director. It is obviously he who is being Hollywood, and what the hell does... What on earth, Mr Speaker... (Laughter) What on earth, Mr Speaker, does Hollywood have to do (Interjection) with a serious debate in this Parliament – at Question Time, which should not be an excuse for debate, where information should be elicited which is not already in the public domain – at now twenty-to-six in the afternoon on the first day of summer?

1960 Mr Speaker, I am prepared to be here, answering questions which elicit information, for as long as the 1965 hon. Gentleman likes, but what I am not going to do is stand here to do the hon. Gentleman's work for him. On every occasion that we have discussed issues relating to fishing, the matter has been reported, Mr Speaker, as far as I am concerned. So, Mr Speaker, when I discuss issues related to Gibraltar, if the topical issue is fishing, then fishing will have been discussed. I have discussed those issues, on every occasion where it has been relevant, with the mayors.

1970 Mr Speaker, why does the hon. Gentleman want me to come here with a list? How does it advance his understanding of the issues to have a list of when fishing was discussed or was not discussed? What on earth, Mr Speaker, has that got to do with parliamentary democracy? That has got to do, Mr Speaker, with parliamentary listing, which is not what I am here for.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: I will take my own counsel on what information I believe to be necessary (Interjection) for the proper conduct of our functions as an Opposition. The reality is that the hon. Member yet again is refusing to answer my question, so I will not pursue it.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am not refusing to answer his question.

1980 The hon. Gentleman has to get it into his head just because he does not get the answer that he wants does not mean that the Government is refusing to answer his question. He is just trying, Mr Speaker, to create this premise that the Government refuses to answer questions, because then he may be able to go out of here and issue one of his press releases that says, 'They say they're transparent, they say they're open, but they don't answer questions' when, in fact, the question has been answered, it has been answered clearly. The fact is that it is not only him that knows every occasion on which I met a Spanish mayor and discussed the fishing; the whole of the community will have known through the media – which is the expression of communication through which politicians communicate with members of the public – on which occasions I met with a Spanish mayor and on which occasions I discussed fishing and other matters.

1985 So it is not a question, Mr Speaker, of allowing him to get away with the suggestion that one is refusing to answer. One has answered fully. The information is in the public domain. He knows where it is; he just does not want to go and get it, Mr Speaker. His parliamentary laziness is not going to be visited on this Government as an absence of transparency and accountability. He is paid by the public to do a job. Let him compile the information which is in the public domain, if he wants it, and let him not accuse the Government of refusing to answer, when it clearly has.

1995 Mr Speaker: Since there was no – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)
Order! Order! Since there was no question the last time round, I must assume there is no further question. We move to the next question.

Clerk: Question 586, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2000 Hon. D A Feetham: It is his laziness that got him into an awful lot of trouble in recent years – his laziness.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

2005 Hon. D A Feetham: But I will ask more questions.

2010 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on a point of order, the hon. Gentleman is here to ask questions, not to make reflections on any individual. He has just made a reflection about what he says is my laziness. If he wants, Mr Speaker, he can elaborate on that. If he does not, well, in keeping with your ruling and the rules of the House... but here we are to ask and answer questions and nothing else, and he needs to be a little bit less upset, a little bit more calm, and just carry on.

2015 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister did say, or use the words the Hon. Daniel Feetham's 'parliamentary laziness'. He did say that, so I understand what prompts that response, but the hon. Member has not referred to the Hon. Chief Minister's parliamentary laziness but has directed it at his personal laziness, so let's draw a distinction there. Is it necessary to preface the question with 'laziness'?

Hon. D A Feetham: No, of course, and I will accept your ruling.

2020 Mr Speaker: Thank you.

Then please proceed with the Question. Question 586, was it? Yes.

2025 Kingdom of Spain
Representations

Clerk: Question 586.

2030 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the Chief Minister received any representation, directly or indirectly, from or on behalf of, the Kingdom of Spain on any issue since the General Election, identifying the issue and the person or persons making the representation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2035 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister has received many representations, directly and indirectly, on behalf of the Kingdom of Spain and other kingdoms and republics around the world, as I am sure was the case before the General Election of 2011 in respect of previous incumbents of the post of Chief Minister. It is neither possible nor appropriate to provide a list of all those contacts.

2040 The hon. Gentleman can, nonetheless, rest assured that none of the contacts involves the sovereignty of Gibraltar or any issue which touches and concerns any aspects of the sovereignty of Gibraltar.

2045 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I am not asking about representations from any other country, apart from the Kingdom of Spain, and I am asking about representations from the Kingdom of Spain which obviously relate to representations that the hon. Gentleman may have received on behalf of the central government in Madrid, whether it be directly or indirectly. If it had been directly, I think that we would have found out, but has he received any of that kind of representation, and can he elaborate upon that in this House today?

2050 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as I have said, I receive very many such representations from central and non-central governments or entities in the Kingdom of Spain. Mr Speaker, that is, as I understand it, absolutely normal.

2055 It is a very fluid process and, Mr Speaker, I do not think it is appropriate, given what the issues that are being discussed are in those sorts of contexts, that we should be discussing those issues across the floor of the House. If the hon. Gentleman has anything in particular in mind and he wants to raise it with me when we are having that beer, if he ever takes me up on it, then I am happy to discuss it with him.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am sorry, but why is it not appropriate for you to provide me with the information?

2060 Given that you accept that there have been representations on behalf of the Kingdom of Spain at the level that I have outlined, why is it not appropriate for him to actually provide me with that information? Unless, of course, what he is saying to me is, 'Look, I have received representation about a particular aspect. I don't want to prejudice how that aspect might actually go, and therefore I don't want to provide you with the information. I am prepared to provide you with the information via a different source.'

2065 But then there might be other types of representations that might be perfectly disclosable in this House. I just don't understand why. Can he elaborate on that?

2070 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman needs to listen to what I have said. I have said that it is neither possible nor appropriate. You see, Mr Speaker, this is a very fluid process. Although the hon. Gentleman has said certain things about the way we conduct international diplomacy, the fact is that there is very fluid communication between governments where it is not at a press-release level. Of course, there is. There was, of course, before 9th December as well. It is good that there should be after 9th December as well and it should endure, and there was before 1st May 1996 and there was before whatever happy date it was in March or May 1988 that we first took office.

2075 Mr Speaker, that is the case. It is constant, it is daily, Mr Speaker, and a list is not kept of every communication, because phone calls come in and you are told x wants you to know a, b, c. You may wish to know w, x, y. That is what it is like, Mr Speaker. A list is not kept; therefore a list cannot be given, Mr Speaker. If it could be given, Mr Speaker, I do not think it would be appropriate to give it across the floor of this House.

2080 I would be perfectly happy, Mr Speaker, were it possible to keep a list, which it is not, to say, 'Look, let's establish a convention: whoever is the incumbent will share with the Leader of the Opposition that impossible-to-create list of communications with the Kingdom of Spain and such of the other kingdoms as there may be.' I believe there should be a status like the status of privy councillors where, despite the political divide, people at the top of Opposition and Government are briefed on everything in case a disaster happens tomorrow and our roles are reversed – and I mean a natural disaster, which causes there to be a need for people who are not in government to take over. It could happen, Mr Speaker. Every nation prepares for it, but it is just not possible, Mr Speaker, because it would mean that one would have to have a notebook and a pencil, not just at the level of Chief Minister but at many other levels, to give an answer which is correct, and it is not possible to give that information, Mr Speaker.

2090 Hon. D A Feetham: Could he at least answer this: have there been any representations, either directly or indirectly, on behalf of the Kingdom of Spain in relation to, for example, the trilateral process or the Cordoba Agreement?

Hon. Chief Minister: What did you say?

2095 Hon. D A Feetham: The Cordoba Agreement.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, not that I know of, not in respect of those two issues in particular. There have been no communications that have been brought to my attention. Those communications we have had to read in the pages of ABC.

2100 Hon. D A Feetham: And has he, through the medium of Her Majesty's Government, attempted to open a line of communication in relation to those particular two issues that I have outlined, or is he quite content with just simply the position the Spanish Government has taken, that is announced publicly, and does not intend to pursue anything further in relation to those two areas that I have mentioned?

2105 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think it is a matter of public record, and he should know that this issue has been raised with His Honour His Excellency the Minister for Foreign Affairs of the Kingdom of Spain by the Foreign Secretary in correspondence in consultation with the Government of Gibraltar. That much is also known.

Defence Lands Adviser post Successful applicant

2115

Clerk: Question 588, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2120 Hon. D A Feetham: Has the post of Defence Lands Adviser been filled, and who is the successful applicant?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2125 Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the post of Defence Lands Adviser has been filled by Mr Michael Crome.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Michael Crome is the individual that he knew about, who had been associated with this particular post in the rumours that we spoke about a month ago, that he confirmed that he knew about.

2130 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, it appears that he was, Mr Speaker, but he is also the person whom the board unanimously agreed was highly suitable for appointment to the post and who outshone by far the other candidates.

2135 That board, Mr Speaker, was made up by the Financial Secretary, the Human Resources Head of Department, a Senior Executive Officer of the Human Resources Department, who were, I think, a very strong board to determine those issues in respect of the seven applications that were received, one of them having been withdrawn before interviews were held.

2140 Hon. D A Feetham: He does not think there is any coincidence at all, or that... Effectively, there is a rumour around town that Mr Crome has been promised the job by the Hon. the Chief Minister – that is doing the rounds – that in fact there is a rumour that the gentleman is saying, ‘The job is mine’ and, lo and behold, he, in fact, is the successful applicant? He does not think there is anything...

2145 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I went on rumours like that, I would have been doing a different sort of Opposition from the time I was elected in 2003 to the time we became the Government in 2011.

Mr Speaker, what the hon. Gentleman is doing in his question is calling into question the integrity of the Financial Secretary, the Head of the Human Resources Department and a senior executive officer of the Human Resources Department. This is a very strong board, Mr Speaker, to consider and make recommendations on all of the applicants.

2150 I do not know what people may have said in the street, Mr Speaker. I know what is reported to the Government and I do not act on rumours, Mr Speaker – I act on facts.

2155 Gibraltar Health Authority management
‘Unfit for purpose’ comment

Clerk: Question 590, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2160 Hon. D A Feetham: Will the Chief Minister advise the House as to what action the Government has taken, or plans to take, against those parts of the GHA management which, in the run up to the General Election, he described as – and I quote – ‘unfit for purpose’?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2165 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will answer with Question 512.

2170 Gibraltar Health Authority appointments
Breach of established procedures

Clerk: Question 512, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2175 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for Health concur with the article by his party chairman in the New People newspaper on the week of 17th May 2012, stating that the GHA Chief Executive Officer – and I quote – ‘has been appointing and promoting people within the Health Service without adhering to the established procedures and in breach of the requirements to have these appointments and promotions approved by the Governor’; and, if so, can the Minister give us examples of such alleged behaviour by the GHA’s Chief Executive Officer?

2180 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. –

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, can I ask that a similar Question to the previous one, number 514, be taken at the same time?

2185

Gibraltar Health Authority
Management structure

Clerk: Question 514, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2190

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how the GHA's management structure will be changed during this term of office and when the top management posts will be filled by locals, as per the GSLP's manifesto commitment?

2195

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer Question 590 and then my hon. Friend will answer the other two, but Mr Speaker, I just wanted to reflect that so much for not asking questions based on what might appear in a newspaper, eh?

2200

Mr Speaker, I am entirely confident – (Interjection) Congratulations, well done! Mr Speaker, I am entirely confident that all matters relating to the GHA are being actioned entirely appropriately by the Hon. Minister for Health, including any issues relating to the fitness for purpose of any part of the structure of the GHA that we inherited when we were elected on that happy day on 9th December 2011.

2205

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister to answer the two questions. We will take the supplementaries together.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will first answer Question 512.

Mr Speaker, for the record, the article in question is not attributed to any author, and therefore it cannot be assumed to have been written by anyone in particular.

There are, allegedly, issues which were identified in 2010 concerning the way in which certain appointments which occurred during the time of the previous administration were processed. There are also concerns regarding a number of direct appointments that were made without any selection procedures, allegedly on the instructions of the then Chief Minister, with the agreement of the then Minister for Health. These and other procedures are being looked into.

In respect of Question 514, the review of the management structure is ongoing and, once complete, an implementation plan will be developed.

2220

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I happened to look, before I asked this particular question, to the dictionary definition of 'unfit for purpose', and the definition is 'unqualified, incompetent or incapable of doing the job.'

If what he was saying before the General Election was that the GHA management was unfit for purpose, unqualified, incompetent or incapable of doing the job, does he not agree with me that it is incumbent on the Government to, as quickly as possible, root out that cancer within the GHA management because it is unqualified, incompetent and incapable; and what drastic actions is he taking in order to effectively deal with this?

2225

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that the Home Office in the United Kingdom some years ago was described as being unfit for purpose, (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) and there I do not know whether anybody set out the dictionary definition as the hon. Gentleman has, but so be it.

2230

The fact is, Mr Speaker, that based on what has been published in the newspapers, a question has been asked, and based on what was said during the Election campaign a question has been asked.

First of all, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman knows, we are not answerable in this House for the things that we said during the course of the General Election campaign. We are answerable in this House for the things we have done since 9th December. But, Mr Speaker, I want to commend the Hon. the Minister for Health for not acting on rumours and saying in his answer that all of these things are alleged and that they are being investigated.

What I did, Mr Speaker, was, I think, absolutely appropriate. You see, it did require drastic action. The 2240 people accepted the proposition. They took the drastic action of changing the Government and they put in place a Chief Minister who appointed, as Minister for Health, somebody eminently qualified, competent and capable to deal with all the issues that arise.

A Member: Hear, hear.

2245 Hon. D A Feetham: I have to say that that answer takes the biscuit in the entire proceedings of this afternoon. Absolutely right? He is thanking the Minister for Health for not paying attention to a rumour that his own Chief Minister started, because the comment about being 'unfit for purpose' was a comment made by the Chief Minister himself, not by anybody else.

2250 Hon. Chief Minister: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, the rumour is that which the hon. Gentleman, the Minister with responsibility for Health, has referred to in the article. That is the rumour. Of course, Mr Speaker, I accept that I said what I said during the Election debate, although I am not answerable for it in this House, but I have answered the question, Mr Speaker. The rumour that I was referring to is the one that the hon. Lady refers to in the article which the hon. Gentleman has referred to as allegations.

2255 Hon. D A Feetham: Now that he is Chief Minister of Gibraltar, does he think that the GHA management is unqualified, incompetent and incapable of doing the job, which is the definition of unfit for purpose; and can he perhaps provide to this House an outline why he regards the GHA management as being unqualified, incompetent and incapable of doing the job?

2260 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he does hold brief for the strangest people.

Mr Speaker, perhaps he does not recognise it, because he was never in a collegiate Cabinet Government, but I am not the Minister for Health. I defer on all such matters to a man who is qualified, competent and capable to assess what – on the... I think it was the Monday – he inherited as his ministry and to determine what should be done in respect of management, nursing and every other aspect of that ministry.

2265 Mr Speaker, frankly, in a situation like this, it needs a different mindset to be able to understand how things are done. We said many things about the way that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition ran government when he was Chief Minister. None of them have been said behind his back; we have said them all. There was an instance, Mr Speaker, when a previous Minister for the Environment referred to a decision taken as not having been taken by him, but having been taken by central Government, meaning the Chief Minister. Mr Speaker, there is here no central Government. This is a Cabinet, Mr Speaker, of colleagues working together and respecting that each of them have a different expertise and have different responsibilities and I can think of nobody better to have appointed from these 10 men and women here than John Cortes to be the Minister for Health and to make those determinations and fix all of those problems which we identified before 8th December and after 8th December – you know, all those things that were quietly hidden under the carpet so that nobody might see.

2275 Hon. D A Feetham: Is the Hon. the Chief Minister now resiling from his opinion that the GHA management, on 9th December, was unfit for purpose?

2280 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know that one is entitled to indulgence, but the hon. Member has had his question answered. The Hon. the Chief Minister said what he said before 8th December and he is saying what he is saying today about how he dealt with it as soon as he became Chief Minister – namely, I had a set of concerns, as Leader of the Opposition and as a citizen, and I dealt with them, Mr Speaker, by appointing the man who I know is best able to deal with those issues as Minister for Health.

2285 If he, Mr Speaker, allows the biscuit to move slightly to my right, he might get some answers of substance on the issues which relate to management, but if all he wants to do, Mr Speaker, is get up here and throw out mantras that he associates with politics, like 'U-turn', 'non-democratic', 'unfit for purpose', then he can carry on because there is no chance of getting to the beach this afternoon, so we may as well call it a day and carry on listening to the same question over and over again.

2290 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may just add –

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, no. He has answered the question. Now let me – (Interjection)

2295 Look, there is huge distinction between ‘having concerns’ – and let’s face it, no system works perfectly and there are always likely to be concerns about the way that systems actually work. There are concerns at the justice system, there may be concerns with the GHA, and it is right that there should be vocalisation of concerns because it is a very important organization for the people of Gibraltar and for this community. But there is a huge distinction between having concerns and coming to office and appointing the Hon. Mr Cortes –
2300 for whom I have a lot of respect – as the Minister for Health and saying, ‘Look, could you please deal with these problems?’ and quite another to describe the GHA management as ‘unfit for purpose’, the definition of which is ‘unqualified, incompetent, incapable of doing the job.’

Does he not agree with me that the reality of this situation is that when he made those comments, the hon. Gentleman was just simply pandering to a certain sector of the GHA that was not content with the GHA management and that he overplayed his hand by describing the GHA management as ‘unfit for purpose’?

Hon. Chief Minister: He has overplayed his hand now, Mr Speaker, because now he has specifically asked me what I was thinking when I uttered those words before 9th December – something for which I am certainly not answerable in this House. But look, given that there is no chance of getting to the beach, it is six o’clock in the evening, let’s just make the rules a little bit elastic. I do not resile from anything I said before the General Election because I was not pandering to anyone. That is not the way I do politics, although it may be the way that others do.
2310

So, Mr Speaker, I do not agree with the premise of his question, but I gave him a hint, which he did not want to pick up. Okay, I will be more explicit. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Yes, indeed, that and everything else.
2315

When the Home Office in the United Kingdom was described as not fit for purpose, on the appointment of a Minister – not on the occurrence of a General Election, on the appointment of a Minister – from the same government that had a previous Minister, that new Minister did not sack everyone in the Home Office. He did not close it down because it was unfit for purpose. He started the process of making the changes necessary to make it fit for purpose. That, Mr Speaker, is what I am delighted to say is the process that began on 9th December when I became Chief Minister and the following Monday, when I advised His Excellency the Governor that Her Majesty’s Government of Gibraltar, in respect of health matters, would be advised by Mr John Cortes as Minister. That is the process that began fixing the broke GHA that we inherited from the hon. Gentleman – not the lady, another gentleman, because they were not all here, but from the hon. Member’s party when they were in government. That is what you do when things are unfit for purpose: you fix them, you make them fit for purpose.
2325

Thank you, Mr Speaker, to the hon. Gentleman. At least there is one issue on which we agree: he accepts that he has the utmost respect for the person I have appointed to start dealing with that matter and fix it. If we could get on to the supplementaries of Questions 512 and 514, then perhaps he might get a flavour of what those changes may be.
2330

Hon. D A Feetham: If he wants to change places with the Speaker of the House, he is perfectly welcome to.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether that is a question, an invitation, or what it is. I do not know why it is he makes that remark. I think it is totally unnecessary. I think I have answered the question that he put, and it was in the negative and I therefore suggested that we should be moving on in order to advance the substance of the debate.
2335

Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond has a supplementary, at least one.
2340

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, the Minister for Health has had five months since I last asked him about the GHA management restructure in which to look at the whole organisation and consult with UK experts and locals to decide on its restructure as per his answer to Question 74 in January’s meeting. Is the Minister in a position now to state how you will make the GHA management more functional and effective?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, first of all I have to thank both the Leader of the Opposition and the Hon. the Chief Minister for their words of admiration and support, particularly – 2350 Hon. D A Feetham: I am not the Leader of the Opposition!

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Well, I think the Leader of the Opposition... Sorry, Acting maybe. (Hon. D A Feetham: Acting, yes.) The person who, in the Opposition... the Hon. Mr Feetham, who says he has great respect for me, thank you very much, and I would like to thank the Chief Minister for saying such kind words about me. I think he is a great Chief Minister, too! (Laughter and applause)

2355 It started this morning with the Hon. Mr Feetham thanking Mr Bossano. I have got to do this now at the end of the day. We all love each other so much!

2360 The past five months, six months, have revealed to me the web of complexity that the Gibraltar Health Authority is and the web of complexity that managing an organisation that I have inherited involves. I will have, I suspect, rather a lot to say about a lot of that during my Budget speech, so I can keep you in suspense, Mr Speaker and colleagues, until then.

2365 I have, indeed, given a lot of thought to the management structure and the process is not yet complete. There are other things that are going to be happening to allow me to have a fuller picture of the way I want to proceed and, as I said in answer to my question, the review of the management structure is ongoing. Once complete, which I suspect will probably be some time towards the end of August, beginning of September, an implementation plan will be developed and announced, but I do not want to go into any details at this point because, again, I am still developing the plans.

2370 Hon. D A Feetham: Does he agree with the Chief Minister that, from what he has found out since he has actually been in office, the GHA management that he inherited was unqualified, incompetent or incapable of doing its job?

2375 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, come on. The hon. Gentleman should know better than to do that. I did not say any of those things. I said 'unfit for purpose'. He has gone to the dictionary, he has found that definition, and if he wants to say that that is what it means, it is a matter for him. I have not seen the dictionary, but I will take him at least on his word for that, but not for much more. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)

What he can put to the hon. Gentleman –

2380 Hon. D A Feetham: I will rephrase my question.

Hon. Chief Minister: – is that I said it was 'unfit for purpose', then the hon. Gentleman can take it from him that that is what unfit for purpose means.

2385 Hon. D A Feetham: He is the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, not the Speaker of the House, but I will happily rephrase the question: does he agree with the comments made by the Chief Minister since he has been in office, or what he has found, that the GHA management is unfit for purpose?

2390 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member should perhaps check my Facebook page tonight.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not on Facebook, I'm afraid.

2395 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, any review of management will involve a consideration of the fitness for purpose of the management and it is not until that responsible review is completed that I will be able to reach any conclusions about that and many other facts and take an informed opinion on the way forward.

Hon. D A Feetham: If I may say so, that is a perfectly reasonable answer. (Interjections)

2400 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.
Do not allow the Chief Minister and the Acting Leader to interrupt...

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, they are having a good private conversation

2405 Hon. Chief Minister: [Inaudible] over a beer... [Inaudible] (Laughter and interjections)
Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker –

Hon. Chief Minister: If it's only one beer, fine –

2410 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: No, it's a bottle of wine for my hon. Friend!

A Member: A bottle of wine?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Well, a glass of wine.

2415 Hon. D A Feetham: A glass of wine.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker –

2420 A Member: I'll have a [Inaudible] of whisky!

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: – as a supplementary question to Question 512, I am aware that Dr. McCutcheon did receive an apology for the said article in the New People. Is the Minister concurring, then, with the article in question, or is he distancing himself from such allegations?

2425 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of any apology that anybody may have received – I would just like to say that from the start. I am doing neither. I have said that there have been allegations which are being investigated.

2430 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So the Minister, Mr Speaker, is at present concurring with the article until further –

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, I –

2435 A Member: It is being investigated.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: There have been allegations, which were identified in 2010, concerning the way in which certain appointments occurred and so on, as I said earlier. There have been other allegations regarding selection procedures which have allegedly nothing to do with the Chief Executive but with the then Chief Minister, and these and other procedures are being looked into.

2440 That is what I said in the answer and that is what my answer remains.

2445 Procedural
Adjournment motion passed

Hon. Chief Minister (F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to Friday, 22nd June at 3.00 p.m.

2450 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 22nd June 2012 at 3.00 p.m.

I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Friday, 22nd June 2012 at 3.00 p.m.

Those in favour. (Members: Aye) those against. Passed.

2455 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this is a vote on the adjournment, but is there any reason why... and I notice that it has happened now twice – last time round and this time... Is there any reason why we are adjourning until 3 o'clock tomorrow and we cannot adjourn until half past nine tomorrow to continue with the questions?

2460 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I understand it was on the timetable. The hon. Gentleman will know that the Civil Service finishes work at 2.30 pm, so in the interest of the Government doing as much work as possible from eight to two-thirty and then having a short lunch break before coming here to continue with the Question Time, I think it makes perfect sense, Mr Speaker.

2465 I may add, without revealing any confidence, that the hon. Gentleman met with me and the Deputy Speaker in my office some time ago. We discussed issues relating to timetabling. The hon. Gentleman and the Leader of the Opposition were going to, I believe, write to me and to the Deputy Chief Minister, and we have not received any document in respect of such timetabling, so we are proceeding on this basis, which I think is the best, which is what we discussed with him and the Leader of the Opposition at the time, Mr Speaker.

2470 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, no, I do not recall that those were the discussions. I do not want this to be... What we discussed was, and we agreed, that we would deal with parliamentary sessions within the two days – it would start on the Thursday and would end on the Friday – and that Thursday afternoon would be the Chief Minister's Question Time.

2475 The problem that we have with Parliament being adjourned to the Friday at 3.00 p.m. is that invariably what happens is that we then have adjournments to the week after and, in fact, on the last occasion we had the Wednesday, the Thursday afternoon, the Tuesday of the week afterwards and also onto the Friday, and we take the position that it is certainly in the best interests of how we conduct proceedings in this House to attempt to deal with parliamentary questions and answers over two days.

2480 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman will know that when we were sitting on that side of the House we did not have any say on when things would happen; nor would we have been told until the end, perhaps, of this Question Time when the Budget might have been, let alone be given notice of the fact that Parliament is going to meet on the third Thursday of every month, that it is not going to meet at nine, it is going to meet at 9.15am when we open, and had known, as from yesterday at least, if not this morning, that it was going to come back on Friday at three.

2485 So, Mr Speaker, I think we are doing much more than we need to do to accommodate the hon. Members, but if what the hon. Gentleman is saying to me is that he wants to come to Parliament less, he needs to understand that he is paid by the people of Gibraltar to come to Parliament to ask questions, and if we wanted to open ourselves up to scrutiny for an hour a day he might want to come on the 20 working days a month, and that is his obligation. It is a matter for him what he does.

2490 The position is, Mr Speaker, that we are adjourning to three o'clock tomorrow – we have got very few questions left – in order to try and deal with Question Time and wrap it up tomorrow.

2495 Last time, Mr Speaker, he will know that when we came back the following week we came back because Ministers were travelling, not because Question Time was getting too long. It was as a result of a travel schedule.

But I take on board the fact that he wants to come to Parliament less, he wants to appear here in exercise of his function – which he has been elected to discharge by the people of Gibraltar – less, for whatever reason it may be.

2500 Hon. D A Feetham: I think that the hon. Gentleman is being very ungenerous, but then again I would not expect any kind of generosity emanating from the hon. Gentleman.

2505 It is not that I want to come back to this House less – it is not about that; it is about a more efficient way of dealing with questions and answers. I thought that, given this new policy that the Government has introduced, they would listen to the Opposition's views in that regard, and I believe that it is actually more efficient to deal with questions and answers over two days, rather than doing it over three or four days. But, look, if these changes are artificial and the hon. Gentleman is not going to be taking into account our views and he is going to be characterising our genuinely expressed views as a desire on our part not to come to this Parliament as many times, that is up to him.

2510 Mr Speaker: But is it –

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what is artificial about the fact that Parliament is meeting every 2515 month? What is artificial about the fact that when we met, Mr Speaker, he and the Leader of the Opposition were going to write to us with what they thought was the best way to deal with it (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) and he has not, and they have not written to us, Mr Speaker.

2520 Therefore, if it is working well, we are going to continue working as it was working, (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) which is Thursday and Friday – and last time, Mr Speaker, when it spilt over, it spilt over because Ministers were travelling. So, Mr Speaker, either he does not like to work on Friday afternoons (Two Members: Yes!) or what is it that he is talking about? (Interjections)
Mr Speaker, I have moved the adjournment.

Mr Speaker: Order!
Yes, exactly, and I –

2525 Hon. Chief Minister: I have moved the adjournment.

Mr Speaker: Order!

2530 Hon. Chief Minister: What is the position?

Mr Speaker: It is not at all usual to have a debate on a motion for an adjournment. In fact, it is the first time, almost eight years down the road and (A Member: Eleven!) the third-from-the-last sitting... It is the first time it has had a debate. It is not usual to have a debate.

2535 The Hon. Daniel Feetham asked why three o'clock and the Hon. the Chief Minister has given his explanation for three o'clock. I hear what was said, but these are matters best dealt with behind the Speaker's Chair, not on the floor of the House.

I have put the question, I have heard the voices, and I declare the motion as passed.

This House will now adjourn to Friday, 22nd June 2012 at 3.00 p.m. I look forward to seeing all of you then.

The House adjourned at 6.18 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

HEALTH AND ENVIRONMENT

Gibraltar Health Authority
Mandatory registration of doctors

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Friday, 22nd June. Answers to Oral Questions continue.
Question 510/2012, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

5 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how the new mandatory GMC registration of all doctors in the GHA will work?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

10 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Government is giving urgent attention to a review of the medical regulatory framework for Gibraltar, as the current legislation is largely unworkable.

As stated in my reply to Question 276/2012, contact is being established with the GMC. In order to make such discussions fruitful, we have now begun a process of reviewing the legislation and making it more practicable, a necessary step in being able to move this commitment forward.

15 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, the Minister suggested in March, in answer to Question 276, that in a couple of months' time 'if you ask me again, I will have some indication as to information', so could the Minister supply us with a little bit more information as to timescale and the detail in the document?

20 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the problem has been that, as we have tried to move this forward, we have come across quite a large number of – how shall I put it? – quite a large number of provisions in the Medical and Health Act which are difficult to implement. They are a result of, possibly, implementation of EU regulations without them having been dovetailed to existing local legislation and there are a large number of issues which need to be altered. We will have to make considerable amendments to the Act before we can move forward in how we regulate doctors.

25 I have about two pages to justify what I have just said – I am not going to, on a Friday afternoon, read them all unless I am asked to do so, but it does require the actual Act being amended and that is what is holding us back. We are having legal draftsmen looking at it and we will be doing this in parallel with talking with the GMC. There is not much point in talking with the GMC when the local legislation is, actually, so confused.

30
35 Gibraltar Health Authority
Consultants' contracts

Clerk: Question 511, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

40 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us if he is now in a position to sign a GHA Contract with the consultants and what features will the contract include?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

45 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government is in the process of finalising a new offer to the consultants.

Contact on this has already been initiated with the consultants in advance of formal negotiations. As negotiations have not been completed, it would not be appropriate to disclose any specific features.

50 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, when will the consultants be presented with the draft contract to consider and then to negotiate with yourself?

In answer to Question 274 in March you stated that 'the draft contract is now ready and we hope to be starting negotiation within a number of weeks only.'

55 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, indeed.

We have had the first contacts with the consultants on an informal basis so we can identify the main issues that we think both sides have to tackle, which is helping us tweak the contract a little bit further, with their full knowledge. This tweaking should not take long but I am not going to commit myself exactly to how long or short that is going to be.

60 So the process has started, but we have not actually presented a formal contract because we are trying to pre-empt possible difficulties so that our formal negotiations will be able to proceed much more smoothly and I can say that we are making progress.

65 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm that, as from the end of July, all hospital doctors are to enter Provident Fund 2 and the 25% gratuity for contract workers will be replaced by a 10% employees' contribution and 10% employer's contribution into this Government Pension Fund, with a net effect of a reduction of between 15 and 20% salary for the contracted consultant?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is part of the tweaking that I have been referring to.

70 Hon. D A Feetham: Can you give more information about the tweaking?

In what direction is the tweaking going to be? Is the tweaking going to be in the direction of retaining the 25% of gratuity or is the Government, as a matter of policy, committed to the transfer of consultants from the 25% gratuity to the Provident Fund No. 2 Pension Scheme?

75 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: If it is a matter that is actually in discussion, I do not think it is appropriate to publicly announce the way these discussions may or may not go, so I am afraid that I am not able to give that information.

In any case, I do not think – well, it could be a legitimate supplementary but, as I say, and as I answered in the main answer, it would not be appropriate to disclose any specific features.

80 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the implementation date for the end of July?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: As I say, we are holding informal negotiations in advance of formal negotiations and, therefore, we do not have an agreed implementation date.

85 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, are you considering how the hospital doctors who are still on contract, how they will recover the loss of pensions for the years they have already worked?

90 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I repeat – these are matters which may or may not be under discussion and I am not going to reveal this because it could compromise the outcome of these discussions. I do not think I can be expected to give that information at this point in time.

95 Hon. D A Feetham: Can I ask the hon. Gentleman if there any consultants who refuse to sign a contract which they consider to be a variation of their existing arrangements, in particular in relation to pensions? Because the Minister will appreciate that actually moving from a situation of a 25% gratuity to the Provident Fund No. 2, with contribution by the employee of 10% and the employer of 10%, does have a material effect on what that consultant is actually going to be getting at the end of the day.

Now, can he confirm to this House today that if there is a consultant who does not want to shift to new arrangements that he is not going to be forced to do so?

100 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have learned a number of things in the last few sittings in Parliament, the first in my life, and one of the things I have learned is that I do not need to answer hypothetical questions, and that is very clearly a hypothetical question!

105
Gibraltar Health Authority
New Hospital appointments

110 Clerk: Question 513, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise when the third Consultant General Surgeon, and Associate Specialist Orthopaedic Surgeon, two A & E non Consultant

Hospital Doctors or NCHDs and two General Medical NCHDs Consultants are expected to be in post?

115 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Yes, Mr Speaker, successful candidates are expected to commence in the following posts as follows:

120 Third Consultant General Surgeon – Monday, 3rd September, 2012

Associate Specialist in Orthopaedics and Trauma – same date, 3rd September 2012, subject to a written acceptance of the offer of appointment – there has been a verbal acceptance, we are awaiting, and at the time this was drafted it was imminent.

Non-Consultant Hospital Doctors in Accident & Emergency – both commenced employment on Wednesday, 6th June 2012

125 Non-Consultant Hospital Doctors in General Medicine – Monday 6th August this year and Monday 13th August respectively.

130 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the third General Surgeon Consultant who is starting employment on 3rd September the one who was selected as the first choice after the interview process?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not get involved in the selection process. I do not have that information, I would need notice. I honestly have no idea; I do not get involved, as Minister, in the selection of clinicians. (Interjection)

135 Yes, indeed Mr Speaker, as has been pointed out – and I am grateful – presenting information as to what choice you were on a selection panel might be something that is not correct to present, in any case, but I am glad to say that, regardless of that, I just do not know the answer.

140 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I was just under the impression, as a Chairman of the GHA Board, he would have been given that information: in fact, it outlines in the Board's documents, of the last GHA Board, that the Consultant General Surgeon, Mr Ezzat Tadros would have been commencing employment on 9th July and I wondered if the Minister could verify that I have heard that a third Consultant General Surgeon who had originally accepted the job has now declined because of the conflict in the contract details, and seeing that the Minister has presented us with a new date which is different to the one in the Board papers – my query is – is it still Mr Ezzat Tadros or is it a new Consultant from the interview process?

145 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I believe it is Mr Tadros but I would need to confirm that. But that is the name that certainly rings a bell.

150 I do not know where the hon. Lady has got her information, nor do I need to know, but certainly the name rings a bell but I would have to confirm that – I believe it is Mr Tadros. It could be that Mr Tadros, or whoever said they were coming in July for personal or other reasons may have postponed until September, which is a perfectly legitimate and normal thing to happen when somebody is moving home to take on a new job. I do not think that we need to get any implication necessarily out of the change of date.

155 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, you see, the information that the Opposition has, and remember that, perhaps, the same people that used to come to them when they were on this side of the House, now come to us, at College Lane.

160 May I ask the Hon. Minister this – the information that we have is that this particular surgeon was offered terms which included the 25% gratuity and he accepted the job, and in fact he had made arrangements to come to Gibraltar on those terms and, all of a sudden, the Government then decided, well no, now we are going to be moving and shifting to a situation where you have a Provident Fund No. 2, with a 10% and a 10% by the Government and that in those circumstances, this particular chap said 'Well, no. Look, you are unilaterally varying the offer that was made.' Does the Hon. Minister know anything about that at all?

165 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, nobody could have ever have come to me while in the Opposition, as I have never had the distinction of being in Opposition.

It would seem to me that if that was the case and it is the same Mr Tadros, then obviously he is happy to accept, so I do not have anything further to add to that.

Certainly, one has to bear in mind that I suspect – in fact, I know – that the vacancy was advertised some time last year, before there were any changes in pension. I do not know whether that has had any effect but, again, I have not been asked about individual conditions of employment of specific people – I have been asked when are these people starting.

If the Opposition wants to know specific details, if I am asked the question I can provide them, but I do not want to delve into my memory because then I can be accused of misinforming the Parliament and the Opposition is trying to get me to go into memory over things that I have not prepared, so I have to qualify all these points that I have, in good will, wanting to respond. But if there are specific details that are wanted of this third Consultant General Surgeon, other than to celebrate and congratulate us all in the fact that he is going to be starting, if I have notice then I will provide the information. I am not going to speculate any more.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but it is not a question of celebrating. We celebrate the fact that, yes, we have a Consultant Surgeon. It is the fact that what we have, and I do not think it is this particular surgeon, it is the person that actually accepted the job prior to this particular gentleman...

Now, of course, he is responsible as the Minister for Health, for general policy within the Health Service. Can I ask the hon. Gentleman to perhaps make enquiries about this? Because if you have a situation whereby a surgeon has been offered a job on particular terms and, all of a sudden, when the guy has already made the arrangements – and this is coming from very good sources to the Opposition – then there is a change – well, it does not appear to be proper management, and the question I am asking – will the Hon. the Minister for Health at the very least make enquiries about that? If that is the position, at least make sure that it does not happen in the future, and that people's terms are not varied in the future?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Again, Mr Speaker, we are assuming that this surgeon is not the same surgeon as before without me having had notice to check whether it is or it is not, even though, as Chairman of the Health Authority, I do not think it is correct that the Chairman of the Health Authority should decide what surgeon is or is not selected when it is a clinical appointment and therefore, we are speculating.

Ask me a specific question and I will give a specific answer. I cannot answer that question.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have asked you a specific question, and with respect this is not about clinical decisions. (Interjection) It is about a decision that has been taken by the organisation that you head, as a Minister.

Now, the information that we have – and I appreciate the hon. Gentleman has said, 'Look, I do not have the information in front of me' – the information that we have is that the job was offered on specific terms, it was accepted on specific terms, it was varied after this gentleman had actually made arrangements to come to Gibraltar, and then he said, 'Look, I am not interested in coming.'

All I am asking is – I do not want to be controversial – will the Minister, at the very least, just check that, to see whether that is the case, so that in future, we do not have situations where people's terms are varied after they have been offered and accepted a particular job? That is all. I am asking whether he will look at it.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has said that he has not got the specific information and he would need notice. But the hon. Member opposite is presumably talking about contractual arrangements. The issue would be determined by whether a contract has been signed or not. If the contract has not been signed, and then someone does not wish to come and accept a contract on the terms that it is offered – and without wanting to go into speculation, and I am not talking about this particular case – but the hon. Member says this must not happen in the future. Well, what is going to happen in the future and what is always going to happen is that, at some stage, a specific contract with specific terms is going to be offered for signature, and upon that contract being signed, then there is a contract of employment. That will be the basis upon which the employment takes place.

I do not know what has happened in this particular case, but there is nothing to change. That is the procedure and that is what is going to continue in the future.

Hon. D A Feetham: With respect to the hon. Gentleman, that is precisely what should have happened now! This gentleman, the information that we have is... (Interjections) Of course! If you make an offer to somebody and somebody accepts it, well, that is the end of the matter. You do not vary it afterwards.

Now, all I am asking is will the Hon. Minister make enquiries to check, so that this does not actually 225 happen in the future? You may say that, in the future, people will just be offered a contract: well, look, they may be offered a contract, as this man has been offered a contract, but the terms have been varied after he has accepted it.

I am asking him, will he please look into it?

Mr Speaker: Order, order.

I will allow the Hon. Minister to answer that. Can I just assist him in narrowing the discussion?

230 I think the question boils down to, from the Hon. Daniel Feetham, would the Minister look into the matter? At that point, I think the question stops there.

The rest of the... what is the opposite of preamble? The suffix to the question – ‘so that this does not happen in the future’ – all that is subject to facts being established, which the Minister says he has not established. I think that is what the Hon. Gilbert Licudi was saying.

235 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, that is precisely the point. But we can go further, Mr Speaker.

One thing is establishing the facts and if the hon. Member had asked a factual question, then the hon. Member on this side of the House will check the facts and will establish the facts; but then the hon. Member goes further than that and says ‘so that it does not happen again’ – suggesting that what has happened is improper.

240 We do not accept for one moment that what has happened is improper, and we are certainly not going to go into legal arguments as to whether offer, acceptance, at what point, contractual and all that. The hon. Member says, ‘This should not happen’, but we do not accept that anything inappropriate has happened, so if the issue is only establishing facts, then we are happy to do that.

245 Mr Speaker: I think that helps everyone.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister meet with his executive regularly – on a weekly basis, for instance – on update of matters?

250 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is no way a supplementary to this Question!

However, I will tell the hon. Member that I have regular meetings with members of the executive on an ongoing basis, in which they update me on matters that I need to be updated on. I am not the kind of Minister or Chairman that interferes in the minutiae unless, of course, I have to get involved, out of interest or sense of duty but, of course, I have regular contact with the executive.

255 But I do not need to answer that, but I thought I would offer the information. Of course I meet with them!

Mr Speaker: I agree that supplementary was not in accordance with the rules – a question which arises from an answer given – but the hon. Lady having asked it, the Minister could have declined to answer, but having answered it, well...

260 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for that and very grateful to the Minister for that.

265 I just wanted to establish that the relationship is there, obviously, and if he was aware that, among GHA management, they feel there has been embarrassment caused in their dealings with the Consultants and with the offers made to certain hospital doctors and the contract conditions having changed from a 25% gratuity on termination into the Provident Fund 2 – and the sense that contracts have been changed unilaterally, without consultation. Is he aware that the GHA management is concerned and has felt embarrassed in having to deal with a change in contract and terms, when jobs have been offered to certain hospital doctors?

270 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Who says that?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: GHA management and the Medical Directorate.

275 Several Members: Who?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Lady asking me whether the Medical Director is concerned? (Interjections)

280 Mr Speaker: Order! Order!
The Hon. Minister is answering and I am trying to hear.

285 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I met with the Medical Director this morning at 9 o'clock, and he certainly did not express any such concern to me – and I do not have to answer that question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, I have had concerns expressed to me by a renowned Consultant in the hospital. I know that the hon. Gentlemen are going to be bringing whistle-blowers' legislation to this House, so I do not have to reveal the source, but he is a renowned consultant within the hospital, and he has told me that he feels very concerned that his contract... that the GHA is attempting to change his contract unilaterally.
290 Does he know about any concerns from Consultants in that regard?

Hon. G H Licudi: The hon. Member will reply to the question, but on the point on whistle-blowers' legislation which the hon. Member has said, that is indeed the case, but the hon. Member need have no concern in relation to that because, unlike the previous administration, where there was retaliation against employees where concerns were raised, we do not take that stance. We actually welcome employees coming to us and raising concerns about matters which affect the workplace.
295

So quite apart from the protection, which the whistle-blowers' legislation will provide to employees who disclose, in the public interest, certain matters, we actually welcome employees coming forward with matters of public interest and which concern the Government.
300

Hon. D A Feetham: I am glad that the hon. Gentleman feels that way, but I have to say that, given the way that a number of individuals have been treated and heads have been chopped off, (Interjection and laughter) I have to say that often it reminds me of the words of Alice in Wonderland, 'They are awfully fond of beheading people around here. There is little wonder there is anyone left alive.'
305

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, yesterday the hon. Member was accusing us of not chopping off enough heads! (Laughter)

310 Answering the point about 'renowned consultants', there are many Consultants renowned in other ways, because I have regular contact with them, in fact on a regular basis in my office, and some of them actually remarked that, after years of work, it was the first time they had ever been into the Minister's office, I must say.

I am aware of concerns, which is precisely why we are having informal discussions, prior to placing a fait accompli contract in front of them, so we can address any concerns that there may have been.

315 Mr Speaker, I can actually say that, for the first time in many, many years, I am certainly making a concerted attempt to have the Health Authority properly run.

A Member: Hear, hear.

320

Accident and Emergency self-referrals Average waiting time

325 Clerk: Question 515, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health explain the A & E procedure for patients when they self-admit for accidents or emergencies and what the average waiting time to be seen is?

330 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the process is:

(1) attended by receptionist between 8.00 a.m. to 8.00 p.m., Monday to Friday; out of hours and weekends, this is covered by nursing staff;

(2) personal details obtained and, if there are no injuries, noted;

(3) seen by the triage nurse, who asks what is wrong, does the observations; then there is a triage which gives a number or category.

Bloods may be done by the senior nursing team if placed in the triage, and then referred to doctor with the triage category.

Then depending on the category, we adhere as much as possible to the NHS Standard Waiting Times which are:

Code Red (category 1) to be seen immediately – no waiting;

Code Orange (category 2) to be seen within 10 minutes;

Code Yellow (category 3) to be seen within 60 minutes;

Code Blue (category 4) to be seen within 120 minutes;

Code Green (category 5) to be seen within 240 minutes.

Obviously that is the upper limit. The attempt is to see them earlier than that.

I am still not satisfied that the system I inherited is working well enough and, together with the A & E Committee, I am looking at ways of further reducing waiting times. Factors which have been identified to me and which have been tackled include:

λ bed occupancy problems – nowhere to put the patient – which have been addressed with Calpe Ward and other initiatives;

λ A & E doctors staffing numbers which have been increased by one. There are now 7 for the first time.

λ design changes in the A & E which have been suggested and are now progressing; and λ the Medical NCHD levels which have been increased.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that.

Mr Speaker, is a receptionist in the waiting room at all times, in order to reassure patients and manage them?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: I am sorry, I did not hear....

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: The receptionist – is she or he in the waiting room at all times?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, there is a receptionist who is employed from 8.00 a.m. to 8.00 p.m., Monday to Friday. That is a situation that has been inherited and we are looking at whether we need... or how we are going to improve that situation. Whether they are at reception all the time or occasionally take comfort breaks or otherwise... I am not there.

It seems to me that I am almost expected to be baby-sitting every employee in the Health Authority. With 1,000 employees, I probably have to be in this Parliament for longer than the Hon. Mr Bossano to be able to achieve that. (Laughter and applause)

Primary Care Centre repeat prescription service Procedure

Clerk: Question 516, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how the GHA's new repeat prescription service at the Primary Care Centre, which does not require taking up an appointment with a GP, will work?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, we are currently considering the different models of repeat prescription and the requirements of such a service. A working group, comprised of General Practitioners, staff from the Prescription Pricing Advisory Unit and members of the primary care management team is carrying out the study, in keeping with our manifesto commitment of involving clinicians in developing policy and procedures.

I have already expanded the prescribing role of Nurse Practitioners, which will be implemented very soon. This was, Mr Speaker, gazetted last week, so Nurse Practitioners will now be able to sign prescriptions, which is the first step in moving this forward.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister suggesting that perhaps a Nurse Practitioner will be assigned to just dealing with repeat prescriptions?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Once again, we have a working group which involves clinicians who are coming up with their recommendations. Nurse Practitioners will now be able to form part of the solution, but they will not necessarily be the only solution, and I cannot commit myself to what exactly the outcome of this will be.

I am not going to impose a programme on anybody, without first giving this working group, which has broad representation, the opportunity to come up with what they think will work best in the environment in which they work.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, does the Minister have an idea when the working group will be coming up with a proposal?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, sir.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And, finally, Mr Speaker, does the Minister know if they will be considering extending the repeat prescription system that exists for children with chronic conditions who attend specialist clinics at St Bernard's Hospital?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that again is a complex supplementary, because there are all sorts of matters there. I have not got a view or information on that, I am awaiting that this working group responds on all matters.

If there is a particular concern regarding children, then I will make sure that the working group places that on their agenda.

GHA Finance & Procurement Directorate New HEO in post

Clerk: Question 517, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health advise when the new HEO for the Finance & Procurement Directorate of the GHA will be in post?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the closing date for applications for various vacancies at the HEO grade, including the HEO for the Finance & Procurement Directorate of the GHA, was Friday, 15th June. An interview board will be convened in due course.

GHA Procurement and Stores Concerns, risks and implications

Clerk: Question 518, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, as part of the GHA's Director for Finance & Procurement's report for the GHA Board on 31st May, under 'Procurement and Stores Restructure', he states, and I quote:

'Stock control, security and the frontline management in stores continue to be very serious concerns and a risk (that if not addressed permanently) could have serious financial and patient care implications.'

Can the Minister for Health tell us what the risk, financial and patient care implications are and how he will be addressing them?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the GHA stores have long suffered from inadequate resourcing and failure to address longstanding problems. This includes both Human Resources and Information Technology.

In the 21st century, the lack of a computerised stock system could result in supply failure with consequent results impacting negatively on patient care. Staff need to be supported by up-to-date systems and with this view, the GHA has completed a full review of the stores function and is now proceeding with its implementation.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister give us details of the review, please?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: First of all, Mr Speaker, I will say that the deficiencies were identified during the term of the previous administration. I do not have all the details here, but it will include re-grading of some of the staff involved in the running of stores, and introducing a number of systems which will allow stock control and cross-checking to be improved.

Once we have been able to solve the Human Resource aspects, then, as part of the general thrust to include Information Technology, we will be moving towards Information Technology as a way of stock control.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm if he will be employing more individuals for that Department?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I recall, the Department is wider than just the stores and it is also the administration that goes into it. We are going to be re-designating the responsibilities and gradings within the stores themselves and providing more support.

So indirectly... although perhaps not actually on the ground, as there should be more human resources that will be dealing with stores, but that might not necessarily mean that there are going to be more people actually in the stores putting or taking things off the shelves, because the resource limits also have to do with how that is administered.

Occupational Therapy Outstanding repairs/refurbishment in properties

Clerk: Question 519, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health state how many outstanding reports there are, originating from the Occupational Therapy Department, for repairs/refurbishment to be undertaken in: (a) Government flats; (b) co-ownership flats; and (c) private sector properties; and the cost of the works and equipment per report?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I must point out that Occupational Therapy (OT) does not involve itself in the actual repairs or refurbishment, but in assessing and recommending environmental alterations in response to disability.

500 Part (a): the first part Government flats, there are 36 jobs on the Housing Agency list that have been subcontracted out and are being processed. This means that their OT reports are up to date and the equipment/fittings required have been ordered.

505 Eight more cases have been identified as pending by OT and have been highlighted to the Housing Agency, awaiting a plan of action; nine other cases are being processed by the Housing Agency; 14 new cases have just been sent to the Housing Agency and these are completely new referrals.

The total, adding that up, stands at 67. The oldest cases stretch back to 2009.

510 The community waiting list for assessment now stands at a different 41 cases. This does not include, either, Albert Risso. To summarise these, there are 17 cases identified from the beginning of the occupation of this building as having environmental issues. These have now had OT reports carried out and these have been handed over to JBS, who have been commissioned to carry out these works.

515 Some new referrals to Albert Risso are now included in the 41 in the community waiting list.

There is at present no system for refurbishment of private or co-owned properties.

Regarding costs, as the requests are outstanding, there are no costs available. Costs will be available once the work has been carried out.

515 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, just for the sake of clarification, when the Minister speaks about 41 on the community waiting list, is he referring to houses which are in the co-ownership scheme?

520 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, these are not related to where they are, but related to the list that the OT has waiting for assessment out in the community. Those have not been divided into your categories.

The ones I divided into categories are the actual outstanding jobs. These 41 I have added for your benefit are ones that have not yet been processed and therefore I have not recorded them as outstanding.

Clerk: Question –

525 Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a further supplementary question?

For the sake of clarification, when the Hon. Minister speaks about costs, is he referring just presumably to the cost involved by way of purchasing equipment, but not necessarily the cost by way of alteration in particular Government property or any other property outside?

530 So is he clear? When he talks about cost, he is separating the purchase of equipment, either for medical or disability issues, against construction costs for alteration of a property. Can he make that clear?

535 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question that has been asked by the hon. Member: what I have said is that the question was on outstanding reports, therefore if they are outstanding, the works have not been completed, so I do not know the costs.

I will put it back to the hon. Member that if he wants to distinguish between equipment and refurbishment, then if he asks that in the future, once the jobs have been done, then I could attempt to get the information divided out but really; it is not up to me but up to him, because he has, after all, asked the question.

540 Hon. J J Netto: I think that the hon. Gentleman also mentioned, if I understood him correctly, that there were a number of reports which have been outsourced, not necessarily to the Housing Works Agency. I think he mentioned something to that effect. What I would like to clarify: whether if some works have been outsourced for the works to be carried out outside the Housing Works Agency; if that is the case, to whom has the work gone – to JBS or to somebody else?

545 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in the answer I was very specific to say that it was Albert Risso House which were cases that we thought needed to have fairly rapid assistance and those were handed over, according to the information I have been provided, to JBS.

550 Hon. J J Netto: So, do I take it, then, that all the reports that there are, are either already done, prepared and have been channelled across to the Housing Agency, done by the OTs, in the OT Department of the GHA, all refer to Government flats? No OT report may refer to a co-ownership, perhaps somebody living in Gib V or in Harbour Views or Montagu Gardens. Are we saying that all those reports, all of them, are in relation to people who are living in Government flats? Is that the case or not?

555 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am assuming that if they are jobs that have been given to the Housing Agency, that would be correct. That is an assumption; I can go back and check it, to see whether the information is not as clear as has been presented here. It certainly does not include... In fact I did say, yes, I did say it – that at present there is no system for the refurbishment of private or co-owned properties based on OT reports. So I did say that.

560 So you are correct, these must be houses, yes.

Hon. J J Netto: I am not quite sure that is necessarily in place. I do recall that there were referrals in my time, certainly, of people who needed alteration, I think it was in Gib V, Sir William Jackson Grove, so there is a system in place – not an elaborate system, I would say, but certainly there was a system of getting a report and getting the works done.

565

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have dealt with at least one, but they are on an ad hoc system, based on urgency of need, yes. Rather than a routine system, it is one which is considered on its merits but, yes, in that respect, yes, not a system but there are possibilities of making exceptions.

570

Gibraltar Sponsored Patients Assistance from Gibraltar House, London

575

Clerk: Question 520, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health tell us how the Gibraltar House in London will be improving the way it assists Gibraltar Sponsored Patients?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, currently the role and duties performed by the Gibraltar House in London remain unchanged. They continue providing the ongoing service to some of our sponsored patients, such as paying some sponsored patients and escorts their maintenance and travel allowances, liaising with the Gibraltar Sponsored Patients' Office with regard to patients' issues, visiting patients in hospital when requested by the Gibraltar Sponsored Patients' Office.

We are looking at increasing those resources, so that more time can be dedicated to these needs.

590

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister elaborate on what he means by 'increasing resources'?

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is not finally decided, but we are looking at the possibility of having a dedicated officer to deal with sponsored patients which would mean that it would be this person's, or one whole person's equivalent, duties to deal with these issues, which would give them more time and set up a better relationship with the patients and their relatives to the point, perhaps, of not having necessarily the relatives coming to the Gibraltar House to get their allowances: perhaps they could visit Calpe House or some of the hospitals or the hotels in which they are staying.

So, basically, it is giving more time to being able to give assistance to our patients and the relatives, who are usually going through quite a stressful and worrying time, to be able to give a little more support than they are getting at the moment.

EQUALITY AND SOCIAL SERVICES

610

Gladys Perez Centre
Opening times and services offered

Clerk: Question 521, The Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

615

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services tell us how often the Gladys Perez Centre opens, what services are offered from there and by which organisations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

620

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the Gladys Perez Centre opens seven days a week throughout the day. It is used by various organisations.

The fundamental principle for the majority of these groups is discretion and anonymity and I therefore do not feel it appropriate to disclose further details in Parliament.

625

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister suggesting that it is mental health-related charities only that use the Centre?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Absolutely not.

630

I do not know how the hon. Member could have jumped to that conclusion. Perhaps if she were to listen to the answer, as opposed to maybe – (Members: Ooh!) It is a broad answer: perhaps I would invite the hon. Member to read between the lines and, of course, it is, as I said, sensitive groups who use this location.

635

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, seeing that playgroup at baby time and lunch club playgroup use the Centre on Fridays from 9.30 in the morning to 2.30 p.m. and the breast feeding group 'Baby Steps' also use it, could health related charities also use the Centre to hold their support group meetings on days or at times when it is not being used by mainly mental health users?

640

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I repeat the Centre is not mainly used by mental health users. Again, I do not know how the hon. Member jumps to that conclusion. I have had no requests for use of the Gladys Perez Centre: in any event, it is now fully booked, Mr Speaker, and that is the position.

645

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I understand that Breast Cancer Support Gibraltar was told by yourself and by your PA on several occasions that they could not hold their once-a-month evening support group meetings for breast cancer sufferers and survivors at the Centre. Can the Minister confirm that if an hour once a month in the evening is available that a health related charity could use the Centre to support sufferers of their disease?

650

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member seems to have been misinformed. I had a telephone conversation with someone from that charity who asked for the use of the Gladys Perez Centre on a specific date at a specific time, and that allocation was already used by another society. Any society who may seek the use of the Centre is free to contact me in the same way as that society contacted me, Mr Speaker.

655

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Speaker, can the Minister confirm then, that this charity can get back in touch with yourself and the PA to request a suitable time once a month, in order to hold support group meetings.

660

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I should have said that they are, of course, free to contact my Department, as opposed to myself directly, but again I repeat, this is in relation to a request months ago and I have not had any requests since, Mr Speaker.

Any request will depend on the availability of the location at the time of the request.

Patients with medical conditions or urgent need Breakdown and location

665

Clerk: Question 522, the Hon. J J Netto.

670

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the information provided in answer to Question No. Written 94/2012, can the Minister for Social Services provide a breakdown of those persons with Alzheimer's and Dementia, other medical conditions, and those with an urgent need, who are currently in St Bernard's Hospital, John Cochrane Ward, the KGV Hospital, the Jewish Home and in the community?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

675

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, on the basis of the answer to Question 94/2012 (which was in relation to those waiting for a place at Mount Alvernia), the following is a breakdown of people in St Bernard's Hospital, John Cochrane Ward, KGV Hospital and the Jewish Home with Alzheimer's and Dementia and other medical condition and those with a high need of social care. Of course, there is a slight variation to the figures which were provided in response to Question 94 last month, as the information now provided relates to the current position, as is requested. I now hand the hon. Member the information.

680

ANSWER TO QUESTION 522 OF 2012

	Alzheimer's/Dementia	Other Medical Conditions	Urgent Social Care
St Bernard's Hospital	15	12	27
John Cochrane Ward	20	11	0
KGV Hospital	15	7	22
Jewish Home	1	2	0
Community	8	9	9

685

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the information, but one of the things that is obvious that has dawned on me just now, is that I left out Calpe Ward, obviously. I do not know whether she has the information available now or whether I will just simply write to her and she may be able to provide me with that information.

It is just, if she has not got the information now, she has not got the information, and it is a question of simply writing to her subsequently.

690

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, no I do not have the information because the question was not asked but the same statistical information, I would be happy to provide it if the question is put to me.

695

Hospital for Alzheimer's and Dementia patients
Staffing requirements and cost

Clerk: Question 523, the Hon. J J Netto.

700

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that the Government has made a decision to revert back to having a 66 bed hospital for Alzheimer and Dementia sufferers, as answered in Question 273/2012, has the Government now received from the senior management of the Care Agency the proposed extra staff requirement needed and, if so, could the Minister for Social Services provide a breakdown of the numbers and grades involved and the cost of employing the new staff?

705 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, it is not true to say that the Government has made a decision to revert to a 66 bed residential unit for Alzheimer's and Dementia.

710 What I said in response to Question 273/2012, which was at the time, in March 2012, that instead of working from the 80 plan, which was the plan that the construction company were working from at the time that we took office, we in principle at that time, reverted to the initial plans, which had been prepared by the architects for the previous administration, as in the first set of plans. Those plans were for a 66 bed unit where, in fact, 58 beds were for Alzheimer and Dementia.

715 I then went on to say that the plans needed to be considered by an expert in Dementia design and we were waiting for the expert to tell us whether the layout was acceptable or not.

720 The Government has commissioned an expert on Dementia design to advise and revise plans on the suitability of the building, its layout and occupancy so that when residents are admitted to the Dementia Unit they can enjoy a building which is fit for purpose and complies with minimal useable space guidelines for an existing building and includes recreational space. We are waiting for the final revised plans. The staffing requirements will be provided as soon as the bed occupancy is finally agreed.

725 Looked after children
Training programme

Clerk: Question 524, the Hon. J J Netto.

730 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if further progress has been made in finding suitable training programmes for the remaining five Looked After Children referred to in Question 171/2012, and, if so, what the training will consist of, when the training will start and who will provide such training?

735 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

740 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this question now applies to four Looked After Children – the reason will be explained to the hon. Member on a confidential basis. Of these, one child has been successful at interview and will commence employment on 21st June. Well, has commenced already – this was drafted a few days ago. The details of this are being provided to the Opposition on a confidential basis.

745 With regard to the remaining three Looked After Children referred to in Question 171/2012, I can say that progress has been made in finding suitable training programmes. A pathway has been established between Social Services and ETCL and interviews have been secured for two of the Looked After Children. Further details in relation to this, again, are provided to the Opposition on a confidential basis.

750 Hon. J J Netto: Generally speaking, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer. It seems that we have had some progress, at least certainly in the number of them, but it seems that we are a little bit stuck, perhaps, with one particular person... oh... okay, Mr Speaker.

755 Persons in the community with debilitating diseases
Details and care provided

Clerk: Question 525, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the information contained in answer to Question No. 399/2012, which states that there are 19 persons with a debilitating disease in the community, can the Minister for Social 760 Services state how many have (a) a mild and (b) an acute condition and of those with an acute condition whether they are receiving any help from the Care Agency in the form of carers and other services?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

765 Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the 19 people referred to in Question 399/2012 with debilitating diseases in the community all have chronic conditions. Further information is provided on a confidential basis.

770 Fifteen are receiving help from the Care Agency in the form of social work, domiciliary care hours or payments for domiciliary care. 4 are not receiving any support from the Care Agency at the present time because no referrals or requests have been received.

Care Agency residential homes
Recordable acts of violence

775

Clerk: Question 526, the Hon. J J Netto.

780 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if there have been any recordable acts of violence in any of the Care Agency residential homes, since this question was asked in Question No. 402/2012, and, if so, could the Minister provide a breakdown showing the date of the incident or incidents, whether the incident or incidents were between children or between children and staff and whether, as a result of the incident, medical attention was required either in the Home or in the Hospital and for what purpose?

785 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since the question was asked in Question No. 402/2012 there have been seven incidents. I now hand the hon. Member the requested information.

790 None of the incidents resulted in the need for medical attention and it must be noted that while these incidents are recorded as 'acts of violence' they were all mild and within the realms of acceptable adolescent behaviour, mirroring sibling rivalry.

Care Agency Looked After Children
Details of absconding

795

Clerk: Question 527, the Hon J J Netto.

800 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if any Looked After Children in any of the Care Agency residential homes have absconded since this question was last asked in Question No. 404/2012 and, if so, state how long the absconding lasted, whether the absconding was in Gibraltar or Spain, and whether any of these children have a track record of engaging in acts of violence against any other children or staff members?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, since this question was last asked in Parliament there have been several incidents of absconding, involving two Looked After Children. I now hand the hon. Member the requested information and, in addition to this – to these incidents – there is also the issue of the 17 year old from the Republic of Guinea, as explained in last month's session, Question 404/2012.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 527 of 2012

Name of LAC	Date	Length of time LAC absconded	Any track record of violence towards staff or LAC	Absconding in Gibraltar or Spain
A	6 th June 2012	2 hours	Yes	Gibraltar
B	10 th June 2012	56 hours	No	Gibraltar
A	12 th June 2012	5 hours 5 minutes	Yes	Gibraltar
B	14 th June 2012	30 hours 25 minutes	No	Gibraltar
B	16 th June 2012	34 hours 25 minutes	No	Gibraltar
B	18 th June 2012	5 hours 10 minutes	No	Gibraltar
B	19 th June 2012	Still missing	No	Gibraltar

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, on a supplementary question for the sake of clarifying something from the list that the hon. Lady has provided for, there is one particular incident, which is incident B, if I can call it that, where the length of the absconding lasted 56 hours. Now, that is quite a considerable period of time, if I may say. Given that length of time, did it trigger perhaps that to try and find that particular child, the Care Agency had to call upon the police to assist in searching around Gibraltar, because certainly it was in Gibraltar – can she perhaps elaborate on that?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I can confirm that the Care Agency have called upon police in this situation and although this child is recorded as having 'absconded', because that is a technical term used, the child nevertheless is in contact with both the Care Agency, the parents and other children in care. It is just that the child is not returning to the home at night, but the Care Agency are aware of the whereabouts, the police know where this child is.

Hon. J J Netto: Just for the sake of clarification, so I can get a grip on this because, again, there is a repetition in listing the information provided from child B. It mentions that he is still missing, as from 19th June – I do not know whether this has changed or has not changed, or if this is relating to the information that the hon. Lady has just provided when she stood the last time. Can she perhaps clarify for my benefit?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I understand it, this Looked After Child has been in touch today, this morning: in fact, I understand that she had a meeting at the Care Agency this morning. I checked just before coming and I understand that she has been in today.

So, even though this was prepared yesterday so that it was as accurate as possible, she has been at the Care Agency premises today. Mr Speaker, and I am, given the sensitivities of this situation, I am now loathe to provide further details of this matter in Parliament – I am happy to discuss it with the hon. Member on a confidential basis.

I do not think that there is much to be gained from giving further details, particularly not today.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, by all means because there are some questions in the back of my mind which I still need to try and take into account in relation to this so, yes, I am grateful for the offer by the hon. Lady because certainly I will want to take it up.

Care Agency
2012 training programme

Clerk: Question 529, the Hon J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that the Care Agency now has the new training programme for this financial year, will the Minister for Social Services kindly provide a copy to the shadow Minister?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, this question has already been asked in Written Question 92/2012 and a written response provided.

Rule 17(v) of the Gibraltar Parliament Standing Rules and Orders precludes the same question from being asked if the answer was provided within the preceding six months.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that we are talking about quite a relative unimportant issue, like a training programme, I just wonder why the hon. Lady feels so compelled to quote Standing Orders, as some kind of a defence as if the issue in hand is something so terrible (A Member: The rules.) – so terrible about it. The question is, if I can refer to the written answer in which she says ‘this is an internal document’ and therefore she will not provide a copy. Now...

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Point of Order, Mr Speaker.

If the hon. Member is going to read my response then I think he should read the whole of the response where I actually – I will read it myself, and it says:

‘I would agree to show this to the hon. Member in confidence.’

I think, Mr Speaker, as a Point of Order and for the sake of completeness, everything should have been read.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, there is no point in reading the whole of the answer because, actually, all we are talking about is four sentences – it is not an issue. The answer she provided was:

‘I can confirm that the Care Agency has now prepared the new training programme for the period 1st April 2012 to 31st March 2013. This is an internal document, not a public document, and as such I will not make a copy available. I would agree to show this to the hon. Member in confidence.’

Now, the reason why I asked an oral question, as opposed to a written question this time around, is because, personally, I am not satisfied with the answer given in the written answer. I am not satisfied because, yes, of course, it is an internal document, like all internal documents which is being prepared to by every single....

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, Point of Order.

Is the hon. Member dealing with the substance of the question or dealing with the Point of Order? A Point of Order has been made and it has to be addressed, rather than going into the substance of the question. If the question is out of order, it is out of order.

Mr Speaker: No but I imagine you are answering the Point of Order taken by the Hon. Minister.

Hon. J J Netto: No, I was not talking about the Point of Order.

Mr Speaker: Well, in that case, I am afraid I must interrupt the hon. Gentleman.

The Hon. Minister has cited Standing Order Rule 17(v) and that is what the Standing Order says. She cannot be faulted for citing Standing Orders.

The Standing Order in question says:

‘The question shall not refer to any debate that has occurred or answer that has been given within the preceding six months.’

Now, I understand the answer to Written Question 92/2012 from the Hon. Minister was that she is not content to hand the document to the hon. Member but was willing to allow him sight of the document. That was the answer given.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, strictly speaking, Standing Orders say you cannot ask questions within six months and the Hon. Minister is right about that. Very often we waived – I am talking on the Standing Order, sorry on the Point of Order – very often, on both sides of the House – we have been in Government, and now them – Ministers do not take those kind of points, particularly now when we have, as well, Parliament on a monthly basis, it becomes much more difficult not to ask a question that has not been referred to in the previous six months.

Look, she is right. If she does not want to provide the answer, that is the end of the matter.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is not a matter of not providing the answer. The answer has been provided: that is the whole point.

The question has been asked and the answer has been provided. What the hon. Member has said is that he is not satisfied with the answer, but the point that the hon. Member makes about monthly meetings and an element of flexibility – generally the issue does not arise. The issue is overcome, because when Question Time is used for the purposes that it is normally used, which is to elicit information, when information is elicited, for example, as at a particular day when a question is asked in January, then the information may be different in February, so the same question might be asked in respect of the period up to February. So, it might be phrased in the same way or very similar way, but it is not exactly the same question.

Mr Speaker: A different context.

Hon. G H Licudi: It is a different context, and a different time period might appear, so that issue does not really arise in respect of monthly meetings.

The issue here is that exactly the same question has been asked in one form, and now the hon. Member wants to ask it in a different form because he is not satisfied with the answer. It is not that the answer has not been given, the answer has been given and that is the answer that stands for the record.

Mr Speaker: I think that we need not debate this too much, because I think the Hon. Daniel Feetham has conceded...

Hon. J J Netto: Just to make a very small point...

Mr Speaker: No, would you allow me, please, to make my point.

The Hon. Daniel Feetham has conceded the point in that so I really do not think we need to trouble ourselves with a further debate on that.

Yes, there has been a degree of flexibility, the view I have taken over the years, and I have conducted myself in terms of Standing Orders, is unless the infringement is so gross, I have tended not to intervene, allow the question to be put, or allow the point to be made. Only if a Member on the other side has raised the issue, then I have had to step in with some sort of ruling. That is the flexibility area.

945

In this case the hon. Lady has specifically invoked the rules and the rules are clear there for everybody to see and my view is she will have to stand on that rule.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, may I add to that, that I did in my previous....

950

Mr Speaker: May I just say, there is a danger – I do not wish to – there is a danger if I allow the hon. Lady to have her say I will have to allow somebody on the other side to have a say, as well, and I do not think... we are quite deep into Friday afternoon.

955

Multi-Agency Child Committee Issues presented at April and May meetings

960

Clerk: Question 530, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services state if the multi-agency Child Committee has met in the months of April and May, and if it has, could the hon. Lady state what specific issues were discussed, inclusive of the issues discussed at the meeting of 13th March?

965

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality and Social Services.

Minister for Equality and Social Services (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the multi agency Child Protection Committee did not meet in the months of April or May 2012.

970

As stated in response to Written Question 89/2012, the Child Protection Committee met on 13th March 2012 and a response relating to the specific issues detailed at that meeting has been provided.

Rule 17(v) of the Gibraltar Parliament Standing Rules and Orders precludes this question from being asked if the answer was provided within the preceding six months.

975

Hon. J J Netto: I think that I understood the hon. Lady as saying that details of 13th March are being provided for. I cannot recall from memory now what sort of details she gave me, certainly not in the context of information that has been provided by her to previous meetings. For instance, information provided by her on the Question Written 46/2012: she does provide a fair amount of information as to the kind of issues that were discussed at the meeting on 29th November. Certainly on the meeting of 13th March she has not provided that kind of information, hence the reason why I am asking the information.

980

So, I just wonder whether the hon. Lady, given that at least we have the meeting of 13th March, not obviously the ones of April and May, which have been cancelled for whatever reasons, could she provide the same kind of information as she has provided Parliament before?

985

Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, is the hon. Member asking for the same information in respect of the March meeting or other meetings?

990

Hon. J J Netto: The hon. Lady has said, if I understood her correctly, that the meetings scheduled for April and May have been cancelled for some reason, so obviously the meeting has not gone ahead. Obviously, there is no discussion at those meetings, therefore removing April and May out of the question... The only meeting that I am aware of that has happened is the meeting of 13th March, and if that is the only meeting that has happened, part of my question is can I have the same kind of information that she has provided Parliament, when I have asked this question before, which is Written Question 46/2012?

995

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the reason that the hon. Member knows that there was a meeting of the Child Protection Committee on 13th March is because this was part of my response to Written Question 89/2012. Therefore, Mr Speaker, I am, once again, seeking to rely on Rule 17(v), in that the question relating to the meeting of 13th March has already been asked, and has already been answered.

1000 The answer to that question was that the meeting was not a public meeting, and given the sensitivity of the child protection issues discussed, it is not felt appropriate that these should be made public without the consent of the Committee, Mr Speaker.

The position today is the same, because it is the same answer to the same question that was put to me last month, Mr Speaker, in relation to the same meeting – the meeting of 13th March.

1005 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the hon. Lady herself has said, in her contribution just now, that I found out about this as a result of a different question. So, whatever form, shape or manner upon which I may have found out that there was a meeting on 13th March, it is neither here or there. The issue at stake here is that I am asking in Parliament that, given that I have found out, even if it was in part of another question that she was asked in, whether she can give me the information over the issues that were discussed, as she has provided that kind of information to a previous question – I do not know whether it was five or six months ago. I am asking for the same treatment as she afforded me at the beginning of Parliament, when Parliament was constituted after the Election.

1010 Is she now saying to Parliament that she is going to be looking more at Standing Orders to deny and degrade the quality of parliamentary discussion in this Parliament, so that I do not get information to be able to scrutinise her, on the basis of Standing Orders, or is she going to provide me with answers which she has already provided me at the beginning of this Parliament? Is it going to be a question of allowing a mature democracy for people to be able to listen to the debate, or are we going to be quoting Standing Orders every five seconds?

1020 Hon. G H Licudi: I am not sure, Mr Speaker, where the hon. Member was for the last four years. Certainly, in the four years that I was sitting on that side, specifically the same position that the hon. Member was and the sort of treatment that we were given on that side, and the sort of answers. We have adopted a very, very different policy, as the hon. Member knows, and I will not rehearse the arguments that were across the floor of this House [inaudible] yesterday, in respect of the quality of democracy and the quality of parliamentary debate which exists now in Gibraltar, and in which the hon. Member is very well aware of, given that he is here today on the... is it the fourth or fifth time of this year? – when on previous years, we never were afforded the opportunity of being in this Parliament on four or five occasions. So let not the hon. Member give us lectures on the quality of parliamentary debate and the sort of information that is given, because that was, as I understood yesterday, well sorted out in the debate in one of the questions.

1025 The position with this particular question, Mr Speaker, is that the hon. Member did ask, in the Written Question, what specific issues arose in respect of that particular meeting, and the answer that was given was in respect of the meeting on 13th March. The meeting was not a public meeting and given the sensitivity of child protection issues discussed it is not felt appropriate that these should be made public without the consent of the Committee.

1030 And what the hon. Member is now asking is (Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) can the hon. Lady state what specific issues were discussed, inclusive of the issues discussed at the meeting of 13th March. Well, in respect of the issues discussed on 13th March, the answer was already given: it was not a public meeting, and there are sensitive issues.

1035 One would hope that the hon. Member, having sat on this side of the House – not just on this side of the House, but having done the job that the hon. Lady is now doing – that he would understand the sensitive child protection issues which arise.

1040 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: He said it last month.

1045 Hon. G H Licudi: As I understand, he conceded the point on a previous occasion last month, in respect of a different matter, that he understands specifically that, in respect of the job that he used to do and in respect of the job the hon. Lady now does, there are sensitive issues on which there cannot simply be a public debate, because of the child issues that arise. Given that that is the position, that he asked previously and he was told for this reason he cannot be given details of the issues, and he has now asked again for details of the issues, that is why the answer has been given.

1050 It is not a question of degrading parliamentary debate or anything like that. The question has been asked and answered already and the position today is exactly the same as it was when the question was answered.

Mr Speaker: I think the position is fairly clear. The substantive question comes in two parts: one asks for the outcome of the discussions at a meeting which were presumed to have been held in April and May and also re-visits the issues discussed at the meeting of 13th March.

The answer is very clear: there was no meeting in April or May and therefore that does not arise. On 13th March, there was a Written Question put to the Minister, No. 89, which refers specifically to the meeting of 13th March and a response was provided in writing and that has been read out again today.

That, in my view, clearly falls within Rule 17(v). It is exactly the same position as the previous question, the previous ruling.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I cannot accept the fact (Interjection) that they are now saying that they cannot provide the information of the meeting of 13th March because there are so many sensitive issues and that therefore they do not want to put such sensitive issues in the domain of Parliament and hence the public at large, which may connect those issues with those particular children. Well, it is not a very good argument to say that, because the hon. Lady, when I asked the original Question 46/2012 –

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I will not go there again, as I said earlier. The hon. Member is now getting into the substance of the question, when the Hon. Mr Speaker has ruled that the question cannot be put.

Mr Speaker: Well, I was not going to allow the hon. Gentleman to go into the substance of the question, but I would give him the courtesy of hearing him – albeit perhaps slap him down, but I will hear him!

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the point I am trying to labour on is on the issue that they are trying to say the matter for discussion in the multi-disciplinary Child Protection Committee is so sensitive that we cannot provide it, and I am saying it just does not stand, the argument, because the hon. Lady already, in the previous question, has provided me with information.

All I am saying is, if she felt that it was so sensitive that children could be identified, then why did she give me the information on Written Question 46/2012?

Now, anyone who looks at Hansard and looks at the answer that she gave me will see that you cannot identify any particular children as a result of the answer she gave me. What is happening here, Mr Speaker, is what I said before. The hon. Lady is simply degrading the quality of discussion in this Parliament, simply by keeping me uninformed from my duties and my responsibilities to be able to scrutinise her. That is all she is doing, by quoting Standing Orders and by trying to provide this information. She has already given me the information before, so there is no question of sensitivity!

Mr Speaker: I appreciate that the hon. Member is not satisfied with the answer given to the Written Question. I appreciate that, and the dissatisfaction arises from a previous course of dealing (Hon. J J Netto: Exactly.) which was different. I appreciate that part of it.

But, looking at Rule 17(v), the question relating to 13th March was put in Written Question 89 and a particular answer was given – however unsatisfactory the hon. Member may consider the answer to be, in the light of previous dealings. But looking at it from Rule 17(v) today, sitting where I am, I have to take the view, a question was asked and answered, however unsatisfactorily, in the last six months, and I cannot really allow it to be re-visited.

Hon. D A Feetham: No, no, I quite understand. The problem that we have here, of course – and, of course, we must accept Mr Speaker's ruling in relation to this – is that there appears to have been two answers, one in March and one earlier. So, of course, my hon. Friend, Mr Netto, goes back to not the March one, but to the earlier one. He is going back to that one and the quality of the answer that was provided, where more information was, in fact, provided than in the March answer. Look, it raises the interesting question of when you have inconsistent answers! Which one is the answer that the Hon. Ministers would like?

But Mr Speaker has ruled and that is the end of the matter.

Mr Speaker: I hope that Members appreciate that is the view I should take.

Hon. D A Feetham: Absolutely, and that is the end of the matter.

Mr Speaker: Can we move on to the next question –

1110 Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, can I just clarify something in respect of what the hon. Member has just said.
It may be that he has not fully understood what his colleague has said. It is not a question that there had been inconsistent answers in respect of the same subject matter. The previous answer was in respect of something different – in respect of a different meeting. We accept that a question was asked in respect of a meeting earlier in the year, and was answered in a particular way and a question was then asked in respect of another meeting and was answered in a different way.

1115 So to the extent that there is inconsistency, it is not in respect of inconsistency on the same question, (Interjections) but the same type of question. We accept that –

Mr Speaker: Order, order.

1120 Hon. G H Licudi: We accept that that is the case. A view was taken in January as to the appropriateness of answering a question in a particular way and then a different view has been taken, as from March, as to the appropriateness, given the issues that arise in this particular case.

1125 The hon. Member may be not content, not satisfied, with the quality of the answer, but I just wanted to set up that chronology, to the extent that the hon. Member can say there has been an inconsistency in an approach. Well, yes, on reconsideration of the issues that arise, and in respect of a different meeting –

Hon. J J Netto: No, it was the same type of Committee meeting –

1130 Hon. G H Licudi: No, in respect of a different meeting, a different view was taken by the Government, and that is the view that was taken, so I just wanted to clarify that issue of inconsistency, just for the hon. Members –

1135 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I think that is, in fact, a fair and accurate reflection of the situation. What we would say is there may well have been different meetings, but there is a change of policy in respect of the same type of meeting from January to March, and hence the questions that my hon. Friend has actually asked and that is why he has been critical of the approach.

Mr Speaker: I think we can move on to the next Question now.

HOUSING AND THE ELDERLY

Empty flats awaiting repairs/reallocation Details

1145

Clerk: Question 531, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1150 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs, giving a breakdown in respect of Pre-war and Post-war flats, flat size composition, the dates as from when these flats have been empty and the category/type of repairs which are required to be undertaken before they may be reallocated?

1155 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

I may supply general information as the schedule goes round and say that up to 134 flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 531

Up to 134 flats are currently empty and awaiting repairs.

Table 1 shows the number of empty flats for cleaning/refurbishment (post and pre-war) by room composition.

Table 2 highlights the number of empty flats per year and room composition. Specific dates per flat cannot be provided.

1160 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in respect of the section within my question that said 'the dates as from when these flats have been empty', can the Hon. Minister enlighten me a bit further because I see, from the year there, is that the only amount of information he is able to provide in respect of dates?

1165 Hon. C A Bruzon: We are hopeful that the hon. Member will accept a date by year, because going into details would require a vast amount of work and I am hoping that the Member will accept it in that format.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, it is not just my accepting it; it is, as well, the electorate at large speculate a lot on the amount of time that the flats have been lying empty.

1170 For example, sir, when we look here at, let us just say, 2011: the 69 flats, it could well be that a bulk of them just came into the repair market after the summer recess more into the last quarter, whereas if one is talking of the first quarter of 2011, then a period of more than 12 months have passed. Therefore, from whatever side of the House, one could start at least to raise a bit of concern, in saying 'Are the works being undertaken within a reasonable period of time? Does it require greater manpower, or not?' It does not allow me sufficient information to be able to analyse and perhaps even recommend and have a discussion across the floor of the House, whether the kind of manpower of the Housing Works Agency is sufficient or it just does not meet the demands of the tasks that need to be undertaken.

1180 Hon. C A Bruzon: I can assure the hon. Member that I will go back to my staff and enquire if they can provide more details, but at this stage I would not like to promise in Parliament that this will actually happen; but I will certainly go back to them and ask.

The Hon E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, sir, and I think the Hon. Minister may have even picked up... It is not the first time I have brought this question in of the dates, so he can take it as a cue, as well.
1185 But on this side of the House, we will be continuing very much down that line of questioning in the coming months.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just one further supplementary. Just perhaps the Hon. Minister is able to provide some clarification.

1190 Looking at Table 2, the empty flats awaiting refurbishment/cleaning per year, is it...? As an example only, in 2002, there is the number 1 in the row of the 5RKB. Does the Minister know whether this means that there has been a 5RKB property empty since 2002 and it has not yet been dealt with? Is that what that means?

Hon. C A Bruzon: That is exactly what the information says, yes, Mr Speaker.
1195

Health and Safety in Housing Unsafe dwellings

1200 Clerk: Question 532, the Hon. E J Reyes.

The Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many reports of unsafe dwellings are currently pending and how many of these require urgent decanting due to Health and Safety considerations?

1205 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, there are no unsafe dwellings pending which require decanting due to Health and Safety considerations.

1210 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I just want to clarify something.
There are no reports of unsafe dwellings: if the answer is zero, then obviously it follows there are none on the grounds of Health and Safety. There could be some that can be classified as unsafe dwellings, but do not fall under the category of Health and Safety. Can the Hon. Minister clarify that one for me?

1215 Hon. C A Bruzon: The question has been answered exactly as it has been answered.
I will repeat it: there are no unsafe dwellings pending which require decanting due to Health and Safety considerations.

1220 Hon. E J Reyes: No, Mr Speaker sir, my question reads differently. My question is how many reports of unsafe dwellings are currently pending – part (a) – and how many of these require urgent decanting due to Health and Safety?

1225 Perhaps next time I can word them as subparagraphs (a) and (b); but using, I think, a commonsense English interpretation, it is how many reports of unsafe dwellings are currently pending and if there are any, how many of those are then due to Health and Safety considerations?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, last month we had exactly the same question and I answered it in exactly the same way, and the hon. Member accepted it.

1230 It would be helpful, maybe, if he feels that he can be more specific in the way he asks the question, I will be happy to do my utmost to supply the information.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I know Mr Speaker, but when one then looks back with a bit more time in your hands, so as not to delay unnecessarily on a Friday afternoon, to which the hon. Member and I seem to have been relegated at Question Time now, because of the very scarce presence of press and so on, hence the concerns that we express about Friday afternoons –

1235

Mr Speaker: There are people at the beaches listening to us, I am sure!

Hon. E J Reyes: No, but because I have had time to reflect upon it, that is why I am pressing a bit more on it now. But I accept that the Hon. Minister has been provided with that information and he now knows what I am trying to get at.

1240

Either I re-word it or he bears it in mind next time round at Question Time that it does say ‘and therefore from that number’. If it is zero, then it follows that it has to be zero; but you could have a category, you could have one or two dwellings unsafe, none of which then fall under Health and Safety, but –

1245

Mr Speaker: I think it would be helpful in future to break them down into (a) and (b), to make it clear that there are two aspects involved.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I will take your advice, Mr Speaker, thanks.

1250

Clerk: Question –

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I, just for clarification purposes really, when we are talking about decanting someone for Health and Safety considerations, normally we tend to think, in our own mind, that it may be that the structure of the building is a bit unsafe, hence you have got to move the person who is living in that flat out. Will he go beyond that in the sense of saying – and I am talking from experience here – that it is not just sometimes the structure of the building which may be unsound, for which you have to decant somebody; sometimes it could be faulty electricity? To an extent, faulty electricity...

I remember one particular time, many years ago, that I had to decant – which is the only way a Minister can do, decant on Health and Safety – because electricity was in such a condition and as soon as the report landed on my desk, I had to take urgent action, obviously.

So can I, for the sake of clarifying it in my question, when we are talking about the parameters of what constitutes Health and Safety conditions for decanting purposes, does the electricity – or can I put it, the danger of an accident due to electrical fault or because there may be water penetration which is close to a live cable of electricity – that would also constitute part of the Health and Safety for the purpose of decanting somebody?

1265

In other words, if the Housing Inspector, one of your members of staff comes and tells you, ‘Look, the electrician was there doing a report and I am passing it to the Minister, because there is danger of an accident and there may be little children’, that would also form part of the consideration for decanting?

1270

Hon. C A Bruzon: I would probably need notice of that question, but I will do my best to explain that, if there are serious dangers to Health and Safety, because the building is going to collapse because of structural issues, the Housing Department would not hesitate and decant the family immediately.

1275

The level of dangers through electrical problems is relative and therefore, if there is a faulty switch with a bit of water, they will go straight away and maybe do something and help the family out.

So if the Member will accept that explanation –

Hon. J J Netto: I accept it only to the extent that while I accept that there may be a minor electrical matter, that is not a good grounds for decanting somebody.

1280

What I am referring to is that we are not dealing with that sort of small scale of electrical fault; I am talking about a major scale which may constitute an accident for which could sometimes risk the life of a person, of a sitting tenant there. So it is a different category to the normal...

That is what I am trying to get to.

Hon. C A Bruzon: There is no doubt in my mind that if the electrical problem is so huge that it constitutes, as you are hinting, a risk to the life of the person, then they would be decanted immediately. You have my word on that.

Government rental flats
Pending/incomplete repair jobs

1295

Clerk: Question 533, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs are currently listed as pending/incomplete in Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of internal and external repairs, as well as stating the general nature of the works and by whom these are being carried out, broken down into categories of both Pre-war and Post-war housing stocks?

1300

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1305

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

As the information reaches the Opposition Members, I can say, by way of explanation, that there are 640 internal jobs currently listed and there are 3,243 external jobs currently listed.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 533

I submit a reply to this question primarily broken down by (a) internal jobs and (b) external jobs, as follows:

- (a) There are 640 internal jobs currently listed as pending within the Housing Works Agency. These jobs are categorised as follows:-

Work Category – Internal Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bath for shower conversion	1	20	21
Bathroom Unit replacement	3	39	42
Carpentry repairs	25	107	132
Cleaning of flat	9	3	12
Drains, rodding and cleaning	1	2	3
Emergency repairs	5	19	24
Masonry repairs	12	52	64
O/T Repairs/refurbishments	2	45	47
Painting	5	80	85
Plumbing repairs	15	155	170
Refurbishment – empty flats	8	34	42
TOTAL	86	556	642

- (b) There are 3243 external jobs currently listed as pending to be carried out by external works contractors. External jobs vary in nature ranging from repairs to building fabric, to waterproofing/roofing. It is impossible to deliver a detailed categorisation of all 3243 jobs. The following condensed categorisation applies:

Work Category – External Repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
External Building Contractors	532	1930	2462
Windows Replacement Contractors	92	689	781
TOTAL	624	2619	3243

Housing allocations
Flats becoming empty

Clerk: Question 534, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1315

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many flats have become empty and made available for reallocation since his answer to Question No. 416/2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1320

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 50 flats have become empty and made available for reallocation.

1325

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I do not know if the Hon. Minister could or could not have this information at hand. Fifty flats have become empty. I have not given him due notice enough to have the answer, because I said they have been made available for reallocation. Some of those, am I correct in assuming, could have been passed onto the list that is already awaiting cleaning and so on? He wouldn't, by sheer coincidence, happen to have some further information available, would he?

1330

Hon. C A Bruzon: I am happy to explain that these flats are literally ready to be allocated. The keys have been handed over and it is a matter of the Housing Manager and myself looking at whose turn it is next to get a flat and the offer of allocation will be made.

1335

Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker.
It is just because of my initial concern that, in 2012 alone, there are, according to the answer to Question 531, unfortunately, 29 flats that have become empty and not yet available – beyond the Minister's control, sometimes the condition it would have been left and so on. So having seen the number 50 here, for a split second, I said that number could have increased by 200% and it was a bit of a shock.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Well, you are making me think on this one. You may have a point and I will double-check, just to be 100% sure that these 50 are literally ready to be allocated.
I will check on that and let you know.

1345

Hon. E J Reyes: I am so grateful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. C A Bruzon: My understanding is that they are ready, but I will double-check.

1350

Applications for housing
Homeless persons

Clerk: Question 535, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1355

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing confirm, further to his answer given to Question No. 421/2012, how many applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with, giving a breakdown of dates as from when these applications were made?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1360

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 535

A total of 19 applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with.

The breakdown of dates as from when these applications were made is as follows:

June 2008	1
June 2010	2
October 2010	1
November 2010	4
December 2010	1
March 2011	1
May 2011	1
January 2012	2
March 2012	3
April 2012	2
May 2012	1

The information is not too complicated, but I will give some of it orally.

A total of 19 applications for housing from homeless persons are currently being dealt with and the details in terms of dates, the hon. Members opposite will see in the schedule that is now in front of them.

Clerk: Question 536, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Mr Speaker: No, the Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry for the delayed reaction!

As a matter of interest, when we are dealing with homeless persons, or persons who claim to be homeless, can the Minister for Housing perhaps explain to us what procedures are in place to ascertain the veracity, if I can call it that, of a genuine case of someone who is homeless, as opposed to someone who claims to be homeless but is not necessarily homeless?

In other words, what internal procedures does the Ministry for Housing have, to try and detect the genuine, the bona fide cases to the ones who are not genuine and bona fide?

Hon. C A Bruzon: A couple of comments I could make on that, Mr Speaker, and that is inspectors are empowered to knock on the door, in case this gentleman is staying with relatives – just to make sure that this gentleman is not staying in a house with relatives.

There is terminology which the hon. Member may remember from the time when he was Minister for Housing, where a person is ‘technically homeless’ and is not literally living in the street, so some of those would come under that category.

Other than that, I am not sure if I would like to volunteer more information without being 100% sure. There is, of course, the evidence provided sometimes by social workers. These people go to see social workers, and they can come to us and inform the Allocation Committee that these people are a real social case and they really have nowhere to live, so obviously we try to fast track them and help them.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Government rental flats
Pending repairs completed

Clerk: Question 536, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants, since his answer to Question 422/2012, have had their pending repairs completed in respect of Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of how many were internal and external repairs and broken down into the categories of both Pre-war and Postwar housing stock.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1405

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, the schedule that is now being handed over is a very simple schedule, so even though they are getting a schedule, I would like to read out the information orally.

1410

Since the collective answer given to Question 422/2012 there have been a total of 116 tenants that had 162 jobs completed as follows: Pre-war, completed jobs 15, number of tenants 14; Post-war, completed jobs 117, number of tenants 102.

A total of completed jobs 132; and the total number of tenants 116.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 536

Since the collective answer given to Question No.422 of 2012, there have been a total of 116 tenants that had 132 jobs completed, as follows:

INTERNAL

	Completed jobs	No. of tenants
Pre-War	15	14
Post-War	117	102
TOTAL	132	116

No external jobs have been completed since Question No. 422.

1415

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that.

I note in the answer that the Hon. Minister has had to say that no external jobs have been completed since Question 422. Does he have any information that would enlighten us as to why no jobs have been perhaps completed? Perhaps some have been started and not completed – it would help to build up a better picture.

1420

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, absolutely.

External jobs, as the hon. Member will understand, take much, much longer than small internal jobs, so it is precisely since that question was last asked, that no jobs have been completed.

Work is certainly being done, but during the last three or four weeks, no external jobs have been completed.

1425

Hon. E J Reyes: And I know I have not given due notice, Mr Speaker: he would not happen by chance to know how many new external jobs have at least been commenced, additionally?

1430

Hon. C A Bruzon: No.

Hon. E J Reyes: Acceptable, Mr Speaker.

Hon. C A Bruzon: I would need notice of the question, Mr Speaker.

1435

Government housing stock
Tenants requiring work done

1440

Clerk: Question 537, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, broken down into categories of both Pre-war and Post-war housing stock?

1445

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, a total of 1,987 tenants are currently listed as requiring works to be done by Government as landlords, of which 297 reside in Pre-war flats and 1,690 reside in Post-war flats.

1450

Government rental flats
Internal and external repairs completed

1455

Clerk: Question 538, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs, since his answer to Question 423/2012, have been completed in respect of Government rental flats, giving a breakdown of how many were internal and external repairs and the nature of the works undertaken, broken down into categories of both Pre-war and Post-war housing stocks?

1460

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1465

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

The actual total of jobs is 305 completed in respect of Government rental flats.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 538

A total of 305 jobs have been completed in respect of Government rental flats.

Out of this total, 295 jobs were internal jobs completed by the Housing Works Agency and 10 were external jobs completed by the Ministry for Housing. These are further broken down as follows:

1470

Work category – Internal repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
Bathroom unit replacement	-	5	5
Carpentry repairs	6	30	36
Cleaning of flat	2	16	18
Drains, rodding and cleaning	1	7	8
Emergency repairs	14	102	116
Masonry repair	1	5	6
Other – asbestos removal	-	-	-
Painting	-	10	10
Plumbing repairs	6	86	92
Refurbishment – empty flat	-	4	4
TOTAL	30	265	295

Work category – External repairs	Pre-war	Post-war	Total
General	-	-	-
Drains	1	2	3
Lifts	-	7	7
TOTAL	1	9	10

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for that information, Mr Speaker. I am prompted by this comprehensive answer.

1475 The Hon. Minister has listed here 'lifts' and I can see that there are seven falling under Post-war. May I pose to him as a question, could he please look into this further, when he returns back to his Ministry on Monday morning, that in the new Mid Harbour housing estate, I think it is Bow Wave House – it is a particular block there and it has got two lifts, one of which was broken down for a small period of time. Some tenants classify it now as having been 'repaired', because the lift does actually reach up to only certain floors, but those who live on the higher floors classify it as still 'pending repairs'.

1480 Perhaps I will find a minute next week and drop a nice cordial note to the Hon. Minister, but it is one of those categories that, in my experience, having been a Minister on that side of the House, your technical officers say, 'Yes, that job was given out and has been ticked as completed,' but it has not quite been fully completed. So, in case I am slightly delayed next week due to other personal family duties I may have, the 1485 Hon. Minister may want to, during the course of Monday morning, just hint to someone that can they please check out that, because it does affect the quality of life, when someone can only get the lift up to a given floor and have to walk the next steps. When you get to our age, every step seems like a mountain, rather than a hill!

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I will do that Mr Speaker.

1490

Government housing stock
New jobs requiring work

1495 Clerk: Question 539, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many new jobs have been added to the list requiring the attention of the Housing Ministry, since the answer given to Question 424/2012, stating the 1500 category of work required to be undertaken and broken down into categories of both Pre-war and Post-war housing stock?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1505 Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

There are, in fact, a total of 494 new jobs that have been added to the list, of which 96 are external and 398 are internal.

See next page for Schedule:

ANSWER TO QUESTION 539

A total of 494 new jobs have been added to the list of which 96 are external works and 398 are internal works, as follows:-

1510

Government housing stock
Jobs contracted out and cost

Clerk: Question 540, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1515

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many jobs have been contracted out, stating the date, type of work, estimated cost and to which companies by the Housing Ministry, since the answer given to Question 425/2012 and broken down into categories of both Pre-war and Post-war housing stock?

1520

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, I am trying to hand over the information to the Members opposite. The information will be found in the schedule, which is making its way to my hon. Friend. May I say that, since the answer to Question 524/2012, the Housing Ministry has contracted – (Interjection) 425, yes, I beg your pardon. Six jobs have been contracted out.

1525

See next page for Schedule:

ANSWER TO QUESTION 540

Since the answer given to Question No. 425 of 2012, the Housing Ministry has contracted 6 jobs as follows:-

Date	Work Category	Estimated Cost	Company	Type of Housing Stock
16/05/12	Duct Panel Repairs	£820	Skybridge	Post-War
21/05/12	Plumbing repairs	£700	Skybridge	Pre-War
24/05/12	Flooring repairs	£785	Skybridge	Post-War
29/05/12	Flooring repairs	£185	Skybridge	Post-War
30/05/12	External repairs	£1640	Gemini	Post-War
01/06/12	External repairs	£130	Gemini	Post-War

1530

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the hon. Member happen to have any additional information? I see that flooring repairs, repairs to two particular items there, happen to be in Post-war housing stock. My imagination went to Pre-war and I was thinking of the old type of wooden floor that woodworm or whatever could have got the better part of it, but Post-war tend to be a more solid concrete type of thing. Does he happen by mere chance to have any information of what it was about?

1535

Hon. C A Bruzon: I really do not have any more information on that, Mr Speaker. All I can say is that we have attempted at least to give a general explanation as to the jobs in question and that 'flooring repairs' mean 'flooring repairs'.

1540

If the hon. Member wants more details, I can certainly try to provide them for him, but here unfortunately I cannot.

1545

Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. If I do wish to take it up further, I shall obviously have to give due notice.

Thank you.

1550

Co-ownership housing estates
Meetings with Management Companies

Clerk: Question 541, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1555

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state if he has, since his answer to Question 426/2012, held meetings with any management companies of co-ownership housing estates, in order to address any new or ongoing concerns?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1560

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Similarly to the answer given last month, Mr Speaker, no member of any such management company of co-ownership housing estates have approached me for such a meeting.

1565

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I do not doubt what the Hon. Minister says; it is just that I wonder why it is that when committee members of management companies tend to bump into me in some areas, they say to me, 'Oh, I will keep you informed in the future, because I have requested meetings, to look at a particular issue...' The last one that was brought to my attention, it seems that in a particular co-ownership estate, when there are these unfortunate and sudden power cuts, it seems to be affecting some type of machinery and it is just costing them an arm and a leg now to repair it, because they have got to bring in technicians and so on.

1570

It could well be, Mr Speaker – and I am going to give the Minister the benefit of the doubt – that I know what it is like in committees: they discuss it and no-one has quite got down to asking for a meeting. If I do get some more detailed information, would it be acceptable to the Hon. Minister that I then write to him directly and perhaps we can both expedite this matter?

1575 Hon. C A Bruzon: Absolutely, Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if he did that or ask for the persons involved to write to my secretary. But I would be happy either way.

1580 Housing Agency employees
Retirements, transfers and new engagements

Clerk: Question 542, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1585 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many employees have retired or been transferred from the Housing Agency, since his answer to Question 430/2012 and how many new employees have been engaged by the Agency, since that date, in accordance with the agreement reached between Government and the unions?

1590 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Yes, Mr Speaker, no employees have retired or been transferred from the Housing Agency since my answer to Question 430/2012 and no employees have been engaged by the Agency since that date.

1595 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but last time this question was posed and I was given the due schedule that in fact actually gave me then the breakdown of who had been transferred and who had actually retired, I took it that the Hon. the Minister for Employment was also going to get slightly involved, to see what the agreement with the unions had been, because there was an agreement that whereby after so many number of people had exited that Department, there had to be some recruitment. I note that no-one has been taken in, so the Housing Works Agency, of whom I have hinted that we both have to be on the lookout, in case they are not quite producing as much as we would like them to: I feel that they are now suffering from depleted human resources. So one cannot really ask them for a greater output if the actual resources available to produce those repairs and so on have been depleted, rather than being met in accordance with the agreement.

1600 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, but last time this question was posed and I was given the due schedule that in fact actually gave me then the breakdown of who had been transferred and who had actually retired, I took it that the Hon. the Minister for Employment was also going to get slightly involved, to see what the agreement with the unions had been, because there was an agreement that whereby after so many number of people had exited that Department, there had to be some recruitment. I note that no-one has been taken in, so the Housing Works Agency, of whom I have hinted that we both have to be on the lookout, in case they are not quite producing as much as we would like them to: I feel that they are now suffering from depleted human resources. So one cannot really ask them for a greater output if the actual resources available to produce those repairs and so on have been depleted, rather than being met in accordance with the agreement.

1605 Is the Hon. Minister aware if the contract has been looked into and, if it has not, can I at least have an assurance from him that he will look into what the arrangements were with the unions, so we keep that part of the bargain and numbers be employed accordingly?

1610 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, far be it for me to delve into the shoes of the Hon. Joe Bossano, Minister for Employment, who is not here today. I am sure he would have been able to give you information on that, but the answer that I have given is exactly reference the question that I was asked. That is all I think I need to say on the matter.

1615 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, that is acceptable, Mr Speaker, but would the Minister then take it upon himself, with his colleagues, to look upon the number of people who have been transferred or retired from the Housing Agency, so that Government's part of the bargain is then kept?

1620 Can he at least assure this side of the House that he, in a collegiate manner, will look into that with his colleagues?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the actual performance of the employees of the Housing Works Agency is improving and they are performing really well. All I can say is that any reference made by the hon. Member – I forget the phraseology he used – reference any lack of performance or inability, because there is too much work for very few employees, I can assure him that they are all fully employed and it is only when certain jobs are beyond their ability to perform, that we would bring in small companies to do certain jobs.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, for the sake of any doubt, I am not criticising the efficiency levels of the Agency. What I am hinting at is that if the human resources side of the Housing Agency has diminished, then one could not, at any stage, try to say to them, 'Look, why isn't your output greater?'

What I have asked the hon. Member is would he, together with whatever other corresponding colleague of his should get involved, look at that agreement the Government has with the employees of the Housing Agency, as done for the unions, that for every so many number of employees that have left the Agency, either through retirement or transfers, that x number of people would be employed in their place so that there is an agreement on manning levels. Can he at least say to us now that he will take it upon himself to be looking into that matter?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the actual workforce is exactly the same as it was when the question was last asked and I am sure, on this side of the House, we would be happy to provide information when it is asked, showing the details of the question.

I cannot now provide any further information – we would need notice of the question – and I think if I may suggest it, Mr Speaker, that question, if it is to do with employment, should be directed to the Minister for Employment, Mr Bossano.

Hon. J J Netto: Could I ask a supplementary question, does the Hon. Minister know whether, as from the 9th December, any member of the Housing Works Agency has retired?

Hon. C A Bruzon: That information has already been given in the House last month. The answer is yes.

Hon. J J Netto: Does he know, from the top of his head, what the figure might be? Is it more than ten, less than ten?

Hon. C A Bruzon: There was a specific question asked last month and Mr Reyes has the information. I think it is less than ten, definitely. It was one or two...

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker despite my bump of information, having been the last set of Hansard, I seem to have left it in my sitting room at home. I apologise for that.

I accept that there has been no-one retiring or transferring out since the last Question Time. What I was asking the Hon. Minister was, could he please take it upon himself to take on board with whatever other ministerial colleagues he needs to, that seeing that there exists – and it was acknowledged last time round, as well – there is an agreement that after so many people leaving the Agency, they would be replaced by a number, whether it is, whatever the ratio was, whether it is six have left, two or three would be taken on or whatever, and last time round, Government confirmed to us that no-one new had been taken on and, a month later, no-one new has been taken on. I am of the opinion that there is a hole there.

Someone should be taken on and they can look into it so that the whole process of advertising, selection and so on, commence and if we wait for another month to be able to pose a question for the Hon. Minister of Employment then it is the Housing Works Agency that lose one month's work.

I was just asking in a nice cordial, collegiate approach if he can take it upon himself. If he doesn't want to Mr Speaker: It doesn't seem to have bothered the other contracting party it seems, anyway. If they have depleted numbers, it doesn't seem to have bothered the other contracting party, but ...

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask one question. Does the Hon. Minister know, since 9th December, if anyone has been employed into the Housing Works Agency?

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I would be grateful if you would give me notice of that question. I think I partly answered it last time, but ...

1700

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants on the Government's housing waiting lists have, since his answers given at the last Question Time, been allocated a flat, giving a breakdown of the size of the home and indicating whether these have been assigned following the advice of the housing allocation committee?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Members another schedule containing the information requested.

Clerk: Question 545, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1720

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing state how many applicants on the Government's housing waiting list have since his answer given at the last Question Time, been removed from the waiting list due to purchasing their own homes?

Asbestos in flats

1735

Clerk: Question 546, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state from the housing surveys carried out on Government flats, how many such flats have asbestos therein and of those, how many have asbestos that needs to be removed due to the fact that they have been tampered with and could be releasing airborne fibres?

1740

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1745

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker from the housing surveys carried out in Government flats to date, all asbestos found has been safely removed and replaced with other safe materials. I apologise to the hon. Member for one item of the answer that is missing, which is how many such flats. I will get that number for him as soon as possible.

1750

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, obviously, that at least the hon. Gentleman has acknowledged the fact that a part of the question has not been answered and he is more than willing, so I am grateful for that.

So there is a number, which we will find out what is the total number, of surveys which shows from 2006 how many Government flats have got asbestos and now we know from the other part he has answered that, at the moment, there isn't any Government flat which there may be asbestos which has been tampered with because all such flats which have asbestos which has been tampered with, all the works have been carried out. Is that correct?

1755 Hon. C A Bruzon: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Elderly persons requesting installation of shower unit in flats

Clerk: Question 547, the Hon. J J Netto.

1765 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing state the number of elderly persons who have requested the installation of a shower unit in their flat and the date on which the appropriate report was made to the reporting office?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly .

1770 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

ANSWER TO QUESTION 547

As the hon Member has not specified a date and reliable data is not available prior to the onset of the Housing Works Agency, the figures provided are from the 4th February 2011 to date.

Date Reported	No. of reports
February 2011	5
March 2011	3
April 2011	5
May 2011	3
June 2011	0
July 2011	1
August 2011	3
September 2011	2
October 2011	11
November 2011	8
December 2011	2
January 2012	7
February 2012	1
March 2012	7
April 2012	10
May 2012	2
TOTAL	70

1775 Hon. J J Netto: I noticed that, as part of a previous answer, the Hon. Minister for Housing gave to my hon. Friend, the Shadow Spokesman for Housing, Mr Reyes, in relation to Question 427/2012 – I don't know whether he has got that information there available to him – but within that he said that works pending by the Housing Works Agency, and within the information there, bath or shower conversions, he gives a breakdown which is Pre-war one, Post-war 24 and a total of 25.

1780 Now if my recollection is correct, 427/2012 must have been the May sitting of Parliament. With the information that the hon. Gentleman has provided me, there is a total of 70. In other words, between May and June the figure has gone up between 25 and 70. Now it seems to me like a discrepancy: I don't foresee elderly people in their houses sitting on the edge of their sofas, listening to us and running to the reporting office for housing for a conversion from a bath to shower. So can the hon. Member explain this huge gap, or increase, of 25 from the last month to 70 in this month?

Hon. C A Bruzon: No, Mr Speaker, I have no explanation.

1785 These are the facts as they have been presented to me. Did the hon. Member refer to a previous question that has been answered already.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes.

1790 Hon. C A Bruzon: If you could repeat that number, I will certainly investigate.

Hon. J J Netto: It is Question – I mean I can do a photocopy, there is nothing – 427/2012, which is the main sitting of Parliament and there they provided, among many other things, information on works which are pending to be done and for bath to shower conversion: it said one Pre-war, 24 Post-war, total 25.

1795 Now, when I look at that figure and compare it with the figure that he has just given me, the total is now 70. So, in other words, it has gone from 25 to 70 in the course of four weeks. It is extraordinary, really: there must be an explanation because it is just not reasonable to expect that so many elderly people might have rushed in four weeks to do this. It is just not reasonable, so there must be an explanation for this.

1800 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, I believe there is, Mr Speaker, because word – good news travels fast, not just bad news – and people are cottoning on to the idea that the Government is doing such a wonderful job and this is literally the truth... (Several Members: Hear, Hear!) We are getting more requests for these jobs to be done. This is what we are doing and that is why the number has increased, Mr Speaker.

1805 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, despite what the hon. Gentleman said, that good news spreads fast, you will forgive me for saying that no matter how much the good news is for the elderly in terms of shower conversions, there must be another explanation than ‘good news’.

1810 What I am asking the hon. Gentleman is that, given the more than 100 percent jump in-between one month and another, there must be an explanation, not by him, but obviously the people in the reporting office or the technical offices and the Department and that needs explaining. So all I am saying will he go back and find why there is such a huge increase between one month and the other. That is all I am asking.

Repairs and refurbishments for Occupational Therapy Department

Clerk: Question 548, the Hon. J J Netto.

1820 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Housing provide the total number of reports originated by the Occupational Therapy Department in relation to outstanding repairs or refurbishments of Government housing stock, the date on which the Department requested the works and the estimated cost per request?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

1825 Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker; I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested. The general answer is that there is a total of 86.

See next page for Schedule:

1830 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is there any explanation for the difference in figures between the figures that the Hon. Minister provided me with now, as opposed to the figures that the Minister for Health provided me before in Question 519/2012?

1835 If I understood the Minister for Health correctly, he said that – in terms of Government flats we are talking about here, we are not talking about the whole community – there were 36 flats, sorry 36 reports, there were eight pending, nine minor, 14 new cases and a total of 67. That is the figure he gave me.

Now, the Minister for Housing is giving me a figure of 86, so is there any reason why we have different figures because, as I understand it, the reason why I am asking the question is because, as I understand it, when a request is made it goes to the OT Department in the Health Authority. The relevant occupational therapist goes to the site and looks at the needs and necessities of the particular person and, over a period of time, does the report and the report is then sent to Housing at a certain point in time.

So, all I am trying to understand in my mind, how does the process work because the two figures ought to reconcile somehow and it seems that... Can the Minister provide...

ANSWER TO QUESTION 548

As the hon Member has not specified a date and reliable data is not available prior to the onset of the Housing Works Agency, the figures provided are from the 4th February 2011 to date.

Date	No. of reports
February 2011	2
March 2011	1
April 2011	2
May 2011	2
June 2011	1
July 2011	1
August 2011	2
September 2011	1
October 2011	14
November 2011	4
December 2011	8
January 2012	7
February 2012	5
March 2012	25
April 2012	2
May 2012	6
June 2012	3
TOTAL	86

The estimated cost of each request is approximately £2,000.

Hon. C A Bruzon: Yes, Mr Speaker, the figures should reconcile if we are talking about exactly the same period of time. But the specific question that I am being asked and the answer I am giving is from February 2011 to June 2012. We made that the starting point because there was no date suggested by the hon. Member as to from which date should we start looking into our records.

So, obviously, the answer that I have given is from February 2011 to June 2012. I would not be at all surprised if the information given by my colleague – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, Order.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: If I may just say that...

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Health.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: There has been no attempt on our side to – well, let me put it this way, we may be speaking about different timeframes. If what the hon. Member wants is a specific timeframe, a current timeframe, then perhaps he could be more specific as to what that timeframe is and perhaps the numbers could reconcile although, obviously, we will have to look into the system and see if these figures that I gave are generated by the Occupational Therapy side, not by the Housing side.

I am sure we can come up with a co-ordinated figure but we weren't asked to co-ordinate and we don't have a similar timeframe.

Hon. J J Netto: But, Mr Speaker, my question to both Ministers is very clear. It is not about timeframe, it is about outstanding work.

It is not a question of saying from February to March or March to April, it is about outstanding work. So the question is clear: outstanding work. My question to the Health Minister was how many of those reports which are outstanding (a) go to Government property, (b) to co-ownership and (c) to the private sector because only the OT have the complete picture of the whole of Gibraltar.

1870

I cannot ask that same question to the Minister for Housing because the Minister for Housing can only answer the question for Government flats. Now when I compare, when I am asking the same question and I compare the figure provided by the Minister for Health and I compare it against the figure provided by the Minister for Housing, there is a difference. There must be a reason for it, obviously, and I am trying to suggest, given that there is no timeframe, why is it that we have got different figures. That is what I am trying to establish.

1875

Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, the question does ask for the date and my starting date was –

1880

Hon. J J Netto: The [inaudible] was asked –

Hon C A Bruzon: Yes, that is right.

Hon. J J Netto: – but not outstanding works.

1885

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, if the dates that the Hon. Minister's Department has started this process is February, that may not be the same date in which the Occupational Therapy Department (Interjections)

1890

Mr Speaker: Order, Order.

Hon. J J Netto: If the hon. Member will give way, it doesn't work like that, the system.

The way the system works, even when the Occupational Therapy do pass the report to the Housing Ministry, whenever the work starts the OT staff is aware that the work is starting and is ensuring, on-site, that the work is being carried out in accordance with the specification of the OT. In other words that the craftsman is not putting the handrails at a length or a distance which does not go in conformity with that, so there is a hand in glove approach between the work on site by the OT and the people who carry out the housing.

So it isn't that they are not aware: they are aware because they are there at the time at which it is happening, so it cannot be on the basis of what the Hon. the Minister for Health has said. There must be another explanation and we need to establish why there is a difference.

1900

Hon C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker if we look at the question, as it was asked, and the answer as it has been given, the question if I may repeat it, Mr Speaker, for the sake of clarity:

1905

'Can the Minister for Housing provide the total number of reports originated by the Occupational Therapy Department –'

Hon. J J Netto: No, no, no!

Hon. C A Bruzon: Excuse me.

1910

'– in relation to the outstanding repairs or refurbishment of Government housing stock, the date on which the department requested the works and the estimated cost per request?'

Now the answer that I have not read out but which the hon. Members opposite have access to, says:

1915

'As the hon. Member has not specified a date and reliable data is not available –'

– at least to me, anyway –

1920

'– prior to the onset of the Housing Works Agency, the figures provided are from 4th February 2011 to date.'

So the answer is that which we have given. If there is a difference, it is because I am trying to provide the answer giving a starting date. It does not say that there weren't any reports before that, but that is my starting point.

1925 Hon. J J Netto: The question is the reported date of outstanding works but, in any case, Mr Speaker, given that, even on the assumption of what the hon. Gentleman has said, given that he is basing the total of 86 as from February, then he should have been even less than the amount of the figure that the Hon. the Minister of Health has given me, even on that basis.

1930 But the premise is wrong because it is not 'on the date', it is the amount of outstanding works, so the point I am trying to accept and I don't necessarily want an answer now, all I am trying to say as a form of a question is that, somehow, perhaps because there is no communication between Housing personnel staff with the OT staff, what has happened here is that the Hon. the Minister for Health has gone to his department, he has got information, as has been compiled there, the Minister for Housing has got information from his staff that was compiled there, but there is a lack of communication between the two because it is exactly the same question, so can I ask both Ministers whether they can find what is the difference, why do we have a different figure?

1940 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if there is a lack of communication, it is a lack of communication in the system that has been inherited from – (Interjections) Yes, it is absolutely true. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, I am sure there is a clear and logical explanation for the fact that the figures differ, although they differ by – how many? 86 versus 67, which is a difference of what, 19? It may be that the 17 Albert Risso flats, which were not included in the 67, are on the Housing Agency's records, which would make a difference of one or two, which I think is fairly acceptable when you are looking at two sets of data, so maybe that is the explanation.

1945 Hon. J J Netto: In the previous question, the hon. Member said he was not going to answer a hypothetical question. Now he is putting his answer on the basis 'maybe'. Well maybe means a hypothetical scenario which may or may not happen and I am not interested in maybe's. What I am interested in is fact. So can the Hon. Minister try and establish the fact on the basis of what is the real situation and not on maybes and hypotheticals.

1950 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I don't know whether the Standing Orders allow for hypothetical answers or not.

1955 Mr Speaker: They do.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: They do. Then my hypothetical answer stands. (Laughter)

1960 Mr Speaker: Unfortunately there is nothing in the Standing Orders which covers the answers.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, if it is a hypothetical answer, could the Hon. Minister at least go back to his Department and ensure that the hypothetical answer is the correct answer.

1965 Clerk: Question 549...

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

1970 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, seeing that these repairs are mainly health related and, therefore, potentially urgent, how are they prioritised on the list for housing repairs and refurbishment? Is it by date, is it by urgency: what is the system?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Health.

1975 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker the hon. Lady should be careful when she says that they are 'urgent'. Some of these repairs have been there – repairs or alterations – since 2009, so I don't know whether they are urgent now, but they weren't urgent then! I just needed to point that out.

1980 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, I asked if they could potentially be urgent and what was the system of prioritisation. Was it by date or was it by urgency? I therefore infer from your answer that perhaps the 2009 report was not based on 'urgent', as urgent as somebody who reported it last year, and maybe the repair has been done.

1985 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as Minister with responsibility for equality, which would include disability, I have been dealing with the Ministry for Housing in relation to any outstanding works relating to the Occupational Therapy reports. I am aware when I made the enquiry some months ago that there were numerous works outstanding, the bulk of them dating to 2011, 2010 and there were some dating back to 2009. In fact, there were some dating back even later but I understand that those have been addressed and therefore they will not be reflected in these figures.

1990 As I understand – (Interjection) Well, yes, Mr Speaker, and unfortunately some people have died whilst they have been waiting for their outstanding OT work to be undertaken. But as I understand it, Mr Speaker, the backlog that was in place when we came to office, especially in relation to the conversion of baths to showers, as I understand it, has all been dealt with. Therefore, in my capacity as Minister for Equality, we have been working towards introducing a system that would prioritise all OT reports and that is the answer to that question. Yes, they are given priority.

1995 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Health.

Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may ...

2000 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there have been now three answers by three separate Ministers of a question... (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Yes.

2005 Hon. D A Feetham: You talk about Standing Orders. If there is an answer, then that is the answer, otherwise the entire team opposite is going to be commenting on this!

2010 Mr Speaker: Well, I accept that there have been answers by three different Ministers to the question and I did give it some thought, but one must bear in mind the question is posed in a manner, for example, started by the Hon. Jaime Netto, where he refers to discrepancies between information given by one Minister and the other Minister, so there has to be a degree of answering by two Ministers at the very least.

2015 With respect, you cannot accuse – I use the word guardedly – 'suggest', there is a discrepancy between two Ministerial answers and not allow both Ministers the opportunity to answer, so that will explain why there is a multiplicity. But I am not in any way curtailing the supplementaries. All I am doing is allowing the answers to enable a supplementary to take into account as, indeed, the Hon. Jaime Netto has been able to do, which is take into account the discrepancies and formulate supplementaries.

The opportunity will be given to all Members on this side to formulate as many supplementaries as they like but it would help, I think, to have the answers and to formulate the supplementary.

2020 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, in any event, it is not understood what the nature of the complaint by the hon. Member is.

2025 If you have more than one Ministry involved and more than one Minister having information which is relevant to the question that is being asked, it is perfectly proper and possible and, as I understand it, within the rules, subject to any ruling you might make, for one Minister to give part of an answer, another Minister to give part of an answer and, in this particular case, we have got a third Minister who has specific responsibilities for disability, having relevant information.

So what is it, we don't give answers or we give too many answers with too many Ministers answering the questions? (Applause)

2030 Hon. D A Feetham: The hon. Gentleman should calm down and not get so excited. (Laughter).

Mr Speaker: Order.

2035 Hon. D A Feetham: We have had... There is a discrepancy between the answer given by Mr Bruzon with the answer given by Mr Cortes. Mr Bruzon has answered, Mr Cortes has answered, Mrs Sacramento has answered. Now you have made a contribution. The hon. Lady... and, in actual fact, none of those contributions have answered the question that the hon. Lady Mrs Ellul-Hammond has actually asked, because she has asked the question, well, how are these jobs actually prioritised?

2040 What you have done is, you have given vent to party political propaganda about, well, 'these are outstanding since 2009, 2010' and you have not answered the question, which is how are these jobs actually prioritised? The point I was going to make is, well, look, there have now been three Ministers that have effectively made contributions in answer to the question and none of them have answered – and we are now on the fourth. (Interjections)

2045 Mr Speaker: Order, Order.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the answer has been given.

2050 We have the typical situation here, where the hon. Members opposite get up and complain about the answer not satisfying what they might want to hear and they say 'You have not answered.' Well, the answer has been given and, in respect of more than one Minister getting up and making contributions, we have now had three Members – there are seven Members, well, rather there are six Members there – half of the Opposition has contributed in this particular question. You often have situations where you have one Member of the Opposition asking a question and then a separate Member of the Opposition asking a supplementary. That is what has happened here... (Interjections)

2055 The hon. Lady on the Opposition benches has got up and the Hon. Minister for Social Services has felt it appropriate that it was her answer that ought to be given. I honestly can't understand what the hon. Member is complaining about – and now it seems we are going to have a majority of the Opposition contributing to this debate, with the hon. Mr Bossino...

Mr Bossino, I give way to you.

2060 Hon. D A Feetham: No, look, I am sorry,

Hon. G H Licudi: You see, Mr Bossino is dying to get up, so I give way to him! I have given way to Mr Bossino.

2065 Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, so you are trying now... (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, order!

2070 Is it suggested that the Opposition is not being given an opportunity to ask questions. That cannot be the complaint.

2075 Hon. D A Feetham: What I am suggesting is that, in fact, there has been a question, it has now been answered by three Ministers, none of which have in fact answered the question that the hon. Lady has asked. Now we are moving to the fourth opportunity on the other side, none of which have answered the question, all of which have entered into this political discourse about these works dating back to 2008 or 2009, or 2010 or 2011, but none of them have answered the question. Of course, we have been waiting patiently on this side of the House for an answer and we have heard, now, three different contributions: none of them have answered and I think that the hon. Lady is entitled to insist, as she was going to, before Mr Cortes was, again for the fourth time, going to answer on that side, to say, 'Look, please could you answer my question'. That was a supplementary that she was going to ask.

2080 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I was on my feet when the hon. Member interrupted what I said when I was on my feet, that I was giving way to the Hon. Mr Bossino, who was dying to get up and clearly contribute to the debate. So I again give way to the Hon. Mr Bossino, even though I was rudely interrupted by Mr Feetham.

2085 Mr Speaker: Order, order.

Let's not start describing contributions. Does the Hon. Damon Bossino wish to say anything regarding the [inaudible] debate? Not into the question. Let's look at the position here.

2090 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can I reiterate a supplementary question.

Mr Speaker: I will allow you to deal with that in a minute.

2095 I am just dealing with the procedural aspects, to the extent that the question and this line of questioning now refers to discrepancies between different Ministers' answers, which is clearly what the question is about, with respect, I must allow both Ministers to answer the question.

Hon. D A Feetham: But you have 2100 Mr Speaker: And I have, so that cannot possibly be the complaint.

Now, the Hon. Minister for Equality – and do forgive me for not remembering the title – there was a question on prioritising and, in that respect, the hon. Lady answered what she sees the manner of dealing with the issues. She has chosen to refer to outstanding issues going back to 2009/10. That may be regarded – and I am forming no view on that, it is not my job to form a view – as a political answer but that is the hon. Lady's answer in terms of prioritising. Whether we like it or not, that is the answer.

2105 Now, as I say, it is not for me to judge the quality of the answer but, in answer to the prioritising question, that is the answer which came forth, that is her answer.

I was just going to allow the Hon. Dr. Cortes, the Minister for Health, to answer because we are still talking about prioritising and the numbers and I will give the Opposition opportunity to come back and either criticise the answers or to ask further supplementaries. I will ask and allow the Hon. the Minister for Health.

2110 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker to do our arithmetic, I am going to repeat so that we are clear. The Hon. the Minister for Housing has 86 on his list. I mentioned 67 plus 17 in Albert Rizzo. If we are to assume – it is an assumption and we will look into it – that we add the 17 plus the 16 we get 84 and 86 and it is very possible that there may be one or two which may have been completed in the time that our two data sets were collected.

2115 What I am saying is that the figures, if we look at it like this, may not be as inconsistent and, if I may, Mr Speaker, I just want to say one more thing. I am now after, I think, five sessions beginning to thoroughly enjoy sitting in Parliament and I will prove that I have become part of the fold by saying four words in a minute... Any implication by the Opposition that this Government gives less importance and less urgency to refurbishing habitation for disabled people is no more and no less – wait for it – than 'the height of hypocrisy'. The first time I have ever said that, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isabel Ellul-Hammond.

2125 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, if I may just reiterate the question: what is the process at the moment – and I directed this question at the Minister for Housing – for prioritising requests for Occupational Therapy repairs or refurbishments to Government housing?

2130 Hon. C A Bruzon: The answer is that we prioritise all requests and that, without trying to be too political, Mr Speaker, we have dealt with quite a large backlog that we have inherited. All those have been completed. They were completed, they are already completed now: there are a total of 24 bath to shower conversions that we are still working on and all of them have been prioritised.

2135 However I will concur 100 percent with my hon. Friend and colleague, Samantha Sacramento, that we give top priority to people with special needs. That is my answer, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I ask a supplementary question?

Mr Speaker: Yes.

2140 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, regardless of whether the number of outstanding jobs to be carried out is 86 or 67, or anything in between, can I ask the Minister for Housing, whatever the figure is, whether these works will be carried out within the next three months?

2145 Hon. C A Bruzon: I cannot answer that question exactly. We dealt with this last time in Parliament: I am not a believer in giving periods like three months or six months, or one year. My answer would be that I would give top priority to any request from any tenant with a job that has to be done to be done as soon as possible.

2150 There are sometimes problems when we have to wait for materials to arrive. That happens, not all the time, but it does happen. There are some showers that are waiting for a small additional component that has not arrived but we are doing our utmost. Not only have we cleared the backlog that we inherited but we are literally working round the clock to ensure that elderly people and people with a disability have these conversions done as soon as possible.

2155 Hon. J J Netto: With respect to the Hon. Minister, he has already conceded the fact that these are urgent works. Nobody is disputing that the nature of this type of work, either for medical reasons or for issues of disability, there are urgent reasons... So I cannot accept, on the basis of that, that he does not know when the works will be carried out because it is quite simple for the Minister to go back to the Housing Agency and to his officials, to be able to know whether the work has been already categorised as 'urgent', they are now scheduled to be carried out by the Housing Works Agency within the next three months, the next six months, the next twelve months or, in other words –

2160 Hon. C A Bruzon: Will the Gentleman give way, please?

2165 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, I will.

2170 Hon. C A Bruzon: Mr Speaker, I have not said that I don't know that the works have been carried out. The works are definitely being carried out and I have not said that they are going to take a year: I was giving an example, maybe a bad one, that I am not a believer in putting a timeframe, 'you must do this within a three month period'. No, you must do this as soon as is possible. That is what I am trying to say. Please don't misquote me.

Mr Speaker.

2175 Hon. J J Netto: Accepting that, and even accepting the fact that some of the equipment are specialised equipment, therefore you have got to accept that this equipment will come from further afield and, obviously, that is delay... I accept all of that but, having accepted all of that, at the same time we do realise that, for medical or disability issues, the nature of this kind of works are urgent. If we know they are urgent, then we know the officials in the Ministry for Housing in the City Hall will issue instructions to the Housing Works Agency for the works to be scheduled in an urgent manner so, therefore, if everyone accepts the premise of my question, then the Minister should know, all things being equal, whether equipments are coming or not, whether this work, whatever the figure, will be done in the next three months or not, because the foreman and the people who are managing the housing would say: 'Well, knowing the schedules, Monday, so many tradesmen will go to do this job and so many tradesmen to that job and the following week...' There is a schedule and, if there is a schedule, they know what the workers will be doing on this week, on this month, the next month and the next month.

2185 Therefore, there is an answer to the question. He may not have it there with him, I accept that, but he can go back and find out whether the outstanding work will be done in the next three months, the next six months, the next twelve months. That is my question.

2190 Hon. Dr. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, Government is dealing with a backlog and I know we are being criticised for going back in time but this is a reality. The flagship block for the elderly, Albert Risso House, has seventeen cases identified from the beginning of the occupation, because Occupational Therapy was not properly consulted and they couldn't even get into their showers.

We are dealing with backlogs. We have got to deal with backlogs, as well as the current things. The implications that I am hearing today are totally unacceptable, Mr Speaker.

2195 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, but that doesn't answer the question.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham. (Interjection by Hon. Dr. J E Cortes)

(Interjection by Hon. J J Netto) Order. The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2200 Hon. J J Netto: Point of order, Mr Speaker. It is not for members of the Government to tell the Opposition what questions to ask.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

2205 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes can I return back to the question of the priorities because I haven't quite understood the answer and I think you know we are not trying to score political points here (Several Members: No!)

2210 Look, Mr Speaker, Mr Linares ought to give me the courtesy of allowing me to answer the question. (Interjection) Sorry, ask the question, I beg your pardon, because there are constituents out there who are may be waiting for jobs and they would like to know the criteria for determining the order of priority.

2215 The answer the Hon. the Minister for Housing gave was, as I understand it, this: we prioritise all of them. Now you can't, with respect, prioritise all of them because you are not prioritising, you are dealing with all of them equally. Then he said we prioritise – which was what the hon. Lady said – we prioritise special needs. Now, I understand that, you prioritise special needs –

Hon. G H Licudi: And the elderly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, elderly, that is the... (Interjection) I didn't quite hear that.

2220 Mr Speaker: Order, order. I think it would be helpful if the members on this side did not engage in a debate from a sedentary position.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, otherwise I am not going to finish.

2225 Mr Speaker. We won't hear the question. (Interjection by Hon. G H Licudi.)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Licudi, if you can allow me to... I haven't given way.

2230 I am going to ask the question. Now, prioritize special needs and the elderly. Are all the others effectively dealt with say, for example, by how old the request for the work is? Is that how they are dealt with, because there has to be a criteria in relation to that, or is it dealt with, for example, by reference to the urgency of the work, the nature of the work and the nature of the person? That's what we are trying to just find out because there are, obviously, going to be people out there who are waiting for works who will find that information of interest. I mean, it is nothing controversial.

2235 Hon. G H Licudi: [Inaudible] been waiting for three years. You were there. Mr Speaker, the answer is very simple and I know that the hon. Member didn't want to give way and then they complain about quality of debate in Parliamentary democracy and all that and I would have thought, as a matter of courtesy –

2240 Hon. D A Feetham: I was about to ask the question.

2245 Hon. G H Licudi: Well the only reason I wanted the hon. Member to give way was because he was reciting what the Hon. the Minister for Housing had said and was setting out the wrong information and although we were from this side of the House urging him to correct and I understand the comment by the Hon. Mr Speaker that we should not engage in debate across this House. That is why I asked the hon. Member to give way, so I could correct the information that he was giving in respect of what the Minister for Housing has given.

2250 The answer has been given in respect of the priority, which is what the question is about, and the question answered was that works will be done 'as soon as possible' and that means that priority is given but, as the hon. Members have also said, there is a backlog and there has been a backlog, which was inherited, and had to be dealt with. And we recognise the urgency of these works and priority has been given on the basis of the answers that have already been given and that is the state of play.

2255 Hon D A Feetham: With respect, you have not answered the question! I quite understand that you are dealing with, you are giving priority, to the elderly and special needs. That I understand, but in relation to the others, yes there is a backlog, now how are you dealing with the backlog. Are you dealing with the backlog in terms of the oldest first, or are you dealing with the backlog – that's what I am asking, it is a perfectly reasonable question. Now of course if you don't want to answer you don't have to, I mean yesterday there was a plethora of questions that weren't answered by those on that side of the House, starting by the Chief Minister. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order, order.

2265 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, no, Mr Speaker, there wasn't a plethora of questions which were not answered, there was a plethora of questions, perhaps unnecessary questions, which were answered and the hon. Members did not like the answers! It is too bad if they don't like the answers but they get the answers that we want to give, not necessarily the answers that they want to hear.

Mr Speaker: Anyway, as I see it, a question has been put. I ask the Minister, does he wish to answer?

2270

Hon. C A Bruzon: May I try to answer the Member opposite. The system that we have in place has been explained to the best of our ability. That category of people who do not come under the heading of special needs or the elderly will be looked at in terms of the chronology of the request. That is the simple answer.

2275 Hon D A Feetham: I am extremely grateful, because that is the answer.

Mr Speaker: Okay, I take it there are no more questions. Are there any more supplementaries on that line of questioning?

We can move to another question, another subject altogether.

Government tender advertised on 11th May Nature of consultancy services sought

2320 Clerk: Question 551, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services provide details of the nature of the consultancy services it is seeking pursuant to the tender issued by the Government, as advertised in the Gibraltar Chronicle on 11th May 2012.

2325 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the tender notice issued on 11th May 2012 is an invitation for expressions of interest from consultants to assist the Government in the development of a new sustainable traffic, transport and parking plan for Gibraltar.

2330 Consultants will be pre-qualified based on a set of selection criteria and the successful ones will then be invited to submit bids. No further details can be provided at present, as the tender process ended on 15th June 2012 and the assessment and selection process is currently underway.

2335 Hon. D J Bossino: As I understood the question, Mr Speaker, the successful tenderer will assist the Government in relation to the formulation by the Government of its traffic plan. Is that the correct understanding? I assume the answer is going to be yes.

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker.

2340 Hon. D J Bossino: And given... I am trying to marry the information that I am receiving at this session of the House with the information which the Hon. Minister has provided me in previous sessions of the House and see how this fits in with the consultation process which commenced and ended in the month of January 2345 and then I was told in February when I asked for the data which his Ministry had collated as a result of that consultation exercise and the answer was that the data would be produced in a summary spreadsheet which was, at that stage back in February, being collated and would be finished shortly. Then in March I was told in this House, Mr Speaker, that there would be a further tier, if you like, to the steps which were being taken by the Government before getting to the plan which was a user and trip survey, which I understood from the Minister at the time would have been conducted by his Department by way of a questionnaire to the general 2350 public. In fact, I think there was a resistance to providing the data collated as a result of the public consultation exercise until the user/trip survey had been completed. Then the next step seems to be the advertising of this tender and I was unable to ask the question at the last session of the House because the advertisement had come out the day after the time limit for submission of questions, which was Friday 11th.
So I set out for him in a brief summary the answers that I have received from him since January and I really 2355 want to know how this new development, if you like, fits in to the overall plan.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, this is one more step towards our goal, which is the creation of a sustainable traffic, transport and parking plan for Gibraltar.

2360 As the hon. Member obviously was asking about the user/trip survey, it is once we engage the consultants for this tender we will obviously be seeking advice from this consultant to be able to formulate the user/trip survey so we can continue the process.

2365 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I don't have the Hansard here available with me but I am slightly surprised by the answer just given by the Hon. Minister because, as I understood it, when I asked him in connection with the information I was seeking from him as to the data collected as a result of the public consultation exercise started and finished in January, the reason why he was unable to provide this answer, Mr Speaker, was because a user/trip survey was currently at the time, i.e. in March, being conducted. So, can I ask the Minister whether there was a change to that and that was put on hold because the Government decided to go out to a private contractor in order to assist it – i.e. the Government and its Department – in the 2370 formulation of the traffic plan? There is an inconsistency in the answer they gave in March and the answer he seems to be giving me now, unless he can clarify the position.

2375 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, is the hon. Member alleging an inconsistency without knowing, because he has admitted that he doesn't know what answer was given previously. How can he allege an inconsistency in those circumstances? I mean if he had Hansard and was reading from Hansard and saying 'I know that this was the way this was answered', but he prefaced that by saying 'well I can't remember what he actually said' but then alleges that there is an inconsistency. As far as we are concerned, there is no inconsistency.

2380 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just to clarify the point, I am relying on a note I made of my research and I was just being overly cautious, simply saying that I won't be able to prove to the House at this session, that I have that I can show and quote chapter and verse the Minister's reply at the time but my note which is based on my research having looked at Hansard is, I think accurate and the note says, and I stand by what my note says, was that the user and trip survey was at the time being conducted. Look, the Minister ought to know, ought to have his own recollection of what he told me at the time and he is dealing with this matter, it is his 2385 Department, he is running the Department, he also has clear in his mind, what the position is. It is as simple as that and all I am doing is asking for clarification and if the Minister for Justice is happy I withdraw the allegation of inconsistency I just want clarification.

2390 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, it is not a question of having to withdraw anything and that is not the point of my intervention but we cannot have questions being asked on the basis 'I recall this, what do you recall?'. Either something is asked premised on fact or it isn't asked premised on fact and if the hon. Member is saying, well, this is a fact, this is what I was told, then obviously we accept that will be a proper question, but we don't accept it as a proper question to say well I seem to recall that this happened, what do you recall happened two months ago, or three months ago, or four months ago? We don't believe that was a proper subject of Parliamentary supplementary questions.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, all I can do is stand by my notes at this stage and the Minister did say, according to my note, that a user and trip survey was at the time being conducted and in fact that a public consultation exercise was fluid, it had not closed on 21st January 2012 and those were his answers and in fact the user and trip survey was what was holding back the provision of the details as to the findings of the results of the consultation exercise carried out in January.

2400

That is what I recall, that is what was said, sorry not what I recall but the notes I made as a result of my research of Hansard, it is just simply I do not have Hansard here in front of me. Now is the Minister willing to answer or not?

2405

Mr Speaker: I think the question is properly formulated. The hon. Member does say, the hon. Member does say that he hasn't got Hansard here but his notes reflect what he read in Hansard, that is as good as saying this is what Hansard says. I mean, ideally, Hansard but it is equally good for the hon. Member to say 'these are my notes, this is my understanding of what was said, will the Minister clarify whether the position has changed?' I think that is what the gist of the question is.

2410

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the position has not changed. The whole traffic plan, the way it is meant to run is that, once the consultants are actually engaged by way of the tender, they will then provide us with information on how to go about doing the user/ trip survey. That was the plan from the very beginning.

2415

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I find it odd and would ask the Minister why it is that he made no mention whatsoever in any of the previous sessions, particularly when the user and trip survey was first raised by him in the March session of Parliament, that he was going to go to a private contractor by way of tender to assist him in carrying out this user and trip survey. Does the Minister not find that particularly strange?

2420

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, this is just part of the process. I don't see that this is strange whatsoever.

2425

Prohibition and Improvement Notices
Number issued in May

Clerk: Question 552 the Hon. J J Netto.

2430

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many prohibitions and improvement notices were issued in the month of May 2012, if any, broken down by industry group and specify the reason or reasons for issuing the notice in this period which may have brought operations to a halt until the inspector was satisfied that the correct standard had been duly complied with.

2435

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker I will answer this question together with Questions 553 to 555 of 2012.

2440

Factory Inspector
Number of site meetings in May 2445

Clerk: Question 553

Hon. J J Netto: Can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many site meetings were held and the advice given by the Factory Inspector during the month of May 2012, stating to which industry group this was given?

2450

Accidents reported during May Industry group and details

2455

Clerk: Question 554

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state if there have been any reported accidents during the month of May 2012, showing the industry group involved and stating which ones were reportable, major and fatal, if any?

2460

Factories Act
Number of inspections and possible breaches during May

2465

Clerk: Question 555.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health & Safety state how many inspections during May 2012 did the Factory Inspectors conduct, showing the industry group targeted, whether any possible breach of the Factories Act or any subsidiary legislation by any private company, a Gibraltar Government or MOD workplace may have taken place and whether legal advice is being sought?

2470

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services.

2475

Minister for Traffic, Health & Safety and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested by the hon. Member is contained in the schedules which I now hand over to him.

See next page for Schedules.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask if the Hon. Minister could assist me because, in the first paper, which is the first one which he has provided which has the heading at the top called 'Inspection, Site Visit and Advice', that is the one I am referring to, and I can see, for instance, if you go down to the construction it gives you the figures in January 14, in February 29, in March 38, April 17 and in May 29. Right. If I were to ask him for instance in the month of May for instance, for which there have been 29, of those 29 which have been inspections, which have been site meetings and which ones have been advice. Because I have asked specific questions for those categories but in the presentation of those figures, at least I can't deduce it, so can he assist me on that?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, just by the month of May, for example, 29 by the figures that I have been given, it doesn't seem as if I will be able to actually break them down by inspection, site visits and advice. So what I will do is I will ask the Factory Inspectors and I will get them to reply to that.

2490

Hon. J J Netto: I mean my question was very clear. The only thing is that the way the information is compiled does not distinguish the specific categories I have asked. So therefore he needs to break them down in a manner, I mean he can put it in one paper if he wants to but I need to deduce the specific answer, if he wishes to supply the answer in the manner in which I have asked the question.

2495

Now I understand that not only can I do this in the information provided now, but neither can I do it with the information provided last month because the same applies in the same month. So if he is going to go back, for which I am grateful, to the staff to be able to break down the figures so I can have the answers, can he also do it with the figures that he provided me with the previous month.

- 2500 Mr Speaker: Yes, I think the Minister has answered and said he accepts the need.
- Hon. J J Netto: Can I –
- 2505 Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry, I wasn't sure whether there was a supplementary or whether he just asked us to provide the breakdown in the manner of the question asked and then the Hon. Minister said yes, that that information is not provided and we will provide it.
- Mr Speaker: That is what I understood, yes.
- 2510 Mr Speaker: Sorry, I think the question went further than that: could the Hon. Minister provide the same breakdown for the previous month.
- Hon. J J Netto: Yes, both of them, the one that he has supplied now and that he supplied last month, the presentation is the same and my comments apply both to this month and to last month. The question is exactly the same.
- 2515 Mr Speaker: I don't recall, did the hon. Member take issue with the absence of breakdown last month?
- Hon. J J Netto: No, because –
- 2520 Mr Speaker: to be honest ...
- Mr Speaker: No, I am just trying to recollect, myself.
- Hon. J J Netto: To be honest with you, there is limited time to be able to absorb in seconds, basically, the amount of information and, once I took it home, I realised that the answer given doesn't provide me with what I have asked.
- 2525 Mr Speaker: What I would respectfully suggest to Members asking questions, it might be helpful in future if one emphasises by putting (a); (b) and (c) so, for example, (a) site meetings; (b)... to give the officials preparing the answers a target to aim at.
- 2530 Hon. J J Netto: But I have set the questions for the specific answer that I wanted.
- Mr Speaker: No, I am not criticising the question.
- 2535 Hon. J J Netto: You will notice that one was for site visits, one was for inspections.
- Mr Speaker: I was suggesting a means of –
- 2540 Hon. J J Netto: And, of course, I have no control how the information is provided to me. The Government decide how it is going to be presented to me. I can only ask the question, then the Minister has grouped it together and provided the information in that particular manner. I mean, I am not in control how they provide information, all I am asking at least that the answer is there for me to be able to assimilate what I am trying to –
- 2545 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister please elaborate on the nature of the 'major' occupational reportable accident in April of this year within the Education Sector.
- Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Member repeat the question, please.
- 2550 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, can the Minister please elaborate on the nature of the major occupational reportable accident in April of this year within the Education Sector. This is on the second page of the schedule that you have. It is a table HS.2 and it is the second page of the schedule you have just handed over to us. It reads at the top 'Occupational Reportable Accidents 2012'.

2555 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, once again, I will have to find out from my Factory Inspectors and I will give you further details on that incident.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Thank you, I am grateful.

2560 Clerk: Question –

Hon. J J Netto: Can I just – yes, Mr Speaker on the same vein as my hon. Colleague, on the second page on reportable accidents there was also in April another major one in relation to the construction industry. Could the Hon. Minister elaborate what was the major reportable accident.

2565 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I will ask the Factory Inspector to give me further information on the major accident within the construction industry.

2570 Hon. J J Netto: Will it be helpful if, once he gets the opportunity to ask his staff, whether he asks them in relation to all the ones which are major, I mean regardless whether they are the construction industry, retail or, you know, whatever it is and then at least we have a notion of whatever is major, as opposed to minor?

2575 Mr Speaker: Yes, there was a question: would he extend that offer of information to all accidents classified as major?

Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker.

2580 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I could perhaps ask a further question, for clarification purposes, to the Hon. Minister for Health & Safety. I mean, I do like the idea the way, I think in fact I congratulated him last month by listing all industry groups here, it does provide me with an overall view which I, to that respect, find it very helpful. But, can he assist me, for instance because my question does ask for, regardless of whether we are talking about inspections or site meetings or advice, my questions do ask what places are Government and it does ask for the MOD, but is the MOD represented in any of these industry groups. That is part of my question but the other part of my question would be whether if we talk about the Government, the Government broken down, as far as work places. For instance if I were to say the Government can be a very wide spectrum which can be from the Housing Works Agency to Education, to Social Services, to the Health Authority, so how could I, in order to assist me, how could I say ‘well yes, does the Housing Works Agency come under the construction industry or does it not’, because what I am trying to get to the bottom of really is how do I know, in all the questions I ask, how the Government, in terms of work places or the MOD in terms of work places are represented in the industry groups? Perhaps if he can enlighten me to that.

2590 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, unfortunately I do not have that information with me so I will try and get the information as quickly as possible, OK.

2595 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

2600 EDUCATION, FINANCIAL SERVICES, GAMING, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

Childhood obesity Tackling school tuck shops

2605 Clerk: Question 556 the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker can the Minister for Education say whether, as suggested in the GSLP’s statement of 23rd September 2011 on childhood obesity, reiterated by the GHA’s dietician in a Chronicle article on 17th May 2012, the Government will remove tuck shops from schools, or ensure that school tuck shops will provide healthy food and drinks, in order to tackle childhood obesity with the urgency 2610 it claims it deserves?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2615 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Department of Education is currently conducting a survey of what is sold in school tuck shops, with a view to providing more focused advice to headteachers. Not all schools have tuck shops and, in fact, out of – I have got a list of fifteen schools – eight do not have tuck shops and six do.

2620 These cases where the schools don't have tuck shops, the children tend to bring in snacks from home. The Department for Education is currently looking at the kind of foodstuffs that could be considered as suitable healthy options for children before taking a final decision on the future of tuck shops. The advisory service of the Department of Education will, of course, work closely with the professionals in the GHA's.

2625 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain if there will be any further measures introduced to our schools in order to tackle childhood obesity?

2630 Hon. G H Licudi: Well, as the answer suggests, we are conducting a survey on this and specifically relating to the issue of tuck shops, which is what the question talks about, but the question generally of obesity, we have said that the advisory service, the education advisors, are working closely with professionals of the departments of the GHA to see what it is that can be done educationally, certainly as far as the schools are concerned. Issues of childhood obesity might go beyond what school professionals can do and, therefore, there is a limit as to how much involvement there is, but there is work that is being done in conjunction with professionals in the GHA specifically to see what it is that the Education Department can do to tackle this problem.

2635 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, will the Government be removing the vending machine of unhealthy snacks at the Primary Care Centre which is right next to the children's play area, which was highlighted by a Chronicle letter by Adalisa Iglesias on 25th May of this year, as it sends out the wrong signals in encouraging healthy eating and avoiding obesity.

2640 Hon. G H Licudi: Presumably, the hon. Member is referring to a vending machine placed there by the previous administration. I assume that is what she is referring to and that she is suggesting that we remove something that they put in.

2645 This clearly has nothing to do with tuck shops in schools, which is what the question was about. As Minister for Education, which is the basis upon which I am standing here, I simply cannot say, but if the hon. Member is suggesting that the Government should look at removing a vending machine that they put in, for whatever reason they decided to put it in, then I would be happy to discuss that with my colleague, the Minister for Health, and take a view on that.

Special Educational Needs Additional resources

2655 Clerk: Question 557, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us which extra resources will be obtained in order to service the special educational needs of the children in Gibraltar schools.

2660 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, Government has changed the contract status of 16 Classroom Aides to full-time, 2665 therefore increasing the support they provide for children. In addition, some 40 supply Classroom Aides – in fact, it has been thirty-nine supply Classroom Aides – have been recruited, thereby re-populating the existing supply list. In fact when we came into office there was only one person on the supply list, which gave rise to grave concerns and grave issues in providing cover. In fact, cover was virtually impossible.

2670 Twenty further permanent Classroom Aides will be recruited to provide additional support for children with special educational needs. In effect, this results in an additional 28 Classroom Aides, as well as a supply list to provide cover for temporary absence. As I mentioned, I seem to recall at a press conference last week, this represents over a 50 percent increase in the number of Classroom Aides available to schools in Gibraltar. The Behavioural Educational Support Team will also be staffed by three permanent teachers, rather than by supply teachers. This will ensure more stable and consistent support for children with behavioural or emotional problems.

2675 In terms of buildings, there will be an extension built to Notre Dame School this year, which will include three classrooms for the learning support facility and two for special educational needs. This extension will provide much needed extra space. An extra unit at St. Martins will also be built – again, to provide more ample facilities for our special needs children.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker, and the increase in human resources is certainly welcome and in extensions to existing school buildings. What about resources in terms of equipment, IT equipment: has that been identified at all?

2685

Hon. G H Licudi: Well, yes, Mr Speaker one of the issues that has been raised to me – and this does not just affect children with special needs but it affects special needs classrooms as well – was that there were insufficient interactive boards in schools and therefore there was a need to increase the equipment that was available to schools for all children and also for classes dealing with children who had special needs. I can't remember from memory but we certainly approved and gave instructions for additional interactive boards. I seem to recall something in the order of thirty additional ones were ordered and I am not sure whether they have now arrived and are now installed but certainly we approved the provision of additional support.

2690

There was also a representation made to me by representatives of parents of children at St. Martin's that they would benefit from having iPads due to the interactive nature and also due, particularly in St. Martin's, with the closeness of working in smaller groups with Classroom Aides and with the teachers there. I certainly approved a pilot scheme in order to introduce iPads in St. Martins, with a view to seeing how that worked, particularly with children with special needs, and then possibly extending that to other schools. So in terms of equipment we have already moved in the last six months with additional resources for children with special needs.

2695

Especially gifted children Level of support

2705

Clerk: Question 558, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us how especially gifted children will be supported by the Department of Education.

2710

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, schools have received in-service training on gifted children over the last two years and teachers are, therefore, becoming better prepared to support the gifted and help to develop their natural abilities.

The ongoing training for teachers has focused on the need to employ diverse and flexible strategies that meet the needs of distinct pupil groups and that is generally done with differentiation of the work that is given to specific children. Constant evaluation of these strategies is also a key feature. The advisory service and the 2720 educational psychology service are also involved in providing advice to schools on supporting gifted children.

Let me add, Mr Speaker, in relation to this, that there is a difference – I am not sure exactly what the question is aimed at – between children that may be considered especially gifted and children that are talented. There are many talented children in all the schools. They could be talented in sport, they could be talented in music and those are dealt with in the normal course of events during the school and, where differentiation is possible, that is implemented.

Especially gifted children, which is what the question was about, as I understand it, what the hon. Member may say, are in a slightly different category to what normally would be regarded as talented children. The information I have is that there is a process of evaluation which involves the educational psychologist and, at present, there is not a single child which has been identified as being ‘especially gifted’, rather than merely talented and therefore been provided with extra support, as necessary. Teachers, nevertheless, have been provided in-service training to try and identify and then possibly refer the child, should they arise in the future.

2735 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, thank you for that.

Perhaps to clarify, my intention was those who, in some instances, may be fast tracked through the education system because they are perhaps an academic year or two ahead of their peers and I assume that your colleagues within the Department of Education, if that individual is identified, aid that child to go to either a specialist school perhaps in the United Kingdom or here to cater for them specifically, but is hypothetical and, as you said, such an individual has not been identified.

2740 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, it is hypothetical and I am tempted to say I am not here to answer hypothetical questions, but the hon. Member does make the point of when a child is particularly gifted or talented and may be suitable for that sort of fast tracking what is the policy in that regard and I can tell the hon. Member what the Government’s policy is in that regard.

2745 The Government’s policy is that there are no plans at the moment to accelerate children through the educational system. The advice that I have received is that, educationally, there is no benefit: no educational benefit to the child and it can, in fact, lead to undue pressure being put on a child at an early age to try and compete with much older children. The child might, in fact, have talent beyond the older children but the older children will have maturity and some issues which might not arise in respect of the young child. So, I am advised that, educationally, there is no benefit and the Government has no plans to introduce a fast tracking procedure.

2755 Homework support groups
Methodology

Clerk: Question 559, the Hon. Mrs I M. Ellul-Hammond.

2760 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education explain how the homework support groups will work, as per the manifesto commitment.

2765 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2770 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, it is envisaged that pilot support groups will be started in the next academic year. Preliminary discussions with headteachers have already been held but precise details are still to be determined. I don’t want to be vague but this is something that is being discussed actively between the professionals and the Department and headteachers in their meetings. We have said this is something that we want to do, they have advised us that we should start with pilot groups and they still have to come back to us with details of what precisely is proposed so we can take a final decision. In principle, we want the pilot schemes to start as from the next academic year.

2775 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware that I believe Bayside and Westside already have a form of homework support group and perhaps that will be taken into consideration and evaluated for this exercise?

2780 Hon. G H Licudi: I am not aware specifically of the type of group that is available but it is something which we identified as something that was positive in terms of keeping children in school, wanting to provide them with support, which some children might have support at home, other children might not because of work requirements or for whatever reasons and this is something that we identified as something as being good. We wanted to expand on whatever facilities are available and it is something that we are working on to introduce next year.

2785 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, and finally, Mr Speaker, will the Minister be consulting with the teachers' union on this issue and working together with them?

2790 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, myself and members of the Department of Education have regular meetings with the teachers' unions at which all issues in relation to teachers arise. But let me say that this is not a matter that should give rise to any undue concern. No teacher is actually going to be forced to stay behind and do extra work beyond the terms and conditions that they have. This will be provided on a voluntary basis.

2795 We have already said that there might be call upon the pool of supply teachers who might want to do this as well. There might be retired teachers who might be interested in this, but certainly I will be happy and will be engaging with the GTA office.

2800 Schools' maintenance budget
Management by headteachers

Clerk: Question 560, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2805 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education advise if he has now considered the introduction of maintenance budgets for schools to be managed by headteachers, as per the Government's manifesto commitment?

2810 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2815 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Government's objective was to create a system for the maintenance of schools which worked on a timely and efficient manner. Its strategy consisted of a two-pronged approach: a dedicated maintenance team; and dedicated budgets to be managed by headteachers.

As already announced, the Government has created a dedicated maintenance team for schools, consisting of eight persons and a foreman. The system is working well. It has also obviated the need for schools themselves to manage their own repairs and maintenance.

2820 As a result and following discussions and agreement with headteachers, the Department of Education has advised that it is best to monitor the present system, before deciding on whether, in fact, there is a need for headteachers to control dedicated budgets for maintenance.

2825 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, so is the Minister now suggesting that perhaps the Government will not be implementing their manifesto commitment which reads:

'Head Teachers will, in addition, have control over dedicated budget which they can use for small scale maintenance/minor works which may be required in their schools.'?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the manifesto commitment is there for a purpose, and what the hon.

2830 Member cannot do is just look at one line in a particular sentence or in a particular paragraph in the manifesto. It was described in the manifesto as a two-pronged... Well, it was not specifically described as a two-pronged approach, but it was clear that there were two legs to this approach for maintenance. Surely the hon. Member is not urging us to do something which is not necessary and, in particular, the hon. Lady will not be urging us to do something which headteachers might not want.

2835 In fact, we have already discussed this with headteachers, and they have told us that they are happy with the way the present system is working. That is why we have said we need to monitor to see whether in fact there is a need for the second part of the approach.

2840 We have also been told by headteachers that, in fact, they may not be qualified to prioritise and manage these particular works by controlling their own budget, nor would they necessarily administratively have time to take on this additional burden. So what we are doing is listening to the people for whose benefit this was done.

2845 This was not done because the Government thought it wanted to introduce it itself for any reason other than we felt, or suggestions have been made to us, that there were problems with the maintenance of schools and it might be a good idea for the headteachers to control their own budgets and therefore be able to run their own affairs in respect of maintenance. We felt that that was a good idea, but we are certainly not going to force it on people, if they think that the present system is working properly.

2850 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, we welcome that, and we understand what you are saying but, basically, you will not be implementing one of your manifesto commitments.

Hon. G H Licudi: Apart from welcoming and understanding what I have said, the hon. Member has not understood that I have said that we will monitor the present system.

2855 What the manifesto did not say – and the hon. Member has referred to what our manifesto said – what the manifesto did not say is that we will have a dedicated maintenance team and we will have dedicated budgets by 1st September 2012. It said both – that we would do both – and not by 1st September 2012, but earlier on in this year, a few months ago, we put together a dedicated team for schools. It is a manifesto which sets out a four-year programme. We have four years to evaluate the present system and decide whether that second limb of the two-pronged approach is necessary or is not necessary.

2860 But I can tell the hon. Lady now that if we consider that it is not necessary and if we are advised by headteachers and professionals that there is no requirement at all, because the system that we have put together, since we came into office on 9th December, is working so well that it obviates the need for the second limb, I will have no problem at all in standing up in this House or anywhere else and saying that part of the manifesto we will not do, because we do not need to do it, because we have done the first part which has worked perfectly well.

Schools' refurbishment programme Projects for this year

2870

Clerk: Question 561, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

2875 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education tell us what projects will form part of this year's schools' refurbishment programme?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2880 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, apart from the ongoing repairs and maintenance programme, the main projects prioritised by the Department of Education are as follows: an extension to St Martin's Special School; an extension to Notre Dame First School to provide, in particular, an extension to the learning support facility and two dedicated classrooms for special educational needs; completion of extension at Westside School; completion of the ongoing window replacement programme at St Anne's.

2885 Other projects for other schools will also be considered during the course of the year.

2890 Legal Aid (Fees and Expenses) Rules 2012
Benefits of recent changes

Clerk: Question 562, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2895 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Minister for Justice state how many (a) people; and (b) unrelated cases have benefited from the recent changes introduced by the Legal Aid (Fees and Expenses) Rules 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

2900 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, four defendants, all linked to one case, have made applications under the recent changes introduced by the Legal Aid (Fees and Expenses) Rules 2012 since its commencement on 20th March 2012.

2905 Clerk: That completes Answers to Oral Questions.

Questions for Written Answer

2910 Clerk: We now move on to Answers to Written Questions.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

2915 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answers to Written Questions W95-W101/2012 inclusive.

BILLS FOR FIRST AND SECOND READING

2925 A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions
First Reading carried

The Hon. the Chief Minister to move:

2930 A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions. (B05/12)

Clerk: Bills, First and Second Reading: A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions.

2935 The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010, in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions be read a first time.

2940 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010, in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions be read a first time.
Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Carried.

2945

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2012
Second Reading carried

2950 Clerk: The Income Tax (Amendment) Act 2012.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time and that the Minister with responsibility for Financial Services address this House in respect of the Bill.

2955 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Finance... for Financial Services, I do apologise.

2960 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, this Bill follows representations made to the Government by the Association of Pension Fund Administrators, representations which were made fairly early on after we were elected into office, and the representations had two limbs to them: firstly, that some pension schemes established outside Gibraltar had, in fact, already been transferred and they may be exposed to a tax charge if the transfer was considered invalid, and that tax charge in respect to the United Kingdom could be as high as 55% of the fund, so there was an exposure in respect of a very few number of imported pension schemes; secondly, that the line of business of pension fund administration which had actually been stopped several years ago because of the possibility of that tax charge and the possibility that the transfers may be considered invalid without specific legislation in Gibraltar to provide for this and it was suggested to us that this was a viable line of business and that Gibraltar generally could benefit and that the pension fund administration industry in particular could benefit. Those were representations that we accepted and I asked for a Bill to be prepared. Following consultation with the industry, we have published this particular Bill which stands before the House today.

2970 The Bill does a number of matters, but in particular what it does is impose tax on incomes by individuals who are in receipt of distributions from imported pension schemes at the rate of 2.5%. It is important to stress that the Bill specifically provides that the source of income which is liable to this tax is income from pension schemes and by clause 2 of the Act, which introduces a new section 14A to the Income Tax Act.

2975 New section 14A(2) would provide that this taxation of income in respect of pensions would only apply in respect of pension schemes which were transferred from another country other than another Member State of the European Union. The Bill provides that the term 'another Member State' has the same meaning as in section 5(8) of the Income Tax Act. Under section 5(8), the meaning of 'another Member State' is a Member State of the European Union other than the United Kingdom. So what this Bill does is permit transfers to be done for pension schemes, normally known as QROPS – Qualifying Recognised Overseas Pension Schemes – from the United Kingdom for them to be managed and distributions to happen from Gibraltar and those distributions would attract a charge of 2.5%.

2980 The Bill also provides for a number of restrictions and requirements in respect of taxation of these QROPS. Firstly, there is a maximum commutation possible of 30% of the fund of a particular individual. Secondly, there is a minimum retirement age of 55 – that is, except in very specific circumstances relating to ill health – and the Bill makes provision that the rules in respect of the pension fund must irrevocably bind the fund in respect of these matters: the commutation; the minimum retirement age of 55; and also a requirement that an imported pension scheme transferred to another scheme outside Gibraltar does not comply with the original requirements; in other words, there is a requirement to actually prevent an importer's pension scheme from then being transferred outside and that prevention restriction must be incorporated in the irrevocable rules that bind the pension fund in question.

2990 It is important to stress, Mr Speaker, that this Bill in no way affects distributions from pensions in Gibraltar and does not affect Gibraltar pensioners at all and the benefits that Gibraltar pensioners receive.

2995 What this does is, in effect, open up a new line of business for pension fund administrators and also create additional income for Gibraltar in the form of taxation which hitherto has not been possible.

I would add, Mr Speaker, that the Bill has been welcomed, when it was published, by the industry and in particular by the Association of Pension Fund Administrators.

I commend the Bill to the House, Mr Speaker.

3000 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Hon. G H Licudi: Sorry Mr Speaker, there is one particular clause that I forgot to mention. It is an important clause.

3005 There is a provision in the Bill which says that the particular section we are introducing in the Income Tax Act is deemed to come into effect on the sixth day of April 2006, and that is simply to make sure that those pension schemes that have been transferred and have been imported are caught by the provisions of this Bill and therefore those transfers can be considered valid.

3010 The other matter that it is important to stress, Mr Speaker, is that it is the responsibility of the particular pension fund administrator that makes arrangements for the transfer of the pension fund to make sure that they comply with all the requirements of validity. What this does is simply set out the statutory framework to enable valid transfers to occur. Whether the transfer is valid or not is not guaranteed by this Bill; it simply is an enabling provision and the validity of the transfer is the responsibility of the professionals who deal with this, who will have to make sure that they comply with whatever rules and, in particular, the rules of the pension fund.

3015 But in effect we are talking of transfers of QROPS, primarily from the United Kingdom, and it is the new line of business which I think Gibraltar and the industry will certainly welcome.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Daniel Feetham.

3020 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, the Opposition will be voting in favour. It is a Bill that has been drawn by the industry and obviously we will support it.

There is nothing really useful that I can add to what the hon. Member has already said, talking about the merits of the Bill.

3025 May I just ask the hon. Member to clarify this: why do you take the date of 6th April 2006? I know that he has said that to catch those pension funds that have already been transferred; but why the date of 6th April 2006?

3030 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is the date that I was advised we should go back to in order to catch all the pension schemes that have actually been transferred.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill? Do I take it that is the reply of the mover of the Bill?

3035 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Speaker, yes –

Mr Speaker: Well, sorry, the mover of the Bill –

Hon. G H Licudi: The mover of the Bill –

3040 Mr Speaker: – was the Chief Minister.

Hon. G H Licudi: – was the Chief Minister and I was simply talking of the merits, but I take it that there are no further contributions on our side.

3045 Mr Speaker: Does the mover of the Bill wish to reply or add anything?

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, but no.

3050 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 in order to impose tax upon income from certain imported pensions be read a second time.

Order of the Day

Tributes in memory of former Speaker of the House, Sir Alfred Vasquez, QC and Mr J E Triay, QC

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Thursday, 5th July.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, Members gathered here this morning will know that today we were to start what is one of the most important set pieces of the annual life of this Parliament, which was the debate on the Estimates on the Appropriation Bill. It is sadly my duty to come here today to adjourn the House as a result of the passing of two great Gibraltarians.

10 The first, I think, to remember is Sir Alfred Vasquez, who held your Chair for a record period of time and who passed away quietly at home two days ago. I think everybody who came into contact with Sir Alfred knew him to be a positive influence in their lives and all of the people who served in this Parliament with him whom I had occasion to speak with yesterday remembered his time here as Speaker with fondness.

15 And of course, Mr Speaker, the death that led to this adjournment is the unfortunate passing of Mr J E Triay, another very prominent member of our community, a man who held forthright views that he defended honestly and fairly and who is also, as we know, the father-in-law of the Leader of the Opposition, which would have made it impossible for the Leader of the Opposition to have answered today my speech on the presentation of the Estimates.

20 So, Mr Speaker, I think it is appropriate to pay tribute to both of those great Gibraltarians, who have passed away and in that context to adjourn the House.

Before I move the adjournment, I give way, if any Member of the benches opposite wishes to associate themselves with these remarks.

25 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we have nothing to add to the Leader of the House's words in relation to Mr Vasquez and also J E Triay. We associate ourselves entirely with the comments of the Leader of the House, and of course, extend our condolences to both sets of families on the very sad loss of both individuals.

30 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, on that basis I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn to Monday, 9th July, at 9.30 a.m.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question which is that this House do now adjourn to Monday, 9th July 2012, at 9.30 a.m.

Appropriation Act 2012
For Second Reading Debate commenced

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2012.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this is my first Budget address as Chief Minister and I have the honour to present the Government's revenue and expenditure estimates for the year ending 31st March 2013.

Mr Speaker, this debate has traditionally also been about more than just numbers; this is a State of the Nation debate. I will therefore also report to this House on the state of the economy and public finances and on the specific Budget measures and some of the projects that the Government will introduce, in pursuance of our manifesto commitments.

Mr Speaker, having been in Opposition for 16 years, it is my pleasure to deliver for a Socialist Liberal Government, a Budget to support working families and the disabled; a Budget to support our youth and our senior citizens; a Budget, Mr Speaker, to encourage business and enhance our public services. In short, Mr Speaker, this is a Budget to deliver social justice and to improve the quality of life of all our citizens whilst making Gibraltar a great place to do business with the world – and that, Mr Speaker, against a backdrop of continued economic turmoil in Europe.

Mr Speaker, no-one in our community can have failed to appreciate the social problems that Europe's economic woes are visiting upon ordinary citizens in economies more mature and diversified than our own. The political and economic problems we are seeing played out on our TV news screens each day manifest themselves dramatically across the continent, when school children in Athens faint because they have not eaten in days – or, without needing to go so far, civil servants not being paid in the neighbouring city of La Línea. What we certainly cannot afford to be is complacent, Mr Speaker, just because we have not seen such problems in Gibraltar. A collapse of the euro, or even the departure from the euro of one or more countries would have seismic effects well beyond any one country or the euro zone. As we have seen, sterling is not immune to the problems affecting the euro or the issues that have affected the dollar. Indeed, when sterling rises against a weaker euro our exposure to exchange rate variances becomes marked. What may be good news for cross-frontier workers who exchange their sterling wages to euro is not so good for retailers who see their goods rise in cost for euro purchasers. So we are certainly not insulated from what is happening in the more troubled economies around us.

But neither must we be cowed. That is why in Opposition, we raised issues about the creeping growth of our nation's gross debt and why we have a clear commitment to deal with gross debt and net debt levels, as we set out in our manifesto – something on which, Mr Speaker, I will have more to say later.

Mr Speaker in doing so, I am conscious that our tenure in office began on the 9th December and that therefore the figures that I will now present to the House represent eight months of activity under the previous Administration and four of ours.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's Gross Domestic Product for the financial year 2009-10 was £998 million and the latest figures prepared by the Government's Statistics Office indicate that GDP for 2010-11 was £1.050 billion. The forecast GDP figure for 2011-12 is £1.137 billion, representing an increase for the year of 5.1% in real terms.

Mr Speaker, these GDP figures are broadly in line with our published predictions in 2007, in our manifesto for that election, of economic growth for this period. The Government's comprehensive programme of changes and benefits, as outlined in our manifesto, have been designed to be delivered to our community with an economy that will grow from £1.1 billion to £1.65 billion between 2011 and 2015.

Mr Speaker, this continues to be our prediction of economic growth in Gibraltar, despite the continued European and global economic recession. I am therefore delighted to confirm that our manifesto programme is on track to be delivered as planned. It also shows, Mr Speaker, that once again we have been able, before the election and without access to all the data available, to predict with some accuracy where our economy would be and gives credence to the extrapolations for growth that we have predicted.

Mr Speaker, in terms of public finances, when this Government took office on 9th December 2011, the Government found itself with available Cash Reserves of just £20 million. This was despite the projected recurrent surplus for the year and healthy available Cash Reserves that have been reflected in the Approved Estimates Book for the year 2011-12. It was essential, Mr Speaker, that I put this information into the public domain, so that each and every citizen should understand the reality of the state of our public finances after the election.

It is also important, Mr Speaker, that the public should understand the difference between the economy as a whole and public finances – i.e., the Government's own financial position. An economy can be growing, as ours is, whilst public finances, if not properly managed, can be under stress. That was the position in Gibraltar on 9th December. Cash advances made to Government-owned companies, which had been projected in the Estimates Book for 2011-12 to end the financial year at zero, had actually risen to some £87 million when this Government took office. Moreover, given the capital expenditure commitments already entered into, these advances were expected to rise further by the end of the financial year, i.e., 31st March this year, to around £100 million.

By way of illustration, during the last two financial years of the outgoing GSD Administration, capital expenditure funded through the Improvement and Development Fund was over £211 million. An additional £139 million of capital expenditure has been funded during these two years through the Government-owned companies. That is a total, Mr Speaker, of £350 million.

Incredibly, Mr Speaker, that is more than the total that was spent by the same GSD Administration in the Improvement and Development Fund capital expenditure in their previous 13 years in office. Such levels of capital expenditure have, of course, as we now know, only been possible through an increasing level of borrowing by the Government. This Administration is not prepared to continue to increase the level of public debt beyond existing prescribed borrowing limits and therefore had to stop work on many capital projects, which were clearly unaffordable without recourse to further borrowing.

That is why, Mr Speaker, our manifesto specifically provided, in clear and unambiguous terms, our approach to the reduction of national debt. Our manifesto provides on page 27 that in respect of gross debt:

'Our commitment is that Gibraltar's public debt will be brought down by half of its current level, whatever the current level is after the election, so that by the time of the next election in 2015 there will have been a 50% reduction. Gibraltar's gross debt is presently stated to be at £480,000,000.00 (almost half a billion pounds).'

In fact, Mr Speaker, as disclosed by the now Leader of the Opposition in the course of the Leaders' Debate on the eve of the election, gross debt on the day after the election was closer to £520 million and that is the figure we are working from – actually £518 million to be precise. In respect of net debt, Mr Speaker, our manifesto also provides that:

'Given that the policy is to have reserves available to meet the current expenditure, the definition of "net debt" introduced in 2009 will be changed so that from the balance of the Consolidated Fund a sum equivalent to 10% of recurrent expenditure will be treated as available to Government as a general reserve and not set off as available to reduce the gross debt to arrive at the hypothetical net figure. The Net Debt on this basis would be £37.7m higher currently, that is £253.5m instead of £216.5m, which is considered a more prudential policy.'

Mr Speaker, that is the process we are committed to and on which we are now embarked and the definition of 'net debt' that the Treasury now work to.

After the 8th December, the situation is now being brought under control, Mr Speaker. Gross Public Debt is now forecast to fall by just under one eighth or by some £68 million during this financial year, from £518 million to £450 million. The Net Public Debt is also projected to fall slightly during the financial year, thereby restoring the Cash Reserves available to the Government to a more prudent level of around £60 million.

Mr Speaker, the budget surplus for the last financial year 2011-12 was originally estimated at around £21 million. Revenue for last year is now estimated to exceed the original budget by around £58 million. The increase in revenue during the year has, to some extent, been due to the unprecedented level of Government's own capital expenditure, some of which ends up back in Government's own pocket by way of PAYE Income Tax and Import Duties; that is to say, the more the Government spends, the more in part that it collects. A further large increase in revenue during the year has been due to the increased level of Company Tax receipts, following the reduction and incidence of our Company Tax. However, this increased revenue stream will need to be monitored closely by the Government to see if the level of such revenue during this first year of the change is indeed sustainable going forward.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, in respect of corporation tax, the Government fully expects that the revenue will be down next year, as the figures for the year just past include some one-off payments arising from the change in systems of corporate taxation and some overstated income by some companies. Import duties have also been higher than expected and therefore very little growth has been built into these figures, as it may not be possible to see even a repeat of those numbers, let alone growth.

As regards Departmental Expenditure, this is now estimated to exceed the original budget by around £16 million. Consolidated Fund Charges, mainly comprising Public Debt Charges and Government Pensions are also estimated to exceed the original budget by some £4 million. Consolidated Fund expenditure for last year now includes a contribution to the Government-owned companies of around £28 million, which was required towards meeting the accumulated recurrent annual cash deficits in these companies as at 31st March 2012. The detail of this £28 million is as set out in page 140 of the Estimates Book under Head 44, Mr Speaker, and includes: £6.6 million of built-up recurrent annual losses on the running of Kings Bastion Leisure Centre, £1.6 million last year alone; £5.9 million of built-up recurrent annual losses on the running of the Gibraltar Bus Company, £2.1 million last year alone; £7.1 million of built-up recurrent annual losses on the running of Gibraltar Car Parks Limited, £2.8m last year alone; and £1.3 million of losses on the running of Gibraltar Air Terminal Limited for a few months this year. The annual running cost may be nearer £3.5 million, although we continue to work to reduce that.

That is to say, in summary, Mr Speaker, that the budget surplus has to be adjusted for the year ended 31st March 2012 to take the above variances into account and therefore produces a real surplus of £31 million.

Mr Speaker, moving on to the Revenue and Expenditure Budget for the current financial year, hon. Members will have noted that the layout of the Estimates Book for 2012-13 has changed in order to more clearly identify the Government Departments under each of the new Ministries. There is also the new Head of Expenditure for Contributions to Government owned companies, which, in order to avoid the situation I have just highlighted, provides funding to cover the estimated net recurrent cash deficits of these companies during the year. That means, Mr Speaker, that we will not have the problems I have just referred to again.

Hon. Members will have also noted that all advances to these Government-owned companies have been cleared at the end of the previous year. This has been done by way of the £28 million contribution from the Consolidated Fund that I mentioned previously, and by way of an increase in funding of Government companies from the Improvement and Development Fund from £15 million to £72 million. Last year Mr Speaker, the sum applied in that manner by the previous Administration was £34 million.

Mr Speaker, the Estimates of Expenditure for this Government's first year in office necessarily reflect a significant increase in spending, in order to address the many areas of the Public Service where there has been under-provision in previous years and where there is a clear need for further resources and for the delivery of our manifesto commitments. In particular, these include our Health Service, our Social Services, Education and Employment and Training and we have, in the main, identified in the manifesto the people have chosen, where and how those investments will be made in the coming four years.

Already this year in our Health Service, the nursing staff complement is being increased by more than 20, and the Government is looking into the reform and improvement of the Sponsored Patients Scheme, which works for some but often leaves the less well-off in a precarious situation when they are at their most vulnerable and away from home. I do have pleasure, however, Mr Speaker, in announcing an immediate increase of 50% on top of present rates of all sponsored patient payments in respect of sponsored patients who are disabled. That takes effect from today.

As regards capital investment in our Health Service, the GHA budget for works and equipment is being more than doubled to £2 million and this is in addition to an investment of £1 million to replace the entire fleet of ambulances and the necessary spending already announced trying to bring KGV into a more acceptable state, whilst the new facility is readied for occupation. Mr Speaker I will not say that we have inherited a lot of problems in our Health Services – although that is true and no doubt the Minister for Health will elaborate in his contribution. What I will say is that there are many problems inherent in the provision of Health Services for a community our size or indeed any community. Medicine is not an exact science – but our role as politicians in this House is to administer systems and finance to deliver the best possible care in the best and most efficient manner possible.

My view, Mr Speaker, is that there are structural problems in the provision of Health Services in Gibraltar today which are not dissimilar to those that there were in 1996, 1988 and probably in 1972 and 1969, i.e., whenever and despite the changes in Governments and Administrations. But there are problems today that were not there in 1996 and which can be resolved.

So, Mr Speaker, in that context I sincerely do believe that the Hon. Dr. John Cortes, although his doctorate is not in medicine, is exactly the right person to break the back of these perennial issues. His ability to communicate with all members of staff at the GHA is the key to delivering the patient experience that I am sure we all believe this community deserves. That is not to say that there will never be mistakes or people dealt with always perfectly – but that is what we will strive for; and whilst other countries are forced to consider new models for healthcare, we are able to remain committed to Health Services always being provided free at the point of delivery to entitled persons under the Group Practice Medical Scheme.

Our Social Services will also see an increase in staff complement, including the employment of more than 35 additional Care Workers and Social Care Workers and the Domiciliary Care programme is being extended. In that respect, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to have had the opportunity of recommending the appointment of Ms Sacramento to the Ministry for Social Services – something she has taken to immediately, as I knew she had the ability and character for, despite never having previously been a Parliamentarian.

In Education, a further 47 new teachers will be engaged by September 2012, and 29 Classroom Aides will be taken on as part of the fixed complement of the Department. The Scholarship budget will be doubled to around £10 million with all our school leavers with a place in university being fully funded, in terms of tuition fees and maintenance grants. Postgraduate study will also be granted as a mandatory entitlement as is the case for first degree courses. My colleague, the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, will say more about the detail of that in his contribution later in this debate; as he will of the challenges facing us in respect of financial services and the other areas of his wide responsibilities.

In Employment and Training, the Government's investment in its 'Future Job Strategy' will ensure that our school leavers and university graduates, as well as all other members of our community seeking employment, are given an opportunity to get jobs and an opportunity to contribute to the growth of our economy. Who better, Mr Speaker – I have to be careful not to say too many nice things about him, otherwise he might pull me down – to look after unemployed resident workers than Mr Bossano who has given so much of his life to date to promotion of workers' rights. Already the number of residents in employment is steadily increasing – and I am sure that Mr Bossano will have more to say about all of this during the course of his contribution to this debate.

Despite this increased level of expenditure, Mr Speaker, the Government is projecting a surplus of around £17 million for the year. That is, Mr Speaker, targeted spending to deliver a better, fairer Gibraltar and a surplus at the end of it all, in the context also of a reduced gross debt and a reduced net debt based on a more prudent definition, as set out in our manifesto, and all recurrent company expenses paid. Of course, Mr Speaker, we could be less prudent and we could take recurrent company losses off balance sheet and provide for a higher surplus by borrowing more – but we will not do that. We will not fall into that trap.

For this year, Mr Speaker, Government revenues are expected to increase at least in line with GDP growth. However, the Government remains committed to limiting any increases in Government expenditure during our first term in office to below the growth of the economy. That is why we have calibrated expenditure and manifesto delivery as we have. Mr Speaker, the Government is in the process of re-structuring the public finances in order to reflect the many changes that are planned to take place during the lifetime of this Parliament. A few changes have already been made and have been incorporated in these Estimates. For example, the surplus in the Gibraltar Savings Bank will no longer be transferrable to the Consolidated Fund, but will be retained within the Bank to build up the Bank's Reserves. As already explained, importantly, the full effect of any deficits in the Government-owned companies are now fully reflected in the Consolidated Fund Recurrent Expenditure Estimates. Further changes include the planned reforms to the Social Insurance Funds, the expanding of role of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and further policies aimed at increasing available Cash Reserves even further. That, Mr Speaker, is the agenda for change that will be relevant in the life of this Parliament at Budget times to come.

Mr Speaker, in addition to the many Capital Projects which will be funded from the Improvement and Development Fund, as identified in the Estimates Book, the Government's capital expenditure programme for its first term of office includes numerous projects which will continue to be channelled through the established Government-owned asset-holding corporate structure. These include: the delivery of homes partly to be provided under a co-ownership scheme; the development of parks and car-parking facilities; new berthing facilities for locally resident boat owners; the replacement and modernisation of our bus fleet with more environmentally friendly vehicles more apt to our roads and our environment, as well as the renewal and modernisation of the Government's own fleet of vehicles for that purpose on a phased basis; and a beautification programme for all our existing housing estates, including continuing and completing refurbishments at Varyl Begg and Alameda Estate and external cladding in Glacis Estate, Laguna Estate and Moorish Castle Estate – the abandoned estates, Mr Speaker, and as more particularly provided for in our manifesto.

Mr Speaker, one of the biggest capital projects for the Government is the replacement of our three existing power stations. The Government did not consider that the previous Administration's plan to build a new power station at Lathbury Barracks, to run exclusively on diesel-powered engines, was the right choice for meeting Gibraltar's power requirements for the next 30 years. We were committed to any agreements that might have been signed before our election – but when we were elected, there was no binding agreement to build a new facility. The Government is currently finalising a review of a number of alternative options and locations, involving different technologies and financing models, and will shortly be making an announcement on a final decision on the way forward.

Pressure from environmental action groups telling us to decide sooner is understandable; but we must make the right decision not the fastest decision. The Government's choice of energy sources will reflect the Government's commitment to ensure that Gibraltar's carbon emissions are minimised, as well as minimising the noise pollution and emissions that affect many of the residential areas at present, and on both these issues, I am sure both the Minister for the Environment and the Minister for Utilities will have more to say.

I will add this, Mr Speaker: the power station proposed by the GSD Administration would have taken between 36 to 48 months to deliver; for that reason any power cuts in that period from 8th December are for the account of the GSD Administration that did not commission a new power station sooner – having known a decade ago that, by 2010, there would be critical failures in the existing facilities at Waterport – and not, Mr Speaker, therefore, for the account of the responsible, forward-looking, environmentally conscious Government that is taking steps to ensure the right combination of security of supply, reduction of polluting emissions, noise nuisance and technological future proofing. The Government is also exploring ways of reducing energy consumption and the use of solar energy for street lighting in Government buildings. A number of projects are already in hand in this respect and both the Ministers for the Environment and Utilities will have more to say about that later.

Mr Speaker, the Government is making a significant investment in the public sector. I have said before and I make no apology for saying again, that the public servants I have had the benefit or working with since the 9th December are brilliant Gibraltarians – sometimes failing in delivery, principally not through lack of ability or motivation, but because of under-investment or because they were previously not allowed to do their jobs. As the engine for growth for Gibraltar and facilitators for the private sector, the public sector needs to be adequately resourced and systems of work in the public sector need to be brought up-to-date for the benefit of everyone in our community.

It is appropriate for me to say here, that despite the pay freezes in the UK public sector, and as foreshadowed in our manifesto, Civil Service pay will increase by 2.7% in 2012-13. We also remain committed to a further increase in Civil Service pay of 2.9% almost 3% for the year 2013-14. The Civil Service Review has begun and meetings are held regularly with the Chief Secretary and with me to make sure we get that review right and that we move fast to address the concerns of public sector employees and private sector clients; but Rome was not built in a day and we all prefer strong foundations for this review and not flimsy, quick fixes. But the process continues apace.

In this respect, I want to acknowledge the work of the GGCA, Unite and the GTA in embarking on a process that is fully consultative so that, from the grass roots up, we will have the input necessary to develop a renewed and more efficient public service for our people and our businesses. This is not imposition from the top; this is working together to deliver together. Good progress is being made, in consultation and partnership with the trade unions who, together with the Chamber of Commerce and the Federation of Small Businesses – who we will also be consulting as part of this process – we consider to be our partners in this endeavour.

A start has already been made in the Government's programme of 'e-Government', which will transform the way business is done in and with many areas of the public sector. The Government is committed to promoting as much interaction as possible between the citizen and the Government 'online' and enhancing the access and delivery of Government information and services to citizens and the business community. That, Mr Speaker, is the interface of the future – and I must say that working with our people in the Government's IT Department is one of the things that I enjoy the most. I believe that the citizen has much to gain from the 'e-Government' revolution and that our IT Department has much to give.

In this respect also, the next few months will see the introduction of a modern computerised system at the Customs Department. The business community will see a transition to a modern computerised 'paperless' system, which will provide internet-based processing and clearance of imports and which will simplify Customs procedures and documentation, consistent with international standards and best practice. This ASYCUDA system, as it is known, has been worked on for some time – but was stalled when it was just about to be introduced last year. We have allowed Customs to work hard to ensure that the system was ready to be implemented this year.

It is this type of e-Government revolution that we are embarked upon throughout the public sector that will make it possible for the citizen to interact with Government in the same way as the trader requiring imports or exports will shortly be able to interact with Customs. I want to single out for special mention in respect of the ASYCUDA system the work done by Mr Constantin Ciuta, Costi, as he is known, of the United Nations Trade and Development Office who has been seconded to Gibraltar for two years to make ASYCUDA a reality, with John Rodriguez, the Collector of Customs and his team. John has championed this system and the benefits will reflect well on him and on his Department.

And if I may say so Mr Speaker, I would wish to say something at this point to all Customs Officers. I have many friends in Customs, as I do in other Departments, and I understand the problems that have been allowed to fester in that Department. We are embarked in talking to both unions that represent officers and to unrepresented officers. Customs is not just the collector of much of Government's revenue; it is also a proud law enforcement agency with an increasingly important role to play.

When we were alerted to the dangers arising to officers in the area of the frontier fence, we have acted immediately to re-enforce the frontier and to allow use of batons for protection. Working with officers and listening to officers and believing in the future of Customs as a Department, this Government will support the men and women in that massively important work that they do. In good faith, we can resolve the issues that concern them all and deliver – as ever – a better service to businesses and individuals and better working practices in a modernised working environment for officers. That is the challenge for all of us.

Returning to the public sector more generally, work has also started in other areas of the public sector, including the establishment of a Central Government Counter Office alongside and in conjunction with the expansion of the role of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, which will take on board the needs of Gibraltar businesses and personal users. All of this is designed to make the public sector more responsive to the needs of the public it is designed to serve. The interface between the public sector and the private sector needs to work seamlessly – and that is the area where we will continue to work with unions, federation and Chamber until we get it right.

The Gibraltar Savings Bank will be opening its new main office building in Main Street in coming months. In addition to its banking services for the community, office counters will be provided within the Bank to enable the community to make use of centralised payment facilities for all Government services. More will be announced about the facilities that the Bank will make available to businesses and private citizens alike, when arrangements are finalised.

Moreover, as part of the continuing expansion of the role of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, the range of deposits offered by the Bank will be extended further. The Savings Bank already offers instant access and one month's notice deposits paying 2% interest; three-year Fixed-Term Debentures paying 3.5% interest; five-year Fixed-Term Debentures paying 5% interest; and an 'Accumulator Bond', which pays an increasing level of interest depending on how long the investment is held – from 2% in the first year to 11% in the 10th year. To complement this range of deposits which is currently available, new products and current accounts will soon be available with the Savings Bank. It is expected that these will be in place before the end of this financial year.

I move now, Mr Speaker, to my responsibilities for broadcasting and the media. Last year, Mr Speaker, the previous Administration announced £12 million of funding to move GBC to Rooke. The announcement envisaged Rooke coming into Government hands in the past financial year. That was never going to be realistic; and when it comes to GBC, Mr Speaker, we owe it to the professionals at GBC, as much as we owe it to the public, to be realistic, frank and honest. GBC is an essential part of our community. It comes into its own on important dates in the Gibraltar calendar: Miss Gibraltar; National Day; Election time. What would those occasions be like, without GBC to relay to all those not there in person what is happening 'live'? What would our community be like without a weekday 'Newswatch'?

But Mr Speaker, GBC is at the same time failing our community. Some events that are crying out to be transmitted live, or at least recorded and shown later, never make it to our screens. Yet how can they, if GBC's Outside Broadcast facilities are decrepit and no investment in them has been made in years? Quality of reception is sometimes atrocious – but that is more often than not unrelated to GBC itself and arises from the vagrancies of the various cable networks that operate in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, GBC is one of our national treasures, and much as we need it, much as we love it, we also love to criticise it – sometimes fairly; sometimes unfairly. I, Mr Speaker, am a fan of GBC and I make no apology for that. I appreciate the work that the people at GBC do. And I, like the rest of our community, demand more from GBC. What we certainly cannot do is expect GBC to perform without resources. But what we as a community cannot be expected to do is pump in resources without limit to get the same as we had before.

I sincerely do not believe that GBC should be transmitting old series of 'Fishing in Florida' filmed in the 1980s, or some such unwatchable material. Local programming is what GBC is there for and local programming is what the public want. Yet for the past 16 years, it seems to me that GBC has been allowed to fester in a time warp of ancient resources and very large subsidies that are never enough and amount to under-funding.

£12 million to go to Rooke, when Rooke is finally available, is not the answer. Instead, we believe a new model of professional development for staff and of funding had to be found. Perennial problems had to be resolved. Again, Mr Speaker, Rome was not built in a day, but after years in the wilderness, GBC is finally starting to move forward. As a result of additional funding from the Government, the long-standing problem of poor staffing levels has been addressed and a number of additional employees recruited. These have strengthened the radio, news and television departments in particular.

There are still deficiencies in engineering and administration that are being considered. A new Chief Executive Officer (Designate), Mr Gerard Teuma, was appointed in February, and will fully take on the reins of the Corporation next April. However, he is already working towards introducing immediate improvements in programming and internal operations, while identifying solutions to problems that have blighted Broadcasting House, in some cases, for decades.

I want to thank Mr Alan King for the work he has done as CEO. We have already published in full his report into GBC, as we were committed to do. His contract expires next April when the CEO designate takes over. But even in the manner and timing of the appointment of Mr King we believe that there were errors and failures. Appointing Mr King took too long. GBC was without a General Manager for too long and, importantly, through the 2007 General Election that caused the Corporation to be headless for longer than is, in our view, conducive to progress – despite the best efforts of the Quartet of management at the time. A specialist Human Resources firm has now been contracted by GBC, working with management towards the introduction of internal rules and procedures, which until now have been practically non-existent and which are essential to the modern workplace.

The Government understands that it is the intention of management to complete phase one of this process within this financial year. The Government is also assisting GBC in a temporary refurbishment programme at Broadcasting House, which at present, can best be described as ‘not fit for purpose’. But that is an interim solution. If there is one thing on which we agree with members opposite, it is that South Barrack Road should not be the home of GBC for much longer. Rooke will be, when handed over, an asset of enormous financial significance and for potential economic growth. In the very centre of the western reclamations, we do not believe it should be the new home for GBC. But GBC does need a new home and closer to the city centre.

As a result, GBC and the Government have identified and are presently exploring adapting the Ince’s Hall to be a new media centre for Gibraltar. This will allow for much more modern facilities to be developed in an area much more accessible to the public. Design work is presently being undertaken. This will, of course, require that the Ministry of Culture be found a new home, which will be at City Hall; and the relocation of some of the drama groups that presently occupy parts of Ince’s Hall. The location is perfect to allow GBC greater flexibility in recording and transmitting events from Ince’s Hall and John Mackintosh Hall – not least elections, plays, meetings – exactly what local programming is made of.

The additional funding made available this year, ahead of the proposed move to Ince’s Hall, and the new CEO’s appointment have already allowed a revamp of Radio Gibraltar’s programming, including an improved local news service. Today, coinciding with this Budget, GBC Online has also launched an upgraded and greatly expanded local news page, as well as a new Community zone on the GBC website. Dedicated station Apps are also in development. Since March, GBC Television has introduced new programmes and has provided enhanced coverage of local events.

It must be pointed out that television, in particular, is expensive, but I am assured that GBC TV is deploying all resources to ensure the best possible local television can be provided, within the resources available. I am informed, Mr Speaker, that several new series will be screened during the summer, ahead of the autumn schedule being rolled out in late September, which will comprise circa 70% of local programming. GBC management is confident that with additional resources and opportunities, GBC Television, Radio and Online will continue to improve as work now starts in earnest to transfer all services from South Barrack Road to the proposed new media centre in the city centre, which is already in design. This will be for the benefit of Gibraltar’s very patient viewing and listening public, as well as for GBC’s very hard-working and at times unfairly criticised staff.

But that is not enough to really shake up and change the present model of public broadcasting in Gibraltar Mr Speaker. The future funding for the Corporation should not, however, be forever from the public purse if possible. Neither should GBC be funded from advertising given its privileged position as currently the only local broadcaster; although we note the emergence of one internet TV station, Your Gibraltar TV.

That is why, Mr Speaker, we have been in discussions with an international media group and with GBC to develop a new business model for the future. Given Gibraltar’s competitive corporation tax and our tax treatment of royalties, as well as ‘soft’ issues, such as our climate and bilingual population, the Government and the management of GBC believe that Gibraltar could be a very attractive proposition for international media companies to locate the production of music, television series and feature films within the jurisdiction. Hon. Members will know that many other jurisdictions have promoted themselves very successfully for this purpose without having a low rate of tax, beneficial treatment of royalties, the sun and a bilingual pool of labour. The staff of GBC would greatly benefit professionally and I am sure would be very excited at the prospect of being involved in international productions, alongside their continued local output. Local viewers will no doubt also benefit, if our GBC professionals are exposed on a regular basis to international productions.

For that reason, the Government has worked with GBC management to develop a proposed Joint Venture with established professionals in the media industry who would be able to attract the businesses needed to make the venture a success. The process to be followed will require an amendment to the GBC Act in order to allow the Corporation the ability to form part of the Joint Venture. The Government exposure, should the venture proceed, will be to assign to GBC land – initially at no cost, but with a commercial rent to follow later. That property would be contributed by GBC to the Joint Venture, which will then develop a studio to international standards, backed by a full order book for the first year of productions.

The aim is threefold: not just to give GBC staff greater opportunities in the international media exposure and development; but also, secondly, that the revenue from the Joint Venture should become GBC’s sole source of funding, thereby no longer being a draw from the Government’s revenues or, equally importantly, competing in the advertising market with other media and being totally financially independent; and thirdly that the international standard studio facilities should also be available for GBC productions where necessary. There are draft Heads of Terms proposed and being finalised, although some aspects of these are still subject to negotiation.

For example, amongst other things which are presently being discussed, Mr Speaker, GBC will insist in having a Golden Share or ultimate control or veto over the material produced at the studios on the grounds of public morality, public policy or public interest; and the value of the contribution of the land for the development must be valued and provided for in the balance sheet of the Joint Venture. The CEO and the CEO Designate of GBC and I will soon be starting a process of addressing and briefing the staff of GBC of what the proposal entails and why we believe it is a potential 'win/win' for all parties – in particular the professionals at GBC, the viewer and of course, the taxpayer.

Finally, in respect of GBC, last year we heard all about the investment that the previous Administration was going to make in taking GBC 'digital'. In fact, when we have been elected, we have found out that nothing had been done to fund or progress the change over to digital. The change over to digital is no longer a matter of choice, Mr Speaker. At an EU and international level, we have been parties, via the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, as the previous Administration was aware, to negotiations which require GBC to shut down its analogue signal by 31st December 2012. On 1st January 2013, these frequencies will be taken over by broadcasters from the Kingdom of Morocco. So the position we have inherited, when we have been elected, is that nothing had been done to change over to digital and if we do not achieve it by 31st December this year, there will be no broadcasting at all from GBC, neither analogue nor digital.

We have had to move fast to rectify this and the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, as the network regulator, has begun the unenviable task of providing a digital network in record time. We are confident that the mechanisms are now in place to – by the skin of our teeth – manage change over by the required time.

In respect of other media, Mr Speaker, where the Government is not involved in direct subsidy funding as with GBC, the position is going to be clear for this Government. Every media organisation will be treated equally and fairly. There will be no favourites and no subsidised funding of free party political propaganda organs by the Government. Government advertising will be spread equally and fairly.

Mr Speaker, taking my cue from the references I have just made to Rooke in respect of GBC, I am happy to report that we are engaged with the MOD in continued discussions in respect of the lands deal already agreed with the previous Administration. But the most important aspect of those discussions for us is not land, Mr Speaker; it is the people who make up the locally employed civilian workforce of the Ministry of Defence in Gibraltar and their security of employment. Those are our main concerns and we will work hard to protect all posts of employment beyond 2017.

The reductions being visited on the MOD throughout its establishment are brutal. In Gibraltar, we will all no doubt have been heartened to read those parts of the Overseas Territories White Paper which set out the UK's commitment to the defence of all Overseas Territories. That cannot, Mr Speaker, just mean a Forward Mounting Base for operations beyond Gibraltar. The MOD cannot, and I believe does not, believe it can mothball its operations in Forward Mounting Bases and have a caretaker employed to open up when they are needed; nor do I think that any military man needs to be persuaded of that or of the strategic importance of Gibraltar going forward, as threats change and become less certain. That is why we are engaged with the unions, both GGCA and Unite, in working together in our approach to preserve as many MOD jobs as possible, something on which I am sure the whole House will be united and will want to be seen to be united.

Indeed Mr Speaker, in respect of my responsibilities for Industrial Relations, I am delighted to be able to report that my Government enjoys a positive relationship with all unions. With Unite, of which I am a member, I have only recently returned from addressing their policy conference in Brighton where I had a chance of meeting General Secretary Len McCluskey and inviting him to Gibraltar. The Regional Committee – what used to be the District Committee of Unite – meet regularly in my office and we have ad hoc meetings when necessary.

Dialogue is the key. We may not always agree on everything – but we always agree to talk about everything to try to avoid disagreement, if possible.

With the GGCA, I maintain also an excellent and close working relationship. The Civil Service Review in many respects engages more aspects of what the GGCA and GTA memberships do than in respect of Unite, which has a wider reach across employers in our economy. For that reason, the GGCA committee and I have resolved to meet regularly – weekly, in fact – to deal with any issues that are being thrown up by the review and to remove any barriers to progressing the review.

The GTA meet more often with the Minister for Education than they do with me – but I, as much as the Minister for Education, are engaged in the 'social partnership' model of industrial relations with this important representative body of teachers' opinions and views. Without imposing our views on anyone, in discussion and consideration we therefore extend the collegiality of inter-ministerial relations to our positive industrial relations with all those representative bodies. And all were encouraging and supportive of our returning the Workers' Day holiday to 1st May and the grant of the closest long weekend to the end of April to commemorate Workers' Memorial Day: a measure of which we are justly proud.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to the specific Budget Measures.

595 Mr Speaker, in line with the Government's manifesto commitment to encourage and reduce the cost of doing business in Gibraltar, the discount for early repayment of Rates for Offices, Workshops, Construction and Manufacturing Industries, and Transport and Distribution Industries, will be increased from 5% to 10% with effect from 1st July 2012 – a discount, Mr Speaker, for responsible businesses who pay on time.

600 For new companies starting up business in Gibraltar, there will be a discount for early repayment of Rates of 50% for their first year of trading – Rates halved to encourage start-ups; the best incentive for entrepreneurs.

605 In addition to this, the Government has already announced that for bars and restaurants, the discount for the early payment of Rates will be increased by a further 20% to 40% between 1st October 2012 and 30th September 2013 and to 30% between 1st October 2013 and 30th September 2014, in order to assist in the introduction of the smoking ban. This will extend to casinos.

Mr Speaker, Salt Water Charges which currently form part of the General Rates, will be abolished with effect from 1st October 2012. As regards Domestic Rates, Mr Speaker, the discount for early payment will be maintained at 10%. However, domestic rate-payers will also benefit from the abolition of Salt Water Charges, with effect from 1st October 2012.

610 As a consequence of the abolition of Salt Water Charges, there will also be a corresponding reduction in Government House Rents. This is because Salt Water Charges are currently included and collected as part of Government House Rents which are and will remain frozen.

615 In this respect, this Budget will not just deliver this advantage to Government housing tenants, but it will also be good for homeowners, as all homeowners with a mortgage over property in Gibraltar will be eligible for relief. Those who pay mortgage interest over property in Gibraltar, whether they are on the Allowance Based System or on the Gross Income Based System, all will benefit. In order to further assist home owners with the purchase of their homes, therefore, with effect from 1st July 2012, Mortgage Interest Relief under the Allowance Based System will be increased by £50,000 from a maximum today of £300,000 to £350,000 in respect of property in Gibraltar. Tax-payers under the Gross Income Based System will also benefit from a deduction from their assessable income of their Mortgage Interest payments, up to a maximum of £1,000 in respect of property in Gibraltar.

620 As a further measure to reduce the cost of doing business in Gibraltar, electricity and water charges will not be increased. The 3% increase in electricity charges announced by the previous Administration in the last Budget, which was due to have been introduced sometime during last year, will also not be proceeded with. Electricity and water charges will not be increased for domestic consumers either and the Annual Pensioners' Utility Grant, applicable to persons aged 60 years and over, will be increased from £60 per annum to £75 per annum, with effect from 2012.

625 In order to stimulate the retail sector in Main Street and Gibraltar generally and in order to make Gibraltar a more attractive destination for shopping, the following Import Duties will be reduced, with immediate effect as from midnight last night:

- Portable Computers, including Laptops, Net books, and Tablet PC's and Memory Cards will go down from 6% to 0%;
- Perfumes, Beauty and Make-up preparations from 6% to 3%;
- 635 • Televisions from 6% to 0%;
- Hi-Fi and other electronic or electrical audio or visual equipment from 6% to 0%;
- Clothing and Footwear from 6% to 3%;
- Watches from 6% to 3%;
- Jewellery from 12% to 6%;
- 640 • Mobile Phones from 12% to 6%;
- DVD's and CD's from 12% to 0%.

645 These measures are designed to keep Main Street competitive, to maintain and enhance Gibraltar's attraction as a shopping destination and to promote locals buying from local establishments instead of online retailers. We will therefore be keeping a close eye on how prices are affected by these decreases, to monitor whether reductions are being passed on to consumers or pocketed by retailers.

650 Further, Mr Speaker, in order to continue to promote Gibraltar as a place to do high tech business, with immediate effect, import duty on computer software is reduced from 6% to 0% as from midnight last night. Moreover, in order to promote the use of Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for the creation and ownership of intellectual property, the import duty on equipment for production of sound or video recordings in the music, television or cinema industry which may not already be covered by the reduction of rates in respect of hi-fi and electronic goods is also reduced to zero with immediate effect.

In order to promote the use of renewable energy sources and reduce our dependence on fossil fuels in Gibraltar, the import duty on biofuels will be 0%, with immediate effect. Further, in order to promote the acquisition of hybrid vehicles, the import duty on these when imported via licensed motor vehicle dealers in Gibraltar will go down from 8.25% to 6.25% which is the present rate, depending on cubic capacity, to a flat 2% across the board. Moreover, upon registration of a hybrid vehicle, the purchaser will receive £500 cash back – a tax cut and cash-back incentive to purchase hybrids.

I have said already, Mr Speaker, that the Government is looking at such vehicles for its fleet and we hope that this measure will encourage consumers to consider hybrids also; not just because of the saving on fuels, but also because of the savings on import duty and the cash back on registration.

That is not the only measure designed to promote a more environmentally friendly society. Despite the increased use of computers, offices still use very large amounts of paper in this paperless age. Therefore, as from midnight last night, import duty on recycled or approved environmentally friendly or eco-paper – that is, paper from renewable forests – will be reduced from 12% to 0%. Any stationery made predominantly from recycled materials will also not attract any import duties. By taking these items out of the general tariff of import duties, the reduction in the rate is of 12%.

At present, Mr Speaker, vessels with a gross tonnage of less than 80 tons are subject to import duty at 12% and there is no import duty on vessels with a gross tonnage of 80 tons. In order to stimulate the use of Gibraltar by vessels of this ‘superyacht’ category, with immediate effect these vessels will be reclassified into ‘seagoing vessels of over 18 metres in length’ which will not be subject to any import duty. Vessels under 18 metres in length will be subject to an import duty reduction of 50% from 12% to a reduced rate of 6%.

Mr Speaker, in order to simplify the administration of the collection of import duty on cigarettes, the current import duty of £2.48 per kilo is abolished with immediate effect. This is replaced by a corresponding increase in import duty of 45 pence per carton of 200 cigarettes. A further increase of £1.00 per carton will also be effective immediately, bringing the total duty per carton to £9.45. This represents an overall increase in import duty on cigarettes of 10p per packet. Mr Speaker, it is no secret that raising the price of this commodity is as all Members will know, sensitive; but it is the right thing to do in support of our agenda to stop smoking in enclosed public places.

Mr Speaker, the Government is committed to reducing the level of personal tax down to no more than 15% for every taxpayer in Gibraltar on the Allowance Based System by 2015-16. As a first step in this direction, the following reductions in income tax will apply, with effect from 1st July 2012. For those taxpayers who have chosen to pay income tax under the Allowance Based System, the income tax rate on the first £4,000 of taxable income will be reduced from 17% to 15%. This measure will benefit approximately 4,500 taxpayers. Any taxpayer under the Allowance Based System with earnings of £9,000 or less will not have to pay any income tax at all; a measure, Mr Speaker, that takes even more people out of the tax net than ever before.

This will be done by extending the Low Income Earners’ Allowance. This will affect over 500 of the lowest paid in our economy and will, I know, be widely welcomed by workers’ representatives. Next year, that figure will increase again to £10,000, so that we will take even more of the lower paid out of taxation. Mr Speaker, that will affect an additional 600, based on today’s computations. And further Mr Speaker, as from this year, over 2,600 taxpayers with taxable earnings between the zero income tax threshold of £9,000 and £19,500 will benefit from ‘taper relief’ in order to smooth out their tax liability between income tax bands.

Mr Speaker, since we have been elected, young people who were on what was known as ‘the scheme’ have, as you will know, been put on the minimum wage as part of the Future Job Strategy. That includes disabled people who were on ‘the scheme’ and some who are now in the Future Job Strategy. Mr Bossano will say more about the success of the Future Job Strategy today.

One particular aspect to refer to at this stage is that since we were elected, a disabled person who secures employment no longer has their Disability Allowance removed from them completely – as was the case before. Instead, the Disability Allowance is removed on a staggered basis and 25% of it remains payable indefinitely and is not withdrawn. That is progress in the right direction for disabled people and goes beyond even what we set out to do in our manifesto and said that we would do.

And we are going to go even further still, Mr Speaker. As from this year of assessment, the Disabled Individuals’ Tax Allowance under the Allowance Based System will be extended to provide an allowance against the earned income of a disabled individual. This additional Earned Income Allowance will be on top of all existing tax allowances on the Allowance Based System and is designed to bring any disabled individual who is in receipt of whole or part of Disability Allowance paid by the Department of Social Security, as provided for in section 7A of the Income Tax (Deductions and Exemptions) Rules 1992 and is in employment entirely out of taxation.

All disabled individuals who are in employment will therefore be substantially better off than they were before. And both for those who are in employment and those who retain part of the Disability Allowance despite being in employment, I am delighted to be able to announce adherence to another one of our manifesto commitments, namely, to increase the Disability Allowance by the rate of inflation.

The Disability Allowance was last increased on 1st July 2007 and stands presently at a rate of £304.50 per month. Using the April figure for the Index of Retail Prices since that date, that sum has gone down in money terms by 16%. Applying those figures Mr Speaker, the Disability Allowance will increase to £353.22 as from the next payment after 1st August this year.

In addition, Mr Speaker, the import duty on any vehicle which is adapted for the use of a disabled person is hereby abolished. All disabled people in Gibraltar will therefore be better off after this Budget – a real commitment to deliver real change for our disabled people reflected already in our first Budget.

Mr Speaker, it is important to also stimulate the continued refurbishment of our city by property owners, many of whom presently pay tax under the Gross Income Based System. Under the Allowance Based System, a taxpayer who has an interest in a building situated in Gibraltar may claim a deduction from his/her assessable income in respect of approved expenditure incurred on painting, decorating, repair or enhancement of the frontage. Once approved by the Town Planner, this deduction is in the full amount of the spending incurred.

In order to encourage the beautification of buildings in Gibraltar owned by taxpayers who are taxed under the Gross Income Based System and who are therefore unable to benefit from the deduction that is available under the Allowance Based System, I now introduce a deduction from their assessable income up to a maximum of £5,000 in respect of approved expenditure incurred on painting, decorating, repair or enhancement of the frontage or façade approved by the Town Planner. This new tax benefit will be introduced for expenditure incurred with effect from 1st July 2012.

In order to encourage the use of medical insurance, which in some ways relieves pressure on the GHA, with effect from 1st July, the maximum annual tax relief on Medical Insurance contributions, under the Allowance Based System, is increased from £1,120 to £1,500.

This will also be a good Budget for parents of children of nursery school age. The Nursery School Allowance currently stands at £1,023. Taxpayers can claim this allowance in respect of any of their children who are at least three years of age and who attend private nurseries in Gibraltar.

With effect from 1st July 2012, the Nursery School Allowance on the Allowance Based System will be doubled to £2,000 and will be extended for all children of pre-school age who attend private nurseries in Gibraltar.

This Budget will also deliver to pensioners over the age of 60 with non-pension income. An occupational pension approved by the Commissioner of Income Tax payable to a person aged 60 or over is currently taxed at 0%. The pension is nevertheless taken into account for the purpose of establishing the taxpayer's total assessable income, resulting in any income earned in addition to their pension being taxed at a higher marginal rate. All such occupational pensions will now be exempt from income tax altogether. This will mean that pensioners who have to get a job in order to supplement their pensions will benefit from a significant reduction in income tax on such earned income. This measure will be backdated to 1st July 2011.

Under the Allowance Based System, the contributions to Approved Personal Pension Schemes and Retirement Annuity Contracts, as well as the tax relief on such contributions, is limited to the lesser of 20% of earned income or £35,000. With effect from 1st July 2012, although the tax relief on such contributions will remain at current levels, the annual limit or 'cap' on the contributions into such pension schemes will be removed.

Where contributions in any one year are below the maximum tax relief that can be claimed for that year, a 'one-year carry back' facility will be introduced enabling members of such pension schemes to top up any unused tax relief for the year, based on contributions made to the pension scheme during the preceding tax year, provided that no tax relief has previously been claimed in the previous year on those contributions.

On that front, one other issue that featured prominently during the General Election campaign was the future of Community Care. The GSD denied that they had any intention during that campaign of replacing Community Care by making payments through the Government Social Security system. In his New Year Message for 2010, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said that Community Care represented:

'a financial time bomb ticking under our children and grandchildren in the future, for which they cannot have recourse to the UK.'

He added that he was:

'not willing to bequeath this potentially lethal legacy of a massive and unaffordable backdated claim to our future generations'.

He said that therefore, in the 2010 Budget, he would:

'introduce significant reforms to protect Gibraltar from this possibility,' adding that the ‘reform will not result in financial loss to our pensioners or recipients of Community Care.’

780 In fact, in his 2010 Budget Speech, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, then the Chief Minister, did not say a word about those significant proposed reforms.

In his 2011 Budget Speech, he said only that as from this year:

785 ‘Community Care payments would become a statutory right and will be paid in conjunction with old age pensions.’

I therefore now call on the Leader of the Opposition to make public in his reply to my speech in support of this Bill in Parliament today, the proposals that he said he was going to introduce in 2010 and which he again referred to in 2011 and the reasoning behind them. If he feels these should not be aired in this Chamber, I invite him to write to me privately and set them out as soon as possible.

790 If these are, as he claimed, capable of protecting all existing and future resident pensioners and giving us better protection from the claims of outsiders, we shall be glad to support them as we have always said we would. That is our style of Government – to seek what is best for Gibraltar and not just insist that we are right. What would be unforgivable is to have such an alternative, if it does indeed exist, and not bring it forward because the GSD lost the General Election.

795 We are committed to renewing the funding to Community Care to make it independent and self-sufficient as it was in 1996 and is not now, but we are prepared to consider the hon. Member’s alternative – if there is one – before we proceed with ours.

Mr Speaker, back to Budget measures. No increases in Social Insurance Contributions will be made this year.

800 But Mr Speaker, the minimum wage was first introduced by the GSLP after we were first elected into Government in 1988. That made Gibraltar an early adopter of the principle of a salary floor, an even earlier adopter of that principle than the United Kingdom, where the concept of minimum earnings per hour was not provided for in legislation until 1998 – a whole decade later.

805 Mr Speaker, in our manifesto we committed to keep the minimum wage under constant review. The statutory minimum wage was last increased on 1st January 2011 from £5.00 per hour to £5.40 per hour. This was announced as part of the 2010 Budget.

The Index of Retail Prices increased during the period 1st January 2011 to 31st July 2012 – 19 months – by around 5.8%. This means that the value of the pay packet of a worker on the minimum wage has decreased in real money terms by an equivalent percentage.

810 With effect from 1st August 2012, the statutory minimum wage will be increased in line with inflation, from £5.40 to £5.70. To businesses, Mr Speaker, this is not a cost in real terms. To working people on the minimum wage, this will be a real increase in real terms! And I know that this measure will be welcomed by workers’ representative groups as we bring the standard of living of the lowest paid in our economy up, in line with inflation.

815 It should not be lost on anyone, Mr Speaker, that the Future Job Strategy makes the Government itself the largest single employer of persons now on the minimum wage, since our election. This increase will therefore also further benefit those on the Future Job Strategy. Those who were previously on the ‘Scheme’, run by the previous Administration, will therefore benefit from their second pay rise this year.

820 Finally, Mr Speaker, before I sit down, I want to thank the staff of the Treasury and the Ministry of Finance and including the Commissioner of Income Tax and his staff and the Financial Secretary for their work on this Budget. As the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition will know, a few words uttered by a politician in this place as a ‘budget measure’ require many calculations in those Departments to work out cost and affordability.

825 I want to thank Mr Dilip Dayaram and Mr Frank Carreras for their work with me and my team of Ministers on this Budget. I should also like to thank all Public Servants of Gibraltar, without whom the machinery of Government cannot operate.

In particular Mr Speaker, thanks to you and to the Clerk and staff of the House for the work you have done in implementing our reform agenda to date, including the monthly meetings and the quicker delivery of Hansard.

830 Very special thanks also to all the staff of No. 6 Convent Place; especially the team that works on my floor of the building and keeps me working, smiling and sure that nothing that anyone can throw at Gibraltar will ever get the better of us.

835 Mr Speaker, from the moment that the General Election was announced and our candidates declared, the 10 of us sitting on this side of the House have been a team. We work as a team and we support each other as a team. I do not pretend to be anything other than the equal to all the other Ministers on these benches, even though we all have differing responsibilities.

So I want to thank my ministerial team, all of them: the novice Parliamentarians, the more experienced hands and the most experienced hand, the Father of the House, for their support in the past seven months to the day since, at first light on 9th December last year, we became the Government of Gibraltar. In particular, I want to thank the Deputy Chief Minister for his support at No. 6, where we work together in ensuring delivery of our manifesto commitments.

I should also say, Mr Speaker, that it is one year to the day since I married. Last year, I might not have expected to rise today, on the date of our first anniversary, to move the Appropriation Bill, as a father and as Chief Minister. What a year it has been and what a pleasure it is to move this Bill!

Because, Mr Speaker, this is a Budget that balances the books by filling a £100 million hole in borrowing from some Government companies and settling the outstanding recurrent expenditure of other Government companies. It provides support for the lowest paid in our economy by taking them out of taxation and increasing the minimum wage. It provides incentives for greener living, and promotes and protects disabled people by exempting their earned income from taxation and raising the Disability Allowance.

It delivers tax advantages to a large number of taxpayers and complies with our manifesto commitment to reduce tax on the Allowance Based System, whilst going beyond our commitment to maintain the Gross Income Based System by allowing deductions against income to taxpayers on that method of assessment.

Mr Speaker, this Budget delivers for businesses too. It keeps the Social Insurance burden static – which means it is, in effect, reduced in real terms by the rate of inflation, since it was last raised. It delivers important import duty reductions for the retail industry and it provides for discounts on rates and eliminates the previous Administration's 3% rise in electricity costs.

Mr Speaker, this Budget provides for pensioners by the exemption of pensions from tax computations and for working families by the increase in the nursery allowance and raising the cap on mortgage interest relief.

Mr Speaker, a Socialist Liberal Budget, delivering social justice for our nation. I commend the Bill to the House.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Leader of the Opposition (Hon. P R Caruana): Mr Speaker, it is an honour for me to rise to deliver my 22nd Budget Speech, of which 16 have been as Chief Minister and, with this one, six from the Opposition benches, all but one as Leader of the Opposition.

May I start, Mr Speaker, by thanking the Chief Minister for postponing this debate, and also all other Members of this House who have extended their condolences, following the death of my father-in-law, J E Triay, last week. In paying my own tribute to him, I would highlight three of his many qualities which stand as a monument to the fine man that he was: he headed a very large extended family and kept it, and every one in it, as one very close family; he was universally respected by his colleagues in the legal profession as a lawyer of huge intellect, integrity, skill and comradeship; and thirdly, he earned and kept the respect of all whom he dealt with in all walks of life – even, perhaps especially, those who disagreed with his views, and with whose views he disagreed.

I have to admit, Mr Speaker, that I had forgotten how easy and different life looks from this seat! When one does not have the responsibility of governing, critical comment is absolutely free of charge. Hon. Members on the Government benches who were in Parliament before, will I am sure already have discovered the difference.

This Opposition will never make political capital against the Government, nor indulge in 'free of charge' critical comment at Gibraltar's expense or without a clear foundation in truth. That said, nor will we allow the Government to equate its own political interests with Gibraltar's interests, so that criticism of the Government is equated with damage to Gibraltar's interests. We can and will get this balance right and this, too, is an important contribution to a new way of doing politics in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, although clearly I disagree with a lot of the things that he has said in it, I nevertheless congratulate the Hon. the Chief Minister for finding himself in a position to give a Budget Speech from that side of the House. I regret that nothing, particularly the more critical comments, of the previous Government that he has said is new and simply amounts to a regurgitation of the stuff that he has said repeatedly during the election campaign and some of it after the election campaign too.

Mr Speaker, older Members and listeners will recall the so-called 'Big Lie' Elections of the 1970s – so-called because it was fought on the apparently false accusation by his opponents that Sir Joshua Hassan was in favour of a leaseback arrangement for our Sovereignty.

Well, Mr Speaker, I think we have just had another 'Big Lie' Election. But this one involved not one but two Big Lies: a Big Lie about the state of public finances; and a Big Lie of undeliverable electoral promises.

The reality is that the GSD left Gibraltar and the new Government a 'Golden Political and Economic Legacy' which the new Government will struggle to match, but which at the very least they must not squander. Gibraltar will never forgive them.

Nor will systematically to taint and talk down that GSD legacy, as the new Government tries to do obsessively, suffice as justification for their predictable and predicted failure to deliver the undeliverable promises with which they won – without an overall majority – this Big Lie Election.

Mr Speaker, the new Government's position was, before and during this latest Big Lies Election, has been since and remains now riven by contradictions which betray the manner in which they have sneaked their victory. Indeed, this Budget has had to resort to presentational trickery to enable the Government to try and reconcile some of those political contradictions. (Interjection) All will be revealed, you should not worry! (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, properly presented, this year's recurring annual expenditure budget surplus is around £55 million, that is to say, precisely the huge record surplus which we predicted, and not the still excellent £31 million disclosed in the Budget book, as drawn up by the hon. Members.

Mr Speaker, during the next few minutes – an hour or so – I shall consider further and illustrate these opening remarks and others that I shall make in a similar vein.

So what is the first Big Election Lie? That public debt is too high and unsustainable, and Government finances are not as healthy as the GSD Government pretended.

Mr Speaker, there is no known system for the economically literate measurement of public debt under which Gibraltar's public debt can honestly and intelligently be said to be too high. You can prefer to have a lower debt, if you want. You can prefer to have no debt at all, if you want. You may be the sort of person that worries about owing money to anybody and never have any debt, and that is fine too. But none of that equates to the current level of debt being too high.

By all known measurement systems of public debt, it is in fact low. As this House will recall, City of London financial experts interviewed by GBC confirmed publicly, after last year's Budget debate, when the Hon. then the Chief Minister, then the Leader of the Opposition made similar remarks.

Let's review the matter by reference to appropriate, truthful and economically informed criteria.

Firstly, the law of Gibraltar limits the amount that the Government can borrow – that is to say, it establishes a maximum permissible public debt, precisely so that the public debt does not get too high and unsustainable. Since Gibraltar's public debt has never been higher than permissible by its laws – despite inaccurate statements to the contrary by the previous Leader of the Opposition, now the Chief Minister to that effect, at last year's Budget – since Gibraltar's public debt has never been higher than permissible by its laws, which exist in order to make sure that the public debt should not become too high or unsustainable, it is therefore necessarily nonsense to say that Gibraltar's public debt is too high. Unless what the hon. Member is saying, is that the law sets the target too high because the limit is too high. Because if the law sets the limit at this level, in order that the public debt should not get too high or too unsustainable, and the public debt never reaches that limit, then ergo it cannot be too high or unsustainable.

Secondly, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office produces public borrowing guidelines for Overseas Territory governments to limit their public debts by strict and very conservative criteria, precisely to ensure that their public debts do not get too high and unsustainable. Although these guidelines do not apply to Gibraltar, our law reflects most of their underlying parameters, which Gibraltar's public debt has not exceeded.

Thirdly, the EU – Maastricht Treaty – sets a limit of 60% on the ratio of government debt to Gross Domestic Product – that is to say, the ratio of how much the Government owes, as a proportion of the size of our economy. Unlike every other country in the European Union, Gibraltar has never exceeded that measure of public debt.

Fourthly, the UK regards a net public debt of 40% of GDP as a prudent level of public debt. Gibraltar's net public debt has never got even close to this 'prudent' level of 40%. In fact, it has never reached 30%.

Fifthly, the net public debt now, after a decade of unprecedented Government investment, in part funded by borrowing, stands at around 28% of GDP. This is low by international and European standards and is in fact, amongst the lowest of all European countries.

Sixthly, these levels of public debt have always been considered in Gibraltar to be sustainable and not too high. In 1988, within weeks of coming into office, the then GSLP Government took new borrowing powers legislation to Parliament: the Borrowing Powers (1988-1992) Ordinance 1988. The remarks of the then Financial and Development Secretary in Mr Bossano's first Government – a Mr Brian Traynor, that some Members of the House are long enough in the tooth to remember – when presenting this Bill to the House in May 1988, his remarks on that occasion illustrate precisely what I am saying now and have been saying throughout, on this debate about the size of the public debt. I quote him from Hansard:

‘Whereas in 1985 when Public Debt peaked at £29m one was talking about a ratio of Public Debt to national income of 30% or 40%, the present outstanding Public Debt represents something like 25% of national income which is very low by comparison with the debt ratios of most modern states and, of course, considerably less than Third World countries.’

So, Mr Speaker, that demonstrates what I have been saying: that the relevant measure of public debt, and its prudence and sustainability is not the absolute level, a number that looks and sounds very high, but its ratio to GDP – in other words, its relationship to the size of our economy. And further it demonstrates that current levels are low, prudent and consistent with what they have been historically.

Mr Traynor went on to say, and I quote him again:

‘With the rapid expansion of the economy and with National Income heading for a figure of perhaps £150m, if not more, during the next three or four years, I think...’

GSLP have always had these predictions of large increases in GDP when they have arrived in office! This was their prediction the last time they arrived in office.

‘... if not more, during the next three or four years, I think that a figure of £50m in terms of the actual amount of Public Debt outstanding raises no questions as far as prudential limits and sound financial policies.’

In fact, Mr Speaker, shortly after that, and I think after Mr Traynor had left Gibraltar, the GSLP Government amended that Ordinance to further increase the borrowing limit, by doubling it to £100 million. In speaking to that amended Bill, the then Chief Minister and now Employment Minister, Joe Bossano, expressed similar views when stating that £100 million was prudential, in relation to the then size of our economy.

I quote him from Hansard:

‘The view of the Government and in fact, last year and this year, was that rather than this somewhat antiquated system of having to establish a ceiling, we should use a ratio and say “The level of national debt we consider to be, say 35% or 40%” and therefore that would give us a rolling ceiling in the sense that the bigger the economy the bigger the borrowing we could support.’

After Mr Bossano had explained that the legislation in fact specified a figure, rather than this percentage of GDP, because the Attorney General and the Financial Secretary had advised that our method of calculating National Income was not up to the job, Mr Bossano went on to say – and now I quote him again:

‘Therefore we had to make a professional assessment and taking advice on where it was reasonable to target the National Debt in relation to the current estimate of GNP...’

– which is another of the measures of the size of the economy –

‘...and the projected growth of GNP and this figure is considered to be a figure that is compatible with the sort of conservative criteria that I have mentioned of 35% to 40%’.

So, Mr Speaker, if 40% public debt is accepted as prudent by our law, by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office guidelines, by the European Union, by the UK, by the Government of Gibraltar in the late 1980s, and now by me, what is the credible basis for Mr Picardo’s assertion that a figure lower than all of those is – quote – ‘too high and unsustainable’, except his own political opportunism in the run up to a General Election?

It was the Big Lie of the Election, propagated by him to wrongly and unnecessarily frighten voters, which he did in enough numbers – albeit only just enough numbers – but a Big Lie nevertheless. (Interjection and laughter)

Mr Speaker, so what was the second Big Lie of the Election? Promises that he knows cannot be kept.

Mr Speaker of course the Hon. Mr Picardo was determined that arguing that the Government’s financial situation was dire and borrowing too high and unsustainable should not, at the same time, prevent him from bribing the electorate, sector by sector, interest group by interest group. So, in a classical forked-tongue manoeuvre, he did both. You do not need to be an economist to know, Mr Speaker, that it cannot be both.

If Mr Picardo really believed what he was telling the electorate about the Government’s finances in his manifesto and during the campaign, how could he possibly have also promised £750 million of Government projects over four years, plus massive tax cuts and big increases in annual recurring expenses?

Remember, Mr Speaker, that as far back as July last year – in this debate last year – that is, before he issued his manifesto, Mr Picardo was telling Gibraltar in his now infamous podcast that the public debt was then already £500 million! So he cannot have thought that that was too high to prevent him, nevertheless, going on to commit himself to many hundreds of millions more pounds in electoral commitments. The answer, Mr Speaker, was that both were Big Lies.

Neither the Government's financial position was as Mr Picardo had pretended, or continues to pretend now, nor did he intend ever to deliver on all his electoral promises, which as I told him throughout the campaign were simply unaffordable and undeliverable.

So, Mr Speaker, he wasted no time in doing what all Opposition parties do that promise too much and then have to justify not delivering. He set about pretending that he inherited a dreadful financial black hole, in the hope that people would thus understand and forgive his inevitable non-delivery on his vote buying and irresponsible electoral promises. His problem, Mr Speaker, is that people in Gibraltar do not fall for such tricks. People in Gibraltar are just not as gullible as he thinks – they are not that easily tricked.

And so, this brings us to the first Post-Election Big Lie.

The First Post Election Big Lie, Mr Speaker, was 'We found a financial black hole of £100 million missing pounds.' In fact, Mr Speaker he has repeated it here today, this morning.

You have all heard it, repeatedly said by the new Chief Minister, in Gibraltar, on Spanish TV and radio and in the Spanish newspapers, in the UK and elsewhere, regardless of the damage that it did to Gibraltar's reputation, investor confidence, and as future job opportunities for our children, economic prospects and political interests. And it is not true, Mr Speaker.

The so-called 'missing £100 million' is a complete fiction – a complete distortion and abuse of the not unusual fact that the Government's net public debt ended the year higher than the Government had estimated at the start of the year. This, Mr Speaker, has happened to some degree or other every year.

For example, in 2008-09, the net public debt at the start of the year was estimated that it would end the year at £28.2 million, and in fact it finished at £67.7 million, an 140% margin. In 2009-10, it was estimated that it would finish the year at £116 million and it ended at £148 million. In 2010-11, £180 million estimated and it finished at £216 million. In 2011-12, the year about which he complains, it was estimated that it would finish at £221 million and it finished at £305 million. But the year about which he complains as if had fallen into an unlit black hole as he was walking innocently down the street, was no more than a further example of what had happened in the three previous years.

These figures show that what the new Chief Minister paints in financially and politically sinister shades and describes as a black hole of a missing £100 million, as if a £100 million had been taken, sort of, by somebody, is a perfectly normal event upon which he has never before chosen to comment in previous years, when he has had it in front of him in the Budget book! Perhaps this is because, Mr Speaker, in previous years, he did not need to find a scapegoat or excuse for not honouring undeliverable electoral promises! (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

And this phenomenon, Mr Speaker, that public debt ends the year higher, and cash reserves end the year lower, than had been estimated is not only not unusual, but is the result of quite innocent circumstances. All it takes is for capital expenditure to proceed more quickly than budgeted for, or for capital receipts from asset sales not to come in as fast as envisaged or – as in last year's case – a combination of both. But the delayed assets receipts – in last year's case the proceeds of sale of Government flats – remain on stream to come in now or in future years.

The Chief Minister claims to have been misled by the fact that the Budget book estimated cash reserves, and thus net public debt, on the basis that £59 million which then, during the course of the year, accumulated with the companies' further expenditure during the year to £80-something million of loans made by the Government to its companies, to build houses and other projects, would have been repaid from these asset sales in the year, which in fact did not happen. That is correct, but the Budget book has been presented in this way every year since the Government companies' cash reserves were exhausted and they relied on Government loans to fund their projects.

Again, the Hon. Mr Picardo has never chosen to comment on this before. If he has been misled by it, it is his fault and not the result of any accounting sleight of hand by the previous Government. The new Government is not entitled to complain that the Government's estimates at the start of the year did not materialise. They are only estimates. This does not constitute a 'black hole' – still less 'a missing £100 million', nor even, as he also has put it, that cash reserves are £100 million less than had been anticipated.

In any case, the shortfall between the start of the year estimate and the end of year reality figure for cash reserves is less, much less than the £100 million he cites. And these are his much vaunted financial black holes about which he so solemnly addressed the nation on 18th January in his Chief Ministerial broadcast.

So what, Mr Speaker, is the second Post-Election Big Lie? 'We had only £20 million to spend without changing the law to increase the maximum permitted public debt.'

1085 In his very solemn address to the nation on 18th January this year, the new Chief Minister told Gibraltar:

‘to make the position as clear as possible’

1090 – not to say, as clear as mud –

‘tonight, I can tell you that as at 9th December 2011, your Government only had twenty million pounds available to spend despite the projected surplus for the year.’

1095 He said that because of the legal debt limit, the Government could not spend more without raising the legal borrowing limit and that this was why work had had to stop on many projects. In fact, I think he has made the same point this morning.

He repeated this in this House in answer to Question No 89/2012, when he said – speaking of me, as always – that:

1100 ‘he put Gibraltar in a position, that without changing the law and without borrowing more, its Government had not a penny more than £20 million to spend’.

1105 Mr Speaker, this is simply not true. The Government did not have to change the law to allow higher borrowing limits, in order to have more than £20 million to spend on ongoing projects. Under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act 2008, the Government needs only the permission of this House by a simple resolution, and not a change in the law and more borrowing, to draw from existing cash reserves, even if the effect is to exceed the legal limit for net public debt.

1110 So his statements and actions and his solemn statement to the people of Gibraltar were based on complete ignorance of the legislation. We, Mr Speaker, would certainly have had recourse to this method, had we won the elections, thereby tiding Government over until 1st April 2012, when the legal net debt limit rose automatically by about £50 million as a result of increased public revenue, thus allowing the Government to continue the projects without interruption.

1115 Of course, Mr Speaker, he has said that it is the Government policy not to increase the legal debt limit, but of course he knows that that increases every year, because it is 80% of the last year’s revenue. Well, the last year’s revenue in December was 80% of the revenue to the year ended March 2011. But, as of 1st April this year, the legal debt limit is 80% of last year’s revenue, which is now the year to 31st March 2012, the increase of which will give him at least another £50 million of ability to borrow without raising the legal debt limit – a fact that he has not mentioned, I think, this morning, unless I am mistaken.

1120 Mr Speaker, none of this detracts from the fact that we would have increased the legal debt limit, if necessary, to proceed with certain key projects, including the power station and the tunnel. Given that our economy continues to grow this is affordable and would not have taken net public debt outside prudent or sustainable levels.

So, Mr Speaker, what are these contradictions and presentational tricks that I have alluded to?

1125 Here, Mr Speaker, is a new Government with a big political problem of presentation and contradictions, and indeed, we have seen those contradictions here this morning. On the one hand, and in order to rubbish and taint the outgoing Government, and to dumb down voters’ expectations about its ability to deliver all its undeliverable electoral promises, it has painted the false gloomy picture of the state of public finances. On the other hand, it has to present to this Parliament the Government budget figures for last year, eight months of which were ours and four minus a few days were his.

1130 So he has to present to Parliament the Government Budget figures for the last year that show a huge all-time budget surplus of recurrent annual revenue and expenditure, and that is recurrent annual for the last 12 months, not for the last six years.

1135 Mr Speaker, so, having to reconcile the picture of doom and gloom that he paints with the fact that he has to bring to this House a Budget that shows, effectively, a record budget surplus for the same period in which he is criticising his predecessor – exactly the same record budget surplus that I predicted in the election campaign in my New Year Address and in my Address upon the opening of this Parliament in December. Since the new Government knows, Mr Speaker, that this contradiction would be obvious, even to the most economically uninitiated, a solution had to be found. What was it? Answer: fiddle with the way the figures are presented, so that the true extent of the real record budget surplus is concealed!

1140 Let us be clear, Mr Speaker. If this year’s Budget book, which has been prepared by the new Government, had been done properly and as in all previous years, it would show a budget surplus of recurrent annual revenue and expenditure in excess of £55 million, and not the £31.3 million that it actually shows. The previous budget surplus record was achieved in 2009 and amounted to £37 million, so the scale of this year’s record surplus achieved, of around £55 million, will be obvious to everyone.

This is in sharp contradiction of the new Government's doom and gloom messages about public finances and the shortage of money that all their bloggers had a field day with, shortly after the election on the social media websites.

So, Mr Speaker, how did the Chief Minister manage to reduce the figure in the Budget book from £55 million to £31.3 million – presumably to make untrue my prediction that this year there would be a record budget surplus? Given that the previous record was £37 million, how to get it down below £37 million, from the huge record that £55 million would have represented. Answer, Mr Speaker, very simple: by treating capital expenditure and also previous year's recurrent expenditure in companies as if they were annual recurrent expenditure and thus deducting it from last year's annual recurrent income to reduce the budget surplus of annual recurrent income and expenditure.

In layman's terms, by mixing apples with pears. In accountancy terms, by taking 'above the line', expenditure that should always be, has always been, and elsewhere in this Budget book, is taken 'below the line'. In short, he has cooked the books to wrongly present a reduced budget surplus of annual recurrent revenue and expenditure of £31.3 million, when it actually is around £55 million.

Let me explain to the House how this has been done. The Government has taken the contribution to Government-owned companies of £28.3 million above the line and thus treated it all as annual recurrent expenditure. But the great majority of this £28.3 million was spent by the companies on capital expenditure, and not on annual recurrent expenditure. For this reason, most of that contribution should have been accounted for 'below the line', as all other capital expenditure is treated, as has always been done, and as the Budget book does elsewhere.

And even, Mr Speaker, to the extent that the £28.3 million contains some, as it will indeed contain some, that is recurrent company expenditure, as opposed to company capital expenditure – even to that extent – then Mr Speaker, it is simply not legitimate to roll up previous years' so-called deficits, because those previous years' deficits are not recurrent, as against last year's annual. These are a statement of 12 months' worth of annual recurrent expenditure. What the hon. Member has done is entirely illegitimate.

So, Mr Speaker, by this inappropriate means, the Government has reduced the recurrent revenue and expenditure budget surplus of last year's annual recurrent revenue and expenditure surplus of £55 million achieved by the GSD Government last year.

Mr Speaker, the other elements of capital expenditure carried out through the Improvement and Development Fund are indeed, as always, shown below the line. That is, it does not reduce the recurrent surplus. Even elsewhere in this same Budget book, on page 14, that summarises the Consolidated Fund expenditure, the contribution to Government companies of £28.3 million is shown 'below the line', together with the contribution to the Improvement and Development Fund which deals with the other capital expenditure not carried through the companies.

Yet, when it comes to page 2, that shows the recurrent surplus calculation, it is suddenly slipped above the line and treated as annual recurrent expenditure, which most certainly it is not. This is novel, wrong and misleading, and distorts the integrity of the Government's Budget accounting to this House, in terms of the difference between recurrent annual expenditure and capital expenditure.

Still, Mr Speaker, both £31 million and £55 million are excellent surplus figures and provide a very eloquent answer to silly suggestions that the Government's finances are in a poor state.

In further contradiction, Mr Speaker, of the Hon. Mr Picardo's assessment of the state of public finances is the fact that, since coming into office the new Government, has already increased annual public expenditure by more than £15 million per annum. Hardly the action of a Government that believes that it has been left a financial 'pup' and a very serious cash-flow problem by the previous Government.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, the Budget measures that he has announced today, increasing further as they do expenditure and reducing Government revenues, itself belies any suggestion that the Government has inherited a bad financial situation. The hon. Member is able to cut taxes, to increase expenditure and give away all the things that he has given away, not because he has performed economic miracles in the last four months, but Mr Speaker because he has inherited a golden economic legacy from 16 years of sound financial management. (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Applause) If not, Mr Speaker, he would have to be doing what all the other new incoming governments in Europe are doing: slashing expenditure, sacking people, increasing taxes and lowering expenditure!

Why does he think that he is not in a position of having to do that? Because the previous Government gave him a terrible economic legacy – or because the GSD Government left him with a Gibraltar which, contrasted with the rest of Europe, precisely in the strength of our economy and the strength of the Government [inaudible] ...? Indeed, he has inherited one of only three government budgets in the whole of Europe that remain in surplus!

So, Mr Speaker, none of all of this that I have just said, Mr Speaker, should be confused with the quite separate question – and this is what he does, confuse it precisely with that separate question – of whether funding the ongoing capital investment programme could or could not have been achieved without further borrowing. My view, and the plans that we had, is that it could not and that some further borrowing would very probably have been required. As this House knows, there is a disagreement across the floor of this House, as to the desirability and sustainability of that. Our view is that, given the continuing buoyancy of Government revenue, indeed, Mr Speaker, the hon. Members opposite have an even more optimistic assessment of what that increase in Government revenue is going to be than the one I had before the Election. They think that Government revenue is going to increase by 50% in the next four years, and the expected continuing growth in our economy, which the new Government says will grow by 62% in the next four years, the required temporary increase in borrowing is easily affordable and sustainable, even if those very optimistic, in our view, predictions do not come true.

People can understand this for themselves, Mr Speaker. If a borrowing limit of 80% of one year's revenue is prudent, or 40% of the size of your economy is prudent, and you are predicting that your economy is going to grow by 65%, then you stay prudent if the borrowing does not exceed 40% of an economy that has grown by 65%; and you stay prudent – and legal, by the way – if the size of your debt does not increase above 80% of one year's revenue, which they say is going to increase by 50%. They cannot, at one and the same time, predict these huge economic growth and Government revenue growths, upon which they base their expenditure plans and then argue that debts at current levels, or even current levels plus a bit more, which would be needed to finish off the Government's projects, would be too high. It is a contradiction in terms, it is an oxymoron.

Mr Speaker, I know that it is difficult to sound non-partisan in a Budget debate, but I am going to try now and mean it. I accept that it is entirely reasonable for the new Government to focus and even to refocus capital expenditure on its own policy projects. I do not, therefore, aim any criticism at them for doing that; but two projects of the previous Government were in response to the very real short, medium and long-term needs of Gibraltar and our ability to sustain a growing economy and a population that enjoys a high standard of living and quality of life. The hon. Member has mentioned at least one of them this morning.

They are: the tunnel under the runway – without which we are condemned to permanent traffic gridlock, due to frontier and airport issues – ironically, made worse the more successful we are at developing new air services for our new air terminal; and the new power station – without which we are condemned to unreliable power supply and a high level of ambient pollution, to the detriment of our health. I would urge the Government to proceed with both, with all expedition and I take note of what he has said this morning about the power station. At least, I will do a deal with him – since he has sought to blame me for the power cuts until a date which I did not actually take note of – I will happily accept political responsibility for any power cuts that occurred during that period, if he will proceed expeditiously with a new power station, which, above all party political confrontation in this House, is hugely, hugely in Gibraltar's interest and a serious need of Gibraltar for the next 20, 30 or 40 years.

Mr Speaker, the Government is stuck in Opposition mode and is obsessed with criticising the previous Government. There is a palpable feeling on the street that the Government needs to realise that it won – albeit just, and without a majority – but it won the election, and that it must get on with the business of governing without spending so much time politicking backwards against what is now the Opposition.

Clearly, the new Government feels a need to taint and tarnish the previous Government's reputation and record of achievements, probably for the justified fear that, otherwise, comparisons between the two will not look good for the new Government, come the next elections. My complaint, Mr Speaker, is the lack of political honesty with which the Government indulges its obsession to criticise the previous Government. The Government has reeled out a series of press releases on the basis of half truths or incomplete facts or carefully omitting important aspects, but all designed to create an impression of recklessness, impropriety, favouritism and even corruption on the part of the previous Government. This is wholly untrue.

So, such statements have been issued on many subjects, including most recently, the bus maintenance contract, without saying that the bus procurement contract went out to EU tender and the local maintenance provider was selected by the bus manufacturer who won the tender, as part of his tender obligations.

Other such Government statements have related to: temporary interim cleaning arrangements for the new air terminal, pending completion of construction; the distortion of a good agreement with Ocean Village; suggestions of improper payments to Haymills or OEM in relation to the affordable housing schemes; suggestions of improper payments to the family of Edwin Reyes; alleging irregularities in the new Culture Agency; suggesting the placing of party activists in 'cushy Government jobs'; (Interjection by Hon. Chief Minister) suggesting impropriety in the timing and content of the airport ground handler contract; suggesting impropriety in the allocation and content of the Leisure Centre bowling alley contract; and commenting on the operating costs and maintenance arrangements for the new air terminal.

In all of these statements, the Government has sought to create an erroneous impression by sleight of the hand of the draughtsman. They need to get on and govern. They – or perhaps one of them in particular – need to change their chips from Opposition press release scribblers to Government Ministers.

Mr Speaker, speaking of the new air terminal, the new air terminal is now being unnecessarily delayed. The Government need to get on and open it for departures and stop delaying that. The terminal has been ready for many months. If there is still an impediment to opening it fully, it is not essential works that need to be completed, but the new Government's failure to get on with staff recruitment and training, and concluding maintenance arrangements. This is now becoming very silly, and a matter of stubbornness on the part of the new Government to Gibraltar's detriment.

Turning, Mr Speaker, to the proposals in the Budget book to reduce the public debt, Mr Speaker, the Budget book reveals that the Government plans to reduce gross public debt by £68 million this financial year, and that it is doing so by the very means that I told him during and after the election campaign was easily available to him, namely having Government debentures – which are taken out by local savers, issued by the Gibraltar Savings Bank, where they do not rank as public debt – instead of by the Government, as they are presently issued, where they do rank as public debt. This will reduce the amount of the gross public debt, but in an economically pretty meaningless sort of way.

Just as the Government is now paying the interest costs on the Government debentures, so too will it have to pay the very considerable difference between the interest rates paid by the Savings Bank to savers, and those that the Savings Bank can earn by putting those very same monies on deposit in the money markets.

I hope, Mr Speaker, that the Government is not contemplating alleviating this gap by allowing the Savings Bank to risk local savers' money invested in Savings Bank debentures, by being lent out to borrowers, or underpinning small business guarantees, in the context of the Government's planned expanded role of the Savings Bank into that sort of activity.

Mr Speaker, as I told this House in my Address on the occasion of its Ceremonial Opening on 21st December 2011, if the Chief Minister is really concerned about the level of Government debt – which I am not – then he has to cut net public debt, not gross public debt, as he is proposing to do in this Budget and this he can easily do. There is no economically meaningful reduction in public debt, unless you reduce net public debt.

Mr Speaker, most people will easily understand this. If a person owes a bank £1,000 on a bank loan, this is the gross debt. But, if that same person has £800 in a bank savings deposit account, this is cash reserves. His cash reserves. So his gross debt is £1,000; he has £800 of cash reserves; the difference between the two is the net debt. That is £200. He owes the bank £1,000, but he has £800 on deposit in a savings account in the bank. The £1,000 is the gross debt, the £800 is his cash reserves and the difference between the two is the £200 that is not covered by money that he can pull out of pocket at any time and use to repay his loan.

So his real worry, this imaginary person, is will he be able to afford, if things go badly, to pay the £200 from the £1,000? Because he knows that the other £800 from the £1,000, he can just say to his bank, 'Take it from my savings account', so he has no problems with paying that. So until he reduces the £200 gap, he is making no real progress in providing for repayment of that part of the bank loan that he does not already have ready cash in his savings account to pay back, if things go badly or if he needs to repay. That is why it is net debt – that is to say, the £200 – that is of economic importance, not the gross debt of £1,000 because of that, £800 is not a problem at all, because he has got the money in the bank to pay it.

So Mr Speaker, this is exactly the same for the Government. The Hon. Chief Minister is proposing to use £68 million; I am just saying 'pounds' for the sake of my example. The hon. Member is proposing to use £68 from the Government's £800 savings deposit account to reduce the £1,000 bank loan. But that will still leave the sum that the Government does not have the ready cash to pay at £200 – that is to say, it still leaves the net public debt at the same £200 as it was before. So nothing has really changed.

Mr Speaker, this demonstrates that only reductions of this sum of £200, the uncovered portion, the part of the gross debt, the £1,000 to the bank, that is not covered by the £800 sitting in the savings account. Only by reducing that portion, the uncovered £200 portion, that is to say, net public debt, is the Chief Minister capable of relieving the debt level concerns that he claims and professes to have, but which most economists would not share with him.

Mr Speaker, the new Government has inherited, as I have said, a golden legacy from the outgoing GSD Government. As all of Gibraltar knows, and most of Gibraltar acknowledges, the 16 years of GSD Government have resulted in unprecedented prosperity and progress for Gibraltar, and that is the legacy that the new Government has inherited: a Gibraltar with a restored international image and reputation, without which none of the progress would have been possible. An economy that has more than tripled in size – 8,000 more jobs – in fact, having seen this mornings employment survey, 9,200 extra jobs. I think we inherited 12,000-and-something and it is now 22,000. I just skimmed at this morning's report, which had been left on my table.

A Gibraltar that has become a global leader in online gaming and ship bunkering; record numbers of Gibraltarians in jobs; the lowest unemployment rate in Europe; huge improvements in take-home pay and standards of living; record levels of Government budget surpluses; personal income tax cut by over 60% and many other taxes abolished; company income tax cut by three quarters; despite the huge Government investment programme, a low public debt. We have the fourth lowest public debt in the whole of Europe.

1330 Thousands of new affordable and rental homes; homes for the elderly and refurbished housing estates; a new hospital; a new health centre; a new air terminal; several multi-storey car parks and more under construction; new roads and roundabouts; the beautification of many of our roads, squares and much of our city – Casemates Square and John Mackintosh Square; the King’s Bastion Leisure Centre; a new 1335 small boat marina for local boats; the Westside Promenade and Park; enhanced beaches; new Millenium Sports Hall and many enhanced sports facilities; new Law Courts and court facilities; a new prison; a new crematorium; new industrial parks and premises; a new bus service and bus shelters; a cancer hospice and a home for battered women; a swimming pool and terraces for the elderly; playgrounds; a beautified Europa Point and its park; a magnificent Gibraltar House in London, of which this community is justifiably proud; a new Constitution which maximizes our self-government; stable relations with Spain; 1340 an end to bilateral talks and new strengthened Sovereignty commitments from the United Kingdom – not even talks without our consent; many social facilities under construction, and many, many more achievements.

A stable, secure and prosperous Gibraltar: this, Mr Speaker, is the reality of the GSD’s legacy – much as the new Government may try to tarnish it and try and create for its own selfish purposes, a different impression. The responsibility to ensure that they do not squander this legacy, that they build upon it and that Gibraltar continues to prosper and improve in this way is now the new Government’s.

The new Government has promised much to everyone, and to deliver it all within four years: 65% economic growth, hundreds of millions of pounds of projects and commitments, huge increases in annual Government expenditure, freezing utilities, cutting taxes to 15% for everyone, halving public debt and much more. Enough people were persuaded by these promises to give the Government a slender, minority election win. Voters now expect the Government to deliver on all its promises or they will feel that it has cheated them out of their vote and cheated its way into office.

I think, Mr Speaker, as many who voted for the Government have now come to realise in just six months, I think that Gibraltar would be much safer and much better off with a GSD Government, but for 1355 the sake of Gibraltar, sincerely, I wish the Government every success in the governance of our affairs.

(Applause)

1360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will of course reply at the end of the debate, but I wonder whether this might be a convenient moment to recess for 10 minutes, before we come back for the next speech.

Mr Speaker: This House will recess for 10 minutes.

1365 *The House adjourned at 11.45 p.m.
and resumed its sitting at 12.00 p.m.*

1370 Procedural

Mr Speaker: Before we resume with the Budget Debate, just a couple of announcements.

First, I have been advised by the Chief Executive of the Courts Service that the Judiciary and the Bar will be paying a tribute to my predecessor, Sir Alfred Vasquez and to J E Triay tomorrow in Court at 1375 12.00 noon. I have been informed by the Chief Minister that the House will adjourn at a quarter to 12, to enable those of us who are lawyers – in fact, the vast majority of us here are lawyers – to attend, if they wish to do so. So that is what will happen tomorrow. It is at 12.00 noon in Court.

Another point if I may, the members of the public who are in the Public Gallery are reminded that you are invited to these Chambers to observe the proceedings of the House, and not to participate in them.
1380 Therefore no reactions are permitted to any of the speeches in this House.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Deputy Chief Minister.

1390 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, this is the 14th time that I make a contribution to the Appropriation Bill in this House – the first time in Government.

Before I start, I would like to take the opportunity to pay tribute to my friend and colleague, the Hon. Joe Bossano, for his 40-year contribution to the political life of Gibraltar from this House. Mr Bossano was first elected in 1972. However, his documented contribution outside this House started many years earlier, when he became the Secretary of the Pro-Integration Movement in the 1960s. This political trajectory is an achievement that this House, representing as we do the people of Gibraltar, should now recognise. I have to say at a personal level that it has been a privilege for me to have worked with him for the last 14 years in Opposition, and it is now a pleasure to do so in Government.

Mr Speaker, this is because nearly seven months ago, the electorate, as is their right in a democratic society, decided that it was time to change their Government. They decided it was time for change. We offered people a change for the better and the electorate chose that change. The result was the election of a new team of Ministers to the benches on this side of the House, with a commitment to deliver a whole range of exciting and positive policies.

It is well known, Mr Speaker, that in a number of areas we have had to tackle a fair number of problems that we have inherited from the party opposite, when they were in Government. Indeed, hardly a day goes by without an unpleasant surprise rearing its head.

It is clear to me that after seven months in office, Mr Speaker, that in the dying days of the GSD administration, they went into overdrive, making all sorts of promises to all sorts of people, in a desperate effort to cling on to power. There are still people coming to see my colleagues and I, seeking to have these honoured. To paraphrase what somebody once said, Mr Speaker, never was so much promised to so many by so few. In the face of this situation, the fact that we won the election at all is nothing short of a miracle.

Mr Speaker, the new Government made clear from the very outset that those projects or policy areas with which we agreed, where commitments needed to be honoured or which were too advanced, would continue. Those with which we did not agree would be stopped and those in-between would be studied in order to determine their viability. There are, therefore, projects which have carried on, projects which have been stopped and projects that are being assessed.

My Office, Mr Speaker, is tasked with the oversight and co-ordination of manifesto commitments. We are also directly responsible for planning, lands and civil aviation. The new Government, Mr Speaker, has started the process of delivery of the manifesto enthusiastically. There are some electoral pledges that include a target date. However, most of them have no such dates and the intention of the Government is that these will be implemented over the full term of office.

The Government, Mr Speaker, had, by 8th February, implemented over 40 commitments in what were the first two months in office. Some of these were simply a case of honouring promises made by the party opposite when they were the Government. Others involved a change of policy or direction. Others still involved taking action through the use of resources. For example, a bus to Both Worlds was in place before Christmas and more beds for the elderly were actioned at St Bernard's through Calpe Ward.

Mr Speaker, over 70 electoral commitments were delivered or actioned in the first 100 days of the new Government. We have already said that the focus in those 100 days was to change the way in which Gibraltar did business. We have achieved this, Mr Speaker.

This transformation has been both internal and external. The internal change is reflected in the way in which Gibraltar itself operates. Gibraltar now has Cabinet Government, a system by which decisions are taken collectively by all the Ministers, as opposed to all decisions being taken by one person. The Cabinet generally meets every Monday and when the Chief Minister is away from Gibraltar, the meetings continue and are chaired by myself as the Deputy Chief Minister.

The external changes reflect the way in which the Government deals with the public. Mr Speaker, within its first month in office, the Government announced and implemented its Citizen's Charter for Responsive Government. This has ensured that members of the public, businesses or associations no longer have to wait an inordinately long time for replies when corresponding with the Government. Those delays, or the absence of a reply altogether, were a constant source of complaints from the general public when the hon. Members opposite were in Government.

The Government also gave instructions within 30 days of being elected for the disclosure of certain Government documents under a 20-year rule. This places Gibraltar ahead of the UK, in relation to openness and transparency in this field.

The new Government, Mr Speaker, now publishes a raft of official statistics on its website as a matter of course. This includes most of the data requested by the GSLP/Liberals when we were in Opposition. This makes it available instantly to the members opposite, to the media and to the general public. There is now more Government information on-line than ever before.

Mr Speaker, the new Government immediately gave effect to our commitment to paperless Government. All Ministers are in touch all the time, using the latest technology, and can participate in any discussion or decision-making instantly. Indeed, through the use of new technology and using the internet and Skype, the Chief Minister has participated in Cabinet discussions when on paternity leave without being physically present.

The first Budget of this new Government today, Mr Speaker, will serve as a trigger for the start of the delivery of a number of manifesto commitments for which specific funding is required.

Mr Speaker, in the first six months, we have ticked off over 100 electoral commitments. I would like, once again, to thank the professional civil servants and members of the public administration who have assisted the new Government in this task.

Mr Speaker, It is perhaps in the changes we have made to the way in which our Parliament operates that our commitment to accountable and transparent Government can be best appreciated. The problem with some of the hon. Members opposite is that they were not in this House before, in order to properly understand what used to happen then and compare that with what happens now. It is obvious that some of the new Opposition Members almost take for granted the reforms that have been introduced.

This year, there have already been five meetings for Questions in six months. There will be 10 meetings a year for Questions. We have already had more Question Times in six months than used to happen in a whole year when the GSD were in office. Mr Speaker, the Opposition have never had it so good. Moreover, in some years, they called two or three meetings and in 2003, there was only one meeting for Questions.

The Opposition can now ask Questions on issues at a time when the issue is topical. I remember asking Questions in September or October about things that may have happened in April or May, because there was no Question Time in between. Indeed, there will be another meeting for Questions later this month, when the Budget debate is over.

The irony is that the changes that this Government has introduced have not cost any money and have required no legislative action. It was in the power of the GSD when they were in Government to have delivered more meetings of the House in the same way as we have done. They did not do this. This means that the parliamentary role of the Opposition then was curtailed by the hon. Members when they were the Government. That they should now complain at the answers that they are given in this House, in respect of two or three Questions, is nothing more than a smokescreen which is designed to hide their poor record in this regard when they were in office.

Mr Speaker, the new Parliament website – www.parliament.gi – is already up and running. This provides a very useful service to members of the press, to the general public and obviously to the Members of this House. This initiative should have been taken long before we came into office.

The website includes the agenda for meetings, the audio of the proceedings of the House, Bills, Notice of Questions, the timetable for Parliamentary business and the Hansard. The House knows that this Parliament has reached an agreement with the Isle of Man to transcribe our Hansard into audio files which are sent to them by e-mail. This means that Hansard is now available in record time.

Mr Speaker, when I was first elected, Hansard used to take months to be made available to the Members of this House. In one case, it took nearly a year. There was clearly a lack of investment and of resources, which in turn hampered the work of the Opposition. The new system we have put in place means that Hansard is now generally available within weeks. The Hansard for the morning session of 21st June, for example, was available on 29th June. This is a complete transformation in the availability and the supply of information. This is why I said earlier that it is very easy for new Members on the opposite side to take these improvements for granted. They cannot possibly imagine what we had to endure when we used to sit where they sit now.

Mr Speaker, in line with our manifesto commitments, in February, the Government announced the setting up of the Commission on Democratic and Political Reform. The Commission has kept to a strict timetable. A consultation paper was issued three months after the Commission was formed. Twelve months after that, in the spring of next year, the Commission will report to Parliament its recommendations after an extensive period of public consultation. The intention of the Government is that Parliament will debate the report within three months and then decide which proposals should be approved by the House or if a referendum should be held to approve any or all of them.

The measures accepted by Parliament will be implemented within six months and any changes to the electoral system will apply for the next general election. The Government welcomes, Mr Speaker, the involvement of the Hansard Society in this process and the outside expertise that they have provided to the deliberations of the Commission.

Mr Speaker, the Government is very grateful to Mr Adolfo Canepa, George Mascarenhas, Fabian Vinet, Robert Vasquez and Charles Gomez for giving of their time in order to serve as members of the Commission. We are also grateful to its Secretary, Mr Dennis Figueras.

The Government intend to continue to move this House into the 21st century. The purchase of a new digital sound recording and audio system for the Parliament has already gone out to tender. This system will have the capability for the connection of cameras to provide a feed on-line which the media can then pick up. The actual introduction of cameras will, of course, only follow the approval of Parliament itself.

Mr Speaker, I take this opportunity to thank the Clerk and the staff of the House for their assistance and support in this project and indeed for their help first in Opposition and now in Government. I would also like to thank the IT Department for their professional input and involvement in order to make the project a success.

Mr Speaker, the impact of the arrival of the new Government and the changes that we have implemented can clearly be seen in the planning process. Under the previous Administration, planning decisions were taken in secret, behind closed doors. There was little or no public participation. Objectors were not heard and the press and the public were not entitled to be present at meetings of the Development and Planning Commission (DPC). The town planners ended up being excluded from Government projects and the DPC was not provided with information about them.

Mr Speaker, this closed and secretive system was transformed within weeks of the GSLP/Liberal Government taking office. In line with our manifesto commitments, on 22nd December, the formal decision was taken to make the Town Planner the Chairman of the DPC. It was also decided that the meetings would take place in public and that the Environmental Safety Group (ESG) would form part of that body.

Mr Speaker, there have now been seven public meetings of the DPC. These take place at the John Mackintosh Hall and anyone is able to attend. The Commission has, since we were elected, considered 235 applications, all of them in public. There have been presentations by applicants and presentations by objectors. The fact that architects and others are present at the meeting has meant that Commission members can question them on any aspect of an application on the spot. The result is that simple queries can be addressed immediately and that applications are not held up for weeks, while there is correspondence to and fro in order to clear up a point.

The reality Mr Speaker, is that the new system is working very well. I would like to take this opportunity to thank and congratulate the town planners and the staff of the Town Planning and Building Control Department for their professionalism, their assistance and their enthusiasm in assisting the Government in the delivery of our manifesto commitment in this field.

Mr Speaker, there have been a number of Government applications submitted to the DPC for information and guidance since the new Government came into office. This followed a gap of many years under the previous Administration, where no Government projects were submitted at all. One of the first such projects was a children's playground at Moorish Castle Estate. The playground was opened by Prince Edward and the Countess of Wessex during their visit last month.

The intention of the Government remains to subject all Government projects to the full planning process during this term of office. Indeed, it is encouraging to see that many Government Departments are now automatically factoring in the time that it takes to go to planning in the timetable of official projects. This is obviously something the system has to get used to.

Mr Speaker, the planning process has undergone visible and real improvements. It is regrettable that the hon. Members opposite have adopted such a negative approach to these changes. They take the opportunity to distort and exaggerate any particular matter for their own political gain. The Opposition have the political audacity to suggest that we are somehow not being transparent or open enough, yet at the same time their own policy remains to a return to the closed and secretive planning system that we inherited from them. They have accused the Government of failing to follow a course of action that they themselves do not believe in. This is not a credible position.

I understand Mr Speaker, that nearly half of the Opposition Members have not been in Parliament before. They are therefore not in a position to appreciate the nature and the extent of the transformation that has taken place. Indeed, at one point, when the GSD were in Government, I was even told point blank that they would not answer questions in this House on the DPC because the DPC was not the Government and they were not accountable for it.

All this information and more, Mr Speaker, is now available to the public and it is now available to them. It was not readily available to me when I sat on those benches and I asked the questions. In order to be critical with a degree of credibility, Mr Speaker, they must understand the extent of what used to happen when they were in office. I fully accept that they are entitled to a different policy. If they prefer the closed and secretive methods of the past, that is their prerogative. However, they must equally accept that the new Government was elected on a manifesto which promised to open up the planning process and that this is what we have done.

Mr Speaker, the agenda and the minutes of the DPC are now available on-line. When I was in Opposition, I was privy to neither the agenda nor the minutes, and neither were the general public. The hon. Members have made use of this increased information, in order to find details with which to try and discredit the Government. I repeat that they should bear in mind that when I sat on those benches this information was simply not available.

In short, Mr Speaker, my advice is that they should be more generous with the new Government, because we have made their life much easier than they ever made it for us when the roles were reversed. In this area also, Mr Speaker, the Opposition have never had it so good.

This House knows that the Government's reform of the planning process has not yet finished. The ultimate objective of the Government is to make the whole planning process of any application available on-line. In March, the Town Planner and the Deputy Town Planner visited two local planning authorities in the United Kingdom. These were in the London Boroughs of Redbridge and Richmond upon Thames. In both these authorities they were shown the respective on-line services and had an opportunity to learn more about them. The Government will assess the different options available in order to fulfil its pledge which is to make the whole planning process of any application available on-line.

Mr Speaker, the Town Planning and Building Control Department is at Head 12 and the total amount of expenditure for this year is £787,000.

Mr Speaker, In relation to lands, this House is aware that the Government has put out to tender a number of ex-MoD properties which have been transferred under the Lands Deal of July 2011 that was concluded by the previous Administration. This deal was described at the time as being self-financing because under it the Gibraltar Government is required to relocate and re-provide MoD requirements from the funds raised by the sale of these properties. The expenditure of the Government in relation to MoD re-provisioning works is set at a maximum of £66 million.

The expectation, therefore, is that the Government will obtain £66 million or more from the sale of MoD assets. However, what this means is that, whereas the expenditure for the Government is fixed and capped, the income on the other hand, is variable and subject to a number of external fluctuations, like the state of the property market and the availability of mortgage finance. In other words, there is always a possibility that instead of receiving £66 million in income, the Government could actually receive less. It is to guard against this that these tenders have been awarded on a highest bidder basis.

The first such tender was for two large houses at Europa Point, which were put on sale with a closing date of 9th March. There were no bids for these properties. The Government is now considering its options in respect of these houses.

A further eight properties were put out to tender at St Christopher's Court. There were 73 bids for these properties and the Government has obtained about £2 million in revenue.

The 13 terraced houses at Buena Vista went out to tender with a closing date of 4th May. There were 91 tenderers interested in these properties and about £4.8 million in revenue is expected to be raised.

Three units at Cheshire House were then put out to tender. There were 44 bids for these properties and about £1.5 million is expected to be raised.

The total projected revenue, based on the current 24 sales to the current successful applicants, is in the order of £8.3 million. This does not include sales to MoD sitting tenants.

Mr Speaker, the sales figures which have been given could vary. There are successful tenderers who have to sell their existing home and others who are dependent on bank finance. In the event that any allocation falls through for this reason, or indeed for any other, the residential unit in question will be allocated to the next highest bidder on the list for that particular property.

The House will see that I&DF Head 102 in respect of revenue from the sale of Government Properties and Other Premia, shows an estimate of £10 million for the financial year 2011-12, with a forecast outturn of £1,432,000 million. The estimate for this financial year is £20 million of revenue including ex-MoD sales.

Mr Speaker, In respect of expenditure, in I&DF Head 102, Sub-Head 3, a nominal £1 million has been entered in respect of each (a) MoD Lands; b) MoD Project Euston; and (c) Other Relocations.

Mr Speaker, the Government has also put out to tender 16 flats which it owns, some of which have been vacant for a considerable period of time. Nine of them in Harbour Views, Sir William Jackson Grove, Portland House and Carltree House were put on the market on an open tender basis to the highest bidder. There were 44 applicants for these properties and just over £1.1 million is expected to be raised. Seven other flats in Merlot House were also put out to tender on a fixed price basis. This means that, in the latter cases, prospective tenderers were not be able to outbid each other and that a list of published criteria, other than price, was used to determine the selection.

There were 22 applicants for these properties and just over £900,000 is expected to be raised. The Government has, in addition, put out to tender eight commercial units. We have continued the practice established by the hon. Members when they were in Government, of putting all of them out on a fixed price basis. Five of the units are in Waterport Terraces, where a projected income of about £1.2 million is expected to be raised. The others are small units at Governor's Cottage and Casemates Arcade that have been put out on a rental basis.

The Government is aware that there is considerable demand for storage space, industrial and commercial units and hope to be able to go some way to meeting the demand during our term in office. Given this situation, it made no sense to keep these properties off the market, when they could be generating income for the Government and economic activity for the benefit of Gibraltar as a whole.

I want to take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to thank the staff in the Lands Office in Convent Place and the management and staff of Land Property Services Ltd for their assistance and co-operation over the last six months.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to aviation and the air terminal. The Director of Civil Aviation reports to me in my capacity as the Minister responsible for aviation matters. The Department can be found at Head 11 of the Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure. The estimate for the last financial year was £4.1 million. The outturn was £3.8 million. The estimate for this year, which this House is being asked to approve, is £3.6 million.

Mr Speaker, in order to cover the existing requirements for security in the old air terminal caused by the requirements of European Aviation Security legislation, the Government recently recruited 14 new Borders Agency officers. These officers, who are all Gibraltarian, have undergone initial training packages and are now undertaking on-the-job training, prior to being declared fully operational in August. The recruitment of the new personnel has allowed the recruitment of a dedicated Training Officer from within the BCA. The new post will be responsible for implementing and teaching the extensive training programme required by the EU legislation for aviation security officers.

Similarly, it is planned to recruit a dedicated quality control officer. This officer will be responsible for undertaking audits, inspections and tests of all the security related operations at the Airport.

Mr Speaker, during the past 12 months only two bird strikes have been reported. This demonstrates the importance of the culling programme and the bird management procedures employed by the Airfield Bird Management Team, who spend long hours patrolling the airfield.

An Aerodrome Manual has been produced which formalises the safety procedures that are in place at the airport. The document details the safety accountabilities and responsibilities of the various agencies. It also lays down the terms of reference for the various safety committees at the airport and sets out the standing instructions employed at the Airport. This document ensures that all units at the airport, both civil and military, have a common safety reference book, which will improve the interoperability of the various organisations. This Manual has already proved very useful.

While on aviation matters, I would like to spend a few moments on the air terminal. Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd took possession of five operational aircraft aprons in August 2011. Operations from the new air terminal for arriving aircraft started in November 2011, although, as the House knows, operations for departing flights have not yet commenced. I will say more on this later on.

Practical completion of the new air terminal was accepted by GATL in April 2012. The House knows that, in Opposition, we did not support the new air terminal. We did not support the expenditure; we did not support its relocation next to the frontier fence; and we did not support the scale of the construction. The arguments are well known and well rehearsed. In our view, the motivation behind this project was not economic, in the sense of planning for the future, but purely and simply in order to give effect to a political agreement with Spain.

Mr Speaker, it is obvious to us now, with the benefit of hindsight and of having access to all the relevant information, that we were correct in the analysis that we made at the time. The air terminal project has been carried out with poor planning and with little consideration for the public purse. It was not driven by the public need of Gibraltar, but by the need to make a statement of pharaonic proportions, paid for with somebody else's money. It is very easy, Mr Speaker, to have visions of this kind when somebody else foots the bill. It is obvious that the hon. Members got their priorities wrong, in relation to this project.

Moreover, it was a serious error of judgement to operate two terminals at the same time, one for arrivals and one for departures. This has created all sorts of logistical problems for the staff who work in the buildings and for the commercial entities who operate from there. There is no doubt that the rush to open for arrivals at the end of November, and the public viewings that preceded it, were nothing more than transparent electoral stunts.

It will be recalled that workers were withdrawn from other Government projects all over Gibraltar in order to ready the terminal on time. There was an obvious resulting increase in cost as well as a delay to other projects. The figures made available to the new Government soon after coming into office showed that the cleaning of the terminal for the initial period of arrivals from 25th November to 10th December was over £88,000. Clearly, money was no object.

Mr Speaker, the Government expects that the cost of the new air terminal will be in the region of 84 million euros. This project was originally trumpeted as costing £24 million. The costs then went up to 50 million euros at the time of the tender, to 70 million euros at the time of the General Election and to about 84 million euros today. The waste of public funds is unforgiveable. It is clear that the party opposite has a lot to answer for.

One of the reasons for increased costs is because the now Hon. Leader of the Opposition, who once proudly boasted that he was the Clerk of Works of the Casemates project, clearly also considered himself to be the Clerk of Works of the air terminal. The Government has received detailed information which shows that at least 6 million euros of increased costs was due directly to the personal intervention of the then Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker, this included: enlarging toilets at the cost of nearly 140,000 euros; increasing the size of the monitors at the cost of over 100,000 euros; altering the purpose of the airside facilities building, which cost 817,000 euros. It also included changing some walls leading to and from the frontier from solid with glass top panel to full height glass walls. This cost a further 312,000 euros. Then the Government also agreed to contribute 55,000 euros to the cost of demolishing and reconstructing stairs, because they did not line up with the angle of the adjacent escalator.

Mr Speaker, it was already bad enough that the costs of the air terminal have increased to over three times the original figure that was given. It is totally unacceptable that the now Leader of the Opposition should have been personally responsible for the changes that contributed significantly to such an increase in costs.

It is also particularly scandalous that the ground handling contract with Bland Ltd was signed on 7th December 2011, which was the day before polling day. It is beyond belief that the signing of this contract could not have waited 24 or 48 hours, so that a different Government could have taken a view on it. This is all the more relevant since it is meant to run for a seven-year term, until November 2018.

The signature of this document the day before the people of Gibraltar went to vote for a new Government has raised a serious constitutional point. Save in the case of public emergency, the Constitution of Gibraltar prohibits any caretaker Government from committing or binding its successor to public funding or liability, except in the ordinary course of the day-to-day affairs of Gibraltar. Mr Speaker, it is clear to me that the GSD Government, through GATL, has committed its successor Government to public funding and that this could be seen as unconstitutional. The new Government has sought a legal opinion on this point.

Having said all this, Mr Speaker, the air terminal is there and the new Government now has the responsibility to make it work. The Government were given practical completion at the end of April, about eight weeks ago. The decision has been taken to operate the air terminal through a series of service level agreements with a number of contractors who are already in place, until local people can be trained for the jobs that are available.

The Government set about reducing the costs at the air terminal soon after we took office. The House will recall the cancellation of the infamous cleaning contract that I referred to earlier. The Government has authorised one-year contracts with five contractors in respect of a number of functions at the new air terminal, after negotiating price reductions. This will nonetheless still cost over £1 million a year.

There are still other SLAs that remain to be agreed. The new air terminal building is being prepared for departures as well as arrivals, since practical completion was given at the end of April. Work now continues to resolve the long list of snagging problems that have been identified, once possession of the building was achieved.

Additionally, work continues to fully integrate and configure the extensive IT systems. The next phase will see staff being trained on the new systems and then full operations will be able to commence from the new air terminal. It will, therefore, open for this purpose as soon as it is ready.

Mr Speaker, by way of example, the Government has been told that the CUTE check-in system was expected to be ready by mid-July and that following this, the handler's staff needs to be trained on it.

Mr Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Director of Civil Aviation, Chris Purkiss; the Air Terminal Director, Terrence Lopez; and all the staff at the two air terminals for their support.

I now move on to a short report in relation to Gibtelecom.

Since my appointment as Gibtelecom's Chairman in December 2011, I have been struck by the company's investment in its people and their commitment to deliver quality services. Therefore, at the outset, I take this opportunity to express my appreciation to Gibtelecom's staff, including those who have retired or moved on, who have contributed to the company's success.

I have now had the pleasure of attending two board meetings of the company, together with the Government's partners from Slovenia Telecom. I have also toured different sections of the company and had the opportunity to chat to management and staff.

Mr Speaker, investment in technology continues to be the cornerstone of Gibtelecom's strategy and 2012 will see the culmination of a number of important projects. These include the Next Generation Network (NGN). This will have the capacity to deliver faster broadband speeds in the shorter term and eventually lead to closer integration of fixed line, internet and mobile technologies.

Another key project getting underway later this year is the replacement and upgrading of the computerised system for network records, customer services and billing, which plays a crucial part behind the scenes role in all Gibtelecom's operations. The company is also enhancing its mobile coverage around Gibraltar, to meet the challenges of topography and the growing demand for mobile internet and data services.

The activation of the Europe India Gateway (EIG) cable, together with the setting up of a Gibtelecom Point of Presence (PoP) in London, provides the Company with significantly enhanced route diversity and resilience, to complement its land and other sea routes. The company has begun marketing and selling its substantial EIG capacity beyond that required for Gibraltar, by seeking to partner with other international carriers to extend its global reach. Gibtelecom's first agreement, announced in June this year, is with a leading South African company called Vodacom – part of the Vodafone Group.

With regard to business enterprise services, the company was able to make some headway at the turn of the year in reducing bandwidth prices for the emerging e-commerce industry, which was a much needed move in the right direction, if Gibraltar is to be an attractive jurisdiction for e-commerce. Also, this spring, the company took the first steps in enhancing its broadband offerings for both business and residential customers, with further speed increases due later in the year.

Mr Speaker, there is a growing demand for computer data hosting services, which the company is also developing at present with the construction this year of further data centres.

Mr Speaker, the Government will deploy its shareholding in Gibtelecom to encourage the company to continue to invest in infrastructure, technology and people to ensure Gibraltar's needs in the critically important area of communications continue to be met.

Mr Speaker, a new Government brings new ideas and a new way of doing things. We have made fundamental changes to the way in which Gibraltar is governed in a very short period of time. People voted to change and Gibraltar has changed, for the better.

In concluding my contribution, I want to thank you, Mr Speaker, because this will be the last time that you preside over a Budget session in this House. I was one of those who voted against your appointment the first time round and then supported it the next time. Mr Speaker, everything you have done from that Chair has justified this.

I also want to take the opportunity to thank all the civil servants and public servants who have made us so welcome and with whom it has been a pleasure to work over the last six months, in order to ensure the delivery of our manifesto – in particular, Coral and Caine, the staff in my personal office in No. 6 Convent Place.

Thank you.

(Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I beg to move that the House do now adjourn until this afternoon at 3.00 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GIBRALTAR PARLIAMENT

AFTERNOON SESSION: 3.00 p.m. – 6.35 p.m.

Gibraltar, Monday, 9th July 2012

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 3.00 p.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. H K Budhrani QC in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: M L Farrell Esq RD in attendance]

Order of the Day

Clerk: Budget speeches continue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

5 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr. J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, this is my first ever Budget speech before Parliament, and it is an honour for me to be able to present it.

I must start, Mr Speaker, by thanking the people of Gibraltar for the confidence they showed in me at my first ever General Election, even though I had only entered the political arena a matter of weeks before Election day.

10 Election day: the 8th December last was a turning point for the environment in Gibraltar and the 9th brought with it a new dawn of hope for the future. A Government that seemed to groan every time it had to consider the environment was replaced by one which is already today probably the most environmentally progressive in Europe.

15 This is something I take very seriously and I will strive my utmost to gain international recognition of our increasingly green credentials. Literally overnight, Gibraltar had concern and care for our surroundings and for the wellbeing of our people and our planet at the core of its policies and activities.

Mr Speaker, I know better than most how difficult it was under the Government of the Gibraltar so-called Social Democrats to make progress on environmental obligations, let alone initiatives. I know better than most of rejected proposals, forbidden funds, negative reactions, when other players in other areas were getting incentives and funding, right and centre, sadly not left.

I know better than most of non-implemented Directives and the ignoring first and avoiding later of advice. The latter was characterised, for example, by a ban on Government servants engaging directly with environmental NGOs, and the now well-known centralisation of everything and confrontation with everyone who did not tow the line.

Mr Speaker, probably the first thing I did, when I attended my first meeting at the Department of the Environment, was to lift the ban on talking and discussion, and to invite Department officials to work together openly with representatives of organisations and contractors. I opened up links to counterparts in Government and Agencies in the UK and encouraged interdepartmental contacts and joined-up thinking within the Gibraltar public service, which was surprisingly and alarmingly lacking.

This step, which was a logical extension of the various inter-Ministerial Committees, also opened up the avenues of close communication, which has facilitated the work of the green filter. There is now scarcely a Government activity of significance that does not go through an environmental filter. How things have changed!

In practice, not only do environmental civil servants and advisers or contractors get involved in discussion and decision-making, or are appointed to important committees, but many criteria with which such decisions are arrived at have been changed. This is the case, for example, with the new green procurement practices, the subject already of circulars and seminars and with initiatives linked to reduction of emissions and energy efficiency, also already well promoted within the public service.

This year will see the revision of the Environmental Action and Management Plan. The revised version will illustrate the Government's green ethos and provide comprehensive targets with dates for the fulfillment of these. A workshop has already been held within the public sector, with presentations given to all Government Authorities, Agencies and Departments. A number of practical steps have been initiated such as the introduction of recycled paper within the service, double-sided printing, the use of central printers to name but a few.

The introduction of the Environmental Filter is resulting in greater environmental consideration in the procurement process. The tendering process has seen the introduction of a green procurement policy. This particular issue has also been the subject of a Government seminar.

With regards to the tender documents for the purchase of goods or services, the weighting of environmentally friendly products and energy efficient equipment has become much greater, with the aim of making it the principal factor when considering tenders. The Chamber of Commerce and the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses have been engaged and are aware that their members have to work towards introducing greener products and services within the local market, as Government will be procuring on that basis whenever possible in the future. They have embraced these principles.

All Building Applications are now filtered through the Department of the Environment, who provide comments regarding various aspects relating to the environment. These include the effects developments could have on natural habitats and planted areas. Furthermore, energy efficiency, the provision of appropriate refuse disposal facilities, dust emission during construction, and so on are also considered when relevant.

In the next few months, Government will be publishing a tender for the collection of recycling of all small items of waste electrical and electronic equipment (WEEE) and batteries, with the possibility of at last introducing recycling of paper and cardboard from all Government Agencies, Authorities and Departments. There are already arrangements in place for the recycling of small WEEE items, but this new service will ensure that the waste is collected and delivered for transfer to the authorised recycling facility, ultimately producing higher collection rates.

The Government is working together with the Environmental Safety Group (ESG) on a wide range of issues, and has opened its doors to the Group, which has met on many occasions with different Ministers and Government Departments, including the Department of the Environment and the Port.

This work includes life after the last Government's Epidemiological Study, which was promoted by our predecessors as giving no cause for concern, almost as reason to sit back and do nothing. Even the present Hon. Opposition Spokesperson for Health seemed to find it acceptable, as was widely reported in the press. This Government, like the ESG, considers that it had considerable flaws, and is discussing with the Group ways of taking this theme forward together. Government is committed to improving environmental aspects that can affect human health, whether it is through improving the quality of the air we breathe, or as a result of lifestyle choices.

Mr Speaker, one of the earliest and most courageous decisions of this Government was to halt the former Administration's plans for a large diesel-fuelled power station. It was also one of the most sensible ones, from both a financial and environmental perspective, and the history of Gibraltar will judge it as such. This action has opened a wide range of possibilities for Gibraltar, not just in determining the main source of power, but in identifying alternative sources that will help Gibraltar meet and, we hope, 80 exceed the European Union's targets for renewable energy – targets that are punished with heavy fines of millions, if not met.

The failure of the previous Administration to tackle power in a timely manner, already referred to by the Chief Minister, in the 16 years it had to do so, must be condemned, as it has brought us very close to the line on timings. The removal of the existing power generating stations is a top priority for this 85 Government. The OESCO and the former MOD power stations had been allowed to deteriorate unacceptably. This has left us with yet another liability as part of our GSD inheritance.

Government is closely studying various options and short-listing these, with a view to reaching a decision shortly as to what the main source of power for Gibraltar will be. Once this decision is taken, it will move very fast and we are aiming for implementation within this term of office. Government has 90 received numerous proposals for more sustainable forms of energy production, some of which simultaneously deal with waste disposal. These are all being actively considered.

At the same time as providing a secure and reliable source of power, Government is promoting the reduction of energy consumption through a number of initiatives and by example. Government has commenced and will continue with a programme to replace public lighting with solar powered devices 95 and/or LEDs. This example has already been followed in at least one private estate, and I would like to publicly congratulate Vineyards for this.

Another measure that has been introduced is that all refurbishment and repair works to Government buildings must explore and implement options to make changes to lighting systems that are more energy 100 efficient.

Government is very serious in its aims to reduce emissions and to producing a Gibraltar that can be proud of its record in slashing its contribution to the global problem of climate change. It has therefore provided, as promised in the manifesto, £1 million to be used for projects that will assist in achieving the reduction of our carbon footprint. This will include facilitating renewable energy projects.

I must remark that the last Government did nothing whatsoever of any significance in this respect.
105 That is not only shameful but embarrassing and a disgrace, which has done nothing for our international image, as I have been able to ascertain in meetings that I have recently held, in London.

To assist in this work, Government has reconvened the Gibraltar Climate Change Forum, which had not met since 2006, and which has already met twice, and is drafting a new Climate Change Strategy for 110 Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, as announced earlier by the Chief Minister, there will be a number of import duty changes to promote environmental measures:

- The import duty on biofuels will be zero with immediate effect.
- Import duty on the importation of hybrid vehicles via a licensed motor dealer in Gibraltar will be reduced to 2%.
- A £500 cash back will be given to the purchaser of a hybrid vehicle on registration in Gibraltar.
- Import duty on recycled or approved environmentally friendly or eco paper, from renewable forests, is reduced from 12% to 0% with effect from 1st July.
- Import duty on stationery made predominantly from recycled materials is reduced from 12% to 0%.

And more such measures are being looked into.

Mr Speaker, another problem that was not successfully addressed by the past administration was the matter of waste disposal. Once again, there was a report that no-one seemed to know what to do with. This Government has engaged a consultant to assess and advise on the various different options being presented to it, to deal with the sustainable disposal of Gibraltar's waste. The exercise will provide 115 Government with an accurate understanding of Gibraltar's waste arisings, and the best options for our unique circumstances. Any new technologies must comply with our various EU requirements, as well as the Government's green philosophy.

As has already been explained in Parliament, Government is developing a plan with experts far and wide for the management of our macaques. The previous plan did not deliver a satisfactory situation and had not been implemented, despite being ready for over two years. The exercise to develop the new plan
120 should be complete by the end of this summer. It is envisaged that among other things, this year will see the supply of water to Anglian Way, the construction of feeding areas and ponds at many of the sites and the setting-up of interpretation material. In contrast with the situation with the last Government, where Gibraltar was condemned internationally and was the subject of a negative campaign, two international organisations, the International Primate Protection League and the Born Free Foundation, are completely 125 on side and will in fact be contributing with expertise and funding to delivering the plan.

It has already been stated that no culling will be conducted for the purpose of reducing the number of macaques. The possibility of relocating macaques to adequate places abroad will continue to be an option and the use of contraceptive measures will be enhanced. This, together with the new management systems and facilities will go some way towards significantly reducing the nuisance caused by the monkeys in 130 built-up areas, which is one of my main concerns.

The four-year gull population reduction programme with FERA has now been completed. We will now be enhancing local resources to increase the year-long concerted effort that should maintain the numbers of gulls at a satisfactory level, without the need for the continuous and expensive engagement of overseas services.

Mr Speaker, when I took over the old Alameda Gardens in 1991, I remember sitting at the edge of one of the beds, looking round, and almost despairing at the magnitude of the task ahead. A similar feeling went through me as I went around the Cemetery, shortly after coming into office. Not only was it in an appalling state, but the conditions of the staff facilities was shocking, and little equipment was available. But the task is not insurmountable.

We will this year commence a project of general refurbishment for the Cemetery which will entail the removal of unkempt vaults of more than 50 years, the painting of external walls, the placing of benches and refurbishment of the entrances, as well as improving the management of the planted areas. The Board of Visitors to the Cemetery, which has not functioned for about a decade, is being reconstituted in order to support the hardworking and thoroughly committed Superintendent and his team, in their work.

The drive to plant more trees throughout Gibraltar will continue. This will be achieved within new developments and in green areas where they can survive through natural means. Plans continue to be developed to creating new green areas. Design work on Commonwealth Park, for example, is advancing well, and works on the ground are expected to begin shortly after the summer.

Consistent with the concept of tidiness and beautification, another body that I have resurrected is the Litter Committee, which has already helped in co-ordinating the resources available to clean up and maintain a cleaner Gibraltar. The Committee's members include official Departments, Agencies, contractors and NGOs, including the 'Wake Up Gibraltar' Facebook Group. I must mention here the work done by cleansing contractors, and by the Environmental Monitoring Team and the brand new Environmental Feedback Section, which have been given new impetus by this Government's initiatives.

Refurbishment work to the Upper Rock sites and enhancement works to areas of natural beauty will be carried out, adding to the excellent work already being done by the Upper Rock Team in managing habitats and controlling non-native invasive plant species.

Tanks that will provide water for fire-fighting purposes in the Upper Rock will be placed at different locations in consultation with the City Fire Brigade. Works to repair and replace fences in the Upper Rock will also be carried out. Old buildings will be restored and interpretational signs will be erected. This will be the first phase in developing the Upper Rock towards its full potential as an area of beauty, wildlife, and recreation.

The Alameda Gardens will be encouraged to continue to develop, beyond its recreational value to the community, as a major player in research and conservation in the region, and to promote Gibraltar internationally in these fields. This year should see the completion of works to the Animal Conservation Park, the development of educational and scientific work and the placing of interpretational and educational material.

Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, has important responsibilities in affording protection to wildlife that not only resides here but which passes through Gibraltar and its waters on migration. This projects our importance – and our responsibilities – far beyond the limits of our small territory, as essentially our success or otherwise in wildlife protection could have repercussions in wildlife populations, particularly of birds and marine species, throughout Europe and the Mediterranean. That is why, Mr Speaker, despite allegations to the contrary, the Government takes very seriously its responsibilities under the Habitats and Birds Directives and why it affords protection to its wildlife, both terrestrial and marine.

In relation to the Habitats Directive the existing surveillance monitoring programme will be enhanced this year to ensure greater data capture for species of flora and fauna of local and community interest. The results of the monitoring will assist Government in meeting the requirements of the Directive, which include ensuring that the favourable status of our European protected habitats and species is attained or maintained locally.

The Rock of Gibraltar Site of Community Interest will shortly be designated as a Special Area of Conservation. To this end, a management scheme is being prepared by the Department of the Environment. This plan will reflect the findings, where applicable, of the current Upper Rock Consultation Process, which should see the rationalisation of all the interests into an organised mechanism which will ensure proper management of all aspects of the Upper Rock.

The Government is revising the Southern Waters of Gibraltar Management Scheme, which as existing is weak and inadequate. The protection regime which had been in place until now is therefore being supplemented and will include the regulation of all types of fishing activities in Gibraltar waters amongst other issues affecting Gibraltar's marine resources. Mr Speaker, the clear show of weakness of the Government of 1999, in ignoring technical advice and entering into an agreement tantamount to likewise ignoring Gibraltar's laws, was in my mind the clear trigger for the declaration by Spain of a European SCI within Gibraltar waters. This admission by the then Government of its inability to administer protection of our marine resources will have been mischievously used in a decision to take the law into their own hands and treat our waters as if they were theirs.

But this is hardly surprising, if our own Government essentially agreed to Spanish law governing activities in our waters. The best way to tackle this problem, Mr Speaker, is by demonstrating that we are willing and able to offer a protection regime that is scientifically robust and will encourage the recovery of our marine habitats and species and only allow sustainable use of our resources.

This will mean that the regulations that we will be introducing, which have been discussed with all relevant stakeholders in our Marine Consultation Process, will require certain restraint and control of activities currently taking place, but in the end will ensure thriving marine life with added possibilities of sustainable use. Mr Speaker, for the avoidance of doubt, let me state that these are regulations that we have been developing since December, to govern activities locally such as angling, diving and spear fishing, to replace the former Government's inadequate and ill-conceived Marine Leisure Act proposals.

Mr Speaker, sound conservation science is the overriding principle that drives all our environmental work, be it in relation to local use or in relation to Spanish fishermen. It is imperative that all recognise and accept what the world already knows, that unless we protect what little remains now, there will be nothing left in the future.

It really is sad, Mr Speaker, that neither the present Leader of the Opposition realised that in 1999, when he had it in his gift to resolve the issue once and for all, nor the Opposition now can find it within themselves to publicly state that what I am saying is true and that what we are doing is right.

Mr Speaker, I have already mentioned the Government's commitment to involving the wider Gibraltar in its work. I have referred to the involvement of the ESG. Similarly, it is maintaining close contact with the Ornithological and Natural History Society through regular meetings and discussions on matters relating in particular to the natural environment. The Government will continue to do so and will assist their work in the rehabilitation and captive breeding of birds of prey, both for release into the wild and for use in gull control.

In order to strengthen and widen the quality of scientific advice available to it, Government has restructured the Scientific Authority and the Nature Conservancy Council, which is now encouraged to advise on any matter within its competence that it wishes to, and not simply respond to specific requests as dictated by law.

Mr Speaker, this year Government celebrated the eighth anniversary of World Environment Day (WED) on Thursday, 31st May. The purpose of this United Nations Environment Programme Day is to spread awareness of centre stage environmental issues. This year's theme is the 'Green Economy.' Events were centred on the ever-popular performances by school children and parents who were invited to attend. This event was held at the Tercentenary Sports Hall. It was truly inspirational. The work done by children, teachers and parents has to be praised. The message came through loud and clear: they are the future, and the future, if there is to be one, must be green.

The Department of the Environment is currently considering the detailed requirements of a purpose built Environment Park that will provide for the ability to dispose of different waste streams. These waste streams will then be transferred to authorised recycling and disposal facilities. Until these facilities are established, businesses and the public are encouraged to take all Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE) to the temporary facility at Europa Advance Road or to any retailer from which it is purchasing a replacement piece of equipment. Promoting awareness of the need for careful disposal of waste has been and will continue to be one of the subjects covered in the Environment Department's promotional material – one of which is the very popular recycling ad featuring 'El Teren', so convincingly portrayed by accomplished actor, Tony Loddo. There is more to come.

This type of initiative will help remind members of the public to make use of the recycling facilities that Government has placed and will be placing at its disposal. The provision of proper facilities for the disposal of refuse will continue this year and the project will be implemented in stages.

Mr Speaker, the services provided by the existing Gibraltar Air Quality Monitoring Programme has this year been extended with the following improvements:

- The existing website providing air quality monitoring data to the public will be upgraded to improve accessibility, security and user friendliness.
- Rainfall is to be measured to provide valuable data to better elucidate the behaviour of pollutants with respect to meteorological processes.
- Considerable interest and research into black carbon is currently being undertaken throughout Europe, to better understand this pollutant. No measurements of black carbon have ever been made in Gibraltar and monitoring will commence shortly.
- There are no data on radon levels in Gibraltar and an initial three month survey will be carried out throughout Gibraltar to characterise radon background levels. Following the results of this survey, a decision will be taken as to whether there will be a need to extend the monitoring period. It is hoped that the data gathered will help answer questions posed within the Gibraltar Epidemiological Study (GES), with respect to radon concentrations in air.

• In the light of modelled results that arose from the monitoring stations, further investigation is to be carried out, to provide an indication of the apportionment of sources of chromium in Gibraltar. This highlighted that modelled concentration of trichloroethylene and tetrachloroethylene pose an enhanced risk of certain cancer endpoints. A short measurement study using diffusion tubes will be carried out to determine whether the modelled concentrations from the system are consistent with measured concentrations in ambient air within Gibraltar.

• PM10 particulate background concentrations have been obtained in the past from Spanish sources, in order to quantify the apportionment of African dust to our PM10 levels. In order to avoid delays in obtaining the Spanish data, an alternative method will be developed using an open source air quality data analyser called 'Openair'.

The Energy Performance of Buildings Programme is now well underway. The current system is being revised with a view to improve the minimum energy performance standards of new and current build. Methods of ensuring that buildings conform to requirements are being developed jointly by the Department of the Environment, Building Control and the Town Planner.

The Water Quality Monitoring Programmes carried out by the Department of the Environment and the Environmental Agency continue to be in operation. New requirements under the Water Framework and Marine Strategy Framework Directives are being incorporated into the latter programme. Further developments in relation to the Marine Strategy Framework are expected to take place in the very new future and the Government is committed to meeting and, if possible, expanding upon the requirements.

Additionally, ad hoc sampling will be conducted by the Department of the Environment, as and when necessary, as part of a new pollution monitoring and enforcement campaign. We will continue to monitor the situation at Western Beach, as at all our beaches, and continue to work towards a long-term solution.

Work continues also on a wide range of issues, including the European Floods Directive and the Cartagena Protocol. Much of the work I have mentioned today, and a great deal more that there will not be time to go into, is either run or supported by the Environment Agency, with which my Ministry works very closely and which produces work of the highest calibre. Indeed, work across the boundaries of Agencies and Departments is the hallmark of this Government.

As an example, Mr Speaker, I must mention the extreme hard work and efficiency with which two recent oil spills, one in Gibraltar and another in Algeciras were handled by the Port, the Maritime Authority, the Department of the Environment and the Environment Agency. They worked around the clock, deployed all the available resources, and co-ordinated their work in such a way that the environmental impact was minimal.

In order to help us in achieving all this, the Environment Department will have two new technical posts at Professional Technical Officer (PTO) grade, and it has created a laboratory which contains specialised equipment for on-site monitoring of soils and waters. This will allow for a greater level of pollution management and polluter enforcement. It will also result in more efficient and proactive working practices within the Department and cut length of waiting time for results, while reducing the costs of sampling.

Mr Speaker, the staff of the Ministry and Department of the Environment, the Environment Agencies, and others who I work with, administrative and technical, have found that I have given them a tremendous amount of work in a very short space of time. They have responded admirably to the new challenges they face with the new freedom they enjoy to fulfill their abilities and fully utilise their expertise.

You will have seen, Mr Speaker, that the amount of work being carried out in relation to the Environment, not just by the Ministry and the Department, but also by NGOs, professional bodies, contractors and other Government Departments is greater and of higher quality than ever before, and I must add, being done and delivered with correspondingly more enthusiasm and excitement. That, Mr Speaker, may well be because I am excited too.

Mr Speaker, I now turn my attention to the Ministry of Health and the Gibraltar Health Authority.

Mr Speaker, despite how tired I was, as you would expect, in the early afternoon of 9th December 2011, after the very moving ceremony at the Convent where I was sworn in as a Minister of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, I went down to St Bernard's Hospital. Mr Speaker, 20 years and six months before, I had left my post of General Manager of the GHA, a post now called Chief Executive Officer, with great sadness. Sadness, not because I regretted returning to work in my profession as a biologist, but because of what I was leaving behind. I left a small, tight unit, which in three years had recovered from years of neglect, through investment into manning and into the fabric and was now functioning well and with spirit and commitment.

Years later, during the move to the new Hospital, as a member of the Board of the Authority, and before I had fallen out of favour, for reasons best known to some Members opposite, I made it a point to visit the old hospital, now empty, and, as I remembered all the work that I had done there, with so many friends and colleagues, I wondered whether I would ever work in healthcare again. When, shortly after, my long time appointment on the Board was terminated by the then Minister, it appeared that this would never happen.

My return to St Bernard's, now as soon-to-be Minister for Health, was therefore, as you can imagine, an emotional moment for me, Mr Speaker, particularly when I saw and talked to people I had worked with two decades earlier, and to new, young people, who have made healthcare their career. They welcomed me, and I felt immediately at home.

Let me say, right at the start of this part, Mr Speaker, that despite all the problems and pitfalls, I am determined to deliver a health service to be proud of – and the pitfalls are many. The dedication of most of the staff is as strong as ever, but the structures and mechanisms have tremendous gaps in them, which make delivery of the service lacking in many ways.

The management structure is awkward and fails in a number of important areas to keep in touch with the organisation and with patients, and in many cases, to deliver their needs. Failure of that structure also means that continuity of patient care is again in many cases lacking, with individuals doing their work well, but without the solid connections required to treat the patient as a complete person.

Mr Speaker, so many of the problems that have been brought to me by hundreds of patients, relatives and staff, I have found to have been justified complaints, easily avoided, often simple to resolve. What was lacking in the GHA that led to this?

Mr Speaker, I am still asking myself that question, and as all the different parts of the answer assemble before me, I will take the necessary action to put it right.

I can already say what some of the answers are. I have mentioned inadequate structure. I will also mention inaccessibility of the former Minister and the sucking upwards of decision-making towards the office of the former Chief Minister, which led to many things not being done and to his lack of expertise in health matters, making it impossible for him to take informed decisions.

Mr Speaker, the executive structure of the GHA, now subject to intense review, by me and by itself, was created, I can only assume, by the old regime in No 6 Convent Place. Contrary to the requirements of the law, the Management Board was done away with and doctors banished from its membership. Directors were personally appointed by the then Chief Minister, and pay scales invented that bore no relativity to those of others. Mr Speaker, the trouble this alone has caused is tremendous.

I will insist that this is not the fault of the professionals appointed, but their effectiveness was for a long time tarnished by the manner of their appointment. That was not fair on the organisation and was not fair on them. At the same time, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Health Authority itself – by which I mean its Board – ceased to be a meaningful forum, with members not being encouraged to place matters for discussion on the agenda.

Mr Speaker, I will leave the matter of democratic deficit behind me and now address this House in regard to matters arising since I took on this very important area of responsibility.

Mr Speaker, on taking up my post, there were a huge number of matters that needed my attention. I will now deal with the most immediate and pressing issues that were critical to restoring the useful operation of the GHA.

The first is bed occupancy. Bed Management advised me that they had been attempting to operate the hospital with approximately 50 available beds. This number was barely able to cope with the emergency admissions and really precluded any meaningful inpatient elective surgery. I was briefed on the severe waiting list of over 200 patients in General Surgery and the increasing waiting lists in the other services.

Over the Christmas period, there were a number of critical nights with no beds available, patients sleeping in A&E, and the real risk of serious emergencies having to be sent directly to hospitals in Spain. On examination of the problem, I was advised and observed that the bed access problem was related to 24 patients with severe dementia, 12 with such frailty that they could only be cared for in hospital or in Mount Alvernia, and 36 other patients who could not go home, as they were awaiting assessments, housing modifications, active social service input and/or domiciliary care. There were also five patients who could be more effectively cared for in a hospice facility.

I took action immediately. With the support of the Chief Minister, who saw the problem for himself, when we visited the new hospital together on New Year's Day, and working with my colleague and friend, the Hon. Minister Sacramento, we mobilised both Ministries to tackle the problem, and by the end of February, we had relieved the pressure. By that time, and with unprecedented co-operation between GHA staff and Care Agency staff, Calpe Ward had been opened, providing service to 18 patients.

Domiciliary Care funding was increased and improved co-operation with Housing meant that many of those issues had been addressed. So far, since 1st March, Mr Speaker, bed availability for planned elective services has not been an issue.

I have here to pay tribute to all the staff, in particular the Bed Management team, for constantly monitoring the bed situation and finding solutions that benefit existing and future patients.

However, Mr Speaker, these remedies are short term. St Bernard's was not designed for long-stay frail elderly services or dementia services. These patients are prone to outbreaks of flu, Norovirus, MRSA and Clostridium Difcile; they are also at extreme risk of institutionalisation.

During this examination, Mr Speaker, Minister Sacramento and I convened a joint Ministry group to look at the planning for the Royal Naval Hospital Site and we found what we had suspected all along: that the design advice of the care professionals who would provide the services in both facilities was being ignored. Minister Sacramento and I were shocked and immediately took their advice and sought additional consultant support. This facility will be dealt with later by the hon. Lady.

We established a joint Dementia Strategy Group and their first recommendation, that a Dementia Day Facility be commissioned as soon as possible, is now being seriously considered. That multi-disciplinary and multi-agency group has had its mandate increased to provide a Seniors' Health Strategy for Gibraltar and we are expecting their report in the autumn. Once again Mr. Speaker, what was the previous Government doing? The answer, Mr Speaker, was simply failing to listen to the clinical professionals they employed.

Mr Speaker, I am pleased also to announce that the Government has agreed to provide the initial support for the commencement of the activity at the new hospice facility run by the Society for Cancer Relief. The Society aims to establish an inpatient hospice facility for those terminally ill patients to spend their last days in greater comfort, and we are looking at ways to support this aim.

In summary, Mr Speaker, the previous Government failed the people of Gibraltar in ignoring the root causes of the bed access problem. Our Government is committed to a Healthy Seniors' Strategy and a true caring approach to those in our community who have given so much to and for Gibraltar.

And that issue was only the first problem.

I now talk about nurse staffing, Mr Speaker, instead of addressing the real fundamental problem, the previous Government, once again showing their lack of understanding of the principles of modern health care, decided to reduce the number of surgical wards and to put in extra beds set up on the wards, increasing the false capacity by 15%, but not increasing the complement of nurses appropriately. Again, Mr Speaker, this ignored the fundamental signs of the nursing staffing crisis. The signs were:

- complaints about nursing care on the wards, for example: 'the nurses are always too busy', 'nobody answered the call bell', 'my parent was not showered today';
- high rates of sickness and absence;
- extraordinary use of the nurse bank, with nurses working continuously on supply with no rights to leave, sickness and no job security;
- poor quality outcomes;
- real reduction in staff availability as a result of the Agenda for Change contract implementation.

The second major remedy provided to the GHA, which is evidenced in the Estimates, is the recruitment of 33 nursing positions – a 10% increase in the Nursing Service, which will help alleviate the quality and occupancy problems. These posts are now filled.

Primary care access: Mr Speaker, the system of access to primary care was failing our community. People were queuing at 7.00 in the morning, often in vain attempts to get to see the emergency GP. Changes to the appointments system, generated by staff and clinicians, are in the process of being introduced and assessed.

I must add that I have myself been with the staff dealing with the calls for appointments first thing in the morning and am most impressed at their efficiency and dedication.

Together we are looking at ways of improving the service further. The concerns included: the need for additional GP support in the winter months; the failure to deal with the impact of the GP contract; and the limited value of nurse practitioners in the absence of their ability to prescribe.

Mr Speaker, with Cabinet approval, I have now published regulations which permit nurse practitioners to prescribe and issue repeat prescriptions and thus they will be able to reduce the pressure on GP services. The first ever nursing practitioner prescriptions in Gibraltar will be written today, as all the systems are now ready.

In addition, I am considering a wider response to the serious issue of increases in GP workload.

To the consultants contract: Mr Speaker, another of the failings of the previous Government was that in 2004, they introduced the pay elements of the consultants' contract, without the terms of the contract being agreed. At the same time, the Government attempted to introduce a contract worded in such a way that the consultants found completely unacceptable, I am told, partly because of the belittling language and the lack of respect demonstrated within it. In spite of GHA management and the consultants coming to agreement later, way back in 2006, the Government of the time refused to sanction its implementation.

This Government intends to proceed to negotiate a fair reasonable agreement that places reasonable expectations on the consultants and on the GHA. Contacts have commenced and I expect agreement this year.

The Mental Health Service: Mr Speaker, it was but a few days after last 9th December that I went back to KGV after 20 years and six months. Mr Speaker, words can barely describe what I found, when I got there. The condition of the building and facilities, the state of the rooms where these members of our community had to live out their lives, and the conditions that the staff had to put up with were worse than Victorian.

The Chief Minister accompanied me on another visit shortly after, and was as moved as I had been. Mr Speaker, I took the unusual step of inviting the press and cameras into KGV with me, because the community had to see the disgrace that the last Government had permitted and by its inaction condoned. Of everything wrong that the GSD had done, and of everything bad that the GSD had left, I will always remember the legacy of KGV.

Immediately, and at surprisingly low cost, the new Government – a Government that cares for all of its people – set to work in putting this right, and did so with an enthusiastic response from all involved.

There were grave concerns too with the previous Government's direction being given on the new Mental Health facility. Once again, experts were not being heard. I am happy to confirm that I have now approved the detailed plan for the new facility, developed by an in-house team of people who know about these matters. We hope that the works will be completed towards the end of this financial year or the beginning of the next.

Also neglected has been the Community Mental Health Team facility at Coaling Island, and I am pleased to announce that, this year, I plan to invest £100,000 in upgrading that facility, which provides a vital and often unappreciated service to the community.

Finally on Mental Health, this year, I will table changes to the grossly outdated mental health legislation which will facilitate a modernisation of the service to our community, in this vital and sadly so far neglected area of health care.

Catering Facility and Food Service issues: Mr Speaker, one of the moments of the election campaign that I remember most vividly took place in an otherwise very enjoyable session at the Laguna Social Club. It was an appeal by a member of the hospital catering staff for help and support. She was ashamed of admitting she worked in the hospital kitchen, not because her work was not up to standard, but because no matter how good it was, the system in place meant that the food reached St Bernard's in an unacceptable state.

Mr Speaker, what I did not know then was that not only did the plated food system not work, not only did each food trolley cost over £7,000 and each door at least £500 to be replaced, but that the condition of the kitchen was so appalling. Within days of the Election, I visited the kitchen with my friend and colleague, the Hon. Paul Balban who, as you will know, is a trained dietician, and we were both shocked. It was almost like KGV all over again. Well, nothing can be that bad.

As Minister responsible for Health and Safety, my colleague initiated an inspection which revealed serious shortcomings that had not been dealt with by the previous Administration. These are in the process of being put right – after years of inaction. You see Mr Speaker, as we have seen and will see, not just from my contribution but from many others by my colleagues, not only did the last Government spend money on unnecessary follies, it also failed to spend money on necessary essentials and left us with a myriad of ticking time bombs, which we have had to set to defusing – at an expense that they should have had, and to the detriment of our own programme. That, Mr Speaker, is tantamount to putting the wellbeing of Gibraltar last.

Mr Speaker, I immediately listened to the Catering Department and to users and agreed that the concept of returning the food service preparation to the St Bernard's site be addressed as soon as possible. I am expecting an architectural feasibility of options imminently, with a view to starting work within this financial year.

Now the Ambulance Service: Mr Speaker, another area of concern is the Ambulance Service. We are committed to providing proper and larger facilities to the ambulance staff, as well as to improving other aspects of the running of the Ambulance Service and to its professional development. Last week, we took delivery of the three new emergency ambulances, which were finally ordered by the last Government, thanks to the concerns of the staff and to the determination of the then Shadow Member for Health, my hon. and learned friend, Neil Costa. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The tender process for replacing all five transport ambulances is already under way, so that by the end of this financial year, we will have a full set of ambulances less than a year old. My word, what a difference! (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Now to our manifesto: Mr Speaker, the above issues represented priorities encountered in the first few months of this forward-looking and progressive, breath-of-fresh-air Administration. Some of these were not explicitly in our manifesto, but nevertheless emerged as top priority and were dealt with. It was evident that the continued theme of the previous Government not listening to or ignoring the GHA's strategic planning process contributed very significantly to the problems I encountered and still have to live with every day.

Our manifesto, Mr Speaker, is our commitment to the people of Gibraltar. My mandate from the people who put so much trust in me, and from my colleagues in Cabinet, is to implement this manifesto. However, I will not do it by giving blind instruction, nor without planning and careful consideration. I will ensure that due process is followed, staff are consulted and implementation issues are addressed, using a robust project management approach.

I will now account for the implementation of our commitments.

In-vitro fertilisation (IVF): Mr Speaker, the GHA has developed the IVF policy and is now finalising the evaluation of the responses to the tenders and in the next month will announce the successful service provider. The system will be a reality very soon indeed.

Transparency in the running of the GHA – open Board meetings: Mr Speaker, based on well researched new Standing Orders and in keeping with our manifesto commitment of ‘transparency in the running of the GHA’, our second meeting of the Authority to be held in public is scheduled for 17th July. I am also planning the annual public meeting for the Board in the autumn, at which time the annual report will be published.

Use of the GHA website: Mr Speaker, at the moment, this website is nothing short of an embarrassment. I have asked our IT professionals to prepare proposals for a much improved website later in this year.

Fiscal transparency: Mr Speaker, I am committed for financial progress reports to be provided for each quarterly meeting and to the greater devolution of budgets to front-line managers and appropriate clinicians throughout the GHA.

Clinicians at the top: As part of the Management Restructure, Mr Speaker, I have already made proposals and had proposals from the current members of the Executive and have had many discussions with staff throughout the GHA. I intend to include doctors and other senior clinicians, including nurses and representatives of the Allied Health Professionals in the new management structure. I hold regular meetings with GHA doctors and will continue to discuss other elements of engagement of clinicians including conditions and contracts for non-Consultant Hospital Doctors, and the re-establishment of the Medical Advisory Committee.

On Objective Standards: Mr Speaker, in consultation with management and with the recently appointed review team, I intend to implement a more rigorous system of accountability for all managers and indeed for the GHA Board. A proper system of Clinical Governance, which is a Board responsibility, will be introduced. To this end, I intend to look for a strategic alliance with an NHS Trust to assist with audit of standards and to implement a system of accreditation suitable for a health service such as ours.

GMC Registration: Mr Speaker, I have already had a consultation with the Medical and Dental Registration Board and have heard their frustration with the current legislation and the paucity of their administrative system that precludes effective monitoring of competence for Gibraltar’s doctors and other health professionals. The previous Government’s failure to listen to that Board and the lack of respect shown to its Chairman is incredible. This is a complex matter that requires time to develop an effective implementation plan.

Complaints: Mr Speaker, Government will soon be introducing legislation to address this matter. I am already considering proposals and will now complete my discussions with the Ombudsman in respect of the final policy and the complaints management process.

Consultant staffing: Mr Speaker, I have already made considerable progress again in this area. The third consultant surgeon will take up his appointment in September of this year and the competition for the third psychiatrist will commence shortly. I am awaiting staffing options in regard to dementia care and will soon examine the commitment to A&E.

Public Health and Healthy Living: I expect to receive a comprehensive proposal from the Director of Public Health in regard to the system to meet Government’s needs in this area. We are committed to a permanent Health Education Programme involving healthy children, adults and seniors. I have been advised, Mr Speaker, that the analysis of the Health Survey carried out with great fanfare by the previous Government was never funded and the GHA management has had to fund the analysis indirectly. The previous Government’s commitment to management to fund the essential data analyst was rescinded by them.

I now hope to publish this report by the end of this year. It will be an important tool in charting a course for the health of our people into the future.

Public Health – smoking cessation: Mr Speaker, one of the achievements I am most proud of to date is the introduction of the Smoking Cessation Programme and the new legislation banning smoking in public buildings and spaces, already a Command Paper and shortly to come to this House as a Bill.

The legacy of both programmes will be seen as a major turning point in the improvement of the health of Gibraltarians. Our commitment had been noticed by one of our charitable organisations which has indicated its intention to fund additional support for the programme.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to publicly express my appreciation for the work that charities, large and small, do for the Health Service. Rather than discourage their work and contributions, as was often the case before, I encourage it as adding value to our work and giving ownership to our people. Likewise, I would like to thank the Health Users’ Forum for bringing problems to my notice on a regular basis, allowing us to act on them.

On the Sponsored Patients Programme, Mr Speaker, the existing programme is now under review and I hope to implement the necessary changes, following an extended consultation period. In advance of the review’s conclusions, we have announced today that, with effect from 1st July this year, allowances to disabled patients will be increased by 50%. We are also studying ways in which we can bring new procedures to Gibraltar, to avoid the need for uncomfortable and costly travel to centres elsewhere.

Mr Speaker, the Diabetes Strategy is nearing completion and a considerable amount has been achieved. This is one of the programmes that has inadequate support and I plan to examine the strategy and its needs carefully later this year.

On Repeat Prescriptions, Mr Speaker, I have been able to confirm that following my consultation with patients, doctors, nurses and the Primary Care staff, this is one of the most important initiatives, and it will take time to see the benefits. As I said earlier, we have already expanded the scope of the nurse practitioners, which will partly address this issue. I am expecting to announce the next stage in the strategy very soon. A consultation is underway with GPs, to consider the most appropriate system and its implementation plan.

On computerisation: the Government, Mr Speaker, is fully committed to the GHA's Electronic Health Technology Strategy. I have asked GHA management to conduct a wide ranging consultation with the clinicians and following that, I expect to be able to prepare an implementation plan. We are fully committed to empowering the patients in this innovation and I am really looking forward to a successful implementation. The process to date is following well researched methodology and clinicians have been fully consulted to this point and form the majority of the Steering Committee.

Hyperbaric oxygen: Mr Speaker, while not a GHA initiative, it is right that I should mention this at this juncture. Government has delivered its manifesto commitment to make hyperbaric oxygen therapy available to the community. It has therefore provided the Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre, a registered charity, with the means to run its facilities and offer its services to Gibraltar entitled patients.

Mr Speaker, over and above our manifesto commitments, the following are just some of the activities and initiatives that we will be embarking on:

- A clear separation of GHA activity from Ministry activity.
- Review of the GHA Board, its structure, function and effectiveness.
- Prostate Diseases Clinic: this programme will be initiated in the latter part of this year.
- Colon Cancer Screening Programme which will likely be implemented at the end of this financial year and for which provision of £300,000 has been made in these estimates.

We are increasing provision for patients' appliances, which includes orthopaedic appliances, hearing aids, and insulin pumps, by nearly £20,000 over last year's spending and will be able to provide a better wheelchair service, and add earplugs for children and facial stimulators to the appliances provided.

Medical Equipment Plan: Mr Speaker, I was made aware early on of a major funding deficiency which could have compromised patient care services. The GHA Board had been made aware of this very serious concern about a lack of funding for its orderly replacement plan for essential and expensive medical equipment, which had not been heeded by the previous Administration. This Government, Mr Speaker will rectify this inadequacy.

I will add here, Mr Speaker, that the allocation last year for the full range of works and equipment for the Health Authority was just £800,000, when this year we have allocated a total of £3.3 million to these. What more proof do we need of the priority this Government gives to healthcare and to the wellbeing of our people?

On nurse training: Mr Speaker, nurses form the link between all the different aspects of healthcare. They are often the front line, the continuity, the listening ear, the support, and at night, they are the hospital. Nurses are very special people and we need them. I am proposing a continuation and expansion of nurse training to meet our needs for nurses at different levels of qualification and to provide an opportunity for nurses who want to further their career without necessarily following the degree route to be able to do so.

On non-Consultant Hospital Doctors: this group of frontline doctors have often been forgotten, and there are issues related to hours of work and the fact that they do not have a secure or consistent contract of employment. We are looking at ways of tackling these problems and of enhancing their involvement and contribution to the service.

On Community Services, a detailed analysis of the possibilities for medical and nursing services within the community, thus reducing the need for patients to be hospitalised has been carried out.

On Occupational Therapy, Mr Speaker, I have nothing but praise for the Occupational Therapy Department and the way it has assumed a huge increase in demand for their services, from the moment we came into office. They have been called in to assess patients, housing, swimming pools, and much more. I need to have a close look at what we need from OT and how we can help achieve this.

Physiotherapy is increasingly in demand and, once again, we will be looking at how we can best use the resources available.

One of the gaps in management support relates to the provision of hospital services, including stores and stock. This is a matter that is being addressed. The records, too, in both St Bernard's and Primary Care, are housed in rooms that are too small and that bring with them occupational health hazards.

Although recovery rates are high, the staff cannot be expected to work in such conditions. I am pleased to say that the records area in Primary Care is already being increased and work is imminent in St Bernard's.

• Occupational health in general is a matter that went largely ignored by the previous Administration and I will be looking at options there, as well as ways to improve the medical cover provided to the Port, the Prison and to Mount Alvernia.

• Mr Speaker, Accident and Emergency is one of the areas that attracts most attention from users. People who attend are often distressed and unwell, and the system, hard as the staff work, is not user-friendly. I am working closely with the staff in question to solve these problems, and changes and improvements will be seen very soon.

• Operating theatres and clinics: the use of clinics and of operating theatres in particular will be reassessed with an emphasis to promoting day surgery.

• There are many other services which require attention, and which have got attention over the past seven months. Dietetics, Audiology and Speech Therapy, Ophthalmology, cardiac rehabilitation, Radiology, on-ward procedures such as resuscitation, some of the nurse-led clinics such as Dermatology and Lymphedema care, all require recognition and support.

Mr Speaker, the health of our community is not good, and we suffer the effects of many of the illnesses of an affluent Western society. As an example, the state of the dental health of our children is much worse than in many other countries, and obesity is an increasing problem. We have to change the way we live. We have to make important life choices as individuals, and the Health Service has to help and support us in doing so. I will myself be leading in two Ministerial Initiatives, which I will introduce in the autumn.

Mr Speaker, the Health Surveys which I mentioned earlier will soon be in the public domain, and some of the results will be summarised at next week's meeting of the Health Authority. Let me advance, though, some of the worrying facts, such as that three quarters of men in Gibraltar over 45 are overweight and 75% of Gibraltarians do not eat at least five portions of fruit and vegetables daily, much worse than in the UK.

Therefore, Mr Speaker, the first Ministerial Initiative will be a health promotion initiative, where I intend to bring together representation from the different disciplines to develop a co-ordinated programme in lifestyle change.

Mr Speaker, as Minister for Health, I am particularly conscious of the fact that I myself fall into both the above mentioned categories! (Laughter) I therefore intend to lead by example and I commit myself now to myself personally reaching a weight and a level of fitness, with the advice of professionals, which will be a reflection of a healthy lifestyle. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Applause and laughter)

The second Ministerial Initiative will be in relation to children's health. I believe a lot can be done to assist the smooth care of sick children, particularly in their transition from primary to secondary care and where unfortunately it is necessary, into tertiary care. I will engage with all the relevant health professionals and with voluntary organisations as necessary, in order to take this forward.

Mr Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to the staff of the Health Services, and at this point, mention the sad loss of one of the members of the Executive at a very young age of 45 only last week, Mr Joey Gabay. My condolences and I am sure those of the House go to the family. (Applause)

So I would like to pay tribute to all the staff of the Health Services and to all the volunteers who work in associated charities. Without them and their dedication, we would be nowhere. I have inherited many excellent professionals, many of whom have stated to me that the new political environment of listening, openness, challenge and transparency is so welcome. Morale has greatly improved and the patients of the Health Service will increasingly be the real beneficiaries. Yes, I will expect them all to work to their utmost to take this forward, and I intend to be there with them, working for them and with them, and supporting them to the end.

Mr Speaker, all we have accomplished already and all that we have commenced would not have been possible without the excellent working relationships I have enjoyed with staff and management and of course with the relevant staff groups and trade unions. The first seven months have been at the same time amongst the toughest and the best in my life, and I offer my sincere thanks for their professionalism.

Mr Speaker, we are not there yet. I am committed to giving my full attention to my responsibilities in healthcare and the environment. I intend to continue to listen to the people, to the staff, including clinicians, to patients, to the members of the community. I will support the implementation of all change, whether its origin is in our manifesto or indeed in the careful recommendations of patients, clinicians, staff or contracted experts. I will work to use the resources that Parliament votes to the Health Service of Gibraltar more effectively and more efficiently.

Mr Speaker, the time for change is now, and I have only just begun.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Selwyn Figueras

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I know only too much about obesity but since health is not my portfolio, I will limit myself in relation to the comments I make in that regard.

I would like to start by thanking the Hon. Minister himself for showing me the way in relation to giving an Opposition speech – one which I will give now from the Opposition benches.

Mr Speaker, it is an honour and a privilege to stand here today and deliver my first Budget speech in this House. I am also honoured and privileged to be a part of this team, to have the opportunity to bring political opposition to this community, the likes of which was long overdue.

I will commend this Government whenever they do well, and happily so. I will also, however, not shy away from telling it like it is and raise those issues I and other concerned individuals consider need airing in this House to effectively hold the new Government to account.

On that basis, this is a moment I have been anxiously waiting for, an opportunity to summarise my own personal and this party's views on the present Government's record in these short few months which, thankfully, have flown by. Roll on 2015!

I will be dealing with the portfolios that I shadow where I have considered it appropriate and relevant to comment, with a particular focus, in the first place, on planning and then, the environment and the subheadings relevant to those areas.

I will, of course, be dealing with those matters, as far as they are relevant, raised by the Hon. the Chief Minister, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister and of course the Hon. Minister for the Environment and Health in the speeches that have preceded mine.

In relation to planning and the specific mention in the Deputy Chief Minister's speech as to how bad it had been, the new Government arrived in office, barely, with the promise and on the wings of a commitment to openness and transparency like never before seen in Gibraltar. The Hon. Minister for the Environment and Health himself, had, however, served on the Development and Planning Commission for over 20 years without complaint, or certainly not a complaint which he had felt strongly enough about to resign in protest and yet, for the purposes of the Election, it had all just got a little too much for him. They told the electorate, Mr Speaker that 'there have been many complaints about the secrecy of our planning laws. We are committed to have open meetings of the DPC and to overhaul the whole planning process in order to make it more transparent and user-friendly.' The party that was responsible for the demolition of the North Gate of the dockyard that fateful, and quiet, long weekend, long ago in the dark days of the first GSLP Government, bamboozled the electorate by offering them this all new-fangled openness and transparency and a commitment to put all Government projects through the planning process.

The reality so far, Mr Speaker, is somewhat different to the illusion the current Government would like the electorate to fall for, hook, line and sinker, if you will pardon the somewhat depressing pun.

What they conveniently omitted to say was when this would happen. They also promised, Mr Speaker, that the DPC would grow to include other representatives of the community and that the chairman of that Commission would be the person they personally considered the best qualified, best candidate for the job – the Town Planner himself. After the slimmest of victories at the polls in December, the Government soon set to work upon ringing in the changes to the planning process which the previous Administration, let us not forget, had created.

It was not long however, Mr Speaker, until the cracks began to appear. In fact, it was surprisingly soon that I myself had the opportunity of an exchange with the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, in respect of his Government's plans to put Government projects through the full planning process.

Mr Speaker, when asked when this would become a reality, the Deputy Chief Minister replied that, at that stage – and I remind the House that this was in January of this year – he explained that it was the policy of this Government to continue with the policy of the previous Administration not to require the approval of the DPC!

He then meekly offered that Government projects would, for the time being, be submitted to the Development and Planning Commission for an opinion, for guidance and he stopped short of saying that they would actually be heeding or acting in accordance with the information and the guidance received from the DPC.

When I asked the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister whether he expected that the Government would be submitting projects for approval to the DPC within this term of office, the answer, Mr Speaker, was, and I quote: 'It's too early to tell...' – although today the Deputy Chief Minister has told us that apparently it will happen during this term. But 'too early to tell', Mr Speaker.

This Government came to office on the basis of a very colourful manifesto, replete with commitment after commitment to deliver the sublime and then a generous helping of the ridiculous, to wit the 'guaranteed' job of the future jokes strategy and the rooftop gardens atop Government rental housing. Absurd though it may seem, however, the Hon. the Chief Minister, on a number of occasions has told this House that he is looking forward to delivering every last one of those commitments in that manifesto despite, Mr Speaker, the open door given to him by this party's hon. and learned Leader, when he asserted in this House that manifestos are a statement of a party's intent and a list of those projects which it would like to deliver within the term of office.

The Chief Minister, unable to contemplate, far less assimilate, the remotest possibility that anything the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition says may actually be a positive influence on his own judgment, insists that every last one of the manifesto commitments will be delivered – indeed, he looks forward to it. Despite the open door through which he could have stepped to ignore those most ridiculous of commitments in the manifesto, Gibraltar's Chief Minister in 2012 cannot fathom the possibility of not doing that.

The approach of his Deputy however, seems to be, by implication, somewhat at odds, or it was until today, with this 'delivery of manifesto commitments at all costs', but it remains to be seen whether in fact Government projects will, during the term, be submitted to the DPC.

The Deputy Chief Minister's inability or refusal to commit to a timeline for the delivery of the manifesto commitment on putting Government projects through the planning process within the term, flies in the face of what is, in my opinion, the brash and unrelenting focus on delivering manifesto commitments within the four-year term of office. This would be one of those simple, stroke-of-a-pen delivery type commitments, yet the Government is hesitant.

The Government has reminded this House in recent weeks and months, as it will no doubt do time and time again, whenever it is convenient to them, that the Opposition is not here to mark or keep time on the delivery of the Government's manifesto. What we are here to do, however inconvenient for them, (Interjections) is to pick them up on political dishonesty and lack of integrity, a job they are working hard to make easy for us to do.

The Government's commitment to put all its projects through the DPC is unrealistic. Those on this side of the House, with the benefit of a long spell in Government, have known this from the very moment that commitment was first heard. The Government itself probably now understands this too, though they will never admit it. They now understand that that kind of commitment involves relinquishing control and ultimate responsibility for the delivery of essential projects to other unelected and unaccountable individuals who, and community associations which, are not bound by a responsibility and mandate to serve the interests of the local community at large.

Governments need to build power stations, airports, hospitals. Governments are responsible to the communities they serve for delivering solutions and services to meet demand. Unchecked, uncontrolled and unhindered consultation and gifted influence results in one thing: paralysis by analysis.

And talking of paralysis by analysis, Mr Speaker, I will be dealing with the power station a little later.

The Deputy Chief Minister refers to the new Members of Parliament and the fact that we were not here before 'the worst day.' And that may be the case, but that does not affect our understanding of what went on in this House before our time. The previous Administration accepted its responsibility of Government. It accepted its responsibility as the elected Government of the community, for the community, tasked with taking decisions which might, on occasion, have been difficult, or even unpopular, but decisions which in the wider general interest of the community needed to be taken, whatever the consequences.

The GSD was unequivocal. The situation in which the Government find themselves today is that, having had the experience of six months in Government, they realise that, during the Election, they have at once offered openness and transparency, the involvement of a new list of stakeholders in all matters planning in relation to Government projects, as well as the most demanding manifesto of capital and infrastructure commitments of recent times. They realise, Mr Speaker, that these two gifts are at odds with each other, like we have always said they were!

They have offered a park in the centre of town and twice the number of free parking spaces that are available today. They have promised to run every policy through an environmental filter, but they have also promised everyone twice the number of car parking spaces – free car parking spaces – in the centre of town. They have promised to build and build, notwithstanding the fact that they also told the electorate that we were allegedly broke, Mr Speaker – but never mind, because the public will be able to voice its concerns, raise its objections and block Government projects which it does not like, won't it? Fat chance, Mr Speaker!

The Government's realisation that it will be impossible to satisfy all stakeholders relevant in all and any of their initiatives all the time, that their 'all things to all men' style of politics will not last indefinitely, and that at some point, they are going to have to disappoint one or other sectors of the electorate, is dawning on them and it shows, Mr Speaker.

I trust that a couple of examples might help make the point. Perhaps the starkest and most ridiculous example of this understanding, and the assumption by the Government of its responsibilities as such, comes in the shape of the debacle that is their destruction of the World War II blast wall at Grand Battery.

In the June session of Parliament, I asked the Government when the World War II blast wall at that location had been demolished and the Hon. Minister for Culture and Heritage told us that it had been demolished on 21st May 2012. I, along with other Members of the Opposition on this side of the House, was stunned to hear confirmation, and frankly I could scarcely believe my luck, that the wall had been demolished before the project had been discussed in an open meeting of the DPC, as set out in the agenda for the meeting of the 24th May, three days after its demolition! It would be funny, if it were not so worrying, Mr Speaker.

They had originally said when taking office that they would not be submitting Government projects to the full planning process, but instead, seeking information and guidance from the DPC. In what can only be described as a political blunder, to which they will never admit, the matter of the demolition of the blast wall at Grand Battery somehow made it onto the agenda for the open meeting, even though the approval had already been granted by round-robin, behind closed doors, and the fact that the wall had already been demolished days before the meeting. My stars must have well and truly aligned that day, Mr Speaker, because the Hon. Minister for Culture rose, time and again, repeating this fact over and over, as if it was reinforcing his argument! If the Government had the sincerity and integrity to at least acknowledge that the listing of the wall and its demolition in the agenda of the open meeting was a mistake and should not have happened in the first place, then at least, Mr Speaker, we on this side of the House would be satisfied that they were at least being consistent in respect of one of their policies – namely that of not putting Government projects through the planning process during this term, just like we did. We would, of course, support that policy, despite the fact that they themselves were very critical of a similar position when we were in Government.

And, Mr Speaker, it is not just in instances where they have to earn their salaries and take their Government responsibility seriously that we will see the betrayal of the people in the context of openness and transparency. The leopard's spots remain unchanged and the Government of the day has already been unable to resist the temptation to wield the power it yearned for, for such a very long time.

The first and practically immediate waving of the magic wand came in respect of the banner erected at Convent Place – and not upon the offices of the Hon. the Chief Minister I might add – the banner erected in celebration of the Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee, shortly after the GSLP's win at the polls. The DPC's Minor Works Committee which, conveniently for the Government, sits behind closed doors and passes their work on to the full DPC in open meetings for rubber stamping, granted permission for the banner, for reasons undisclosed, on the basis that it was a 'minor works' project. This, Mr Speaker, despite the fact that the DPC had denied permission for a similar, if not identical, banner in a meeting before the 8th December.

What a coincidence then, Mr Speaker that following the Election and in tandem with the rumours that the Chief Minister had assured the applicant that the planning permission would be granted in short order, the DPC had a change of heart and was perfectly satisfied with its erection. (Interjection)

Another example? Well, Mr Speaker, try as I may, I have been unable to find any mention of an application being heard or discussed in the open meetings of the DPC since 9th December, on the website where the agenda and the minutes are published, for the enclosure of part of Eastern Beach by a local bar for its own commercial use. What I can say is that the previous Government had denied an application made by the owners of the establishment, on the basis that that part of the beach now annexed would give the establishment an unfair advantage, in the context of increasing capacity at no cost but, primarily because the beach is a public amenity which was not, and could not, be leased by the Government. (Interjection) Despite that, and despite the openness agenda, the establishment has now – certainly at least until the end of this last weekend – taken over and enclosed that part of the beach which it has either chosen to enclose or has, ostensibly, Mr Speaker, been given permission to enclose.

Now, Mr Speaker, the party at fault here might not be the business owner, not if the Government has given it permission and, Mr Speaker, in 1996 such an arbitrary grant of permission would have hardly been surprising. The problem for the Government, Mr Speaker, is that they have made a whole lot of noise about their transparency and people are now looking for instances of failure of that policy to hold them to account.

The openness and transparency agenda of the 20th century GSLP Government can be summarised thus: have more meetings in public and talk about it lots, but when it comes to decisions that matter, the system will take care of itself. Because is it not the case, Mr Speaker, that the source of most public strife is in the detail? Is it not the case that it is the everyday, 'minor' work type decisions, now taken behind closed doors, which will ultimately add up to form the basis of the case against this Government's continued rule beyond 2015? The case against nepotism, the helping hand, the leg up – that will be their downfall.

And, at the other end of the scale, the main events, the big projects, where millions are spent and manifesto commitments for the masses are delivered, the Government projects, Mr Speaker: these have been dispensed with by the current Government with a simple refusal to abide by manifesto commitment – or at least to commit to a specific time limit.

They told the electorate that these would go through planning and now, surprise, surprise, they will not for the foreseeable future. Everything in between the 'minor' projects and the Government projects on the other side of the spectrum, that is what will be put to public scrutiny, but only for as long as it is convenient, Mr Speaker.

They may protest all they like, but we know, as does a growing number of concerned individuals coming to speak to us practically on a daily basis, that cronyism is alive and well. What is different today from the situation in 1996 is that the people will not stand for it. They will not tolerate the deception and, importantly, they will not be fooled and neither will we, Mr Speaker.

I now turn my attention to the environment portfolio and will now spend some time dealing with the Government commitments in that regard and, very specifically, in relation to their environmental filter, the much vaunted Commonwealth Park, the environmental concerns stemming from Traffic and Transport, pollution and the management of Gibraltar's wildlife. I will also be dedicating some time to the power station and alternative energy.

In a very general sense, Mr Speaker, I wonder whether the Hon. Minister for the Environment and those sat on that side of the House genuinely think that all their talk of an environmental filter for all their policies really does act like some kind of cloaking device, one that hides the real GSLP Government behind it. To wit, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister was delivering the speech talking about double-sided printing as a Government policy from a single-sided print of his speech.

Do they really think that by just talking about environmental this and environmental that, setting up talking shops, and that by doing this they are going to persuade the electorate that they, as a party, are fully behind the green movement? The party which originally left office in 1996, without so much as a Department for the Environment now wants us to believe that, because they have an environmentalist in their ranks and the now Chief Minister tried to make everything he could politically of the previous Administration's unprecedented success in the management of Gibraltar's environment, they are now the Gibraltar chapter of the Green Party?

The Minister has talked about all the work, or at least all the talk that has been going on in Government about the environmental filter. He mentioned the disposal of waste electronic and electric goods – something that was already happening during the GSD Administration. He mentioned the use of LEDs and the facilitation of small scale alternative energy generation and his resurrection of the Litter Committee. Well, Mr Speaker, small scale alternative energy production was something that the GSD Administration had committed to focus on in its manifesto of 2011, as was the use of LED lighting, a technology which only recently is becoming truly affordable.

As far as the Litter Committee is concerned, I have no doubt that the GSLP will clean up, but I look forward to hearing what solutions they come up with in relation to these particular issues.

It is interesting too, Mr Speaker, that the Minister talks about the practical application of the environmental filter. The presence in the Government's ranks of the Minister for the Environment himself, in my view, does not represent a positive development in the story of Gibraltar generally and in the wider context, despite his undoubted experience and qualifications in science.

I say this, Mr Speaker, not because of any animosity towards the man, but genuinely because I do not believe that Gibraltar's environmental concerns and issues represent a microcosm of Gibraltar's wider, more general interest, despite the importance which no doubt needs to be given to the same. I do believe, however, that too sharp a focus on those particular issues may actually be to the detriment of Gibraltar's long-term economic and political well-being – namely, its prosperity, security and stability in a local and international sphere.

Moving to talk for a moment about the crown jewel in the GSLP's manifesto, the Commonwealth Park, I think it is important, Mr Speaker, that I highlight a number of observations which serve to illustrate what to my mind, and the mind of many others in the community, is quickly developing into a number of political themes which look set to define this Government's brief, one can hope, tenure in Government. At least they have a new leader –

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Did you say 'ten year'?

Hon. S M Figueras: Oh no, you are committed to eight years!

A Member: Eight years.

Hon. S M Figueras: The Hon. the Chief Minister confirmed in this House in the last few months that, in relation to the Commonwealth Park, a park which they committed to build, subject to a geotechnical survey – the devil is, Mr Speaker, as always, in the detail – there had not been a geotechnical survey of the area. Contrary to saying that this was due imminently, he told us that other proposals had been received, apparently, from third parties for the car-parking aspect of the project. Why would he do the survey, if other more realistic proposals had already been made to the Government?

Does he really think that anyone other than his own fervent supporters actually believes him when he says that the original manifesto commitment of the Commonwealth Park was ever intended to be delivered in the format in which they originally sold it to the electorate? (A Member: hear, hear.) The truth, Mr Speaker, although he will never acknowledge it, is that he knew, as well as the Minister for the Environment, that a park with two floors of parking sunk beneath it in that location would have left little change from £40 million or even £50 million. The Government are fooling no-one.

When they announce the alternative venue for the more than 700 parking spaces that they are committed to provide, they will not be fooling anyone else into believing that they ever intended to build that project in the guise originally promised. When the time comes, Mr Speaker, for the Government to reveal their other proposals for the Commonwealth Park, they will have also revealed the reality behind this particular commitment, which is not going to be same as that which they proposed.

Mr Speaker, there is no doubt in my mind that the many right-thinking, moderate and genuinely interested individuals who are listening in or reading about this in the media in the coming days will probably be wondering why on earth any political party would commit itself to a project of this kind in the shape originally offered and then promptly renege on it when taking office. Perhaps, Mr Speaker, I will have a go at illuminating those individuals who, whether they voted for us or for the third party, together represent the majority of Gibraltarians.

In order to satisfy their eco-friendly supporters, Mr Speaker, a park in the centre of town was indispensable, as well as an attractive addition to the manifesto, which had the added benefit of bringing many more pictures into its pages and added a green hue to the already very colourful document. Including the park in the manifesto and effectively eradicating the car parking in town, however, was not going to cut it with the approximately 350 car users who depended and depend on the parking spaces available there today, on a daily basis. I can see it now, Mr Speaker: the meeting where they decided that they would just throw in a picture of, you guessed it, a 4x4 into the manifesto, entering the underground car park to allay the fears of those who may have been concerned about where they will park. The electorate would then see that they were thinking of everything.

Even the environmentalist Minister for the Environment rose in this very House to defend the idea of doubling the number of car parking spaces in the centre of town, saying – surely with tongue lodged firmly in cheek, every ounce of his body cringing under the weight of the hypocrisy he was about to articulate – that it would not necessarily have a net negative effect on the environment in Gibraltar. Surely he cannot have been serious! He cannot have stood there thinking, ‘Yes, yes, that must be right.’

Doubling the car parking space available in the centre of town is only going to encourage twice the number – or more – of people who get in their cars in the morning to go to work. Has he woken up in Gibraltar for the first time this morning? Does he have any idea of the problems we have historically had with the school run and the drive to work? Does he care? Or is this now the exclusive remit of the Minister for Traffic, Paul Balban? So much for the environmental filter!

The planning meeting at Watergardens will have continued, Mr Speaker: ‘Never mind the fact that with the presence of the city walls and the water table in that location, that this is going to be astronomically expensive. We’ll just put the parking somewhere else, if we get in and we’ll worry about that if we do.’ ‘If we do get in, we’ll just get someone else to build it for us, or not under the park, but somewhere close by or we’ll build it ourselves – but it’s probably best if we don’t say that right now because we don’t want to alienate any votes during this election process. Besides, don’t the pictures just look fabulous?’

Mr Speaker, it comes as no surprise to me, given that they had a full 16 years of experience in Opposition – though I have to say at this juncture, and this was not in the speech, I am quite surprised by the Hon. the Minister for the Environment’s Opposition-style speech – that despite not having been in Opposition for 16 years, they are struggling to get out of that mode. Hopefully, we’ll soon have them sitting, where they feel most comfortable. (Laughter)

The days when they could be all things to all men with impunity are over. The days when, over coffee or lunch, they could promise Paul that they would take whatever he wanted from Peter and then, at dinner, tell Peter what a scoundrel Paul was and how they would be only too happy to take back from Paul to give it back, are gone. Those days are over and they know it. They are paralysed by the realisation, like rabbits caught in the headlights – well, all 750 pairs in the Commonwealth Park – hesitant to act on anything, because they know that for the first time in a very long time they are going to have to take responsibility, choose a path and stick to it and, by implication they are going to have to let someone down. They do not like the fact that they have become ‘big bad Government’.

The park, as a signature commitment, will no doubt go ahead, but the parking will likely not be beneath it. The eco-lobby will be happy about the breath of fresh air in the centre of town, what with the lakes and pools and whatnot, but can they genuinely be happy about the fact that the Government will be providing 750 parking spaces, where there were once 300? Can the eco-lobby genuinely be happy about the Government encouraging car use, contrary to all that has been said over the years about traffic and the school/office run? How much is this all going to cost anyway?

In the same way as opening up Nuffield Pool to the public, when it is available, which is another manifesto commitment, this will be a service/amenity that will attract a recurring cost, surely maintaining the parking and the park itself is also going to incur one! Were we not broke, Mr Speaker, or have I missed something?

These public services all cost money. They always have done and always will do. The GSLP told the electorate, before, during and after the Election, that the public finances were in dire straits. Surely they were not just lying, calculating or saying whatever it took to take back power at all costs, were they?

The way they go on about the cost of this and the cost of that, you would have thought they would have come up with a very different strategy for the Commonwealth Park. If they had genuinely believed their own hype about the public finances and they were genuinely pursuing an environmentally friendly agenda, what they should have done is to create an artist's impression of a bare-bones, multi-storey car park for 750 cars in the same location, committing to charging, at the very least, a nominal fee to contribute to its upkeep.

That, Mr Speaker, would have been a worthwhile project, designed to tackle parking issues. That, Mr Speaker, would cost a fraction of their Commonwealth Park. That, Mr Speaker, might help to put people off using their cars and on to buses, bicycles and their own two feet and that, Mr Speaker, would be the slightly more environmentally friendly solution as, surely, there would be lots of trees built into it, with the Hon. Minister running the show. That, Mr Speaker, would have been the politically honest and right thing to do – but alas, Mr Speaker, that would not have been as colourful. That would not have been as exciting, and that would certainly not have been as big a draw for the crowds at Election time as their Commonwealth Park was.

Perhaps it is true that a change is what the community needed, to realise the true value of what we had. In the context of traffic and transport, and whilst I do not want to take up too much time and rain on my hon. and learned friend's parade, when he addresses you on these issues, I feel it is important to deal with those issues in the environmental context.

This is another issue, Mr Speaker, where the reality of the new Government's approach to the environment manifests itself as something very distinct and very different to what they would like us to believe it is. In addition to so many other issues with an intrinsic 'green' streak, such as alternative energy, the power station, emissions and pollution, transport is one of those areas where the environment and green thinking inevitably come into play.

The Government, for all its talk about the environment, is about little more than just talk. Their transport policy, as set out in their manifesto, is limited to, in essence, a damning generalisation that traffic and gridlock is at its worst ever, particularly after the last four-year term of the Social Democrats. Well, Mr Speaker, that is just utterly ridiculous. This analysis is wrong, inaccurate, flawed and intended to deceive the electorate into believing that, like with the public finances, they had inherited a chaotic state of affairs, which they will now have to resolve, probably at the expense of other, more fanciful, Government manifesto commitments.

This is another example of the new Government setting out to rubbish the previous Administration's unprecedented investment and success in the delivery of traffic and transport solutions, in order to give themselves a fighting chance of persuading the public that the job was not already done.

It further proof were needed that this is the strategy, Mr Speaker, they just were not able to come up with any ideas of their own in that regard. All they could say was, 'We will come up with a comprehensive traffic plan' – more talk, more noise, no action. Well, Mr Speaker they need not have bothered, because we already had a traffic plan and we had already done the lion's share of the work for them.

We had already introduced environmentally friendly measures to promote the use of alternative energy, cleaner and environmentally friendly transport. We had already halved the duty payable on hybrid vehicles, and eradicated it in respect of electric vehicles. Today, the Hon. the Chief Minister has, and I welcome it, announced an enhancement to that initiative, but we had already introduced further tax incentives for the use of alternative energy vehicles. We had already introduced the free bus service, with a system that was not based on residence but on membership.

We had already introduced the urban bicycle rental scheme which, despite the Government's best efforts or otherwise, continues to be a success. (Laughter and interjections) (Several Members: Hear, hear.) Thank you!

We had abolished duty payable on bicycles to promote cycling, not just because it is good for the environment, but because it was good for traffic and it was good for health. We see an increasing number of cyclists on our roads today – I am one of them. We had recognised that increase in popularity and we were committed to taking steps to make it even easier to cycle in Gibraltar. We were committed to maximising opportunities on our roads for bicycle lanes and we were going to expand the provision of bicycle parking, as well as rolling out the urban bicycle rental system to the rest of Gibraltar, to maximise its potential for a positive impact on our community.

We were committed to giving cycling the best opportunity of becoming an alternative means of transport for Gibraltarians than it had ever been before. We were committed to cycling and to working with non-governmental organisations to help bring about the paradigm shift, which was mentioned so much during that session. We were committed to the long haul approach to bringing about this change, because we understood that this was not something that was going to happen overnight and it was certainly not going to happen simply because we had spent just £324,000 on the first few months of the urban bicycle rental scheme.

In stark contrast, Gibraltar's new Minister of Transport took all of five months to declare openly in this House that he believed cycling in Gibraltar is dangerous!

The Budget measures in relation to the environment are really quite limited, Mr Speaker. As I have already mentioned, the Hon. the Chief Minister has established a flat rate of 2% for the importation of hybrid vehicles and some other incentive in relation to eco-friendly paper, both of which are of course welcome.

He then counters it with a healthy dose of anti-environmentalism, by announcing a measure to attract – which again, Mr Speaker, is welcome – the world's largest and thirstiest superyachts to Gibraltar! Well Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister seems to be far more balanced about the environment than other more extremist angles in the Cabinet and, for that, I am congratulating him because I am encouraged by it.

We had already undertaken extensive planting in Gibraltar and were committed to continuing to do so, including tree-lined avenues, where practicable. If there is one thing the Hon. the Minister for the Environment has certainly done since taking power as the green-fingered environmentalist Minister for the Environment – I have resisted calling him a tree-hugger – is to plant or direct the planting of many trees.

A Member: That's a compliment!

Hon. S M Figueras: Alas, Mr Speaker, there is more shade, which is welcome, but I would be interested to hear the views of hay fever sufferers in Gibraltar or indeed, to enquire in future sessions of Parliament about the instances of broken noses from unsuspecting runners running into trees where there were once none.

But in fact, Mr Speaker, the Minister even before he held office, was talking about trees. I remember his intervention from the audience of a debate in the run-up to the Election campaign in terms of 'That's what they want you to believe', when I was telling those present that the trees from the old Engineer's Lane car park had been removed professionally and would be replanted elsewhere. Upon taking office, the Minister, in this House, had to concede very early on that those trees had, in fact, been taken care of and were and, I believe, still are doing quite well.

As green-fingered and close to the environmental non-governmental organisations as he and his party were before the Election, I was surprised to note the lack of interesting ideas in their manifesto in relation to transport. There was nothing about cycling and much less about GibiBikes. There was nothing about carpooling and little about hybrid vehicles.

In fact, Mr Speaker, there was nothing in there about policies targeting the reduction in use of cars, generally, and the use of the official cars specifically, in respect of which the Minister for the Environment is one of the very worst offenders in the Government. (Several Members: Ooh!) One could argue that he is very busy, what with running the Environment and Health portfolios, as well as at least on one occasion running the country as Acting Chief Minister – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. S M Figueras: It is all very well and good, Mr Speaker, to talk about changing the kind of car the Government uses, but using it less might also have a positive impact on the environment.

It strikes me as odd, Mr Speaker that, when in the happy days of GSLP Opposition, the Members now on that side of the House used to complain about how long things took to get done. Why is it then taking the Government so long to acquire hybrid vehicles? Surely, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister could have, in the last six months, directed and completed the procurement of at least one hybrid vehicle for himself and maybe another one for the Hon. Minister, because the Hon. the Chief Minister certainly had no issue with spending £16,000 at the drop of a ballot paper to take that first step towards e-government – the one he spoke of this morning – to arm himself and those around him with iPads and other devices, without going out to tender. Why then all this delay and mystery in the acquisition of a single hybrid vehicle from any one of the dealers in Gibraltar, with the relevant products in their lineup, who would surely fall over themselves to see Gibraltar's Chief Minister showing off their latest wares? Even the international press thought he had replaced his car within days of being elected! The Jaguar can't be half bad, can it, Mr Speaker?

And then there are the buses. They are the ones who referred to the buses as ageing, (Interjection) they are the ones who had plenty of time to formulate a strategy but, surprise surprise, when asked in this House what they intended to do to replace them, now that they were in power, they were – you guessed it – formulating a strategy!

I now turn my attention to the natural environment and, specifically the issue of pollution at our beaches, and, in particular Western Beach. This is a very important issue, Mr Speaker.

1130 I recall how, in the throes of the Election campaign I nervously squared up to the Hon. Minister and whilst there were issues where I knew his experience and education would make for a challenging debate, there were a couple of issues where I expected that his reasonableness would have come through and on which we would have been able to agree, in a modern, more collaborative atmosphere. I was mistaken, Mr Speaker.

1135 I was mistaken, because in relation to Western Beach, the now Minister proclaimed that the pollution problems at the beach would be fixed by himself personally, if elected into power. I pressed him to determine whether he was certain of this and without pause, he confirmed that he was indeed so. At the first meeting of Parliament, following ‘the worst day’, I sought to elicit whether plans for the ‘invade, repair and retreat’ strategy were now in place. (Laughter) I was excited to learn of the daring antics our special forces – though I did not know we had them – would be up to in the weeks following, led by the Hon. Minister. I suspected that he would be unable to tell me, because to tell me would have been to give the game away, to lose the element of surprise – but I asked anyway, Mr Speaker.

1140 I was however disappointed to learn that the Minister, after a few short months in Government and by his own concession, understood, as we have known all along, that the issue with the pollution at Western Beach is one that was and continues, unfortunately, to be out of our hands, as a problem originating on the Spanish side of the border. He soon had to concede, Mr Speaker, that there was no plan for invasion, repair and retreat and that all he could do was, as we had done, to monitor and inform the community, just as we had done, of the situation at the beach on a regular and timely basis.

1145 I recall that the Minister also informed the House that he had passed the matter on to the EU legal team and we await eagerly developments in the area.

1150 The point is, Mr Speaker, that the Minister soon understood that there are some things he can change, things he can control, and many others he simply cannot.

1155 Which conveniently brings me on to the subject of the apes, the seagulls, the feral cats and the Barbary Partridge which, despite the fact that it may sound like the synopsis for a local version of Gerald Durrell’s My Family and other Animals, it is in fact a subject which has, in the short time since ‘the new Dawn’, taken up much time in this House.

1160 The macaques have, for a very long time been a source of frustration and concern for both this side of the House and Members opposite and indeed, when roles were reversed not that very long ago. In fact, the now Chief Minister himself spent a not insignificant amount of time both within and outside this House raising awareness of the plight of the apes, as well as his own politically motivated interpretation of the previous administration’s policy on the management of the macaques.

1165 When we were on that side of the House – well, I never would have been, but when this party was and the Social Democrats were in office – this party’s policy in relation to the management of the macaques was clear and unambiguous. This species engenders strong feelings in the community, both positive and negative, and the GSD’s policy in this regard was to manage the population by means of relocation, contraception, exportation and, only as a measure of last resort, the very limited culling of apes.

1170 The GSD ranked the health and safety and continued existence of the Barbary macaque highly, as a feature of our culture, our heritage and as part of a diverse tourist offering, one on which Gibraltar is reliant as one of the pillars of the economy. The GSD, however, put, whilst in Government – and continues today to put – the health and safety of the human population at the top of the list of priorities in the management of the apes, just as it should be.

1175 Some years back, this House saw heated exchanges between the now Chief Minister and the then Minister for the Environment when the Administration of the day took the action it considered necessary, in accordance with advice it received from the experts contracted then, as they still are now by today’s Government, to take decisive and necessary action as a measure of last resort. There was an eager use back then, Mr Speaker, by the Hon. Chief Minister of words like ‘extermination’, ‘decimation’, ‘genocide’ even, but this party stood firm by its policy.

1180 Despite the GSLP’s best efforts to scupper the then Government’s objectives by pursuing what they thought was the populist position in the face of eminent reasonableness and logic, the GSD Government succeeded in keeping the ape population in the region of 200.

1185 Still on the apes, Mr Speaker, this Government swung into office on the back of a stated policy of not culling, no matter what. The Government are not the only ones hanging about either. The apes have been up to their usual mischief – mischief which might be an endearing quality for animal lovers and non-governmental organisations sworn to protect them, but behaviour which, for many, represents a daily threat and imposition in the otherwise quiet, easy life, free from unwanted contact with animals that members of our community are entitled to and demand.

It is not right, Mr Speaker, that members of our community should fret and worry about doing the simple things like popping out to do the shopping, or that those fortunate enough to have gardens in their homes should be precluded from using them until dusk because, during the day, there are simply not enough sunbeds to go around.

1190 The Minister for the Environment appears to be amused by all this, as he jokingly, even proudly, in answer to questions in March of this year, said that the Barbary macaques might well be members of the GSLP because, since the Election, there have been remarkably few complaints. I suspect, however, Mr Speaker, that this has far less to do with core party support than with the fact that it had, until recently, been nigh on impossible to make the complaint in the first place.

1195 As we discussed in last month's meeting of the House, concerned individuals had reported their frustrations in relation to reporting incidents involving unwanted contact with wildlife, as well as complaints in relation to the seagulls, and, in response, the Minister and I discussed the establishment of a hotline for the reporting of complaints. He explained that what would actually be available was an environmental complaints section which then, by the time of the press release announcing it, had become 1200 an environmental feedback unit, which will operate on the back of an answerphone. The net effect of this is that the community, whenever an emergency is in progress, will essentially have to call the Police to manage it.

Perhaps, Mr Speaker, I put it a bit highly when I referred to this feedback unit as a hotline. I am disappointed, as many others in the community will be, that it is not even worthy of being called a luke-warm line. It is almost cold to the touch, and beginning to smell.

As if the Police did not have enough on their plates after the Minister's direction not to direct them to enforcement in respect of the Nature Protection Act, they are now also expected to chase after delinquent macaques – and do what exactly with them? Report them for process? They would have the International Primate Protection League all over them in a flash, wouldn't they, Mr Speaker? But no, no, Mr Speaker, surely the Minister for the Environment would not call the IPPL out on himself, would he? We certainly would not, because we are more interested in protecting the interests of Gibraltar as a community than we are in political capital and international headlines for local consumption.

The Minister himself has lived the difficulties in their management, Mr Speaker, from all his experience in GONHS. He has conceded that negotiations for their exportation takes time, and that management of these animals is complicated business. He tells us that the policy of the Government is based on the Barbary macaque management plan which they had been considering for a considerable time and which, in his view, will mean that they will not have to cull the apes.

I worry, Mr Speaker, though I sincerely hope to be proved wrong, that the strategy is both doomed to failure and, perhaps more worryingly, could lead to real human tragedy in the community in the coming years. This feels almost, Mr Speaker, like the start of an episode of Casualty.

I do not pretend to teach the hon. Member to suck eggs, as I am not one to pretend to know everything, but a local enthusiast of all things nature once suggested to me that, in the management of a nature reserve, the authority must be willing to take the most extreme action in the context of the interplay between the variety of species that take up residence within it. In the context of the Barbary Partridge, for example, which the Minister acknowledges as an iconic species in Gibraltar, the issue is that the population of that species is being decimated by the growing population of feral cats in the Upper Rock. When I asked him what plans were in place to deal with this issue, he said that there were none and that the Government was currently considering its options.

I was disappointed, Mr Speaker, as are those other concerned members of the community, who have expressed their worry for the well-being of the Barbary Partridge, and that a simple and definitive answer was not forthcoming. Could it be, Mr Speaker, that the Government, with its zealously defended 'no culling at all costs' policy in respect of the apes are paralysed to act in relation to any other species in Gibraltar? Well, Mr Speaker, if this is the case, then I can assure the Hon. Minister that the acceptance of culling as a measure of last resort by them would not be criticised by Members on this side of the House.
1235 No, Mr Speaker, it would be welcomed and commended by us as a sensible, open and inclusive of all options approach of a mature and sensible Government putting their responsibility to the community and not their own political well-being first.

And this, Mr Speaker, leads me conveniently on to deal with the power station and, I think appropriately, a discussion of alternative sources of energy for Gibraltar.

1240 As of 9th December 2011, work had begun on a new state-of-the-art power station, which all Members in this House understand and acknowledge Gibraltar needs, as it has done for some time now. The power station is one that was beset with difficulty, originally delayed by legal action, and then when that legal action was settled or concluded – however it was concluded – it is then a matter of record that the financial crisis, one that struck far and wide, meant that the finance that had been agreed was no longer there at the disposal of the Government of the day.

I cannot stress enough, as my learned and hon. Leader has, on many occasions and earlier today, the importance to this side of the House, along with the construction of the tunnel under the runway and the provision of badly needed office space, of the delivery of the power station without delay. It was with grave disappointment that we learnt in this House of the Government's cancellation of the project a couple of months following its election into office. Mr Speaker, I note the Government's statements on the issue and in particular the statement issued on 21st March this year, setting out the reasons why the project did not proceed and the matters which had been and were under review at the time. Importantly, I note that the Government was said to be consulting with the ESG and other concerned NGOs to deliver the best option for Gibraltar.

I know that the hon. Members on this side of the House are not alone when they express dissatisfaction and concern about the delays Gibraltar is experiencing in this field, particularly when set against the backdrop of the continuing and troublesome power outages that we have been experiencing in recent months. The ESG themselves have expressed their concern at the apparent lack of pace visible in the pursuit of a new, safe, reliable and environmentally friendlier solution to meet the community's power needs and I share their particular concerns in respect of the current and ageing network of power generating stations which, for some time, have been in dire need of decommissioning. I wish to impress anew upon the Hon. the Chief Minister and those other Ministers who form part of the working committee established by them, to make this a matter truly of the highest priority.

On the alternative energy front, I recognise the Government's position in respect of the integration of such new technologies with the power generation solution, whatever shape that might take, but I do have additional concerns in this regard which, despite my genuine wish to pursue a spirit of collaboration, understanding the importance of meeting European Community objectives in respect of alternative energy generation, despite that wish to assist I feel it would be remiss of me if I were not to articulate my concerns for the purposes of placing same on record.

Mr Speaker, again my concerns in this area stem, for the most part, from the presence of the Hon. Minister for the Environment on the Cabinet. I would happily concede being proved wrong in future, if such a thing were to happen in this regard. The Hon. Minister has been a feature in the local ornithology and natural history scene for a long time having achieved much of value for the community during that time, including the oversight of the re-discovery of the Alameda Gardens as a valuable amenity and an enhancement to the quality of life of some members of our community – that much is a given, Mr Speaker. Whilst his contribution is noted, so is his passionate and, at times, frankly worrying hard-headedness and his apparently single-minded focus on all things birds, plants and trees. I worry whether the hon. Member's passion for the plants, birds and trees will have the better of him when in office, as I am told it appeared it did, before he assumed the responsibility of office. It simply cannot be, Mr Speaker, that the mere suggestion of the installation of technologies designed to assist in the determination of the suitability of wind turbine technology in a local application should incense the hon. Member in a manner of which I have been informed anecdotally.

It cannot be right, Mr Speaker, that the potential impact – potential impact – that the presence of wind turbines in the local environment could have on birds, as an example, should be elevated to such an extent that the mere attempt at exploration of energy solutions we need today, for the benefit of our community, for the benefit of our children and our grandchildren, should invoke an overly defensive, even hostile reaction from the Minister.

Whilst I acknowledge that the issue of alternative energy generation should be considered holistically, in consultation with all stakeholders and considering all relevant issues, including the birds, the plants and the trees, no single environmental concern should, in my view, preclude the ultimate delivery of alternative energy solutions which Gibraltar needs today tomorrow and beyond. The Minister may fret and protest all he wants and complain that my suggested approach, one where the Government takes responsibility, presupposes an outcome, whereas their approach is or will be open and transparent. To this, I would say that the generation of alternative energy is and should be an overriding priority and that, as the alleged party of the environment, the Government should take responsibility and deal with it as such.

In conclusion, Mr Speaker, I believe that during the course of this speech, a number of themes will have become apparent: the first, that the GSLP's 'all things to all men' strategy whilst in Opposition is the only thing about them which is open and transparent, and now that they are in Government, that core policy has become untenable. Their true colours, the colours of their nepotistic, extreme and dangerous nationalist and insincere politics are shining through bright and clear.

Secondly, that they have taken it upon themselves to rubbish the GSD legacy because, if they do not do that, the benchmark for achievement will remain too high for them to even so much as come close to matching it.

Thirdly, that their so-called openness and transparency agenda, the veneer of honesty and integrity they have painted for themselves, is fading away to reveal the good old – or is it bad old? – GSLP of years gone by.

Finally, I believe that the GSLP Government can no longer, in the light of the Budget measures announced here today, continue to pretend that they inherited public finances in a state of ruin and that, therefore, they have shown themselves to have misled the electorate and threatened our community's international reputation for the sake of their own political interests. The electorate now know who they are dealing with in Government, and they do not like it, Mr Speaker – not one bit.

One thing is for sure: their honeymoon, Mr Speaker, is over.

1315 (Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in order to enable Members on this side of the House to wake up after that, could we recess for a cup of coffee?

1320 Mr Speaker: This House will recess for 10 minutes.

The House adjourned at 4.57 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.15 p.m.

1325

Debate continued

1330 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice.

1335 Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to present my first Budget speech for responsibilities that form part of my ministerial portfolio.

1340 By way of introduction, Mr Speaker, I would like to say that Gibraltar derives its success from the fact that it does extremely well in a number of specialist areas. The quality of Gibraltar's established professionals across many sectors of our community is second to none and it is something to be proud of. The Government will continue to work with Gibraltar's professionals to ensure that Gibraltar meets the highest standards of practice and regulation, whilst remaining proactive and receptive towards the demands of the business world.

1345 Even in this day and age, against a backdrop of unnerving financial uncertainty beyond our shores, I firmly believe that Gibraltar is set to move into a new era of social and economic prosperity, brought about by a new Government, one which aims to bring about positive change to Gibraltar, in a modern and socially just manner.

That said, Mr Speaker, I now wish to turn to the various areas of responsibility that form part of my ministerial portfolio.

1350 I will start with Education. Education is a top priority for the Government. The Estimates reflect that the amount required in the year ending 31st March 2013 for salaries, wages and expenses is £34,982,000. This can be compared with a forecast outturn for the year ended 31st March 2012 of £28,509,000. The increase this year is £6,473,000 in recurrent expenditure. This represents an increase in the budget of around 23%. This, by any account, is a substantial increase in the budget and confirms the Government's commitment to Education.

1355 Since elected into office, the Government has already made announcements in connection with the extension of mandatory grants for postgraduate students, additional funding for distance learning students, the provision of a dedicated maintenance team for schools and the commencement of a health and safety audit for all schools.

1360 With regard to mandatory scholarships, hon. Members will see a substantial increase in provision this year of £9,507,000 compared to a forecast outturn in 2011-12 of £5,676,000, an increase of almost £4 million.

Part of this is accounted for by the increase in tuition fees by UK universities which Government was committed to fund. However, there is clearly an increase in the requirement for funds under this head as a result of Government's policy decision to extend mandatory grants to postgraduate students.

1365 We have already seen the effect of this. There have been 70 applications this year, compared to 57 last year, for what was previously regarded as discretionary awards. Of these, 49 were considered to fall within the new category of entitlement to a mandatory scholarship in that the request was for a continuation of studies. The result is that these 49 students were entitled to a mandatory scholarship, instead of being considered for a discretionary award. This has resulted in a substantial reduction in those students requiring discretionary awards.

1370 In line with a number of specific commitments on the engagement of additional staff for schools, I have already announced that:

(1) 47 new teachers have been recruited and will start on 1st September 2012. The teacher complement has therefore increased from 333 to 380.

1375 (2) The complement of Classroom Aides will be increased, in effect, by 28, from 51 to 79. This represents a more than 50% increase in the complement. In addition, the Classroom Aide supply list has been re-populated, increasing it from 1 to 39. This will allow cover for temporary absences, as well as the use of supply Classroom Aides whenever specific temporary needs arise;

1380 (3) The complement of school secretaries will be increased from 9½ to 17. This will provide secretarial support for schools during the whole of the school day.

(4) An Executive Officer will be assigned to each of the secondary schools to support teachers in the administration of the schools' public examination system and for general clerical duties.

1385 All this represents an additional investment of around £2 million per year on staffing for schools. This increase is not just significant but, I believe, unprecedented. It shows our commitment to invest in people who will deliver the educational needs of our children. The Government considers that investing in our children's future in the manner that we are doing will allow Gibraltar to reap rewards in years to come.

The recruitment of the new teachers also allows us to eradicate the practice of so-called 'permanent supply', where teachers who were clearly required by our schools were kept for years on supply, without a formal contract of employment and without the rights and certainty that such a contract brings.

1390 In addition to the positions described above, the Government has created one additional post of Educational Psychologist, bringing the complement to two. This corrects an anomaly where a teacher has been carrying out that job for several years, without the post formally existing as part of the Department of Education complement.

Mr Speaker, there are many areas in which the Government is actively working on and making changes where necessary.

1395 Nurseries: the Government is committed to providing 'free optional nursery education' to eligible children. There are currently 365 – either morning or afternoon – places available. This year, 324 applications for places have been received. This means that there is a nursery place for every application, should parents wish to take up the offer they received.

1400 Special Educational Needs (SEN): as part of the Government's commitment to Special Educational Needs, there has already been an increase in resources with respect to Classroom Aides. 16 part-time posts were appointed as full-time Classroom Aides in April. As I have already said, the Classroom Aide supply list was re-populated in May. Financial provision has been made for an increase in the complement of permanent Classroom Aides which will take effect from the next academic year.

1405 This current academic year has seen an increase in the time allocated to the Behaviour Education Support Team (BEST) from a four-day week to a five-day week. There are currently three teachers plus the Assistant Education Adviser providing this support.

1410 In September 2013, these teaching posts will be made permanent, which will provide stability and greater continuity. This provision will be taken from the extra 47 teachers the Government is employing. This enhancement will allow their expertise to further develop and allow them to provide greater support to pupils with social, emotional and behavioural difficulties.

Extra support for pupils having language difficulties will be provided by a peripatetic teacher qualified in teaching English as a foreign language, who will be working in our schools on a 'needs-led' basis.

1415 An extension will be built to Notre Dame School, as I have already announced. Work on this has already started by GJBS with the aim of completing the extension by the start of the next academic year. The extension will provide three classrooms for the Learning Support Facility and two for Special Educational Needs. Government is also working on plans for an extension to St Martin's school.

In addition to the resources and equipment which schools resource from their capitation budget, Government has started a pilot study with the purchase of three iPads for St Martin's school.

1420 14 –19 Developments: Mr Speaker, education is not just about the pursuit of academic excellence; it is about preparing the citizens of tomorrow and maximising their potential, whatever this may be. As such, Government places a high value to a whole range of alternative pathways in education, both vocational and academic.

1425 This year has also seen the arrival of outreach teams from the British Science Museum and Cambridge University to our secondary schools. Students have been exposed to a whole range of 'hands-on' science and mathematics lessons, which they have thoroughly enjoyed.

Moreover, specifically, our students in years 12 and 13 were given a lecture on the famous Enigma machine used during World War II and were also shown the machine and how it encrypted.

1430 These initiatives, sponsored by the Kusuma Trust, serve to enrich lessons and to promote education as a life-long learning process.

The Department of Education will continue to work in partnership with external agencies. A good example of this is the work undertaken by teachers and the Gibraltar Association of Compliance Officers to offer financial courses to students in years 12 and 13, principally on Gibraltar's Financial Services.

Mr Speaker, this year, the Young Enterprise Scheme truly surpassed all expectations, difficult as this may seem. The winning team, 'Impulse' went on to compete in the National Championships in the UK. I am delighted to say that 'Impulse' won the award for the Best Product, which is a magnificent achievement for the company and for Gibraltar, particularly when we consider that more than 26,000 students with 2,000 companies participated. The hard work put in by our teachers, and indeed by the business men and women, who gave up of their time in order to expose young adults to the business world, should be commended. The experience for the students will prove invaluable and in the long run Gibraltar can only benefit.

Higher Education: Mr Speaker, my Advisory Team have now concluded talks at the three secondary institutions, explaining the workings of the scholarship system and, furthermore, clarifying how our commitment to higher education will work in practice. It must not be forgotten that the Government will meet in full the 200% increase in tuition fees that should come into effect for new students as from September 2012, resulting from changes introduced by the UK Government.

The Government will treat as mandatory all requests from students who have just completed their first degree and wish to pursue a higher degree or indeed doctoral studies. As such, funding for tuition fees and a maintenance grant will be afforded to these students.

Furthermore, the means-testing mechanism for those students enrolled in distance learning programmes has been removed, and these students will receive the full amount.

Mr Speaker, as I announced in my answer to a Parliamentary Question posed by the hon. Member opposite, Professor Daniella Tilbury is already well underway with a feasibility study commissioned by the Government for the development of a Gibraltar University. Different pathways are being explored. We are all tremendously excited at the prospect, given the potential for educational and economic development that could arise.

Continuing Professional Development: the Department of Education continues to be committed to providing opportunities for professional development for all staff. The Leadership and Management course for teachers, which is accredited by Durham University, has continued to be subscribed to. In September, a number – approximately 25 – will be moving onto Masters Level.

The Advisory Service has provided or facilitated in-service training in the following areas:

(1) Safeguarding Children Tier 1 Training – this is an on-going multi-agency commitment, which education forms part of. So far, 67 teachers have completed the Safeguarding (Tier 1) Training course. Tier 2 level training is a new initiative which commenced in Academic Year 2011-12. A small number of teachers have already attended this course.

(2) Dignified Care and Responsibility Training (Restraint Training) – which the Advisory Service has facilitated. This training enhances existing skills which support behaviour management practice in schools. Three schools have already availed themselves of the course and it is envisaged that more schools will do so in the next academic year.

(3) Gifted Children – an on-going course provided by the Advisory Service. The focus is on Literacy and Numeracy. To date, 12 schools have subscribed to the course.

(4) Technology and School Development Planning – provided by the Advisory Service. This programme of in-service training has furnished schools with a framework from which to improve and expand their use of technology in teaching and learning, as well as a mechanism for managing the purchase of hardware over a number of years.

(5) Making Good Teaching Outstanding – provided by the Advisory Service. As part of a rolling programme, the First School head teachers have already attended this course. It is envisaged that this could be available to the remaining sectors during the next academic year.

(6) First Aid Courses in schools – this is part of a rolling programme facilitated by the Advisory Service.

(7) British Sign Language Level 1 Course – facilitated by the Advisory Service in partnership with Gibraltar Hearing Impairment and Tinnitus Association (GHITA). A number of teachers have already attended this course. All schools have also prepared and delivered their own 'in house' in-service, which addresses individual schools priorities, which support school improvement.

Developing Technology in Schools: the Government recognises the importance of technology in the 21st century and is committed to increasing resources in schools, to support teaching and learning. April 2012 saw a substantial increase in the number of smart boards in school, with 30 being purchased and distributed to schools. During the next academic year, the Department of Education, in conjunction with the Government IT and Logistics Department will be looking at ways in which support for computer maintenance and repair can be enhanced using centralised Government resources – the technicians and expertise.

The feasibility of the incorporation of existing school computer systems into the Government Intranet is also being actively explored. It is expected that the eventual centralisation of all our school computer systems will be of great benefit educationally and administratively.

1495 The development of a Virtual Learning Environment, whilst still at an embryonic stage, is also being explored by the Advisory Service in conjunction with the IT and Logistics Department for eventual inclusion into the system. It is envisaged that this will provide a framework through which lessons and teachers' notes can be accessed on-line. This will be explored as a pilot scheme using A-level Mathematics, during the course of next academic year.

1500 Increase in Teaching Complement: the start of the 2012-13 academic year will see the existing complement of 333 teachers increase to 380. The 47 recruits have been chosen through interview and will primarily address subject needs in the Secondary Sector and optimum class numbers throughout the Service. The identification of specific needs for each school was achieved by an extensive consultation process with head teachers. The teacher increase will also regularise BEST which will be staffed by three teachers, with additional support from the Advisory Service, as well as make provision for a TEFL teacher, as I have already mentioned.

1505 Health and Safety in Schools: a Health and Safety Audit of schools commenced in January 2012, as part of the Government's commitment to health and safety and the health and safety policy established by the Department of Education. To date, six schools have been audited and it is envisaged that the remaining ones will have undergone this process before the end of the year. This process also includes an Asbestos Audit of all schools. The audit prioritises health and safety issues within the school environment and in doing so, informs the School Maintenance Programme.

1510 Minor Works and Refurbishment in Schools: a new system has been set up to carry out repairs in schools and all educational centres. A GJBS team, consisting of a foreman and eight craftsmen, have been contracted to dedicate themselves to effect repairs. This team will tackle all repairs reported to the Department of Education on a daily basis and it is envisaged that they will eliminate the historical backlog that has existed.

1515 With regard to this backlog, I am pleased to announce that, out of a total of 238 repair jobs which were pending in December 2011, some dating back as far as 2008, a total of 116 have already been tackled and completed and 50 have been cancelled for various reasons. This means that there are only 72 reports pending attention, which we are confident will be completed very soon.

1520 The extension at Westside School, which houses a dance studio and two kitchens and which was commenced during the financial year 2008-09, will be finally completed this year and will be ready for use in September 2012.

1525 A much needed extension will be constructed, as I have said, at Notre Dame School. Preliminary works have commenced and the extension is expected to be ready in time for the start of the academic year, i.e. September 2012. This extension will create a purpose-built Learning Support Facility, two Special Needs Units, and an additional classroom. The expansion of the school will assist in accommodating the growing population of the area, with an expected influx of MOD pupils, once St Christopher's completely closes down.

1530 An extension will also be built to St Martin's School. In addition, the windows of the western façade of St Anne's Middle School will be replaced.

1535 In the financial year ending 31st March 2012, the following works have been carried out. The works to three nursery playgrounds in need of special flooring have been completed. These nurseries are Notre Dame, St Bernard's and St Paul's. In the case of Notre Dame, the playground equipment has also been replaced. The materials used are the same ones as those being used in the public playgrounds around Gibraltar. The total cost has been £41,750.

1540 The perimeter fence of the open playing area at Westside has been replaced, at a cost of £32,960. Unauthorised persons were entering the school via the open playing area, either to cause damage or to use the open playing area as a football pitch. This new fence is of the 'un-climbable' design.

The windows of the eastern façade of St Anne's Middle School have now all been replaced. This has been a two-year programme. These works were necessary as the school was experiencing rainwater ingress via these windows. The cost of replacing them has been £188,305.

1545 One of the blocks of Bishop Fitzgerald Middle School was refurbished at a cost of £32,715.

St Joseph's Middle and First Schools have had the ground floors painted internally. The cost was £25,502.

Notre Dame School was painted internally and all windows were replaced. The cost of both works was £64,808.

1550 An extra floor was added to the Hebrew School. This extension consists of three classrooms, an office, storage space and toilets. The school was also refurbished internally, the cost of the refurbishment being £51,346.

The Gibraltar College, St Anne's Middle, St Bernard's First and St Paul's First Schools have had works done relating to water ingress. The bottom floor at Bleak House was also refurbished. The cost was £38,316.

1555 At Governor's Meadow First School, one of the blocks was refurbished and another one was treated internally for water ingress problems. The cost of both works was £11,784.

Mr Speaker, the Government has no doubt that the works which have been carried out, those which are in progress or are planned for this year, the changes – including funding for scholarships – which have been effected and the additional resources which are being allocated to Education, particularly on human resources, will result in an improved education system which will create a highly motivated professional workforce and an enhanced educational experience for all of our students. Our children are Gibraltar's future. Our investment in education is an investment which provides opportunities for all from which the whole of Gibraltar will benefit.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to other areas of my ministerial portfolio, starting with financial services.

Gibraltar is a financial services jurisdiction within Europe and is well placed to seize the opportunities offered by our status, reputation and tax regime. But there is work to do, and challenges ahead. Opportunities need to be seized and converted into real business. Things will not happen by themselves.

In addition to the established markets which remain important to Gibraltar, such as the United Kingdom and Switzerland, the Government intends to explore new emerging markets like the BRIC countries – Brazil, Russia, India, and China – which are enjoying massive economic growth. This is particularly relevant as Gibraltar can offer them an alternative entry point into the single European market.

The Government is very optimistic that, in the years ahead, Gibraltar will consolidate its position as a leading international finance centre within the EU. The financial sector is a key driver in the local economy, as well as one that stimulates other areas of business and generates thousands of jobs and important revenue.

As a business location, Gibraltar has a first rate professional infrastructure that is fully compliant with European standards of regulation. The numerous international trading entities and financial services companies, which already have a base in Gibraltar are testament to this. The financial sector accounts for 14% of total employment and contributes around 20% to GDP. Employment in this sector is mostly in banks and building societies and in activities auxiliary to financial intermediation.

Gibraltar is well regulated but not over-regulated, which ensures that business institutions based here can depend on being amongst reputable companies in a respected finance centre. International finance centres like Gibraltar are a vital part of the machinery that contributes towards the prosperity and smooth running of the global economy. Innovation, speed and flexibility are facets that allow a jurisdiction like Gibraltar to compete and distinguish itself against a backdrop of large states which are inherently slower and more complex to do business in.

Growth trends in financial services: Gibraltar's financial services centre continues to post stable growth in a number of areas, such as insurance, investment management and funds – notably in experienced investor funds, of which there are now approximately 90. It is becoming increasingly apparent that Gibraltar's future in financial services rests with high-end, high-value added private client business, insurance – both captive and retail – investment management and funds. As reported in the Financial Times on 11th May 2012 Gibraltar has set itself the objective of becoming a major player as an EU funds domicile and an EU centre for hedge funds management operations.

Insurance: the number of licensed insurance companies has grown to 65, with approximately a further 40 in licensed protected cell company structures. The critical mass that has been achieved in this sector now makes Gibraltar a mainstream insurance domicile within the European Union, along with long-term players in the markets. Robust but responsive regulation, combined with a strong professional infrastructure, has underpinned the momentum of the insurance sector.

Particularly noteworthy is the fact that Gibraltar was the first EU jurisdiction to offer passporting of insurance services throughout Europe in combination with a protected cell structure. The industry, in partnership with Government, is working hard on the transposition of the forthcoming Solvency II Directive.

Imported pensions: on 11th May 2012, the Government published a Bill to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 in respect of certain pension schemes imported into Gibraltar, generally known as Qualifying Recognised Overseas Pension Schemes (QROPS). The Bill, which had been eagerly awaited by the Gibraltar pensions industry, was passed by Parliament unanimously on 22nd June 2012 and was commenced on publication on 28th June 2012.

This is an important piece of legislation for finance centre practitioners involved in the administration of pension schemes. It opens up a line of business which has previously, in effect, been out of reach for Gibraltar. It will create opportunities for pension scheme administrators and will generate income from taxation for Gibraltar in respect of distributions from the imported pension schemes.

The legislation, which only applies to certain pension schemes established outside Gibraltar which are subsequently imported, imposes requirements, restrictions and taxation on QROPS. In particular, the legislation provides for a maximum commutation of 30% of the pension fund; a minimum retirement age of 55 – except in very specific circumstances relating to chronic ill health; taxation of 2.5% on distributions from the fund to beneficiaries of the imported pension scheme; and requirements to prevent an imported pension scheme from being transferred to another scheme outside Gibraltar which does not comply with the original requirements.

1620 The legislation also provides for retrospection to 6th April 2006, to enable the small number of pension schemes imported into Gibraltar since that date to comply with the requirements of other jurisdictions which allow exporting of pension funds. These amendments do not affect the rules governing those occupational pension schemes which have been or may be established in Gibraltar, where distributions are taxed at a zero rate.

1625 The Government is satisfied that the amendments made to the Income Tax Act provide a basis that is in consonance with the aims of those other jurisdictions which allow the exporting of pension funds. However, industry practitioners involved in the business of importing pension schemes to Gibraltar remain responsible for ensuring that their activities fall squarely within the rules applying in countries outside Gibraltar as regards pension transfers.

1630 The proposals which are reflected in these amendments were put to the Government shortly after it was elected in December 2011. The Government understands that the industry has been waiting for a considerable period for this legislation, having put the proposals previously to the GSD Administration.

1635 Whatever the reason may be for the failure by the previous Administration to implement these proposals, the swift actions of the Government suggest a responsive and listening disposition by the present Administration, which appears to have been sadly lacking prior to December 2011. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Applause)

Experienced investor funds (EIF): Mr Speaker, approximately 90 experienced investor funds have been established in Gibraltar since the Financial Services (Experienced Investor Funds) Regulations 2005 came into effect, with almost half of these having been structured as protected cell companies.

1640 Following a series of proposals submitted to this Government by the Gibraltar Funds & Investments Association (GFIA) designed to make this sector more efficient, the Government introduced new Financial Services (Experienced Investor Funds) Regulations in 2012. Improvements to the original 2005 Regulations included the opportunity for large funds to use reputable and substantial administrators based in jurisdictions of equivalent standing to Gibraltar.

1645 The new Regulations also allow funds to re-domicile to Gibraltar, yet continue to use their existing reputable administrator, representing a significant advantage for funds moving to the EU with, inter alia, the advent of the Alternative Investment Funds Managers Directive, due to be implemented by July 2013.

1650 The new Regulations enable experienced investor funds to choose to file for registration ten days before a scheme is established, with automatic registration at the end of that period if no objection is received from the regulator. This provides greater choice, certainty and flexibility for prospective new funds. The new Regulations also provide further disclosures which are required in the offering of documentation to help investors to make an informed decision prior to investing.

1655 Last month, Mr Speaker, I addressed a conference on funds in Monaco organised by GAIM (Global Alternative Investment Management). This is an important conference for the global funds industry with all major players represented. It proved to be the ideal opportunity to explain the opening up of the Gibraltar market as a result of changes introduced by the 2012 Regulations. This will encourage the use of Gibraltar by funds wishing to relocate to an EU territory to take advantage of the new EU Directive.

1660 We have received excellent feedback from delegates which gives us great cause for optimism for the expansion of the Gibraltar funds industry. As with the QROPS legislation, the introduction of the new EIF Regulations shows a Government which is predisposed to listen to and act on proposals from the industry which make sense and which are beneficial to Gibraltar. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1665 Private Clients: the Society of Trust and Estate Practitioners (STEP) has made a number of general representations to the Government for the introduction of new private client structures such as purpose trusts, the extension of the perpetuity period, private trust companies and foundations. The Government agrees in principle that the introduction of legislation on these areas is desirable and has asked STEP to produce detailed proposals, so that these can be evaluated and put into effect. Any such proposals will, naturally, have to comply with OECD transparency requirements and be exchange of information compliant.

1670 The Government is also giving consideration to the recommendations contained in the OECD Phase I Review relating to the elimination of share warrants to bearer and the extension to record-keeping requirements for companies, partnerships and trusts. A consultation paper on this has been issued and the Government is currently reviewing comments made with a view to introducing legislation which gives effect to the recommendations.

1675 International agreements and tax information exchange: Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's successful finance centre is based on the Government's conviction that it must remain squarely within the mainstream of international consensus. In line with its commitment to transparency and effective exchange of information, Gibraltar is on the G20-instigated OECD 'white list'. It has to date negotiated and signed 20 Tax Information Exchange Agreements with OECD/EU Member States and is currently negotiating or concluding similar agreements with several other countries. Of the 20 Agreements signed so far, 18 have entered into force. Gibraltar is waiting for reciprocal notification for entry into force from Belgium and South Africa.

Double Taxation Agreements (DTA): in keeping with its manifesto commitment to negotiate Double Taxation Agreements with selected jurisdictions, the Government has established a DTA Working Group to study the mechanics of entering into Double Taxation Agreements with relevant countries. Prior to the Group's first meeting on 15th May 2012 the Finance Centre Department had already undertaken preparatory work on this. The Government expects to be in a position to report progress in this area during the course of the current financial year.

International Monetary Fund (IMF) – Mr Speaker, the Government will continue to co-operate fully with the IMF and devise policies when appropriate, in order to ensure that any assessment undertaken by this body meets their assessment criteria. In consonance with the Government's commitment to respond positively to the various international initiatives, the Finance Centre Department continues to compile Gibraltar's portfolio investment position for submission to the IMF, as it has been doing since 2004. Work is also proceeding on the consolidation of anti-money laundering legislation. Progress on the EU driven fourth Anti-Money Laundering Directive is being monitored.

Mr Speaker, I would end my contribution on Financial Services by mentioning the complaint to the EU made by Spain to the corporate tax regime introduced by the Income Tax Act 2010. The Government considers that this is a politically motivated complaint which has no merit whatsoever. The Government therefore firmly believes that it will be able to successfully see off this challenge. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Mr Speaker, I now turn to Gaming.

The online gaming industry continues to contribute well to the local economy and Gibraltar continues to consolidate its place as one of the world's premier locations of choice for reputable industry leaders. Gibraltar is at the forefront of the global gaming industry and it is important that we keep up with developments and meet the major players, as well as officials from other jurisdictions.

Earlier this year, I attended the ICE Gaming Exhibition in London and the GiGSe Totally Gaming Conference in San Francisco. Whilst in the US, I also had several meetings with major players and influential people in Las Vegas, Nevada. I had the privilege of meeting the Governor of Nevada, Brian Sandoval, and the Chairman of the Nevada Gaming Control Board, Mark Liparelli.

We are aware that there are a number of Gibraltar operators interested in branching out by seeking a licence in Nevada. At the same time, various Nevada-based operators are interested in being licensed in Gibraltar. It is therefore in Gibraltar's interest that we have contact with and build a solid relationship with Nevada, as well as other countries and states, at both regulatory and political levels.

That said, Mr Speaker, the Government does not intend to vary the formula that has led to Gibraltar's success in online gaming. It is the Government's firm intention to continue with the policy of selective licensing, coupled with high standards of regulation. Gibraltar sets a high bar to entry and only the world's leading brands are considered for licence.

There are currently 22 remote gambling licensed operators established in Gibraltar and three more applications are currently being processed. They include some of the biggest names in the business. Only reputable companies with a realistic business plan and a proven track record in gaming are licensed.

Five new remote gambling operators were licensed during the course of the financial year 2011-12. As at 29th February 2012, the total number of employees in the gaming industry stood at 2,245. This figure is expected to increase modestly over the next few months, as soon as the three newcomers are established in Gibraltar.

The Government revenue from remote gaming tax for 2011-12 has increased to £10.7 million, from £10.4 million in 2010-11. Remote gaming tax represents 94.5% of the total gaming tax yield of £11.3 million for 2011-12 – the remaining £0.6 million gaming tax being in respect of domestic gaming.

PAYE from remote gambling operators totalled £16 million for the period 1st April 2011 to 31st March 2012, with an additional £0.3 million for domestic operators. Corporate tax from gambling operators for the same period was just over £18 million.

Mr Speaker, before I turn to other matters, it is important that I report to the House on an on-going issue which could have a very significant negative impact on Gibraltar's online gaming industry. Earlier this year, the UK Chancellor announced plans for a UK online gaming 'place of consumption' tax. He revealed that a consultation process was taking place, with the aim of imposing a 15% charge on gross profits based on the location of a player, rather than the location of the business that is providing the service. The UK Treasury has said that it aims to have the necessary arrangements in place by December 2014.

What this means is that the UK seeks to impose a 15% charge on every transaction which is made by a customer in the UK. This, of course, can only be interpreted to be a revenue-generating measure. This measure is also proposed to be accompanied by changes to the UK licensing regime for the sector which the taxation consultation paper indicates will proceed in tandem.

Mr Speaker, the Government does not believe that these measures are designed to ensure the proper protection of consumers in the UK. Gaming companies operating from Gibraltar and their customers are already protected by Gibraltar's strict licensing and supervision. Our regulation is second to none. It is as high, and in some respects higher, than in the UK. (A Member: Hear, hear.) The Government believes that the UK Government's position on this issue is not defensible and the Government has made its opposition to the proposed tax known to the UK Government.

The measure seeks to put UK operators in a position of distinct advantage to those operators based in other jurisdictions like Gibraltar. The Government also considers that the proposals offend basic principles of freedom to provide services and acts as a barrier to trade and entry to the UK markets. Leading figures of Gibraltar's gaming industry have also voiced their strong opposition to the UK proposals.

The Government is aware that there is a real prospect of an industry challenge to the UK Government's proposals, if they persist with the proposed licensing and taxation measures. The Government will naturally continue to support all efforts to defend Gibraltar's well established gaming industry. The Government considers the move by the UK Government to be counterproductive and, in the long run, more harmful to the UK than to the jurisdictions – such as Gibraltar, Isle of Man and Malta – at which the measures are aimed.

The Government has highlighted to the UK Government the serious economic threat that such a move could bring about for Gibraltar given the importance of key income streams this sector generates for our economy. The UK is an important market to some of the companies operating from Gibraltar. This will, therefore, remain a vital issue which needs to be very carefully monitored.

The Government will continue to engage with the UK Government at all levels and will make sure that the UK Government fully understands the harmful effect which its proposals would have on UK customers and on Gibraltar. The Government continues to be hopeful that the UK Government will consider all representations made and be persuaded to retract its proposals.

Mr Speaker, I turn to telecommunications.

Mr Speaker, telecommunications is a dynamic, ever-changing industry and an area which continues to move forward. Telecommunications plays an integral part in all our lives, whether as a business dependent on e-commerce, as an enabler when working in the global environment or for our daily communication needs.

Gibraltar's telecommunications infrastructure is of high quality and good repute. The bigger blue-chip online gaming companies acknowledge this. It is highly praised for the availability of electronic services, its quality of regulation and its resilience. Telecommunications providers continue to invest in fixed network infrastructure which, along with its increasingly diverse international routes, ensures a robust, reliable and quality service.

The continuous investment in essential telecoms and IT technologies is helping to make Gibraltar the attractive jurisdiction to which businesses can look to expand from or to relocate to.

Furthermore, the electronic communications industry was liberalised to primarily enhance investment and competition. The effects of liberalisation have successfully been felt in recent years, since new market entrants have stimulated the industry. As a result, the quality of services has improved and prices have been reduced. The Government views these developments as fundamental for continued growth and development and looks forward to a continuation of these trends.

In today's world, there are various ways a person can access the internet. A household may have a fixed internet connection; Wi-Fi access, if the household in question is covered by an accessible hotspot; WiMax which uses a wireless connection to access a broadband network; or internet access via a mobile network using a smartphone, tablet or Personal Digital Assistant (PDA). The definition used by the EU when calculating broadband penetration rates defines broadband lines as:

'those with a capacity equal or higher than 144 Kbits/s'.

All the various technologies mentioned above are largely covered by this definition and are available in Gibraltar. Broadband penetration per capita in Gibraltar currently stands at around 39.6%, which is higher than the EU average of 27.7%. It is estimated that close to 75% of local households now have broadband access, compared to some 55% of EU households.

I have responsibility for certain aspects of the work carried out by the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority (GRA) under the provisions of the Communications Act 2006. The GRA is an independent authority, which regulates the following areas for which I as the Minister for Communications have responsibility: (1) electronic communications, which includes broadcasting networks, radiocommunications and licensing of the radio spectrum; and (2) international co-ordination of satellite networks and licensing.

There are seven companies, Mr Speaker, operating under the regime established by the Communications Act 2006, providing a variety of fixed and mobile networks and services. Currently, there are two active mobile operators. A third is installing its network with the aim of starting to provide a service this year.

1805 The EU's new electronic communications package was implemented in Gibraltar with the publication on 26th May 2011 in the Gibraltar Gazette of five new regulations amending the current legislation on electronic communications. The amendments introduced in the Directives are primarily aimed at: simplifying some of the existing procedures; allowing transfer and leasing of individual rights to radio frequencies; the re-drafting of the provision on co-location of facilities; adjusting some of the definitions, 1810 taking into account technological progress; reinforcing provisions on end-users with disabilities; and strengthening of other consumer protection rules.

On 2nd April 2012, number portability between network and service providers for geographic, non-geographic and mobile telephone numbers was introduced. Number portability enables subscribers of publicly available telephone services and mobile services to change their service provider whilst keeping their existing telephone number.

1815 During the financial year 2011-12, the Authority published Public Consultation 02/11 in accordance with the market definition procedure outlined in the Framework Directive 2002/21/EC. Two wholesale markets were analysed in order to examine the state of competition. The wholesale markets that were reviewed were: wholesale call origination on the public telephone network provided at a fixed location; and wholesale call termination on individual public telephone networks provided at a fixed location.

1820 The Satellite Division of the GRA is responsible for representing Gibraltar at international meetings and ensuring that the satellite operators comply with the International Telecommunication Union's (ITU) Radio Regulations and all other international obligations. The Division liaises closely with the UK Administration to submit new filings to the ITU, but the main workload comes from processing the international correspondence for each individual satellite project.

1825 The GRA collects Administrative Charges from providers of electronic communications services and networks, radiocommunications licence fees and other reimbursements. During the 2011-12 financial year, the total collected was £1,479,253.85, which was paid into the Consolidated Fund. This compares to expenditure for all of the GRA's Divisions of £1,412,726.72.

1830 I now turn to the conversion to digital broadcasting, which was touched upon during the speech by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Mr Speaker as recently announced, the GRA has signed a contract, worth around £1 million, with Arqiva in the United Kingdom, to provide a digital broadcasting network in Gibraltar. The network will comprise two digital television multiplexes and two digital radio multiplexes.

On each television multiplex, Gibraltar will be able to transmit up to six distinct programmes. Similarly with digital radio, each multiplex allows for 4 distinct programmes. This means that a greater choice of programmes can be made available and that additional broadcasters could be licensed by the Government. The transmitters will be located at a single site on the Upper Rock, thus minimising the environmental impact of the antennae which will replace the two television broadcasting sites of Signal Hill and O'Hara's Battery.

1840 The digital broadcasting network will be operational by 31st December 2012, allowing Gibraltar to meet its international obligation to close down its analogue television transmissions by that date. Unlike the change-over to digital television, there are no current plans to convert FM radio to digital.

In August of this year, I will attend – and I hope to be accompanied by the Hon. Miss Samantha Sacramento – the Commonwealth e-Accessibility Summit. This is organised by the Commonwealth Telecommunications Organisation and is being held in London. The theme for the Summit this year is accessibility to electronic communications systems for persons with disabilities. As part of the Summit, we will be attending the opening ceremony of the Paralympic Games.

Mr Speaker, I turn to Justice.

I would start my contribution on Justice, Mr Speaker, by congratulating the Chief Justice, Anthony Dudley, who has recently been appointed a Bencher of Middle Temple, which happens to be my own Inn. The appointment is a magnificent personal achievement by the Chief Justice. (Applause) It is also a mark of the respect and high standing in which the Gibraltar judiciary is held.

Legislation: in accordance with our electoral commitments and policy of open Government, a number of important changes and innovations have and will be pursued during the course of this year.

1855 Command Papers: the introduction of Command Papers gives the public an opportunity to comment on new laws before the legislation is published as a Bill. A number of draft Bills have already been published in this manner, including draft Bills on Public Interest Disclosure and for a Smoke-Free Environment. More Command Papers will be published as and when drafts become available.

1860 Rehabilitation of Offenders: earlier this year, the Government announced the commencement of the provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, relating to the rehabilitation of offenders. The effect of these provisions is that in certain circumstances, once a conviction is spent, the person may not be asked, or, if asked, is not required to answer questions about that conviction. In this way, offenders are not saddled with their conviction all their lives and can consider themselves rehabilitated in respect of that conviction. This is particularly important where someone is seeking employment.

1865 Work in Progress: Mr Speaker, Government is at present working on several pieces of legislation. They include:

Companies Act – work is proceeding on the drafting of a new Companies Act. Around 150 sections have already been drafted. The Government expects to have a draft ready in the autumn. It will then consult on the draft with relevant stakeholders.

1870 Insolvency Act 2011 – the drafting of the various regulations required to be able to commence the Insolvency Act 2011 has not yet been completed. Once the regulations are fully drafted, these will be circulated for comment by practitioners. The Government is keen, Mr Speaker, to see the new legislation implemented as soon as possible.

1875 Crimes Act 2011 and Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 – as already announced, Mr Speaker, it is Government's intention to commence these Acts, subject to a number of amendments, on 1st October 2012. The provisions in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011 which relate to rehabilitation of offenders and those which permit the appearance in court by defendants by video link, which I will talk about later, have already been commenced.

1880 Government proposes to amend the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act by removing those provisions which allow inferences to be drawn from silence, either at interview or in court. When the Bill was brought to Parliament by the previous Administration, I argued, during the course of the debate on the Second Reading, that these provisions abolish the right to silence and thereby removed a fundamental right. We opposed these provisions at the time. Further amendments will be required to the disclosure requirements in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011, as a result of the repeal of the provisions which would abolish the right to silence.

1885 Mr Speaker, Part 12 of the Crimes Act contains provisions relating to sexual offences. Provisions in Part 12 impact on the age at which a person can lawfully consent to sexual intercourse. The effect of the statutory provisions is that the age of consent is 16. On 8th April 2011, the Supreme Court of Gibraltar made a ruling, following a reference to it by the then Chief Minister, which had the effect, for all practical purposes, of equalling the age of consent at 16 for both heterosexuals and homosexuals. In accordance with the Constitution, the ruling of the Supreme Court and the policy of this Government, the age of consent for both heterosexuals and homosexuals must be and must remain the same.

1890 On 11th April 2012, the Government issued a consultation paper on the age of consent, in line with a long-standing commitment by the GSLP/Liberals, both in Government and in Opposition, to consult the public on what age should be set by statute. The consultation has concluded and I am now today, in a position to give details of the consultation process and of Government's decision.

1895 A total of 12 submissions from individuals and representative bodies were received. Seven supported maintaining the current position of the age of consent at 16. Three supported raising the age of consent to 18. Two supported raising the age to 18, but allowing a near age exemption for sexual activity below this age. A respondent who indicated that the age of consent should be 16, should continue to be 16, had this to say:

1900 'To raise age would be a retrograde step. Young people more sexually aware today than ever before. The idea of an age differential in relations so as not to criminalise under-age relationships could be fraught with uncertainty. Maintaining age of consent at 16 would be in line with majority of EU countries.'

1905 Another respondent said:

'Would be unproductive to increase from 16, as that is well established and the same as the UK.'

1910 One of the respondents who supported raising the age of consent to 18 but with a near age exemption said:

1915 'Recommend sexual activity be criminalised when a participant is 14 or lower and that partners be no more than three years older than the other partner until age of consent is reached.'

1920 The Evangelical Alliance of Gibraltar also made representations. They stated that they believed that sexual intercourse is something which should only be practised between a man and a woman within the context of love and marriage. They nevertheless said that they understood that this was a minority view and that the legislature is tasked with protecting those who are vulnerable and may be taken advantage of. The Alliance suggested raising the age of consent to 18, but with a near age exemption.

A respondent who suggested that the age of consent should be raised to 18 said:

1925 'If a person is not deemed responsible enough to drink alcohol, drive a car, watch a movie rated for adults, nor get married until the age of 18 when you are then considered an adult, the age of consent should also be at least 18. After all, the responsibility of bringing a new life into the world is far more serious than any of the above.'

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Women's Association also supported raising the age of consent to 18. They attached to their submission a copy of a petition, said to contain close to 4,000 signatures. These signatures were not, Mr Speaker, however, collected for the purpose of the Government consultation on this issue. The petition was started in 2010 in connection with a case before the Supreme Court.

The petition states:

'We the undersigned agree with the Gibraltar Woman's Association that the age of consent should be equalised at 18.'

Mr Speaker, the question which was before the Supreme Court – which was the issue for which the petition was organised – was, of course, different to that in the public consultation. The Supreme Court considered whether Gibraltar law required the age of consent for both heterosexuals and homosexuals to be equal and, if so, what that age was. The public consultation was not concerned with equalisation of the age of consent – that had already occurred. The issue in the consultation was whether the law should continue to be that the age of consent is 16 or should be raised to a different age.

Mr Speaker, the Government has given serious consideration to all comments and representations made as well as to all issues raised in the public debate that has taken place in Gibraltar since 2010. We have also considered the position not just in the UK but also in other countries.

Having regard to all of that, we have taken the view that it would be wrong to change the law as it currently stands with equalisation having already occurred and the age of consent effectively set at 16. (A Member: Hear, hear.) In particular, we are not persuaded that the Government should criminalise behaviour which is currently lawful. In the circumstances, the Government does not intend to make amendments to the provisions in Part 12 of the Crimes Act 2011 whereby the age of consent is set by statute at 16.

CCTV: CCTV can be both an effective deterrent to crime and a useful tool to resolve crimes. The Government has installed CCTV cameras in different parts of Gibraltar at a cost of £138,946.36. They are located at: Casemates Hill; Casemates Square; to the east of Casemates; in the Market Place; covering Waterport Road in both directions; Cornwall's Parade; Castle Steps; Irish Town; and Governor's Street.

The Royal Gibraltar Police has produced CCTV Codes of Practice policy and an Evidential Digital Imaging policy which is Data Protection compliant. These policies include provisions on how the system will be used, how recorded material will be processed and handled and how evidence will be stored or used. A Public CCTV Guideline will also be produced before the system becomes operational.

Law Courts – the Law Courts building: Mr Speaker, the final phase of the building works for the new Gibraltar Law Courts was completed in May of this year. While the pressure on the court system has grown, the courts themselves have had to cope with a shortage of courtrooms and adequate facilities. The new building addresses this fundamental problem and provides new facilities for all court users and the Government of course acknowledges that this project was one which was started by the previous Administration.

Following completion of all the building works, there is of course the separate issue of the running, maintenance and upkeep of the building. The Government is currently considering the available options in this regard.

The Government is also strengthening, Mr Speaker, backroom resources and staffing. New computer systems are being installed. With regard to staffing, I can announce that an additional nine full-time staff members have been approved. The additional staff comprise: a legal adviser; three executive officers; one administrative officer; a personal secretary; a clerk/word processor; and two court ushers/paperkeepers. The recruitment process for these new posts has started, but it has not yet been completed. In addition, trainees will assist in clearing paperwork backlogs.

Mr Speaker, I can also announce today that the Government has approved the creation of a new judicial post – that of Master/Additional Stipendiary. I expect that this post will be filled during the course of the current financial year.

The new resources and staff which the Government is committing to the Court Service will allow the service to function effectively at a time of increased demands, both on the administrative and the judicial side. There have been delays in the administration of justice in the past, which the Government considered unacceptable. The Government's actions will help tackle these delays and will create a modern, properly resourced and efficient service.

Mr Speaker, one of the areas which has suffered from delays in the Supreme Court for a number of years is the dating of applications for hearings. In August 2011, for example, it could take as long as 42 weeks for an application to be dated. That sort of delay was unacceptable to the Government.

I am happy to report that since December 2011, there has been substantial progress in this area and most of the backlog has been cleared. Further, I can announce today that with effect as from this month, the Court Service will operate on the basis that basic applications will be given a hearing date within five working days of filing. (Applause) For more complex applications requiring more than a one-day hearing, dates will be set within 10 working days of filing. (Applause)

1990 The Government acknowledges that for a number of practical reasons, it may not always be possible to date applications within these set times. The Government has nevertheless set a target of 95% efficiency in dating applications within the required timeframes in any particular month. The result will be that the previous system will have been improved very significantly and both practitioners and the parties to applications will benefit from these changes. (Applause) (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1995 New software for the courts: the database systems in the Supreme Court and Magistrates' Court fall far below the requirements of a modern Court Service. They offer little automation of court processes and have limited functionality.

2000 A collaborative project is already underway between the courts, the RGP, the Attorney General's Chambers and the Government IT and Logistics Department to identify a computer system that could meet the wider requirements of the justice system. Such a system could also save time and cost by removing duplication of work within the justice system. The Court Service has requirements for its civil and family jurisdictions, as well as its criminal jurisdiction, and the needs of these areas of court business are also being considered.

2005 Launch of website access to Court Judgments: on 20th February 2012, the Government launched an extension to the Gibraltar Laws website so as to provide access to electronic copies of Supreme Court, Court of Appeal and Privy Council judgments. Online access to these judgments is an important tool for lawyers working in Gibraltar and others who may wish to research decisions of the Gibraltar courts. It is also important for practitioners and professionals outside Gibraltar, who will be able to keep abreast of developments in Gibraltar law and jurisprudence.

2010 The database is under development and will continue to have more judgments added to it. Supreme Court and Court of Appeal judgments between 1980 and 1987 inclusive will be added, as will judgments from 2010 onwards. This website is an important first step in working towards making information on the justice system accessible to all. I am working with the Judiciary and the Court Service with a view to adding more information on Gibraltar Supreme Court sentencing and Judicial Reviews in the future.

2015 Gibraltar Courts website: work on a new website for the Gibraltar Courts Service that will provide more information on the work of the courts has been completed. I can announce that the website will be available to the public as from tomorrow at www.gcs.gov.gi. The website provides a mission statement of the Gibraltar Courts Service and information on the courts, jury service and the justice system. Access to Court Judgments will be available also from this site.

2020 In addition, there will be a picture gallery with two sections: one with pictures of the recent visit to the Law Courts by Their Royal Highnesses the Earl and Countess of Wessex and the other with pictures of the restoration and extension of the Law Courts building.

2025 Video Link: Mr Speaker, a video link has been installed linking the Magistrates' Court to the Prison. The legislation required to allow persons to appear in court via video link has already been enacted and commenced, with the publication in the Gazette, on 28th June 2012 of a commencement notice of the relevant provisions of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011. The link will be tested for operational use this afternoon for the courts, prison, prosecutors and defence lawyers to test its use. This will be important for the courts and prison to look at the practical handling of defendants and video link hearing.

2030 Subject to this test being successful, I can announce that the video link will be available for use as from tomorrow, Tuesday, 10th July, but it is of course up to the courts to decide whether to use it or not. This link, when used, will remove the need for remand prisoners to be physically taken to court on a weekly basis, and will allow a more efficient use of Prison and RGP resources.

2035 Security for the Courts: the Government is making provision in this Budget for funds to allow the engagement by the Court Service of security guards. A total of £60,000 has been allocated for this purpose. The Court Service felt, and the Government agreed, that the additional number of courtrooms and the demands on the Court Service require additional security arrangements to be put in place.

2040 Attorney General's Chambers: Mr Speaker, the opening of the Magistrates' Court complex has seen an increase in 'second court' hearings. The AG's Chambers now regularly have to commit two lawyers to the Magistrates' Court. Consequently, the complement of Crown Counsel has been increased by one.

The frequency of Supreme Court jury trials has increased with the appointment of a dedicated judge for criminal cases – Mr Justice Black. In 2009, there were 12 jury decisions. In 2010, there were 16 and in 2011 there were nine. In the year to date, there have already been 12. These statistics exclude cases which are stopped by the Judge or where guilty pleas were entered during the course of the trial.

2045 As a result of the increased workload and in order to provide advice and support to the RGP's File Preparation Unit, a Crown Counsel will be working from New Mole House Police Station, assisting the RGP, for three days a week.

HM Prison: Mr Speaker, this year, six female Prison Officers that have worked for many years on a temporary or supply basis will be given contracts of employment as Basic Grade Prison Officers. This is in line with the Government's policy of eradicating the use of supply workers to cover permanent 2050 positions. This, in effect, means that instead of having 38 Basic Grade Prison Officers, the complement will increase to 44.

The new prison can house up to 98 prisoners in 50 cells. The building has five male and one female wings. The female wing can accommodate up to six prisoners at any one time. Although one of the sections on the ground floor was originally earmarked to house juvenile prisoners, this is currently in use for vulnerable prisoners. There are no juvenile prisoners at this time in the prison.

2055 Over the last 12 months, the average number of inmates per month was around 74. The daily average for the female wing is five prisoners. However, for some periods we have had as many as 11 or 12 female prisoners at one time. When faced with this situation, all female prisoners spend the day together in the female wing, workshop, education facility or gymnasium. However, during the silent hours, any number over six have to be accommodated in a male wing which is adjacent to the female wing. At no point do male and female prisoners actually mix in any way.

2060 In addition, Mr Speaker, over the last 24 months a total of 10 juveniles have been held at the prison. Extra measures and precautions are put in place when a juvenile is in prison. These have included the provision of educational classes with a qualified teacher.

2065 Royal Gibraltar Police: during the course of this year, the Royal Gibraltar Police has undergone changes at the very top of its structure. Commissioner Wink has retired and Commissioner Yome has taken over at the helm. I would like once again to record the Government's appreciation for the work done by Commissioner Wink and to acknowledge the vision and new ideas which Commissioner Yome brings to this post. (Applause)

2070 Mr Speaker, the Government is fully committed to combating all crime. In doing so, the strategy cannot only focus on identifying crime – work on preventing crime and on building a partnership between the Police and the community is just as important. It is for the Government to ensure that the Royal Gibraltar Police is at all times properly resourced. The RGP, nevertheless, is and will remain operationally independent.

2075 Since elected into Office, the Government has approved a restructure in the establishment of the RGP which has resulted in a number of promotions and new posts being created.

The current police officer complement of the Royal Gibraltar Police is as follows: Commissioner – one; Superintendent – three; Chief Inspector – five; Inspector – 14; one new Inspector post has been created to take over the management of Traffic and the Highway Enforcement Officers who are on secondment – which I will touch upon later; Sergeant – 32.

2080 Seven new Sergeant posts have been created: five deployed to the Custody suite, one to the newly created Child Protection and Vulnerable Adult Unit, one to give effect to the delivery of the Neighbourhood Policing Strategy; Constables – 181; 10 additional PC posts have been recruited for reasons of operational effectiveness.

2085 Mr Speaker, 10 new Constables, seven new Sergeants, one new Inspector, as well as the secondment of 34 HEOs will provide Commissioner Yome and his team with the additional tools needed to deliver the neighbourhood and community policing strategy which they have developed, and to meet the operational challenges which the RGP will no doubt face in the years to come. (Applause)

2090 Mr Speaker, today's police officer must be versatile and be prepared to serve the community in all kinds of emergencies. The duties of the Police in protecting people have grown increasingly important in recent years. Nowadays, in addition to taking up the role as a law enforcer, a police officer may be called upon to perform as a first-aider, social worker, counsellor and negotiator, as the occasion demands.

2095 Coinciding with the start of the new Policing Year 2012-13, the RGP launched its Neighbourhood Policing Initiative, which is designed to provide a consistent sustainable problem-solving approach to our community. The delivery strategy revolves around increased community interaction by the augmentation of Neighbourhood Teams, the re-modelling of patrol areas and deployment rosters, all of which are designed to ensure increased community interaction, continuity and resilience.

2100 Criminal Justice IT infrastructure project: Mr Speaker, I have already touched upon this. The RGP is currently engaged together with other Criminal Justice partners and the Government's IT and Logistics Department in scoping a fit for purpose IT infrastructure platform suitable for the whole Criminal Justice System. Such a system would serve to improve service delivery within the whole spectrum of the Criminal Justice System.

2105 Secondment of Highways Enforcement Officers: the Highways Enforcement Officers were seconded to the RGP with effect from 1st June 2012. This will provide a holistic and cohesive approach to the Government's Traffic Plan, whilst also addressing the RGP's responsibilities as contained within the Gibraltar Police Authority's Annual Policing Plan 2012-13.

Before 1st June 2012, the HEOs had a limited role to play on our streets, restricted to dealing mainly with parking issues. The aim now is to maximise their potential within the bounds of their job descriptions to include matters such as litter control, dog fouling and other traffic related duties.

2110 Since their secondment, the HEOs have been used in the following functions: traffic management in conjunction with RGP colleagues at traffic choke points, such as around Sundial; operationally during the recent Royal Visit; traffic management at beaches, jointly with RGP colleagues.

I am happy to report, from feedback I have received, that the interaction between HEOs and RGP officers is good and that both organisations are reaping the benefits of the secondment.

2115 RGP Social Media Project: Mr Speaker, as part of its community engagement strategy, the RGP has launched social media sites on Twitter and shortly on Facebook. This project is designed to provide a user friendly interactive communication channel for our community, increased information to the general public and improved access to policing services.

2120 Professionalism of the Police Service: as part of the RGP's professional development programme, the Police have embarked on an accreditation process for all newly recruited constables, which will result in successful recruits obtaining a National Vocational Qualification (NVQ) following their two years' probationary period in an Edexcel Level 3 Diploma in Policing.

2125 Furthermore, a proportion of RGP's training budget is allocated to provide officers with operational experience through secondments to police services abroad. Additionally, the RGP is looking to provide leadership and management training to its supervisory staff.

During this current financial year, the RGP will also be applying for the Silver Standard of accreditation in Investors in People.

2130 Mr Speaker, in my contribution today to this House, I have talked about policy, ideas, responsibility and dedication. These are the building blocks of the GSLP/Liberal Government. This Government has the drive, ambition and determination to innovate, regenerate and implement the exciting programme of investment which is being announced in this Budget.

We are all excited about Gibraltar and its future. Our best years are ahead of us and we cannot wait to get on with the serious business of making Gibraltar a beacon of excellence, not just in Europe, but globally.

2135 Finally, Mr Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity of thanking my staff and all those that work in the various Departments that form part of my ministerial portfolio for their hard work and support. I am delighted with the way things have progressed in the first seven months of Government and I look forward to meeting the challenges that are ahead of us together.

2140 There is a lot to be done in the next three and a half years or so, and I have every confidence, that by working together, the Government, public service, the private sector, we can make Gibraltar even more prosperous, safer and better than it ever has been before.

Thank you. (Applause)

2145 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am tempted to just add that it is hybrid drive that we have as a Government!

2150 Mr Speaker, given the time, I think it is appropriate for me to move the adjournment now. I would inform the House, for the purposes of those who are listening and those who have to make interventions, it is my intention to adjourn to 9.15 tomorrow morning, to sit until approximately 1.15 p.m. or 1.30 p.m., to come back at about 3.00 p.m. and to then stay until we have finished all the contributions, except the reply, in case that is of use.

So I now beg to move Mr Speaker that the House do now adjourn until 9.15 tomorrow morning.

2155 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, the Hon. the Chief Minister did indicate that the House would recess shortly for quarter to 12, subject to all that...

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed, subject to the short recess to enable those who wish to attend the Supreme Court – 2160 Mr Speaker: For the tributes to our predecessor, Mr J E Triay. That is at 12 o'clock in court tomorrow – probably half an hour.

I now propose the question which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 10th July 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

2165 I now put the question, which is that this House do now adjourn to Tuesday, 10th July 2012 at 9.15 a.m. Those in favour. (Members: Aye.) Those against. Passed.

This House will now adjourn to Tuesday, 10th July 2012 at 9.15 a.m.

The House adjourned at 6.35 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GIBRALTAR PARLIAMENT

MORNING SESSION: 9.15 a.m. – 1.21 p.m.

Gibraltar, Tuesday, 10th July 2012

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 9.15 a.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. H K Budhrani QC in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: M L Farrell Esq RD in attendance]

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Tuesday, 10th July 2012. Budget speeches continue.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond

5 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to make my maiden address to Parliament just seven months after entering the political arena as Opposition Spokesman for Health, Education and Civil Contingencies.

10 This is the first Budget of our Parliament since the General Elections. It is both a duty and an honour for us on the Opposition benches to contribute to, and vote, on this vital discharge of the responsibility of Parliament.

Mr Speaker, I begin my address with Civil Contingencies and the Fire Service.

15 Despite the Government stating that within two weeks of being in office a smoke extractor system for the Fire Station would be ordered, six and a half months have passed with no sign of this electoral promise being fulfilled. This leaves our fire fighters at risk, something the Members opposite were quick to accuse the then GSD Government of, for not having installed this equipment.

I am assured that the smoke extractor system has already been ordered – we trust it will arrive soon. However, I hope the Government has learned from this experience: it is seldom the case that such optimistic deadlines can be achieved; that in future, their policies and promises should at least be tinged with a veneer of reality.

The Government has promised to relocate the Fire Station, something the GSD were already committed to. They claimed last October that the present Station was 'no longer fit for purpose'. This apparently is no longer a priority; there is no commitment for it in this year's Budget – a serious omission, considering the fundamental importance of such a facility to our community, a facility they condemned less than a year ago.

Let us hope, that under this Government's term of office, this is addressed and when the new Fire Station is constructed, a 21st century approach is taken, with representation from our new Minister for Equality, so that any expansion in personnel will consider female fire fighters. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

The Opposition applauds the investment in and restructuring of the Civil Contingencies administration. It welcomes the creation of a new post of Civil Contingencies and Departmental Press Officer, which will also enhance the Government's Press Office.

When we heard from the Hon. the Chief Minister, during May's Parliament meeting, that six individuals applied for this newly created job, some of whom were local, it came as a surprise that the job went to an English retired Lieutenant Colonel and former MoD press officer. This Government, while in Opposition, vociferously criticised the GSD Government's policy of employing the best person for the job, if that person happened to be non-local or retired. They stated, time and again, that the Government should be employing locals and giving jobs to young people looking for work in Gibraltar.

The Government's manifesto in this regard is unequivocal and I quote:

'Residents First! ... It will be our policy in Government to give priority of employment in the public sector to local workers.'

Well, is this Government not now doing exactly what they accused the GSD Government of doing? Perhaps, at last, the Government has learnt something from the GSD. Employing the best person for the job is the right policy, irrespective of nationality or stage in their employment career, Mr Speaker.

However, there seems to be a contradiction in Government policy where on the one hand – a point on which my hon. Friend, Mr Netto, will elaborate later – the Hon. Minister for Employment is embarked upon the wholesale culling of foreign labour, in particular Spanish workers, from the public and private sector; but on the other, when they have the opportunity to fill a particularly meaningful post with a local, they employ an ex-pat on a fat pension.

I will now move to Education, Mr Speaker.

The schools within our education system are presently undergoing a Health and Safety Audit, which started on 24th January. This is expected to be an annual event; the cycle starts again in January 2013. That leaves less than one academic term free from audit a year, in which recommendations from the last audit are to be implemented.

Only two issues have been highlighted so far, from the auditing of five schools. I understand a further school has been audited, as announced by the Hon. Minister for Education in his Budget address. The findings so far from the audit are: a locked fire door, which could have been opened at any time, after one of the required fire drills; and the need to conduct an asbestos survey, which should already form part of the Health and Safety Department's remit on reviewing all public buildings for asbestos and its condition.

The Government's manifesto commitment reads, and I quote:

'In many schools there are health and safety issues that can affect both teachers and pupils. Based on a Health & Safety Policy, to be established by the Department, we will carry out an annual Health and Safety Audit of each school'.

The idea of an audit sounds very efficient. However, the reality is that all schools already have their own Health and Safety Policy in place; some have their own asbestos register. All schools abide by this policy document, which was created in 2010 in consultation with the Gibraltar Teachers' Association. Any defects, shortcomings or Health and Safety issues that arise in a school are immediately reported by the Head Teacher to the Department of Education, which acts upon it.

Just another example of how this Government, in their manifesto, have made grand statements that sound impressive, to be seen to be all things to all men and to keep everyone happy, only to realise that in fact, these ideas have little impact in reality and Gibraltar's schools were not in such a bad shape after all: they do not require formal, over-and-above Health and Safety auditing. Systems already in place worked, a point proven by the lack of audit findings.

However, a root-and-branch review of the whole Education System, which is a different matter entirely, would have been welcome and we would have done so had we been in Government.

The complement of school teachers has increased by 47. These teaching posts will be spread among schools to fill a curriculum gap, make a supply post permanent or to reduce class sizes. But this has happened in spite of the need to redefine catchment areas and relocate schools, such as Sacred Heart Middle School, which is part of the Government's manifesto.

In order to accommodate these teachers and reduce class sizes, specialist teaching rooms will no doubt need to be converted into classrooms. Schools will continue to struggle in overcrowded conditions, with some buildings in desperate need of an overhaul or refurbishment.

Apart from a new extension to Notre Dame School and St Martin's School, which are welcome, the Budget does not allow for any new schools or extensions to other existing schools. Will extra classrooms be at the expense of specialist teaching rooms? Well, this may yet be an ill considered and ill-timed policy.

We too would have increased the teaching complement – if necessary by over 47 teachers – but only after a wide process of consultation between Government, teachers and parents. We would have explored the optimum locations for relocations of schools, the College, the Training Centre and a possible sixth form college, among sites at Rooke, the old St Bernard's Hospital and St Christopher's School. In other words, we would have taken a broad and responsible approach.

And before we get too excited about the headline, and I quote:

'Engagement of significant and unprecedented numbers of staff for schools... showing how seriously the Government has taken its promise to make education a priority', let me remind the hon. Members opposite that when the GSD first got into Government in 1996, we too were serious about our priority commitment to Education. We significantly increased numbers of staff by: 45 teachers, from 288 to 333; 40 Classroom Aides, from 11 to 51; and 45 Special Educational Needs teachers, from three to 48. And this is with little increase in Gibraltar's school population over the years. It is the demographics and shift in population, rather than numbers, that have changed.

Yet another headline grabber to imply the GSLP saves the day and to slight the positive impact the previous Administration had with its Education policies. Well, this Government has a very tough act to follow.

Examining the distribution of children, and the demographic movement of population to new housing areas, has to be the priority. The hon. Members opposite have highlighted this in many of their Budget addresses when in Opposition. The Westside area has seen over 500 families move there. Bishop Fitzgerald School is struggling with such over subscription. The South District has grown by an extra 800 families, as part of St Joseph Middle School's catchment area. No provision has been made in the Budget to cater for this, despite, in answer to Question 28 in January's Parliament, the Hon. Minister's recognition of population shift and commitment to respond to this.

What Gibraltar needs is extra or larger school buildings, something the GSD was going to provide this term of office as part of its manifesto. The Government makes no provision for this yet. They will exacerbate the problem further.

Another GSLP manifesto commitment is to review the resources for Special Educational Needs of all schools, in order to identify what additional resources and support is needed. To this end, the Behavioural Education Support Team will be increased by three and Classroom Aides by 28, which is welcome. But there is a sense, from the Government, that not until they came into office did Departments work together for the benefit of the individual; a sense there was no collaboration between the Department of Education, the Health Authority and the Care Agency over an individual's care pathway. This is untrue and I hope the Government now recognises this.

The Department of Education has always taken the lead from the teachers who are qualified to assess, identify and refer children to the educational psychologist or care worker. Every school has its own Special Educational Needs co-ordinator, some with a special unit, dedicated to preparing children's individual education action plans. All these pupils are overseen by an Educational Adviser at the Department of Education, or if necessary, the Behavioural Education Specialist Team and Social Services Team.

In what way does the Government then feel that children with special educational needs in Gibraltar have not been adequately catered for? You see, another grand statement, Mr Speaker, from the GSLP manifesto, and I quote:

'A GSLP Government will require schools to identify the support that is necessary for children with special needs. An assessment will be carried out on all children after entry into the educational system to establish what extra support or tuition, if any, a child would require.'

Laudable as the sentiment is, the Government is now in the happy position of merely having to build on what the GSD has established over the years.

It is recognised that extra support will always be required by some children, and I am happy to see that Government will continue with this vital work. However, what they cannot do is cast doubt on an already successful system, just for the sake of trying to rubbish all the GSD Government has achieved and improved upon over the years.

May I take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to join the Hon. Minister in congratulating the 'Impulse' team, from Bayside School, in winning best product for their 'Y-Tangle' as part of the Young Enterprise Scheme in the UK finals.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to the Health Services in Gibraltar.

'Problems being experienced by many hundreds of users', say the GSLP in their manifesto,

'continued throughout the last four years and are not being properly addressed or rectified', it continues. The manifesto also claims the GSD responded by saying these were inventions, and were solved by bringing in outsiders instead of listening to our own experienced professionals.

Well, at May's meeting of Parliament, the Hon. Minister for Health told us that he is now turning to UK experts, outsiders, to advise on how our GHA services are to be run. He has visited the UK on three occasions for this. Ironically, at a time when the NHS itself is being characterised as a seriously dysfunctional public service and massive reforms are being propounded by its professionals. And yet, Dr. Cortes stubbornly refuses to listen to his own experienced professionals at home.

During Parliament, and reiterated through a press release, the Hon. Minister told us he was seeking advice from UK consultants on administrative issues, management, open board meetings, community-based medicine, stroke care, appointment systems, clinical processes, hospital medical staffing, performance management, training and specialist care. We assume then he thinks none of his own local, experienced health professionals in Gibraltar are capable of providing him with sound advice on such medical matters.

The Hon. Minister is barely even consulting the GHA Board for advice, which he has met with only twice in seven months. I must point out that the Board used to meet every month when the GSD were in Government. This is a statutory body and its members should be participating and having their local 'expert' say on the introduction of new Government policies for the GHA and the implementation of new services. This is a crucial part of good board governance, instead of the rubber-stamping of top-down policies by paying lip-service to the legislation.

The GHA Board exists to be accountable for, and to ensure, the GHA organisation works and offers 'value for money'. The GHA Board is where all authority lies. It is not about ratifying volumes of information that purports to monitor organisational performance, which may mask the fact that proper monitoring is still not occurring.

As part of the Government's openness policy, GHA Board meetings are now to be held in public. Part of this is publishing the Board Reports on the GHA website, and I acknowledge this is welcome. These Board papers give the public a chance to see how much the GHA Executive does in order to keep the GHA working and running. But that is the only place where the openness and transparency exists. This is yet another example of a grand statement which has resulted in nothing of substance and if anything, might stifle the ability of the Board to continue doing its work.

Why, Mr Speaker? Well, the 'in public' aspect and the change in presentation of GHA Board meetings is, in my view, ineffective board governance. The Chief Executive now speaks on behalf of the Executive. The non-Executive members' ability, under scrutiny from an on-looking public, to ask those all too difficult questions and scrutinise policy-making, is curbed. The GHA Board becomes less efficient, it becomes a public spectacle. The members are mere performers going through the motions to satisfy a manifesto commitment, which offers no enhancement and where very little accountability really exists. As an ex-GHA Board member myself, I note that the GHA Board process remains exactly the same – a process I disagreed with then and one which I was hoping to change, had I been given the opportunity.

If there was one lesson that came out of the 2008 global recession, as a result of the collapse of the banks, it was that board governance of many banks and financial institutions was unsuccessful in setting targets and holding chief executives to account. It was found that many boards tended to be incompetent groups of competent individuals. Their expectations, if stated at all, tended to be unclear and incomplete, and the executive reports reported against few or no criteria.

This was something I felt the GHA Board was also guilty of. In the absence of clear instructions or clear assignment of the Chief Executive, we found evaluating performance was an exercise in futility. The emphasis should not be on meetings in public; it should be on empowerment of the Board. Transparency is understanding how and why spending decisions are made. It is not just the production of data, presentations from the public which will be considered and the issuing of a multitude of press releases. This is why a GSD Government would have further empowered the GHA Board, financial managers, consultants and doctors: to exercise greater control over spending choices, budgets and service prioritisation to ensure the proper balance between medical services, value for money and budgetary discipline.

Turning to clinicians, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Health stated in March's meeting of Parliament that he was weeks away from resolving the issue of the consultants' contract. We now know, from six separate consultants, that the contract has not been discussed with the Consultants' Body in their three formal meetings with the Hon. Minister, apart from 10 minutes at the end of their last meeting with him. They claim it is not true, as the Hon. Minister stated in March, that and I quote:

'The consultants have been kept aware of the situation through regular meetings'.

Additionally, the consultants have heard through the GHA grapevine that a draft consultants' contract will be removing the 25% gratuity aspect of contracts on termination. It will be replaced by a pension package, which amounts to a reduction of 15% to 20% salary.

This pension package is the Provident Fund No. 2, which all hospital doctors are being asked to join as from the end of July, no negotiations or questions asked. This affects 43 of the 46 medical grades of the hospital. How are these 43 GHA hospital doctors and surgeons to now recover the loss of pension for the years some of them have already worked? This cannot be right and the question must be asked, how is this fair?

How does the Government intend to attract and incentivise good surgeons and physicians to come to Gibraltar and stay to work, if it changes employment contracts unilaterally, or cannot offer competitive rates and good packages which are favourable and fair? I assumed it would be Government policy to attract the best doctors possible for the GHA and not just the cheapest and less experienced.

The very first thing, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Health did, when he came into office, was to blame the previous Administration for a lack of planning, which he believes led to a compounding of bed shortages and he said, 'the GSD have a lot to answer for' – conveniently forgetting that it was the GSD Government which opened the Care Agency's John Cochrane Ward, with 31 beds; the GSD that introduced the Day Surgery Unit, which caters for about 80 to 100 patients a month, who will not take up a hospital bed; the GSD that more than doubled Mount Alvernia beds from 62 to 135; (A Member: Hear, hear.) the GSD that introduced domiciliary care, increasing its funding year on year and during the last term of office by 118%, from £350,000 to £760,000; not to mention the bespoke 230 elderly-friendly flats at Bishop Canilla House and Albert Risso House. I am proud to stand here and answer for this record, Mr Speaker.

A 'complete absence of forward planning,' was how the Hon. Minister Cortes described the previous administration's commitments. We presume he was not referring to the commencement of the new Mental Health and Alzheimer and Dementia hospitals; plans for a Debilitating Unit and Elderly Day Care Centre; with much progress on a new residential care facility at the old St Bernard's Hospital.

It remains to be seen, Mr Speaker, what difference, if any, the current Government's long-term plans are for the elderly and sick. At the moment, it seems their only commitments are to finish the GSD plans, I have just described.

The Government now claims to have solved the bed blockage situation at St Bernard's Hospital. The Hon. Minister Costa must be pleased, seeing that this was his perennial gripe when in Opposition. This has been solved it seems by opening the Calpe Ward of 18 beds, with much fanfare, and by increasing domiciliary care funding, as the GSD did every year. There are today about 118 elderly people in urgent need of residential care, 71 of whom are in St Bernard's Hospital, all of whose places are waiting to be filled by more elderly people. And let's not forget the 450 who have expressed an interest in a future need for admission to residential care.

It is only a matter of time, however many Care Agency beds you add to the hospital and elsewhere, they will soon fill up again because the demand is ever-increasing, as people live longer. This is where the GSD Government has an excellent record in substantially increasing the capacity and resources from the meagre facilities made available in 1996 from an outgoing GSLP Government.

The Hon. Minister says an increase in Care Agency beds is reflected in the decrease of number of surgeries cancelled due to bed blockage; that since the Calpe Ward opened in February, only one surgery was cancelled in March, as opposed to 12 in February. This is purely circumstantial evidence that the problem has been addressed.

If I can refer the Hon. Minister to surgery cancellations in 2011, due to unavailability of beds, in two months, zero operations were cancelled; in one month, one operation was cancelled; in another month, two were cancelled; in July, three were cancelled; and in December 2011, only four operations were cancelled. It is a matter of how we select our figures, Mr Speaker.

The evidence suggests the extra 18 beds have made no difference, but again, it makes a great press release. It shows once more how the new Government is only concerned with spin and not substance. (A Member: Yes!)

What the Hon. Minister for Health fails to tell us is what his Chief Executive Officer outlines in his report to the GHA Board on the 30th of May and I quote:

‘We have an additional 15% occupancy in the wards at St Bernard’s Hospital’, which is in line with their manifesto commitment of ‘Our short term policy will be to add beds at St Bernard’s.’

This is backed by the Nursing Director’s report to the same GHA Board meeting which says and I quote:

‘February 2012 has seen a continuation in the trend of high occupancy for all adult wards, with extra beds utilised intermittently during this period,’ and this is after the transfer of patients to the Calpe Ward.

An additional 15% bed occupancy; St Bernard’s Hospital, with its four main adult wards, has the capacity of 120 acute beds. With the 15% of extra beds, this amounts to 18 extra beds spread among the four adult wards. This leaves no spare capacity, Mr Speaker, available to meet the peaks in demand: 18 beds in the Calpe Ward is another headline, another PR grand statement this Government makes so well, without really addressing the issue.

Again, there is a sense from the Government that not until they came into office did Departments work together for the benefit of the individual, and that there was no previous collaboration between the Health Authority and the Care Agency over an individual’s care pathway. They seem to be suggesting that the set-up of John Cochrane Ward, domiciliary care, occupational therapy, physiotherapy, housing needs and community nursing care all magically happened in isolation of each other, when previous Ministers Del Agua and Netto co-ordinated health and care matters – again, casting doubt on a successful system for the sake of trying to rubbish all the GSD achieved and improved upon. (A Member: Shame!)

Here I will add how the previous Minister for Health, Mrs Del Agua, according to GHA staff, believe her to be the only Minister for Health who routinely met with staff during her unaccompanied rounds of the hospital. (Laughter) She used her experience in Social Services to ensure – (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order! (Interjections)

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: She used her experience in Social Services to ensure the smooth co-ordination between the two Ministries, Mr Speaker.

We welcome that the two Agencies continue to work together, as they did under the GSD, (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Absolutely.) and that they feel the need to formalise this with the setting up of a named inter-Ministerial Committee on the Elderly. However, this co-operation has always existed, evidenced in the yearly ‘Bed Management Reports’ by the Clinical Nurse Manager – and neither was it given the PR spin this Government is so adept at, in order to make out it is doing so much more than it is actually doing.

This, I can further demonstrate by the Government’s issue of a press release on the GHA’s Health Promotion Unit setting up, and I quote:

‘a Facebook page to assist in raising awareness... in keeping with a Government manifesto commitment to promote healthy living.’

A Facebook page – seriously? But of course we are all aware of Dr. Cortes’ unilateral propensity to use Facebook in policy-making, given his grand statement on the 1999 Fishing Agreement! Well, this is no replacement for people, Mr Speaker. The Government should first invest in more Health Promotion Officers, of which there is no indication in this Budget. Promoting healthy living means Public Health staff raising awareness on preventative measures through talks, the media and awareness stands in town; by engaging with the public in a meaningful way.

However, I look forward to, and welcome, the initiative announced by the Hon. Minister yesterday in taking the lead on healthy living through his declared lifestyle changes. We acknowledge the Government is only seven months into its term and has just started to implement its manifesto commitments. Some we applaud, such as the purchasing of five Public Transfer Vehicles, following on from the three ambulances ordered by the GSD as part of their continuous investment in the GHA, which have just arrived; the placing of 10 Public Access Defibrillators around town; the introduction of ‘No Smoking’ legislation, which is a personal favourite of mine; and the employment of more GHA staff, announced in the Budget, which we are pleased to see follows the GSD policy where we increased the GHA staff by around 500 over 15 years.

However, in the Government's eagerness to show it is in touch, that it will save Gibraltar, it makes – here it is again – grand statements in its manifesto that sound impressive; only to realise that when in Government, the reality is not so.

I can demonstrate this with the following manifesto commitment and I quote:

'We will be looking into operating a day case unit for surgical services; allowing people to be treated more quickly and efficiently and will eradicate the cancellation of operations as a result of bed shortages.'

Well, this service already existed in St Bernard's Hospital when they were writing the manifesto. It was set up in February 2005 and treats about 80 to 100 patients a month; how out of touch is that? Six years out, Mr Speaker!

Hon. D A Feetham: They're not laughing now!

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: At least, it is an acknowledgement that we did do something to tackle the cancelled operations due to bed blockages in the hospital.

Another Hon. Minister Costa 'perennial issue' levelled against the GSD was the management of Norovirus outbreaks at St Bernard's Hospital. Well, two weeks after the Norovirus outbreak at St Bernard's, it took questions from the Opposition and GBC for the Government to make any information public on the outbreak. By then it had affected several patients and their families, and some wards were closed. It was irresponsible for the Government not to make a public health statement from the outset, to ensure the public were informed and to mitigate the risk of spread among the community. As a consequence, 55 patients and 24 GHA staff members were affected.

And what was the Government's response to the concerns we raised? Well, let me tell you, and I quote:

'If the Opposition is not satisfied with the way the recent Norovirus outbreak in hospital was handled, it should look to itself for blame. The Government is barely two months in and still working with the system it has inherited and therefore the procedures and practices in the hospital are those which the GSD put in place.'

This is ludicrous, and here is where I converge from the Hon. Minister Costa.

The Hon. Minister for Health criticises the processes implemented by the GHA, which are standard, public health, clinical governance, procedures and not Government policies.

They sit outside and above politics. The Hon. Minister demonstrated that he did not understand basic clinical systems. Any excuse to again point the finger at the GSD for the failings of the Government, irrespective of whether they are self-inflicted or not.

I would like to reiterate a note of caution, which I have publicly expressed. We have received many concerns from members of the public about the new one month advance appointment system, to be introduced at the Primary Care Centre in August – the major concern being, this will not stem the demand for appointments requested in a given month. It might actually make obtaining an appointment more difficult because of this limitation. We believe the new monthly available slots will fill up very quickly, resulting in an increase again in people queuing up early in the morning outside the Primary Care Centre for those few daily empty appointment slots.

We hope, however, this policy succeeds as a measure to reduce the number of appointments missed by patients not attending the Primary Care Centre. It will then add to the already implemented measures by the previous Minister for Health, Mrs Del Agua, of saving daily empty appointment slots; an appointment reminder system; an electronic web-based and voicemail cancellation system; the publication of the number of 'Did Not Attend's'; and the extension of Primary Care Centre opening hours from 8.00 a.m. to 6.00 p.m..

No address on health by me, Mr Speaker, would be complete without saying something on breast cancer care services in Gibraltar. The Breast Screening Programme has now been in place for a year and a half, a time in which nearly all women eligible in Gibraltar would have been invited for a mammogram for their first time. Last year 62.8% of women invited took up the offer of a mammogram; in the first five months of this year the uptake has only been 53.1%. To give you an idea, the average uptake in the UK is 72% – still not considered high enough.

It saddens me personally, after all the hard work 'Breast Cancer Support Gibraltar' did in order to achieve the setting-up of such a vital and life-saving screening programme, that so few women are taking advantage of this service. This is a service that should be taken up by almost 100% of our women.

I urge the Government today, as part of their Public Health Policy, that they conduct an awareness campaign on the benefits of the Breast Screening Programme and encourage women to take up the offer of a mammogram. It may mean life or death for some women.

In conclusion to our Health Services in Gibraltar, I am glad to hear from the Hon. the Chief Minister, in his address, that they, and I quote:

‘Have not inherited a lot of problems with the GHA’.

This is certainly an endorsement of all I have said so far, and of the great legacy of the GSD in relation to Gibraltar’s Health Services. Laudable as the sentiment is of the Hon. Minister for Health to provide all the GHA staff and management feel is needed, which can be done by anyone, that course of action is an unaffordable recipe for financial disaster.

Picking up on a female theme Mr Speaker: for the first time in Gibraltar’s political history, both the Government, in the person of the Hon. Minister for Social Services, and the Opposition, with me, each have a woman on their benches. I am poignantly aware of how few of us there have been, and how few of us there are, in the political class. As I mentioned in an Opinion to the Chronicle for International Women’s Day, I believe more could be achieved for women in Gibraltar if there was better female representation in politics. Part of that responsibility lies with those few of us who have entered politics, to ensure we do all we can to effectively represent women’s issues and demonstrate the benefits of having more women in Parliament.

That is why I raise this issue in my Budget address today, Mr Speaker. Political parties need to take positive action to promote greater female participation. Had the GSD won this last Election, the Government would have three female Government Ministers, a very positive step indeed.

I welcome that we now have a Minister for Equality to highlight the issues faced by women in Gibraltar, despite little mention of this in her opinion or interview or speech on International Women’s Day. To say she has worked, and still does, in a man’s world and has not had any problems; that women have come a long way these last 100 years; and that one day she hopes we will never celebrate International Women’s Day, because it means women would have achieved their objectives offers no hope or inspiration to the women of Gibraltar who are looking for their voice to be heard and for equality policies. It requires a political will and genuine desire to instigate change and bring balance to our society not just, as the Hon. Minister stated, and I quote:

‘My message to girls and women out there is to remember that there is nothing stopping them from achieving the same as their male counterparts’.

As women, we still find ourselves woefully under-represented in managerial positions and on boards. It is a disgrace that all six members of the new Commission on Democratic and Parliamentary Reform are white, middle-class men, three of whom are lawyers – not one woman or minority representative; not one financier or educator. They do not represent the diversity of our community.

Out of 23 statutory Government-related bodies that have been gazetted so far, there are a total of around 142 members; only 17 are women, some of whom are the secretaries of the boards. Since these boards and committees have seen much movement these last few months, ousting GSD sympathisers and placing GSLP ones, one would have hoped that as a woman, the Hon. Minister for Equality would have ensured more female participation and representation in these committees that matter, that deal with influencing policy-making. There are plenty of women in Gibraltar more than capable of doing so.

Well, out of the 42 people who I know have been replaced so far on these boards, since this Government came into office, we have actually lost six women on these boards, to be replaced by two. I sincerely hope the future movement and replacement of members will seriously consider including more women, so they too can form part of the decision-making process of Gibraltar, of which they represent 50% of the population. I ask the Hon. Minister to take a greater interest in this aspect of her portfolio and not allow it to be the ‘Cinderella’ among her responsibilities.

The Government is still struggling to come to terms with its responsibilities, demonstrated by their Parliamentary responses which so often fail to address the public appetite for information, but instead, deflect enquiries back to what they claim was not achieved by the former GSD Government. Well, so much was achieved.

I remind this House of how 15 years of GSD Government, fixing the incalculable mess left behind by the previous GSLP Administration, has, for example, brought about significant progress in closing the gap between men and women. In the employment field, sustained professional training programmes have provided a qualitative change in the composition of middle and senior management positions in the public sector. This has broken the ‘glass ceiling’ that used to prevent women access to higher positions.

This was supported by the introduction of maternity leave and its subsequent increase; maternity grants for unmarried mothers; maternity allowance and paternity leave. The GSD introduced legislation to forbid discrimination; working married women were given opportunities to pay the difference in Social Insurance contributions to receive a full pension; widowers’ and widows’ pension rights were equalised; and divorced, non-working women can now share in their spouses’ pensions.

A whole range of further initiatives were introduced by the GSD, such as the Breast Screening Programme; the HPV vaccination for teenage girls; a huge increase in the number of Government, free nursery places; the financial support for the creation and maintenance of the half-way house for abused women; and the professional advice given to them through dedicated counsellors and in particular the Citizens' Advice Bureau.

Parents are supported with the school holidays' Sports Programmes, plenty of children's parks and the new family and children's legislation. From experiences shared with me, women still find themselves struggling as single parents with erring ex-spouses. Trying to make ends meet or surviving on benefits, they are at the mercy of grey areas in law, such as access to Legal Aid and the recognition of common law relationships.

Despite my hon. Friend, Mr Feetham, having prepared Legal Aid reform legislation, waiting to be implemented, it is shocking that this Government has only published new rules to expand Legal Aid that enables defendants, accused of complex fraud crimes, to hire expensive specialist lawyers at public expense. (Hon. D A Feetham and Hon. J J Netto: Shame!) No thought has gone into, or takes into account, the plight of single parents, mainly women, who are not entitled to Legal Aid if they own the family home or a car. This blanket rule penalises lone parents struggling with mortgage payments, and paying legal fees in order to pursue erring partners in their duty of care as a parent.

As for common law relationships, and their rights as a couple under the law: I hope that with the new equality legislation, which deals with civil partnerships, this grey area of the law will be addressed in order for individuals within a long-term, stable, heterosexual relationship, or family members who share a home, such as siblings, be afforded the same rights as those of a married couple. Equally, the introduction of parental leave, whereby either parent is able to take entitled leave after the birth of a child, is a policy that would be welcomed by many working parents across Gibraltar.

As I said in my International Women's Day Opinion for the Chronicle, and I quote:

'Because childcare responsibilities in general still fall to women, women with children more often take low-paid, opportunity-free, part-time work and suffer economically. That we have some more women at the top of Gibraltar society is worth celebrating, however raising more women off the very bottom would be even better'.

For a party which claims to offer a new era of openness, transparency and equality, there seems to be little emphasis and clarity in these policies in practice. Apart from the empty promises of all things to all men and women, all we have are grand statements, backed by hundreds of press releases, which only give the public an illusion of progress.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, it is for me a great honour and privilege to be addressing Parliament in this Appropriation Bill as a Minister of Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar – (Sounds of an aeroplane overhead) A fly-past!

In the short time, I have been in Government, I have realised many things I suspected were happening negatively within Government were actually true: the lack of motivation of officers – (Further sounds of an aeroplane overhead)

I seem to be honoured by a fly-past, Mr Speaker!

Mr Speaker: It's worse than heckling from the Opposition benches! (Laughter)

Hon. D A Feetham: It has been arranged!

Hon. S E Linares: – the lack of motivation of officers in Government, in Authorities and Agencies; the little confidence that the GSD Government had in them and the manner that they were treated.

As Minister with responsibility for the Fire Service the first thing that was clear was the lack of motivation within the force. There were many people who felt completely ignored under the previous Administration and who felt undermined at all levels. The fact that the force was not even allowed to have a Christmas Party at the Station, which had been the norm since time immemorial, under the excuse of Health and Safety, says much about the relationship that the Fire Service had with the previous Administration.

There were a number of issues waiting to be resolved. The one that was identified by the men, before we came into office, was that of the exhaust extractor system, which I am happy to announce, has now been procured and will soon be installed. All the other Health and Safety issues will be addressed, once the audit review is produced by Sir Ken Knight after the summer.

We are also looking at all aspects of the Fire Service which the management and the staff are identifying that need looking in to. After this review, we will be in a position to start on another manifesto commitment: that of having a new Fire Station. This will be done not only with the recommendations of the report but also in close consultation with both management and the Firemen's Union Committee. Professional development in the form of training was underfunded and it was not only until last year that some extra funding was provided for this. Well, I am happy to state that, in this year's Budget, we have not only matched the amount that was provided a year before the Election from the previous Administration, but we have increased it even further only months after having come into Government.

In order to address this demotivation that the Fire Service has endured for many years, I arranged a number of visits to each watch and observed them performing different exercises. This has been welcomed by both the firemen and the management. It has been a privilege for me to have experienced the professionalism of these men and I have learned a great deal from these visits. It is clear to me that they are a very committed force. They know that my doors are always open to discuss anything that concerns them.

As the Minister for the Collection of Refuse, we can announce the fact that we have employed a total of seven more recruits and that two more will be employed soon. These men will man a new lorry and therefore a new route to cater for the increased demand created by the new developments that have taken place and others that will take place in the future. It is a commitment we gave the workforce during the election campaign, which we now have delivered.

One thing that I noticed as soon as I first visited the refuse depot was the disgraceful conditions that these men have endured for a long time. What was significant is that the depot had been painted and fixed on the outside, so that everybody could see it, but completely ignored in the inside where the men have to shower and change after they finish work. So much for dignity at work under the previous Administration!

I am happy to say that works have already commenced and very soon these men who do a job which is essential to our community will have a decent workplace.

Another of my portfolios is the Postal Service. In this field, I can also announce that under our Government's policy of employing long-term supply workers, we are in the process of employing three extra SOG Basics. These three employees have been doing supply work for nearly six to seven years.

Further, we have managed to give the SOG Basics this year summer hours at no cost and without any detriment to the customer. In the autumn, we will be sitting down to negotiate with the workforce and the union at the postal service to see how we can enhance the service and working practices.

As Minister for the utilities, I am very much involved in what sort of generation we will be acquiring for the future. I believe in looking closely at the environmental impact that the power generation will have on our future generations – excuse the pun. With this in mind, the Government will also be looking at having consistent power, so that we have capacity for our consumption now and also well into the future.

In relation to AquaGib, I can say that we are also looking at ways in which the production of water can be made more cost effective than at present. Government will be working closely with the company and its workforce, in order to resolve all pending matters.

As Minister for Civil Contingencies, I have found out that co-ordination with the different agencies could have been better. In fact, only by pure coincidence, for example, that the staff of the Civil Contingency Section found out that GJBS had a full container of emergency equipment for them to use, should the need arise.

Table-top exercises have not been carried out as should have been the norm. Meetings of the C3 will now be convened regularly, in order to evaluate current procedure. Further, we have employed a civil contingency press officer – who is a Gibraltar resident – given that the supply of information forms a crucial part of any civil contingency committee. This is in order to be in a position to inform the general public of what they should do, should we ever have an emergency situation to contend with. Further, a local graduate specialising in civil contingency has been engaged to work closely with this officer. She has already started.

As the Minister for Sports and Leisure, I would like to start my address with the King's Bastion Leisure Centre. It is well known that this centre had gone over budget by nearly £6.5 million and that the total construction cost was over £12 million. It is now encountering all sorts of problems.

In the first instance, the air conditioning system is not fit for purpose. The wrong system has been installed to cater for such a large complex and it is now not working at all. A completely new system will have to be put in place.

The Ice Skating Rink has no insulation and therefore the result is that it is constantly out of its normal temperature. This means that to keep the ice at the correct temperature all year round it costs £7,500 per month in electricity. Not only that, but the levelling machine – and this I think is a joke – for the ice, that breaks down very frequently, was situated inside the glass building which houses the ice rink before the glass was placed. The result is that the machine cannot be brought out for repairs unless you dismantle the whole glass structure or the machine itself is dismantled.

There are also problems with the location of essential facilities like toilets and changing rooms, which one would have thought should have been placed in the ice rink's surroundings with access from the ice rink itself. This did not happen, which means that users have to take their skating boots off every time they need to relieve themselves.

One more thing on the ice rink is that due to its size, no international competition can take place and it is no good for ice skating companies to perform shows in it.

These are not the only problems that exist in the King's Bastion Leisure Centre. The contracts that are in place with some of the operators are unbelievably negative for the Government who is the ultimate owner of the complex. Where in the world do you have an operator of what is supposed to be a business, making more profits, for employing more people and for spending huge amounts of money on general expenses? This is called an OPEX contract. The Government has to cover the operating expenses of King's Bowl operator, pay for any losses and then pay them 30% profit on top!

We have the anomaly that this is not applied to all operators. Therefore we have the situation that the caterers do not have the same contract and only after considerable representations were they, too, given some OPEX contract in part of the building. The people of Gibraltar should know such a lucrative contract was given to people close to the previous Chief Minister.

I move now to what is commonly known as the GASA swimming pool. The previous Administration took the decision to allow the general public to use the 25-metre swimming pool. This might have been the right decision, but as usual, there was no long-term planning for the consequences of this decision.

The reality is that GASA was left – GASA, i.e. the pool – still managing the pool and they hardly had money to maintain the place. Moreover, reports were made to the GSLA and the GSLA did not seem to get them so that corrective action could be taken. The result being that the changing rooms had broken tiles, the spectator platform also had tiles missing, beams were rusting, and the general state of the pool was deteriorating fast, due to the increased amount of usage after the decision to open it to the general public. As we all know, we had the whole of the duct system collapsing on to the public stand and we were extremely lucky not to have anyone hurt. The poor planning of the previous GSD Administration was responsible for this situation.

This prompted the new Government, in only seven months, to not only make the place safe in only three days, but also review the whole structure of the management of the pool. I am happy to say that in consultation with GASA we now have the GSLA managing the pool and GASA will not lose any of its allocations. This will benefit all users, since now the Authority is looking after all the maintenance issues.

The Government intends very soon to do major works to the pool to improve facilities. This includes the air treatment system which had been promised for many years by the previous Administration and was never delivered. Soon, we will also be announcing how we intend to save money by having alternative energy systems in place in the pool, making it a much better place for those who swim in it.

Another of the responsibilities of the GSLA is to maintain all the playgrounds around Gibraltar. Many of these playgrounds were built in a rush by the previous Government, with hardly any planning and at great expense to the taxpayer. This was done only for political expediency in the run-up to the last General Elections, after the playgrounds had been neglected for years.

I am happy to report to this House that the children who live in Moorish Castle Estate – the 'ignored' people, by the previous Administration – can now enjoy a brand new playground which we had built within the first few months of this Government coming into office.

We are now also having to spend money on fixing the one at Mid Harbours Estate because its construction under the hon. Members opposite had created a problem of water penetration in the underground parking below.

Continuing with Sports, Mr Speaker, I am happy to say that during the seven months we have been in office, I have met with the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council three times and we have one other meeting scheduled for 11th July, i.e. tomorrow and I can confirm that we will be meeting at least quarterly.

I am working with the Sports and Leisure Authority with a view to be in a position to have more international sporting events staged here which we hope will serve to attract more people to Gibraltar.

Moving to my responsibility for Culture and Heritage, I can only start by stressing the shambolic state in which I found the whole of the Culture and Heritage Agency on coming into office. It was in such a state that one of the first things that I did was to ask the Principal Auditor to obtain all records and all documents appertaining to this Agency. Further, I asked for a value for money report on all transactions done.

By 23rd January, the Principal Auditor presented me with a report from which all the information I am giving in this Parliament is taken. Staff were signed on to the Agency between 16th October 2011 and 2nd November 2011. Let's not forget that by October, time was running out for the GSD – so much so that the Elections were called on 3rd November.

The people who were asked to sign on came from different entities, such as Knightfield Holdings, GDC, Civil Service, Gibraltar General Services Ltd, and one from no particular place. They were placed on grades with no apparent logic or methodology and no concern for value for money.

In fact, Mr Speaker, it was the CEO who was given a pay rise of 62.5% – well above the Grade 6 and personally approved by the previous Chief Minister. We had three at Grade 6 who got an increase ranging from 48.6% to 22.5%; two Grade 5s, which is the equivalent to an SEO in Government, one of whom was not even in employment; three Grade 4s; two Grade 3s; one Grade 2; and eight Grade 1s. These grades obtained a 12% over and above the Civil Service rate.

In relation to the latter, I can say that within the Grade 1s which is equivalent to an AA post – AA post, I repeat – in Government, we had a person who was a Spanish cleaner with no qualifications at all.

Two Technical Grade posts were also established. Mr Speaker, as to value for money, we saw that the total previous wage bill, which was £522,622, increased during the dates stated above, just before the Election to £740,296. This is an increase of 42% in total.

The Collective Agreement with the unions was never signed. The Board of the Agency was constituted by the Minister for Culture and Heritage on 15th November, after all the offers of appointment were signed, he also appointed two directors of his choice. In a meeting on 18th November 2011, three weeks before the Elections, the said Board officially appointed the CEO and all the other officers.

Mr Speaker, this just goes to show how the previous Administration used to handle things and how they, at the last minute in Government, were signing away pay rises and placing people of their choice where they pleased, in a blatant attempt to use public money in order to win votes.

Since I have been Minister for Culture and Heritage, I have restructured the Agency to be able to make it workable and I have found that the staff have been very co-operative and willing to reform the mess that the new Government had inherited.

So much so that we have been able, within the turmoil of having officers from different entities and from different unions with different pay, to organise the New Year celebration, the Spring Festival, the Miss Gibraltar gala performance and the revival of the Drama Festival.

With regard to the first Fashion Week, I would like to inform this House that we are looking at assisting the organisers to stage this event biannually, so that the next one could be some time in October. We have also assisted with four book launches and attended with two officials from the Agency, the Little Constellation workshops and exhibition, with a view to be able to bring them to Gibraltar. This is a very exciting project which we hope will benefit many people in the local art world.

We have also been able to organise a bigger and better Calentita, which was one of our manifesto commitments, and Gibraltar's first Jazz Festival, about which we have had many positive reports in the international press. We have been told that quite a number of people have visited Gibraltar specifically for this event.

Mr Speaker, one more thing to add to the above events has been the celebrations of the Diamond Jubilee of our Majesty, the Queen. When we came into office the committee that was constituted by the previous Minister for Culture had hardly met. In fact, in 2010, when they were thinking of the Diamond Jubilee a tentative committee was formed. This committee never met. It was not until 18th October 2011, two weeks before the Elections were called, that the new committee met to start preparations for this event.

A further meeting was to be held on 9th November. It was clear to me that not much had been prepared and that even at this late stage, it was only a question of general ideas floating around. Once we got into office and seeing the lack of preparation with regard to the celebrations, which were to start the first day of the year, i.e. 1st January, the new Government decided to increase the number of members on the committee. We included the Convent representative who previously could only communicate with the committee through the then Chief Secretary, i.e. No. 6. The Mayor was also included, as were members of the MOD, Commonwealth Society and others who were keen to contribute towards these celebrations.

Mr Speaker, the House will know that the weekend of the 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th June was a great success. Soon after this, my Ministry and the Agency were very involved in the preparations for the Royal Visit of the Earl and Countess of Wessex. This visit ended, as we all saw, with the projection on the North Face of Her Majesty's Rock of the Union flag, our own Gibraltar flag and two images of Her Majesty the Queen.

As the Chief Minister announced, the Ministry for Culture will be moving from the Ince's Hall to the City Hall. This will place the Ministry of Culture in its rightful place in the centre of town.

Turning to heritage, I cannot ignore the fact that the previous Administration spent a great deal of money on Harding's Battery. For those of you who do not know where this is, I can tell you that it is the Battery at Europa Point. We can all remember the song and dance that was made by the Chief Minister, now the Leader of the Opposition – who seems to have left the Chambers – and his Deputy, in the inauguration ceremony for the whole of the Europa Point. I know that my hon. Friend and Colleague, the Hon. Dr. Cortes at the time rightly boycotted such events, due to the manner in which the project ignored advice on the type of vegetation that should have been planted.

Be that as it may, Harding's Battery was opened with the press, cameras etc, and we have subsequently found out that, with so much fuss, it was closed on the same day. Mr Speaker, I am pleased to say that we have now opened it to the public.

I would like to continue with the news that was released at the end of May regarding the Gorham's Cave Complex. The United Kingdom Government has put forward the Cave Complex for World Heritage Site status. We have been given the target date of January 2015 for the submission of the nomination to UNESCO. There are many hurdles still on our way, but the possibility is now there that the Gorham's Cave Complex could become a World Heritage Site by June or July of 2016. Government will therefore be dedicating significant efforts over the next two years to ensure that our nomination will have the greatest chance of success.

A major component of Government policy is to involve all stakeholders. A major player in heritage is the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. I am pleased to inform this House that the new Government has established a good relationship with this institution.

Mr Speaker, I know that one major area that the Trust has been keen to progress for many years now is the development of the new heritage legislation. We have discussed this in the Heritage Action Committee and I am pleased to inform that the Heritage Division is in active discussion with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust so that we may deliver the appropriate piece of legislation at the earliest opportunity.

While on the subject of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust, I can confirm Government's intention to support its work and we can see an increase this year in its annual grant and also by providing a significant capital expenditure towards the refurbishment of their offices at the Main Guard in John Mackintosh Square. There will be other projects which we will be working on together with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust.

The Grand Battery project – which was a project conceived by the previous Administration – will be completed and works are already in hand. We will recall that there was little or no consultation with stakeholders until the new Government came into office.

Continuing with the policy of involving stakeholders, I know that there is a lot of interest from the general public in helping us and there are sites that lend themselves for collaborative work. Led by our team, Devil's Gap has been cleaned up and painted under the guidance of the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. I also know that there are groups, like the Gibraltar Historical Society, who are doing excellent voluntary work under their own volition.

Recently an informal forum has been set up, which has met on one occasion so far, involving the Gibraltar Heritage Trust and other NGOs, with a view to co-ordinating efforts. The involvement of the community in heritage work is something that we wish to encourage, provided it is done in a planned and controlled manner under expert supervision.

In relation to the Heritage Action Committee, we are meeting regularly. I have already indicated my intention to meet with greater frequency than has been the case until now. This has been welcomed by the Committee. This Committee will take a proactive stance to heritage.

Government is keen to protect our heritage at all levels. Therefore, since we came into office, we have taken three initiatives: one has been to create an inter-Ministerial committee which comprises the Deputy Chief Minister, the Minister for Tourism, the Minister for the Environment and myself, as Minister for Heritage. Each Ministry in turn invites their officers to attend these meetings, in order for them to be in a position to co-ordinate action plans for the smooth running of the new Government's initiatives. We have already established the fact that all projects will have to go through an environmental filter and also a heritage filter.

The second initiative is that we have set up an arrangement with a small local business who are employing trainees. I will refer to them as our 'Heritage Crew'. This team is already doing sterling work in refurbishing Parson's Lodge. Our aim is to provide training in heritage-related skills to these young people. In this way, we will develop a sound base for the youth able to conserve and restore our heritage assets. Government is deploying capital funds for refurbishment of heritage assets.

The third initiative is that of establishing a team of two civil servants, one who had been completely ignored for years and is very qualified in IT. He is compiling a database of all Governments assets in relation to pictures, artifacts, documents, etc. We are working closely with the Culture and Heritage Agency, the Archives and the Museum. We are hoping that this database, which will take years to compile, will be available online for people to access. We are still at the embryonic stage, but we are all excited as to how it is developing.

I would like to mention our Museum, before I conclude. I was present at this year's open day and saw first-hand the public support for this institution. I also saw the interest it generated with the Earl and Countess of Wessex, when they visited it last month. Government is keen to develop further the Museum's potential. The Museum is encouraging volunteers to help with its project and become involved as 'Friends of the Museum'.

I conclude with our view of heritage for the future. We have many untapped gems in Gibraltar and I will work with my tourism and environmental colleagues to ensure that this jewel is no longer left abandoned as it has been for years. We will look at ways of giving it all a high profile.

As Minister for the Youth, I am happy to say that all youth clubs are open and that we are working towards having them opened during the weekend. The Laguna Youth Club is back to normal, after the Minister for Social Services kindly returned them these premises for the use it was originally designed for. Further, we are trying to recruit more volunteers to participate in programs designed for the youth.

The Youth Service will be working closely with the Heritage Division of the Culture and Heritage Agency in developing programmes which will help to encourage our young people to take an interest in our heritage – after all, it also belongs to them – and to improve our heritage sites. The youth leader and the youth workers are in the process of writing a policy for the Youth Service, which was one of the recommendations of the review conducted in 2008 and is well overdue. Once this policy is in place, we will be in a better position to encourage our youth in the many exciting projects that we have in mind.

Mr Speaker, since we came into office, the Government has been working very hard to achieve our objectives and I am confident, that together with the vast amount of local talent that we have in all fields, we will get there. With this, I conclude my first Budget speech as a Minister. I would like to thank everyone in the different Ministries, Authorities, Agencies and Companies that comprise my portfolios for embracing the changes that the new Government has embarked upon.

Thank you.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Housing and the Elderly.

Minister for Housing and the Elderly (Hon. C A Bruzon): Mr Speaker, in line with the feelings of honour expressed by my Parliamentary colleagues, it is indeed an honour also for me to stand here today in Parliament, for the first time indeed as a Minister, to address you all. But I do so also with a great sense of responsibility.

May I thank the electorate for making this possible, and in entrusting me as part of the Government in directing Housing Services which, dare I say, is perceived by many as quite a challenging portfolio. I am proud to be of service to the community and will continue to carry out my role to the best of my ability to all the members of our community. This Government, which is your Government, their Government, is determined to help, assist, and shape public services in such a way so that everyone may benefit.

Secondly, as this is my first Budget speech as Housing Minister, I wish to go back to the General Election. At the time, people use to stop me in the street quite frequently to complain about housing or to discuss personal problems that they had encountered. Even then, I could appreciate the complexities that are shared within the delivery of such a service. It touches so many aspects of community life and environment.

For example, some people waiting to be discharged from hospital, in many cases, depend on modifications to bathroom facilities; or indeed, the elderly, who as they grow older may need alterations to their homes. Similarly, as people marry and families expand, they need to stretch accommodation needs to suit new siblings. Or indeed, families may wish to take care of parents, and in some cases, regrettably this may include caring for loved ones struck by illness and so many other challenges in life. This in part may require additional rooms, space, facilities, in order to improve quality of living.

Additionally, repairs may have to be prioritised for those that are unemployed, in receipt of Social Security or indeed, there may be others with little disposable income, or pensioners, unable to pay for minor repairs. Service users come from a wide area within our community and it is only now that I am beginning to share the deeper knowledge and understanding of my work that often consists of having to prioritise, introduce policies that are fair, and touch positively upon everyone in our society.

It is, Mr Speaker, an almost impossible task, given the very few houses built in the past 16 years, but I am fortunate indeed to share such concerns with staff that are professional, extremely diligent and caring in the work they do and although I remember often the Housing Department being on the receiving end of criticism, may I stress that I have only admiration for those public servants who have to attend to people, sometimes desperate for an immediate solution to be found. It is difficult to find the right balance and to prioritise for those most vulnerable and demanding cases.

Mr Speaker, I wish to reinforce our Government's message that we are here for everyone, that is, for our loyal supporters, yes indeed, and also for those who did not necessarily support our manifesto, which contains commitments that are indeed comprehensive, modern and deliverable. In this endeavour, the Government will introduce whatever reforms are necessary; and wherever practically possible, these will be geared to achieving practical aims and not simply reactionary. Essentially, this will be done strategically by virtue of, first, prioritising funding where it is most needed; secondly introducing capital works for major refurbishment programmes within past abandoned estates, inclusive of maximising opportunities in constructing additional floor levels for a greater supply of accommodation for those patiently waiting for Government housing; thirdly, boosting greater attention to bath-to-shower conversions and indeed, modifications approved by the Gibraltar Health Authority's Occupational Therapists; fourthly, reforming the Housing Works Agency including how its services are to be discharged and directed that is achievable and not pie in the sky; in fifth place, also reforming the Housing Act; number (6), commencing the construction of co-ownership and rental housing schemes; and finally, number (7), it is most important, that we listen to and hear our tenants, about their concerns, their grievances and at all times show a sympathetic and human approach in dealing with their needs.

Number (1) – prioritising funding: Mr Speaker, the Government is determined to ensure that appropriate funding is directed to projects that (1) will benefit Government tenants; (2) target areas which are in serious need of repair; and (3), where practically and technically feasible, focus on constructing additional floor levels to assist those on the Housing Waiting Lists.

Though the former Administration did admittedly pursue capital works in many Government estates, I regret that this was done at the expense of others which were completely abandoned, namely Glacis, Moorish Castle and Laguna Estates. Apart from minor response maintenance and emergency repairs, they have had little development, to the detriment of our tenants.

It is because of the seriousness of this lack of attention in maintenance, that this Government will pursue a comprehensive and integrated system of waterproofing. In addition, due to the nature in which construction has historically taken place, it will be possible to build additional flooring as part of the lift installation programme, thus enabling homes to be allocated for Government housing applicants.

May I add that the necessary feasibility studies have now been completed and any funding arrangements will be introduced accordingly, in order to commence with such urgent works. This is in line with our Government manifesto commitments, as we are determined to ensure that our forgotten Government tenants are properly and fairly treated like any other tenants that have enjoyed the benefits of major repairs and refurbishment.

It is precisely because of this fact that it was decided to ensure that many of these tenants would have the opportunity of seeing and meeting their Royal Highnesses, the Earl and Countess of Wessex during the Diamond Jubilee celebrations. As in all of our community, Government tenants of Moorish Castle and Laguna Estate did us proud in the welcome and elegance of their cheer towards Prince Edward and his wife, who were greatly moved by the outpouring of affection. We, in this Government, will not abandon these equally deserving tenants and will ensure that they are treated with the dignity and given the service that they deserve.

Number (2) – other capital works: Mr Speaker, in order to assist in this campaign, a total of £1 million will initially be budgeted for capital works, though this amount will be extended where necessary to cater for other major repairs. In addition to what I mentioned earlier, the Government will continue with major repairs at Harrington Building, Churchill House, South Pavilion Building, Bado's Building, Governor's Meadow House, Alameda Estate, whilst at Schomberg Buildings, major works have now been successfully completed. May I also add that a major and comprehensive window replacement programme has recently got underway at Chilton Court.

Mr Speaker, one of our main concerns when entering Government was the length of time taken by the Housing Works Agency to turnover (a) the cleaning and (b) refurbishments of flats. In the majority of cases, these appear to be excessive delays. Therefore, in order to tackle the backlog head on and reduce the unacceptable delays, the Government, as a matter of policy, outsourced the cleaning and refurbishment activities. This major exercise will be complemented by the re-introduction of the self-repair system which was stopped by the former Administration back in April 2011.

Mr Speaker, may I firstly highlight that in line with the Government's collective approach, the Housing Department has worked closely with the Employment and Training Board whereby the latter has introduced mechanisms to ensure that construction companies employ local residents. This twofold strategy has (a) injected a much needed boost to small locally registered construction companies to undertake cleaning and refurbishment activities for the Housing Department; and (b) introduced a process whereby the recruitment of local residents is prioritised.

All that said, the Housing Works Agency continues to clean and refurbish housing stock, though at a more manageable level, whilst because of the private sector input, both the backlog is being systematically eroded and unacceptable delays will hopefully be a thing of the past.

This results in both the public and private sectors benefiting from work and in addition, this is an example of two large Government Departments working closely together towards mutual goals for the benefit of large numbers of families in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, the fact is that some Government tenants do not wish to wait for refurbishment; rather they may wish to take ownership and directly carry out repairs themselves. Therefore, in order to facilitate such empowerment, the Government has decided to re-introduce a system of self-repair, though with a difference. Unlike before, whereby the onus was on tenants to approach construction/building material suppliers via a voucher system, the new approach is to maximise further the Housing Works Agency's storing facilities, and facilitate self-repair by the latter, transporting agreed materials directly from the Centralised Depot to the allocated Government flat.

This effectively removes any onus on the tenant to be left with the burden of (a) transporting the said materials, (b) ensuring that there are no unnecessary delays incurred by suppliers and (c) that tenants are not held to ransom by some suppliers who simply do not produce specified tendered materials because of lack of storage, all of which will be detrimental to Government tenants.

Mr Speaker, as far as maintenance and repairs is concerned, all the above measures, including those mentioned earlier, are a clear demonstration of this Government's total commitment to all our tenants. Insofar as empty Government flats are concerned, many of these were abandoned for years by the former Administration and, regrettably, left to deteriorate beyond economic repair. These empty buildings will be put out to tender to the general public, though preference will be given to purchasers that are (1) on the Housing Waiting List and/or (2) tenants already in occupation of a Government flat that wish to release their dwelling as part of the exchange. Again, this will help generate those areas in the Upper Town that have been abandoned by the former Administration.

In addition, the Government will seek ways of improving infrastructure in the Upper Town area to facilitate vehicular access and parking. In addition, there will be improved play areas for our toddlers and youngsters, so that they may play safely and enjoy recreational facilities. Already, improvements have been introduced at Moorish Castle, whereby we were honoured as I said earlier, by their Royal Highnesses the Earl and Countess of Wessex's recent inauguration.

Number (3) – specific modifications for Government tenants: Mr Speaker, as I mentioned in my introduction that the Government will be focusing much greater attention towards tenants who need that additional bit of help, particularly those whose lives have drastically changed because of medical and/or personal circumstances. With this in mind, we have already embarked on a comprehensive programme of bath to shower conversion, through Gibraltar Joinery Building Services Ltd (GJBS), a Government owned company. I can confirm that we have made real in-roads on the long waiting list of tenants, many of whom have waited years for such facilities. For example, all those tenants waiting for a bath-to-shower conversion last January/February have already had their units fitted.

Mr Speaker, may I add, that specialist alterations and/or modifications will continue as previously accommodated through the former Administration, though these would require input from the Gibraltar Health Authority's Occupational Therapy Unit. For example, it was noted upon entering Government, that there were a vast amount of tenants waiting for modifications at Albert Risso House; this, despite the fact that the building had just recently been constructed.

Nevertheless, there were numerous tenants whose flats required specialist attention and modifications. Again, I can confirm that this has been prioritised, as the Government is determined to help those in our community who are in real need of our intervention.

Number (4) – Housing Works Agency: Mr Speaker, there has been much debate about how the former Buildings and Works operated, its share of problems and complaints, particularly its role and purpose. Now that this has been restructured into the Housing Works Agency by the former Administration not so much attention was focused on our Technical Department.

The separation of the Buildings and Works into the Housing Works Agency meant that officers previously engaged on similar work at the same grade and salary in the Buildings and Works and the Housing Department did not get the same opportunity to opt to transfer from the Civil Service status to that of Agency employee at an enhanced salary. The effect of this has meant that some of our staff who continued in the Housing Department felt that they should not have been denied access to the early exit package or to transfer out of the Civil Service.

To address this issue, the Government took the view that it should commission an internal report, in order to identify areas where greater efficiency and application of resources could be maximised. I am pleased to state that this report has been completed and the Government will be proceeding to explain the nature and role of the Agency, to enable it to accommodate additional responsibilities to accept the transfer of additional staff.

The Agency will be more efficiently run by those technically competent to do so and allowed to operate as a proper modern maintenance organisation, thus moving deliberately away from past 'cap-in-hand' practices, which, incidentally and regularly was the case on an annual basis at the former Buildings and Works and duly ignored and dismissed by the former Administration, despite Mr Speaker, continuous and regular approaches made by senior management, expressing a shortage of funds. This meant that the backlog of jobs for minor repairs simply grew over a number of years and created unnecessary delays for works to be completed.

Mr Speaker, in addition, training will be essential to the success of the Agency's ability to deliver an improved service. Therefore, the Government will introduce training to facilitate operational staff in order: (a) to maximise operational capability; and (b) create greater customer awareness, so that staff become much more in tune with the needs of Government tenants.

Number (5) – reforms to the Housing Act 2007: Mr Speaker, as you will already be aware, the Government has decided to do away with the Housing Tribunal, as it was felt that such a platform was ineffective. It did not operate properly and neither did it represent a real transparent mechanism for appeals to be lodged by members of the public. Instead, the Government will introduce legislative powers, so that the Ombudsman is able to intervene on housing matters that are considered unfair and unreasonable.

We believe that the Ombudsman is the right and most appropriate authority to guard against unfairness and maladministration. The Government, therefore, aims to change the current legislation accordingly, to introduce and facilitate such ambitions, very shortly.

Mr Speaker, I have also been made aware of issues affecting private tenants, particularly the general lack of protection afforded to them within the Housing Act. This must be addressed and a proper balance pursued between the needs of both private landlords and private tenants. We, therefore, intend to modify the Act in order to correct such anomalies and I have asked my hon. Friend and colleague, the Minister for Justice to assist me in this process.

Number (6) – co-ownership and rental housing schemes: Mr Speaker, firstly may I acknowledge and reiterate that the former Administration did indeed provide accommodation and new homes for our community. The Mid Harbour Estate and Waterport Terraces are good examples of these efforts. However, our main concern stems from the fact that the process took an excessive and inexplicable length of time to materialise.

I am also concerned about the quality, maybe poor quality of some other estates delivered in time, namely parts of Bay View, Nelson's View and Cumberland Terraces, which have already required attention as they were rushed into completion. These require repairs already and will cost the taxpayer millions to deal with the negligence. Moreover not enough properties were delivered in the 16 years of Government, thus condemning a number of people to the housing waiting list.

Mr Speaker, the Government in its first few months of administration has already earmarked preferential sites and has determined the numbers of accommodation units for completion. Very quickly we have undertaken an extensive exercise to verify the 'needs' of eligible members of our community in this regard.

Forgive me if I do not enter into any specific details here today, as I have no wish to pre-empt what will be the subject of an imminent Government announcement.

Nevertheless, the Government is determined to meet its obligations and the general public will witness 'the laying of bricks', to excuse the pun, very shortly as stated in our manifesto commitments. These homes will be fit for purpose, modern in design but most importantly be constructed for our people bearing in mind their specific needs, and of course, environmentally friendly.

Number (7) – listening to and hearing our tenants: one of the main observations whilst in Opposition was the number of complaints that I received from Government tenants who tried accessing former Ministers for Housing to discuss their specific housing problems. Many reported that they simply were unable to obtain an appointment, whilst others complained about the long waiting time for such opportunity to meet face-to-face. Understandably, this results in frustration for the tenant or applicant who is eager to express himself/herself and as often is the case, it involves rather complex issues that may relate to medical problems, break-up in relationships and/or marriage, anti-social behaviour, allocation of Government flats, position and length of time awaiting allocation, delays in repairs, property sales, etc. It is indeed an exhaustive list of issues, and sometimes matters may relate or fall under the responsibility of other Government Departments. Nevertheless, Housing seems to be the first point of call for many people.

Consequently, and despite enormous efforts to see as many people as possible, there continues to be a lengthy list of those waiting to see me, but I am determined to persevere and see as many people as I possibly can, as I feel very strongly about the fact that often, people just want to be heard, acknowledged, and helped, if possible. This continues to be my goal.

Well, Mr Speaker, the Government has major challenges ahead with respect to housing, which affects all people and walks of life. We are determined not to fail the electorate and mean what we say about meeting our manifesto commitments. With this in mind, we will do everything possible to help our citizens with their housing needs and concerns, and we will go the extra mile to accomplish this.

May I finally take a moment, Mr Speaker, to extend my gratitude to members of staff at the Housing Department and Agency. I am fully aware that the majority take their work very, very seriously. I regularly see on a day-to-day basis, acts of real professionalism and dedication which dare I say, go unmentioned or highlighted. May I thank all of you who are listening for your continued support and co-operation.

May I also, Mr Speaker, publicly express my sincere gratitude to all participants of Government tenants' associations and very importantly, members of the Housing Allocation Committee who give up their own valuable time, and on a voluntary basis. They do so because of their strong sense of community spirit and the result is that they contribute greatly in moulding the services provided. Thank you all for being part of what I like to call 'our Housing Family' and I hope to continue enjoying your collective contributions and support towards helping our tenants and ultimately, our community as a whole.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

(Applause)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, the GSLP/Liberal manifesto for the 2011 Elections did not have much to say in respect of heritage matters. In fact little importance was given to heritage issues, thereby resulting in only six sentences, occupying 12 lines of print, being dedicated to this area of governance. In contrast, the GSD committed itself to complete projects which it had already begun, as well as listing its exciting vision for future and new heritage related projects.

The present Government inherited updated legislation together with newly appointed Trustees of the Gibraltar Garrison Library. We sincerely hope that the Government and the Trust will work together with enthusiasm and in close consultation, so that this Library and its assets will become an important facility for the people of Gibraltar.

Although now in Opposition, the GSD continues to recommend the Gibraltar Government Archives be transferred into a refurbished ex-Chronicle Printing Works building next door to the Library, so that together they may operate as a modern, well resourced Gibraltar Archives and Reference/Research facility including digitalised searchable data.

Updated legislation for the management and preservation of our heritage and the listing and preservation of buildings needs to be completed. In this respect, work was already at an advanced stage, thanks to the GSD's initiative whilst in Government, with drafting undertaken, in close consultation with relevant experts and the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. It is now up to the present Government to embark upon drafting legislation in this important area, which the community expects to be undertaken as soon as possible.

The present Government has acted responsibly in continuing to pursue UNESCO World Heritage status for Gorham's Cave and adjacent sites. Indeed, much work had already been done by the Museum Team, during my tenure as Minister for Heritage, in respect of submitting nomination forms and supporting documentation, etc. I take this opportunity to thank and congratulate the Heritage Division staff involved in having achieved such a high ranking status in the United Kingdom's nomination process.

In wishing the Museum Team all the very best for the future in their ongoing excavations at Gorham's and Vanguard's Caves, I urge the Government to also offer their full support – especially in respect of finalising improved land access to these extremely important prehistorical sites. Government has a duty to preserve all historical sites and assets which the community inherits. So therefore, I strongly recommend that the Government looks into the manner King's Bastion was conscientiously both preserved and turned into a leisure centre, catering for present day needs. This is an ideal way of preserving our past, alongside giving today's community the leisure and social facilities it rightfully deserves and desires.

Mr Speaker, through the collective celebration of social events, participating Gibraltarians contribute towards reinforcing our identity, culture and history as a people and as a community. Both the performing and fine arts fraternities always prove themselves to be very proactive within their own specialised areas. These cultural groups now patiently await the implementation of the Government's promises as made through their manifesto commitments.

Amongst the first of the promises to have already materialised has been the International Jazz Festival for which provision of £100,000 is made in this year's Estimates. Given this substantial amount going towards just one form of musical entertainment, other disciplines within the local performing arts fraternity have high hopes of increased cultural grants coming their way.

In this present day and age, the local community expects its Government to support and assist our own home grown budding musicians, singers, actors, artists, etc, and provide them with facilities which allows them to achieve their full potential. Through its manifesto, the Government adopted the slogan 'culture needs to be nurtured.' Now that they are in office, Gibraltar sincerely hopes that this will not become an empty promise.

Amongst its many Election promises, the Government committed itself to provide facilities for teaching of music and instruments to young people; establishment and funding for a Gibraltar Philharmonic Orchestra; run a 'learn an instrument' campaign amongst young people; establishment of an academy of the performing arts, administered by an Arts Council; refurbishment of the Ince's Hall area and enclose the patio in a modern way to allow its use even in winter; development of a new, modern theatre for Gibraltar; seek to establish Gibraltar as part of the touring circuit for UK and Spanish theatre productions. I therefore now, Mr Speaker, have to ask, when will these projects become a reality?

Mr Speaker, the GSD has always seen sports and leisure as an essential element of a high quality of life – embracing entertainment and leisure, family life and quality time, healthy life styles and robust youth character formation and orientation. It has always been the GSD's policy to be supportive of and assist our own sporting bodies to overcome Spanish inspired attempts to block membership of international governing bodies. The Opposition wishes to reassure Gibraltar's sporting fraternity that we will continue to back pending applications for international membership in respect of all our sporting associations, inclusive of Gibraltar's longstanding bid to join the Olympic movement.

We take this opportunity to congratulate our very own Georgina Cassar on being selected to form part of Team GB, in the Rhythmic Gymnastics disciplines, at the forthcoming London 2012 Olympics. Alongside her, we also congratulate Nathan Stagno, who will form part of the international team of elite umpires with responsibility to officiate at hockey matches in the Olympics. We live in hope that, in the not too distant future, other Gibraltarians will also participate in the Olympics, both as athletes and officials. However, our expectations are that this should be not as part of Team GB, but rather in our own right, under the nomenclature and flag of Gibraltar.

Although the local community already enjoys both good quality and a wide variety of sporting facilities, there are always areas where these can be improved upon and/or expanded. It was with this in mind that the GSD pledged to convert the recently acquired Europa Sports Fields into further facilities for use by our local sporting fraternity, catering mainly for cricket, rugby, football and football training and other sports. There is, Mr Speaker, already a degree of fear among some local sporting associations that the Europa Sports Fields may end up being developed and allocated for exclusive use by only one sole sporting association. This, if true, could end up in the curtailing of facilities already enjoyed by other sporting bodies, and even pose a threat to the existing membership of their relevant international governing body. We sincerely hope that Government very carefully considers all options and looks into the consequences, before taking final and definitive decisions.

It is extremely important that the Sports Ministry always works in close consultation with the wide-ranging membership of the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council and the development of new and additional facilities should be no exception to this.

Provision continues to be made in the Estimates for sports grants. However, the local sporting fraternity patiently waits to hear further details of their promised Elite Athlete Assistance and Assistance for Non-recognised Sports. Some sportsmen and sportswomen already wonder if these schemes will become a reality. Likewise, Gibraltar's martial arts fraternity looks forward to having a worthy centre of their own – again, as promised in the run-up to the last General Elections.

In rounding up these few points I have selected and highlighted in respect of cultural and sporting matters, I must ask if Government have already found the appropriate area or location in which all the different cultural and sporting facilities will be based. Let me remind Government, they promised these would be modern and new with improved facilities. It will be a centre for all social and sporting groups – concludes their manifesto promise. Mr Speaker, when will these pledges become a reality?

Mr Speaker, during its last term in office, the GSD built around 500 new rental homes, completed 140 homes for the elderly in the form of Albert Risso House, allocated a record number of flats to people on the medical and social lists and eliminated the waiting lists that existed for these categories at the start of their last term. In answer to Question 543/2012, the Minister for Housing confirmed there are at present 1,677 applicants on the Government's Housing Waiting Lists. These are made up of 1,064 on the waiting list proper and a further 63 on the pre-list.

The GSLP/Liberal manifesto has a few pages with colour photographs of their vision for new homes to be made available during their term in office. These projects promise both co-ownership and rental homes, supposedly with solar power facilities, as well as roof gardens and eco-friendly designs. However, during the GSLP's previous eight years in Government, no new homes for rental were built, so the local community still waits to see what will actually be delivered during this current term.

I urge the present Minister for Housing to personally ensure that any new homes built do not suffer from numerous defects, as history shows was the case in their construction of co-ownership homes when they were last in office. Quality in construction of family homes cannot be compromised under any circumstances. We hope that this time round they will have learnt from previous mistakes.

The Government's manifesto makes reference to the establishment of a separate additional housing list for applicants who are currently living in Spain and who wish to return home. However, barely three months after the Elections, in answer to Question 300/2012, the Minister for Housing said, during the March Parliamentary session, that no separate housing list had been opened for applicants currently living in Spain. Furthermore, he unashamedly revealed that the demand is literally very limited.

Given the real facts – as now stated by the Hon. Minister in this House – it has become clearly evident that the criticisms previously levelled against the GSD Government were merely a contrivance to make the electorate believe there were scores of Gibraltarians forced to live in Spain, simply because the GSD was not providing accommodation for them here in Gibraltar. The true facts, as now revealed personally by the Hon. Minister in this House, prove that the GSLP/Liberals comments on this matter were politically insincere and even factually wrong.

Under their section dedicated to Youth, the GSLP/Liberal manifesto states that young people who are entitled to housing will not wait more than three years for a home. Given that there are presently a large number of young people registered as applicants seeking their own homes, conscientiously hoping to move on in a responsible manner with their own adult lives and without continuing to be dependent upon their parents, I must ask on their behalf for a firm commitment from Government in respect of this promise. Government's answer should include expected rental housing completion dates.

The GSD worked hard in consultation with the relevant union to reform the old Buildings and Works Department and its transfer into the Housing Works Agency. This project provided brand new workshops and depots – and from its origins delivered vastly improved services to Government tenants. Furthermore, an agreement was reached with the union to the effect that manning levels would be replaced in future with one new employee employed by the Agency for every two who retire.

Through his answer to Question 430/2012, the Minister for Housing confirmed that since December 2011, a total of five employees have been transferred and a further four retired from the Housing Agency. However, no new employees have been taken on by the Agency and this clearly is in breach of the agreement reached with the union.

Furthermore, Mr Speaker, despite there being a statutory obligation, Government decided to abolish the post of Chief Executive Officer of the Housing Agency. This unexpected and sudden course of action raises concerns amongst the electorate at large that Government are embarking on a campaign of chopping the heads of those perceived to be their opponent's supporters. This action, together with the manner in which Luis Montiel, my old colleague, has still not been reinstated into his previous position of employment, after he stood down as a Member of this House, has led many public servants to even fear that middle and top management positions will in future be allocated only to those whom the Government trust as their own partys supporters.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): That was before 8th December!

Mr Speaker: Order! Order!

Hon. E J Reyes: Furthermore, Mr Speaker, this year's Estimates show that the Government has no intention of appointing either a Chief Executive or Deputy Chief Executive of the Housing Works Agency. This therefore raises a question of how and by whom will this important Department be managed?

Through answers given to Questions during the June session of Parliament, the Minister for Housing stated that a total of 1,987 tenants were listed as requiring a total of 640 internal and 3,243 external jobs to be carried out. The Opposition hopes that adequate human resources will be provided to the Housing Works Agency, so they may carry out their duties in a timely and efficient manner, thus ensuring that Government tenants are able to enjoy living in their homes in the rightful and dignified manner they are entitled to.

The Opposition knows there are many excellent craftsmen and professionals within the Housing Works Agency. I must stress that it is important to ensure that the correct and proper administration procedures and resources are in place for housing maintenance and repairs to be carried out. Therefore, it is regrettable to see that, for this financial year, the Agency's workforce is reduced from a grand total of 160 employees catered for in the previous financial year now down to 146. How then will the Agency be expected to carry out its duties, more so with a promised and therefore expected increase in housing rental stock, if the Agency is not given the human resources required to meet workloads and targets?

There are already signs that repairs are taking far too long, or not even being listed for action, in rental estates. For example, Mr Speaker, many tenants are asking me why is one of the lifts at Bow Wave House at Mid Harbours Estate still not repaired since it broke down around Christmas time. Lack of timely action in respect of routine maintenance and repairs further leads many people to ask, is Government really going to deliver with good quality results in respect of its promises for the refurbishment, beautification and maintenance of housing estates?

Mr Speaker, the Government has only been in office for seven months and we have been careful, in the public interest, to allow them enough space to develop their own policies. Therefore, I wish to reassure Government, and in particular the Ministers whom I shadow, that I remain always ready to work collegiately within this House, when embarking in reasonable and responsible initiatives so that, together, we may improve the quality of life of this precious community of ours. I sincerely hope Government will accept this genuine offer in the spirit it is intended.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, whereas this my fifth Budget Address, it is not an exaggeration to say that I feel immensely privileged to deliver my maiden Budget address as Minister for Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar for Tourism, Public Transport and the Port. I am also honoured, Mr Speaker, by the trust vested by the people of Gibraltar to represent them in the affairs of Government.

1190 I know I speak for all my Cabinet colleagues, when I say that we are enthused and that we are entirely committed to implement what is undoubtedly an exciting programme for Government and a contract, Mr
Speaker, that will not only benefit all Gibraltarians but which will, once and for all, provide that quantum 1195 leap, Mr Speaker, in the political development of a country as rightly demanded by a majority of Gibraltarians. Any objective observer, Mr Speaker – amongst which, I cannot certainly include any of the Members opposite, in the light of their contributions so far – will agree with me that the new Government has already met, in seven months in office, a good number, a sound number of the manifesto commitments and is therefore well poised to deliver even more during this financial year. Just yesterday,
Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister and my Hon. Ministerial colleagues announced even further 1200 manifesto commitments that have been met during the last seven months alone. (Applause)

Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister has entrusted me with a wide portfolio of responsibilities and I intend to take these in turn.

In the first instance, I intend to set out the Government's various achievements in the last six months, as well as highlighting the projects that the Government will undertake this financial year. The pleasantries, Mr Speaker, end here, because, whilst highlighting the many Government accomplishments 1205 in only seven months in the manifesto commitments I will not just take, Mr Speaker, but in fact seize the opportunity to highlight the more outrageous instances of political mismanagement of the previous Administration and no amount of protestation from the Opposition benches will deter us from addressing in this House what can properly, truly and best be described as the electorally 'big lies' of the party opposite during this last Election campaign. (Several Members: Hear, hear!)

1210 Mr Speaker, what the hon. Members opposite cannot do – or at least they cannot do without with any degree of political integrity and credibility – is to cry foul and to pretend to suffer some mortal wounds and then soliloquise about them in this House, and then when we criticise their policy failures as a result of which we have – during the financial year that we share – had to act to redress and address those same policy catastrophes, some of which I will highlight later. Such statements, Mr Speaker, are perfectly valid 1215 and pertinent and I will explain to the Hon. Mr Figueras why such statements are particularly valid and relevant in the light of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's statements to me in past Budget contributions.

But, does the GSD think, Mr Speaker, that they can adopt purely baseless and partisan political postures and that we will not rise to set the record straight? Further still, Mr Speaker, if the Hon. Mr Figueras really thinks that when a new Government, barely seven months in office, is acting like an Opposition by raising very recent past, relevant political issues in the light of current developments within the financial year that we share, he would have wailed and he would have caterwauled in despair to hear the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister, argue at length in his four replies, 1225 while I was a Member of the Opposition, that it was relevant to go as far back as 1988 and blame the GSLP for what happened in 2008, 2009, 2010 and 2011!

In his reply, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he was Chief Minister in 2011, went back to 1988 – but he was not the only Member of the Opposition who did so, Mr Speaker! If we go back to the contributions of the hon. Gentleman and Lady opposite, when they were in Government: for example, the Hon. Mr Netto mentioned 1988 seven times in 2011. Isn't that going back to the past, Mr Figueras?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well done, well spotted!

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Clive Beltran, who was the chief 'rent a goon' and main 'clapper' in support of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition also mentioned 1988 twice. Yvette del Agua also mentions it on a 1235 couple of occasions. This is in 2011. They mention 1988 – but we cannot mention 2011, when we share the same financial year! Give us a break, Mr Speaker! (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Applause)

Hon. Chief Minister: A tour de force, thus!

1240 Hon. N F Costa: Political considerations aside, Mr Speaker, I turn, firstly, to the Gibraltar Port Authority. More will come politically, Mr Speaker, but I would like to concentrate on my responsibilities, for a little while at least!

Mr Speaker, it is the view of the Government that the time has certainly come to consolidate the port operation by investing in the infrastructure and equipment with a programme of capital expenditure that 1245 has suffered lack of investment for many years. The new Captain of the Port, Roy Stanbrook, joined at the end of February and I endeavour to meet him weekly to develop an ongoing strategy to maintain and grow the port business, while safeguarding the infrastructure and our environment. In order to maintain and improve the commercial viability and safety of the Port of Gibraltar, investment in infrastructure and personnel is clearly essential.

1250 It is to be noted, Mr Speaker, that the systematic under-investment that I have just highlighted has surfaced unfortunately in recent security and insurance audits that have exposed some quite painful shortcomings, which this Government is ensuring the Gibraltar Port Authority addresses. At the same time, Mr Speaker, continuing and ongoing audits of infrastructure and systems have exposed vulnerabilities in business critical systems. A project to identify such issues and build resilience into the port operation is currently underway and I look forward to receiving the recommendations of the GPA.

Further, Mr Speaker, the security of our port and the safety of its users remain paramount and therefore the continued investment in an integrated closed circuit television system, with wide area surveillance of all areas of the port, is considered essential. The system, which augments the CCTV, which is already installed, will be fitted within a few weeks.
