Hon. Chief Minister: I am extraordinarily grateful to the hon. Gentleman for that candid response and given that the man who was Minister for Housing is sitting to his right, I am surprised (Laughter) that he is not able to obtain the information.

510

But I will write to him so that he can then, I hope, confirm to us why it was that they made the decision at the time, which they appear to be so against now, given that the problems that he is raising are problems which arise from their decision making. They are problems which arise from the fact that they only installed one lift. They are problems that we are going to resolve and they are problems that may cost more now than if they had done them. But he shall have my letter asking him for a full and frank answer to one of the things he appears to have changed his mind about now. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

FINANCIAL SERVICES AND GAMING

Minister's travelling expenses –
Trips undertaken; details

Clerk: Question 454, the Hon. D J Bossino.

515 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, further to Question 398 of 2014, can the Minister for Financial Services confirm that the information sought in this question is now fully set out in the Government website, as he alleged was the case when he provided his answer in Parliament?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

520 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will recall that on the last occasion that I asked this question, which was in the last sitting, he said that the information was in the website at the time.

525 When I carried out... and I dutifully sat down and did not ask any supplementaries, following the Rules of the House, which is that information which is publicly available ought not to be the subject of a question in the House, and I thought that the relevant page on the website had been updated with the information which I sought. But in fact when I did, during the course of the lunch break, have a look at what was available on line, it in fact did not contain the information. Can the Minister confirm that this is in fact the case?

530 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker. When the hon. Member asked the question last time, I was informed by those in the office who deal with posting the information on the website that it was in fact on the website, and hence the answer given.

535 When I checked the website myself, as he did, I discovered that some elements of it had not been updated and some had. Therefore, the answer would be, to be accurate, that part of it was and part of it was not.

540 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, it was not just a question of updating information. It was a specific question which I asked which related to who attended with him – that information was not on the website. It is not a question of updating. It is a question of that information not being publicly available as he in fact told me at the last sitting of the House. So maybe he should have a word with his chums at the New People and tell them that it was not such an absurd question after all as was reported in the press.

545 Mr Speaker, going to the matter of the information, which is now updated – and I note that the website suggests that it was updated only on Monday 23rd June 2014 – that information which is now publicly available states that the hon. Member attended, between 24th and 28th March, various cities – Amsterdam, Rotterdam and Casablanca. In relation to Amsterdam and Rotterdam, he was accompanied by a Mr Paul Astengo. Whilst in relation to Casablanca only, he was accompanied, I think, by one of the Chief Minister's private secretaries, Gareth Flower. Why is it the case that Mr Flower attended with him to Casablanca?

550 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has made about six or seven questions within the same one and a number of statements to boot.

555 Firstly, the information that was on the website at the time, as I mentioned in my previous answer, was that it was partly there and partly not there. The part that was not there are the names of the people that he has mentioned and so I stand by the answer that I gave him to the previous question.

Secondly, with regard to whether the question was an absurd question or not, irrespective of whatever the People may say, some may take the view that it still is and was an absurd question.

560 In relation to Mr Gareth Flower, Mr Speaker, Mr Gareth Flower had arranged a number of important meetings formally in Casablanca through a number of introductions he had made with banks and financial institutions, including the Stock Exchange in Casablanca, Casablanca Finance City and a number of banks in Casablanca, all of which form a part of what Gibraltar Finance and this Government is trying to do in extolling the virtues of our community and our jurisdiction as a jurisdiction of choice in financial services, Mr Speaker.

565 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, what involvement has Mr Flower, as a private secretary of the Chief Minister, with matters in relation to financial services? I mean the matter just does not stack up. I simply do not understand. If he could answer that particular question and clarify the position in relation to that.

570 Secondly, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is again mistaken. He is wrong. The information which was not there was not simply related to who attended with him, but also a question which I asked in the question on the Order Paper, which are the costs. The costs in relation to accommodation for his meetings in London in May and for accommodation for his meetings in Bermuda were not there. Can he confirm that is the case because that information was not there when I looked at it at lunchtime?

575 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the information in relation to the visit to Bermuda definitely was not there because he asked me the question in May and I went to Bermuda in June. (Laughter) So I do not quite understand how he can say that I am incorrect when he is asking me to confirm that the information was on the website. How could it have been there in May if I travelled in June? Of course, it was not there. It may have been an estimate of what it may have cost, but certainly the visit had not happened.

580 In relation as to why Mr Gareth Flower was there, I would have thought that the hon. Members opposite would welcome the fact that different Departments of the Government are involved in promoting Gibraltar and indeed in promoting the use of Gibraltar in jurisdictions irrespective of who that person may be. The fact that the Chief Minister's Office has representation in facilitating meetings through people he had met in a previous visit, I would have thought would be welcome. It seems not to be.

585 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, it seems that the Member ought to check the website before answering the question in the manner that he has answered, because in fact, Mr Speaker, unless he is suggesting that I am being mendacious in the way I am posing the questions, the fact of the matter is that I did check the website information during the course of the lunch hour and the Bermuda trip was already there. If he checks the position, Mr Speaker, it shows that it was updated on 8th May 2014; yet the information in relation to the 2nd to the 9th June Bermuda visit was there and that is the position.

590 But, nevertheless, Mr Speaker, there is still information which he has not provided in the question which I sought back on 29th May and that relates to the costs of those who attended with him. All I have are the attendees. But I do not yet have – and the Parliament therefore does not yet have – the costs of those who attended with him. Is he in a position to provide that information now?

595 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, it is really quite remarkable that when you are trying to be transparent and updating information onto the website with the frequency that we do, that we should be criticised for it. I can understand why, because obviously the Members opposite did not have that philosophy when they were in Government (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) although they seem to be very keen to adopt it now in Opposition.

600 The information in respect of Bermuda was a provision for what visit was about to happen within the following 10 days/two weeks after the question. So it was actually advanced information of what was going to happen, which I thought the hon. Member would actually welcome.

605 In respect of the costs on Bermuda of the people accompanying, then obviously, Mr Speaker, that question is a separate question on the Order Paper which is in fact Question 456 as to what the costs are of the delegation that went, and I will give him that when we get there.

In respect of the other costs of other individuals, those have not been provided, the Member is absolutely right. If he requests those, I will obtain that information for him and write to him separately, Mr Speaker, as I do not have that information available to me.

610 Hon. D J Bossino: Just to point out, Mr Speaker, that in fact the information was requested in the question. The fact is that the Minister very smugly, and I think ungentlemanly on the last occasion, simply sat down and said, 'No, the information is on the website', when it has been proved, I think beyond any reasonable doubt, Mr Speaker, that the information was not on the website and maybe he should reconsider next time he answers questions in the way he has.

Mr Speaker: Perhaps the jury should now return a verdict of guilty. (Laughter)

620 A Member: Unanimous!

625 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I would say to the hon. Gentleman, with respect, it ill behoves Members of the Opposition, who represent the Party that was in Government for 16 years that did not provide information on any website and had to be asked to provide information, to accuse any Member of this side of the House of being gentlemanly or not less gentlemanly. I do not think that is what we come here for and I do not think it advances our possibility of getting through a Question Time that is about information. And I would ask that we simply try and address issues as to information during Question Time.

630 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I agree with the Hon. the Chief Minister, and of course we want to progress matters, but this is not an isolated incident. I raise it because I think it does concern... Mr Speaker, we have been asking questions on this side of the House and on more than one occasion we have received an answer, 'the information is on the website'. We have then gone to the website and the information has not been on the website.

635 Or alternatively, actually I asked questions of the Chief Minister last month and the month before where I asked a question, and he said, ‘the information is going to be uploaded onto the website’. I could have stuck my ground, I could have said, ‘No, no. I have asked the question in Parliament now. You have got to provide me with the answer’. But he said, ‘Look, it is going to be on the website and quite frankly my interest is in getting the information’.

640 But I give notice to the Chair, Mr Speaker, that this is Question and Answer, and of course they have their own transparency agenda of putting information on websites and elsewhere. But at the end of the day, if we ask a question and then the answer is, ‘it is on the website’, they have got to make themselves responsible for the answer. That is all. I think that is a perfectly reasonable point, Mr Speaker.

645 Mr Speaker: I agree with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, because Members of the Opposition are entitled to ask a question seeking information. If they are seeking information and they are being told that that information is in the public domain, Hon. Ministers of the Government and their civil servants should ensure that it is on the website.

650 Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker. And as the hon. Gentleman says, he can stand his ground and insist on the answer. Mr Speaker, the answer from now on will be, ‘the information is on the website or will shortly be on the website’.

655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I give the Chair notice that if the answer next time round is ‘it will be shortly on the website’, there will be a Point of Order on this side of the House, because that is a wholly unacceptable answer. I have accepted it in the past in order for Parliamentary proceedings to flow, but if it becomes a matter of course on the part of the Government, we will stand our ground, because that is not a proper way of answering a question.

660 Mr Speaker: What is not proper to do is to say something to the effect of, ‘I have the information. I know what the information is, but I am going to be giving it in two or three days’ time’. (Interjections) That is not correct under the rules of questions.

665 If the information is available and it is not going to be provided here in Parliament at the time when the question is asked, then it ought to be on the website. It should not be a case that it is going to be on the website tomorrow or the day after. It should be then on the website because the hon. Member of the Opposition is perfectly entitled to seek the information on the day that the question is being asked, provided that it is available.

670 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you will recall from your time in Parliament on this side of the House and on the other and from your understanding of Erskine May, that the Chair has control over questions, but not over answers. The position of the Government is, Mr Speaker, that if we have information we give it.

675 Now, the whole purpose of putting things on the website is actually to prevent Members opposite being in the position in which we were, which was of constantly having to come here – and I hesitate to say it, but, Mr Speaker, twice or three times a year maximum – to extract this information. The whole idea is that they... principally it is going to be them that have access to this information, but the whole of the community as well if they wish, to see that information and it should be updated regularly. Now Mr Speaker, there is no desire on the part of the Government to delay that – absolutely none whatsoever; but, it is a process of updating, getting invoices, ensuring that the information is right and then uploading it onto the website.

680 Now, if the Government has the information when we are asked the question, if it is not on the website then there is usually a very good reason and it may be that the relevant civil servant with responsibility will say, ‘Well, we have not put it on the website yet because we have not reconciled it yet’.

685 Now, do you have the information? Well, Mr Speaker you may have the information that is subject to reconciliation and if you give information which is not subject to reconciliation and it is then a penny out, then Members opposite will come here the following month and say, ‘the information on the website is three pence out of the information that you gave the House’. And then we will have to give the information as to reconciliation.

690 So the whole purpose, Mr Speaker, of what we are doing, is to ensure that when hon. Members ask questions they can ask questions about substance, not simply to seek statistical information. That is the whole purpose of the Government’s openness and transparency agenda and that is why I have said that that is the attitude we will take in order to ensure that we get this right for the whole of the community. I hope, Mr Speaker, that their attitude, should they ever be elected, would be to continue to provide that information, which they previously did not provide, openly and publicly on the website, which is exactly what a modern Government should be doing. It should not lead to anybody being accused of being anything 695 other than a gentleman, because I think the rules provide that we should not be calling each other that sort of thing.

Mr Speaker: May I also add that it is of course perfectly proper for Government Ministers to say, at any given point of time, ‘that information is not readily available at the moment’. It is a lengthy process. It is a difficult process and it takes time to compile. That is a proper answer also to a question and therefore it will be provided in due course.

AmCham trade mission –
New investments; details

Clerk: Question 455, the Hon. D J Bossino.

705 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Financial Services state the areas of business with the number and value of new businesses which allegedly resulted in new investments following the AmCham mission?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

710 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the question refers to a body, the Gibraltar American Chamber of Commerce, that is not within or a part of the Government. It is therefore unable to provide the information required.

However, it is certainly true that the Government was delighted to welcome and support the first trade mission to the Rock by this Chamber of Commerce and we are confident that business opportunities will flow as a result.

715 Government will continue to support private sector initiatives, like AmCham, to attract business and investment to Gibraltar.

720 Hon. D J Bossino: But, Mr Speaker, was the press report, which appeared in the Gibraltar Chronicle, of 2nd June not based on information provided by the Government? Was it not the Government’s press release which said that at least nine Memorandums of Understanding were signed as a result of this mission?

725 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, it is not for me, as the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming, to answer in this Chamber for private sector activity. We welcome it. We are entitled to welcome it.

As the answer says, Government will continue to support private sector initiatives to attract business and investment to Gibraltar. So in this Parliament certainly, my position is, Mr Speaker, that the activity of private sector initiatives like AmCham, like the Swiss Invest Group that came to Gibraltar, is not to answer to the Opposition on agreements reached, of whatever nature, between private sector bodies.

730 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, he is saying he is not answering to the Opposition in this Parliament, but the Government itself is saying in a press release to the outside world, to the press locally and beyond, no doubt, and I quote from the article, which says:

735 ‘The Gibraltar Government...’

I assume that the figure of nine MOUs came from the Government itself and no other source, but I may be wrong on that. But certainly what the Chronicle says in relation to more MOUs being completed in the near future, the source of that information is the Gibraltar Government. It says:

740 ‘The Gibraltar Government said it is likely that more MOUs will be completed in the near future...’

745 So how is it that he is able to provide this information to the public, but is yet unable or unwilling to provide this information, this very important information in this House? (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): For a very simply reason, Mr Speaker, and the hon. Gentleman should perhaps be less angry and think a little bit more (Interjection) because the information... I am sorry, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman’s cat seems to have died. He seems to want to feel a little bit of sadness 750 this afternoon. Perhaps if there were less performance, Mr Speaker, and more thinking we would not have this.

What the hon. Gentleman has said is that AmCham is a third party private entity. That press release, Mr Speaker, comes not from the hon. Gentleman's office, because the AmCham is not to do exclusively with Financial Services or Gaming, but from No. 6 Convent Place, which is the Government's Press Office, which relying on information given to us by the AmCham issued that press release.

755 That does not mean that we can give more details, unless the hon. Gentleman is saying that we should not rely on the information we are given as to what number of Memoranda etc. are signed. It is very simple. The Government is told by the organisers of the AmCham they have signed nine Memoranda of Understanding and there may be more in the future, and that is what the press release is based on. It does not mean that we can give more information for something for which we are not responsible.

760 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, it is based on information which the Government has. The first sentence of its press release says:

765 'Resulting from last week's AmCham Trade Mission, at least nine MOUs have already been signed between American firms [etc...] and Gibraltarian counterparts'

So can he at least tell me, Mr Speaker, can the Minister or the Chief Minister tell me what further information has come to their ears which they can share with this Parliament?

770 Are there more MOUs which have been signed? Does he know what the MOUs relate to in relation to what areas of business and in relation to which companies? I assume that is information which he may not want to provide.

775 But certainly, in relation to which businesses, which is the premise on which I have asked the question, the areas of business with the number and the value, is that information which at least he has, which he can share with this House, or is it not information which he has available?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is not information that I have available, but he could check. I assume that the reason that he is... how he says... Well, very simply, by contacting the AmCham, which is exactly what we were doing at the time. We were in contact with the AmCham.

780 When he asks us for information, we give the information that we have. If we do not have further information, if we have not had the information provided to us, we do not go out to third parties to seek that information. But I assume, Mr Speaker, that all of this angst that I see developing in him is because he is delighted with the work that the Government is doing in the United States, delighted with the fact that there is now an AmCham here and he wants to know more, Mr Speaker, about how successful all of this is and how fantastic it is for the Gibraltar economy.

785 It is not, I hope, the opposite – in other words that he is actually very disappointed to see the Government is leading in working with the United States, that there is now a private sector body that has picked up the cudgel, that they are saying that they have had of the AmCham visit already nine Memoranda of Understanding and probably more, and actually he is very angry that the Government is in this, as in so many other things, doing so well. That might also represent the angst that I see in him.

790 I know, Mr Speaker, that despite the fact that I think he and the Leader of the Opposition were invited to the dinner that the Government organised, something which did not happen at the time that they were in Government for the AmCham, they will not have had the opportunity then of seeing a member of Mr Obama's Cabinet, who recently resigned from public life, leading the trade mission, which was part of what the AmCham was organising. This is a huge step forward for Gibraltar and the commercial relationship with the United States, something that I hope I detect in behind all that anger and behind all that angst is what they really want to be welcoming. (Banging on desks)

800 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, thank you very much for the kind invitation extended to me and to the Deputy Leader of the GSD, less than a week's notice from the event. Unfortunately we had to decline because – as was public knowledge at the time – we had a GSD activist event on the night and that is simply why we had to decline.

But, Mr Speaker, what he is saying is this. We came out with a press release where we said that there were nine agreements in the private sector between Gibraltarian companies and American companies. That is information that was provided to us by the private sector.

805 Is he really suggesting that no one in his Office actually bothered to say, 'Well, in what areas are these agreements being signed?' because I would have expected any competent Government that is interested in anything beyond the photo opportunity and the spin, for which the hon. Gentleman is famous for (Banging on a desks) that he would have at least... or his office would have at least obtained that information.

810 Hon. Chief Minister: I will tell him what competent Governments do, Mr Speaker. Competent Governments ensure that Gibraltar's message is spread around the world. Competent Governments do not stick their heads in the sand and pretend that our only potential and commercial partner is our neighbour to the north. Competent Governments get themselves and the Deputy Chief Minister invited to the White House for meetings in relation to what is happening in Gibraltar. (Interjections) Competent Governments...
815 I know it hurts, Mr Speaker. I know it hurts (Interjections) I know it hurts and I am really putting my finger in the wound – (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order.

820 Hon. Chief Minister: And I know it hurts (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: Order.

825 Hon. Chief Minister: I know it hurts, Mr Speaker. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker: I insist...order.

Hon. Members are now beginning to debate and if they carry on like this, within two or three minutes I will be moving on to the next question.

830 Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Competent Governments are able to organise dinners at short notice and competent guests are able to accept, even if they have less than a week's notice, Mr Speaker.

835 But what is clear – and I thank the hon. Gentleman for it because it is now abundantly clear – was that they preferred to attend a party event, rather than support Gibraltar business in its relationship with the United States. Party before country, as usual. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I bring the Hon. the Chief Minister down to earth, because he really does need to be brought down to earth. He has not answered my question.

840 I have asked him... I understand that the information comes from the private sector –

Mr Speaker: Ask the question. There is no need for the preamble. I have already heard the preamble, and there is no need for it. Ask the question again, please.

845 Hon. D A Feetham: I understand it comes from the private sector, but did your office, or somebody in the office of the Hon. Minister, not bother to enquire what areas of business these Memorandums of Understandings relate to? It is a very simple question, which I would have expected a competent Chief Minister to have the answer to.

850 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, you see the hon. Gentleman appears on television saying that he wants less Punch and Judy politics. Well, I guess what he means, Mr Speaker, by that, is that he and his deputy should not be fighting as much as they are, because when he comes here, Mr Speaker, all he wants is Punch and Judy politics. ...Dale un abrazo, el de Judas. All he wants is Punch and Judy politics, Mr Speaker, because he prefaces his question by saying 'a competent Government' and 'a competent Chief Minister' to clearly imply the opposite.

855 Mr Speaker, people will have to make a choice as they made last time as to who they consider competent or not competent, fit or unfit, Mr Speaker, because I was, three years ago, unfit to govern according to those who were then in Government, and today, according to the same people in the way that he has prefaced his question, more or less competent – clearly, less competent in his eyes.

860 Mr Speaker, I have often told him that he will never defeat a foe by disrespecting him. He obviously disrespects me completely. I have given the answer that we do not have the information. If for him that makes us incompetent, thank goodness, Mr Speaker, it is principally just to him.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q456/2014
Minister's visit to Bermuda –
Details

865 Clerk: Question 456, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Financial Services provide details of the cost of the recent visit to Bermuda, together with who attended with him as part of the Government's delegation or at its expense, or as part of the wider Gibraltar delegation?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the cost of the recent visit to Bermuda by Ministry officials and myself and the names of those who attended together with me, as part of a wider Gibraltar Government delegation, is as follows: cost of flights, £11,370.58; cost of hotel, £5,689.31. I was accompanied by Mr James Tipping, Mr Michael Ashton and Mr Michael Oliver, and if the Members opposite are remotely interested, the trip went extremely well, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is he able to tell me who attended as part of the wider Gibraltar delegation, as there was a photograph in the Gibraltar Chronicle again, which featured himself and I think some of the individuals he has mentioned, but also certain individuals from the private sector? Is he able to tell me – that is what I meant by the question – who formed part of the wider Gibraltar delegation? Not necessarily just as part of the Gibraltar Government delegation, but as part of the Gibraltar Plc delegation if you like. Is he able to give me that information? I have got a name, but I would rather not sort of bandy that name across the floor of the House. I would rather he volunteer it. I mean he featured in the photograph. (Interjections)

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, you have obviously seen a photograph in the press which shows three members of our private sector community. Mr Speaker, every time Gibraltar Finance travels abroad promoting Gibraltar's Financial Services sector, it does so in partnership with the private sector.

890

Last week alone, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar Finance with its senior executives were in AIRMIC in Birmingham promoting insurance, in Monte Carlo at a Game Funds Conference, where I spoke with two senior executives promoting the fund sector, and Mr Paul Astengo was in Geneva promoting the Trans Continental Trust Conference and Gibraltar's presence there.

895

In each of those instances, Mr Speaker, the private sector support, the Government initiatives, I am not sure if he still requires me or wants me to give the names of each person that went to each of those delegations. I would need notice of that. It certainly was not... if you read the question that he has asked Mr Speaker, it talks about the costs and then refers to the delegation, the wider delegation... I am hoping he is not asking me to also give him the costs of the private sector delegation because I do not have that.

900

Does he want the answer of who went to Bermuda with the Government?

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Peter Isola from ISOLAS, Mr Bruno Callaghan from Callaghans, Miss Angelique Vasallo from EY and Mr Michael Oliver, who I have already mentioned, from the Financial Services Commission.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT AND HEALTH & SAFETY

Q457/2014
Future Job Strategy Graduate Scheme –
Graduates applying for social worker positions

910 Clerk: Question 457, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services say if the four local graduate social workers, who are currently on the Future Job Strategy Graduate Scheme, will be able to apply for full-time permanent and pensionable social worker positions that may become vacant?

915 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the four individuals referred to in the hon. Member's question will be able to apply for any vacancy in the public service for which applications are invited from outside the service.

920

Mr Speaker: Next question.

925

Q458/2014
Gibraltar Savings Bank –
Breakdown of monies invested; rate of return

Clerk: Question 458, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of how all monies deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank have been invested and the rate of return on each of these investments as at 31st March 2014, 30th April 2014 and 31st May 2014?

935

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as at 31st March the Savings Bank fund was invested in the following manner and yields.

On-call accounts with the Bank of England, the Crown Agents Bank and Gibraltar banks had an average yield of around of 0.4%. The Gibraltar banks were the Royal Bank of Scotland, Barclays Bank, National Westminster Bank and Jyske Bank.

Floating Rates Notes quoted on the London Stock Exchange have an average yield of 0.6% The Floating Rates Notes were issued by the following: European Investment Bank; the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development; Dexia; FMS Wertmanagement; Caisse d'Amortissement de la Dette Sociale; KfW; and the Republic of Finland.

Capital Bonds with a 5% return, and preference shares in Credit Finance with an average dividend yield of 5.5%. There have been no significant changes in the structure of the Funds investment portfolio in April or May and little change in yields, except that quoted stock and call accounts fluctuate marginally on a daily basis. These fluctuations are not significant.

The average return on the fund last year is estimated by the Treasury at around 4%, subject to the figures being checked by the Principal Auditor as is the case for all Special Funds.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he has answered part of the question. He has not answered the first part, because if the hon. Gentleman looks at my question it is talking about, 'please provide a breakdown of how all monies deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank...'

The reason why I ask the question – indeed, I have asked this question before and he has provided me with an answer in the format of effectively saying £x million invested in x bank... £x million relating to the 5% debentures in x bank, that is what I wanted. Does he have that information because I really need that information for the purposes of my own Budget speech? I am entitled to it, because that is the question and I have provided notice of the question. Indeed, he has provided me with the answer in the past when I have asked this question.

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he has not asked the question in the same way in the past. He has asked it differently and I have answered it in the way that he asked it before. This time I have answered it in the way he has asked it this time, because he wants a breakdown of the monies that are deposited in the Savings Bank and the rate of return on each investment, and the rate of return on each investment I have broken down into the different areas so that he will be able to see what we are getting from the money that is put in banks, what we are getting from the money that is put in floating rates. But if he wants the balance sheet of the Savings Bank, then I will get it posted to him, but I have not got it here with me.

970 Hon. D A Feetham: Would it possible if my secretary gave him a ring? I have to emphasise that when I... and the question is pretty clear, 'Can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of how all monies deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank have been invested and the rate of return...? In other words a breakdown of how all the monies have been invested and the rate of return for all those monies. He has just given me the rate of return, but not the breakdown of how the monies have been invested.

975 If my secretary phones the hon. Gentleman's PA and between them deal with this, does he undertake to provide me with this information so that I have it by Friday of this week?

Hon. J J Bossano: I have got no problem in getting the information done in the way it has been provided before when the question was asked differently, but I do not accept, Mr Speaker, that I am not answering because I am giving him a breakdown of how the money deposited in the Savings Bank has been invested in the different categories.

980 We have got money invested with banks in call accounts. We have got money invested in the Stock Exchange. We have got money invested in a Capital Bond and we have got money invested in the preference shares. So I am giving him a breakdown of how they are invested. I am also giving him the yield in each of those categories. I do not think he has asked for the yield before; he has just asked me before for a breakdown of each individual bit of the balance sheet. I can get that produced for him by the Treasury and he will have it by tomorrow at the latest.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q459/2014

Marriott Hotel and office block –
Proposed construction; update

990 Clerk: Question 459, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, given the strong objections voiced by a large number of members of the community in respect of the proposed construction of the Marriott Hotel and office block at the site of the ex-Royal Gibraltar Yacht Club, can Government provide this House with assurances that this development, if approved, will be in keeping with the Gibraltar Development Plan?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

1000 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker, the development has already been granted outline planning consent.

As with all applications for planning permission, the Development and Planning Commission, which is an independent statutory body, always considers the Development Plan when granting such consent.

1005 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I think the question really is, does the... and the hon. Gentleman cannot answer for the DPC, I understand that, but is the hon. Gentleman satisfied that this particular project is within the Gibraltar Development Plan or is his view that it may be outside the Gibraltar Development Plan, but because it is of beneficial interest to Gibraltar, the Government is supportive of it?

1010 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, all the information that we have is that the development is within the Gibraltar Development Plan from the information from the town planners.

Mr Speaker: Any supplementary questions?

Next question.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q460/2014
Legal consultants –
Drafting services costs

1015 Clerk: Question 460, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister explain, further to his answer to Question 418/2014, the reasons for the discrepancy between the information available at the time of filing Question 418 in May of this year and the information that was available when the question was asked in this House, an anomaly set out in my letter to him dated 4th June 2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, hon. Members will have seen a timetable issued by the House, and I think I made available on the website, that says that I would be answering questions tomorrow, which is the third Thursday of the month... or the fourth Thursday of this month at 3.00 p.m.

At your invitation, given how quickly we have gone through the rest of the questions, I agree it makes sense for us to have my questions answered this afternoon and that is why I have asked that we continue on the Order Paper. The answers are ready and given that all hon. Members I think are preparing for the set piece debate next week, I think we would all be grateful for more time in that preparation and that is why I have agreed to proceed this afternoon.
1030

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman wrote to me on 4th June in respect of this matter as his question suggests. The reason for the discrepancy is currently being looked into and I will write to the hon. Member opposite with an answer once this is identified by the persons responsible.
1035

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q461/2014
General legal services –
Government costs; details

Clerk: Question 461, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister provide details to this House of the matters in relation to which the Government has incurred costs for the provision of general legal services, since December 2011, broken down matter by matter as well as by law firm/lawyer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the cost of general legal services is already on line. I am advised and do not believe it is in the public interest to provide any further information.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I may well be walking into this one, but could the Hon. the Chief Minister, if it is appropriate in the context of legal drafting services, provide a flavour of the reasons why it is not appropriate in relation to general legal services that he provide that information here?
1050

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, because drafting services result in something which is published, namely a Bill or a Regulation. A Bill becomes an Act, a Regulation that immediately takes effect... rules – something that results in publication.

General legal services sometimes result in things which are not published or things that relate to litigation and we would in effect be giving information about what it is that the Government is doing, which sometimes it makes no sense to put in the public domain.

In many instances the advice is in relation to litigation and therefore you see a product in public of that advice, but in many instances it is just simply advice that civil servants or Ministers require, which may have absolutely nothing to do with anything that is in the public domain and may be confidential, either commercially or for other reasons.

But the information is given as to law firm and amount paid; it is just that the breakdown is not given.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q462-463/2014
Spanish media –
Advertising; sums paid

1065 Clerk: Question 462, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide details of all sums paid to Spanish media in respect of advertisement associated with the Gibraltar Airport?

1070 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 463.

1075 Clerk: Question 463.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of all sums paid directly or indirectly by the Government to all Spanish media since he became Chief Minister?

1080 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, my answer remains the same as has previously been stated in answers to questions of a similar nature. I believe that sharing information of this nature publicly is not in the public interest of Gibraltar.

1085 I am happy to share the information with the hon. Member confidentially, if he so wishes.

1090 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not understand the analogy that he is drawing. If he is drawing an analogy with consultants, for example, it is a false analogy. Consultants are in a completely different boat and lobbyists are in a completely different boat to advertisement. Advertisement in Spanish newspapers should be treated in exactly the same way as advertisement in local newspapers. The Government already provides what it spends in advertisement to local newspapers. Why draw that distinction?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman does not want to see the distinction or sees it and is drawing me into an area where I do not think it is in the public interest that we should be drawn publicly.

1095 I am quite happy to give him the information privately. I am not saying that he should not have it. I have nothing to hide from the Opposition in this respect, but I do not want to create a route map for those who do not have Gibraltar's best interests at heart to see where it is that Gibraltar is trying to advertise, where it is that Gibraltar is trying to influence Spanish public opinion.

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, but I will tell the hon. Gentleman as well what my concerns are and what our concerns are on this side of the House. We are certainly aware of at least two publications – one on the internet and another one written – which have taken a line, which is very reminiscent of the line that local newspapers supportive of the Government take in relation, for example, to my participation in talks in Spain and allegations, for example, that I have somehow a direct line to Mr Rajoy in Madrid.

1105 I would have thought that I would be entitled to know in public, and I would be entitled to actually say to the people of Gibraltar in public, 'Look here. There are these newspapers or Spanish media. They are taking this particular line, in unison almost with publications here in Gibraltar, supportive of the Government, against the Opposition, and they are also being subsidised by the Government here in Gibraltar'. I just feel that this is a perfectly legitimate question for me to ask and for the information to be provided in public.

1110 I may be completely and utterly wrong in drawing any kind of inference, but quite frankly, it seems to me to be quite a coincidence.

1115 Hon. Chief Minister: He is completely and utterly wrong, Mr Speaker. I do not have to pay anybody to criticise him. I certainly do not see any or much at all Government advertising in any of the local press that criticises him. So, Mr Speaker, I do not see how he can even pretend to draw that inference.

1120 What I am telling him is that this is in the public interest of Gibraltar. But look, he has got up and said, 'It is all about me. I do not care about the public interest of Gibraltar and therefore I want the information'. Well, Mr Speaker, I am not going to give it to him publicly, for the reasons I have already said. It is not all about him and I am quite happy to give him the information privately. He might be surprised by what he sees.

Q464-465/2014
Queens Hotel –
Acquisition of site; costs involved

Clerk: Question 464, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1130 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please state how much the Government has agreed to pay for the acquisition of the Queens Hotel?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1135 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 465.

Clerk: Question 465, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1140 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please state what other expenses have been incurred or are expected to be incurred in relation to the acquisition of the entire Queens complex, including, for example, the decanting of other businesses at the site?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1145 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I refer the hon. Member opposite to Press Release 259/2014, dated 2nd June, which stated that a full announcement would be made once the final details of the purchase have been completed.

We expect to be in a position to make such a statement next week.

1150 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is he saying that the information has not been collated... the entirety of the information has not been collated, because I would have expected, for example, in relation to Question 464, which is to provide how much the Government has agreed to pay for the acquisition of Queens Hotel, that would have been readily available. It is a discreet question. How much has the Government paid for the Queens Hotel? That must be readily available to the Government so that he can provide an answer now in advance of the Budget next week.

1160 Hon. F R Picardo: Mr Speaker, of course I know what was agreed to be paid for the Queens Hotel, but his questions, both of them, are taken together because they both relate to the same subject matter. There are issues which I do not yet have final numbers on which I expect to have by next week, like, for example, legal fees etc. All of that is being collated and then the total amount will be given.

Mr Speaker, I do not think it is wrong to say that we are going to make a full statement as to what it is that these costs have been.

1165 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, it is – with respect to the Hon. the Chief Minister – wrong, because he can take that position in relation to Question 465/2014 which is the entirety of the costs for the acquisition of the entirety of the complex, and I understand it. I understand that.

1170 But in relation to Question 464/2014, it asks, 'Can the Chief Minister please state how much the Government has agreed to pay for the acquisition of the Queens Hotel?' Surely he has that information. It is a discreet question and surely I am entitled to have it so that then I can use it in preparation for my own Budget speech and that is the reason why I ask it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is going to have the information and I am going to make a statement, as I have said, which will set out all of that information. The hon. Gentleman can ask 1175 the questions that he wants and the Government makes the statements that it considers appropriate at the time that is appropriate and we want to make a statement about the Queens Hotel which deals with all of those issues. At the moment I do not want to make this information available.

Mr Speaker, that is the position of the Government. He will have the information. He may even have it before he makes his Budget speech.

1180 Mr Speaker: Could I ask if it is the Chief Minister's intention to make the information public outside the House or during the course of his Budget speech on Monday?

1185 Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly, Mr Speaker, you are much more on point. I will be making the information public in the course of my Budget speech on Monday.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he may provide it in this House and I understand the distinction the Hon. the Speaker is going to be drawing because if the information is provided outside the House, it really ought to be provided to this House. But the reality is that I have asked the question. I have provided notice of this question. If the information is available to the Government, as it is indeed available to the Government, because it asks 'has agreed to pay', surely the Opposition cannot be at the mercy of the Government in when it wants to provide – (Interjection) No. In when it wants to provide the information that it has, otherwise it would drive a coach and horses, Mr Speaker, through Question Time.

1190 If the information is available, simply because I ask another question about the entirety of the costs, which I accept he can give it to me later on, but if he has the information about how much they have agreed to pay... just the sale price and that is what we are talking about here, surely he ought to be providing that. It sets a very bad precedent indeed in my respectful view for the Government to say, 'I have the information, but I am not providing it to you today. I am going to be providing it to you next week because it is convenient for the Government to make a statement next week'. What is the point of Question Time otherwise? (Interjections)

1200 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to. I thought you wanted to deal with that issue.

Mr Speaker, there are issues around the acquisition of this particular property, which the Opposition have made statements about in order to suggest it has been done for one reason or another. In social media I think I have seen a number of statements by people who have responsibility in their Executive Committee where they have made statements about this particular acquisition. I am therefore going to deal with it in a manner that the Government considers is in the public interest, which is in the fullness of my statement to the House on Monday as to the state of the Government finances.

1205 The hon. Gentleman is going to have the opportunity to reply to me. So he is going to have the information when he says he wants it and needs it, which is before the Budget. But, look, I have to say to him, he used to sit here very calmly and very passively – I might say even docilely – whilst the hon. the backbencher used to take a completely different attitude to the one that he is now recommending to us. This is a particular instance where 72 working hours before a particular debate, I am saying I am going to make a statement, and he is saying I must give him the information now.

1215 Well, look, Mr Speaker, this is the Budget session of the Parliament and the debate on the Estimates will be on Monday, as he knows, and he will have the information then. The community will have all of the information about this acquisition in detail, perhaps even in more detail than he has requested it. It will then understand why the acquisition is going to progress and what the use that the particular facility in question is going to be put to: full, frank and absolute disclosure. Full, frank and absolute accountability and transparency, but not when he says so, Mr Speaker.

1220 Mr Speaker: Yes, one other supplementary.
Carry on.

1225 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is not when I want to. I have given notice of a question. I have given notice of a question. But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is the new dawn man. Sir Peter Caruana presumably, according to him, is the sunset. He is the new dawn man. He represents change; therefore he ought to be doing things differently. I have given him notice of this particular question. It is a very simple question. He has chosen to bunch it up with something else, but if the information is available, he ought to provide it.

1230 Can he at the very least provide me with that information? I am not asking him for the second limb. I am asking for the sale price in advance of the Budget. I am quite content for him to provide me with that information on Friday, for example.

1235 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am the new dawn man, but the changes I represent are the changes that I choose to represent, not the change that he decides I must represent when it is convenient to him because he has a sliding scale of what transparency means, one end of it, because he was a Member of that Government that I am criticising now, the GSD, one end of that spectrum is what he used to do when he was in Government with all his Government colleagues and who he takes collective responsibility for and used to defend. And another end of the spectrum is what I do, which represents a new dawn.

1240 Mr Speaker, I will give him a figure that he can start working on for his Budget, if that is what he wants. I have absolutely no difficulty. In fact, Mr Speaker, I will give it to him now. I mean I will give him the figure now. Twenty four meetings of this Parliament, since we were elected, for questions – that is two-and-a-half years that represents ten-and-a-half years of GSD Government. That is a figure he can be working on, Mr Speaker, which represents the new dawn that we are actually demonstrating in Parliament. I would give him a lot of other figures, but he might not be so comfortable, Mr Speaker, before the debate to hear those.

1245 Nonetheless, Mr Speaker, in order to assist and at the level of Parliamentary colleague to Parliamentary colleague, I will make sure that on Friday – so that he can spend the weekend with his calculator – he has the numbers in anticipation of my getting up and making my Budget announcement. It will be unusual, Mr Speaker. It will be the first time, I think, that a Chief Minister extends that courtesy to a Leader of the Opposition.

1250 The Leader of the Opposition's job at a Budget debate is always the hardest because he is the one that has to reply on the spot. In most other Parliaments there is no sharing of information before. In this Parliament in fact there has been previously, under the GSD administration, a hiding of information so that one does not see it until after the Budget Debate; but I am very happy to extend that courtesy to him as a Parliamentary colleague.

TOURISM, COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Question 440/2014 continued – City Fire Brigade – Waterport Power Station fire; details of foam used

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. Mr Bossino wish to ask supplementaries arising from... I think it was Question 440?

1260 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Please do.

1265 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if I could just quickly go to the question. The question related to all the Departments that the Hon. the Minister for Tourism is responsible for – (Interjections) Yes, it is. Yes.

Yes, Mr Speaker, the question related to all the Departments that the Hon. the Minister the Tourism is responsible for and I just find that most of the entries relate to the visits carried out by the Gibraltar Port Authority, in most instances, and in some of the instances I think other than the Department of Consumer Affairs, it does not identify which of his Departments attended the particular convention or fair. Can he provide that information?

1270 Secondly, can he confirm that he has answered the question as set out in the Order Paper, that it does cover all the Departments that the hon. Member is responsible for?

1275 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the question was to provide the answer with the same level of details as is set out in Table 2 of the Gibraltar Government. So the first thing I did was to check out the Government website to see the format of the question and therefore the schedule to the question sets out the particulars as is set out in that particular website.

I think I understood him correctly when he said that the schedule does not set out which of my responsibilities attend a particular conference. Did I understand him correctly?

1280 Hon. D J Bossino: [Inaudible]

1285 Hon. N F Costa: But if he goes to the schedule it always says, 'Costs with breakdown of' – and in this particular case the first page – 'the Gibraltar Port Authority's attendance at...' and the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth. So there are thirteen instances where the Port Authority attends conferences and these are set out in the same way as they are set out in the website. (Hon. D J Bossino: Yes.)

1290 Hon. N F Costa: The next page goes on to the Department of Consumer Affairs and sets out the conference costs there.

Hon. D J Bossino: [Inaudible]

1295 Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

The next one relates to the Gibraltar Maritime Administration and he is correct in saying that that is not set out as it should have been. It should have said, 'Costs with breakdown of Gibraltar Maritime attendance and participation at the Red Ensign Conference', and so he is right in highlighting that.

1300 Then following the next breakdown, similarly it is the Gibraltar Yacht Registry that should have been set out there. Again, the Future of Superyachts would have been the Gibraltar Yacht Registry, which as he knows is subsumed within the Gibraltar Maritime Administration, and similarly, the same with the Annual World Congress and the Global Super Yacht Forum in Amsterdam as well as the German Ship Owners Association in Hamburg. I apologise for the oversight, but they do relate to the Gibraltar Maritime Administration.

1305 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, to the hon. Member for that. As I asked him for confirmation that all his Departments had been covered, I just find it odd, and maybe he can explain to me why that is the case, that the GTB does not feature, the Gibraltar Tourist Board. Is there a reason for that?

1310 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. I also asked that question and essentially the way that these events – let us call them generically – are described or are defined depend on whether they are a conference or they are a trade show etc.

1315 Conferences, according to the definition of the administration, depend on attending a conference on a particular subject matter – there are at least 20 that I have shown him – and the participants of the responsibility attend. In some cases the Gibraltar delegation is asked to give a speech; but it is participation at a conference where there are different guest speakers from all over the world who give a talk on a particular subject matter.

1320 The GTB attends trade shows and the trade fairs and it is separately distinguished in the way that they are classified, and so they do not fall as a conference, but as something else. That is the explanation that was given to me and I hope that I have relayed it adequately to the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, one learns something every day. I suppose it is information like that which I would also have enjoyed to have received and to have read in some detail. I suppose I ought to use more generic words like 'trade visits' perhaps, is a more appropriate wording.

1325 Mr Speaker, in relation to a specific point which arises from the information as set out in the schedule, does he know why in the second item – they are not numbered, but it relates to expenditure by the Gibraltar Port Authority in relation to an attendance at the Cape Verde Bunkering Conference – the subsistence is in fact considerably higher than the expenditure in relation to the hotel? Whilst if he looks throughout the other items of information the opposite is in fact the case, as I suppose one would expect, but in this case it is almost six times higher than the hotel accommodation. Is he able to shed any light in relation to that?

1330 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I cannot answer that question without notice because I do not know what the answer is. However, speculation, depending on the place of the conference subsistence varies, and of course it also depends on the number of people that have attended, but he can either write to me or I can make a note and I will provide him with the information.

1335 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, also, again they are not numbered, but it is on the third page at the top and it relates to again the Gibraltar Port Authority's attendance at the Miami... presumably it is a 'Disaster Management Seminar' rather than 'Management Disaster Seminar' and it has a blank in relation to flights, for example, and a blank also in relation to hotel accommodation.

1340 Again, given the destination, I assume if it is a Miami Disaster Management Seminar, was held in Miami, I may be wrong, but can he shed any light in relation to that, because it seems that no expenditure was incurred in relation to those two items and one would have expected a considerable item of expenditure in relation to them.

1345 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, he is absolutely right on that and I will have to obtain the information for him.

Mr Speaker, again, although I do not have the information with me, I can tell him that sometimes until the Government is invoiced, the figures would not of course be published on the website.

1350 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, simply to point out, and my colleagues are quite rightly pointing out, that this is actually in excess of a year old and so I doubt that that is the explanation. But the hon. Member has undertaken to or suggests that he will be providing this information and I may indeed write to him by way of a reminder.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q466/2014

Jason Cruz – Details of allowances

Clerk: Question 466, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1360 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is the Chief Minister now in a position to inform the House as to the amount which the Government will pay Jason Cruz in respect of (a) an accommodation allowance in Hong Kong and London and (b) an allowance for the private education of his children?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1365 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as I told the House last month, Jason Cruz is one of those Gibraltarians who has done extraordinarily well outside of Gibraltar. He is the sort of man we, as a community, are justly proud of. I cannot emphasise enough how happy Government is that he is now working for Gibraltar in the highly competitive market that is South East Asia.

1370 Jason worked for almost 20 years in Hong Kong's commercial sector. His family lived in Hong Kong for almost 40 years and enjoys an excellent reputation and an excellent network of relationships which will happily accrue to the benefit of Gibraltar. Jason was a Director of Cushman & Wakefield in Hong Kong – no mean feat in what is the world's largest privately-owned commercial real estate firm. Recognised as leaders in their field and who have a vast amount of experience working with over half of the Fortune 500 companies.

1375 In that role, Jason has been responsible for the completion of commercial transactions totalling over US$ 1 billion, Mr Speaker. Indeed, it is not just the Gibraltar Government that is justly proud of him, for Jason's achievements have been recognised by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors for the most significant commercial transaction in Hong Kong only last year, Mr Speaker, in 2013. Now that is something that the whole of Gibraltar can be proud of, Mr Speaker.

1380 Jason was co-Head Asia Pacific of Cushman and Wakefield's Banking and Financial Services practice between 2011 and 2013 and previously Head of Asia Pacific for Cushman & Wakefield's Global Alternative Investment Services working with hedge funds and private equity firms. His remuneration includes an accommodation allowance of £1,615 per week. There is, as yet, no specific amounts agreed in respect of school fees.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the accommodation allowance of £1,615 per week, is that for both Hong Kong and London, because my understanding of the position is that he is going to be dividing his time between Hong Kong and London because he is taking over some of the roles of Peter Canessa and others in relation to the London office?

1390 Or is it that my understanding is not correct, that he is going to be in Hong Kong for some time and then will be effectively transferred to London? Otherwise, what is the role that he is playing in London?

1395 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am sorry that I deleted that paragraph of what I had said last month because it is the only paragraph that I read last month that I have not read this month. What I said last month was that he would be in Hong Kong until 2016, unless we agreed a later date, and that he would be coming to London and when he comes to London he stays in hotels.

Hon. D A Feetham: So from the date of his engagement to 2016, he is playing absolutely no role in London... no oversight role in London. Is that the position?

1405 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is as I indicated last time and I went into this in some detail. He will be coming to London and working also in London in respect of some of the issues which require liaison between London and Hong Kong, Mr Speaker. I think it is perfectly normal that that should be the case. What I indicated was that in 2016 or thereafter, whatever time that we agreed, he would likely be taking over in London. Hansard discloses what I said last time.

1410 Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively his role in London until 2016 is just limited to liaising on Hong Kong matters and he will play no wider role. The reason why I am asking this of course is because we know that Peter Canessa, for example, who used to play a pivotal role in the London office has actually moved out of the London office and is now back in Gibraltar. I understand he is in the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services Department and that is the reason why I am asking.

1415 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, I had worked out why you were asking, Mr Speaker, long ago.
Mr Speaker, Mr Canessa is now going to run a pivotal role in Mr Isola's office and Mr Poggio is back doing the pivotal role that he was doing for many years without needing anybody pivoting next to him.

1420 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I think that is a very odd way of putting it, particularly when you are dealing with a highly respected civil servant, who has given many years of his life to public service. I really do think the Hon. the Chief Minister ought to watch the way that he puts things and the way that he talks... I have to say in a bit of a demeaning way in relation to that particular public servant.

1425 Mr Speaker, in relation to the allowance for the private education of his children, why is it that he cannot provide that figure at the moment... that he does not have that figure at the moment? I would have expected that if you have entered into an agreement with somebody about taking that person on, you would have already agreed not only the details of his salary, but also details of his accommodation allowance, which we have, and details of how much is going to be paid for the private education of his children. Of course very important to the individual, and indeed important to the Government that presumably wants to obviously keep a hand on public expenditure.

1430 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I really do not know what it is that the hon. Gentleman is talking about when he says that a senior civil servant has somehow been spoken about in a demeaning way. The one who introduced 'pivoting' into the debate was him when he was talking about one person playing a pivotal role somewhere, which I confirmed he is now going to play somewhere else. Or is he trying to suggest that Mr Poggio is not able to run the London Office on his own because for 15 years that they were in Government, Mr Poggio was happily pivoting on his own in London as he had been before. So I do not see where it is that he wants to pluck this idea of anybody being demeaned.

1435 But, Mr Speaker, I recognise that he is trying to do politics and he is trying to pretend that he is on somebody's side and it may be, Mr Speaker, that people want to be on his side, and God knows what he may have promised them. But anyway, Mr Speaker, I am very clear that Mr Canessa is going to continue to discharge as important a role today as he used to in London now that he is back in Gibraltar and he used to discharge in Gibraltar before he went to London, having been selected without interview by the previous Chief Minister to do that role.

1440 Mr Speaker, as to the issue of school fees, as I understand it, the issue is being discussed and negotiated between the Chief Secretary and Mr Cruz. I suppose it relates to the choosing of schools. I do not know the age of his children or whether they are about to change schools and I do not know how the terms work in Hong Kong. So it may be that they are looking at what the next amount or the next school is going to cost if they are finishing one school or another.

1445 But, Mr Speaker, we are certainly very concerned about public expenditure. We are going to ensure it does not rocket as it did in their time. So he can be rest assured that we will look at every penny when the time comes and when the Chief Secretary brings us a figure, we shall look at it to ensure that it is value for money. But certainly in relation to this contract with Mr Jason Cruz, this is probably one of the best value-for-money deals that this Government has done and we are already hopefully going to start seeing the rewards.

1455 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not understand how he can possibly say it is best value for money when there are aspects of the contract that still have not even been negotiated and remain outstanding. Quite frankly, this may be a really super individual, a very nice individual and very competent individual, but I remind the Government that he has been chosen a dedo. That is what this amounts to – a dedo – and therefore as an Opposition we are entitled to scrutinise this particular transaction.

1460 Mr Speaker, does the accommodation relate to all Mr Cruz's children or some of them? Can he give some more information in relation to that for example? I mean the private education, not the accommodation, I should have said.

1465 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we are talking about people having been chosen a dedo. Mr Canessa was chosen a dedo by the previous Administration. I understand another civil servant went to the United Kingdom chosen a dedo. People were chosen a dedo to discharge million pound contracts, not just in breach of what they now appear to think is the criteria that people should be chosen for... tenders for, but in breach of European law, Mr Speaker, people were chosen a dedo for jobs inside and outside the Government in Government companies. This was the way of the GSD world. It was an a dedo world under the GSD.

1470 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): They ran out of dedos! (Laughter)

1475 Hon. Chief Minister: In this particular instance – (Laughter) I have to reflect the comments of the Hon. the Member for Employment who says that they did it so often they almost ran out of dedos, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

1480 Mr Speaker, it is extraordinary that in relation to this particular appointment the hon. Gentleman wants to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds at the same time. He wants to say... you know, he is hitting the GSLP for appointing this man a dedo, whilst at the same time saying that he is a lovely man and he might be exactly the right choice, but he wants to talk about the package. Mr Speaker, we are giving him the information about the package. The fact that the information as to the school fees is not yet in place, does not mean that there is anything wrong with the package. He will have the information if he asks again as soon as we have it.

1485 But I am reassuring him, Mr Speaker, that we think that this is exactly in the interests of taxpayers in Gibraltar. This is exactly the right person to do the job. I have not heard any complaints from anybody who wanted the job. I have not heard any complaints about the man who has got the job. I think everybody agrees he is a fantastic addition to the arsenal available to the Government of Gibraltar to attract investment to Gibraltar. I trust, Mr Speaker, that he will agree, otherwise he will be demeaning somebody who is playing a pivotal role and who is highly respected in his field.

1490 Hon. D A Feetham Mr Speaker, I do not understand how he can possibly compare Mr Cruz to Mr Canessa who was after all a public servant. Mr Canessa was a public servant. Mr Canessa being a public servant was transferred to London and that is not the same as this particular situation, which is a situation where the Government has chosen somebody a dedo without going out to advertisement and without advertising this particular post.

1495 Of course, Mr Speaker, he is the new dawn man, as I remind him. He is the new dawn man. It is no defence for him to say, 'Well you used to do x, y and z'. Well, quite frankly, it is becoming a bit of a habit because he has also done it in relation to the advertisement of the contract for advertisement at the Airport. We discovered all these companies at No. 6 Convent Place, which was also a dedo.

1500 Is he going to answer the question that I asked? Does it relate to all the children of this particular individual or only one of them that we are talking about in relation to this private education allowance?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman just does not know what he is doing politically by treading in this area.

1505 Mr Speaker, I am the new dawn man, but the sun still rises in the east and sets in the west. I am the new dawn man, but Government has to continue operating. I am the new dawn man, but I appointed a Chief Technical Officer without going to interview and I will have to appoint a Financial Secretary without going to interview, and I will have to appoint a Chief Secretary, should Mr Gomez ever leave, without going to interview because those are appointments – those three in particular, which he knows from the hon. the backbencher – used to be appointments by the UK which are now appointments reserved to the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, and that is perfectly proper and perfectly alright.

1510 It is not as if Jason Cruz has become a civil servant because the Government of Gibraltar has employed him and said so. It is not as if Jason Cruz has become a civil servant because the policy of the Government of Gibraltar today is that anybody who has been in the employ of either the GDC or of the Government could simply become a civil servant overnight, as was the case under the previous Administration. This is a gentleman employed to do a particular job under contract.

1515 Mr Speaker, I hesitate to raise his name again in this House, but the Hon. Mr Bossino has raised it already. Mr Flower, who was in my office when I arrived, somebody who I am very happy to say does an important function for the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, who I knew and had worked with when I was in private practice and he was in banking, and with whom I have an extraordinarily good relationship, was appointed a dedo by the hon. the previous Chief Minister.

1520 Mr Golt, with whom I have the greatest political affinity, was the subject of a vendetta by the hon. the previous Chief Minister of Gibraltar for 15 years for having the temerity to stand against him in 1996. He used to be as close a friend of his as he used to be of me. He used even to be his ideological partner until he decided to go to the dark side of ideology (Laughter) with the hon. Members opposite. He was appointed in the end a dedo by them, Mr Speaker.

Mr Cantos who used to do his job before them was appointed a dedo by the hon. the previous Chief Minister at the time, and then the appointments a dedo, even in Government companies, were myriad.

If I may say so, Mr Speaker, to deal with the particular issue in question, the Gibraltar Airport advertising contract was not an appointment a dedo, Mr Speaker, it was to undo –

Mr Speaker: Mr Speaker, I have to tell the Chief Minister that we are really running away now from the whole subject and in fact they are in danger not only running out of dedos in their hands, but of the feet as well. (Laughter)

Let us come down to earth. There is an opportunity next week to debate to your heart's content, when I will be much more liberal than I am prepared to be at Question Time. Let us get on.

Hon. Chief Minister: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

So the only part of the hon. Gentleman's preface which I have not answered is this question of the Airport contract. I will say very succinctly and very quickly, all we did there, Mr Speaker, is appoint the only person that they had failed to appoint to the new company from the old company. In other words, they took everybody who was employed by the company, who used to run the Airport – (Interjection) Terminal Management Limited to the new company GATL. They singled out for their usual vendetta-style approach one individual and when we were elected we ensured that we undid that and we gave him the job that he had held for almost 25 years under successive Administrations until their previous leader decided that he was going to be done away with, as if he were to be discarded like rubbish, and we appointed him back.

So none of those things that he has said, Mr Speaker, goes anywhere near dealing with any of the issues that they dealt with and so let themselves down and delivered what was not good Government, Mr Speaker, in many respects.

Mr Speaker: One final supplementary and then we will move on to the next question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is all well and good and it is all very interesting – (Interjection) No, it is all very interesting, but he has not answered the question. Does the private education allowance relate to all Mr Cruz's children or just one of them? That is the question. He is the Minister for Finance and by the way, he does not know the power of the dark side yet. (Laughter and interjections)

Mr Speaker: The supplementary question is: is it to do with one child or with more children?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the answer is that I do not know how many children Mr Cruz has (Laughter and interjections) or may have at the time of the information. I have told him, Mr Speaker, once the Chief Secretary has done an agreement with Mr Cruz, if he continues to ask me I will give him the information.

Mr Speaker. I am fully conscious that the empire always strikes back, but the Jedi always returns and in the end, in episode six, good prevails over evil. (Laughter)

Q467/2014

Previous Speaker's tax affairs – Report into leak of information; update

Mr Speaker: Question 467.

Clerk: Question 467, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I hesitate to ask who is Yoda on the Government benches (Laughter) but, Mr Speaker, further to the answer he gave me to Question 207/2014, can the Chief Minister please state whether the report into the leak of the tax affairs of the previous Speaker has now been finalised?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have no doubt of who the evil emperor is and who Darth Vader is.

Mr Speaker, the Chief Secretary expects the report in question to have been finalised before the end of October.

Q468-471/2014
Sunborn Hotel/Credit Finance Company Ltd –
Details

1580 Clerk: Question 468, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what has been the total expenditure, either by way of loans or otherwise, by the Government or any of its wholly or partly-owned companies, in or associated with the Sunborn floating venture?

1585 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 469 – sorry, Mr Speaker, let me start again.

1590 I will answer this question about the fabulous floating five-star hotel, the Sunborn, together with Questions 469 to 471.

Clerk: Question 469, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1595 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide details of dividends or any returns actually received by the Gibraltar Savings Bank and the Government from Credit Finance Company Limited?

Clerk: Question 470, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1600 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of all legal fees and fees in respect of consultants paid out by Credit Finance Company Limited, together with particulars of the transaction it related to?

1605 Clerk: Question 471, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of how the £430 million invested in Credit Finance Company Limited by the Government and the Gibraltar Savings Bank was in turn invested as at 31st March 2014, 30th April 2014 and 31st May 2014?

1610 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1615 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, as has already been explained in the House previously, details of individual loans issued by Credit Finance Company Limited will not be given; however, details of the total loan book, including the loan issued to the fabulous floating five-star Sunborn Hotel, are now available on the Government website.

1620 Expenditure has also been incurred in infrastructure work to enable the fabulous five-star floating Sunborn Hotel to berth at its present location and to enable the fabulous five-star Sunborn Hotel to have access to utilities, such as potable water and electricity supply. These works are done for any similar development. The total of such expenditure will as usual be shared by those who have taken the benefit of such works and any amounts paid by the Government are therefore going to be recoverable where the benefit is enured to third parties. Discussions in this respect are ongoing with both the owners of Ocean Village and of the fabulous floating five-star Sunborn Hotel.

1625 Mr Speaker, the total costs of the works has not yet, however, been fully invoiced to Government by some private contractors involved and some invoices are disputed. I am therefore unable to provide any reliable figures for the costs of the works at the moment.

Mr Speaker, the amounts received by the Savings Bank Fund from Credit Finance Company Limited from its investment in redeemable preference shares is as follows: 2012-13, £1.22 million; 2013-14, £19.938 million; 2014-15 to date, £3.75 million, representing two months of the year. No other dividends have been paid to date by Credit Finance Company Limited.

1630 The information requested in answer to Question 470 is, I am reliably informed, already available on the Government website.

Monthly information on the total loan book of Credit Finance Company Limited, including details of total commutations paid as requested in Question 471 are now available on the Government website.

1635 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I ask the Chief Minister when the answer to Question 471 has actually been provided... has actually been posted on the Government website? Was it after I provided notice of this question, because if it was, then it is his obligation is to provide it to me in answer across the floor of this House? When I last looked at the website, I did not see it before I actually asked this question. That is why I have asked this question. Indeed, even after I had given notice of this question, it was not on 1640 the Government website. So I think if it was not before, as I am absolutely certain it was not, before I gave notice, his obligation is to provide it across the floor of this House and not just simply refer me to a website.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am informed by those who provide the information to me that it is up on the website. So I assume it is up on the website by the time that I am giving the answer, it must have 1645 been at the time that he was putting the question.

But, Mr Speaker, if he wants to... if something is not on the website, instead of asking me across the floor of the House in an attempt to embarrass the Government, if that is what he is doing, simply give me a call and say, 'Fabian, the monthly amounts have not been put up on the website', and I will tell the civil servant responsible to make sure it goes up immediately. That is what the information is there for. It is not 1650 information we are trying to hide. It should be up on the website.

In fact, Mr Speaker, what I can tell him is that I do not have the information with me, but I believe it is the amount that was disclosed last month. I do not think any of those totals have changed in the period since we discussed it and I said that it would be going up on the Government website.

1655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, you see I do not want to have these exchanges across the floor of this House because it is completely and utter unnecessary. I have given notice of a question. We now have a situation where I am being told by my Deputy, Mr Bossino, that in fact the only information, which is the information that I saw when I looked at the website... the only information on Credit Finance on the website is the loan book in relation to Credit Finance, the commutated pensions, the amount that has been 1660 invested by the Gibraltar Savings Bank in Credit Finance, which is £400 million, and the total equity invested by the Government, and also arrears... loans provided to allow people to repay Government arrears, which is roughly about £1 million.

It does not have the information. It does not provide the information that I have asked in Question 471, which is important. What this is asking is how Credit Finance is actually investing that money. We know that £72 million has been spent. We know that – that is the information on the website – but the remainder of it must be somewhere. That money has to be somewhere. I think that the Hon. the Minister for 1665 Employment probably can answer that question. I suspect that the money is still sitting – because the transaction was probably a paper transaction – in the Gibraltar Savings Bank wherever the Gibraltar Savings Bank originally invested that money, be it in some account or elsewhere. That is what this question is asking. I want to know how the entirety of the £430 million, which is more than just the £72 million, is 1670 actually invested.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, we have had this debate before. The information that I have told him is going to be publicly available on the website is the one that has already been put publicly on the website. So he has gone through the list of everything that he has asked about and it is all on the website, and so I am 1675 pleased that he recognises that.

The balance, Mr Speaker, I have told him before, it is in cash in the companies. It is in cash in the Government companies held in cash.

1680 Hon. D A Feetham: It is held in cash on behalf of the company, but where? What account? With what bank? Simply because the hon. Gentleman has said it is held in cash, there is not £430 million. Less £70 million under somebody's mattress, under the Chief Secretary's mattress or Dilip's mattress because they are the only two Directors, together with another senior civil servant of this company. It is not there. It has got to be somewhere. What I am asking is where is that money invested? In other words, with what 1685 bank is it actually invested... deposited? That is the question.

I even think there is absolutely no commercial sensitivity in this question and indeed it follows from similar questions that I have asked of the Hon. the Minister for Employment and answers that he has provided me, because in fact in fairness to the Hon. the Minister for Employment, he has provided me in the past – he has undertaken to provide to me the same by tomorrow – a list of how exactly the Gibraltar Savings Bank has invested this particular money.

I actually suspect that the money in Credit Finance Company Limited that he says is cash in the company, is still sitting in exactly the same place where it was sitting when the share transfer actually took place, and probably the only difference is that the account holder has actually changed. That is all. That is what I suspect is happening.

1695

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the position is that I have told him in respect of that money that it is held in cash in the companies – that is the information that we are giving. I will go back and seek from the Financial Secretary further detail. But if we have had this question before and I have answered it like this before. (A Member: No.) I do not think we have had this issue before, but I will go away and I will talk to the person that he refers to by his first name, who I refer to as the Financial Secretary.

1700

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I think the question is very clear and all my questions have been very clear, very precise. There is nothing about directly or indirectly, but I know that the hon. Gentleman has difficulty with those questions.

1705

Could I ask the Hon. the Chief Minister to again provide me with this information by tomorrow, which is when the Hon. the Minister for Employment and also the Minister for the Gibraltar Savings Bank is going to provide me with the parallel information as to how the Gibraltar Savings Bank monies are being invested?

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): No. Mr Speaker, his questions are not clear. I have no problems with directly or indirectly and I will not undertake to do that. I will go back and I will talk to the Financial Secretary and I will then give him a call to tell him what the Financial Secretary tells me, but I will not tell him it will be tomorrow. I will tell him that it will happen because I am taking away what he has said.

Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn until Monday at 10.00 a.m., when I have notified hon. Gentlemen and Members generally that we will be dealing with the Appropriation debate.

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question which is that this House do now adjourn until Monday at 10.00 a.m.

I now put the question which is that this House do now adjourn until Monday at 10.00a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.
The House will now adjourn until Monday at 10.00 a.m.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sorry, are the Written Questions going to be tabled?

1730

Hon. Chief Minister: At 10.00 a.m. on Monday.

The House adjourned at 4.45 p.m.

GOVERNMENT BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Appropriation Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Bills – First and Second Reading.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

- 15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2015 and further sums of money to the service of the year ended 31st March 2013 be read a first time.

- 20 Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on the 31st day of March 2015 and further sums of money to the service of the year ended the 31st day of March 2013 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2014.

Appropriation Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved –

- 25 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

- Mr Speaker, this is my eleventh budget session as a Member of this Parliament and my third budget address as Chief Minister and I now have the honour to present the Government's revenue and expenditure estimates for the year ended 31st March 2015, which will mark the third full year of a Socialist Liberal administration since we took office in December 2011.

- 30 I will also, Mr Speaker, report to the House on the revenue and expenditure out-turn for the previous financial year, 2012-13, as well as on the public finances and the state of the economy generally; making this speech, as it has been since it has been led by Chief Ministers since Mr Bossano's ground-breaking address in 1988, very much a State of the Nation address and not just an appropriation.

Mr Speaker, I will end my address to the House by outlining the budget measures that this Government will introduce this year, in pursuance of our electoral commitments and in order to continue to address the social and business needs of our community.

In parliamentary terms, Mr Speaker, I am very proud indeed to reflect on the fact that this is the 24th meeting of the House that I have convened since I was elected – the 25th, if we include the ceremonial meeting for the opening held in December 2011.

It is important in my view that we as a community do not forget that it is only as a result of the election of this administration that we now enjoy the benefit of monthly meetings of the Parliament. Before then the previous administration made up of Members Opposite convened no more than the three meetings required by the Constitution in any calendar year.

Mr Speaker the 24 meetings of Parliament convened by my Government in the past two and a half years compare therefore very favourably to the same number of meetings convened by the previous administration in 10 years from 2002 to 2011. What we have done in just over half the lifetime of this Parliament, it took them the lifetimes of two and a half Parliaments to do! So we are very proud to have demonstrated to our people that we are committed to democracy, not just at election time but throughout the lifetime of the Parliament.

And to make it even clearer, Mr Speaker, we have now fully implemented the technology that allows the public full and open access to the proceedings of this Parliament by way of video feed. The public have now had a full year of being able to see what is happening in this place by way of accessing the audio/video feed on their computers, their laptops, tablets or mobile devices.

I of course want to pause there, Mr Speaker, to thank you and your staff for the work done already in this respect. It is incredible to think that it is only a year ago that we started testing the technology that allows such broadcasting of the video feeds. I think that the Clerks of the Parliament have done an extraordinary job in adjusting themselves to the requirements to provide this service. At the same time, Mr Speaker as they have adapted from the practices of a sleepy Parliament that did not meet very often to the demands that we now make of this place, even now publishing a timetable of activity – which in the model of Westminster is also something that was never done here before.

We are rightly proud, Mr Speaker, of our record on Parliamentary Reform and we will go even further as we finalise the work on the Select Committee on Parliamentary Reform.

It is also true that in the past year, Parliament has required funding in order to manage a European Parliamentary Election. Although not supported as we might have wished by those entitled to vote in Gibraltar, all Members on this side of the House would of course wish to thank the Returning Officer for his work on that election; a good dry run for a new incumbent who will have to deal with a national election in due course.

The Deputy Chief Minister will, Mr Speaker, be addressing matters relating to the refurbishment of Parliament in the course of his address later today, as I turn now to the economic aspects of my address.

Mr Speaker, as has been the case with the previous two budgets of my Government, this budget is carefully designed to support working families, to support our youth and our senior citizens and to support our business community and improve our public services. This budget is designed to continue to deliver on our mission to improve the quality of life and standard of living of all residents of Gibraltar, whilst seeking to keep the costs of doing business here as low as possible so that we remain an attractive place in which entrepreneurs can base their companies. That is an essential prerequisite for continued growth for our community which we cannot lose sight of.

I am pleased to say, Mr Speaker, that we approach this Budget with the European Economic picture a little less bleak than it was a year ago, although in many advanced EU economies the slight economic improvements detected by central banks and financial commentators do not yet seem to be trickling through to citizens. Global activity strengthened during the second half of 2013, as anticipated in the October 2013 World Economic Outlook (WEO) of the International Monetary Fund (IMF). This also predicted that 'activity is expected to improve further in 2014-15, largely on account of recovery in the advanced economies. Global growth is now projected to be slightly higher in 2014, at around 3.7%, rising to 3.9% in 2015, a broadly unchanged outlook from the October 2013 World Economic Outlook'.

The World Bank has cut its own growth forecast for the global economy in 2014 following a weak start to the year in both rich and poor countries. World Bank President, James Kim, has recently stated that the bank expects the global economy to grow by 2.8% compared with the 3.2% predicted in January. Developing country expansion has been revised down from 5.3% to 4.8%, whilst expansion in high-income countries has been shaved from 2.2% to 1.9%. After a sluggish start to 2014, the bank expects activity to accelerate during the rest of the year and for global growth to be 3.4% in 2015 and 3.5% in 2016.

The Vice President of the European Central Bank, Vítor Constâncio, said recently at the 71st Plenary Meeting of the Group of Thirty in Versailles on the 30th May 2014 that:

‘growth remains modest. In many countries, GDP levels are still below or barely above pre-crisis peaks. Euro area GDP in 2013 was 1.7% below 2007 levels.’

In the United Kingdom, growth will happily, it appears Mr Speaker, likely be the highest amongst Europe’s large economies. The most immediate consequence of this for Gibraltar would appear to be the growing strength of the pound sterling. This will obviously have hugely beneficial effects for British holiday makers, our own people included, and for those who work in Gibraltar and live in the Eurozone. The negative effect will be that our products will become more expensive for those who are holding Euros. That makes the shopping experience in Gibraltar also not so affordable. We must keep a careful eye on the strength of the pound sterling and juxtapose that to our need to remain competitive. Local traders may need to adjust pricing as a result of the need to remain attractive to national and international consumers. We have given the cushion with the import duty reductions we have been making in many areas that they need and some which will follow today.

Mr Speaker, it is in this context that we are also working on a consultation on the nature of our status within the EU. We clearly have a debt of gratitude to those who determined our current status on entry 42 years ago. In their own analysis, they got it right that we should stay out of the Common Customs Union in the early 1970s when we entered the European Economic Community, as it then was.

Now we are already developing legal papers and starting work on economic briefs in order to work with the employer and employee representative groups and with Finance Centre and Gaming industry representative groups to ensure we once again understand and get right our determinations of where the future shape of our membership of the EU lies.

This is an exercise which has been widely welcomed and the strategic importance and relevant timing of which is understood by all right-thinking members of our community.

Indeed, Mr Speaker, the issue of the UK’s position on Europe, membership of the EU and a referendum and renegotiation, the order of which may now not be so clear, is playing out on our television screens and on the front pages of the British press at a speed that is frankly vertiginous and itself has entirely justified and vindicated the manner in which we have positioned Gibraltar for this essential consultation process.

Continuing with the economic analysis, Mr Speaker, in neighbouring Spain conflicting data suggests slight improvements, but unemployment remains, in the areas around Gibraltar, as unfortunately harsh as it has been in recent years. This of course means that there are economic pressures on some Spanish citizens – and on those of other nationalities, as well – which sometimes reflect on us in Gibraltar. At least it is now evident that civil servants in the municipality of La Linea have finally been paid the amounts overdue to them in salary, something which has been a difficult to comprehend reality for many professional people in our neighbouring city. The fact that those payments have been made are an effective demonstration of the hard work put in by the current administration of the municipality in righting that previously listing ship. But economic pressures in Spain have repercussions in Gibraltar in myriad ways, not least in its national government wishing to use Gibraltar as a useful distraction where possible.

Mr Speaker, Members of the House will be disappointed to know that UNICEF’s 2014 report informs that child poverty in Spain has grown to 27.5%. That represents a heart-breaking 2,306,000 children living under the property threshold. Unemployment in La Linea and the Campo Area remains exceptionally high, as I have said, and we continue to be of the view that with mutual co-operation and understanding, with dialogue and with goodwill, which has been the consistent attitude of this Government of Gibraltar, we are convinced that Gibraltar can be an economic powerhouse for the whole region that would – in very great measure – help redress the unemployment issues in the region. Without co-operation, however, we are hopeless to help.

The Government, nonetheless, looks forward to a recovery in the Spanish economy as soon as possible which does manifest itself in improvements in particular in the daily lives, we hope, of the people in the whole of the neighbouring Campo de Gibraltar, which would be as good for them as it would be for Gibraltar as a whole. And in this respect Mr Speaker, we remain committed to dialogue as the only mechanism to deliver improved relations with our neighbours’ national government in a way that would boost mutually beneficial economic growth and could result in successful joint job-creation strategies. But we cannot talk to a wall, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, let me turn now to the traditional detailed analysis of our own economic performance.

Mr Speaker, inflation in Gibraltar averaged at 2.1% in 2013 compared to 2.7% in 2012. The Food Group contributed 0.5 percentage points over the year to January 2014. As hon. Members will know, the latest published rate of inflation for April 2014 stood at 1.8%, down from 2.5% in January 2014. The Government’s Statistics Office reports uncertainty on how long inflation in Gibraltar can remain near the target rate of 2%. This uncertainty arises from the openness of the Gibraltar economy and the effects of movements in the exchange rate and commodity prices, both of which are prone to move sharply. The statisticians’ expectations is that downward inflationary pressures in the Eurozone and the weak Euro 150 should nonetheless slow down price increases in Gibraltar during 2014, keeping the rate below the 2% target.

Mr Speaker, in employment terms the excellent work being done in the Ministry of Employment by the Hon. Mr Bossano, now also one of the longest serving parliamentarians in the Commonwealth, is also shining through. In October 2013, the number of employee jobs was 22,907, representing an increase of 6.5% – up by 1,388 from 21,519 in October 2012. There was an increase in the number of employee jobs in both the Private and Public Sectors, where jobs grew from 15,844 to 16,941 – up 1,097 – and from 4,991 to 5,378 – up 387 – respectively over the period. Employee jobs in respect of Gibraltarians increased by 126 from 10,731 to 10,857 over the year, representing just under 50%, or exactly 47%, of all employee jobs in our economy.

160 Mr Speaker, last year the Government reported the largest ever increase in Gibraltarian employment levels. The number of Gibraltarians in full-time employment increased in the year between October 2011 and October 2012 by 524. This demonstrated the massive and unprecedented success of the policies introduced by this GSLP/Liberal Government on 9th December 2011 by the increasing full-time employment levels for Gibraltarians.

165 In the whole 15 years of GSD Government, the number of Gibraltarians in full-time employment only went up by an average of 22 a year, or a total of 325 in 15 years. Our average, for the two years of the employment survey since we were elected is 325! In other words, our average in two years is greater than their total over 15 years! (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Applause and banging on desks)

That is, I am delighted to report to the House, a truly remarkable achievement.

170 Mr Speaker, I do know that in some circles it is popular to knock Joe Bossano. But if people put away their prejudices and look at the results that the hon. Member is producing, they will see that he is delivering for our people jobs at a rate never seen before in history; and certainly nothing like the pitiful levels seen under the previous administration.

175 So when it comes to other contributions in this debate, I would ask all hon. Members, in particular the Member shadowing Mr Bossano, to deal with the substance of the matter of employment; namely the huge and unprecedented success that we are delivering and the abysmal record that their previous administration were responsible for.

Mr Speaker, the numbers speak for themselves and we will not rest until every able-bodied Gibraltarian who wishes to work is in a job.

180 Mr Speaker, on the back of those encouraging employment figures, I will turn now to the annual analysis of GDP, which is the internationally relevant measure of progress in all advanced economies.

The latest figures available from the Government's Statistics Office indicate that Gibraltar's Gross Domestic Product for the financial year 2011-12 was £1.17 billion.

The GDP figure for 2012-13 is now estimated at £1.28 billion and the forecast for 2013-14 is £1.41 billion.

185 Mr Speaker, when we stood for election in December 2011, we made very clear commitments as to the rate of growth that we anticipated for our GDP and how we believed that the GDP figure could grow in actual cash terms over the lifetime of this Parliament. Our prediction was, as has been the case in each election in which the GSLP has made such predictions, entirely ridiculed by individuals standing against us.

190 Well, Mr Speaker, with the continued roll-out of our manifesto commitments – in particular the refurbishment of the forgotten estates, the building of affordable housing projects and the excellent small boats marina project, together with the development of two new schools in the Upper Town area, and the effect that just these projects will have on our economy in the coming years, GDP growth can now confidently be expected to accelerate and in fact entirely comfortably be predicted to surpass our original estimate of a GDP of £1.65 billion by 2015-16. Our economy is therefore on target to deliver and exceed 195 the target we set in our manifesto.

200 There were some that said – almost with glee, Mr Speaker – that our predictions were too ambitious and unachievable. There were some who said that it was impossible for us to grow our economy as fast. On this subject, I am sure I am joined by all right-thinking citizens and residents of Gibraltar, in being very satisfied indeed that Her Majesty's Treasury in Gibraltar has confirmed this level of growth has been and is being delivered. There can be no happier 'I told you so' than this one for all our community, Mr Speaker – even, ironically, for those who relished predicting we would fail to reach these targets of growth.

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to be able to report to the House and to the people of Gibraltar that these figures reflect a continued growth in percentage terms in our economy of around 10.3% per annum. This is double digit growth unseen anywhere else in southern Europe, or indeed the rest of Europe.

205 Mr Speaker, these numbers will rank Gibraltar as one of the fastest growing economies in the world; no mean feat for a nation with a population of 30,000 people in southern Europe – and especially given the current attempts to strangle our economy that have been so evident to the whole world.

Mr Speaker, last year I told the House that the Statistics Office had reported GDP per capita had risen to an average of £41,138 – or US$64,478. By the per capita rankings of the International Monetary Fund, Gibraltar then ranked fifth in the world, with the GDP per capita up from ninth place in 2011-12.

And, indeed, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar actually now still ranks in the Top Five worldwide in terms of GDP per capita.

In fact, I am very, very proud indeed to be able to report to the House today, that I am telling our citizens, and all those who come in daily to work in our economy, that our GDP per capita is estimated by the Government's Statistics Office to now be US$75,117 – which translates into third place on the International Monetary Fund World Economic Outlook Database Ranking of Countries based on GDP per capita. Up from ninth to third in two financial years!

Mr Speaker, it is personally for me a huge satisfaction – and for the whole of the Government of course an enormous source of pride – that in the two and a half years since we have been elected we have been able to steer our nation on such a steep rise in this index. I told the House then and confirm now my view that these measures are not entirely scientific because of differing methodologies and fluctuating exchange rates; but they are the measures that the rest of the world relies on.

And the main drivers for this growth, Mr Speaker, are primarily the continued increased employment and turnover in the online gaming and financial services industries, as well as the increased levels of construction – both from the public and private sectors – now evident in our economy.

Mr Speaker, moving on now to public debt.

The level of Gross Public Debt as at 31st March 2014 was £450 million. That means that in the context of an economy that has already grown by over a fifth from £1.17 billion to £1.41 billion, our Gross Public Debt is now £70 million lower than under the previous GSD administration.

The level of Cash Reserves is estimated to have ended the financial year at a very high level indeed of just shy of £100 million, or £96 million to be exact. This is a huge increase in terms of useable cash reserve and is the valuable fruit of our prudent economic management. Fifty times more useable cash reserve than the Members Opposite left at the end of their last financial year in office, which is the measure that really matters!

This analysis reflects a Net Public Debt of 25% of GDP or £354 million; all well within the borrowing limits set out in the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act.

As a percentage of Annual Recurrent Government Revenue in the previous year, Net Public Debt at the end of March 2014 was 65%, leaving a clear margin of 15% – or around £82 million – of useable Cash Reserves under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act. This compares with usable Cash Reserves of just £20 million when this Government took office on 9th December 2011 – £16 million by the following Monday – and just £2.5 million at the end of March 2012.

In short Mr Speaker, Usable Cash Reserves have now been fully restored to prudent levels and the Public Debt is well within the levels permitted under the Public Finance (Borrowing Powers) Act. There will be no need for us to come to this House to seek a resolution to raise the borrowing limit, as the previous GSD administration were set to do before the last election because they could not balance the books within the borrowing limit formula they set out in the law.

Mr Speaker, as we have said since before our election, this administration is committed to seeing reduced levels of Public Debt on both a Gross and Net basis. This year, we are in the middle of paying for projects that will produce revenue in the future, in particular the building of affordable homes. For that reason, we estimate that the Public Debt will remain broadly at present levels during this financial year; but we can confirm our view remains that it will fall to the levels we estimated by the time of the final budget in the life of this Parliament. In this respect also, we are therefore on target to deliver the reductions in debt in ratio terms that we committed ourselves to deliver.

Mr Speaker I turn now to an analysis of Government revenue and expenditure for the past and coming year.

Government revenue collected in the last financial year has exceeded the original budget by around 12%. As a clear reflection of the continuing growth in our economy, PAYE receipts increased by around 8% over the previous year and Company Tax increased by over 20%. Revenue is up from £387 million, which was the amount in which the financial year 2010-11 ended on 31st March 2011 – and the figure to which the Financial Secretary referred in his Doomsday Memo to me of 13th December 2011 – to an estimate now of £547 million in the two and a half years since we were elected.

Mr Speaker that reflects a growth in recurrent revenue in cash terms of £160 million.

In percentage terms, Mr Speaker, we have taken our nation's economy on a quantum leap forward of growth of 41.34% from the figure at the end of March 2011 to the figure in the conservatively predicted estimates for the end of this financial year.

In the past year alone, revenue has gone from an estimated £487 million last year to the aforementioned estimate of £547 million for this financial year 2014-15. That is a cash estimated growth of £60 million, or percentage growth of 12.32% in recurrent revenue. That would be hailed as excellent growth in any FTSE 100 company!

270 Departmental Expenditure, on the other hand, has been rightly carefully and tightly contained and has ended the year at less than 5% over the original budget. This is excellent control of departmental expenditure which comes in at less than half the revenue growth increase.

Mr Speaker, based on those figures, I would have been delighted to announce to this House that during the last financial year 2013-14, we would once again have achieved an all-time record budget surplus. With those numbers that are reflected in the estimates, at £50.3 million, the Government's budget surplus for the year would have been up by an increase of more than £33 million over the original estimate which was originally a conservatively estimated £17 million.

275 But this address to Parliament today cannot be one that only delivers good news to everyone. Unfortunately, Mr Speaker, as you and everyone in our community knows, this has been a year when Gibraltar has suffered continued attempts to strangle its economy. These have been designed to try to undermine the work not just of the Government but of every person who works in our economy. The nefarious attempts to undermine us economically have clearly had an effect on the numbers that we expected to be bringing to this House and the prosperity that our community can enjoy.

280 Mr Speaker, I am therefore very sorry to have to report to the House, in terms of the surplus to be declared, that there is unfortunately a huge disappointment in store for those watching or listening this morning – at least Mr Speaker, for those who are watching or listening this morning hoping to have damaged us; but unfortunately, not all of those seem to be outside of Gibraltar.

285 Mr Speaker Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is delighted to be able to report that the surplus is actually much higher than expected – even higher than at the time that the estimates book was being put together.

I am delighted to disappoint all of those who wished our community ill.

The surplus to be declared this year is expected finally to be in the region of a huge, record-busting, economic-strangulation-beating, £65 million! (Banging on desks)

290 Mr Speaker, this surplus is a reflection of the hard work of the Government, of every public servant in Gibraltar, of the prudent work being done in the management of our finances by the team at the Treasury and in particular, it reflects the hard work of everyone in this economy. What some people beyond our shores do not recognise, in particular those who believe their own putrid arguments that we are just a military fortress with a few civilians in it, is that we are a community of hard-working, conscientious men and women, toiling each day to make our way in the world.

300 In fact, Mr Speaker, the pillars of the Gibraltar economy are not, in the view of those of us in this GSLP/Liberal administration, those sectors that may or may not be doing better in our economy in any particular year. They are not the particular industry that may be in fashion at any particular time. They are not five. They are not six. They are not seven, Mr Speaker. They are just two.

305 The two twin pillars of the Gibraltar economy are our land and our people. Those are our natural resources.

And our whole wealth, prosperity and way of life depends on using, and defending our right to use, those resources effectively and efficiently. We have nothing else, Mr Speaker, as the Hon. Mr Bossano so succinctly and eloquently set out as Chief Minister in the first real GSLP budget after the 1988 election. And this is a philosophy that we established from the time we were first in Government then in 1988 and which resulted in the huge investment made by that administration, followed by others and now added to by us, of educating our population to the highest possible standard in tertiary education – now including even Masters degrees as compulsory scholarship awards.

310 And Mr Speaker, that is what the surplus that we declare today reflects above all else: the prudent and appropriate application of wealth to the investment in and management of our human resources and the management of our real estate, so that it is geared towards ventures that produce returns in the long run and all of it topped up by the hard work of our people – a reflection of the real twin pillars of our economy.

315 So today, Mr Speaker, the Government does not just congratulate itself on this record surplus. We congratulate the Community as a whole: the working people of Gibraltar and the entrepreneurs in Gibraltar. This is the fruit of the labour of those who put out their hands each day to work, not to take. The result of 365 days of toil, of getting on with it when the chips are down. The Government says congratulations to all sectors of our economy. The Government says thank you to all economic actors.

This is a rewarding record year for which our people and their Government enjoy joint responsibility.

The prudent management of our economic affairs and the prudent application of our resources is producing the excellent results that we have always believed to be possible.

320 Mr Speaker, in line with our manifesto commitment to allow Gibraltar Community Care Trust to build up its reserves so that it can once again be totally independent of Government grants, I am delighted to inform the House that, out of this record budget surplus for the year, a total of £45 million has been earmarked by the Government as a contribution to this charity. This brings the total contributions made by 330 this Government to Gibraltar Community Care Trust, during the past two financial years, to £80 million. (Applause and banging on desks) 'Eight zero', Mr Speaker, not 'one eight'.

Mr Speaker, in making this contribution to Community Care, I am very, very proud indeed to be able to report to our community that the reserves of that charity are now reported by the trustees to be in excess of the £60 million which they had in 1996 and which, under the previous administration, were allowed to run down to zero.

335 I know that everyone in our community will understand the importance of having re-established the contribution to Community Care and the value of that charity, having once again established reserves in excess of the sums they have ever held before. Once again, Mr Speaker, the rainy day fund for Household Cost Allowance is in place.

Mr Speaker, I now move on to the Revenue and Expenditure Budget for the current financial year.

340 As I have already indicated, estimated recurrent revenue for the year is budgeted at £547 million. This reflects the significant increase in recurrent revenue that has been achieved in the previous year but, Mr Speaker, this is nevertheless a conservative budget going forward, which is less than 1% above the forecast out-turn figures for the previous financial year. Mr Speaker, we believe it is important to be prudent in making these predictions and not to overstate the potential for increased income.

345 The overall recurrent expenditure budget for the year is £513 million, which includes a contribution of £25 million to pay costs of Government companies with recurring expenditure which the previous administration had entered into, and which therefore reflects a very modest increase in real terms over the previous financial year of under 4%.

350 For this year, Mr Speaker, the Government is therefore projecting a recurrent budget surplus for this financial year of around £34 million. Again, we are projecting conservatively, based on the conservative estimates we are making of revenue and working hard to once again be able to deliver expenditure as close as possible to the target estimated.

355 Mr Speaker, it is important to set that predicted increase in recurrent expenditure into its proper context, and I intend to do so. In that way, other Members who speak in this debate will have had the benefit of this analysis and will be able to also see how prudent we are being, given how these figures have previously increased.

More importantly, Mr Speaker, we need to analyse these figures in order to ensure that the community properly understands where responsibility lies for many of these increases.

360 Historically, Mr Speaker, my analysis will begin with the position just before the GSLP was elected in 1988.

In 1987-88, recurrent expenditure was £67.3 million. Those estimates were prepared by the AACR Government, although there was an election in between which required the GSLP to lead the Appropriation debate.

365 In 1988-89, the first year that the GSLP was elected, but given the date of the election still reflecting really AACR estimates, recurrent expenditure was £71 million on Revenue of £74 million.

In 1996, eight years later, in the estimates published by the GSLP – although again, the debate happened under the new administration, which was the GSD – and therefore the position of the GSLP when it left office, recurrent expenditure was reflected in the estimates to be £73.2 million.

In 2000-01 recurrent expenditure was £126 million.

370 In 2003-04 it was up almost £40 million, or 31%, to £165 million.

In fact, Mr Speaker, 2003 was an important year. In October 2003, Mr Speaker, the way in which we account for jobs in the public sector in the Employment Survey was changed, so in order to ensure that I am comparing like with like, I will tell the House that in the Employment Survey that year there were 2,938 people employed in the Public Sector, excluding the MOD.

375 In 2007-08 recurrent expenditure had risen another £40 million to £207 million – or up by 25.5%. By October 2007, in that year's Employment Survey the number of Gibraltarians employed in the Public Sector had increased to 3,092.

380 It is important to note, Mr Speaker, that in the Employment Survey for 2011, the year of the last election, the total number of people employed in the Public Sector had increased to 4,574. That is a staggering increase of 1,636 people employed in the Public Sector – many of them coming in from the MOD and us now selling services to the MOD; but not all of the increase accounted for in this way.

385 It is also important to note that by the time we were elected in December 2011, the Public Sector Pay Roll which we inherited gives us a figure of employees which we are paying for out of the public purse, and thence quite the best snapshot of the 'public sector' that we can have – absent the Employment Survey figures which relate to earlier in the year – of 4,804 people in December of that year.

Mr Speaker, that is an increase of 1,866 people in the public sector under the previous GSD administration or 39% growth in employment in the Public Sector since 2003. That is to say an increase in the Public Sector of just under 40% in just two of their four terms. In terms of increases since 1996, Mr 390 Speaker, the figure would be even higher, but we may not be able to compare like with like, if we use the Employment Survey for that year. We are working on obtaining a correct figure for 1997.

It is nonetheless useful to see that the payroll of the Government and the increase in recurrent expenditure of course is always going to be dependent on the number of Public Sector employees; and that rises quite dramatically in the last 10 years.

395 And now coming back to the analysis of the recurrent expenditure simpliciter, hon. Members will note, Mr Speaker, that at the end of eight years of GSLP Government from 1988 to 1996, recurrent expenditure had gone up from £67.3 million to £73.3 million. That represents a growth in recurrent expenditure in that period of £8 million in cash terms, or 8.1%; an average of 1% a year over the first eight years of GSLP administration. If I did this exercise, Mr Speaker, from 1997, which are the first estimates that the Bossano administration prepared, then you would see that the recurrent expenditure figure for 1997 was £73.3
400 million, and that was actually the same figure for recurrent expenditure in 1996. But you cannot do many calculations with zero, Mr Speaker, which would have represented the zero growth in recurrent expenditure in those eight years.

Mr Speaker, in the first estimates for which the GSD was responsible in 1997-98 – because 1996-97 were prepared by the GSLP – recurrent expenditure was up to £110 million. Let's call that the real figure that they say they inherited. Let's work from there for them, Mr Speaker.

By 2011-12, the last estimates book prepared by the outgoing GSD administration, the estimate for recurrent expenditure had gone up to £372.1 million. But in fact the forecast out-turn at the end of that year was quite different. Mr Speaker, remember please, that financial year was three quarters of GSD administration spending in the run-up to a General Election and one quarter GSLP administration stopping all expenditure, having found almost nothing left in the bank.

You see, Mr Speaker, in the year from when the estimates for April 2011 were completed to the time of the forecast out-turn, the then Chief Minister valiantly led an effort to increase wages in a number of Government Departments, Agencies, etc. Indeed, some new Agencies were even created. The forecast out-turn of the recurrent cost for the final year in which the GSD was in office was actually £421 million.

415 Mr Speaker, even when giving them the benefit of their own £110 million figure in their first estimates in 1997-98, as their starting position – which is the first estimate for their second year of government, 1997-98 – that represents a cash increase of £311 million or a percentage increase of 283% in the 16 years of GSD Government in recurrent expenditure. Those figures rise to £348 million, if compared with the GSLP's closing figure of £73.3 million, and juxtaposing that to the £421 million actual spend that 420 represents their last financial year in office. Mr Speaker, that would represent a staggering 474% increase in recurrent expenditure in their time in office!

In yearly average terms that is an average increase of £20.7 million per year, or a percentage average increase of almost 18% a year when working from the £110 million to the £421 million, over 15 full financial years. If we went for the purist approach and compared the £73.3 million of recurrent expenditure in the last GSLP estimates book that they inherited, and compared that to the £421 million that they bequeathed to us, then the increase averaged out per year they held office is £23.2 million per year, as an increase in recurrent expenditure in cash terms.

In percentage terms, that would be a staggering growth in recurrent expenditure of 31.62% in average annual percentage terms in the full 15 financial years that they were in office. If they prefer to divide by 16 430 for shorthand, the numbers do not differ much.

As part of that figure, Mr Speaker, is a contribution of £28.3 million to Government Companies that had recurrent liabilities and which also had a debt due to the Consolidated Fund which included spending commitments of almost £100 million and approximately £70 million already spent by the time that we were elected.

435 But that is not the end of the matter, because, in fact, in respect of recurrent expenditure, a large measure of the increase which resulted in 2012-13 estimates which we tabled really reflect some of the increases already agreed by the outgoing GSD Government and the losses that we found and had to tackle, even two years later.

So when we make an estimate in 2012-13 of recurrent expenditure growth to £440 million, from £421 million the year before – the actual that they left us – that actually reflects also a growth in recurrent expenditure incurred in particular in the last months of the GSD administration.

The three-year pay deal agreed by the GSD had been 2.5% for 2011-12, 2.7% for 2012-13 and 2.9% for 2013-14. So in the context of the rise in recurrent expenditure from £421 million in 2011-12 to £440 million in 2012-13, in the context of that increase of £19 million the GSD's pay deal, the part of the rise for which they are again responsible, was £4.1 million.

445 That is to say, of the increase in recurrent expenditure in our first estimates, 21.5% was what the Hon. Mr Caruana had agreed with the unions before he left. And that is just the general public sector pay deal.

Let me give you a few examples of where the other growth in recurrent expenditure came from, which is not, Mr Speaker, to say that we are here to blame the GSD – it is actually to do a forensic and detailed exercise and analysis to understand how, why and where Recurrent Revenue is rising.

Remember, Mr Speaker, the 16% pay increase in the Buildings & Works Department which became the Housing Works Agency?

Remember the generous 16% pay increase awarded to all GJBS staff after the election had been called?

Some things Members perhaps cannot remember because they are not things ever announced, but, for example, what about the GBC pension fund which had been underfunded by £2 million? This is a publicly funded scheme which was allowed to remain in deficit. To bring it back requires a contribution to GBC from the Consolidated Fund of a quarter of a million pounds a year for eight years.

Remember also, Mr Speaker, that you have things like the creation of the Highways Enforcement Officers which was an entirely new agency created by the GSD and which cost in its first full year of operation £1.15 million – as was the incorporation of a company to be called Gibraltar Car Parks. The latter also operating at a loss, funded by a contribution from Government in company structures created by the GSD and in which we found the huge black hole of £100 million, which we will come to again later.

Remember also, Mr Speaker, the creation in the last financial year in office of the GSD of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency, which took spending from an estimate of £1.9 million in the estimates for 2011-12 under then Head 38 to a forecast out-turn in 2012-13 of £3.7 million under the free standing Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency. In other words, the real extra cost to the taxpayer of the creation by the GSD of the Culture and Heritage Agency was a staggering £1.8 million. He really was giving it away that year, Mr Speaker.

And that, Mr Speaker, accounts for almost 10% of the increase in spending that year; which is therefore also attributable to the time that Members Opposite were in Government and the decisions they implemented in the run-up to the general election. Mr Speaker, the community will be happy to hear that spending in the Gibraltar Culture Agency, where the Principal Auditor's investigation showed a large number of a dedo appointments to very large salaries, has now been reduced considerably by almost £1 million. But in the context of the 'hand-over' increases in spending, let's be clear, 10% of the increase in spending from GSD to GSLP/Liberal administration represents that increased GSD spending on the creation of that particular Culture and Heritage Agency.

Some increases of course, whoever is in Government, cannot be budgeted for and are inevitable. For example, the estimate in 2011-12 for fuel for the electricity authority was £9.2 million; but the increases in the cost of diesel raised that by £5 million to £14 million by the time of the forecast out-turn. And the estimate for 2012-13, the year we are now analysing, Mr Speaker, was £16.5 million.

The increase in scholarship costs is also outside of control when it arises from the increased tuition fees in the United Kingdom. That cost went from £6.4 million forecast out-turn in 2011-12 to a forecast out-turn of £9.6 million in 2012-13. So £3.2 million of the increase in recurrent expenditure from GSD to GSLP/Liberals is due to increased charges in the UK.

So, the increase of £19 million that was the increase in recurrent expenditure between the last real year of GSD administration and our first year in administration, we can show is made up as follows: £4.1 million, or 21.5% was the cost of the first of the GSD pay deals; £1.8 million, or 10%, was the extra costs of spending on culture after the creation of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency; £0.5 million, 2.5% approximately, which is the cost of four new executives employed in the Financial Services Ministry, or the '4 New Jimmys', which both the GSD had promised and which we employed, and so this increase can also be seen to have been approved in effect under the GSD; £3.2 million or 15% was the cost of increased tuition charges in UK; £7.5 million or 30% was the cost of diesel fuel; and another £0.5 million or another 2.5% is factored in as the cost, of course, of inflation for that year.

Mr Speaker, the House and the community at large will be able to see in that detailed analysis that almost 90% of the increase in recurrent expenditure between the estimates for 2011-12 and the accounts for 2012-13 are directly attributable to the spending and spending commitments that Members Opposite entered into before the last General Election, as to almost 40%, or to factors which are outside the control of any party in Government, like fuel cost increases related to the ever-growing price of diesel for electricity generation or increased tuition costs for students as a result of a hike in fees in the UK, which is 47.5%.

So Mr Speaker, any honest analysis of the increases in recurrent expenditure has to be made on the basis of our having inherited recurrent expenditure at a level of almost £421 million, when our responsibility for growth from there to £440 million the following year is about 10% of it. In other words, of that £19 million growth, £1.9 million is the responsibility of the GSLP/Liberals.

So in terms of annual expenditure growth, which was approximately 4.5%, we were responsible for £1.9 million out of £440 million. That is to say, Mr Speaker, our spending decisions related to 0.3% of that year's recurrent expenditure Budget.

When we trace those inherited increases through into the increased estimate for the following year, Members will once again see that a very large part of the next year's increases continue to be the effect of policies entrenched by the previous administration.

510 For example in financial year 2013-14, which we have just left behind, the estimate was for expenditure to grow from a forecast out-turn of just above £448 million in 2012-13 to an estimate of £470 million. That represents in cash terms an increase in recurrent expenditure of approximately £22 million, or in percentage terms 4.9%, which is about a quarter of the average annual growth in expenditure that they were responsible for.

515 Well, of that £22 million, again nearly 25% is represented by the final instalment of the Public Sector Pay Rise agreed by the GSD, which cost £4.8 million in that financial year.

Another continuing increasing expenditure which will not be tamed until we are no longer using diesel to generate electricity was the recurrent cost of that ever more expensive fuel. The cost of that fuel to the Community was estimated to go up again in that year, now from an estimate of £13 million in 2012-13 to 520 an estimate of £23.5 million in 2013-14. That represents, Mr Speaker, a staggering £10.5 million increase in the cost of diesel fuel. That is approximately 50% of the increase in recurrent expenditure for that year; again, not driven by GSLP/Liberal spending plans but by market forces outside our control. In fact, the forecast out-turn is even higher, Mr Speaker at approximately £26 million – but with fuel costs now distributed between Waterport and the new sets brought in, is therefore shown in different parts of 525 Appendix I for this year.

The cost of scholarships again increased from £9.6 million to an estimate of £10.25 million – over £0.5 million increase – to actually a forecast out-turn increase of £12.3 million.

Inflation was also at approximately 2% for that year, so another £8 million can be attributed to that.

530 Again, Mr Speaker, almost all of the increases – in the region of 80% of the increase – in recurrent expenditure driven, not by policies of the present administration, but by the spending commitments of the previous administration or the uncontrollable market forces that increased the price of fuel or the UK's increases in the scholarship fees for our students, the latter being something that we are certainly committed to and that Members Opposite have, until now at least, also said that they remain committed to.

I am also, of course, assuming in this analysis that, despite the high cost of diesel, Members Opposite, if 535 they had been returned to Government would have continued to purchase that fuel because (a) they would have wanted us to have electricity; and (b) because one of the big dividing lines between our respective positions on the generation of electricity has been our commitment to bring in a cheaper and less polluting fuel in the form of Liquefied Natural Gas, whilst they actually signed agreements – luckily with one final get-out trap door – to purchase a new diesel fired power station for Gibraltar.

540 In that context, Mr Speaker, the increased amounts of spending on recurrent expenditure attributable to GSLP/Liberal commitments in the financial year 2013-14 amount to a miniscule part of the increase. Not much to write home about. Well, Mr Speaker, certainly nothing to base a serious speech in reply to a Chief Minister's Budget Address, that is for sure.

545 Turning to this year's estimated increase, Mr Speaker, I am very happy that the overall increase in recurrent expenditure will represent only a 4% increase on the out-turn for the year before – less than a quarter of their average annual yearly increase from 1996 to 2011, if you use the 18% figure. It is too embarrassing for them, Mr Speaker, if I do it as a calculation based on the 34% figure.

We had to make an even larger contribution than expected to recurrent expenditure and the black hole in capital expenditure in the companies than expected in the year 2013-14. That increased from an estimated 550 £17 million to an actual of £20 million. Mr Speaker, this continues to concern us as a Government. This year we are budgeting a £25 million contribution. But this is exclusively an issue created by the previous administration. There were no uncovered recurrent costs in Government companies under the first GSLP administration; and the few trading companies in the structure then paid their way. This company black hole is a phenomenon created under my predecessor, the hon. the now back bencher.

555 So £25 million has to go to that which we are seeking in any event to tame in some way.

The rest of the increase is in part also going to be explained in terms of market forces affecting in particular the cost of fuel. We are budgeting £33.6 million for the cost of fuel; £12 million for Waterport and the balance for the additional generating capacity that has had to be imported. Again, the cost is related to the increasing cost of diesel. That is now going to represent a further £10.6 million increase over the £23 560 million budgeted for the year before; again approximately 50% of a 4% increase in recurrent expenditure.

Inflation is similarly running at 2% which represents another £8 million or so. Tuition fees are expected to increase again by another £4.5 million from an estimate of £10.25 million to an estimate this year of £14.86 million. That is £4.5 million – almost a quarter of the increase in recurrent expenditure.

565 And, as I will come to later Mr Speaker, the Public Sector Pay increase for this year, which I will announce in greater detail later in the course of this address, represents again a similar part of the balance of the 4% increase which we are talking about for this year.

All in all, Mr Speaker, although this analysis of recurrent expenditure has had to be lengthy and detailed, I think it is an important exercise to do with our community on an 'open-book' basis.

570 I think it is particularly useful, Mr Speaker, so that we can frame in honesty any debate Members may want to embark on in the context of trying to attribute what I might call 'political blame' for the increases in recurrent expenditure over the years since we were elected.

I think it is hugely important to frame in honesty any suggestions that controlling recurrent expenditure is something which Members Opposite might have been more responsible for, if they had been returned to Government.

575 You see, Mr Speaker, we need to understand how the easy soundbite that 'recurrent expenditure is too high' or 'recurrent expenditure is growing too fast' would be dealt with by those who suggest that they might be able to do a better job than us – those who left us with an average of 18.8% per year of growth, or 34%, if we were to be really analytical.

580 Would they stop generating electricity for some hours in the day to save money, Mr Speaker? Would they cut the pay of civil servants or public servants generally? Would they not give a pay rise to the public Sector this year, Mr Speaker?

Those who express concern about rising recurrent expenditure need to be honest and tell the public what it is that they stand for.

585 Would they cut down the complement of the public sector? Or would they be stopping our young people from having their scholarships, even if they themselves have two degrees and a professional qualification paid for by the taxpayer?

Well, Mr Speaker, we will not do any of that, and we will continue to run surpluses, grow the economy and control recurrent expenditure; and one of the main ways that we will do this will be to switch in fuel from diesel to gas which is good for the environment and is good for the collective pocket too.

590 But let us, by all means, Mr Speaker, have a meaningful debate on recurrent expenditure if the House wishes, Mr Speaker. Certainly. By all means. But let us have it framed in honesty and not in deceit.

Let us not see our people led into thinking that costs which are at large driven by market forces can be controlled in any other way than we are already working to control them by planning for a future when we are buying less diesel.

595 That is how we will loosen the noose that Members Opposite have tied around the neck of our community by the staggering average annual increases in recurrent expenditure of between 18% and 31% in the years that they were in office. Even the lower figure is a staggering indictment of their management of our economic affairs!

600 And let us not seriously have to endure seeing those who agreed pay deals that cost almost £4.5 million or £5 million a year for three years now say that it is remarkable that costs have increased in part by that very same £15 million.

Because this debate is not about blaming the GSD. It is about telling the truth; about framing debates in honesty and not in deceit; about opening citizens' eyes and not allowing Members to wriggle off the hooks that they have made for themselves.

605 And neither should this debate just be about happily going off to spend some more. It should be about spending on things that matter to our people, that make their lives better and that are long-term investments for our community. And part of that also requires us to have a good and strong discipline in sticking to budgets.

610 Mr Speaker, in the last financial year, the Government invested around £128 million on capital projects funded from the Improvement and Development Fund.

615 Around £26 million was invested on 'Works and Equipment' and a further £102 million was invested in specific capital projects, including £12 million on the conversion and refurbishment of the Old Naval Hospital Dementia Facility; £5.8 million on the Sandy Bay Beach Protection; and £5.2 million on Improvements to our Housing Estates. A total of £40 million which was also provided as Equity Funding for the Government-owned asset-holding corporate structure.

620 Capital Projects that are being funded through the Government-owned companies include the construction of over 1,000 new affordable and rental homes; the construction of car parking facilities in numerous locations throughout Gibraltar; a programme of replacement of our bus fleet with more environmentally friendly vehicles; a number of reclamation projects, including the Eastside Reclamation Development, which has now been brought back fully under Government ownership and control, resulting in a significant increase in the Government's land bank that is available for development projects currently under discussion.

625 Indeed, Mr Speaker, hon. Members will have recently seen advertisements seeking 'expressions of interest' for the development of the whole or part of the Eastside reclamation which the Hon. Joe Bossano had the long-term vision to start when he was Chief Minister.

We sincerely believe it is possible for us to see that plot in earnest development in the short to medium term. The appetite certainly seems to be there and we are looking forward to the end of the period for expressions of interest in order to progress as much as possible in respect of that particular area.

630 This is an area of responsibility which is principally under the ministerial remit of the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, Dr Garcia, under his portfolio for lands. Hon. Members will no doubt agree that the management of that prized land asset could not be in better and more reliable hands.

635 Mr Speaker, in this financial year, the expenditure budget of the Improvement and Development Fund is around £120 million. The investment in Works and Equipment continues at around the same level as in the previous year. The other main capital investments include the first phase of the excellent 700-berth Small Boats Marina; investments in our housing estates and our beaches; the relocation of a large number of MOD estates, making way for the release by the MOD of further land and properties for use by our community.

640 Equity funding of £25 million has also been provided as the initial capital base of the Gibraltar International Bank. The new Bank is expected to open its doors to the public later this year and will provide full retail banking services to our community, as Barclays Bank plc reduces its retail banking presence in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to announce that we have now secured a board of directors that fits exactly what we had in mind when we announced the bank on 16th December 2013. In that statement, I said that I was:

‘excited that GIB will be a modern, innovative institution designed to meet the needs of our community, licensed and regulated by the Financial Services Commission and independently managed by the banking professionals providing an excellent service to its community’.

645 Mr Speaker, as Members will know, we have engaged the services of two excellent individuals as the CEO and COO of the Bank with extensive expertise and experience in the banking business. However, it has always been our intention to provide them with independent professional support at board level and this has now been secured. Mr Speaker the Board of Directors of GIB will, in addition to the CEO and the COO as Executive Directors, be joined by the following Non-Executive Directors: Mr Albert Langston JP, a banking professional and currently Chairman of the Board of Directors of Lloyds Bank Plc in Gibraltar; Mr 650 Marcus Killick OBE, the former CEO of the Financial Services Commission; Mr Peter Montegriffo QC, a Senior Partner of Hassan’s, previously Deputy Chief Minister; Mr Colin Vaughan, a Director of PWC in Gibraltar; Mr Stephen Reyes, a Director of Deloitte’s in Gibraltar; Mr Anthony (‘Tony’) Welsh, as he is known, a well established and well known Gibraltar businessman; Mr Peter Isola, the Senior Partner at 655 Isola’s; and Mr Dilip Dayaram Tirathdas, the Financial Secretary.

660 Mr Speaker, each of these individuals is well known in our community and each has excelled in their own area of expertise. I am grateful to each of them for having agreed to join what is the founding board of the GIB, and I have no doubt that their appointment will reaffirm our serious commitment to deliver to the people of Gibraltar exactly what I had promised on 16th December 2013 and which our community richly deserves: a new, first-class, independent local bank.

Mr Speaker, there is of course very positive news for clients of the Gibraltar Savings Bank, as well. As hon. Members are aware, when this Government took office, the reserves of the Bank had fallen – or been taken, really. They had not fallen, Mr Speaker. They had been taken, and they were down to almost zero.

665 Before 1997, there was a requirement for a Reserve of at least 10% of deposits to be held in the Savings Bank before a transfer of any surplus in excess of this could be transferred out. In 1997, an amendment was made under Members Opposite to the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act to exclude Government deposits or deposits in Government-owned companies from these minimum reserve requirements.

670 Despite this change which the previous administration made just after they were elected, Members of the House and the public will recall that in the financial year 2008-09, a further amendment was made to the law by the previous administration so that the reserves of the Savings Bank, which had been £19.8 million, built up since the bank was established, could be and were transferred by the then GSD administration into the Consolidated Fund.

675 The actual reserves of the Gibraltar Savings Bank at the end of March 2011 were therefore just £1,444.51. Yes, Mr Speaker. I am no longer talking in millions. In this respect, I am talking literally of just ‘one thousand, four hundred and forty-four pounds and fifty one pence.’ Down, Mr Speaker, from reserves of £19.8 million that the Savings Bank had built up year on year since its inception, I believe.

680 Well, Mr Speaker, having inherited a Gibraltar Savings Bank with a reserve of £1,444 I am pleased to be able to report to the House today that the reserves of the Bank now stand at around £11 million and that these reserves are projected to increase to over £20 million by the end of this financial year. Mr Speaker, we have therefore re-established the Savings Bank’s own ‘rainy day fund’, having increased the amounts available to it by – and it took me a while to work this figure out, Mr Speaker; most calculators did not want to do it – 1,385,000%. Yes, one million, three hundred and eighty-five percent increase since the time we were elected! We received the Savings Bank with a reserve of £1,444 and we have increased it to £20 million. A ratio increase, a percentage increase of 1,000,385%

685 That is a phenomenal reversal, Mr Speaker, of the fortunes of the Bank under the life of this administration to date and it leaves little room for argument about how prudent the management of the affairs of the Bank is under our administration. It is a huge and important step forward in the re-establishment of the reserve the Bank had before and likely is already exceeding them in the space of only three financial years.

690 Just this would serve to demonstrate that the time we have been in office has been excellent for the Savings Bank reserve.

695 However, in the period since we took office, Mr Speaker, there have been repeated attempts by Members Opposite, the Leader of the Opposition in particular, to raise concerns in people’s minds about the security of deposits in the Savings Bank. We have been clear about the fact that those deposits are in fact safer than ever.

Mr Speaker, one of the ways in which the Savings Bank has invested part of its deposits is in redeemable preference shares of a company owned by the Government, namely Credit Finance Company Limited.

700 Credit Finance has been the subject of much comment in the past 18 months or so, and I therefore want to report to the House on the investments by the Savings Bank in that vehicle and assure the community that this investment vehicle is performing extraordinarily well and, contrary to the assertions of the Leader of the Opposition, is structured and is operating entirely in keeping with the Constitution and all relevant legislation.

705 As I have said already during the course of the proceedings of this House at different Question Times, the Government will provide all non-sensitive details of the investments which are being pursued by Credit Finance. Also at different Question Times, and now monthly online, we are providing details of the total amount of the loan book which Credit Finance has been running.

710 The loan book stood at £49.42 million when I answered questions last week. The total size of the loan book can be found at table CF1 on the Government website and will be updated on a monthly basis. The details published respect the right of confidentiality of individual borrowers.

The details of what amounts have been loaned to individuals who have used the money to pay off Government debts has been provided, again respecting the right of confidentiality of the borrower. That sum is also on the Government website and is less than £1 million.

715 The loans which have been granted to enable borrowers to repay debts due to the Government are all now secured against assets with realisable value. Previously, the debts were not secured.

720 Separately, Credit Finance is paying the commuted pensions of civil servants. How is it doing this? Well, Mr Speaker, as people who have been following the debate will know, it pays the lump sum of the commutation in exchange for an assignment of the pensioners’ rights to receive their monthly pension payments. At the moment it has invested approximately £23 million that way. The Government still has to pay the pensions of those individuals, as those are the terms of the assignments signed by them when they commute; we just pay them to Credit Finance instead of directly to the individuals. So in each year Government is still paying a recurring amount in respect of those commuted pensions. The recurrent expenditure side is therefore not ‘flattered’, as the hon. the back bencher flatteringly put it, to the tune of the pension which is still being paid, only to the difference between the pension paid and the commutations paid in that year. In other words, Mr Speaker, if the commutations had been paid out directly by the Government this year then the amounts that would have been added to the expenditure would be say £11.5 million in financial year 2012-13 and another £11.5 million in financial year 2013-14.

730 Interestingly therefore, Mr Speaker, even if the Government had paid the commutations directly, and we had not received – which we have not – half of the £1 million paid in arrears equally in instalments of £0.5 million each year from loans granted by Credit Finance, we would still have been declaring record surpluses in each of the years in which I have been addressing the House as Chief Minister. The surplus this year would be just £12 million smaller; still a record and still even above the record predicted!

735 I trust that the Leader of the Opposition has followed that and is not going to therefore suggest in his reply that our records this year and last year might not have been records if it were not for Credit Finance. They would just have been both records that were £12 million smaller – but records nonetheless.

740 And as I have also said repeatedly, what Credit Finance is not doing, Mr Speaker, it is not funding Government projects. We were asked by Members Opposite about each project which we have in our manifestos one by one and whether we were going to fund these from Credit Finance or from the Savings Bank. I guess they asked one by one in order to increase the numbers of questions they asked. We answered ‘no’ to all of their questions.

So Credit Finance isn’t a credit card or a blank cheque for anything that we are doing. But never let the facts get in the way of a good soundbite!

745 In fact, what was interestingly not commented on by the Leader of the Opposition at the last Question Time was the fact that Credit Finance has already started to pay the Savings Bank returns on the investment in its redeemable preference shares. The payments have totalled almost £25 million since late 2012-13. And all of this information is now on the Government website. Talk about transparency!

And of course it is also in Parliament, not just because we have answered questions from a disbelieving Opposition, but also because it is required to be. Let me show hon. Members how.

750 Appendix L this year shows the amount of the Savings Bank Fund. This estimate once approved is reflected in the approved estimates book. Then that is audited, after the end of the financial year, and the Principal Auditors Audited Account will reflect this, as well as the investments in which the Savings Bank has invested its own money. As he knows, this is published in the Gazette.

755 So where is the wall of silence that they like to talk about, Mr Speaker? More like a wall of understanding which cannot be penetrated by reason because it is purposely shut for partisan political purposes! They do understand, Mr Speaker. They can see how well Credit Finance is doing. But they want to make mischief.

760 And yet they ask all these questions of Credit Finance; but none about the other more remote funds in which the banks invest. Incredible that they trust the Financial Secretary and the Chief Secretary of Gibraltar less than they trust people they do not even know – any of whom could be another Bernard Madoff.

765 Mr Speaker, let me end this part of my address by saying that the Government has taken detailed legal advice from leading counsel on all of the legal issues that the hon. Member opposite has raised throughout in relation to Credit Finance; not because we consider that there is any grain of reason or merit in the things that he has said about section 69 of the Constitution or the Borrowing Powers Act. We have taken advice in order to responsibly knock all of his points on the head with the benefit of the best legal advice available, and I can happily confirm to this House that everything that Credit Finance has applied funds to has been in keeping with all Constitutional and legislative requirements.

Mr Speaker, I must also address generally the question of using Government wholly owned companies to administer and finance part of the Governments asset holding and development programme.

770 Members of the House will recall that when describing the recurrent expenditure issues earlier, I have had to refer to the £100 million black hole in Government company spending which I addressed to the nation just after the last General Election to appraise them of the state of Government finances at the time.

775 Well, the issue of Government companies has been a live issue for my predecessor when he was Chief Minister also. In his first Budget Address as Chief Minister in 1996 – don't ask me why I read these things, Mr Speaker, but I find them interesting! The Hon. Sir Peter Caruana said this – this is a direct quote:

'Mr Speaker, the list of companies wholly owned by the Government of Gibraltar directly or indirectly would appear to be as follows: Gibraltar Investment Holdings Limited; Gibraltar Land Holdings Limited; Gibraltar Residential Properties Investment Company Limited; Gibraltar Commercial Property Company Limited; Brympton Co-ownership Company Limited; Westside II Co-ownership Company Limited; Westside I Co-ownership Company Limited; Gibraltar Information Bureau Limited; Gibraltar Joinery and Building Services Limited; Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners Limited; Calpe Cleaning and Painting Services Limited, subject to question marks that I still have to clarify; and Gibraltar Quarry Company Limited.'

He went on to say this:

'The Government are considering which of these companies can be eliminated and it is the policy of the Government [the GSD Government, Mr Speaker] to eliminate such companies that are not essential for the proper and good organisation of the affairs of Government in the light of the structures as they presently exist.'

That was in May 1996. I think he had literally just been elected and found himself bounced into a budget session.

780 Well, Mr Speaker, I was not at all surprised to hear the Members Opposite once again making reference to 'a web of companies', no sooner had they left Government and landed back on the seats Opposite. Interestingly, since the time of his maiden budget address as Chief Minister, not much had been heard from the hon. the back bencher on this issue of the web of companies. And yet, in his first New Year's Message as Leader of the GSD, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition opposite said that the use of Credit Finance amounted to:

'a return to the days when public finances were structured through an impenetrable web of companies'.

785 I am not sure, Mr Speaker, whether that was not actually just a New Year's 'Mess' rather than a New Year's 'Message'.

You see, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member had been curious enough to peer not just into his Estimates Book but actually into the approved accounts, which is the book which appears once we have ended the 790 debate in this House and which turns the draft Estimates the House debates into the Approved Estimates on which we spend, he would see that a chart appears there.

795 That chart, Mr Speaker, in the Approved Estimates for 2011-12 – that is to say, the last Estimates approved by this House with the GSD in Government and the hon. the back bencher as Chief Minister and the Hon. now Leader of the Opposition then as Minister for Justice with specific responsibility for upholding the Rule of Law – if they look at that book, on page x, they will see a chart which tells us that they maintained the list of companies which Mr Caruana had read in his first Budget speech 16 years earlier except for Calpe Cleaning, which was not a wholly owned company at all, I believe, and Gibraltar Quarry Company Limited which had been incorporated – Mr Speaker, you will probably know better than us – by the AACR, the first Government to incorporate a company to do Government business. I believe that company was actually incorporated to work on the sand slopes on the eastside and never did anything and has been struck off.

800 But in all other respects, Mr Speaker, not only had the GSD maintained the company structure they inherited from the GSLP – that structure which was an impenetrable web, that they were going to try and eliminate it – they actually added to it. They added wholly owned companies and then added wholly owned subsidiaries to wholly owned companies; and they even added more trading activities and employees to some of those wholly owned subsidiaries of wholly owned companies; and then they added debt due to both capital and recurrent commitments of the wholly owned subsidiaries of the wholly owned subsidiaries of wholly owned Government companies.

805 And then, Mr Speaker, almost at the end of their time in office, they then added another 40 or so companies registered at Convent Place, without announcing it to anyone – the sort of things that gives the Hon. Mr Bossino the heebie-jeebies, Mr Speaker (Laughter) – except of course if the GSD do it – in order to become the management companies of the Government’s post-war housing stock as they are sold.

810 In fact, Mr Speaker, as can be seen now in clear and unequivocal terms, what they did was that they turned a straight forward asset-holding structure with no trading entities that had any debt into – a huge web of companies, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

815 Yes, Mr Speaker, surprising though it may be for those who have not followed the political careers of Members Opposite, they did what we always know and expect they will do. That is to say, the very opposite of what they say they are doing or going to do!

820 So I think it would be wise for all of us simply to have clear agreement across the floor of the House that companies are actually an important part of the way in which modern Government can discharge some of its functions in a fully transparent and appropriate way; but in a manner that also adds business efficacy to the business of Government. There is nothing wrong with that. We do not consider that this is at all a complex structure or a web of anything other than a perfectly straightforward vanilla structure that works – as they obviously think it did, given that they used it for 16 years. They used it and added to it through the 16 years, and then at the end, threw in an extra forty just before they left.

825 Well, Mr Speaker, as ever there are, in any event, objective measures to help us analyse how the public have perceived the positions of the Government against those who have been scaremongering and clearly trying to undermine both the Government and the Savings Bank in the way that they have approached this issue. In this case, the best measure would of course be to look at the deposit base of the Bank.

830 Mr Speaker, the voices raising unnecessary concern about risk have had an effect on the deposit base of the Bank. Mr Speaker, deposits with the Gibraltar Savings Bank have in the period since we were elected grown from around £330 million when we took office to over £800 million now.

835 It seems clear Mr Speaker that when it comes to looking after their money, the public has clearly chosen to follow the Government’s position that the Gibraltar Savings Bank represents a very safe investment indeed and take no heed of the scaremongering of Members Opposite. Indeed, the position is a little more complex than that of course, given that the very founder of the GSD, Mr Montegriffo has been very clear in his view – and this is a quote direct from him:

‘I don’t think savers should be worried. The savers’ money is in my view perfectly safe and any suggestion that the money is under threat I think is quite irresponsible.’

840 Mr Speaker, who would have said, 20 years ago, that a GSLP Chief Minister would be quoting Peter Montegriffo – the founder of the GSD – with approval and agreement at a GSD led by a Mr Feetham; but that is the reality. Incredible to think that there are other areas on which there is public disagreement between the man who is presently the current leader of the GSD and the man who will forever be the founder of the GSD.

Mr Speaker, building on the strong and strengthening foundations, the Gibraltar Savings Bank will continue to provide a good range of savings products to our community, as indeed it has been doing since it was established over 130 years ago. However, the bank will see a transformation during the current 845 financial year, as it starts to make full use of the latest available developments in banking technologies and as it opens a number of further branches and public counter positions.

In the next few months, the bank will be offering our community a number of new and enhanced services. These will include instant-access current-account facilities for the payment of Government bills by standing order and by direct debit and facilities for the electronic transfer of funds between bank accounts.
850 There will be a number of new Gibraltar Savings Bank ATM machines and a new 'VISA approved' Debit Card will also become available to all the bank's current-account holders.

I should say, Mr Speaker, that we will not allow Credit Finance to have one, lest somebody might suggest that they are being used by the Government.

855 These developments will complement the services that I have already referred to which will be offered by the Gibraltar International Bank Ltd, which will be providing a full range of retail banking services to members of our community, including mortgage finance to prospective home-owners and commercial lending to our local businesses.

Mr Speaker, two important projects for the future are the airport underpass or tunnel and the new power station.

860 Mr Speaker is aware that one of the greatest challenges we faced on our election was the dispute with OHL, the successful tenderers for the development of the tunnel or underpass. That dispute grew into litigation and that litigation has required and consumed a considerable amount of my time since my election. Happily, as the community is now aware, Mr Speaker, we have prevailed in that litigation to date. We are already considering how best to activate finalisation of the tunnel works whilst we continue the process of enforcing awards and dealing with appeals.

865 Today, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to be able to announce that late on Friday, I was informed by the Government's solicitors in this matter, Messrs Triay Stagnetto Neish, that we have now received the sum of £4.5 million by way of payment of the interim amount of costs awarded to the Government in this matter. Mr Speaker, this represents 80% recovery of all our costs in the litigation to date, calculated on the standard basis.

Mr Speaker, I told the House last year that one of the most important things on the Government's agenda and one of the biggest capital projects for the Government is the replacement of our three existing power stations with a single new power station in order to guarantee Gibraltar's power needs for the next three decades.

875 Tenders were invited with a closing date for submissions of 1st August 2013 last year. The time for the award of the tender has however had to be extended in order to deal with queries raised by the tendering parties.

880 The Government has now awarded the tender for the construction of the new power station. All tenderers were advised of this decision by the Government. None of the parties that have been turned down have sought to challenge the tender award in the 10-day period after the award which is allowed for that purpose.

Mr Speaker, before I continue, I want to refer the House to a part of the maiden speech as Leader of the Opposition in his Budget Address last year of the Hon. Mr Feetham. In one part of his intervention he said, talking of our commitment to build a new power station, the following:

'a power station that will cost, in anyone's estimate, over £100 million'.

885 Mr Speaker I am today able to announce in this House that the Government has awarded the tender to Bouygues Energies & Services for a basic sum of £67,958,000. (Applause and banging on desks) The Bouygues offer was found to be the best Capital and Opex offer and also had the best environmental scoring. So much for the estimating skills of the Member Opposite! Maybe, Mr Speaker, we can put it down to just another 'Rookie error'.

890 The new power station will consist of three in number MAN branded dual fired engines and three in number MAN branded gas engines with a total guarantee power output of 81.45 MW – 81.45 MW for £68 million.

895 An additional sum of £8,200,000 will be payable for the inclusion of Heat Recovery Systems which was part of the Government requirements to provide additional output of approximately 4.2 MW using a more efficient and environmentally friendly way of producing additional generating power.

My colleague, the Minister for Utilities, Mr Linares, will be providing such further additional details as he may be able to, during the course of his address to the House this morning.

900 Mr Speaker, as the Government has set out to do from the beginning, and for the financial reasons that will have become obvious to all in the context of my explanations earlier of the increased costs of diesel fuel, the new power station will operate using natural gas with diesel only as a backup. Perhaps most importantly, the use of natural gas as the main fuel for the engines will reduce airborne NOx and particulate emissions.

Mr Speaker apart from the fact that the cost of diesel has been rising for many years, international reserves of gas are greater and more accessible than reserves of oil. As a result gas is not just a more efficient and more environmentally friendly fossil fuel, it is also a considerably cheaper fuel compared to diesel and its supply more diverse.

Mr Speaker, for all of those reasons, the use of natural gas will be a win-win for Gibraltar technically, environmentally and economically.

Bouygues Energies & Services is the parent company of ETDE who had previously been awarded the Lathbury Barrack power station contract by the previous administration, initially at a cost of £114,200,000 to construct a 64 MW power station. The overall price for the Lathbury power station later increased to approximately Euro 145 million on 13th July 2011 – that was the latest price given to us – due to the delays in awarding the contract. That was the equivalent at the then exchange rate – at the exchange rate of 13th July – of £128 million – £128 million for 64 MW, as compared to £68 million, add the further £8 million, £76 million for 85 MW.

Mr Speaker, this solution, the community will be very happy to hear – the solution that I have announced today – will not require a 100% increase to consumers in electricity costs over 20 years at 5% a year – in fact it is much more, because it is compound – as was planned by Members Opposite as the funding for their own power station plans. Those who constantly urge the Government to keep the cost of doing business in Gibraltar down will want to congratulate us for making a choice for our community that both will not require such increases as the previous administration had in store for them and will generally reduce recurrent expenditure.

Again, I want to thank the inter-ministerial committee that worked on this matter with me for their clarity of thinking and their tenacity in finding the right solution for the future; not just for today but for many generations to come.

The new power station will be located partly in a reclaimed area off the North Mole but the reclamation area may also yield land available for other purposes also.

Most importantly, and whilst we develop the new facility Gibraltar now has, thanks to this Government, already security of supply and no lack of generating capacity. But we have nonetheless seen catastrophic events this year, when Gibraltar has suffered major power cuts not as a result of not having a power station or sufficient generating capacity, which there is, but because of the creaking distribution network infrastructure, work on which is already on-going.

Mr Speaker, the Government is clear that the Electricity Authority must provide power as an essential prerequisite for modern life and the state-of-the-art businesses we have and want to further attract to Gibraltar. We must do everything in our power, so to speak, as we are, to ensure security and continuity of supply.

But in the context of the huge problems that the recent explosion at Waterport produced, we are indebted to the staff of the Electricity Authority for the way in which they are working, not just on the new facility and the tender, but in repairing the existing facility to see if it is viable that it should provide at least some base power for the months before the new facility is finally supplying the electricity. They have been excellent in agreeing changing shift patterns and putting their shoulder to the mill.

Similarly, the GEA must also get better at communicating with all its clients, in particular its premium clients; and we are working together in Government and with the GEA to deliver better communications should the day come again when we suffer a major catastrophic loss of power again; something which all I am sure sincerely hope and are working to ensure does not happen.

Mr Speaker, the Government continues to explore other ways of reducing energy consumption including the use of solar energy for street lighting and in Government Buildings and a number of projects are being developed in this respect. My colleague the Minister for the Environment, the Hon. Mr Cortes, will be speaking further – and as ever with him, authoritatively – on this subject.

I will add only this: the Government sees huge value in the reduction of the demand for electricity and renewable energy provides for Gibraltar a chance to see that become a reality, as is already the case in some private estates in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, technical facilities in relation to broadcasting, to which I now turn, are today at GBC a far cry from what we inherited. A number of additional professional employees have been recruited. Premises – although still very cramped – have been improved, staff morale is higher, and very importantly, programming is better. And, the public is acknowledging the change.

As reported in the news this morning, a recent survey of 1,000 people has suggested that practically all of those polled consider GBC to be vital, very important or important to the community, as all Members of the House will no doubt agree, Mr Speaker.

Radio Gibraltar is listened to by 53% of respondents, making it the most heard station on The Rock by far, while 93% have watched GBC TV since its re-launch last September, with more than half of those consulted enjoying the revitalised programming. I know I do, Mr Speaker.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, ‘Newswatch’ is the most popular TV programme with a staggering viewership of 69%, while ‘Viewpoint’ is seen by 35% of those polled, indicating the public’s preference for current affairs-based programmes. In fact, all of GBC’s shows fared well, which is very encouraging. GBC’s recent re-launch appears to be working, Mr Speaker, with Gibraltarians returning to watch their TV station in relatively large numbers, in the same way as listeners are tuning in to Radio Gibraltar, which with our investment is broadcasting now also a choice of English and Spanish language programming every weekday through two distinct services. In any event, the Government would encourage the Corporation to do more to exploit our bilingualism in order to ensure that those around us are able to better comprehend us socially, culturally and politically.

GBC must now work, as I have no doubt they will, so that the autumn television schedule will reflect the results of this survey.

Gibraltar’s membership of UEFA has also meant that GBC now also includes live football whenever the senior team plays. Football transmissions are expensive, and although a drain on the Corporation’s financial resources, it is important that local fans are able to follow their team on their national TV. Joe does not miss a match!

Gibraltar’s first game against Slovakia, was also a first for GBC TV, given the live broadcast of the game from Faro. Several other live matches have followed, including one from Estonia, and negotiations I understand are underway with UEFA with a view to agreeing the rights to broadcast Euro qualifying matches from September if they are affordable.

Mr Speaker, broadcasting is an expensive business and creating bespoke broadcasts for a community of 30,000 people can cost as much as we want it to. Moreover, the Government shares the view of other mainstream media in Gibraltar that GBC must – as the only media funded from this House’s appropriation – not compete in the market for advertising on which other media depend for their income. For that reason, and as I have repeatedly said since I delivered my first Budget Address as Chief Minister, GBC has to stop taking traditional advertising, with the exception of programme sponsorship. This may require a small increase to the Government in its subsidy to cover the reduction in income when this occurs.

Together with the Board of GBC and its CEO, we are continuing the work of developing the huge potential for alternative sources of income for the Corporation, with the consequent benefit to the taxpayer from a smaller subsidy, should these materialise.

Mr Speaker, GBC’s human resources are now fully maximised and following a very professional work ethic, with the results visible on our TV screens. GBC is now very much a different place to what it was just a couple of years ago. But more needs to be done to ensure the staff remains motivated, and the public is kept informed and entertained.

Broadcasting House is desperately small for the size of the operation, for which we must pursue the long promised relocation of facilities. Although we have previously mentioned possible alternative locations, circumstances have meant that for one reason or another, these have had to be discarded. However, the CEO, the Board and my Ministry are considering a number of new options in consultation with the office of the Deputy Chief Minister who holds responsibility for lands, and I sincerely hope to be able to make a final and definitive announcement during the course of this financial year on GBC’s moves elsewhere.

There is one issue regarding GBC that has been a huge concern to this Government. Mr Speaker, apart from the physical and operational problems at Broadcasting House that we inherited in 2011, we have also had to address the matter of a major shortfall in the staff’s pension fund. The previous administration ignored the problem for years, resulting in a projected deficit in the fund of very nearly £2 million. We have had to give this urgent attention in order to ensure GBC is able to meet its obligations in respect of its pensioners, and we have agreed to cover the financial hole over a period of eight years by making annual contributions to the fund – another area of expenditure that is down really to their failure in office, Mr Speaker. Of course, this could have been avoided if the matter had been addressed by the previous administration when the problem first arose; but a contribution to an underfunded public pension fund does not photograph as well as a new roundabout.

As hon. Members will recall, this is one of the matters affecting the increased cost of recurrent expenditure and will be relevant for the next eight years.

The pensions issue is in addition to the impending digital switchover that the previous administration also ignored, and which we had to resolve within a period of months to avoid GBC TV channels from being shut down. I am pleased to report, Mr Speaker, that the current phase of the required technical infrastructure at both Broadcasting House and the Digital Multiplex has now been completed with very positive results, including GBC HD, the picture quality of which is now in sharp contrast to the blurred image that was on air in December 2011.

Mr Speaker, investment in technology will continue to ensure that this remains so.

With this Government’s support of all GBC’s services, Mr Speaker, we will continue to develop during the next 12 months as we have over the past two years the output of the Corporation. Mr Speaker, I am satisfied with the direction being taken by our local broadcaster, and pay tribute to the entire team that are 1025 making it happen and ask them to do even more, as the progress we have seen to date is in my view only the beginning of what they can achieve.

Mr Speaker, staying with broadcasting, I turn now to Gibraltar Freeview, the Digital Terrestrial TV (DTT) platform from which GBC Television is able to broadcast digitally and an important media asset that, as a result of the foresight of this Government, is paving the way for exciting opportunities for the Rock.

1030 Essentially, in layman's terms, GibFreeview is our very own equivalent of Freeview in the UK, which provides a bouquet of free-to-air terrestrial television channels. The very significant investment in the complex hardware came about following the digital switchover deadline imposed by the EU, a deadline that despite being a legal requirement was one that at the time that we took over, the previous administration had approached with little more than indifference.

1035 Never mind, Mr Speaker, for although we started from scratch out of necessity, that enabled this Government to do things properly.

Gibraltar now enjoys a superb DTT platform from which a number of broadcasters can reach our community and beyond. Attracting international television companies is no easy task, but Gibraltar Freeview Limited is already actively engaged at a commercial level with a number of such entities. Although in the main still very much in the initial stages and with a lot more work to be done, a number of news and general content providers are considering entering into carriage agreements with GibFreeview, with the positive revenue implications that entails for Gibraltar.

1040 In fact, this is already a reality, Mr Speaker. One major international media network is, as we speak, broadcasting on GibFreeview and we are proud that such an established, respected household name has been the first international broadcaster to come on board. We suspect, Mr Speaker, that in due course they will have been only the first of many.

By way of example, discussions are ongoing with one TV company that is available to all UK households on platforms like Freeview, Sky, Freesat, Virgin Media and Astra and which is keen to broadcast from the Rock. GibFreeview has been able to negotiate an in-principle agreement with this particular broadcaster, subject to further discussions, that will result in television exposure throughout the UK of Gibraltar and all it has to offer from a tourism, historical, social and cultural perspective. The potential benefits to our Community are enormous.

1055 In addition, Mr Speaker, interest has also been generated for the licensing in and by Gibraltar of DTT entities that will then be able to broadcast elsewhere in Europe. Mr Speaker, this is media services using Gibraltar to access the single European Market in much the same way as we successfully passport banking and insurance services beyond our frontiers.

As can be seen, Mr Speaker, this Government's approach to media generally, and in this instance to digital broadcasting, is as forward-thinking as it is pro-active. We break away from the tired, plodding dinosaur steps of the past to instead embrace the future and the many possibilities out there that will benefit Gibraltar and its people.

1060 Finally, Mr Speaker – and returning to more traditional media without which we could not imagine Gibraltar – Mr Speaker, I continue to salute all our national print and internet media. I believe we have been fair and equanimous in our treatment of each of them. They are a hugely important part of our democracy and we as a political class in this House must recognise that role. In particular the Chronicle, Panorama and The New People are our nation's newspapers and we must cherish their continued existence and the critical analysis that they bring. In access to news, we must treat all alike.

The respective editors with those of GBC's newsroom are our fourth estate and we – and all who have a role to play in Gibraltar – do well not to lose sight of that or favour one over the others.

1070 Mr Speaker, I will now address my responsibilities as Chairman of the Borders and Coastguard Agency. In my address last year, I informed the House that the Agency, now coming up to its third year, had carried out a review of its operations at the airport, frontier and the port. The review highlighted a number of deficiencies, which had been inherited by the Agency, which it is positively addressing, striving for a more professional, engaged and focused operation.

1075 The review also highlighted the need for professional development, training and management development in particular. This Government continues firmly committed to providing opportunities for professional development for all staff, and as such is supporting the Agency in its effort to address this issue. It has already started the process towards Investors in People recognition and managers at different levels are working towards Chartered Management Institute professional development qualifications.

1080 Mr Speaker, the Agency is working hard to become the focal point for a more centralised immigration service in Gibraltar, working in partnership with other Government Departments and Law Enforcement Agencies to improve the level of immigration service Gibraltar provides.

In the last year alone, the Agency has processed over 12 million people at our borders. In addition, this Government's initiative to introduce amendments to the Immigration, Asylum and Refugee Act, granting Tourist Visa Waivers to Moroccan, Russian, Chinese, Indian and Mongolian nationals in possession of 1085 Schengen visas, has proved extremely successful, and close to 7,000 visitors, whom we would otherwise not have been able to see visit Gibraltar, have done so to date. Given the success of this initiative, the Government has made additional provisions for visa waivers for persons who hold indefinite leave to remain in any EU member state, which is part of the Schengen aquis.

1090 Mr Speaker, the Agency works very closely locally with the RGP, with whom it is currently operating in partnership a Ports Policing initiative. Further afield, it works closely and shares information with HMG's Home Office, the UK Borderforce, Spain's Policía Nacional, Interpol and more recently the Moroccan Immigration Service.

1095 As part of the Government's programme to make use of information and communication technology more generally, the Agency has been engaged together with other Law Enforcement partners and Government IT contractors in the setting up of a modern fit for purpose IT infrastructure platform for the frontier. The Frontier Management Project will be available to the public very soon; it will enable us to access real time frontier queue information including cameras, statistics and an improved and digitised frontier queue hotline service. In addition, the Agency is also developing its online presence with an interactive webpage which amongst other things will enable visitors to apply for visa waivers online, thus improving the visitor experience.

1100 In addition to their immigration duties, the Agency carries out aviation and maritime security duties at the airport and port, where it is inspected regularly by HMG's Department for Transport to ensure compliance with strict EU legislation. These industries, particularly aviation, are highly regulated, and in order to protect the air and sea transportation of persons and goods, there are established common rules, applicable across the EU, which safeguard against acts of unlawful interference. I am happy to report that the Agency continues to meet the high standards set by the Department for Transport and the EU.

The Agency remains committed to improving the service it provides, contributing to the security of Gibraltar and acting as a facilitator and working in partnership with the private sector.

1110 In terms of my responsibilities for Civil Status and Immigration, the big changes in the past year to report have really been the introduction of the Civil Partnership Act and the recent reduction in the qualifying period for Gibraltar status – from 25 to 10 years of continuous residency – as well as the extension of ability to pass their Gibraltar status to single fathers who are included in their child's birth certificates all of which we were very pleased to introduce to this House.

1115 We have also made considerable progress in the elimination of the backlog of applications for exemptions from immigration control to enable persons, primarily Moroccan nationals who have been resident for over 25 years, to be granted British citizenship.

This year will see progress on a number of other important fronts also.

1120 We shall shortly see the opening of a 'one-stop shop' for the registration of births and deaths. This will enable the public to conduct all the business related to the registrations from a single office without the need to visit other Government Departments and Agencies spread throughout town. The one-stop shop will open during the course of next month and responds to representations from pensioners' representative organisations.

1125 We also expect that this year will see the introduction of new ID cards, which will include enhanced security features and microchip technology to allow for a multitude of other uses. The present target date for rollout is in autumn 2014. As hon. Members know, this is not just an important matter in terms of immigration matters, but also an essential prerequisite for the launch of more substantial e-government applications.

This is a good point, Mr Speaker, in which to turn to my responsibilities for Government IT.

1130 Through the use of Information and Communication Technology, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is promoting a more efficient and effective Government which will facilitate more accessible Government services and allow greater public access to information. e-Government will involve delivering a wide range of Government services online.

1135 During the past year the key investment areas for HMGoG in this sector have included: the work to enhance the physical hardware infrastructure and enhancements to network security and connectivity, together with the expansion of the Government Secure Intranet (GSI) and many others, including finishing the work on this Parliament's video and audio feeds.

The e-Government portal has recently been launched with basic services. New services will be added on an ongoing basis.

1140 The introduction of the new e-ID Card in coming months will offer a citizen profile page where the individual will be able to transact business with Government in a secure environment and will also allow the citizen to access Government parking and bus services, with other services being rolled out as they become available.

I will now turn to my responsibilities for Industrial Relations and to what has been a landmark year in that respect.

1145 It was always my desire to introduce a modern and progressive approach to the way that I deal with representative bodies in the workplace. How we deal with Industrial Relations is key to having a productive workforce who feel that they form part of their organisation, and that their voices are heard.

1150 This has been done in a way that the previous administration chose not to pursue. We have dealt with legacy issues in key areas of the Public Sector where individuals' claims and grievances have been ignored – in some instances for over a decade.

Customs, Sewers, Ministry for Housing Technical Division, Elderly Care Agency are but a few of the areas where we have not only improved terms and conditions of service to employees, but we have also brought in modern working practices that deliver ultimately better, more cost-effective services to the taxpayer, all achieved in partnership.

1155 And Mr Speaker, talking of partnership, I have also broken ground in Government's relationship with representative bodies. As announced at May Day, we have entered into a partnership agreement with Unite the Union, where we are looking at a principle of mutual gains through co-operation. This approach is designed to produce more efficient working practices and improve financial performance within a better working environment.

1160 Mr Speaker, I sincerely hope that within the next year, it will be possible to extend this approach in the dealings with other representative bodies also.

1165 And it has been in application of those principles, Mr Speaker, that we have already been able to deliver on long-standing, life-changing issues that will form the basis of our future public sector workplace. The introduction of the new public sector working hours is something that the workforce has been crying out for. As has been the implementation of legislation to prevent bullying at work. Mr Speaker, we have delivered these changes within my first two years of office, and not only have we delivered a flexible system that focuses on the needs of individuals, we have also been able to deliver a vastly improved service to our customers by the extension of public opening hours.

1170 Too often one hears criticism of the Civil Service; some of it deserved, some of it less so. So, Mr Speaker, let me share with the House and the community at large today an e-mail I received last week as I prepared for this debate, which reads as follows:

'Just a short note to thank you and your staff at the Income Tax Department for your assistance and professionalism in dealing with the various issues I had with your Department.

Despite the many criticisms received from the general public towards Civil Servants, it was certainly a breath of fresh air to be dealt with in this manner.

Keep up the good work.'

It is right, Mr Speaker, to speak up for the Civil Service and report on positive feedback also, Mr Speaker, and I am delighted to have had such an apposite chance to do so today.

1175 Much progress has also been made on the legislation designed to deliver the eradication of bullying in the workplace, making it an environment that people will now feel safe to work in. We have also introduced a Health and Safety Working Group in order to introduce changes to the way in which we manage risk in the workplace.

Mr Speaker, I move on now to an entirely different matter.

1180 I have spoken before about establishing for Gibraltar a status akin to that of the Privy Council in the United Kingdom. When a nation such as ours finds that there are issues that affect the national interest, there needs to be a body above party politics that can provide an opportunity for consideration of those issues.

1190 I want to go further than that, Mr Speaker. I want to change the way we do politics on issues that matter to the national interest. I am a supporter and defender of the Westminster party adversarial system. But when the national interest is at stake, then we must all be able to work together, because Gibraltar's best brains can be brought to work in unison when necessary, but not condemned to never have to challenge each other by a change to a committee system of government that some have talked about in the past. But any such new body must in my view be permanent. It cannot be ad hoc.

1195 I therefore today propose to create a body to be known henceforth as the Chief Minister's Consultative Council (CMCC), the makeup of which will be as follows: for their lifetimes, all individuals who have held the post of Chief Minister; for their lifetimes, all individuals who have held the post of Deputy Chief Minister; for the period of their tenure in office, the Leader of the Opposition and the Minister for Justice; for such period as may be stipulated in the notice of the appointment, such other person or persons as the Chief Minister of the day may consider appropriate to appoint.

1200 Membership of the CMCC will require members to sign the Official Secrets Act so that information shared with them is subject to strict rules of confidentiality, or such other equivalent as may be the case in the Privy Council.

1205 The CMCC will enable the Chief Minister of the day to meet with all, some or just one of its members as he or she may consider appropriate, and exchange ideas or take advice on any particular matter or issue within the parameters of the strict confidence required of individuals who will make up the Chief Minister's Consultative Council.

It is my view, Mr Speaker, that all individuals who become members of the CMCC should be able to use the pre-nominal letters 'The Right Honourable', as is the case in respect of membership of Her Majesty's Privy Council in the United Kingdom.

1210 I have asked that legislation be drawn up for this purpose. Before anyone starts getting any ideas, Mr Speaker, the appointments will not be remunerated!

Mr Speaker, I turn now to the Budget Measures for 2014-15.

1215 Mr Speaker, it was a manifesto commitment to re-activate the Widows and Orphans Pension Scheme and to give those officers who opted out of the scheme in the late 1980s the opportunity to opt back in. Much work has already been done in this respect in the Treasury. Implementation of this manifesto commitment has however been delayed following on-going representations from, and discussions with, the Gibraltar Pensioners Association.

As a result of this, Mr Speaker, it has been agreed to introduce a revised basis for re-entry which the Government believes represents a more equitable solution of this longstanding issue than has been previously proposed.

1220 As a consequence, Mr Speaker, those re-entering the scheme will repay arrears paid to them in 1989-90 re-valued for RPI increases to date. They will also repay outstanding contributions on the same re-valued basis up to the date of their retirement. However, such contributions will be adjusted to take account of PAYE relief which is available under the Income Tax Act throughout the period in question.

1225 The effects of this measure introduced in this way, Mr Speaker, will be to effectively treat re-entrants in exactly the same way as existing contributors who remained in the Scheme.

1230 The Gibraltar Pensioners Association, with whom I have met on this subject, have made numerous impassioned representations about the terms of repayment, arguing that, in some cases, it may be onerous to repay monies due in one up-front payment. The Government has therefore decided that applicants should be offered the opportunity to re-enter the scheme on the basis of one of the following repayment mechanisms: either 100% repayment on acceptance of terms; or 75% repayment on acceptance of terms, with the balance deducted in equal monthly instalments from the applicant's pension during the following 12 months; or 50% repayment on acceptance of terms, with the balance deducted in equal instalments from the applicant's pension during the following 18 months.

1235 With the caveat, Mr Speaker, that in the event that the applicant dies during the repayment period, the monthly repayments are to be made in proportion to the pension payable to the widow thereby extending the repayment period until the full amount is paid.

1240 It seems to us to be fairer and equitable, Mr Speaker to do this in this way. For those who might not yet have expressed an interest in being included in this option, there is still an opportunity to do so by writing to No. 6, with their letter addressed to either WOPS Opt-In, No. 6 Convent Place or by e-mail to wops@gibraltar.gov.gi.

1245 Mr Speaker, the following measures are designed to encourage and reduce the cost of doing business in Gibraltar. In order to further stimulate the retail sector in Main Street, for which we care deeply as a Government, and to continue to make Gibraltar a more attractive destination for shopping, and in order to stimulate environmentally positive behaviour by businesses and citizens alike, the following reductions in import duty will be introduced, with immediate effect.

Import duty on all LED lighting, including LED torches, is reduced from 12% to zero; import duty on all appliances or white goods with a C or D rating is doubled from 6% to 12%. There are very few such items on the market these days and they are hugely inefficient.

1250 Import duty on all writing implements, including pens, pencils, ball point pens, and felt-tip pens, is reduced from 12% to zero.

Import duty on mobile phones is reduced from 3% to zero.

Import duty on pleasure craft, yachts and other seagoing vessels under 18 metres in length, including jet-skis and kayaks, is reduced from 6% to zero.

Import duty on pet food, including dog and cat food, is reduced from 12% to zero.

1255 There is no import duty on food, Mr Speaker, unless it is for dogs and cats.

Import duty on fertilisers for all flowers, gardens and other greenery is reduced from 12% to zero. Import duty on all paper-based stationery, including receipt books, carbon paper, envelopes, diaries, maps, plans, drawings, trade advertising material and post cards, is reduced from 12% to zero.

1260 Import duty on all umbrellas, including sun umbrellas, is reduced from 12% to zero and import duty on sunglasses is also reduced by 3% to zero.

Import duty on musical instruments, musical instrument parts and accessories is reduced from 12% to zero.

Import duty on natural and cultured pearls is reduced from 12% to 4.5%, in line with the import duty on other jewellery items.

1265 Import duty is introduced on the commercial importation of single-use plastic bags and single-use paper bags not made from recycled paper, at the rate of 5p per bag.

Import duty discount and cash-back on hybrid vehicles is extended to purely electric vehicles also. The cash-back is increased to £750 for cars and introduced at the rate of £150 for motorcycles.

1270 Electricity and water charges will not be increased this year, despite the increasing costs of providing these public utilities, as per our manifesto commitment and in order to keep the cost of doing business down. Government will continue to subsidise the balance between the reduced amounts collected in revenue and the cost of generating power. This is – for the reason ventilated earlier in my address on the subject of recurrent expenditure – a huge subsidy for every household in Gibraltar and every business in Gibraltar, which needs to be understood by those who call for even greater subsidies and reductions of costs.

1275 And, Mr Speaker, as I announced at the Thomson Reuters Jaguar Land Rover Dinner at St Michael's Cave a week and a half ago, the import duty on all artwork, including paintings, drawings and pastels, sculptures and other statutory, original engravings, prints and lithographs, basketwork and wickerwork, is reduced from 12% to zero.

1280 Given that the Government is expecting the stock of affordable homes to come on-stream in large measure during the course of the next calendar year, we want people to find it attractive to furnish their homes purchasing from local furniture suppliers. As a result, Mr Speaker, on items of furniture and furnishings as well as domestic appliances, also known as white goods – unless they are caught by the increases for C and D rated goods – import duties payable by locally registered companies with a valid trade licence are reduced from 6% to 3%. Import duty on textiles imported also by those with a valid trade licence is reduced from 6% to 3%.

In order to better promote the use of Gibraltar as a maritime jurisdiction in all respects, passenger tax at Gibraltar Airport is abolished for passengers who are joining vessels in Gibraltar.

1290 Any vessel calling at the Eastern Anchorage in order to take on provisions, spares, stores, or to carry out crew changes will receive a 75% discount on tonnage dues – compared to the 50% discount at present.

Ships anchoring in the Western Anchorage, whose main purpose is bunkering, will receive a 75% discount on tonnage dues – compared to 50% at present.

1295 Mr Speaker, in line with the Government's manifesto commitment to encourage and reduce the cost of doing business in Gibraltar, the discount for early payment of rates for offices, workshops, construction and manufacturing industries, and transport and distribution industries, will be increased from 10% to 15% with effect from 1st July 2014. A further discount for responsible businesses who pay on time.

For new companies starting up business in Gibraltar, there will be a larger discount for early repayment of rates of 65% for their first year of trading. Rates further reduced to encourage start-ups – an excellent additional incentive for entrepreneurs.

1300 In addition to this, the Government has already announced that for bars and restaurants, the discount for the early repayment of rates will be increased by a further 20% to 40% between 1st October 2012 and 30th September 2013 and to 30% between 1st October 2013 and 30th September 2014, in order to assist in the introduction of the smoking ban. This assistance is now extended for another year until September 2015.

1305 Mr Speaker, Government will be setting up a small Fund to support the development of new start-ups in Gibraltar. We will set aside £250,000 of the surplus this year, and invite the Chamber and the Federation of Small Businesses to sit on the board of the Fund to consider applications from business start-ups for loans which would be secured and at competitive rates.

1310 Mr Speaker, our Social Insurance benefits will in future need to be funded, as far as possible, from the income receivable in Social Insurance contributions with less reliance on Government contributions. In this respect, the Government continues to study a number of proposed innovative reforms to our Social Insurance Scheme in order to make it self-financing for future generations of our community. An announcement in this respect will be made when the study has been completed.

1315 We had hoped to do this this year, but we have not been able to do so. As a result, once again this year, the cost of Social Insurance will not increase. This will, I know, be welcome by the business community as it will reduce again the cost in real terms by the rate of inflation. The reduction has therefore been in the order of 6% since we were elected, if calculated in that way.

In order to assist working families with the purchase of their homes, as well as those families who may need to move to alternative accommodation as their family composition changes, no Stamp Duty will be 1320 payable by first-time and second-time buyers on the first £250,000 of the cost of their property, irrespective of the total cost of their new home.

The Government will arrange to provide soft loans to residential estates for funding projects to change traditional lighting within their residential estates to LED lighting. Approved projects will receive funding which would be repayable in a period of up to 10 years at an effective interest rate of 1% interest per annum, with the Government funding the difference in the cost of finance by way of a grant.

1325 The Annual Pensioners Utility Grant, applicable to persons aged 60 and over, will be increased from £75 per annum to £100 per annum, with effect from 2014. Old age pensions will this year also of course increase by the rate of inflation. The Minimum Income Guarantee will similarly rise.

1330 Mr Speaker, in line with this Government's commitment to keep the National Minimum Wage under constant review, the statutory minimum was increased from £5.40 to £5.70 in August 2012; from £5.70 to £6.00 in August 2013. This will now be increased again, in line with the Index of Retail Prices, from £6.00 to £6.11, with effect from 1st August 2014.

1335 Mr Speaker, despite the continuing pay restraints in the UK public sector over the last few years, Civil Service pay in Gibraltar has continued to increase over the years as a result of the introduction by my predecessor of the increases in Gibraltar which kept up with the cost of living, which we analysed earlier today. These put the public sector in Gibraltar beyond parity. The Government will once again increase Public Sector salaries under the 2014 Pay Review, which will increase by 2.5%, with effect from 1st August 2014.

1340 Mr Speaker, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar felt, as expressed in its election manifesto, that Her Majesty's Customs Gibraltar was under-resourced in the execution of its role as one of our Law Enforcement bodies and in particular in the administration of our country's imports and exports controls and one of our main sources of Government revenue.

1345 We therefore embarked on a review process with stakeholders, which has now successfully concluded. The purpose of this process has been to deliver to our community and to those working at Customs a stronger department that transitions to a statutory disciplined body with its discipline code, the law enforcement functions of which will be specifically recognised and enshrined in a tailor-made Act of Parliament. Raising the status of that Department to be in line with other Law Enforcement bodies has been a key aspiration of all members of staff of the Department and of the representative bodies that represent them. This will also require the staff to adapt to these changes to meet the needs of the organisation.

1350 To achieve this, Government and staff have now agreed to implement a roadmap in which individual points of this agreement will be introduced as and when they are ready to come into force. HM Customs have powers of arrest, search, detention, rights of access, investigation, seizure of goods etc. The remuneration of officers has therefore been increased to reflect their rank, duties, responsibilities, risks and exposure and any other duties that may be assigned to them.

1355 The general restructure of the Department will be introduced to bring it in line with modern operational needs which will include, in salary terms, an agreed 12% increase which is in line with the proposal made by the previous administration to the men and women of that Department. A change of nomenclature to the current grades will reflect the new Law Enforcement status and separation from Civil Service grades. In order to deliver this change, Government will be creating new Customs Officer posts.

1360 The advertisement for those posts has appeared in today's national press. Applicants will need to meet entry qualification requirements and attend a one-day selection programme to assess their suitability. With the introduction of a new structure, there will be six additional promotions at Senior Customs Officer level (HEO) and 17 new Executive Customs Officer posts (EO).

1365 This proposal provides for an excellent step forward for HM Customs. It is designed to enhance opportunities within the Department and to add to officers' career prospects. The Government thanks all the parties for their positive involvement in these negotiations and for their patience in seeing the proposals through – a process which floundered under the previous administration as voted down and which has prospered now by a huge and overwhelming majority of officers backing the changes.

1370 Mr Speaker, it is also true that Government has been in negotiation with the members of the City Fire Brigade (CFB) for some time. Under the previous administration there was little progress in the practices of the Brigade. Again, with good faith and hard work we have made huge advances in our discussions but have not yet reached final agreements in some areas, including progress on new premises. One thing that is clear is that the commitment is there from both the official and the CFB side to now accelerate and reach new agreements and understandings which are within reach and with which both sides will feel we are able to consider progressive and value for money, whilst ensuring we have the fire service our community deserves. For this reason, I am today able to announce that the Public Service Pay Review will be doubled for members of the City Fire Brigade and that the present 3% abatement applicable to their pay is henceforth eliminated.

1375 Mr Speaker, this Government's commitment to law and order and the Rule of Law has been clear from the moment that we presented our manifesto to the electorate in November 2011.

1380 Mr Speaker, the RGP has enjoyed unprecedented access to resources in the time since we have been elected. This year, members of the public will have noted the arrival of splendid new BMW police bikes. New vehicles are on order. This week a further new police vessel has been launched, after we agreed to fund a full refurbishment of a forfeited vessel. Another very large vessel will be delivered to the RGP also during this calendar year, which will be aptly named 'The Sir Adrian John's'. Why so many resources to this organisation? Because a commitment to law and order and a commitment as real as ours to the Rule of Law cannot materialise into reality without that level of delivery on resources and the commitment and ability of a Minister as able and dedicated as Mr Licudi.

1390 Indeed, Mr Speaker, the only accusation levelled at us in this respect is that we are too committed to the Rule of Law, even if it has required us to make difficult decisions about not accepting agreements that can see some break the laws of Gibraltar with impunity.

And the primary instrument of law and order amongst our Law Enforcement Agencies is the Royal Gibraltar Police; an organisation of which everyone in this community is and should be justly proud.

Last week we saw 14 new Police Officers pass out on parade in the square outside. We were all reminded then in the programme that:

'Policing in Gibraltar presents unique demands and challenges. It is a difficult and demanding role.'

1395 Mr Speaker, that is only the tip of the iceberg of what we as a nation expect our Police men and women to do as they strive to work together with all of us to make our community safer.

Only last week, we have seen what is possible with the figures that speak to continued decreasing crime. I am delighted to say that Commissioner Yome's Neighbourhood Policing mechanisms are working at every level, something on which I am sure my colleague the Minister for Justice, Mr Licudi QC will be saying more.

1400 Mr Speaker, deciding to join the Police and deciding to stay are not things that any person would do simply on the basis of looking at earnings; but the Government accepts that such issues might in the future potentially affect recruitment and retention in this important body. I sincerely believe that the success of our Police is principally down to one thing above all else: the sense of vocation and love for this community and its safety, which makes our officers such an example to others.

1405 Mr Speaker, for that reason I am today announcing the removal henceforth of the abatement of 3% from officers' salary, and the doubling in the case of the RGP also of the Civil Service pay award of 2.5%, also as from 1st of August. In addition, Mr Speaker, we have wanted to see Police Officers be able to purchase their own homes for some years now. Officers who enjoy the benefit of Government housing do not pay rent or rates. Officers who have bought their own homes have enjoyed an allowance pegged at £76 for some years now, analogue to an average rent of a 3RKB Government quarter. Years ago there was even a central area of residence for Police Officers in the Old and New Police Barracks. Those days are gone and more and more of the new officers that are recruited are home buyers like so many others in our community. I am therefore today formally breaking the analogue in the RGP's housing allowance for officers who do not reside in Government accommodation. Given that it has been stuck for so long at £76, I am raising it today to £125 per calendar month with immediate effect.

1410 Mr Speaker, how apposite after dealing with the RGP and Customs, that I should now turn to deal with duties in relation to tobacco. In support of this Government's continuing efforts to discourage smoking generally among our community, and despite the sensitivities in raising the price of this commodity of which hon. Members are fully aware of, hon. Members will have noted that Import Duty on cigarettes was raised in April 2014 by 10p per packet, which followed a similar increase in December 2013.

We will now again raise the import duty on rolling tobacco, which was last raised in May 2013, with immediate effect from midnight last night, by 20% from £35 per kilo to £42 per kilo.

1425 Mr Speaker, we are conscious of the growth of the import duty collected in respect of this particular commodity in the past 18 years. For reasons related to public health arguments around the world, this is not in our view a future proof source of revenue and we are therefore keen to move our economy back to the situation we were in in 1996, when we left Government, which made income from that source surplus to expenditure needs. This requires short, medium and long-term work on which the Government has already embarked and is a sensitive area in which I trust that we will be able to work without attempts being made to undermine our efforts, in the interests of the whole community. As the whole House knows, this is an area exploited poisonously against us by our international political adversaries. We must not allow them to use any part of our national political debate to fuel their toxic discourse.

I will say no more at this stage about those strategic issues.

1430 I am, however, very proud of the fact that the Government can further demonstrate our commitment to the Rule of Law and law and order in the manner in which we have acted decisively in the banning of retailing of tobacco in the residential estates at Laguna and Glacis. I particularly want to thank the RGP and Customs for the work they have done and are doing in curtailing activity in these estates, other estates where there are less serious but equally anti-social issues which we are going to tackle and generally throughout Gibraltar.

1440 We have also acted decisively in respect of the EU Commission's recommendations in this respect. The House has before it legislation to consider later in this session.

1445 Mr Speaker, I am very happy to tell the House today, that in addition to the position we have taken in relation to Laguna and Glacis Estates, I have now directed the Trade Licensing Authority that I consider that it is not in Gibraltar's public interest for any further retail licences to be granted given the serious reputational risk to Gibraltar and I have accordingly, within the parameters permissible in law, discouraged the Trade Licensing Authority from issuing any new retail or wholesale tobacco licences, unless an existing one falls away. I have also directed the Authority that I strongly encourage it to grant requests from holders of existing tobacco retail licences who may wish to move out of residential areas to areas not designated as Special Zones. A copy of my Direction to the Authority will be annexed to printed copies of this speech.

1450 Mr Speaker, in order to assist those businesses which have had to move their tobacco retail licences out of Laguna and Glacis, a 100% discount will be applied on General Rates payable in their new premises for one year and an additional capital allowance or tax credit is allowed equivalent to the relocation costs approved by the Commissioner of Income Tax in his discretion.

This year, Mr Speaker, there will be no increased duties on fuels.

1455 Mr Speaker, in pursuance of the Government's commitment to reduce the level of personal taxation for every taxpayer in Gibraltar, the following reductions in income tax will apply, with effect from 1st July 2014: taxpayers with assessable income of £10,500 or less will be brought out of the taxation system altogether and will pay no income tax. This applies to taxpayers in both the Allowance Based System and the Gross Income Based System.

1460 A tax free allowance of up to £3,000 over two years is introduced for both the Gross Income Based System and the Allowance Based System for the installation of solar energy for boilers. A streamlined application process will be applied for any necessary Town Planning applications, along with a waiver of any fees payable.

1465 Taxpayers under the Allowance Based System will benefit from the following increases in allowances: Medical Insurance Allowance is increased by 100% from £2,000 to £4,000; Nursery School Allowance is increased from £3,000 to £4,000 per child; the Blind Person's Allowance is increased from £3,000 to £4,000; the Disabled Individual's Allowance is increased from £5,000 to £6,000.

1470 At present, any deductions for disabled individuals under the Income Tax (Allowances, Deductions and Exemptions) Rules 1992 are dependent on whether the parent or individual claiming the income tax allowance is in receipt of financial assistance out of the Social Assistance Fund. However, eligibility to financial assistance out of the Social Assistance Fund is dependent on the applicant residing in Gibraltar for a period of five years. Even though this five-year residence requirement will remain in force for social assistance purposes, this requirement will be dispensed with for the purposes of obtaining an income tax allowance on the grounds of disability.

1475 Single Parent Family Allowance is increased from £3,000 to £4,000; Personal Allowance is increased from £3,000 to £3,100; and Spouse Allowance is increased from £3,000 to £3,100.

For those taxpayers who have elected to pay income tax under the Allowance Based System, the tax rate for the taxable income bracket ranging from £4,001 to £16,000 will be reduced from 24% to 18% as set out in our manifesto.

1480 Taxpayers under the Gross Income Based System will benefit from the following measures.

In order to further assist working families with the purchase of their first-time home, a deduction from assessable income of £6,000 will be made to taxpayers under the Gross Income Based System in respect of approved expenditure incurred towards the purchase of their home, during the tax year commencing 1st July 2014.

1485 In order to encourage saving for retirement by way of employee contributions to approved pension schemes, a deduction from assessable income of £1,200 per annum will be made to taxpayers, under the Gross Income Based System, in respect of contributions made with effect from the tax year commencing 1st July 2014.

1490 For those members of our community who choose to have private medical insurance, a deduction from assessable income of £2,500 per annum will be made to taxpayers under the Gross Income Based System, in respect of premiums paid for such cover with effect from the tax year commencing 1st July 2014.

1495 Mr Speaker, at present any employment-related loans made to a director, a shadow director or any connected person is treated as earnings from employment and is taxed as a benefit-in-kind. This applies to all loans or advances irrespective of whether an arm's length rate of interest is paid or not. I believe there are genuine cases where a company may wish to make a loan to a director and expect a repayment to be made and interest paid. I am therefore happy to announce that, with effect from 1st July 2014, all loans or advances made to a director, a shadow director or any connected person and the terms of the loan is such that an arm's length rate of interest is paid and that the loan agreement has received the approval of the 1500 Commissioner of Income Tax then such loans or advances shall not be treated as earnings from employment.

Mr Speaker, the standard rate of tax for individuals currently stands at 30%. This rate has remained unchanged for over 25 years notwithstanding reductions in tax rates in both the Allowance Based System and the Gross Income System. Today no-one pays tax at an effective rate of more than 25%. Therefore, with effect from 1st July 2014, the standard rate of tax for individuals is slashed to 20%.

1505 Mr Speaker, the income of a trust resident in Gibraltar is currently charged to tax at the standard rate of 30%. With effect from 1st July 2014, the standard rate of tax for trusts is reduced to 10%.

1510 Mr Speaker, changes are being introduced to the Pension Scheme Guidelines by the Commissioner of Income Tax, which will permit members of Approved Pension Schemes in Gibraltar to continue as active members and make contributions to such pension schemes, even whilst not in employment. Mr Speaker, this will encourage all members of our community, whether or not they are in active employment and indeed the self-employed, to save for their retirement.

Mr Speaker, the Government is also pleased to note that the Provident Trust Pension Schemes have been approved by HM Revenue and Customs in the UK as Qualifying Recognised Overseas Pension Schemes or QROPS.

1515 This QROPS approval, together with the changes to the Pension Scheme Guidelines mentioned previously, will be of particular benefit to Barclays Bank employees in Gibraltar who may wish to transfer their UK pension funds to Gibraltar, following the decision by Barclays Bank to close its retail business in Gibraltar.

1520 Mr Speaker, in my last Budget address I stated that occupational pensions received by retired members, aged 55 or over, of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment would be exempt from income tax. I am now delighted to announce that this measure will also be extended to members of HM Customs Department, in keeping with the implementation of the agreement entered into with Government which I have already announced to the House. In addition to this measure, we shall be awarding to retired members of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment and HM Customs social insurance contribution credits as from the age of 55. In doing so, we shall be bringing the Royal Gibraltar Regiment and HM Customs in line with the Royal Gibraltar Police and other uniformed bodies. This will take effect as from 1st July 2012 for the Royal Gibraltar Regiment and from the effective date of the implementation of the aforesaid agreement for Customs.

1530 Mr Speaker, in last year's budget, I announced that the Government was considering the introduction of a Payroll Giving Scheme, thereby allowing tax-free charitable donations to be made to approved charities through employment earnings. I am now delighted to confirm that this Scheme will shortly be introduced, enabling any person who pays income tax in Gibraltar to give regularly and on a tax-free basis to approved charities of their choice.

Donations under the Payroll Giving Scheme shall be capped at a maximum of £5,000 per taxpayer per annum.

1535 As a separate measure, Mr Speaker, places of worship of all faiths and denominations recognised as such by the Chief Executive Officer of the Gibraltar Electricity Authority will enjoy a credit against their electricity bill of the average of their consumption in the past two financial years, each year.

1540 Also separately, all spousal allowances will now apply between civil partners as a result of the Civil Partnership Act, as the House is aware, Mr Speaker. Today I am announcing that the Government will now consider claims for allowances or benefits payable from individuals who are or have been in common-law partnerships in respect of allowances or benefits payable to married couples or couples in a civil partnership, if the relevant individuals can satisfy the relevant officers of the administration who are in charge of payment that they are or have been in such common-law relationships. Discretion will remain with the relevant officer, subject to review by the Chief Secretary as appropriate. Legislation may be required for this long overdue change.

1550 Finally, in order to encourage the construction of office accommodation in Gibraltar last year, I announced that any such developments on which construction commenced on or before 31st March 2015 would be allowed a Capital Allowance deduction in the first year following completion of construction equal to 30% of construction costs and the remaining 70% written down over the following seven years. This allowance will be claimable in part or in full by either the developer or the occupant up to a maximum claim of the full construction costs. Construction costs will be considered to be those costs wholly, and exclusively laid out or expended in the construction of the office accommodation, including all primary planning, design and associated costs but excluding the cost of the land.

1555 That measure has met with a huge success, Mr Speaker. A number of such schemes are now in development and about to break ground seeking to meet the deadline of March 2015.

As the Government is presently providing for the market in affordable homes, we are therefore now extending the measure I made for office accommodation to developments of high value accommodation, where ground is broken before December 2015.

1560 In the same way as Gibraltar needs affordable homes for our people we also need to stimulate the market in high end homes for those who wish to re-settle in Gibraltar.

1565 Mr Speaker, one of the products in our Financial Services Sector which has certainly stood the test of time and which has led to many people resettling in Gibraltar in luxury homes – and in that way added to our economy very significantly – is the Category 2 Individual Status. Professionals across the sector have used and worked with this status in the structuring of their clients’ personal affairs since this was first implemented in 1992 as the then High Net Worth Individual Status.

Yes, Mr Speaker, this hugely successful financial services product was introduced by the last GSLP administration and unfortunately has not been seriously reviewed since that time other than by the hiking of the tax payable by those who hold the status.

1570 This particular product is one which involves personal status and residence issues and is therefore also one in respect of which I carry ministerial responsibility for that reason.

We firmly believe that it is the duty of Government to work in partnership with the private sector to maintain our portfolio of products current and updated in an ever-changing world and to ensure that these products remain relevant to the needs of Gibraltar’s clients.

1575 I am therefore, Mr Speaker, delighted to announce today that an inter-ministerial committee comprised of my office and the office of the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming, the Hon. Albert Isola, my Government has commissioned a long overdue review and report of the Category 2 product, and to this end has engaged and instructed the professional services of the leaders in their field in each of these areas.

1580 Mr Speaker, the professional working group will be asked to consider and report on all aspects of this product and its development. They will engage with existing holders of this status as well as with those involved in the application process to ensure that applicants enjoy the benefits of a product that is fit for purpose in today’s world and delivered in a manner that meets the expectations of those we are seeking to attract to Gibraltar. They will also be in contact with professional intermediaries outside of Gibraltar who are experts in the field.

1585 In terms of the Government’s affordable home ownership scheme, progress is huge and for all to see at the building sites at Eastern Beach and Waterport.

We are well down the road of the construction of the first projects and the acquisition of the Queen’s Hotel will allow us an opportunity to develop even more rental housing for the elderly near the town centre.

1590 Mr Speaker, the Government is nonetheless of course conscious of the difficulties currently being experienced by prospective home owners in obtaining finance from mortgage-providers in Gibraltar, especially mortgages for financing the purchase of their homes under the Government’s co-ownership schemes.

1595 The Government is in advanced discussions with the local banks and other financial institutions in this respect, and is considering proposals which will lead to an increase in the availability of such mortgage finance in order to assist the growing number of working families who would like to own their own home – and that is most of them, Mr Speaker.

1600 The Government is also working on proposals to provide further assistance in order to free up some of the pressure on the mortgage market by arranging facilities for public sector employees who may wish to purchase their homes under any of the Government’s home ownership schemes. Government is seeking to arrange that such loans be secured against their pensions and gratuities. This would enable many public sector employees to purchase their own homes in cash without the need to have a mortgage on their property with interest charged at market rates, on a reducing-balance basis. Interest and any capital repayments would be deducted from their monthly salaries, with the loans being repaid in full upon the employee’s retirement or earlier departure from Government service.

1605 Moreover, Mr Speaker, the Government will also now be extending the 50/50 scheme to the sale of its Post War Housing Stock to sitting tenants and eligible relatives. We shall shortly be communicating with those who were eligible to purchase to advise them of how this extension of the scheme will work in relation to that part of the Housing Stock.

1610 Mr Speaker, as a further measure to assist those who may wish to buy their home in cash and who may have their savings locked up in fixed-term debentures with either the Government of Gibraltar or the Gibraltar Savings Bank, such debenture-holders will be given the option to redeem their debentures before the maturity date with no penalty, if they can satisfy the Financial Secretary that the redemption monies will be applied for that purpose.

1615 Mr Speaker, I have received a petition from Unite the Union signed, amongst many others, by Members of the Government and the Opposition in which we were asked to consider the possibility of making it compulsory for every individual in the private sector to have a pension. I am today creating a working group to be made up of the relevant unions and employers’ representative bodies including the Chamber of Commerce, the Gibraltar Federation of Small Businesses and Unite the Union, onto which we will also invite the Gibraltar Betting and Gambling Association in order to consider whether such measures are feasible in the context of our economy. I am aware that these measures are now in place in the United 1620 Kingdom and I want to recognise and praise the work done by Unite in understanding the way in which these systems have been introduced in the UK by the Conservative Liberal Coalition who have done so in a manner that appears to have enjoyed the support of employers and employee organisations. I will be asking Michael Crome from my office to Chair that Working Group.

1625 Finally, before rounding up Mr Speaker, I am delighted to announce that the Government will be creating two annual scholarships to be available to children under the age of 18 who are exceptionally gifted in the arts and who are able to obtain placements to progress their development and the study of music, dance or another art other than at degree level which is covered by the present Scholarship programme.

1630 Mr Speaker, last year I was very disappointed that the hon. Gentleman did not actually reply to my budget address. Just like I did last year, I have again made a very large number of announcements this morning which are clearly for the good of our community. I have disclosed important figures that demonstrate that some of his criticisms throughout the year have been entirely unfounded. I have shown that his oft expressed concern about the growth of recurrent expenditure is actually something they created whilst in government that we are now taming and bringing under control.

1635 I trust that this year he will in his speech respond to these matters and not simply deliver what he has come prepared to say. I do hope he will specifically respond to what I have said and not just fall into the trap of delivering his prepared text; because his analysis will be less than relevant if all he says to us is that he is worried about rising recurrent expenditure, blaming us for what he says is a £66 million rise without addressing the fact that it has actually grown principally as a result of what his previous leader used to call untameable market forces and as a result of the things they did when they were in government before they left.

1640 Mr Speaker, I want to thank the unions who have worked with me this year, the Chamber, the Federation, ATCOM, the Finance Centre Council and all others for their input. Not all their requests or shopping lists can be accommodated, but good input from those organisations helps us to better calibrate this appropriation and to consider how some structures may change to accommodate innovative suggestions in the future. We will certainly continue our full engagement with them.

1645 It is also right of course that I should thank all public servants of Gibraltar, without whom Government cannot operate and who in great measure are as responsible for these great results as any of the 10 of us on this side of the House.

1650 In particular, Mr Speaker, our thanks to you, the Clerk and staff of the House for bearing with us this year. This month we continue the work of refurbishing the work areas of Parliament behind the Speaker's Chair and as a result I am happy to announce that there will be no July session. It is an issue which we have considered in the Select Committee in any event.

1655 I apologise in advance to you and your staff, Mr Speaker, for the disruption the refurbishment will create and trust that the absence of a meeting whilst it is ongoing will minimise the effects it will have on your work which, as Members know, but the rest of the community may not be aware, continues even when Parliament is not in session. The installation of the lift to make the Chamber accessible will also now commence in earnest, and I understand is expected to be finished in time for the October sitting.

1660 Again, this year, this is a useful moment to extend a very special acknowledgment also to the staff of No. 6 Convent Place, especially the team that works on my corridor of the building.

1665 Two and a half years in, and it is very much thanks to them that I never feel alone at any time of the day or night when I am working at our nation's challenges at that emblematic address, and that is finally being transformed – as Members Opposite and on this side will know – into an address which is the representation of the modern Gibraltar and not what it was.

1670 Today, I also want to continue the tradition I established, which I think is fitting in a system of real Cabinet Government, of publicly thanking all other members of the ministerial team, for their sterling efforts in the course of this past financial year. It is that work and the work of the civil servants who work alongside us that delivers these excellent results.

1675 Because it is quite clear to me, Mr Speaker, and no doubt to people outside this place, that this is a game-changing budget; a game-changing appropriation of monies for our community.

This Budget shows our community that our long-term strategy for the future of this nation of ours is starting to bear fruit.

1675 Already, the rainy day funds are well established once again in Community Care, now with over £80 million on deposit.

1675 Already, the rainy day funds are well established once again in the Savings Bank, where reserves are estimated to be restored again to the level at which they were before Members Opposite took the money for their general purposes – talk about using savers' money for the Government's own purposes!

Mr Speaker, this is the Socialist Liberal Government's third budget, which once again delivers social justice for all our community.

1680 This is a budget for people of aspiration; for hard working people who are the spine of our success as a community.

Because this budget demonstrates that we care about the people who cannot pay their bills and who are not riding high and we care about businesses that are not doing as well as they could because of the attempts to strangle our economy.

1685 This is a budget for entrepreneurs and the working man and woman.

A budget not for those who put out their hands just to take; it is a Budget for those who put out their hands to work and for those who genuinely cannot work.

And these are exciting times for business in Gibraltar.

Entrepreneurs can see there is a Government in Gibraltar that is on their side.

1690 A Government that understands their needs.

A Government that wants to see growth continue and spread to every sector of the economy.

A Government that understands each taxpayer is a shareholder in this common enterprise that we call the nation we are building.

1695 And our role is to ensure that we maximise shareholder value in everything that we do: adding shareholder value in tangible, economic terms and in non-tangible non-economic ways too; a balancing act that we are getting right at every turn.

We are delivering game-changing developments like Commonwealth Park in partnership with responsible charitable organisations like the Kusuma Foundation, whilst also delivering game-changing surpluses.

1700 And we are not just relying on established industries and established standards.

We are dragging Gibraltar out of the culture of mediocrity; we are reaching out for a better standard and new businesses.

We take not just the low-lying fruit of the established sectors; we go further to try to establish new industries with innovative thinking and set our sights on the future, not just the present and the past.

1705 And that is what is resulting in investors breaking ground on new office developments which just would not get off the ground before we were elected.

That is why we already have a fabulous new 5-star hotel already operating, barely 30 months after our election – organising functions Gibraltar could never have hosted before.

We can see we have the confidence of the financial services sector which has grown in jobs since our election, despite the challenges that industry faces.

1710 We can see the confidence from the gaming sector which has grown in jobs since our election despite the challenges that industry faces, by almost 50%, Mr Speaker.

We enjoy the confidence of unions and employers' representative organisations, because we listen and we act when we believe their ideas are better than ours.

1715 But we are clear that we enjoy the confidence from all sectors of society because we are working for all sectors of society and delivering to all sectors of society.

And so I say, Mr Speaker, to every member of our community, whoever they may have supported at the last election: this is a budget for you: for those of you who voted GSD or PDP, for those of you who mixed your vote and for those who did not vote at all as much as for those who voted GSLP/Liberal, because we are a government for all of Gibraltar – as we promised to be and we make absolutely no apology for that!

1720 We are a government delivering a budget for workers and for entrepreneurs; for those on middle class incomes and working class incomes; for the worker and for the business man.

A budget that delivers social justice for all of our people, as we will endeavour to do in every appropriation we bring to this House.

1725 A budget that demonstrates that we will take no lessons in finance from those who left Gibraltar with just £2 million in the bank when they left.

We will take no lessons in democracy from those who financed their party newspaper exclusively with taxpayers' money or hardly called any meetings of this Parliament when they could.

1730 Because this is a budget of a government that will always put country before party and not the other way around.

This is a game-changing budget, Mr Speaker, that sees our people basking in the bright sunlight of the new dawn.

A budget of a record-breaking surplus that exceeds even the record-breaking estimate.

1735 A budget of useable cash reserves up again to almost £100 million – 50 times the paltry £2 million the Members Opposite left behind.

A record high in Gibraltarians in employment.

And Gibraltar now third in the international rankings of GDP per capita with people enjoying the benefits of that in the carefully targeted spending commitments of their Government.

1740 Mr Speaker, more cash, more jobs, more surplus and much more transparency and democracy than ever before.

Not just a record-breaking Socialist Liberal Government; a game-changing Socialist Liberal Government for all our community.

1745 Mr Speaker, it is therefore with both great pride and humility in having been allowed to present the fruits of the work of this whole team in the opening address in this debate, that I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Having regard to the fact that hon. Members have remained in their seats for over two and a half hours, including the Clerk and myself, I think we should have a very short comfort recess, not exceeding 10 minutes.

1750 The House will now recess.

The House recessed at 12.45 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 12.57 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is an honour for me to rise to deliver my second budget speech as Leader of the Opposition.

1755 As I said in my budget speech last year, the Opposition will never make political capital against the Government at the expense of this community or without clear justification. Where we can work with the Government, we will do so. Where on balance it is justified and we believe that for the sake of national unity we need to be adopting a different policy to the ones we have held in the past, we will also do so. We will not stick rigidly to partisan political lines, even where intellectually we would have been justified in doing so, if on balance it does not serve the national interest.

1760 Thus for example, we attended the National Day Rally last year, despite our long held position in Government to depoliticise National Day. We have also done so on attendance at the United Nations Committee of 24, where I said publicly on more than one occasion on first becoming my Party's Leader, that although we do not resile from our Party's long standing position that the 2007 Constitution created a modern, non-colonial relationship with the United Kingdom with the maximum level of self-government, short of independence and compatible with continued British sovereignty, we would for the sake of national unity attend, provided that I could see the Hon. the Chief Minister's speech beforehand and agree the text with him.

1765 The hon. Gentleman has not taken me up on that.

1770 On the attempt by the UK Prime Minister, David Cameron, to negotiate new terms of membership with the EU, I brought a motion to this Parliament within weeks of becoming Leader of the Opposition, calling on the Chief Minister and myself to work together so that Gibraltar's interests could be protected. Not once have I been briefed, despite his recent unilateral decision to undertake a consultation exercise on Gibraltar's inclusion in the Customs Union and Schengen.

1775 On our relations with Spain, I have said on many occasions again, from very soon after I became Leader of the Opposition, that he and I should work together and devise a common strategy, and for us to be an example to future generations of politicians here in Gibraltar. He has never taken me up on that either.

1780 Last year, for two months we suspended normal political activities and criticisms of the Government, to give the Government the political space to resolve a difficult situation in the aftermath of the laying of the concrete blocks. He briefed me for those two months but the briefing ceased as soon as normal political exchanges resumed.

1785 There are therefore many initiatives from this side of the House where we have held out an olive branch to the Government on issues of national importance, and the reality is that for whatever reason, they have not been taken up by the Government. Indeed we have gone, Mr Speaker, far further than they did when they were in Opposition.

That said, Mr Speaker, what the Government cannot do is equate its own narrow political interests with the interests of this community of Gibraltar. Every time it is met with criticism on their handling of public finances and indeed on their handling of relations with Spain. They are not the same and indeed, I note, Mr Speaker, that he has done precisely that during the course of his speech here today, this morning.

1790 Thus, whilst we welcome some of the measures – for example, the measures to encourage savings and also the measures to stimulate trade in Main Street – that the hon. Gentleman has announced today and indeed the growth of the economy, we continue to have very real and considerable concerns about the way 1795 that the Government is managing our public finances, including the opaqueness surrounding the expenditure of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and Credit Finance Company Limited and the legacy of debt and spiralling expenditure that the hon. Gentlemen is leaving future generations of Gibraltarians.

The seeds for the opaqueness management of our public finance today were sown by the Chief Minister in his political discourse at the last election, as we will see in a moment. It is a discourse that goes to the heart of whether hon. Members, and the Chief Minister in particular, deserve the trust of the people of Gibraltar at the next election, Mr Speaker.

1800 The reality is that the Hon. the Chief Minister's position remains riddled by substantial, fundamental and presentational contradictions, as he himself has always known and which I said last year during the course of my Budget address, would catch up with him sooner rather than later if it had not already done so. Well, Mr Speaker, it has caught up with him in this Budget, for reasons that I am going to be developing in a moment.

1805 Mr Speaker, what this Budget shows is that the Big Lie has well and truly unravelled. (Banging on desks) Highest net public debt in the history of Gibraltar in monetary terms. Substantial increases in gross debt despite the Chief Minister's address last year and his predictions that gross debt would actually go down. Highest levels of recurrent expenditure in Gibraltar's history.

1810 It is not surprising, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. the Chief Minister has been so defensive about recurrent expenditure this morning, and he uses and deploys the well-known and tiresome mantra of 'blame the GSD'.

Well, Mr Speaker, what the Chief Minister cannot do is on the one hand argue that our public finances were in a ruinous state in 2011 and claim credit for some miracle in two and a half years, whilst saddling the GSD with recurrent expenditure (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks) because it was our fault, Mr Speaker. Mr Speaker, the French saying, Qui s'excuse, s'accuse comes to mind and the Chief Minister has done it perfectly this morning.

1820 Mr Speaker, increases in recurrent expenditure outstripping increases in recurrent revenue in both percentage and monetary terms; highest ever reliance on import duty, despite the Chief Minister decrying our dependence on it rightly, from the Opposition Benches; overspend across the majority of Government Departments; and a very worrying propensity Mr Speaker, for overspend in the Chief Minister's own Department, No. 6 Convent Place, Mr Speaker. It really is, money is no object when it comes to No. 6 Convent Place, (A Member: Hear, hear.) as we will see in a moment.

1825 This, Mr Speaker, from the gentleman that used to criticise his predecessor, Sir Peter Caruana for his expenditure, when he makes Sir Peter Caruana look like a veritable scrooge in comparison, Mr Speaker. And that, without taking into account the opaque investment – because that is what it is – of £400 million by the Gibraltar Savings Bank in Credit Finance Company Limited, over £70 million of which the Government has already spent.

1830 Mr Speaker, if the Government has spent that £70 million directly, instead of using savers' money as its credit card, and accounted for that expenditure in these estimates of revenue and expenditure, the Government would not be making anywhere near the kind of surplus it is making and declaring today, Mr Speaker. Indeed, it would be making a mere loss. That is the fundamental reality of this budget, Mr Speaker. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1835 Mr Speaker, for the last two years my predecessor as Leader of the Opposition and I, Sir Peter Caruana, have been describing the 2011 Election as the Big Lie election, involving not one big lie, but two big lies. One on the state of public finances and the level of public debt, which he described as astronomically high or in excess of the legal borrowing limits; and a second lie about electoral promises made to the electorate, which were quite frankly undeliverable in the way that the Chief Minister said that they were going to be delivered, Mr Speaker.

1840 He promised £750 million of capital projects and indeed huge increases in recurrent expenditure to boot. He promised to freeze rents, rates, electricity, to cut income tax, the effective rate, from 25% to 15%, to cut public debt by half and to donate every single last penny of Government surpluses to Community Care. Mr Speaker, a veritable miracle by biblical proportions.

1845 And it does not take a rocket scientist to work out that if you are going to increase Government capital and recurrent expenditure to those very significant – and by Gibraltar standards – astronomical levels, whilst at the same time cutting the income available to the Government – because what you are doing is, you are cutting income tax, freezing rates, rents, electricity, cutting the public debt and donating every single last penny of Government surplus to Community Care – how on earth did he expect to pay for it all, Mr Speaker?

1850 In his very first address to this community on 18th January 2012, he appeared on public television on an emergency basis and spoke quote 'serious public debt problem'; quote 'a serious public finance problem'; quote 'an impenetrable curtain'.

He then went on to create the impression, an impression that he reinforced in the budget last year and he has done so again this year, that there was somehow a sinister £100-million black hole in the public finances of Gibraltar.

1855 Mr Speaker, it is a claim that he even repeated on Spanish television last year! If I had made such a criticism of his Government on Spanish television, I would have been required to walk in procession, Mr Speaker (Banging on desks) from College Lane to No. 6 Convent Place, self-flagellating myself in the process, prostrating myself in front of No. 6 Convent Place, until his party machinery had forgiven me for my supposed sin, Mr Speaker.

1860 But of course, what he does not do, he does not judge his political opponents by the same standards that he judges himself, Mr Speaker.

And Mr Speaker, yet by the beginning of last year, when challenged by a GBC reporter on the levels of Government spending in the light of that very bleak picture that he painted, barely 12 months earlier, he said that the Government, and I quote ‘had cured’ any public finance problems that he had inherited. Mr Speaker, from financial ruin to the land of milk and honey in barely 12 months! Mr Speaker, it is simply not credible.

And of course Mr Speaker, he had to find a miraculous cure pretty quickly, because this was a Chief Minister that was going to be embarking on some of the most expensive capital projects that we have seen in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker. He would be soon spending money as if there were no tomorrow: 1,000 affordable homes at a cost of over £100 million; the cladding and improvement to three estates at a cost of nearly £100 million; the small boats marina at a cost of £24 million. Sandy Bay at the cost of between £5 and £10 million; £4.5 million Mr Speaker on a semi-Venetian palace at No. 6 Convent Place, Mr Speaker! (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) the Queen’s Cinema, Commonwealth Park and £25 million as he has today announced on the Gibraltar International Bank, to name but a few.

1875 But also, Mr Speaker, importantly, huge increases in recurrent expenditure.

Mr Speaker, last year I said that in comparison to the financial year ending 31st March 2012, the projected overall, the current expenditure for the year ending 31st March 2014 will have risen by £66.6 million per annum or £5.5 million per month. In fact, Mr Speaker, the recurrent expenditure has risen during that period by £95.6 million per annum or £7.96 – nearly £8 million – per month. That includes increases in recurrent departmental expenditure of £76.6 million; recurrent contribution to Government-owned companies of £9.6 million and £9.4 million paid in previous years to the Social Security Fund, which this year has inexplicably been transferred as a one-off payment out of surplus, which has artificially increased the size of the surplus, only for that money to then be paid from the surplus to Community Care.

1880 In other words, in the past, £9.4 million was paid to the Social Security Fund, from there to Social Assistance and then from there to Community Care. This year, it has been treated as part of the surplus and from there it has been paid directly to Community Care.

Mr Speaker, I will return to this later on, but for present purposes, it represents an increase of 28% in recurrent expenditure from the position that it was in March 2012, when the hon. Gentleman first gave his first Budget speech. Even if you take the £9.4 million from recurrent expenditure, as they have done, recurrent expenditure would still be £86.2 million more than it was in March of 2012, Mr Speaker. An astronomical increase by anybody’s standards from a Government that won the election claiming that the public finances of Gibraltar were in a ruinous state, Mr Speaker.

1890 But it is the implications of these huge increases for the community and not the big lie in itself that concerns me, as I will explain in a moment. But the big lie is the reason for the hon. Gentleman’s blind gamble – for that is what it amounts to, a blind gamble – with the future of our children and our children’s children, because these levels of public expenditure are simply not sustainable and someone at some point in the future is going to be left with an almost impossible task, when the mess that he is creating comes back to bite us all, Mr Speaker.

1900 Mr Speaker, recurrent expenditure for next year is expected to rise by 32% from the position it was in March 2012 to £108.95 million per year, an increase of £9 million per month. But Mr Speaker, almost across the board, there have been huge increases in expenditure and overspending in Government Departments from the levels that he predicted in his budget last year. Twenty-four out of 41 Government Departments have spent more than their allocated budget – 24 out of 41 Government Departments are overspending, Mr Speaker. No. 6 Convent Place is spending £16 million per annum today, compared to £7.5 million per annum in March 2012, Mr Speaker. (Interjections) It is an excess over budget of 45%. The hon. Gentleman cannot even keep within a budget in his own Department in No. 6 Convent Place, Mr Speaker!

1905 Mr Speaker, No. 6 Convent Place is spending £16 million today, compared to £7.5 million in March of 2012 – an increase of 112% rise in expenditure in the Chief Minister’s own Department since March 2012. Now, the Chief Minister may argue in his response, that the IT Department is within his budget now. Therefore that would account for a large part of the increase because the IT Department accounts for £1.1 million of the increase. However, even that £1.1 million, Mr Speaker, that increase only happened when the IT Department was within his control, was within part of No. 6 Convent Place.

1915 Even if I were to give him the benefit of the doubt for the increases within the IT Department, and other Departments which have moved in and out since March 2012, there is still a rise in overall expenditure of £7 million, which is still an increase in his Department of 93.5%, Mr Speaker, and the increase is across all the items within his Department. Total payroll, Mr Speaker, at No. 6 Convent Place has increased from £2.2 million in March 2012 to £4.26 million in 2014, with a further increase to £4.4 million by 2015.

1920 As at March 2014, No. 6 was spending £2 million, or 91%, more in salaries than it was in March 2012. Excluding the IT Department, it equates to 36% increase in salaries, Mr Speaker.

1925 In 2015, the Chief Minister plans to increase the levels of staff by seven more bodies. That is more than the total increase planned for the GHA during the same period, Mr Speaker. Legal consultancy fees for No. 6 Convent Place have increased by £666,000 in March 2012 to £2.25 million in March 2014 – an increase of a staggering 237%. This despite significant increases in legal staffing levels employed directly by No. 6 Convent Place during the same period. For the first time, there is a Head for Media Monitoring which comes in at £475,000.

Mr Speaker, I know that he likes to spend an awful lot of time monitoring what everyone says on social media, but £475,000 on media monitoring is an awful lot of money to spend on media monitoring.

1930 Travel and entertainment was an item that I focused on last year. The estimated figure was £390,000. The actual was £1.3 million, or a massive 287% over budget, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, it is a question of priorities. Priority is a word that he ought to learn and ought to be in his vocabulary, Mr Speaker. I really cannot understand how all this expenditure on his offices can be justified when one looks at the priorities for this community, especially from a ‘new dawn’ Socialist Party that claims to be the people’s party, Mr Speaker.

1935 One has to ask what benefit is there to the ordinary man in the street by this extravagant spending and overspending on No. 6 Convent Place? Mr Speaker, there has rightly been a public outcry regarding the availability of doctor’s appointments at the Primary Care Centre. The overspend on travel and entertainment alone of £920,000 could have employed 10 doctors for a year, Mr Speaker, which would have dramatically reduced waiting times. Yet the priority is given to the Chief Minister’s own offices and it would appear his own comfort, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Perhaps the next time that the leader of the new dawn socialists is near the Primary Care Centre, he should pop in and explain to all those people who are hours waiting to see a doctor, why he is spending so much money on his own offices, on his own staff, on his own travel and entertainment when they have to wait hours to see a doctor, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

1945 None of this of course takes into account the £4.5 million plush upgrade to his offices or the Jaguar or the Tesla or the three or four Mercs, Mr Speaker and he had the audacity to criticise his predecessor for the gas-guzzling Jaguar, Mr Speaker!

Turning to other Departments, Culture and Heritage: estimated spend was £3.7 million; the actual came in at £5 million, which means a 35% over budget. Utilities: the estimate was £48 million; the actual spend was £64 million, which means 33% over budget. Human Resources: the budget was £1.4 million and the actual has come in at £2.4 million, which means a 64% over budget. Treasury: the projected expenditure was £16 million; the actual came in at £17 million or 6% over budget.

1950 Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Father of the House is not here to listen to my response to the Hon. the Chief Minister’s Budget, but I know that he delights in reminding me, Mr Speaker, that he has known me since I wore short pants. The issue whether I wore short pants or not shall forever remain a bone of contention between him and I, but we do go back a long way and I know him as well as he knows me – and he must be absolutely gritting his teeth, Mr Speaker, at forming part of a Government that is spending at the levels that this Government is spending, Mr Speaker, and overspending across Government Departments!

1960 Whatever happened, Mr Speaker, to his famous and I think correct policy of the rainy day fund policy, Mr Speaker? And Mr Speaker, to the extent that he forms part of a Government – a Socialist Government Mr Speaker – that agrees to pay a former Socialist activist in Hong Kong, £250,000, Mr Speaker! Ten times the national wage average here in Gibraltar, inclusive of the private education of his children, Mr Speaker. Since when have socialist governments anywhere in the world, Mr Speaker, paid for the private education of anyone’s children, Mr Speaker?

1965 The reality is that the Hon. the Father of the House is going to remain, Mr Speaker, the only non-champagne-drinking Socialist at this rate, on the Government benches, Mr Speaker! (Laughter and interjection) I hope that he is listening to this, because at this rate – and I hesitate to make the point, because Mr Speaker, I will incur the full wrath of his response – but at this rate, he is going to feel more at home on these benches than on theirs, because at least I used to listen to him when he used to talk to me about the need for financial prudence and the setting aside of a little bit of money in order to meet a situation when the going gets tough – a lesson that obviously the Hon. the Leader of the new dawn Socialists has simply not learnt, Mr Speaker.

But Mr Speaker, I now turn to recurrent revenue.

1975 Recurrent revenue increased by 19.97% since March 2012, whilst I have already indicated, that expenditure has risen by 28%. From March 2012, recurrent revenue has increased by £90 million. Of that amount, £54.45 million or 44% was accounted for by an increase in import duty. Mr Speaker, increases in current expenditure are expected to continue to outstrip increases in recurrent income in both percentage and also monetary terms next year. The expected rise of revenue for March 2015 is only £2.5 million. The expected rise in expenditure is £22.8 million next year. What is concerning about these figures is that the 1980 bulk of the increase in recurrent expenditure is attributable to import duty.

In March 2011, import duty accounted for 25% of total Government revenue. Today it accounts for 32.6%. Mr Speaker, when he was on these benches and in these debates – indeed in the speech that he gave when he was Leader of the Opposition, his only one – he said that we needed to cut dependence on tobacco revenue. Well, Mr Speaker, I agree but dependence on tobacco revenue is going up, it is not going down and it has been two and a half years on his watch that this has continued to happen.

1985

Mr Speaker, that careful calibration between increases in recurrent revenue and expenditure which the Government predicted at the last election is not happening because the Government's expenditure is out of control. That is the reality. I recently said in the Gibraltar Chronicle that the Government is creating the ingredients for a perfect storm in future and I have to say that I am more worried than ever having read these figures for this debate. And I emphasise again, that you cannot hermetically seal the public finances of Gibraltar from outside influences.

1990

Even the EU Commission visit on Wednesday of this week could have an important impact on important sectors of our revenue, Mr Speaker. Our relations with Spain can also affect not only important sectors of our economy such as gaming, which accounts for 20% of GDP and nearly 3,000 jobs, but also important revenue streams too, Mr Speaker and they have to be conducted in a calm, mature, intelligent way, Mr Speaker. Less of the flashing of the cufflinks, Mr Speaker, and more thought.

1995

And in this regard, I do congratulate him for his toned down UN speech that he delivered this year. A far cry from his speech last year comparing, whether he believes it or not, comparing Spain to North Korea, which I thought was one of the biggest own goals that any Chief Minister in the history of Gibraltar's politics has actually scored.

2000

Mr Speaker, I do not think that it is a coincidence that we have seen a decrease in certain revenue streams this financial year. Tourist site receipts are down by 5%; bunkering charges are down by 33%; ship registration fees are down by 17.2%; revenue from vessels using the east side anchorage down by 45%; Upper Rock visitors down 3% compared to last year – down 30% when compared to 2012; yacht arrivals down approximately 13%, the number of coaches arriving in Gibraltar via the land frontier down 33%; Gibraltar Museum revenues down 27%, Mr Speaker.

2005

Mr Speaker, I now turn to my analysis of public debt. The gross public debt stands at £450 million and cash reserves stand at £96 million. That gives a net public debt figure of £354 million. In monetary terms that is the highest net public debt figure in the history of this community.

Let me repeat that for the benefit of hon. Gentlemen opposite: £354 million, the highest in monetary terms for net public debt in the history of this community, Mr Speaker. And this is from a leader who decried the levels of public debt at the last election and he is responsible now for saddling this community with the highest levels of net public debt in monetary terms in the political history of this community.

Last year, he promised to reduce this figure by £12 million. Instead, it has actually risen by £76 million, or 27%, and it is expected to rise again next year by £25 million. Even if you analyse it, in gross public debt terms – which is their preferred method and was their preferred method at the last election – I remind the Chief Minister that last year he said that he was well on course to meet his manifesto commitment of reducing gross public debt to £260 million. Well, the outturn is £450 million – an increase, Mr Speaker, of £74.3 million in gross public debt.

Mr Speaker, of course he may decide to convert to GSD policy by arguing that we should not look at gross debt but we should look at net debt and net debt as a percentage for the size of the economy, and it happens to be 25%. I will leave that up to him in his reply. But if he does that, if he argues that it is low because it is net debt as a ratio of the size of the economy, well perhaps he can also apologise to the people of Gibraltar for his misleading public discourse at the last election, Mr Speaker. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

2020

But Mr Speaker, these net and gross public debt figures do not even provide us with an accurate picture of public debt – and I am turning to analyse the Gibraltar Savings Bank and Credit Finance Company Limited. Mr Speaker, last year I said that the Gibraltar Savings Bank would and I quote:

'become absolutely pivotal to any debate on public finance and the Government expenditure over the next few years'.

2030 Mr Speaker, at the time that I uttered those words, I did not know about the existence of Credit Finance Company Limited – and unfortunately, I have been proved absolutely right.

I also said this and I quote:

‘Mr Speaker I have been observing the Hon. the Minister responsible for the Gibraltar Savings Bank, Minister Bossano, for many years. I may not always agree with what he does or the manner in which he does it, but he does everything for a reason. I hope, Mr Speaker, that I am wrong and that the Government is not contemplating using that money. The consequences for these annual debates and the transparency of Government finances would be considerable because it would be blow, a massive hole in the Governments duty to account to this House at budget time for the expenditure because as we all know, the Gibraltar Savings Bank expenditure is not reflected in these estimates’.

2035 Again Mr Speaker, I made these predictions, which have turned out to be absolutely totally accurate, because since they came into office, they have been effectively shifting Government debentures which rank as Government debt from the books of the Government to the Gibraltar Savings Bank where they do not rank as Government debt. Of course, the Government still guarantees all deposits, including debentures, in the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

Mr Speaker, in March 2011, the Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures stood at £27.6 million. They now stand at £378 million, plus £74 million in bonds. Including deposits, the total amount in the Gibraltar Saving Bank is £815 million, compared to £330 million in 2011.

2040 Mr Speaker, in March 2012 the Government caused the incorporation of Credit Finance Company Limited, a company owned by the Government and the Gibraltar Savings Bank. It did so with an initial investment from the Gibraltar Savings Bank of nearly £300 million. For a Government that delights in issuing press releases on virtually anything and everything, it is remarkable that it made no announcement at all on such a huge investment of savers’ money. Probably, Mr Speaker, because they knew there was a by-election around the corner, Mr Speaker.

2045 And when I asked in this House, before that by-election, whether the Government had directly or indirectly provided any kind of financial assistance to the owners of the Sunborn, which would have led me to the existence of Credit Finance Company Limited, he said – and he could have answered yes – he answered ‘No, sir’, only to come clean the day after the by-election, Mr Speaker. The lack of transparency and accountability to this House in the handling of the finances of the Gibraltar Savings Bank and Credit Finance Company Limited will forever be a huge stain on his transparency and accountability agenda, Mr Speaker. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

2055 Yet further, Mr Speaker, he still refuses to answer legitimate questions as to who is in receipt of loans from the Government and in what amounts. It makes a mockery of this debate today. What is the point, Mr Speaker, of having 24 meetings of Parliament which he crowed about during his own address, if he will not answer questions on where Credit Finance Company Limited is spending that money and that expenditure is not accounted for in these estimates of revenue and expenditure? It is the single most important assault on the democratic and parliamentary process since I have been in politics, probably ever.

2060 Mr Speaker, Credit Finance Company Limited’s only employees are its directors, the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and another senior civil servant. To date, the Gibraltar Savings Bank has invested £400 million, or 49% of all monies deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank, into this company and the Government has invested a further £30 million. You do not invest such colossal sums of money in a Government-owned company unless you intend to make use of that money in some way. This is particularly so, Mr Speaker, when one understands that the rates being offered by the Gibraltar Savings Bank are significantly higher than the rates available in the open market.

2065 There is a deliberate policy of making Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures as attractive as possible to encourage deposits within the bank and anecdotal evidence suggests, from the banking sector, that even foreign investors are being encouraged to take advantage of the higher rates of return within the Gibraltar Savings Bank. Mr Speaker, it is simply not true to say that under the GSD Government, the Government could and indeed did make use of the monies deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank. It is not true. That is their policy and it was this Government that changed the law quite deliberately to allow them to do so.

In March of 2012, the Chief Minister moved a Bill to amend the Gibraltar Savings Bank Act and took out the requirement that the investments of the Gibraltar Savings Bank be limited to cash deposits or their equivalent. That is why we voted against the Bill.

2075 The importance for present purposes is that, as a consequence, we now have a situation where legally there is no longer a requirement for the Government to invest in Gibraltar Savings Bank deposits in very safe forms of investments with very low returns. That is the reason why the investment of £400 million by the Gibraltar Savings Bank in Credit Finance Company Limited has been possible and I repeat, it is inconceivable that the Government is not going to be using that money because it is already costing the Gibraltar Savings Bank a considerable amount of money in interest payable to debenture holders.

2080 So far the Government has spent £72.43 million out of the £400 million, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I say the Government, because no-one in a million years, and less still Her Majesty's Opposition, is going to believe that the Chief Secretary and the Financial Secretary wake up every morning, hold a breakfast meeting and unilaterally decide who Credit Finance Company Limited lends money to and who Credit Finance Company does not lend money to.

It is a ridiculous notion to suggest that two senior civil servants decided unilaterally that they were going to be lending £30 to £40 million; we do not know what amount because he refuses to answer those questions, to the owners of the Sunborn. Absolutely ridiculous! They are obviously rubber stamping, Mr Speaker, the decisions of the hon. Gentlemen opposite, of the Government.

The expenditure is properly the expenditure of the Government: £23.05 million has been paid to pay off commuted pensions of civil servants; £49.42 million has been used to provide loans to the owners of the Sunborn and housing estates, of which we know of – because it could be others but we do not know because he refuses to answer questions; £1 million has been used to allow individuals or entities to pay off their arrears including tax arrears to the Government, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, this not only inflates Government recurrent revenue because at its most basic, it is allowing individuals to pay off their debts to the Government whilst parking a Government debt in a Government-owned company so that it is not reflected in these accounts, but it allows the Government to use Credit Finance Company Limited to pay for expenditure that it would otherwise have had to meet through borrowing or its own reserves.

Mr Speaker, if the Government had spent that money itself, the surplus would have been much more reduced this year, Mr Speaker. Indeed it might have even made a loss. In other words, if you take out the £70 million out of the forecast surplus, that surplus would be virtually wiped out, Mr Speaker. Even if you treat the loan book of £49.42 million in accountancy terms as a loan from the Government and not expenditure, the surplus would be reduced by the amounts that had been paid in commuted pensions of civil servants. As I said at the beginning of my speech, that surplus has already been inflated by £9.4 million which has always been treated as a payment to Social Security and eventually to Community Care, which this year has been treated as a one-off payment to surplus and then paid from there to Community Care thus inflating the surplus.

Mr Speaker, it is smoke and mirrors economics. That is what it is. Conversely, if the Government had borrowed the money, Credit Finance Company Limited has paid out, there is no doubt that the net and gross public debt of this community would have increased by £17 million so we would be even more in debt than we are now directly – debt directly attributable to the Government, Mr Speaker. Indeed, it would be interesting to conduct the exercise, Mr Speaker, when he is through next year, as to the amounts that he eventually spends out of that £400 million in Credit Finance Company Limited and the levels of gross and net public debt to see whether actually, if you take them both together, the legal borrowing limits set down in law would have been exceeded, Mr Speaker, if the money that is being spent by Credit Finance Company Limited had been properly, as I say, properly been spent by the Government.

Mr Speaker, that is the true face of the Government he presides over. No economic miracle; he is mortgaging Gibraltar to the hilt and part of that mortgage is being kept away from these estimates which what we have consistently objected to since this debate first arose last year.

Finally, Mr Speaker, on this area, these figures do not give and take into account, substantial expenditure by the Government on for example the power station – and I will return to that at the end of my speech – or the installation of the liquid natural gas at the Detached Mole and its supply to the power station or the land reclamation associated with it. It does not take into account any expenditure by the Government on home ownership estates, so there will therefore be more spending next year, Mr Speaker, and there will either be more borrowing, either directly by the Government or through Credit Finance Company Limited.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to economic growth. Mr Speaker, the forecast gross domestic product for the financial year 2011-12 was £1.137 billion and the forecast GDP for 2012-13 was £1.226 billion. Today the Chief Minister has said that economic growth for the year ending 31st March 2014 was 10.3% and that GDP was forecast to rise to £1.41 billion. Of course, Gibraltar is bucking global trends as it has done since the financial crisis broke in 2007. These figures are therefore good figures, there is no doubt that there will be further growth next year, driven entirely Mr Speaker, by Government projects.

But we must however be careful about economic growth based largely on Government projects funded by borrowing. At some stage that money will have to be repaid, likewise, lending the owners of the Sunborn or any other business £30 to £40 million to relocate to Gibraltar is not with respect, the best economic model. This is not economic growth generated by huge inward investment.

And I remind the Chief Minister that when he was Leader of the Opposition, and he was interviewed by Gerard Teuma in May 2011, he said that just as the GSLP had international investors lined up before we were elected to Government in 1988, so too did he have international investors lined up if he became Chief Minister of Gibraltar. Of course he never gave any details and that was understandable but there has been an election, they won it and I asked him on four separate occasions about these supposed international investors. After almost two years of asking him, he finally came clean in January of this year and said that it was a coin-minting company from Austria that he had in mind in 2011.

2145 Mr Speaker, talk about damp squibs! How on earth can he possibly compare himself to the first GSLP Government with the land reclamation at Europort, the Euro Towers and all the international investment that quite rightly that first GSLP Government has been praised for bringing to Gibraltar to a coin-minting company, Mr Speaker, from Austria? They are simply not comparable, Mr Speaker.

2150 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really needs to spend less time on photo opportunities and more time thinking about ways in which he is going to be attracting inward investment to Gibraltar and indeed, we have a number of ideas on this side of the House on how to attract that business and if he wants to, he can sit down with me and I will gladly impart some of those ideas. I have no reason to keep them to myself. At the end of the day, we are both working towards a common purpose and if he wants to engage with me, I will happily engage and tell him about the ideas that we have on this side of the House for attracting inward investment.

2155 Mr Speaker, during the course of his speech, he spoke about the web of companies that supposedly the GSD had created during his 16 years and then he said, in reference to my Hon. and Learned Friend Mr Bossino – and he has the audacity to talk about secret companies... Mr Speaker, how on earth can you compare and how on earth can you trust the creating of a Government-owned company to the creating of a situation where you are allowing or incorporating companies registered at No. 6 Convent Place, with public servants as its Directors owned by GSLP activists being provided by direct allocation with Government contracts subsidised also through the Future Job Strategy, Mr Speaker? How on earth is that comparable? (Banging on desks) Because it is not.

2160 Mr Speaker, he also spoke about the power station. Mr Speaker, I had actually anticipated that he would be making the announcement of the power station during the course of his Budget, but Mr Speaker, he talked about in his speech, ‘we have got to frame this debate in honesty’. He said ‘frame the debate in honesty’ and then he proceeds to talk about £67 million for the power station, but actually omitting to say that on top of the £67 million he is going to have to spend money on the building of a liquid natural gas installation at the Detached Mole with a supply from that installation all the way to the power station and he is also going to have to spend extra money as well on the land reclamation, Mr Speaker, because that is what he is going to do. It will be £120 million from this same company because it is the same company, Mr Speaker, that he has announced, it was going to be building our power station, the £120 million included a new building for GibElec and it also included all the installations and all the infrastructure that was necessary, including storage facilities for that power station.

2170 Mr Speaker, he is comparing apples with pears but that is his style, he is over eager Mr Speaker and often over plays his hand, that is what he does, losing credibility in the process, just so that he can say, blame the GSD and look at what the GSD is doing and look at what we are doing. If he spent less time thinking about the GSD and getting on with the business of running Gibraltar, Gibraltar would be all the better for it, Mr Speaker.

2175 Mr Speaker, in relation to the black hole, he seems to have forgotten, Mr Speaker, what I said about the supposed £100 million black hole during the course of my Budget speech last year. Let me remind him, after outlining the arguments about the £100 million black hole, I basically said as my Hon. and Learned Friend, Sir Peter Caruana explained last year, this so called £100 million black hole is attributable entirely to the fact that the public debt ended higher and cash receipts ended up lower than the Government had estimated at the start of the year.

2180 It happened before in 2009, in 2010 it was estimated would finish the year at £116 million and it ended at £148 million. In 2010-11 £180 million was estimated and it finished at £216 million. All it takes, Mr Speaker, is for capital expenditure to proceed more quickly than budgeted for, for capital receipts from the sale of assets or for capital receipts from the sale of assets to be delayed or a combination of both, to produce this effect. The GSLP Opposition, Mr Speaker, has never criticised that position before in any of the statements that it made during the course of this debate in the past.

2185 Last year Mr Caruana said, and I quote:

‘delayed asset receipts for the year remain on-stream to come in now or in the future.’

2190 Well Mr Speaker, he was absolutely right. If the hon. Member looks at page 143 of the Estimates, actual receipts for last year from the sale of Government properties and other premia amounted to £1.4 million, whereas the forecast outturn for this year is £102 million, an increase of just over £100 million – end quote. There is your black hole, Mr Speaker – a black hole of the hon. Gentleman’s own invention, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, last year to conclude he said that what needed to go down had gone down and what needed to go up had gone up. Not even he can maintain a straight face, adept as he is at it, keep a straight face, whilst making that remark for this Budget today. We finally see his true face, Mr Speaker. We finally see that this is no economic miracle, a miraculous cure for an illness he himself invented at the last election. He 2200 is mortgaging the future of Gibraltar, the future of our children and our children's children to the hilt to pay for a plethora of reckless promises he made at the last election. That, Mr Speaker, is his true face.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Applause)

2205 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I cannot quite believe that that is it – but then again it was a game-changing budget, so I therefore move that the House do now adjourn until 3.15 p.m. this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: The House will now –

Hon. Chief Minister: Recess, I am sorry, thank you until 3.15 p.m. this afternoon.

Mr Speaker: I am sorry I am school-masterish...!

2215 Hon. Chief Minister: Ah! Quite right.

Mr Speaker, if I may I will inform Members as soon as I know of the changes proposed to the schedule of the Hon. the Minister for Europe whose plane has gone back to London and therefore we may have an opportunity of continuing with the session this afternoon as a result, and, as soon as I know more, I will make sure that hon. Members are informed either here or privately, of what the arrangements may look like.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until 3.15 p.m. this afternoon.

The House recessed at 1.55 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.17 p.m.

[ACTING CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr Joseph Garcia.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, this is my 16th contribution to a debate on the Appropriation Bill in this House, my third as a member of the Government.

5 There have been many changes to this place over those 16 years. Some have been physical changes to the building, like the introduction of air conditioning and the refurbishment of the Chamber itself; other changes have been of substance to the rules, the procedures and the practices of the House.

10 I can remember, when I was first elected in 1999, that the Hansard of the previous year's Budget was not available to me immediately. As the House knows, Hansard is now published and circulated on the Parliament website quicker than it has ever been before – indeed, there was not even a website then. Even an institution like Parliament, Mr Speaker, has to move with the times. The publication of Hansard reflects the policy of the Government to make such information publicly available in as little time as possible. We have achieved this. The proceedings of this House are now televised. The House has been modernised and refurbished beyond recognition. This has taken into account the interests of the public, the press and obviously ourselves as its Members.

15 I want to confirm, Mr Speaker, that the next phase of the refurbishment will happen shortly. There is financial provision for this project in the estimates of revenue and expenditure before the House today. This next phase will include much needed works to the ante-room and the back-offices for Mr Speaker, the Clerk and the staff of the House. It will also include the installation of a lift, which will allow easy access for the disabled, the elderly and others into the public gallery for the first time.

20 Mr Speaker, this building was not constructed as a Parliament. It was the seat of the Exchange and Commercial Library, which had been founded in 1817 as the civilian population's response to their exclusion from the Garrison Library; but that is another story for another day. I know that the installation of a lift will be welcomed by my hon. Friend and colleague, the Minister for Equality.

25 Moving on now, Mr Speaker, to other matters, last year was the 300th anniversary of the Treaty of Utrecht. The Government organised a very successful symposium on the subject, which included speakers from Gibraltar as well as experts from abroad. I want to thank Jennifer Ballantine Perera and the staff at the Garrison Library for the superb organisation of the event.

30 This year, Mr Speaker, there will be another symposium; this time on self-determination and referenda. The intention is that another panel of speakers will analyse the subject of self-determination from different perspectives. The principle is different in application and in law, for example, in a non-self-governing territory to what it could be elsewhere. There is already a provisional list of experts that has been drawn up and I understand that invitations will be going out soon. Once again, there will be speakers from Gibraltar as well as panellists from outside our frontiers.

35 The symposium comes in a year when Scotland will hold a referendum on independence from the United Kingdom. It also comes in the year when the Catalan Government want to hold a similar referendum in order to determine their own fate. The positions of Scotland and Catalunya are very different to that of Gibraltar and this will no doubt add to the discussion.

40 Gibraltar is a Non-Self-Governing Territory. We are, Mr Speaker, in the United Nations Third International Decade for the Eradication of Colonialism. It will not have escaped anyone here that the number of Non-Self-Governing Territories on the UN list has actually gone up instead of down. The UN list and removal from it is another theme for the symposium.

The symposium, Mr Speaker, has been pencilled in for mid-October and the Government is sure that it will prove very interesting and very relevant, both from an academic, a legal and a political point of view.

45 There is provision in the estimates for this event.

Moving on, Mr Speaker, the seminar ties in with the need that the Government has already identified to increase the political profile of Gibraltar abroad. We have already announced our plans to step up our lobbying for Gibraltar in Brussels and in Washington. The House already knows that the Gibraltar-American Council is made up of very supportive and well-connected individuals to whom we are thankful 50 for the continuing interest that they show in Gibraltar. This is very useful work, but more needs to be done.

In this context, the Chief Minister and I met with legal and lobbying firm Holland and Knight during our visit to Washington in March. It is clear to the Government that lobbying works very differently in the United States from what it does in the United Kingdom or in Europe. Therefore, the Government has contracted Holland and Knight, initially on a six months basis, in order to drive our campaign in 55 Washington.

A branch of the American Chamber of Commerce has now been established in Gibraltar. The Government welcomes this as a first step to increased trade links in the future. A very successful trade delegation from the United States visited Gibraltar a few weeks ago. The House knows that the Chief Minister and I were again in Washington this month for a number of political and other meetings which are designed to pursue the Government's agenda.

Mr Speaker, it is obvious that Gibraltar needs to do more in Brussels as well. The Government is looking to develop an office there based on the one that we currently operate at Gibraltar House in London. This would involve the recruitment of new staff or the redeployment of existing staff to Brussels.

We will, at the same time, continue to count on the support of Members of the European Parliament. However, the loss of Sir Graham Watson will be felt in the light of the valuable work that he has done for Gibraltar behind the scenes. The Government remains open, in this new set-up, to the idea of Sir Graham continuing to assist Gibraltar, albeit in a different way.

There is a huge amount of legislation coming through the EU pipeline, where it is essential that the Gibraltar view is heard at an early stage in order to avoid problems later on. I know that Michael Llamas and his staff at EUID, who do an excellent job for Gibraltar, will very much welcome additional resources on the ground in the European Union capital. It might even be possible to deploy officials from Gibraltar to Brussels on a rotating three-months basis, in order to create a pool of experienced public servants in the EU capital. The College of Bruges, which trains European civil servants, might also be an attractive proposition for young Gibraltarians. We will, needless to say, continue to work closely on Gibraltar issues with UKREP, the UK Permanent Mission to the European Union.

Mr Speaker, there are also more than 700 members of the new European Parliament who need to be briefed and be made aware of the issues facing Gibraltar. We had made in-roads into the Parliament before the European Elections. The base of Gibraltar supporters in Brussels is no longer made up exclusively of British MEPs. This was seen in the two votes earlier this year on Air Passenger Rights legislation and the updated Single European Sky. Hundreds of MEPs of different nationalities and belonging to different political groups supported Gibraltar. We have seen German and even Spanish MEPs take up Gibraltar-related issues over the last couple of years, particularly the queues at the border. This is a good thing and we need to build on it. To do so, we need a team of people who will be dedicated to the task.
80

The election of a new European Parliament in May and, later in the year, the appointment of a new Commission that has to be ratified by that Parliament, presents a number of opportunities for Gibraltar to build on what has been achieved already. This lobbying has, up to now, been co-ordinated from my office in Gibraltar. Its role has been transformed since we were elected into a hub for the gathering of data and the compilation of reports. These reports are then transmitted to the relevant entity, which includes the EU Commission in Brussels or, more recently, the United Nations in New York as well.
85

The House knows that a detailed dossier of statistics, photographs and press cuttings has been sent to the Chairman of the Committee of 24 and the Chairman of the 4th Committee. The objective behind this is to challenge the claim made by Spain that the Chief Minister's address to the 4th Committee last year contained falsehoods and insults. This was in respect of the border delays, the incursions at sea and in particular the shooting incident involving the Spanish Civil Guard and a Gibraltar jet-skier.
90

The European Commission continues to receive monthly updates of the situation at the border. This includes statistical data, video footage, photographic evidence and press cuttings. There will be another EU mission to the frontier on Wednesday of this week. Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to everyone who has been involved in this exercise. It is very important as we continue to build up our case against Spain.
95

The House will know that the Government has set up a website in order to monitor the frontier delays. This has proved an extremely useful tool for persons who want to cross the border into Spain. We also know that the European Commission itself uses it to monitor border flow. The website was launched on 7th December 2012, which is about a year after we came into office. In the time since then, there have been over 12 million page views. The current average stands at about one million hits per month, which equates to about 32,000 page views every day.

105 This system is being upgraded to a new one, using the latest available technology. This is known as the Frontier Monitoring Project (FMP). The House will see that this is provided for in the estimates. The FMP system will give up-to-date information on queuing time, flow rates and camera imaging. Historical data going back two to three years will also be available. This will allow a correlation to be made between the length of the queue and key political events that Spain may not like.

110 The system will allow registered users to receive information on queuing times at preset regular intervals via e-mail or WhatsApp. This means that it can be programmed to send information on the queues, for example, between five and seven on weekdays for people returning home from work. It can also be programmed to supply information on a one-off basis for someone who does not cross the border regularly. The system will give the user the optimal time to cross in either direction, because it works using the flow rate of cars across the land frontier.

115 The system has the capability to detect suspicious activities. This gives it a law-enforcement capability through the use of Automated Number Plate Recognition (ANPR). Law enforcement agencies will be able to track down any particular vehicle from Devils Tower road to the frontier loop area.

120 It will also allow for quicker response times for traffic management purposes. The House knows, Mr Speaker, that works have taken place at the border in order to comply with the recommendations made by the European Commission. There is now a five-lane Customs area. Provision has also been made for an in-depth search area adjacent to the Customs area with incorporated car-lift facilities. There will also be an ANPR system at the commercial gates to detect all vehicle movements as well as the incorporation of security barriers and gates to better manage Customs operations in the area. This will serve as a deterrent after hours as the area will be closed off.

125 It is a credit to Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, that we have complied with the recommendations of the EU Commission at a time when Spain has done practically nothing. The Government trusts that this will be obvious to the EU Commission itself when they visit Gibraltar for a second time on Wednesday.

130 Another area which continues to be current is civil aviation. The House knows that legislation on Air Passenger Rights, on the Single European Sky II+ and the EU Aviation Agreement with Ukraine are all held up because Spain wants to exclude Gibraltar Airport from the scope of these measures. The Government will work closely with our friends in the European Parliament and with the United Kingdom Government on these issues. Indeed, the Government welcomes the position taken by the United Kingdom Government in relation to the inclusion of Gibraltar Airport in the EU civil aviation measures. This position is that the exclusion of Gibraltar Airport from EU legislation is a 'red line' for the United Kingdom. Indeed, this was spelt out at the second Aviation Policy Consultative Conference held at the Department of Transport in London in May by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Transport with responsibility for Aviation, Robert Goodwill MP.

140 Mr Speaker, the Government welcomes the continuation of that robust approach. The Government would again like to thank all the MEPs from different political groupings who supported Gibraltar on aviation issues in the European Parliament.

145 Some of these matters now move on to discussion between the Parliament and the Council, which is composed of the Governments of the 28 Member States. This is where the UK must maintain its position that Gibraltar Airport must be included. The House can rest assured that the Government, for its part, will continue to make a case for the inclusion of Gibraltar Airport in EU civil aviation measures.

150 Mr Speaker, I move on now to aviation security. Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd, the Borders and Coastguard Agency and GibAir Handling continue to make significant progress on Aviation Security matters. During the year, as part of this process, the Director of Civil Aviation approved a new Cargo Security programme, which reflects the completely changed procedures required by the new terminal. As a consequence, GibAir Handling has been revalidated as a Regulated Agent listed on the Commission's Register of such organisations which are allowed to process air cargo.

155 In common with other airports in the European Union, in response to European legislation that came into effect on 31st January, the Airport has introduced new equipment capable of screening liquids for the existence of liquid explosives. At present, the equipment can only be used for certain predefined types of liquids – principally for the screening of medicines and special dietary requirements, including baby food. The European Union is shortly to discuss the use of the equipment for other liquid types.

160 Mr Speaker, in this year's Budget there is an allocation of £150,000 set aside to improve security measures on Winston Churchill Avenue in order to stop cars from being able to enter the runway while aircraft are operating from it. The current preventative measures have been in place for a number of years and have been assessed as being in need of upgrading with modern barrier systems.

Mr Speaker, during the bird management audit of the Airport, it was recommended that responsibility for the bird control system on the roof of the air terminal should be passed from GATL to the NATS bird management team. A fibre-optic cable linking the terminal and ATC has now been put in place in order to make this happen.

165 Over the past year, GATL has continued working to enhance the air terminal's operational capabilities and improve the passenger experience. A new stand was opened for the parking of general aviation aircraft at the eastern end of the present stand. This will permit more aircraft to use the Airport. The extra parking will allow this part of the business to develop further without the previous constraint caused by the commitment to stand allocation for the regular scheduled services.

170 The old air terminal has now been demolished and all the remaining tenants have been rehoused in both the air cargo building and the new entry processing unit, which is located within the air terminal itself. The Government invited expressions of interest for the development of the old air terminal area on 1st March 2014.

175 Finally, GATL is fully engaged in updating the new Airport Emergency Orders which, once finalised, will replace the current Air Crash Response Plan.

Mr Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to thank the many professionals involved in all the many different fields that I have mentioned for their support and assistance.

180 I now move on to my responsibility as Minister for Town Planning. The Development and Planning Commission (DPC) continues to discuss Government projects which are presented to it for guidance and advice. I am pleased to report to the House that the same system has now also been extended to a number of Ministry of Defence applications, at their request and by agreement with them. This is very welcome news.

The policy of the Government to place its projects before the Commission for guidance and advice has worked very well. It allows the different stakeholders to give their views on planning applications and to improve them.

185 The full plans and applications relating to Government projects continue to be placed online on the Government website. This gives the general public more information on Government projects than ever before. Over the last financial year, the Government's commitment to place the planning process online has continued to be developed. Once ready, it will allow the Planning Department to function and offer all its services electronically. This means that the public will be kept abreast of all applications, allowing once again for improved dissemination of information. When the system is ready, it will be possible to examine all private and Government projects online.

The Government is also in the final stages of completing the new Town Planning Act.

195 Mr Speaker, the Commission has been able to make its views known to the Government and the Government has listened to and acted on those views. Members will recall a number of examples of this approach. The Government decided not to proceed with an additional floor to Moorish Castle, Glacis and Laguna Estates, following the advice of the Commission. The Government also decided not to proceed with the original scale of the Sunborn reclamation in Marina Bay, which included a car park, following the advice of the Commission and the input of residents of the area. The system has therefore worked very well and many projects have been improved as a result.

200 The House will also recall that the Chief Secretary has written to all Government Departments, Agencies, Authorities and Companies to officially inform them that the policy of the Government is that all its projects should go before the DPC. The only provisos are serious issues of public safety, urgency or security. This system allows for inter-departmental or inter-authority consultation and discussion and for information to be exchanged between different stakeholders.

205 Mr Speaker, the resources of the Town Planning and Building Control Department have been increased after this Government came into office with the addition of two assistant town planners and an EO administrative grade in the Department. This last financial year, two posts were advertised following the resignation of one of the two assistant town planners and the retirement of one town planning technician. The two town planners are now involved and consulted over Government projects at the earliest possible stage, often well before a project has been officially submitted. This allows them to express their professional opinions and to have an input sooner. They also form part of the group that examines all expressions of interest in order to consider and evaluate proposals made to the Government. It will be recalled that the Department and its professional staff were totally sidelined by the previous administration.

215 Mr Speaker, the Opposition know that the system works better than ever before, following the reforms that this Government has introduced. Meetings continue to be open to the public and the feedback that the Government has received from applicants, objectors, the media and others continues to be very positive indeed. Many times it is standing room only at DPC meetings. On a number of occasions there have been additional special meetings dedicated to one or two applications only. Indeed, it was a historic day when the application to construct a football stadium at Europa Point was considered in public by one such special meeting. More than that, the meeting was broadcast live, given the high level of public interest in this particular application.

220 This reflects the policy of the Government to increase the openness and transparency of statutory bodies. It is a policy that has served to generate awareness of planning issues and to add to public debate on the matter. Discussion and debate is a good thing, Mr Speaker. This Government has come so far in such a 225 short time period that it is difficult to envisage that all of this used to happen in secret, behind closed doors in a boardroom in Europort, just over two years ago.

It is not only the public that has had access to the meetings. The fact that architects and project managers are often present continues to prove very useful. Most, if not all, queries can be dealt with on the spot, thereby allowing the decision-making process to be expedited. The Commission has listened carefully to countless applicants and objectors who have chosen to address it in person. It has then taken a decision with the benefit of this input and after considering the pros and cons of each application.

230 Mr Speaker, there were 16 meetings of the Development and Planning Commission during the last financial year. Those meetings considered 359 applications, 86 of which were for Government projects. The details of all these applications are available online, as are the minutes, which show the deliberations and the decision in each case.

235 Mr Speaker, Building Control is also part of my remit. The Building Control's main duties are the administration and enforcement of the Building Regulations made under the Public Health Act by inspection of deposited plans. This is followed up with the necessary site inspections in order to determine that the works have been carried out to the approved plans and specifications.

240 The Town Planning and Building Control sections shall soon be able to receive fee payments at their offices. This may seem a pretty odd announcement to make. The Government intends to replace the cumbersome system that we inherited, where the public submit their papers at Building Control in Europort and then have to go to the Environmental Agency in Town Range in order to effect the payment. The new one-stop shop will make it easier for applicants.

245 Mr Speaker, the number of building control applications that received approval in 2013 is 497. This is a record number. There has been a steady increase from 351 in 2011 to 383 in 2012, to 497 now. A total of 177 completion certificates were issued in 2013.

I take this opportunity to thank everyone in the Town Planning and Building Control Department for the professional and enthusiastic approach that they have shown in the implementation of the policies of the Government.

250 Mr Speaker, I move on now to lands. During the financial year 2013-14, 28 residential properties were sold, generating an income of £9.3 million. One Government flat was also released as part of a purchase. The leases for some of the properties are pending completion, which means that the final figure might vary should prospective purchasers not complete. Some of the properties that have been sold are in the Upper Town. A number of impressive schemes have already been presented to the DPC for the regeneration of parts of the Upper Town through the refurbishment of such properties. There is now a process in place to identify the next batch of residential units to put out to tender.

255 Mr Speaker, there is clearly a demand for properties in the Upper Town. The Government understands that one scheme with over 20 flats sold out within hours of being marketed. There are also a number of former MOD properties that have been put out to tender. The most recent were the 16 units at Europa Pass Battery, which are expected to raise just under £7 million. This money is then committed to re-provide the MOD with new buildings in a different location. New for old. This is what the previous administration agreed to under the Lands Agreement of July 2011.

260 A total of £24 million will have been received from the sale of residential properties since 2012 once all pending sales have been completed. Additionally, 19 commercial premises have been allocated via tender during the financial year 2013-14 and an income of £1.2 million will have been received once all the allocations are completed.

265 Mr Speaker, the House will have seen that various adverts have been published inviting expressions of interest. These have covered areas such as Rosia Bay, the Northern Defences, the old air terminal site, Ragged Staff Magazine and the Eastside reclamation. All of these, except the Eastside, have now closed. The successful proposed development at Rosia Bay was selected from 16 interested parties. The successful applicant has already presented the scheme to the DPC. The expressions of interest in the Northern Defences and the old air terminal site are under consideration, and that for Ragged Staff closed on 23rd May. A total of £3 million will have been received from commercial tenders since 2012, once all assignments are finalised.

275 Mr Speaker, I would like to thank the staff of the Lands Office in Convent Place and the management and staff of Land Property Services for their assistance over the financial year.

280 Mr Speaker, I will now say a few words in my role as the Chairman of Gibtelecom: 2013 was again a productive year for the company. Business turnover increased year on year, giving the company a solid base from which to develop and continue to make the much needed investment in infrastructure for the years ahead.

285 The roll-out of the Company's Next Generation Network is ongoing, with the continued deployment of VDSL2 technology to bring superfast broadband to Gibraltar. This is being made possible through the installation of active cabinets across Gibraltar, bringing the fibre to the kerb, and consequently closer to customer premises, to facilitate higher internet speeds. I can now confirm that 95% of homes are currently within reach of this technology, with the company reporting that it expects to complete its deployment plan by the end of the year. In all, some 50 cabinets have been or are being installed around various points in Gibraltar. I am pleased to inform hon. Members that Gibtelecom now has plans to significantly increase the broadband speeds currently available to their customers before the year is out.

290 Gibtelecom is also securing for itself a role as a global carrier, offering diverse communication routes and data centre services with a range of contracts extending well beyond Gibraltar. The investment in the Europe India Gateway (EIG) submarine cable is the driver for Gibtelecom's enhanced connectivity worldwide and the development of their new overseas business transporting communications carriers' traffic. Gibtelecom has recently established a technical point of presence in Marseilles, France, a major gateway for cables into Europe.

295 Gibtelecom completed the purchase of the Haven Building from the Government in January of this year. The building, which until recently housed the Government's Treasury and other public sector offices, has been acquired on a 150-years' lease for £5.8 million. The building is connected to Gibtelecom's John Mackintosh Square headquarters and will facilitate the expansion of the company's technical facilities in the Haven building and allow the business to house, amongst other things, its next generation communications switch that will eventually replace the existing System X exchange located in the adjoining City Hall.

300 Because of the magnitude and complexity of developing the next generation technology, together with re-parenting the extensive cabling to and within City Hall, this project is expected to take a number of years; but once it is done, Gibtelecom will be more in control of its own destiny and, as importantly, we will return the whole of the City Hall to its iconic status as a centre of history and governance in Gibraltar. Part of the arrangement will be for the company to eventually remove that monstrosity of a bridge between the City Hall and the Haven building that was so necessary in its day.

305 Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar telecoms regulator has recently awarded Gibtelecom one of three 4G mobile licences, conditional on the company being able to launch superfast mobile broadband services by the tail end of next year. The company is also progressing the roll-out of a Gibraltarwide Wi-Fi network, which will complement the existing mobile signals.

310 Staying with mobile services, Gibtelecom recently received approval from the DPC for the erection of much needed new mobile mast sites. It is expected that some of these sites will be operational within the next two to four months, with the remaining sites coming on line within the next 12 months. As a result of the way mobile signals propagate and the changing topography of Gibraltar due to building developments, the business needs a higher number of sites to satisfy the new lower power emission planning requirements. This is another example of Gibraltar being a leader on environmental issues and reducing our carbon footprint.

315 Mr Speaker, I am confident that Gibtelecom continues to be well placed to meet the twin challenges of running a business of which Gibraltar can be proud in the ultra-dynamic communications world, whilst providing an excellent customer experience. The company takes a well-rounded and balanced approach by continuing to invest in infrastructure and technology, as well as in people. I am sure that Members will agree that this is the way to ensure that society's demand for more and more communications can be met for many years to come.

320 I would like to conclude by paying tribute to the personnel of Gibtelecom, its staff and its management, who are helping the business in Gibraltar keep pace with the fast-moving world of communications technology.

325 Mr Speaker, the Government continues to deliver its programme as set out in the election manifesto of the GSLP/Liberals. This is what we were elected to do. A large number of these commitments have already been completed. Many more are in progress and others will be tackled soon.

330 On coming into office, we opened up meetings of the DPC to press and public scrutiny. We opened up Parliament to live broadcasts of its proceedings. Soon afterwards, we identified several plots of land where over 1,000 homes are now being built to house our people. The success of Commonwealth Park is visible for all to see. This year, we announced changes to working hours for public sector workers. We announced that the Youth Centre will again open on Saturdays. We have built and refurbished play parks for our children. Our tourist product in general and our beaches are now looking better than ever. There are new schools going up, a new power station in the pipeline and Government rented housing estates are being refurbished. There are more Gibraltarians in employment. The environmental filter is firmly in place.

340 This is what we promised to do, Mr Speaker, and we are doing it. In so many ways we have transformed Gibraltar. We have introduced a degree of openness, accountability and transparency into the conduct of Government that simply did not exist before, whatever the Opposition may say. We continue along the path of greater e-government in order to bring the administration closer to our people and into their homes. Having said all that, there is still work to be done. We are confident, Mr Speaker, that we will continue to deliver what we promised between now and polling day.

I take this opportunity to thank you, Mr Speaker, and to thank the past and present Clerk and staff of Parliament for their assistance and support over the year.

I would also like to thank my personal staff in No. 6: my personal secretary, Coral Schembri; PA, Ernest Francis; and Principal Secretary, Caine Sanchez.

350 Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Applause and banging on desks)

Statement by Hon. Dr J E Cortes – Awarding of contract for Commonwealth Park –
Comments in social media

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

355 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Before I move into my Budget speech proper, Mr Speaker, I feel I should comment on a matter that, fuelled by an implication made by Members opposite in this House last week, has been the subject of speculation by some in what we now commonly know as the ‘social media’.

360 Mr Speaker, in supplementaries to Question 448/2014, my past connection with a firm that runs the Botanic Gardens, a connection known to the whole of Gibraltar and successive Governments for over 20 years, was presented in a way that may have implied some impropriety on the part of Government in awarding the contract for Commonwealth Park.

365 I think, Mr Speaker, that this point was answered when it was confirmed by me that I am no longer directly involved in the company and that my shares are not held in trust for me. Clearly, in the company search that they carried out and which they said they had, Members opposite will have seen that my wife was still a shareholder. This is no secret, and in fact Members opposite will have known this anyway, for I worked very closely with successive GSD Ministers as director of the Gardens. There is therefore no issue in that I ever wanted this not to be known, as I knew it was known. Correctly, I believe the Opposition made no issue of that, and you, Mr Speaker, moved the Oral Questions session on.

370 Mr Speaker, some contributors to the social media, who it appears also had that information – which is fine, as it is public – sought to imply that this meant that my wife, and perhaps indirectly I, had a monitoring interest in the company and therefore in the Alameda and Commonwealth Park. I made it clear in a brief statement on social media that neither my wife nor I have ever collected fees from the company and that this would continue to be the case with Commonwealth Park. The company was merely a vehicle by which to perform the work I carried out, and my wife’s continuing as a shareholder is just a sentimental link to 20 years of my life, but – I repeat – with no financial benefit.

375 The matter that remains then, Mr Speaker, is whether the situation as described in any way unfairly benefited the company in its bid for the Commonwealth Park contract. The process was not run by me, but independently by the Government’s Procurement Office. It was the board that considered the three applications and that ruled that two of these did not comply with the requirements. I was not involved in any way at that stage. In fact, I am only aware of the identity of one of the other two tenderers because they approached me since last Wednesday to assure me that they bear no grudge and do not assign any unfairness to the process leading to the outcome.

380 Mr Speaker, what we cannot have is that a group of good professionals with huge experience and many qualifications are excluded from being considered for carrying out functions which would benefit Gibraltar because I happen to have had connections with them. By implication, for example, Hassan’s would be excluded from all Government work because Members from both sides of the House still have connections with the firm.

385 I wish to assure this House, Mr Speaker, that there has been no preferential treatment given and that the process for selection of the firm to manage Commonwealth Park has been dealt with in a fair and professional manner by all concerned.

390 Mr Speaker, I should point out that a few years ago, during the time of the previous administration, Wildlife was directly given a contract for the Upper Rock, assumed responsibility for running the Scientific Authority and bird control and was repeatedly offered management of the cemetery, which it declined. This was presumably done because the Government of the time thought that they would do it well. Indeed, the Minister for the Environment at the time, the Hon. Ernest Britto, wrote to me on the day marking 20 years of the Botanic Gardens project in May 2011, stating, and I quote:

‘I want to extend my warmest congratulations to you personally and also to the staff of Wildlife (Gibraltar) Ltd on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the running of the Alameda Gardens. It is without doubt that the Gardens have seen great improvement during this time, especially the creation of the Gibraltar Botanic Gardens and the general beautification of the Gardens, which is in itself a very important attraction to many visiting tourists, making a significant contribution to Gibraltar's tourist product.'

The only thing that has changed since then is my departure.

I can accept, Mr Speaker, that in politics the slightest thing will be picked on, but I can assure this House that there has been nothing in this process that can cause this House any concern.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
For Second Reading –

400 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): And so to the main body of my speech, which will be divided into two parts.

Mr Speaker, I begin with the environment. This past year has been the consolidation of environmental thinking in Government policy and action, cascading and percolating well into the private sector.

405 On looking back and taking stock, I am at the same time as embarrassed at the huge environmental deficit Gibraltar held to the rest of the world in 2011 as I am proud of the way that it has advanced since.

I am delighted therefore to report, Mr Speaker, that this year has been yet another testimony to the unparalleled level of commitment and work in all areas of national and international environmental management which began when I took office as Minister for the Environment two and a half short years ago. Tempus fugit – or, to quote Virgil to the full, fugit irreparabilis tempus – which makes it even more 410 important for us to dedicate ourselves fully to the task of bringing Gibraltar up to international standards in environmental governance and make up for all the lost time of the past.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar has now firmly established itself as a leader in environmental governance within the UK Overseas Territories, a role it has long deserved and that I worked for before entering politics, but that was blocked by the isolationist policies of the former administration.

415 The success of the Government's outreach was highlighted last year in a much acclaimed report on environmental governance in the Overseas Territories – produced by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, by far the largest UK environmental NGO, and published last year – where Gibraltar ranked first in all aspects.

420 Not only are we leaving our mark with the Territories, but within Europe as well, as Government officials increasingly network and demonstrate our vision and working practices. Only last month, Environment officials attended a seminar in Greece, where Gibraltar showcased its marine management and contributed towards enhancing the management of Mediterranean protected areas at a European level. From a position where Gibraltar was simply not represented in these events at all, we have moved to helping mould European environmental policy.

425 The benefits to Gibraltar from these networks are tremendous. As we collaborate on exciting projects and the wider international community, we get increasingly known, recognised and accepted. Gibraltar is now working at different levels with most EU countries, either directly or as part of group forums, on a wide variety of issues, including the Habitats Directive, air quality, climate change, waste, and habitat management.

430 Scientists and officials in the Department regularly attend courses on a whole array of issues, ranging from oil-spill response to environmental law. As a scientist myself, I am all too aware of the need for continuing professional development in this field and the benefits of providing public servants with these opportunities.

435 Mr Speaker, environmental civil servants and advisers continue to be involved in discussion and decision making at all levels of Government. They not only work for me, for but for all other Ministers in the Government and are called upon by my colleagues for input and advice on a regular basis. The Department continues to work closely with law drafters at the European Union and International Department (EUID) to review existing environmental legislation and deliver improvements where possible, always with the view of providing for sounder and greater environmental management and protection, 440 which are in the interests of all.

As I have said, Mr Speaker, Environment is now more proactive than ever before, and its staff better prepared, through resources and training, to deal with a whole array of environmental issues. By way of example, the Department now has its own diving section and is performing marine surveys and relocations in house. Officers are also on call to allow for faster deployment when dealing with a wide array of 445 environmental problems, including oil spills and pollution incidents. This complements the excellent work already being done by the Environmental Agency.

We have also enhanced the number of staff in the environmental feedback section to allow for an improved service to the public and will shortly be releasing a new app called Fix my Street, an online reporting facility which provides direct contact with Government Departments and agencies for the reporting and resolution of municipal service requests. Citizens will be able to submit service requests relating to a variety of issues, including abandoned vehicles, pollution, domestic refuse, graffiti, potholes, sign damage, stormwater drains, street cleaning, street lights etc.

In order to ensure that environmental governance is public servicewide, a seminar with all Government Departments to ensure the successful adoption of the newly revised Environmental Action and Management Plan is planned for September/October. This document exemplifies this Government's commitment to environmental change in Gibraltar and the Department is tasked with ensuring its successful implementation throughout the public service.

The Green filter continues to drive through Government activity. One of the biggest success stories in this respect, Mr Speaker, continues to be the Government's green procurement policy. By applying and directing the public sector's purchasing power within the local market towards green alternatives, we are now finding that these are not only more widespread and easily accessible to the consumer, but that increasingly they are available at a lower price than the non-environmental alternatives, and more and more local businesses are moving into the environmental sector with the products and services they offer. This just goes to show what can be achieved when Government leads by example, and is one of several clearly emerging successes that resulted from the inspirational Thinking Green Conference address by Vice-President Al Gore in October 2012.

Representatives of the Environment Department are present in any cross-departmental committee which may be set up, as well as in the Government's Projects Committee. The Department leads in committees such as the Environmental Noise Steering Group, the Energy Efficiency Committee, the Litter Committee and the Climate Change Forum, all of which I chair.

We have recently created a Climate Change Task Force, chaired by the Deputy Chief Minister, which meets on a monthly basis and, significantly, includes key stakeholders from the private sector and the Financial Services Commission. The aim, Mr Speaker, is to deliver tangible changes within Gibraltar on energy efficiency, climate change and decarbonisation: in essence, to deliver Gibraltar's 2020 Climate Strategy and overarching climate goals.

Environment has also been key in the creation of a co-ordination committee across technical departments in order to increase co-operation and efficiency in delivering Government projects.

Mr Speaker, the extremely successful recycling initiative continues, and further bins have been purchased and will be deployed in coming months. The numbers of blue, green and yellow bins will be increased in the town area, as well as in MOD estates and other locations in Gibraltar. Further expansion to the recycling initiative includes more pink bins, which cater for the recycling of waste electrical and electronic equipment; and, for the first time, the deployment of orange bins to cater for the recycling of waste cooking oil. The recycling of paper, small items of waste electrical and electronic equipment and batteries from all Government Agencies, Authorities and Departments, which commenced last year, continues with 52,061 kilos collected from the public sector alone in the financial year 2013-14.

Promoting awareness is vital for the successful implementation of any environmental initiative. With this in mind, the recycling campaign has been enhanced to capture the recycling of further waste streams – namely paper and waste electrical equipment.

Mr Speaker, in 2013, the yellow bins used for cans, plastic and tetra brick collected a total of 70,720 kilos; a 383.7% increase from the previous year. The Green bins, where we deposit glass, collected a total of 153,248 kilos in 2013; a percentage increase of 21%. The blue bins, used for paper and cardboard, collected 132,495 kilos, with a massive percentage increase of 3,617%. The pink bin programme commenced in 2013 and collected a total of 1,113 kilos, with only six bins so far around Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, if these figures do not illustrate a success story, I simply do not know what will – a success story which would not have happened without the political will and foresight of this administration, and without the support of the general public, who deserve to be praised for assisting Gibraltar as it moves towards achieving the EU recycling targets. Mr Speaker, two years ago, all you could recycle in Gibraltar was tins and glass.

The refurbishment of all refuse-holding facilities has continued, with six refuse cubicles being completed this year and 15 in the pipeline.

The Gibraltar Waste Management Plan was updated this last year to reflect the Government's policy on waste management and was submitted to the EU.

The waste tender is going through its technical assessment. In respect of waste, Gibraltar is set to receive technology that will transform the way we deal with our rubbish.

The Litter Committee continues to meet on a regular basis and the improvements as a result of the work of this Committee are evident throughout Gibraltar, with the enclosure of the refuse quarry being but one example. With the Litter Committee, we are studying ways in which to make our streets cleaner, especially those areas where historically there have been accumulations of rubbish, especially at weekends.

510 Mr Speaker, there is still more to be done, and I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the members of the Committee, especially those from outside the public sector who give of their time, for all their hard work and dedication. It really is a pleasure working with them, even though we spend most of our time talking rubbish!

515 Other waste and litter-related initiatives include the addition of signs to litter bins on dog fouling, the incorporation of ash trays to litter bins and an extensive CCTV programme in hotspots – areas of dog fouling and waste dumping.

Working with NGOs continues and regular meetings take place with both Government officials and with me. We have now expanded the process of involvement and transparency, and not only meet with the established environmental NGOs but also with other groups and individuals who work and contribute towards improving Gibraltar visually through cleanliness and who focus on waste and litter.

520 Mr Speaker, Government remains committed to involving the wider Gibraltar in its work. My Ministry now engages with more local groups than ever before and liaises with the public on a whole array of issues, directly and indirectly related to the environment. My doors are never closed to any such group.

525 Regular meetings continue to be held with the Scientific Authority and the Nature Conservancy Council, who are working closely with the Ministry and Department on a variety of issues relating to nature conservation and habitat management.

I mentioned last year the work of the Department with the GFSB and Chamber of Commerce on varying issues of environmental concern. As a result of this, a green seminar was held by the Department on sustainable construction. It was extremely well attended and more seminars are being planned in order to tackle other issues, such as sustainable tourism.

530 Mr Speaker, we have made history this year. Not only has the Government signed a power purchase agreement for wave power, which has already seen Gibraltar thrust firmly into the renewable energy scene, but I am delighted to announce that last month, for the first time in the history of energy generation in Gibraltar, 90 kilowatt hours of solar energy were fed into the local network. Additionally, data on energy savings are being collated as a result of the solar panels on the GSLA swimming pool and the tercentenary sports hall. To put matters into perspective, based on the data and savings thus far, the projected annual savings to Government from the swimming pool alone is £103,789. Further projects on solar power are currently underway at St Bernard's Hospital and Tangier Views. Work is continuing in the Department to identify further sites for the development and deployment of renewable technology, and we are in discussion with several providers. We look forward, during the course of this year, to announce further solar power projects. We will also be continuing our work to assess the viability of marine current energy as a supplier of electricity.

540 This is, Mr Speaker, clear evidence of our commitment to delivering a sustainable Gibraltar. May I remind the House that before this Government came into administration, there had been absolutely no progress made nor any interest shown in such matters, with Gibraltar trailing badly behind the rest of Europe. The actions and initiatives being delivered by this administration have enabled a wide range of possibilities to become available in Gibraltar, with Environment working horizontally across the full breadth of the public service to deliver economic prosperity with environmental protection and social justice.

550 This past year has seen a concerted effort in raising awareness of a whole array of environmental issues through the media. Some of you may have watched some of the episodes showing on GBC on the work carried out by the Department in respect of World Environment Day. More programmes will follow, focusing on other aspects of the environment.

555 But this is not all. We have moved into the 21st century and have taken the raising of awareness to a new dimension, using technology and current trends to facilitate active learner involvement in the local environment. What is hugely significant about this strategy is that through the use of android and iOS, we are also spreading awareness to the world at large. We have seen the launch of the Gibraltar wildlife jigsaw. Today, as I speak, we are launching a recycling game, and soon we will see a macaque augmented reality application, the Upper Rock multi-functional app and the Gibraltar interactive wildlife encyclopaedia. The Thinking Green website now has a kids' zone, which will be developed further and expanded upon in coming months. All of these portray local environmental resources, which children not only from Gibraltar but now from all over the world can download and learn about as they play.

560 Mr Speaker, this year, Government celebrated the 10th anniversary of World Environment Day. The purpose of this United Nations Environment Programme Day is to spread awareness of centre-stage environmental issues. This year's theme is particularly well suited to Gibraltar, being climate change in small island states, with the slogan 'Raise your voices, not the sea.' And I must say the children did exactly that: their message showed through louder and better than ever before.

As Minister for the Environment, and someone who I think has always tried to keep in touch with the youth, it is the most inspiring part of my work to see that the message really does get across and that we are succeeding in ensuring that tomorrow's generation, tomorrow's political leaders, public servants and business entrepreneurs, are growing up with this environmental awareness – which means, Mr Speaker, that finding solutions and assuming their environmental duty of care will form a natural part of their lives. The work done by children, teachers and parents has to be praised. I must also praise my Department, whose unwavering efforts with schools and other youth groups in recent years has really brought the message home.

Mr Speaker, this year finally saw the launch of the Government's Geoportal, an interactive map of Gibraltar produced by the Technical Services Department together with the IT department and Environment. The GIS database consists of a series of layers that can be overlaid to provide information on spatial patterns. The IT department has been monitoring usage, and since 19th March the map has been viewed and utilised from right across the globe: as far east as China; as far south as Mozambique and New Zealand; the extreme north, including Finland and Canada; and to the west, reaching Los Angeles in California. It has been used on mobile devices and a whole array of operating systems and web browsers. The average usage is 14,825 server requests per day. So not only are we providing an interactive map with valuable information online, ranging from streets and buildings to natural areas and geology; it is clear that people all over the world are interested in what Gibraltar is all about. This service will continue to be updated and further information is being added regularly.

Mr Speaker, the GIS project had been stumbling without political leadership or indeed interest for years, and since this administration took over it has progressed unrecognisably. (Banging on desks)

Another exciting development last year, Mr Speaker, was the UK Overseas Territories GIS conference. It was a resounding success and Gibraltar once again led by example and is taking a very active role in the development and deployment of GIS across the Territories.

Moving on to energy and climate change, Mr Speaker, I ask that you forgive me if I appear overly enthusiastic, but again progress, determination and success are very much the name of the game.

The Government continues with the programme to replace public lighting and street lights with solar-powered devices and/or LEDs. Data on energy, and as a result cost savings, are being collated by the Gibraltar Electricity Authority and are very encouraging. Going green certainly pays off.

Furthermore, as part of our efforts to mitigate and contribute towards the global fight against climate change, the Department is working hard to ensure that we fulfil our obligations under the various energy-related EU directives. To this end, we are working closely with AquaGib and the GEA to start the roll-out of smart meters. These will allow people to see their energy usage differently and make changes to save on consumption and money. Bills will also take on a new format, allowing householders to compare usage in one month from previous years.

Energy efficiency and reduction, decarbonisation of the economy, energy audit and the launch of renewables are the order of the day. We are spearheading Gibraltar into the international arena as we seek to form part of initiatives such as the Covenant of Mayors, Green Cities and the Local Governments for Sustainability initiative.

Mr Speaker, since I spoke last year, the evidence for the global and local risks of climate change has deepened and strengthened. The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change 5th Assessment Report was released in September. Its conclusions were starker and more certain than in any previous report. In its summary for policymakers, it states:

'Warming of the climate system is unequivocal....The atmosphere and ocean have warmed, the amounts of snow and ice have diminished, sea level has risen, and the concentrations of greenhouse gases have increased.'

Mr Speaker, we cannot afford to ignore this issue, which is storing huge risks and threats for established order on our planet for our children and grandchildren. Along with the rest of the global community we need to de-carbonise our economy. Failure to do so will leave future generations to pick up the costs and the insecurity which climate change will bring. We must play our part in both mitigation and adaptation. It is for these reasons that last year I reported our ambition for Gibraltar's climate change strategy to make us a top five city in environmental governance. I am pleased to report that huge progress has been made on many fronts, moving our manifesto commitment to make Gibraltar carbon neutral from ambition into action.

In October of last year, an internal review of our climate change strategy and commitments endorsed a recommendation to deliver carbon neutrality by 2020 at the latest, ahead of any other city in Europe. To reiterate a few of the actions we have already taken to reduce carbon emissions: our plans are well advanced to build a new gas-powered power station, which will simultaneously deliver energy security and much lower emissions, as well as improving air quality; our renewable energy projects; a range of energy efficiency measures; and the invaluable and ground-breaking work of the Climate Change Task Force.

The Climate Change Forum, which continues to meet, will this year deliver a revised climate change programme as a result of the work being carried out by the task force. The work and remit of the task force include assessing and finding the most effective ways of implementing the Gibraltar climate change strategy for 2020 and beyond. By incorporating private and public sector stakeholders, the task force is well placed to find ways of implementing the findings of the research being conducted in providing an economic assessment of the decarbonisation options for Gibraltar; a renewable energy strategy; supporting the delivery of an energy efficiency action plan and building renovation strategy; a city level inventory of greenhouse gas emissions; and a climate change strategy for the transport sector.

The focus of this administration, Mr Speaker, is to work hand in hand with the community and all facets of the private sector to deliver this very inspiring change and ensuring Gibraltar truly becomes a top green city.

One of the major conclusions from our strategy review is that climate change is as much an economic issue as an environmental one. Avoiding compliance costs is another powerful argument for actively reducing our emissions.

A second conclusion is that we can make progressive climate change actions a long-term economic opportunity rather than a cost. The example of the GSLA swimming pool is a classic example, even if small for now, which in addition to the £103,789 of cost savings I have already highlighted, is eliminating nearly 18,000 tonnes of carbon emissions from our atmosphere every year.

To give more figures, Mr Speaker: despite the fact that there are more areas of public lighting, the change of some areas to lower energy systems has meant that, for the first time, energy consumption in street lighting fell from 1.81 million kilowatt hours in 2012-13 to 1.74, resulting in a small but significant saving of several thousand pounds. This is just the beginning. Other changes in light fittings in public buildings and public areas are resulting in energy savings of up to 90%.

We have also concluded that in the lifespan of this Parliament we will introduce a range of incentives for all parts of our community to adopt lower carbon lifestyles and business practices. The Chief Minister, in his address, has announced some of these incentives.

It is obvious, Mr Speaker, that making massive reductions to our carbon emissions will take many years; and even when we have made all the viable technical, social and economic investments to reduce emissions there will still be residual emissions which we cannot eliminate – for example, in transport fuels. We are reviewing how these emissions can be offset and are looking toward working with other countries to this effect. The most important point to make here, Mr Speaker, is our collective drive and determination to ensure success, and I would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank all members of the task force for their work and dedication to delivering this vision for Gibraltar.

In terms of energy performance of buildings, the Government is currently completing a building renovation strategy which will set new cost-optimal levels of energy performance for new buildings and existing buildings, as well as defining nearly zero energy building standards as we move towards 2020.

On water quality, Mr Speaker, both coastal water quality and bathing-water monitoring programmes continue to be in operation, and these are spearheaded by the Department of the Environment and the Environmental Agency respectively.

New initiatives that have been incorporated into the former programme include carrying out a comprehensive chemical monitoring investigation of marine biota in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters, targeting both fish and bivalve mollusc species. This initiative will serve as an excellent medium to long-term indicator of pollutant levels in Gibraltar's marine environment. It is now possible to say that the Department of the Environment is monitoring most, if not all, marine environmental components – namely coastal water, sediment and marine biota. In addition, the Department has also commenced the development of a marine litter campaign, which includes monitoring the incidence and composition of marine litter.

Groundwater quality monitoring also continues to be carried out by the Department in the Northern Isthmus aquifer and also within the bedrock aquifer underlying the Rock of Gibraltar. The results generated from the coastal groundwater programmes will shortly be used to inform Gibraltar's second River Basin Management Plan in line with the requirement of the European Union's Water Framework Directive. Results will also be used to inform reporting requirements under other directives, such as the Marine Strategy Framework Directive.

In order to improve coastal water quality within the harbour, the Department of the Environment, together with the Technical Services Department, is currently pursuing the development of one-way flow culverts which could help improve coastal water quality in specific areas within the harbour.

New EU compliant beach signs have now been developed by the Department of the Environment, together with the Environmental Agency and the Gibraltar Tourist Board, and these will be installed this year. The signs will provide the public with easily accessible information on the characteristic of each beach in Gibraltar, along with further information on the results of the water monitoring programme.

I must also pay tribute to the hard work of the staff of the Environmental Agency, who have also been working tirelessly to deliver change and environmental improvements within their areas of competence.

690 Examples of their efforts include the following: introduction of the Environmental Agency app (GibEnviro), catering for news, location of recycling points etc; a presence on Twitter and Facebook; the upgrading of their website; the introduction of a ship sanitation certificate service as from July; increased monitoring and enforcement on waste storage and disposal sites; increased inspections of trans-frontier shipments of waste; the provision of specialised waste management training; an expansion of the portfolio of courses run by the Agency; agency staff are, for the first time, trained to audit dental clinics, vet clinics and other premises, using X-ray under the Ionising Radiation Regulations 2004 – up to now, these were not monitored and so presented a risk to the public; inspections for the first time of hotels, guesthouses and holiday lets for general hygiene and cleanliness, health and safety, swimming pool quality etc; the encouragement of small business initiatives by the issuing of hawkers’ and pedlars’ licences, which this Government has reactivated; the expansion of anti-dog fouling campaigns to include talks at schools, poster competitions and CCTV cameras.

700 Mr Speaker, works on the improvement of the cemetery continue and a tender for the landscaping and general maintenance of the North Front Cemetery has been published and is in progress. Furthermore, the Cemeteries Board now meets on a monthly basis and I will be meeting with them in the very near future to discuss improvements to their role, advice, areas of concern and general management of all of the Gibraltar cemeteries.

705 Urban renewal is one of the responsibilities that falls within my portfolio, Mr Speaker, and it is proceeding apace. In this, it is often the work of other Ministries and Departments, notably Housing, Technical Services and Education, that through their own activities form the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle that come together to reveal the final picture. And so the works in the estates, like Laguna, Glacis, Moorish Castle, Red Sands and the new Upper Town schools form part of this unprecedented boost to renewing our fair city. And so do other works that you will have seen around the town, including for example Joshua Hassan House and Duke of Kent House. The Upper Town street projects tender has been awarded and will see work commencing soon. These have all generated great interest from the private sector and more and more Upper Town properties are being refurbished, with plans that include a small hotel. Movement in this sphere is absolutely unprecedented in Gibraltar.

715 In addition, I have formed a committee, which involves the Gibraltar Heritage Trust, with the aim of identifying sites within our urban areas that require work and investment, with a view to encouraging refurbishment before demolition becomes inevitable through dereliction.

Mr Speaker, between February 2013 and April 2014, we planted 212 trees and worked extensively on the maintenance and improvement of green areas.

720 What better showcase, Mr Speaker, of the value of green areas and the benefit they bring both environmentally and socially to the community, can we have than the recently inaugurated Commonwealth Park? The Park, yet another success story, is being enjoyed by the community as a whole, both young and old, and it has probably been the most drastic and beneficial change to its urban fabric that Gibraltar has ever seen. (Banging on desks) (A Member: hear, hear) Commonwealth Park has added a new dimension to Gibraltar; a dimension that those without vision seem not to even have realised existed. Mr Speaker, the hounding by the Opposition during the construction of the park was epic: ‘When will it be ready? Will it be ready? Why did the trees come from there? How many lorries did you use? How much will it cost?’ Cynicism at its worst – which reminds me, Mr Speaker, of Oscar Wilde’s definition of a cynic as being a man who knows the price of everything and the value of nothing.

730 Mr Speaker, Commonwealth Park was an example of collaboration with other entities – in this case, the public-spiritedness of the Kusuma Trust – of effective utilisation of European Union Funds, of the use of local resources – with the soil being manufactured in Gibraltar – recycling, and of the use of environmentally friendly technology. The benefits to health and well-being will be felt by the community in a way that simple statistics will not reveal for many years, but which everyone already realises.

735 Already we have announced a new, albeit smaller, town-square type park in Governor’s Parade, an extension to the landscaping soon to be completed in the area. Gibraltar needs to be green in colour as well as in philosophy. And, Mr Speaker, I can confirm that work on setting up two dog parks in Gibraltar – one in the north and one in the southern districts – is about to commence.

740 I will now move on to the subject of the Gibraltar Nature Reserve. Mr Speaker, the Department is working tirelessly with the Gibraltar Tourist Board, the Department of Education and others, on a whole array of projects which will improve the Upper Rock for tourists, the tour and transport operators who make a living from the area, and residents alike. In doing so, we are conscious of the millions of pounds that the Upper Rock has, through the years, contributed to the Gibraltar economy, the fact that it is a major tourist destination and the fact that many residents are now choosing to stay in Gibraltar rather than crossing into Spain and are looking for more things to do here.

745 Already, this spring, we reopened the Princess Caroline’s Battery area to the community after many years, and we provided picnic tables and seating. That is nothing at all compared to what we have planned. It will be nothing short of a complete transformation and revitalisation of this too-long-forgotten national gem and tourist product. Visitors to the Upper Rock will feel almost as if they were walking in the sky. We are reopening and improving existing trails, improving way-finding and delivering thematic routes; enhancing recreation areas and facilities, improving safety and accessibility, thereby catering for different interests. We are restoring and preserving historic structures, delivering improved interpretation and re-opening areas to the general public. We are protecting the flora and fauna, improving the habitat for macaques, reintroducing or enhancing the populations of key species, ensuring better definition of public paths and educating visitors and residents on our natural heritage. We are delivering interpretation centres, which will benefit not only local education but the eco-tourism experience as well, better signage, enhanced maps and guides, and of course interactive apps on the Upper Rock. And the Upper Rock Management Plan will ensure continuous maintenance, preventing vandalism and litter and promoting continuous improvements.

Moving on to the area of habitat management, Mr Speaker, I am delighted to report that great strides continue to be taken in the fields of terrestrial and marine habitat management. The Department is working closely with local interest groups, pulling on local expertise and experience in such projects as the Gib-Bats project, fish tagging, removal of invasive species, preservation of existing species through the provision of swift boxes and bat boxes, sea-grass restoration, species relocations, reef surveillance and enhancement, the development of an exciting reintroduction programme which will commence with the Barbary Partridge and will see other species of flora and fauna in coming months.

The existing surveillance monitoring programme will continue to be enhanced this year to ensure greater data capture for species of flora and fauna of local and European interest. Interpretation signs showcasing particular species of flora and fauna have gone up around Gibraltar and more will follow. These have included the cemetery, the Upper Rock, Europa foreshore and Windmill Hill, amongst others. They will serve to educate the public on important species found in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, we have been working very hard indeed to reverse the historical effects of lack of proper management of the Barbary Macaques of Gibraltar, which has resulted in our monkeys becoming regarded more as a nuisance than as an asset. Part of the management strategy is to help the public regain their traditional affection for these unique mammals with which we share the Rock, and once again to be proud of their presence and their legendary significance to the status and even sovereignty of our country. The recently launched video clip, explaining some aspects of their behaviour and how we can help, is one example of how we intend to do this. The Department and the Tourist Board is bringing in local expertise in developing a full-blown education campaign, something which I greatly welcome.

The creation of additional foraging areas on the Upper Rock by clearing dense scrub continues to great effect. Work continues too on the Upper Rock on building new ponds and enlarged feeding sites. These works are all aimed at providing as much potential activity as possible on the Upper Rock, where up until now dense scrub greatly reduced the areas they could use. The busier they are on the Rock, the less likely that they will move down into urban areas.

The ground-breaking research carried out last year together with the University of Notre Dame has shown how the macaques move widely, with successive sightings of macaques in different areas in fact being of the same individuals who are moving around. This was most useful in confirming, for example, that the group that was frequenting Laguna was in fact made up of the same individuals that would visit Catalan Bay. This helped inform the decision that it is this group that will be the main component of the animals that will be exported. Preparations are progressing well on this initiative, both in Gibraltar and at the receiving location, and details will be released in the coming months.

The enclosure of refuse facilities in macaque hotspot areas continues. Deployment of additional keen and resourceful personnel to patrol built-up areas has also helped in improving the situation, as has the deterrent of the introduction of fixed penalty fines. There is much still to do, as nature takes its time in responding, but I am confident of huge improvements in the situation this coming year.

Mr Speaker, the politically mischievous, or politically ignorant, or simply those who mean us harm, tried very hard to blame the current Spanish Government's abuse of power at the frontier on the legitimate creation of an artificial reef in our territorial waters. The huffing and puffing over, the north-west artificial reef, despite the tampering, is an example of habitat creation and encouragement of the improvement of marine life in our waters. Already there is evidence of its success, and plans to further enhance the area by the introduction of the sea grasses that once formed an underwater meadow there but that were raked away, are advancing. Other environmental improvements include the new groynes and breakwaters at Sandy Bay, already teeming with life. In this context, and following a wide range of discussion with stakeholders, regulations to govern marine activities in Gibraltar waters, while enhancing our fish stocks by investing in sensible regulation, will be published very soon.

Mr Speaker, much needed improvements to the enforcement of environmental laws are progressing well. There are currently two officers filling a new role of Environmental Enforcement Officer. They have received the necessary training from the RGP and the Attorney General's Chambers to allow them to fulfil their roles. Their areas of competence now include the enforcement of the Nature Protection Act, the Public 810 Health Act, the Litter Act, Animals and Birds Act, and the Seashore Rules, and include the ability to issue litter tickets and fixed penalty tickets for feeding macaques. The section co-ordinates a programme of CCTV cameras in hotspot areas of fly tipping and dog fouling.

In the area of environmental noise, we have met and will continue to meet our EU obligations under this legislative regime, and in January 2014 Gibraltar submitted its updated Noise Action Management Plan after a period of public consultation. The Department of the Environment and Environmental Agency are 815 now reviewing the Plan through the reconvened Noise Core Steering Group, a group that had ceased to function under the previous administration.

The Gibraltar Air Quality Monitoring Programme continues and informs the Government on local air quality and management. Gibraltar achieves compliance with virtually every pollutant measured under the requirements of the Air Quality Directive and work continues to ensure compliance with all pollutants in 820 the coming years. Gibraltar will this year be investing in new equipment for monitoring stations to ensure that the quality of data collection is maintained.

Weather stations have now been set up around Gibraltar. These will provide the Government with detailed meteorological data to support its air quality programme and to assist with plans to develop climate change mitigation and adaptation programmes. Government has also commissioned a road traffic air 825 modelling study to support the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan.

Mr Speaker, the transition from a Gibraltar where it was a struggle to convince the Government of the importance of the environment to one where Government leads is hugely evident and hugely significant, and it can only be good for the community and for Gibraltar's international standing – and it is attracting attention both within Europe and, as is increasingly evident, in the USA.

The best thing about this, Mr Speaker, is that the new way of doing things is finding its way into all levels of our society, schools, workplaces, businesses large and small, and the public service. This is lasting change of which we are proud; and proud I am of my hugely committed staff in the Department, under our new and dynamic CEO, Dr Liesl Mesilio-Torres, and in the Ministry, of our contractors in the Agency and other entities, including Government Departments and Authorities, for responding so well to the call of the 835 Environment. I honestly, deeply and truly am appreciative of all that you do and I greatly enjoy working with you.

Mr Speaker, I did say that I was dividing this speech into two. I just hesitated, considering the imminent, I assume, arrival of Mr Lidington, but I am told that I can continue. With your permission, I will have another sip of water.

I now turn my attention to the Ministry of Health and the Gibraltar Health Authority.

Mr Speaker, some people were sceptical about our resolve to improve current services, implement new ones and increase access to treatments; sceptical about our ability to make changes at the top, which would be reflected in improvements at all levels. All can see that, although there is a great deal still to be done, we have made very significant progress and I assure this House that we continue to be determined to complete 845 this process.

Fugit irreparabilis tempus, to use the quote from the Georgics again, Mr Speaker. But just like a newly transplanted tree invests in its first years in developing its roots, fooling the observer on the surface by the limited growth of its branches and leaves, only to burst into a frenzy of new life once the roots are firmly established, so too be aware that, the groundwork done and the teams and processes in place, we are just 850 about ready to go.

Mr Speaker, after two and a half years in office, I continue to have an open approach to improving the Health Service. I continue to meet staff, service users, pressure groups, charities and other organisations, which enables me to be aware of any shortfalls or gaps in the service – be it resources, logistics, space, access to services – like GP appointments or waiting times, like at the Accident and Emergency 855 Department. I encourage those with concerns about our services to come forward and make them known. Knowing about them enables me and the GHA to address them and deliver a Health Service to be proud of and one that meets the needs of our people.

Since my last presentation to this House, a solid foundation continues to be laid for the achievement of our goals and the manifesto commitments that we have set ourselves. Mr Speaker, in previous presentations
860 to the House, I have made numerous references to the need to change the GHA's management structure, which I described as awkward and complex, with little focus on the patient or service user. Over the last 12 months, we have taken huge strides in this with the appointment of hugely experienced Gibraltarian health professional, Freddie Pitto, as the new CEO, as well as a new Medical Director, but also the appointments of the three unit general managers. The new unit managers will provide much needed
865 leadership and unity to the three pillars of our Health Service: primary care, secondary care and mental health. The main benefits of this new management structure will be more effective and efficient management of operations, better integration of services and a seamless journey for patients and service users. The introduction of the unit managers will further assist in strengthening budgetary discipline by creating more controls and greater responsibility and accountability for the GHA's expenditure.

870 Mr Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity here to thank John Langan and Ernest Lima for bidding the organisation over for a year and for the support they are always willing to provide the GHA.

Mr Speaker, parallel to the restructure will be the review and formation of new groups. The GHA senior management team is being formed to replace the old, tired and ineffective GHA executive and will be tasked to deliver on our strategic objectives. The GHA operational group will form the senior management 875 group with regard to operational delivery, the management of performance and management of risk. Together, as a team, they will have collective responsibility to ensure the most effective running of the organisation ever in order to optimise the experience of patients in our care. Additional groups will include the Corporate and Clinical Governance Group, and will address such issues as patient safety, staff training and development, audits, learning from clinical incidents and accountability, just to mention a few areas.

880 Early indication, from feedback collected by the new team from our users, is that they feel our Health Service needs to focus on the following key points: a shifting emphasis from cure to prevention, to include screening programmes; a Health Service planned around the health needs of the population; a Health Service which aims for consistency, safety and high quality; care which is provided by the appropriate professional in the appropriate site; reconfiguration of our services and model of service delivery with a 885 greater shift to day care, outpatients and community services; a wider integrated approach to healthcare, with the GHA operating with other Government Departments and agencies with the aim of improving the health of our community; a Health Service which invests in staff training and development; an organisation which learns and responds to the main themes of audits, complaints and incidents; a wider use of IT to improve patient care; repatriation of services; and finally, a Health Service which is financially cost effective and operates within budget. These are in tune with our manifesto commitments and will form the basis of the GHA strategy for the coming years.

Mr Speaker, all of these key points which will form the framework of our vision, one of which will be to have a healthcare model which improves accessibility to services, focuses on quality of care, and always with strict, responsible financial controls in place to ensure a cost-effective service.

895 Mr Speaker, I would now like to turn my attention to specific areas of our Health Service, what has been achieved and what is in the process of being introduced.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar's childhood immunisation schedule is one of the most progressive in the world, and the programmes continue to be carried out every year in accordance with the schedule by the primary care practice nurses. Protection against disease is also available to our adult population through 900 comprehensive and established programmes, such as the influenza vaccine. New developments in this area may soon include the introduction of the vaccination programme against shingles. This has recently been introduced in the UK, and the GHA is considering this programme since we shadow the UK's immunisation programmes.

Mr Speaker, the lack of occupational health services has been a major handicap for many years. This 905 has resulted in situations where healthcare workers were not protected against serious infections, like hepatitis B, to which they are at risk of exposure whilst working. Gibraltar and European law is quite clear and specific on the employer's responsibilities toward workplace safety and on health protection for employees, laying particular emphasis on the role of vaccination. The risk of hepatitis B does not only affect GHA workers, but also police officers, prison officers, social workers, sewage workers and a variety 910 of others who are exposed in varying degree to this risk due to their occupations. In order to address this immediate risk, the Government has set up a scheme, in partnership with the GHA, to immunise all Gibraltar Government employees who are at a significant occupational risk of hepatitis B. The programme was launched in March this year and was a hugely significant and well overdue service.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar already has a screening programme in place against breast cancer, and we have 915 this year, on the advice of our consultants and our referral centre, streamlined and improved the service.

Attention has now turned to the prevention of another major cancer: colorectal cancer. This is Gibraltar's most commonly occurring cancer, as well as the third most frequent cause of cancer deaths. The incidence is also rising compared to a decade ago. It has a high mortality rate if left undetected. Mr Speaker, the Government announced a screening programme targeted at all persons between the ages of 920 60 and 74 years. The Government has invested substantially in the resources and improved facilities necessary to make this a reality and make the Gibraltar programme a state-of-the-art design, superior to that of many countries. The programme was launched in February 2014. Lives will be saved as a result.

Mr Speaker, I am committed to the continued introduction of screening programmes for early detection of disease, which improves survival rates and the quality of life of our people. This is one of our manifesto 925 commitments. The next screening programme which will be introduced is screening for abdominal aortic aneurysms. Having an aneurysm does not produce symptoms unless it starts to bleed. Early diagnosis and treatment will, once again, save lives.

Mr Speaker, priority continues to be given to the area of health promotion and public health education. We will continue to considerably amplify the productivity of the Department in meeting the standards that 930 the public expects. Activities carried out by the Department during this past year include the following awareness campaigns: breast feeding, immunisation, reducing obesity, colorectal cancer screening, sun awareness and dermatology.

Mr Speaker, we continue to address gaps in this Department which were ignored by the previous administration. The Public Health Department has now taken steps to halt the progressive deterioration of the quality of data of the Cancer Registry, whose fitness for purpose had been questioned in an audit report in 2009. The Department will now carry out its core data and information-based functions.

Mr Speaker, in my last address to this House at Budget time, I mentioned the publication of Gibraltar's first ever health and lifestyle survey. In the words of our Director of Public Health, Dr Vijay Kumar, every nation that desires to understand the health of its population must at some point consider carrying out a health and lifestyle survey. The information and data gathered will allow for informed decision-making and appropriate actions to be taken to improve the health and lifestyle of all of Gibraltar's people. This survey has brought insights into the health of the people in an unprecedented manner. However, the wealth of information gained will only remain useful if it is regularly supplemented and updated. To this end, the Public Health Department is planning for the next health and lifestyle survey to take place in 2014-15. Creation and successful completion of such projects highlights the commitment by this Government and the GHA to ever closer understanding of the health of our people.

Mr Speaker, I am also pleased to announce the introduction of a totally new consultant microbiology service. Medical science has changed vastly in the realm of infectious diseases in the past decade and many bacteria seen in hospital infections nowadays are resistant to antibiotics, creating an impending crisis for the future. Addressing this problem requires specialist clinical expertise in infectious disease management, which the GHA currently does not have. It is, however, planned that a service provider contract with a UK-based Gibraltarian consultant clinical microbiologist will fill this gap. The benefits of this will be more optimised treatment for patients and better management of the scarce antibiotics.

Other initiatives that we are planning include an initiative on men's health awareness and the enhancement of prostate cancer detection in collaboration with the Prostate Cancer Support Group and the Kusuma Trust.

Mr Speaker, the GHA's HR and finance staff were very busy in the latter months of 2013, co-ordinating and undertaking the administrative arrangements necessary to facilitate the transfer to the GHA of approximately 260 Care Agency staff. The most significant change to the transferred staff was that of a pay uplift, bringing their salaries in line with that received by GHA staff under the Agenda for Change (Gibraltar) agreement, which had been a commitment of the parties in Government. This required many hours of hard work, and I am grateful to the staff, both of the GHA and the Care Agency, for making this possible in record time.

Twenty members of staff from a wide cross-section of the organisation successfully completed the Learning in Action management development programme. A key element of the programme involved the completion of a work-related project which would subsequently be of value to the organisation.

Mr Speaker, the Government continues with its commitment to deliver a wide range of levels of education – including university-level education locally, be it at undergraduate or postgraduate level. I say this in relation, of course, to the School of Health Studies. Last year, I was pleased to announce the commencement of the first ever BSc Nursing adult degree programme, with 15 students being selected. We are now in the process of selecting the next group of students, who will be starting in September this year. Additional to this, we have recently introduced a postgraduate Masters programme in Leadership and Management in Health. This will provide a higher level of education for our leaders and managers.

Mr Speaker, this Government and the GHA will continue in its aspiration to respond to the needs of the people of Gibraltar through the provision of high quality, fit-for-purpose and contemporary healthcare education. Most importantly, the provision of education by the GHA is aimed at staff across the organisation, with a strong commitment to opening up professional career paths for all staff.

We have already started enrolled-nurse level training for nursing staff, and a second cohort is soon to start. This has opened avenues for entrants at nursing assistant level to be able, through hard work and commitment, to continue to progress their nursing career. Other future training programmes for our staff will include the possibility of undertaking foundation degree programmes, which will continue to develop and modernise the service provided by the GHA. For the first time ever in the history of Gibraltar, we graduated four students with a foundation degree in Paramedic Science from Kingston University. All four are now registered with the Health Care Professionals Council. The final cohort of 12 diploma nursing students graduated in November 2013 at a colourful graduation ceremony at the John Mackintosh Hall. I am pleased to inform this House that all those nurses who qualified secured employment within the GHA. Additionally, two students returned from Kingston University and St George's University of London with mental health nursing qualifications and one of them secured a first class honours degree.

I take this opportunity to congratulate all the successful students of the GHA School of Health Studies. I am pleased and proud to say that the School is also playing a key role in the ongoing work led by my colleague, the Minister for Education, towards setting up a University of Gibraltar.

In partnership with the Department of Education, we are monitoring the number of local students undertaking healthcare-related programmes in the UK in order to plan for the future workforce of the GHA.

995 But, Mr Speaker, the provision of education does not end here. For healthcare professionals to maintain and improve their skills and knowledge for the benefit of patient care, we have set up a comprehensive programme of continuing professional development. This is multi-disciplinary, offering modules of study for a variety of academic levels reflecting the health and care needs of the people of Gibraltar. The majority of these modules are generic in nature as we continue to encourage staff to accumulate academic credit as they work towards a diploma or degree in healthcare practice. All of this has been achieved as a result of the professionalism and commitment of the staff at the School of Health Studies and with our partners at 1000 Kingston University and St George's University.

Mr Speaker, the development and modernisation of the Gibraltar Ambulance Service continues to be a priority for this Government. We have recently appointed a new Chief Ambulance Officer, who started in his new role on 1st March 2014. As with all other sectors of the GHA, training for the Ambulance Service 1005 continues to be a priority. As previously mentioned, four members of the Ambulance Service completed their paramedic training. We are in the process of making the required changes to our legislation, and once this has been completed the newly qualified paramedics will have at their disposal the whole range of clinical interventions and drug-administration regimes which are available to their UK counterparts. Paramedic care at this level has been shown to not only save lives in seriously ill and injured patients, but 1010 also to improve the general outcomes for a whole range of other patients in the pre-hospital arena, plus they will be able to use their newly acquired knowledge and skills to support their emergency medical technician colleagues.

Mr Speaker, other training programmes have included 16 GHA ambulance staff undertaking training in marine emergencies, and the Ambulance Service now, for the first time ever, has the capability of 1015 responding to maritime emergencies in our coastal waters. Thirteen staff were trained in chemical, biological, radioactive and nuclear equipment and readiness to UK standards.

Mr Speaker, the GHA's vehicle procurement plan is well underway and has already replaced the bulk of the ambulance fleet. In total, five new vehicles have arrived, which have included patient transport ambulances and High Dependency Unit ambulances. Prior to this plan, the fleet had been in a poor and 1020 dangerous condition and largely not fit for purpose, placing patients and staff at risk. I am committed to never again allowing the fleet to age to the point where almost total replacement was urgently required within a short timeframe.

Mr Speaker, the pharmacy department now has a community pharmacist who replaced many of the functions of Mr William Mito Guillem, who retired earlier this year and whom I would like to thank for his 1025 many years of service in setting up and running the Prescription Pricing and Advisory Unit (PPAU). The pharmacy department continually strives to improve the service it provides. As new initiatives, it has introduced double checks for all dispensing, with drug labels carrying two signatures; wards have greater input from pharmacists on a daily basis; and this year has seen the introduction of an emergency drugs cupboard for out of hours, which is proving very effective and allows patients to receive medication in a 1030 timely manner. Another initiative which is being explored is the introduction of patients' own drugs cabinets.

Mr Speaker, another major achievement has been the transposition of all handwritten prescriptions into the electronic prescribing record system. Huge piles of unrecorded prescriptions had been the norm in the past, a real danger to patients. I can now confirm that, for the first time ever since its inception 1035 approximately eight years ago, all handwritten prescriptions generated and presented to the PPAU are now in the system. This translates to up-to-date patient medication records and therefore increases patient safety issues. This is just one of the hidden issues that I have been discovering since coming into office. Fortunately, it has now been dealt with.

Mr Speaker, this year has seen significant improvements and updates to the pathology equipment base and laboratory information system. The majority of the biochemistry, haematology and coagulation 1040 analysers have been replaced. This will ensure that all equipment is reliable, robust and current.

Mr Speaker, we are also in the process of introducing new tests. In 2003, a NICE guideline recommended that pregnant women should be offered screening for Downs Syndrome. At present, the GHA offers all mothers-to-be a blood test at 12 weeks to screen for Downs Syndrome, but this only gives a 1045 67% detection rate. In 2007, the NICE guidelines recommended that all women should be offered screening tests, with detection rates above 75%. The non-invasive prenatal test (NIPT) will soon become available to Gibraltar mothers. The advantage of this test – a blood sample taken at eight weeks – is that it is 99.9% accurate for detection of Downs Syndrome and will save many families from the stress and anxiety of having a stressful test – amniocentesis – which is done by inserting a needle and taking a sample of fluid 1050 around the baby and carries a higher risk of miscarriage. At present, this test is only offered in the private sector and Gibraltar will be the first ever national programme of that type anywhere in the world, and it will be available as from 14th July to women of Gibraltar, who will have the latest and most advanced test with the least disturbance and anxiety.

1055 Mr Speaker, our aim to computerise patient notes remains as strong as ever. We are very aware of the benefits that this will bring to the service, including increased patient safety by reducing or correcting errors; improved shared decision making; more accurate and efficient transferability of records; and clinical and administrative time savings. Since 2007, the GHA identified electronic patient records (EPR) as the way forward in modernising and improving our Health Service, but the previous administration stood idle and took no notice or action on this, to the detriment of progress and of the service. This Government has 1060 seen and witnessed the importance of this project and has committed itself fully to this initiative. I can inform this House that the GHA issued an OJEU advert on 27th November 2013, and the Electronic Health Record Programme Board, which I chair, has been set up to oversee this project and ensure it is delivered on time.

1065 Mr Speaker, in the periphery of the work being undertaken with the EPR project, other initiatives and improvements are taking place. The Information Systems Team have developed in-house clinical applications to manage various requirements for monitoring and managing patients or specific clinical initiatives. Other new initiatives are being worked on, including a new look to the existing system and a diabetic clinic system. These new systems will be integrated once the full EPR system is in place.

1070 Mr Speaker, the Information Technology Team continue to manage the GHA's computer and network infrastructure and are involved in various development programmes, such as the design and build of the new data centre, and the installation of a histopathology system, which will enable the computerisation of all results in this area of pathology services and to fully integrate with existing systems, also involved in the installation of a hospital Wi-Fi network; improvements to the virtual clustered server environment; new backup and disaster recovery systems for business continuity; and supporting other GHA projects, such as 1075 the new mental health facility.

1080 Mr Speaker, the GHA launched its new website and social media presence on 17th July 2013. The website was designed and developed completely in house. Since its launch in July last year, the website has received 48,506 unique visits, 158,986 page views, and the average site visit lasted for approximately five minutes. The website has also received 409 e-mail enquiries, and 164 service users cancelled their appointments online. Prior to the launch, the previous website had received a total of 384 unique visitors, 1,983 page views, and the average visit had lasted three seconds. They can't have been very impressed with what they saw!

1085 Mr Speaker, in keeping with our manifesto commitment of making alternative arrangements to improve the delivery of meals and consequently their quality, I can inform this House that the feasibility study commissioned for the relocation of the catering facility to St Bernard's Hospital has been completed and the project is now in the construction phase. The new facility has been designed to cater for a bulk meal service; however, discussions are already underway to phase in this service as a pilot prior to the completion and relocation of the facility. Works to accumulate the bulk meals service within the wards are proceeding.

1090 On medical records, Mr Speaker, I am pleased to inform this House that the exercise to relocate all active patient medical files to the new Medical Records Library was successfully completed in December last year. This new facility will provide spacious and functional accommodation for the safe storage and retrieval of medical records and improve the working environment for staff.

1095 Mr Speaker, the sponsored patients department continues to see an increased trend in the number of patients being referred to various UK and Spanish centres for tertiary treatments, due to the fact that healthcare continues to become even more specialised and more options become available for patients. The Government will continue to support this programme, but is always mindful of exploring options for repatriation of both diagnostic and treatment services and of keeping services as close to home as possible to ensure patient and family comfort and to offer a wider choice to our people. Following on these lines, we 1100 have formally established a service level agreement with Xanit International Hospital, which has fixed prices and provides the opportunity for tertiary referrals close to home for a wide variety of medical conditions. Discussions with other centres are also in progress.

1105 Mr Speaker, the number of referrals processed by the GHA's sponsored patients department will continue to increase. In order to ensure that the department continues to provide an excellent service, an internal review of the department and its services is currently being conducted in keeping with the Government's manifesto commitment to this effect. Changes to the conditions and allowances are being considered and will be concluded within this financial year. As an interim measure, and as from 1st August this year, the maximum allowance payable to patients and escorts staying with friends and relatives will be increased by approximately £75 a week each to equal half of the amount given for staying in rented 1110 accommodation. This will assist these patients and their relatives, who often receive very meagre allowances.

Mr Speaker, the radiology department has been a pioneer within the GHA as regards information systems and electronic requesting. There have been ongoing developments within the field of teleradiology and patient images and reports can now be sent abroad directly through secure log-in accounts to users anywhere, anytime.

The tender for the procurement of the new CT scanner is going through due process via the Government's central procurement office and I expect it will be in place during this financial year.

Mr Speaker, not surprisingly, I continue to support initiatives by GHA management and those by the GHA's very active Environmental Task Group. The GHA continues to be proactive in reducing the environmental impact brought about by the use of its facilities and services. There are various environmentally friendly initiatives aimed at reducing energy consumption, enhancing energy conservation, recovery and the reduction of operational costs. Some of these initiatives include an LED lighting scheme, with the aim of replacing conventional lighting throughout the GHA; a smart metering solution has been recently commissioned to ensure we are able to monitor power usage throughout St Bernard's Hospital; the installation of heat recovery systems, which ensures the recovery of heat load generated from the air-conditioning system in order to provide hot water, already installed at the new mental health facility; a new solar thermal plant will be installed at St Bernard's Hospital – it is expected this plant will provide up to 60% of the Hospital's hot water, with considerable savings in fuel costs. Other projects include the introduction of recycling bins for paper and cardboard and electronic equipment.

1130

Mr Speaker, improving mental health services remains one of our top priorities. A large proportion of the work done over the past year in mental health relates primarily to the new facility due to open this year. Through a process of discussions with a number of groups – including staff, service users, carers, support groups and relatives – major changes will be seen in the way Mental Health operates.

1135

Among some of the improvements will be the ability to offer more appropriate placements for patients during their journey through the reconfigured facility. The new facility will also see the introduction of a variety of new services and programmes, including a sheltered employment programme in partnership with the Club House Project; an activity and recreational centre offering structured programmes; and the introduction of open-air exercise equipment in the garden to promote a healthy living initiative, linked with the Well Man and Well Woman groups. All these programmes are being developed to assist full integration into society and giving patients the opportunity for a better future.

Mr Speaker, another area which required great attention was the Community Mental Health Unit. This facility is currently undergoing a major refurbishment programme to all existing areas, which will include an extension to the existing building, which will house two extra consultation rooms and a secure area to house all the clinical notes.

1145

Mr Speaker, when I came into office I made a promise of never again allowing the Mental Health Service to deteriorate to the level that I found it. (Banging on desks) I maintain this commitment, and I am pleased to inform this House that we are well on the way to having a mental health facility and service of which Gibraltar can be proud.

1150

Mr Speaker, due to the increasing demand of services for dementia patients, resources have been reconfigured and staff have successfully completed further training in this field in order to offer more support to this client group and their families. Keeping to the subject of improving services and facilities for dementia patients and support for relatives and carers, the Dementia Day Facility Steering Group continues to work on this project with a target date for completion late this year. This group is also developing the Dementia Strategy for Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker – (Interjection) There is a lot more to go: we have been very busy this year, Mr Speaker! (Interjections)

Perhaps the biggest success story of this past year has been the opening of the new day surgery unit, with its extended opening hours and specialised staff. This unit has the ability to do more procedures as day surgery, reducing the need for overnight stay and the use of much needed in-patient beds. Most healthcare providers worldwide are working hard to implement this model of surgery as the norm for the vast majority of surgical procedures, as there are multiple benefits for the patient and healthcare provider. In the UK, around 70% of all surgery is carried out in this way and the NHS is trying hard to improve on this number. I am proud to say that the GHA's day surgery programme has revolutionised surgery at the GHA and now accounts for nearly 85%, in April, of all surgery, compared to just 33% in January 2013. I have to thank all the staff concerned, who have spearheaded the project themselves and responded to this change admirably.

Mr Speaker, the aim of the GHA's day surgery programme is not just about numbers, but about a service which follows international best practice, contributes towards a safer service and aims at improving patient and staff satisfaction and outcomes. The success of this is evidenced by the numerous letters and positive patient feedback received, highlighting its excellence.

The opening of the new Day Surgery Unit, together with the introduction also this year of the third operating theatre suite, which had practically remained inactive since the opening of the new Hospital, have been major factors in addressing some of the challenges which were being faced by the Health Service:

1175 long surgical waiting lists in every speciality and the unavailability of hospital beds. The number of cancelled operations due to bed shortages has dropped massively since last summer, with only two cancellations during the usual difficult winter season between October and March. (Banging on desks and interjection) This compares to a peak of 70 cancellations in 2011-12, when the former management was in place and the policies of the previous administration lingered. The average cancellations in these months during the last winter were 0.4 per month, compared with averages of nine, fourteen and seven per month in the previous three winters. Mr Speaker, the scourge of the GHA – cancellation of operations at short notice due to lack of beds – is a thing of the past and banished to the memory of the dark days of the GSD. (1180 Banging on desks)

Also significant is a drop in the number of patients waiting for surgery. (Interjection) Comparing April 2012 with March 2013 and March 2014, the total numbers of patients waiting were 986, 1,030 and 626 respectively. This is equivalent to a reduction by about a third in the past year. If those patients already booked for surgery are removed from the list, the total drops even further to 467, or half the figure. (1185

Mr Speaker, even though there are still surgical specialities which continue to present a challenge, through a number of initiatives – such as increasing the visits by visiting surgeons and undertaking weekend initiatives – with the ability to use three theatres and day surgery, we will continue to improve on these figures.

1190 Progress in other waiting lists can also be seen: for example, in urodynamics there has been a drop from 30 to 13 weeks. Even in orthopaedics – which remains the biggest challenge, due to a longstanding waiting list – the outpatient wait has dropped from an unacceptable 10 months to six months. This is still not acceptable and we are on track to resolving this in the coming year, but it shows a clear improvement over the past year.

1195 Mr Speaker, I am proud to say that waiting lists are falling and waiting times reducing. Put another way, we have slashed waiting lists and waiting times unrecognisably. Other factors which have contributed to achieving these successes have been a more proactive management of lists and beds, and more engagement by clinicians in the direction and development of theatre activity. This is hugely significant. The clinicians, nurses, doctors and allied professionals are all actively involved in taking and actioning decisions, working with technical, administrative and support staff, from attendants and labourers to craftsmen and domestics who, as we know, keep the GHA in sparkling condition. And it works: the GHA is once again becoming a team. (1200

Mr Speaker, I would be falling short of my duty if I did not here mention the work being done in partnership with the Care Agency in providing care packages and support in order to facilitate discharges of patients from St Bernard's Hospital. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) This is in addition to the work that has been carried out by the Care Agency again in opening the John Mackintosh Wing at the old St Bernard's site. This facility, temporarily accommodating residents of the Jewish Home, will cater for frail, elderly patients and will allow the GHA to free up much needed hospital beds, allowing it to continue its elective programme and maintain its emergency capacity with no disruptions or safety issues. (1205

1210 Mr Speaker, allied health professionals are an integral part of our healthcare system and have been involved in the past year in the introduction of new services, and are working to implement even more.

Keeping in line with improvements done to the GHA's waiting list and waiting times, another success story is the physiotherapy out-patient waiting list, which reached an unacceptable 400 in October 2013, following loss of staff, with a waiting time of 20 weeks. Since January 2014, I am glad to say that this initiative has yielded very positive results, with the waiting time now standing at only three weeks. The physiotherapy department, together with other healthcare professionals, have worked towards the implementation of NICE guidelines for the management of non-specific lower back pain. (1215

The audiology department is working with the Nuffield Centre in the UK to set up a comprehensive neonatal screening programme.

1220 The waiting list for hearing aids is in the process of being reduced.

Waiting times for orthotics and optometry are just two weeks. During 2013, the optometry department introduced a contact lens service. Apart from a few patients who need to be referred to Moorfields Eye Hospital in the UK due to the need for more specialised treatment, the majority of patients are now seen locally; this being in line with the Government's commitment to repatriate services. (1225

The occupational therapy staff continue to work tirelessly on the backlog of environmental works which stretched back to 2007. By prioritising these works, for the first time in years this backlog has now been eliminated.

1230 The 'Early Birds' training programme started in March 2014. This programme is jointly run by the paediatric occupational therapist and speech language therapist, and is designed specifically for parents, to help them with understanding and giving them practical coping strategies to implement at home and in school for their child with a recent diagnosis of autism. In line with our policy on autism, staff also attended the National Autism Conference held in the UK and gained excellent knowledge and skills from the workshops to ensure best practice is followed for this service. I am particularly satisfied at the progress

1235 being made in providing support for families where autistic spectrum disorder has been diagnosed. I will continue to actively support this work and I have encouraged parents of children with autism to form a support group, with which I will continue to work.

1240 Indeed, Mr Speaker, I continue to meet regularly with too many groups to mention separately, and will continue to work together with them to achieve greater improvements. Some of the initiatives resulting from working with these groups have included and will include the introduction of free diabetic-specific medicines for all type-1 diabetics; the introduction, for the first time, of guaranteed annual reviews of type-1 diabetics by a consultant; prostate cancer screening service; improved lymphoedema service; plans to work on sexual health initiatives; talking lifts in St Bernard's Hospital to assist the visually impaired.

1245 Mr Speaker, I am pleased to report that after lengthy negotiations with Unite the Union, a firm proposal to resolve the issue of the consultant contract has now been put to Unite the Union, which represents the consultants. These negotiations threw up new claims, not anticipated when I reported to this House last year, which resulted in the discussions being extended. We remain committed to also review the contracts of our non-consultant hospital doctors.

1250 Mr Speaker, in line with our manifesto commitment of making the General Medical Council (GMC) the regulatory body in Gibraltar for the medical profession, after meeting with the Department of Health and the GMC in London, we have made huge progress on this and expect soon to be in the position to implement. We have already identified the responsible officer for Gibraltar and we are in the process of drafting the necessary legislation. Further progress has been a service level agreement with Health Education England to deliver the mandatory appraisal programme for all our medical staff, which is a crucial part of the revalidation process. This will represent a massive step forward for the GHA in maintaining the skills, competency and quality of our medical staff and one which will have a lasting and positive impact on the standard of healthcare in Gibraltar. The GHA has supported its doctors in dealing with this change in practice, which has included the GMC's own moves towards a stricter licensing regime. There has been and will continue to be full consultation with doctors in both the public and the private sectors as the process is rolled out in the coming year.

1260 Mr Speaker, an associate specialist in accident and emergency will shortly be appointed, which will improve the management and leadership of the medical team in this department, improve medical cover and hopefully reduce waiting times for patients. Together with the plan to have a 24-hour receptionist presence at A&E, improvements in this area are envisaged.

1265 Mr Speaker, at the beginning of my presentation this afternoon, I identified that one of the problems that we continue to have is access to GP appointments. The system for the provision of advanced appointments changed in August 2013. The appointment system changed from a three-months cycle to a monthly cycle. This seems a better solution than the previous system, but I acknowledge that no system is perfect and this one is not without its problems. Notwithstanding the improvements that the new system represents, it is clear that more work is still required. Analysis of available data on patient numbers reveals an increase in the number of users eligible for the service. This increase in demand is a challenge that is being discussed with both service users and service providers.

1275 I acknowledge, Mr Speaker, that there are complaints with regard to lack of access to services by telephone, especially at peak times of the morning. I take these concerns very seriously and attempts continue to be made to improve access to services. The problem is largely due to the large number of persons who phone in over a short period. Even though there are lines in use and 60 callers get a recorded message, the system as it stands gives the impression that from the 61st caller that the phones are either off the hook or not attended. I assure you that this is not so, and I pay tribute to the staff at the Primary Care Centre for their commitment and hard work in challenging circumstances. We continue to work on these issues.

1280 Ongoing developments to help improve the service include extra phone lines; booking appointments through the internet; further improvements to the repeat prescription system; texted appointments now introduced for those with sensory impairment; analysing further the GP workload; exploring different models which may change the way appointments are offered with the aim of improving the quality of the GP-patient interaction and increasing the availability of GP appointments.

1285 Other developments which will improve the current services include the following: Extra clinics are currently being constructed, which will ease the pressure of clinic space felt by all clinicians. Specific children's clinics will very shortly be introduced, and nurse practitioners who are now able to prescribe from the full formulary. All of these developments will result in the problems experienced by the public in accessing primary care becoming a thing of the past.

1290 Mr Speaker, the GHA's hard facilities management services are provided through the Estates and Clinical Engineering section, which is staffed by staff seconded from the Gibraltar Electricity Authority. This covers the GHA's substantial estate across multiple sites. The team is responsible for planning and co-ordinating major works, many of which I have already mentioned. Engineering and maintenance support is 1295 provided for the estates' engineering infrastructure as well as the maintenance, repair and calibration of medical plant, clinical equipment and medical gases.

Mr Speaker, the Estates and Clinical Engineering team attended to a total of 1,892 breakdown and repair requisitions and 459 after-hours call outs. This represents a fall of 7% over the previous year. Their hard work and commitment sees the GHA's premises function with a high degree of excellence and has reduced the backlog of servicing and commissioning to zero.

1300 Last year, the Government maintained the GHA's substantially increased capital expenditure funding. This has allowed the GHA to develop important projects necessary to improve facilities and continue to make progress with its medical equipment life cycle replacement programme, which ensures that our clinicians are supported with modern technology that is now an integral part of healthcare delivery. This investment in capital for the Health Service will continue this year.

1305 Mr Speaker, I will now wrap up by mentioning a few ongoing initiatives which have seen recent progress or which you will see during the coming year.

Mr Speaker, building an extension into the surrounding grounds will expand the area available for patients in cardiac rehabilitation, physiotherapy and occupational therapy.

1310 For the first time in over 20 years, a Medical Advisory Committee has been set up, made up of the doctors and dentists in the GHA. This is a manifesto commitment and essential in enhancing clinical involvement.

1315 The pathway for stroke care is at present being developed by a steering group of healthcare professionals under the direction of a specialist stroke consultant from the UK. This pathway will introduce the use of new technology, which will transform the way healthcare is provided in Gibraltar. Telemedicine, which we are developing, will enable the A&E team to receive prompt advice from a skilled stroke consultant in the UK when a patient presents with a stroke to the A&E department. It will give medical and nursing staff in A&E support and advice on how to manage individual care. This will be by confirming diagnosis or making a differential diagnosis based on an expert assessment using a remote video-based consultation, a service which will be available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, thus improving the outcome for the patients. The use of this technology will start with stroke care, but will then continue to cover other specialities such as neurology, general medicine, general surgery, orthopaedics and others.

1320 Mr Speaker, there have been an additional five defibrillators placed in public areas around Gibraltar, with a further one due to be installed when some refurbishment works are completed. The first ones ever, 10 in total, were placed by the Government last year.

1325 Mr Speaker, 10 new Gibraltarians have been born as a result of this Government's introduction of IVF, and there are further pregnancies at the moment. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, online access to British sign language interpretation for assisting access to healthcare by the profoundly deaf will allow such service users a dignified and informed access to this healthcare.

1330 For the first time since moving to St Bernard's new site, comprehensive fire planning and fire training has been provided to key workers in GHA sites.

The GHA is working with staff from the office of the ombudsman to redraft how complaints will be managed in the future, with the aim of addressing complaints more efficiently and to have more transparency and independence in the process. The final draft of the new complaints process with the accompanying changes to the legislation are expected to be completed by the end of the year.

1335 Mr Speaker, in keeping in line with being up to date on EU directives, the Ministry set up a steering group to review the EU directive on cross-border healthcare and facilitate its implementation. Member states were given until October last year to implement the directive and the Commission will be monitoring the process to ensure that this is implemented fully across the EU. I am pleased to announce that after introducing new legislation – the Cross Border Healthcare Regulation 2013 – setting up a national contact point and the GHA Prior Authorisation Committee, all transposition was completed on time, by 25th October 2013.

1345 Mr Speaker, the International Health Regulations (IHR), these regulations, which govern the processing of medical issues at our entry points, are due to come into force very shortly. The last administration had not given this priority, which would have left Gibraltar exposed at having inferior facilities at its entry points, especially its port, with the consequent effects on our reputation and success as a destination. I am pleased to say that once more this administration has worked with tremendous interdepartmental collaboration and efficiency and the Regulations will be published within weeks. This has not just meant the publishing of the Regulations, but ensuring that the processes are agreed and in place.

1350 Mr Speaker, I would like to finish by sharing some examples of success and positive feedback, which is a reflection of the excellent work being carried out throughout the GHA.

Mr Speaker, from humble beginnings, dermatology in Gibraltar has grown over the years into a great service, to the full credit of the dermatology team. Evidence of this excellent service is the fact that one of the nurses leading this service, Ms Linda Castro, was placed in second place in the category of Dermatology Nurse of the Year in the UK. This is testimony to the professionalism and excellence of Linda 1355 in particular, but also of the other employees and the service in general. The unit is shortly to have improved facilities at the reconfigured Primary Care Centre, and recently held an extremely successful skin cancer awareness day and walk-in service with the collaboration of Unite, which received hundreds of visitors. This is a good point to mention the importance the Government gives to protecting the health of the community. To this end, future Government-organised or sponsored events will have available free 1360 sunscreen and ear protection.

Mr Speaker, please allow me to quote just a few of the feedback that has recently been received.
From a CCU patient:

‘Having been admitted to CCU suffering from a Pulmonary Embolism the quality of the doctors and nursing staff was off the chart. These guys are on the go for the whole shift yet their bedside manners and care was tremendous.’

And just one other:

1365 ‘It is most often the case that people will only write to you to complain about the service received from your organisation or take issue with a particular instance, action or aspect of the service. On this occasion, however, my wife and I would like to congratulate you on the thoroughly professional yet deeply caring manner which we were dealt with during our time at the Maternity Unit.’

There are many more.

Mr Speaker, as I conclude, I must thank all the nearly 1,000 staff of the Ministry and the Authority for their commitment, hard work, professionalism and the support they give me in performing my duties. All 1370 our healthcare workers and support staff will forever remain our heroes. I wish to thank them all for their sterling work and performance, at times undertaken in very difficult and challenging circumstances.

I also want to thank the members of the various committees and boards in relation to both my Ministries, for their work and sense of public duty, and extend these thanks to associations and others in the voluntary sector who pay a tremendous role in improving and sustaining the health of our community.

1375 Mr Speaker, I am conscious of the responsibility that I and my team carry on our shoulders as we are entrusted with a budget of about £100 million. I can assure you, Mr Speaker, that never before will such money have been better spent, for we will see real improvements in the service that we provide.

Mr Speaker, there have been huge improvements in the Health Service provided in Gibraltar – I would say unprecedented in any similar period – but I am not satisfied: it is not enough. I have already said that my main areas of concern are access to primary care and A&E. There are a few other areas where improvements have lagged. Some of these include some of the services provided by visiting consultants. I am pleased to report that I am undertaking an incisive review of these services, in discussion with major UK providers, which will show marked improvements in the coming months. I am also committed to exploring new, alternative pathways and avenues of treatment as a way of increasing the range of services 1380 available to our community.

Mr Speaker, among the difficulties we face is the need for space, both in the Primary Care Centre and at St Bernard’s, particularly as we consider the possibility of repatriating diagnostic services, such as MRI scans, to Gibraltar. I am therefore hugely pleased and proud to announce that the Government will shortly embark on the construction of a new wing at St Bernard’s Hospital, which will allow the GHA to relocate many of those services which are short of space and facilitate the repatriation of services. This will be a separate building located in the central courtyard and is already being designed.

Mr Speaker, we will continue to develop this service. Our ambition is for Gibraltar to have a Health Service second to none – a service in which we can all take pride, services which will reach beyond our hospitals and provide care where it is needed most: at home and in our community. A commitment to learn and improve and a focus on partnership will allow the GHA to succeed. This commitment is what defines this Government and this Gibraltar Health Authority. The coming year will be a memorable one for our Health Service.
1395

Mr Speaker, this Government of the GSLP and Liberals came into office with a promise of change. As I have clearly demonstrated with reference to both my portfolios, it is not change that has been delivered: it has been a veritable transformation. Thank you. (Applause and banging on desks) (A Member: Hear, hear.)

ADJOURNMENT

Clerk: Mr Speaker, sitting of Parliament, Tuesday, 1st July. Second reading of the Appropriation Bill 2014. Budget speeches continue.

5 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr James Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I stand to deliver my 19th Budget address.

I will commence with matters to do with utilities first, followed by the environment, and lastly health and safety.

10 Mr Speaker, in relation to the power station, this is an area of concern due to the Government's inability to prioritise Gibraltar's important project, which is the new power station. As we have stated a number of times, the new incoming Government had the right not to proceed with the previous GSD Government project in relation to the power station, even when initial clearance work had already started. But to be in a position, almost three years after being elected, without a clear position with regard to Gibraltar's future needs with regard to power supply in a safe manner, given the site chosen, is incredible.

15 The Hon. Chief Minister's smokescreen for not pursuing the GSD Government's scheme for a new permanent power station is down to 'Had we continued with the GSD scheme we would have been saddled with a £120 million project,' or 'It was in the wrong location,' or 'Not the best available technology in environmentally friendly options,' or 'The consumer would have had massive increases per year for diesel consumption.'

20 The reality, Mr Speaker, is that when the Chief Minister quotes the £120 million, he is deliberately obfuscating the fact that such an amount was for a complete package inclusive of £20 million for associated infrastructural works, as opposed to the plant itself. The price also included a new office block for Gibelec. The location surely would not have been as bad as placing say a new football stadium at Europa Point, which the Chief Minister is adamant in doing, come hell or high water.

As far as technology is concerned, within the diesel types of engines, they were the best available technology at the time as advised by the experts. Or is the Chief Minister going to contradict the advice given to us by officials and experts in this field then? In addition to this, the IPPC Committee, which deals with such matters pursuant to European legislation, approved the scheme.

30 We do not make an apology for the fact that, based on grounds of safety, we ruled out having a dual fire plant run by diesel and gas. We do believe – then and now – that placing liquefied natural gas storage tanks so near to an area which is densely populated is a mistake and we are prepared to say it. Frankly, even if we need to pay more money in order to have higher standards of health and safety to avoid an accident ever happening in the proximity of a residential estate within the west side of Gibraltar, which would have colossal consequences if ever it were to happen, we would do it.

35 On the other hand, the Chief Minister is not in a position to preach to anyone about value for money, given that he has lost control of recurrent expenditure under his watch as Chancellor. This is a typical example of the pot calling the kettle black.

40 The Government also needs to be transparent in the way the Government handles projects of this kind. Throughout the period of this Government, I have been asking in Parliament on numerous occasions for all relevant copies of technical, environmental and health and safety reports, only to be stonewalled with evasive answers in order to deny a Member of the Opposition from being able to scrutinise the Government on such an important project for Gibraltar.

45 Mr Speaker, it is inconceivable that such an attitude would prevail in the House of Commons, the Scottish Parliament or the Welsh Assembly, or indeed in any municipality across the United Kingdom. Any project of this kind in any part of the UK would allow automatically the Members of the Opposition with instant access to all relevant information in order to allow proper scrutiny of the executive. However, here in Gibraltar the view that prevails by the Government is that accountability and transparency lie in the number of occasions that Parliament meets, as opposed to being transparent on its action in Parliament by providing the Opposition with information it seeks in order to have a debate on equal terms.

50 Mr Speaker, moving on: lack of a holistic plan. Another issue of concern that needs to be highlighted is the whole approach by Government in relation to projects that either are of the Government or private ones which are to be developed in close proximity to each other in the west side of Gibraltar and the port area.

55 In order to illustrate this point, we have a sullage tank to be operated again at the North Mole in close proximity of the cruise liners; liquefied natural gas storage tanks to be placed on the Detached Mole; ship-to-ship bunkering from the Detached Mole; laying of pipes on the sea floor connecting the liquefied natural gas storage tanks to the new power station; a new power station; and a new boats marina. And along the perimeter of all these projects we have an airport on one side, housing estates – including the new one to be built in the former coach park – and on the other side, a nuclear berth for submarines, not to mention the movement of cruise liners either inside the port or outside. Yet the Government approach to this matter is cavalier, ad hoc, covered in secrecy and dangerous.

60 On a number of occasions I have asked the Government in Parliament if they have undertaken a specialist holistic analysis of all the development within this area in order to protect the public, only to be informed by the Deputy Chief Minister that such a study is not necessary and each individual project is considered on its own merit at the Development and Planning Commission. In truth, we in the Opposition are not the only ones calling for this approach to developments in this whole area. The Environmental Safety Group is also advocating the same. Yet, whilst the argument is compelling to do so for the good of the environment and for health and safety matters, the Government refuses to do so. It beggars belief that the Government is so intransigent on such an important matter that has the potential to put people's lives at risk through their stubbornness.

70 Mr Speaker, moving to the environment, and on expenditure I notice that the sums estimated and required in the year ending 31st March 2015 for salaries, wages and expenses of the Environment, as reflected in head 14 Environment, is £12,862,000. This is £1,453,000 less than the estimate for the financial year 2013-14. This is in large measure due to the fact that subhead 2(6) Relief Cover, as shown on page 55 of the draft Estimate Book, amounting to a total of £1,938,000, has been transferred to a private company called Gibraltar Cleansing Services Ltd, under the control of the Employment Ministry, as shown on page 86 of the draft Estimate Book. Therefore, given this significant reorganisation of funds away from the management of the Environment Department, it requires a proper explanation by the Government as to why this has been deemed necessary. I certainly look forward to listening to why there has been a need for this and how such a decision will improve or hinder the services that the Department of the Environment needs to provide, although I notice that the Minister, from his very brief speech yesterday, he did not mention anything about this.

75 The other point I would like to make about expenditure, Mr Speaker, is that even if we add the total amount for the Department as shown in the draft of £12,862,000, plus the £1,938,000 transferred to this private company under the control of the Employment Department, this brings a grand total of £14,800,000. This is £710,970 more than the actual expenditure under the last full financial year of the GSD Government during 2010-11. So, even after adjusting for inflation during this intervening period, this lifts the sum requested by the Minister for his Department in comparable amounts to that under the GSD Government. An amazing fact, given that what one gets from the Minister of the Environment is constant rubbishing of the GSD's period in Government. For the Hon. Minister, it is all down to either the GSD did not do anything for the environment, or if we did it was all wrong and bad. This, despite the fact that he was the GSD Government adviser at the time and never felt it necessary to resign on principle from those duties then from the horrendous things he says now.

90 This also gives me the opportunity, on behalf of the Opposition, to congratulate Dr Liesl Mesilio-Torres for now holding the position of Chief Executive of the Department. I know Liesl well, and I am aware of how capable she is. We in the GSD are extremely proud that Liesl was the first individual employed in order to create a new Department of Environment, given that the GSLP before us did not believe in having such a Department nor in employing 90% of the current staff that the existing Minister now has at his disposal. But of course we would not expect recognition of this by the Minister.

100 Mr Speaker, moving on to renewable energy, as I did last year, I would like to start by giving credit where credit is due, then moving on to things that have not been that great, and finalising with things that have gone badly.

One of the most exciting things that has materialised in the last 12 months, at least for me, is the Government agreement with the company, Eco Wave Ocean Power Plant for the provision of an initial 0.5 megawatt energy device on the east side, with a view to further expansion to a full 5 megawatt plant if the project is successful, this being a technology based on harnessing surface wave energy by the use of specific buoys to capture and convert such energy. I noticed the words in the Government press statement, quote:

‘if the project is successful’

and I can understand why this is so. The reality is that we are talking, by and large, of new technologies that need to be tried and tested in situ, and I think this the right approach. Needless to say, all of us in this Chamber would like this project to succeed for the benefit of our community. These and other technologies were followed with great interest in my days while I was the Environment Minister, but unfortunately the technology had not developed sufficiently enough to warrant being introduced in Gibraltar back then in those days.

Clearly, with the passage of time more and more technologies are becoming available and whilst I notice the Minister’s response to my question about underwater current technology not being available for another 10 years or so, we should never stop from being kept abreast of development in this field, as I believe this to have the potential of giving a tremendous boost to a constant source of clean renewable energy for the future.

Mr Speaker, on netting for the Municipal Waste Station and fiscal incentive for the environment, credit too should be given for the placing of a net over the Municipal Waste Transfer Station at Europa Advance Road; thereby, according to the Minister, no longer having an issue of rubbish flying out from the site onto the surrounding cliffs or sea. I am pleased that the Minister paid notice to my question on this matter some time ago and that he has actioned a solution to this historical problem.

Also to be welcomed is a continuation of the GSD policy to use fiscal incentive measures as a means to make more environmentally friendly products more accessible to the public.

Mr Speaker, moving on to beaches, another project that seems to have gone well and which is almost complete is the work in Sandy Bay, both in relation to the construction of the two groynes and the submerged breakwater one, along with the regeneration of the beach itself. This no doubt will be enjoyed by many members of the public, hopefully for many years to come. Additionally, any extra biodiversity of marine life that prospers in the surrounding area is to be welcomed too.

Another area to be welcomed is the continued attendance by staff members of the Department of Environment in European seminars, the latest of which was in Greece in relation to matters to do with loss of biodiversity under the Natura 2000 programme. Such participation is important for a delegate in order to make aware other delegates of the particulars of our environment within the much wider picture of the Mediterranean and Europe. It is also an opportunity to extend our networking with other professionals in the field, thereby complementing the overall objectives.

Yet, Mr Speaker, whilst we have progress on one beach, we have stalemate on another, which is Western Beach. Clearly, to have progress in resolving the problems in Western Beach could only have been by pursuing two different avenues – the political, the legal, or both simultaneously.

The political has remained a non-starter as far as the La Linea Municipality is concerned, given that they do not have the necessary funds to do the infrastructural works needed; nor, it seems, from a regional basis as regards the Junta de Andalucía. The Junta, just like all other regional Governments in Spain, have been subjected to substantial cutbacks on their budget from Madrid as a result of the economic crisis, thereby being unable to provide such funding. Finally, on the political front, it seems that engaging Madrid is also a non-starter, given that the relations between the Madrid Government and Gibraltar are toxic and will remain so for some considerable time to come.

On the legal side, the Hon. Minister for the Environment has kept me informed confidentially of developments on the legal front. Unfortunately, this is a long and convoluted process, but the only one available to us right now.

I certainly am grateful to him for keeping me abreast of developments and the GSD Opposition will continue to conduct itself responsibly on this matter, placing the interests of the community first, which is the contrary to when the current Government were in Opposition and conducted orchestrated campaigns against the then GSD Government along with their friendly media press for not pursuing the matter with speed and vigour, something which is exactly what is happening today.

Mr Speaker, moving on to waste and waste water treatment plants, these are also important and essential projects for Gibraltar – namely the waste treatment plant and the waste water treatment plant – but the picture emanating is one of delays between the Government informing the public of such projects and the commencement of such; again something that, from the very brief speech of the Minister, he had nothing to say yesterday.

Take the case of the waste treatment plant. The Government informed the press way back in February 2013 – you can see the Gibraltar Chronicle of 16th February 2013 – of its decision to provide a new plant at the site of the old incinerator at the Europa Advance Road in order to treat the solid municipal waste with environmentally friendly technology. The Hon. Minister himself has had the consultant’s report on his desk since January 2013; and only last month, some 18 months later, the Minister responded to a Written Question to inform me that the tender is still under assessment.

The Hon. Minister knows that we have been taking our municipal waste in the past and in the present to the recycling plant in Los Barrios. This is a procedure which is fraught with problems, not least because of the impending compliance with the EU Landfill Directive for the amount of biodegradable waste that shall be allowed into the landfill. Yet, Mr Speaker, when I look at the draft Estimate Book, I do not see any entry for the commencement of this important project. The Government needs to inform Parliament whether this project will commence in this financial year or whether it is going to be paid from the Consolidated Fund or from Credit Finance Ltd, or indeed from any other source.

The same applies, Mr Speaker, to how the Government decide to proceed with the disposal of sewage. As we are aware, Gibraltar continues to discharge its raw sewage into the sea in contravention of EU Directives on this matter. The Government needs to make clear by when it will decide to award the tender for the proper treatment of raw sewage prior to discharging into the sea. Quite apart from doing so for good environmental reasons, we risk giving those who want to harm Gibraltar with a perfect opportunity to tarnish our reputation abroad.

The Government needs to inform Parliament whether, as a delay of implementation of this project, the British Government is incurring fines from the European Union or likely to happen any time soon; also whether the Government intends to proceed with this project, given that there is no provision within the draft Estimate Book – or perhaps it will, but by using money indirectly from the proceeds of the Savings Bank via Credit Finance Ltd. Either way, the Government needs to state what is happening in this important area of the environment.

Mr Speaker, fishing in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters: it has been over two years since the now infamous episode of Government policy being placed on Facebook – the statement by the Hon. the Minister for the Environment announcing that the laws of Gibraltar were to be enforced forthwith and that illegal fishing in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters would be stopped as per the Government manifesto commitment; an announcement since referred to, by the no less a body than the Chamber of Commerce, as a ‘rookie error’; an announcement which plunged Gibraltar into a dispute which still has no signs of resolution.

We have the unprecedented case of an unnecessary crisis that erupted in March 2012, which has seen the unabated fishing in our waters by the Spanish fishing fraternity and a crescendo of hostility as a result of the Government incompetence in handling such delicate matters. The Government position in this case has been that our laws need to be respected by the Spanish fishermen; yet it is amazing that when our Chief Minister was asked in the recently released programme Viajando con Chester as to why the Spanish fishermen were denied the opportunity of fishing our waters, the Chief Minister responded by saying that the fishermen were fishing without any hindrance. Given the Chief Minister’s response, one is entitled to ask why then the 1999 agreement was broken without notice, only to provide the fishermen with a licence to do whatever the fishermen decide to do, regardless of the laws passed by this Government. Why then plunge Gibraltar into a crisis of their own making with the consequences being paid by ordinary people on both sides of the frontier? The public is entitled to know until when is this crisis going to be prolonged, and when is the Government going to resolve the crisis it started?

Mr Speaker, moving on to Barbary Macaques, an important area where the Minister for the Environment is simply plodding along is with the problems with the Barbary Macaques. Within the figures provided by the Minister in terms of the population of the macaques, we see that the high-level rate of population was in 2006 with 242 macaques, followed by 241 in 2007 and in 2008. Following on from these figures, the population starts to drop to 212 in 2009; 182 in 2010; and in the last year of the GSD Government, 175 in 2011.

So what then, Mr Speaker, do we observe under the watch of the current Minister? I should add here that the watch of the Minister has existed for the last 20 years or so in which the Hon. Minister used to be the previous adviser on this matter. Well, in 2012, the population started to increase again to 183, from 175. Then, in 2013, it grows to 206; and in 2014, the figure is 225, although this figure needs to be adjusted for possible further births and deaths for the remainder of the year. So tentatively, under the watch of the current Minister, the population has increased by a further 50, taking the situation back to the levels that existed in 2004. So whilst the population of macaques decreased under the last years of the GSD Government, now it is increasing again under the GSLP Liberal Government.

So why then did the population drop by 67 in the last few years of the GSD Government, and why has the population increased by 50 in the two and a half years of the present Government? The answer lies in the fact that, in the last years of the GSD Government, a programme of culling was implemented due to the difficulties in exporting the macaques, which would have otherwise been the preferred option. Yet culling has been ruled out by the present Government due to the virulent campaign waged by the GSLP Liberal Opposition in tandem with animal rights organisations in the UK in order to tarnish the good name of Gibraltar abroad for their own selfish partisan interest over the interests of this community.

The irony of the situation, Mr Speaker, is that we have a Minister who has studied and written about Barbary Macaques for the last 20 to 30 years, yet today he has not released the Gibraltar Macaques Management Plan in order for the public to know what the Minister's objectives in this area are.

On 1st March 2013, The Times newspaper carried an article in which the Minister informed them that the Gibraltar Government would be exporting macaques to Morocco, Tunisia, safari parks in the UK and in Europe in order to alleviate the overpopulation problem in Gibraltar. Nonetheless, when I asked the Minister recently whether there had been any exportation of macaques, the answer was that no export has taken place.

So, some 15 months later, the Minister has not exported any macaques. We have a population on the rise, despite the new contraceptive scheme introduced under the current Government. We have more packs of macaques splitting than ever before, all conducting themselves into new groups or subgroups, searching for other areas closer to urban ones in order to settle – and all the Minister does is talk and more talk and more experts and the creation of more and more management committees.

At this rate, soon we will have a new inter-ministerial committee with participation with macaques for the study to resolve the problems of overpopulation, with meetings to be arranged perhaps at the Sunborn Hotel, with expenses paid by No. 6 Convent Place. The findings of all these meetings can then be submitted for consideration to the never-to-be-published Gibraltar Macaques Management Plan for the eventual reduction of the macaques overpopulation. Oh boy, talk about kicking the problem into the long grass!

Another failure within the policy of the Minister with regard to macaques is the enforcement of the new legislation for eradicating the illegal feeding of macaques either in the nature reserve or outside. Despite much publicity with regard to the illegality of feeding the monkeys, with press statements and literature about how the macaques' behaviour has been changed since feeding the monkeys the wrong food or overfeeding them, the only person cautioned for feeding the macaques has been one tourist. Is this how the Minister expects to end this unacceptable practice? What is the point of new laws when there is a huge gap between the law and enforcement? What is the point of surreptitiously bringing through the back door two new environmental protection officers with powers to enforce the provisions of wildlife wardens under the Nature Protection Act when the illegality of feeding the macaques goes on unabated?

And if all of this is not enough, the Minister commenced a strategy to get the monkeys back to the nature reserve, which imported into Gibraltar illegal noise pyrotechnics from Spain that do not comply with European legislation. The Minister, when informed about this in Parliament, adopted the attitude of seeking advice on the matter as a form of kicking another ball into the long grass. Quite frankly, why doesn't the Minister simply plead guilty to the charge and plead clemency on the grounds that his actions were motivated to placate the public outcry over the macaques' occupation of urban human areas? The fact that the Minister has a doctorate in natural sciences does not mean that he is omniscient.

Yet I have no doubt that when the Chief Minister's right of reply comes, he will continue to say that all of this is the GSD's fault and that they will, in due course, put things right. At least they can make a start by publishing the Gibraltar Macaques Management Plan, so that the public can be the judge of their policies in this important matter. But transparency and accountability is not one of the Governments fortes: why bother with transparency and accountability when we have more meetings of Parliament, Mr Speaker?

Moving to enforcement of litter regulations, back in 2013, the Minister for the Environment announced, to much fanfare, a new impetus in the fight to clamp down on people littering the streets by revamping the Litter Committee and by introducing much heavier fines to ensure that this practice would get eradicated. At the time, I remember thinking, 'Well, perhaps the Minister is serious about stamping out this practice by penalising such offenders with heavy fines.' I did therefore allow some time to monitor progress, but recently I asked for the number of litter tickets issued by either the RGP, the Environmental Agency or the Highways Enforcement Officers, and the response was that to date only six such tickets have been issued between 2013 and 2014. Again, we find ourselves in the same predicament as is the situation with the macaques. The Minister talks tough, makes many promises, but when it comes to action he is found wanting and certainly not making any difference to the state of our pavements on which many members of the public need to tread very carefully in order not to get stuck in dog foul. This is a fact that the hon. Minister does not need to go far to find the evidence, as he has it straight in front of St. Bernard's Hospital, amongst other places.

Mr Speaker, culling of seagulls, another subject not mentioned by the Minister in his very brief speech. Here again, the Minister has lost control of events. Looking at the figures provided by the Minister in Parliament, we have the following facts. In 2009, GONHS culled 4,562 seagulls and the then FERA company 3,812, making a total for the year of 8,374. In 2010, GONHS culled 4,075 and FERA 5,508, making a total for the year of 9,583. In 2011, GONHS culled 3,491 and FERA 5,708, making a total for the year of 9,199. In 2012, GONHS culled 3,391 and FERA 2,694, making it a total for the year of 6,085.

280 It should be said that the reason why FERA only culled 2,694 in that year was because the Minister decided to terminate the contract with FERA on the grounds that the work involved could be easily be done by GONHS. Therefore, the amount of money voted in Parliament for the work carried out by FERA – of £110,000 in the financial year 2012-2013 – moved practically in its totality to GONHS in the financial year 2013-14, making a total of £207,000 for the purpose of culling seagulls. Yet when we look at the figures of 285 seagulls culled in 2013 by GONHS alone, it amounts to 2,649 for the year; this being less than the seagulls culled by GONHS in 2012, which amounted to 3,391 yet with a combined budget of what GONHS and FERA had in the previous years. Worse still, the forecast outturn for the financial year 2013-14 is expected to be £131,000. This means that, for more money being placed with GONHS, the public gets less seagulls culled; and if the figures for the end of April 2014 get extrapolated for the end of the year, 2014 will be 290 worse than 2013.

Mr Speaker, what could have happened in this period for the Minister for the Environment to have lost his eye on the ball? It must have been the time spent on his vanity garden project in Queensway. What excuses will the Hon. Minister come up with? Blame the GSD again for things happening under his watch? Come up with another committee of experts to provide the Minister with a management plan for the culling 295 of seagulls? Or will he counterattack by spinning some scientific rhetoric to cover his inaction on this matter? Clearly, the Minister does not have a clue on achieving value for money for the taxpayer, not to mention the members of the public whose lives are blighted by the massive overpopulation of seagulls.

Mr Speaker, moving to the state of the Botanical Gardens, again, another subject not mentioned by the Minister in his very brief speech. The consequences of the Minister losing sight of his environmental responsibility does not just remain on the issue of seagulls and macaques; it extends to the dilapidated state of the Botanic Gardens. Despite the constant grandiosity of comments, to which everyone is subjected, on his alleged single-handedness in restoring the Alameda Gardens – with graphic illustration of him sitting in despair by the flower bed kerbstone, making everyone listening start to cry – the Minister leaves out of the story that what was inherited then was the privatisation of the maintenance of the Gardens by a so-called 305 Socialist Chief Minister, who had not invested in the Alameda Gardens for eight years; nor that the last Budget passed by the GSD Government was an amount of £854,000 from the pittance that was provided by the GSLP Government; nor does the Minister give recognition to the hard work done by the staff who have worked there for years. According to the Minister, all the merit is to be reflected by the action of one person: the Minister himself. For him, this is a story about ‘I’ and not ‘we’. Yet what is the story today in the Botanic Garden? It is the deplorable conditions of the pathways, and in particular of Grand Parade Walk. It is also the deplorable state of the street furniture within the Gardens. No doubt the Minister – I can see the Hon. Minister, Mr Linares, laughing in nervousness (Interjection) about what I am telling him. Perhaps he will have something to say about... but at least he could have the courtesy of allowing me to finish. (Interjections)

315 No doubt the Minister will now insist that this too is the GSD’s fault, based on some fanciful argument about measuring the growth of the roots of trees during the 16 years in which the GSD was in Government! Never mind that the person in charge of the maintenance of the gardens then, who today is the Minister, never bothered to do anything about it; never mind that, in almost three years as the Minister for the Environment, he has abandoned responsibility for the condition of the Botanic Gardens; and never mind
320 that in the draft Estimate Book there is no provision for the necessary work to be done in this financial year. But of course, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has been too busy in his vanity park in Queensway to have time to provide the public who go to the Alameda Gardens with reasonable standards of facilities.

So how can the Minister rescue himself from this position? Create another committee, to be called the ‘Botanic Gardens Management Plan’, and two months before the next election he can then have the works done and even get the pretty picture for the next manifesto? I can even see what the heading of the story in the manifesto will be: ‘Botanic Gardens rescued from the wretched GSD legacy!’

Mr Speaker, moving on to landscaping and planting of trees... Moving on to the subject of planting trees, which in some ways overlaps with the Botanic Gardens but obviously it is much broader. Here again, the Minister is keen to blow his trumpet as to the amount of trees planted during the period of the present 330 Government; yet what the Minister will not do is to provide Parliament with true figures of trees cut throughout Gibraltar, with the spurious argument that one cannot differentiate a tree from a shrub.

But what is more worrying is that there is no coherent plan for landscaping throughout Gibraltar, particularly when it comes to the planting of trees. What we have is a situation in which trees are being placed in an ad hoc manner, with some already dying and some already dead due to the fact that no proper 335 forward planning has been done for ground preparation, use of organic materials, soil, manure, and of course irrigation; all important components for the successful life of a tree.

If we look at some of the trees planted in the Jewish Boulevard and in the Alameda Estate, they are already in a dreadful condition. Clearly, the Minister’s much-trumpeted environmental filter has not worked again and remains useless. What Gibraltar needs – and one would have expected the current Minister to lead on this subject – is a ‘Landscaping Management Plan’ in order to plan and implement proper procedures when planting new trees and safeguarding existing ones throughout Gibraltar.

As an aside, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for the Environment is all too keen to repeat the statement that this is a new Government, leading by example. However, once again we notice that in the Minister’s third Budget speech he continues to read his speech from single-sided printed paper; this, when we have a situation (Laughter) when in the Minister’s first Budget address, he informed Parliament of how the new green filter for procurement had established a policy of purchasing printers to print double-sided text in all Government Departments, something that was pointed out to the Minister by my Hon. Learned Friend, Mr Figueras, for reading his speech on single-sided paper.

Mr Speaker, moving to Barbary Partridges – (Interjections) I take satisfaction that the hon. Members of the Government are enjoying my speech, Mr Speaker! (Interjection)

A Member: You’re welcome!

Hon. J J Netto: I think they need to calm down; they are getting too nervous.

The Hon. Minister for the Environment is keen to be seen as someone who is passionate in the conservation of the Barbary Partridges, given the picture in his Twitter account. Yet, as the Minister for the Environment, his inaction to protect them will mean that the indigenous Barbary Partridge of Gibraltar is critically endangered and on its way to face the same outcome as the dodo in Mauritius. (Interjection) Of course, blame the GSD! Always blame the GSD!

Much as the Minister would like to blame the GSD Government for all of Gibraltar’s ills, the fact remains that under his watch we have arrived at a situation where the number of indigenous Barbary Partridges is the lowest ever. Not only that, but knowing, as he knows better than anyone in this Chamber, what the natural predators of the partridges are, he has done nothing to deal with this serious problem. The Minister seems to be caught like a rabbit on a road by the headlights of an incoming car... with ensuring the population of seagulls does not continue to eat the eggs or chicks of partridges, as stated by me in my earlier speech, or the feral cats that pose such a threat to the partridges. Given that the current party in Government can be termed as a party of all things to all men, it is clear that the Minister has taken the decision of not culling feral cats for any possible loss of votes from those who would be against such policy. So, through his indecisions we face extermination of the indigenous Barbary Partridges.

For over a year now, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has been trying to wash off his inaction on the partridges on the basis that partridges of the same genetic lineage will be brought from Morocco; yet, from the answer given both last month and in this one, we can conclude that on the issue of safeguarding the partridges, as in the culling of macaques or the culling of seagulls or feral cats, the Minister is all talk and more talk and no action.

Mr Speaker, moving to transparency and accountability, lack of transparency abounds from the manner in which this Government operates. Take, for instance, the various companies providing a service to the Department of the Environment. Back in May 2013, I asked the Hon. Minister if he could provide me with copies of the contract providing services to the Department; something he refused to do, on the basis that such contracts remain exactly as they were when they came into Government. However, in answer to a supplementary question from my Hon. and Learned Friend, the Leader of the Opposition, the Minister would not accept informing me of any variation of any of the existing contracts providing services to the Department of the Environment because it would have to be a collegiate response from the Government as to whether to inform the Opposition. Yet in May of this year, once again I asked the Hon. Minister if there had been any changes to existing contracts, only to be responded to, in a terse tone, that his role is not watching observance to the contracts.

Yet today, the Opposition is aware of at least one variation to one contract – in Wildlife Gibraltar Ltd, in which, until very recently, the Hon. Minister had shares in that company and has now sold them to someone else; a contract, I should add, that has been awarded the maintenance of the Commonwealth Park. However, the changes to the ownership of Wildlife Gibraltar Ltd were only found by the Opposition as a result of my Question to the Minister last week. The Minister had to tell us only last week that he had just written to the Clerk of Parliament, notifying him of the changes in the ownership composition of the company in which the Hon. Minister had an interest before and his wife continues to be a shareholder. No-one is saying that there is anything improper, but to say we are not entitled to quiz the Government on this is nonsense.

Mr Speaker, moving on to health and safety, to talk about health and safety with regard to the initiatives or actions by the current Minister for Health and Safety is simply to say that nothing has happened or is likely to happen while the current incumbent is holding such responsibility.

In 19 years of listening to Budget speeches in this Chamber, last year was the first time ever that a Minister holding a responsibility for a particular subject did not utter a single word on the responsibility the Minister holds: quite a dereliction of duties and an attitude of not being willing to promote and develop health and safety policies, which is his duty as a Minister.

Since last year's Budget address I have asked the Hon. Mr Bossano whether the Government has conducted any reviews on the Health and Safety Inspectorate team, the current legislation, its policies and procedures since December 2011 insofar as it applies to the private sector and Government organisations; and if so, to provide Parliament with a date of the reviews, the name of the person or entity, details of the items examined and any implementation emanating from such a review – only to be answered by the Minister saying, 'No, Mr Speaker.' The answer is quite incredible, as it seems to imply that the Minister for Health and Safety is not aware that a review is indeed taking place behind the Minister's back without him knowing anything about it. The review is being conducted between the Chief Minister and the union, not to mention the various reports submitted by various specialists on health and safety on how to review the current legislation and the Inspectorate role within the Factories Act.

Mr Speaker, the Minister's response is symptomatic of the malaise that prevails with this Government's attitude towards health and safety. Consider my Question to the Minister in relation to how many codes of practice have been issued, or how many health and safety committees have now emerged within the public sector; and the answer provided is, remarkably, in Bossano-esque style: 'There have been no new codes of practice and there are no new health and safety committees.' In other words, not only is the Minister not prepared to do anything to develop health and safety, but he is quite proud of the fact that he does not care about the responsibility he has.

Given the circumstances that prevail, it is quite understandable that the Chief Minister is doing the review on health and safety, but you will forgive me for saying that in normal circumstances, when a Minister refuses to do his responsibility, the normal thing to do is to get rid of the Minister and place someone who is willing and capable of discharging his responsibilities. Yet here we have the curious situation of a Chief Minister tip-toeing around the Minister's dereliction of duties in order not to upset the Minister for his dereliction. What this shows is a weak Chief Minister within a fractured Government.

(Interjection)
As if all this was not enough, the recurrent issue of opaqueness has also had a role to play with regard to the manner in which different Ministers operate a negative policy on health and safety. Take into consideration the response of the Education Minister when he refused to provide Parliament with copies of the health and safety audit report in some schools; or the response of the Health Minister, who also refuses to provide Parliament with copies of the health and safety report by the Health Authority Health and Safety Committee; or the fact that the Government will not provide Parliament with the name of the companies that infringe the law in health and safety, as is the practice in the UK; or the fact that this Government is not willing to provide annual reports on health and safety for the benefit of trade unions, employers, health and safety specialists and Parliament in order to assess either the Government's lack of aims and objectives or statistical facts emanating from the various industry groups in Gibraltar. It is a scandal that goes to the heart of how this Government dishonestly operates.

It is obvious, Mr Speaker, that if we are going to have progress in health and safety or the environment, or in a safer new power station, or in not mortgaging our children's livelihood with debt arising from uncontrolled and unaccountable spending from this Government, then the sooner we have a GSD Government, the better for this community. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) If we, as a community, want to restore the sense of security and prosperity we enjoyed under the previous GSD Government, then the sooner we elect a new GSD Government the better. And if we want to restore the sense of normalisation that existed between the communities on both sides of the frontier, the sooner we elect a GSD Government the better.

To conclude Mr Speaker, from the Opposition benches, there is only one word left to say, and that is 'palante'.

Finally, my thanks to the staff of Parliament for their continued help and advice.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Miss Samantha Sacramento. (Banging on desks)

A Member: Happy hour this morning. (Laughter and interjections)

Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, we have now been in office over two and a half years and I can reflect proudly on the differences that have been undertaken by my Ministry and the Departments I am responsible for.

This year has been an extremely positive one in terms of numerous developments coming to fruition as well as how our services have been extended to assist the more vulnerable in our community. We are now 460 at a stage where progress is real and is tangible and, Mr Speaker, there are still more good things to come as other projects become a reality during the course of this coming year.

I will commence with the progress in my Equality portfolio, as this has been so marked this year and symbolic of this Government's overall commitment to a fair and just society.

465 As I have said previously, equality is at the heart of this Government, and our commitment to equality shows a natural progression towards an inclusive society and it is a recognition of a modern Gibraltar. We are committed to setting up an Equal Opportunities Commission, which will be responsible for promoting equal treatment for all without discrimination, as provided for in the Equal Opportunities Act. This coming financial year will see an advancement in developing this, and in the meantime the statutory function will continue to be discharged by the Citizens' Advice Bureau and we continue to work closely with them and support their initiatives.

470 I am immensely proud of having been appointed by the Chief Minister as the first Minister for Equality; and in that capacity, having passed the Civil Partnership Act earlier this year. It truly is a landmark piece of legislation, Mr Speaker; one which enables the formal recognition of relationships between couples of the same sex. It is important because this Government recognises that there are gay men and gay women in Gibraltar and they live in loving and committed relationships. They are entitled to a formal recognition of that commitment in the eyes of the law and that is progress and that is equality. To have been invited to the first civil partnership ceremony was truly special, and particularly since it was the celebration by a couple who have been pioneers in standing up for gay rights and challenging the establishment. They won their David and Goliath battle against the former administration, who refused to give them the right to a joint tenancy in a Government flat and that case was fought all the way to the Privy Council at taxpayers' expense. How times have changed. Our Government recognises the fundamental human rights of gay people, quite unlike the way that they were treated when the GSD were in office.

480 Furthermore, Mr Speaker, this past year we have outlawed homophobic hate crime and hate speech and made these aggravated criminal offences. It is therefore no surprise that community groups now feel the freedom and confidence to organise days such as International Day against Homophobia and Pride. Such groups no longer live in fear of expressing themselves and they know that they have the full support of this Government in these endeavours.

490 Turning to disability, it is clear that Gibraltar's landscape is changing to make it more accessible, and our progress is not limited to those with physical limitations but also those with learning disabilities. Our aim is to improve the lives of people with disabilities and this is being achieved by having, for the first time in Gibraltar's history, a Ministry for Equality and within that established a Department that is dedicated to disability. Since last year, we now have additional staff. We have a head of department to deal with matters at a strategic and policy level and a truly dedicated and motivated disability awareness officer, and I have to say at this point that that does not represent any increase in our complement but more a readjustment of existing posts.

495 Equality is an issue that transcends all Government Departments, as indeed it does our community. My Department is able to co-ordinate and oversee matters relating to disability in all other Government Departments and is involved in all Government projects. It is the policy of this Government to ensure that all new projects going forward are fully accessible and my Department offers advice and guidance on this. We have undertaken a robust review of all matters to do with disabilities and in the past year have made significant developments in an area that has generally been quite dormant. As we work on achieving a disability action plan, all these things fall neatly into line.

500 Mr Speaker, the fruit of our work, and in particular inter-agency working together, has not gone unnoticed and recently we were recognised, by a tour operator specialising in holidays to meet the requirements of people with disabilities, as an accessible holiday destination – an achievement indeed for our initiatives and those of the Minister for Tourism to be recognised internationally.

505 One of the most significant aspects of the work we have undertaken so far is to review current legislation and provide laws modelled on the UN Convention on the Rights of the Disabled. A lot of work has been undertaken on the drafting of this important piece of legislation and I am delighted to report that we will be in a position to present the new laws by the end of this year.

510 The most fundamental change that the new legislation will bring is the statutory obligation to make premises accessible to people with disabilities. At the moment, we are giving careful consideration to how this will be achieved in a responsible manner, as we are learning from the experience in the UK.

515 Notwithstanding and in advance of the legislation being in place, we already have a programme of auditing and reforming Government premises and public areas, and of course all new Government projects will be fully accessible. The Government Technical Services Department, in consultation with the Ministry for Equality and the GHA Occupational Therapy Department, have already been busy identifying and making improvements to our community. Mr Speaker, I am sure you will have noticed all the progress and significant improvements we have already made.

520 In order to ensure that we are fully equipped to do this properly, my Department arranged for specialist training to be delivered on access audits earlier this year. The course trained participants to be able to identify barriers to access and solve these, including access audits to historical buildings. The course was aimed at the Government's Technical Services Department, occupational therapists and anyone involved with the responsibility of access to public buildings and services.

525 The accessible beaches project is a prime example of the huge progress we have made. This year, we took stock of the flagship projects we undertook at the beaches last year and the service has been expanded and further improved by the Gibraltar Tourist Board. An announcement on the new bathing pavilion at the old GASA site will be made very shortly and the whole community will be able to fully benefit from it this summer. I say 'fully' because this exciting new project is completely accessible throughout.

530 Works have been undertaken to St Michael's Cave, the Gibraltar International Airport Terminal, and Parliament will be fully accessible for wheelchair users once the refurbishment works are complete.

Works have also been undertaken at St Bernard's Hospital.

We have worked with the Gibraltar Bus Company, making all bus stops accessible to wheelchair users as the ones we inherited were not, and the new buses purchased will be fully accessible too.

535 Voice synthesisers will be installed in all lifts in Government rental estates in order to assist those with visual impairment and these will be ready shortly.

We have been working very closely with GHITA on issues relating to our deaf community and Government has funded staff from the Care Agency, the GHA and the Department of Education to undertake British Sign Language training in levels 1 and 2, and we supported the first Deaf Awareness Conference in October last year.

540 We have been working to ensure that there are no barriers when we organise public events. You will have seen a British sign language interpreter on stage during the National Day Rally over the past two years and he has already been engaged for this year. At present we are working on a text relay service, so as to make services more accessible to the deaf.

545 Government has now purchased a wheelchair viewing platform and this will be used at all public gatherings and concerts, whether or not organised by Government, to enable participation by wheelchair users.

I will expand further on services related to people with learning disabilities when I refer to the Care Agency.

550 We have invested greatly in the fabric of Gibraltar already as part of this Government's task of achieving access for all and enabling the disabled in our community. I feel that we have come a long way in dealing with issues related to disabilities. I am not suggesting that everything that needs to be done has been done, but a lot has been done so far and certainly this is a work in progress and we can be proud of our achievements so far. We continue to work closely with related groups and societies and this is one of the benefits of the Government's open-door policy. Interdepartmental working is proving to be very effective and the success of my centralised Department is obvious.

555 Turning to women, Mr Speaker, I always wonder whether there is such a thing as 'women's issues', as any issue that affects women affects us all.

560 So what does equality for women really mean? It means identifying circumstances in which women are particularly vulnerable or placed at a disadvantage. It is about ensuring a level playing field in opportunities, and what it does not mean is that women should be favoured over men, whether it is for jobs or posts or for places on boards.

I have mentioned in the past that Government is in the process of collecting and collating statistics of women in the workplace. Once that data is ready, we will evaluate the situation and decide what action needs to be taken and we will consider what initiatives may need to be introduced.

565 The recent change to the public sector working hours will undoubtedly benefit many working women, and the flexibility of the working hours will help them balance home and work commitments.

We are also looking at projects to empower girls and young women. We have an excellent education system, Mr Speaker, in Gibraltar, and I want to ensure that young women have the confidence to pursue whatever path they wish to choose in life.

570 Furthermore, in the context of women's issues, last year Government formally requested the extension to Gibraltar of the Convention on the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women. Such a step forms part of the Government's continuing policy on the principles of equality and fairness.

575 Mr Speaker, I am fortunate to represent the Gibraltar Parliament on a Steering Committee of Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians. Through this forum, I hold regular meetings with like-minded colleagues and have been invited to speak at conferences that I have attended. I would like to announce today that, as a member of the Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians Steering Group, I have agreed to host a conference for women parliamentarians early in 2015. Personally I am very excited about this and it will be the first time that there will have been a conference dedicated to meaningful discussion on the advancement of women's issues in Gibraltar.

580 We know that another issue that affects women, predominantly though not exclusively, is domestic abuse. Apart from the provision of two buildings to be used as a shelter for women, the previous administration did very little in terms of support for victims of domestic abuse. Women in Need, the charity that runs the shelter, had very little practical input or support from Government, aside from a grant, and Mr 585 Speaker, joined-up strategic thinking simply did not exist in the past. Indeed, we have worked with them to redress this. We are in the process of regularising their position in connection to Government, but more importantly, working closely with them to offer real and practical support and offer them training and guidance. The staff at Women in Need undertake exemplary work to help victims of domestic abuse and the service is an essential component of the whole domestic abuse matrix. Importantly, there is now 590 communication between them and Social Services so that they can work together seamlessly in relevant cases. Social Services is a pivotal player in this and I will expand on the changes made to the service to make it more effective later on.

At present, we are involved in a process of collecting empirical data to analyse the extent and the impact of domestic abuse in Gibraltar. We are also working on establishing a forum where all the key players in relation to domestic abuse will meet and discuss working practices at a strategic level; and as soon as the 595 work necessary in the individual departments is complete, we will meet together to develop the strategy.
That is not to say, Mr Speaker, that because the forum has not formally met, that no work has been done at a strategic level or individually in developing these departments.

Finally on this front, through my contacts with other Commonwealth parliamentarians, we will be twinning with colleagues in Wales who have developed a very successful domestic abuse strategy.

600 Turning to the Care Agency, Mr Speaker, I continue to try and improve the way in which the Care Agency develops and delivers a more efficient and effective service than that which I found when I took on ministerial responsibility for it. Like any progressive organisation, there is now a continual process of revision that takes place as we encounter daily issues.

As an organisation that was in complete chaos when I inherited it, it is now beginning to take shape.
605 One of the major problems was that the human resources department operated in a way that was completely ad hoc and unco-ordinated. Last year we introduced a database for human resources which is now fully functional, and with improvements being made continuously we are now investing in the human resources department so that staff have a clear understanding of employment issues within the Agency.

Although the Care Agency is the fruit of the merger of the previous Social Services and Elderly Care 610 Agencies, aspects of the Agency had never merged, particularly in the way that the human resources department operated. A case in point is the staff handbook, and this year will see the consolidation of both previous handbooks and the creation of one single handbook.

In terms of investment in management, Mr Speaker, in December 2013, 12 junior and middle managers embarked on a five-day course in management training, spread over three months, allowing time to 615 complete specific tasks on managing people, communicating effectively and building effective teams.

Employees are the backbone to any organisation and its service users and the people that we need to ensure receive the best possible care. Therefore, the development and implementation of an effective framework for learning in all forms – academic, professional and vocational – is imperative to enable staff to be fully prepared and provide the appropriate care to the people we are responsible for. With stronger 620 training, support staff are now able to feel professional in their roles and have a clearer understanding, as well as knowing the purpose for which their job is being delivered. It is very satisfying to see that there are still a vast majority of workers who show vocational qualities that can be enhanced with appropriate training. The Care Agency continues with its approach of investing in people and we continue to strive towards ensuring that its workforce comprises appropriately skilled people in the right places, working to 625 deliver high quality care.

The Care Agency's new dedicated training team is exemplary and provides a better service year on year.
During this year, the Care Agency training team has been extremely busy and proactive; they have not only continued to research, facilitate, deliver and review training to ensure evidence-based practice is taught to enhance skills, but they continue to develop their own skills and develop in-house training programmes.
630 They have also expanded their remit by collaborating and delivering training for other Government Departments. The elements of the training are split into numerous sections. I will obviously not refer to all the training that we undertake, Mr Speaker, but I will concentrate on the most important ones.

Principally, Mr Speaker, the introduction to the Care Agency will involve the Care Agency Generic
Core Training, and this has continued to be provided throughout 2013 and 2014 for existing staff and ETCL 635 trainees.

I want to mention a new, resourceful piece of equipment we have bought which is an age stimulation and empathy suit, and it has been incorporated into the training. This equipment helps staff to walk in the shoes of the elderly and thereby make them more in tune with the needs of their job.

640 Trainers and instructors in the Care Agency have been trained, qualified and updated in various subjects to enable mandatory training programmes to be continued and developed in house in the individual services. It is important that the Care Agency training team also maintain their professional development and enhance their skills. Therefore, provision was made for them to gain further qualifications as recognised in Gibraltar and the UK by completing the Level 3 Award in Preparing to Teach in the Lifelong Learning Sector.

645 In November 2013, the Care Agency training team procured the British Institute of Learning Disabilities to visit Gibraltar and provide training on learning disability awareness. This training consisted of five one-day sessions. Over the period of the five days, a total of 127 people attended from the Care Agency, Department of Education, Royal Gibraltar Police, Gibraltar Health Authority and the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority. The aim of the training was to develop an understanding and look at positive approaches 650 to working with people with learning disabilities, autism and mental health problems. The training had excellent reviews and such training will be expanded upon in future.

Not only have the dedicated in-house training team provided a service to the Care Agency; they have also shared their expertise and trained other Government Departments and bodies. Our team have provided training to the lifeguards employed by the Tourist Board in moving and manual handling procedures, so 655 that they are fully equipped to assist people with disabilities who use the Beach Accessibility Service.

Relationships between the Care Agency and the Gibraltar Health Authority are thriving. The School of Health Studies has made places available for nurses working in Elderly Residential Services to attend courses in mentorship, fall prevention, dignity awareness and diabetes, to name a few. These courses allow staff to maintain continued professional development through Kingston University in the UK.

660 Moreover, two Care Agency employees have been given the opportunity to undertake the enrolled nurse course, due to complete this coming month, and they will then return to the Elderly Residential Services with qualifications, knowledge and skills that they can put into practice as nurses. It is expected that this opportunity will be repeated regularly, every couple of years, thereby increasing the local availability of people with the skills and qualifications required for such job vacancies when they arise.

665 Perhaps the most significant initiative that was commenced last year is a training programme that has been devised and is co-ordinated and delivered by Care Agency staff through the Ministry of Employment. In December 2013, the Care Agency developed a course – An Introduction to Elderly and Dementia Care – and has facilitated the delivery of this course to just over 100 registered unemployed people with the Employment and Training Board through this financial year. This course, Mr Speaker, has been incredibly,
670 incredibly successful. These people receive fundamental theoretical information and are taught practical skills over a three-week period, attending a full five days a week. All the subjects follow the Skills for Care Common Induction Standards for care workers in the UK, and on completion of the course the attendees are provided with certificates of attendance. In addition, a two-week work-experience placement is offered in the Elderly Residential Services of the Care Agency or the long-stay wards at St Bernard's Hospital. The 675 training will enable these people to build up a portfolio to support them in their applications for employment in the care sector in the future, if they decide that this is their chosen profession. As you know, Mr Speaker, it is anticipated that the Care Agency will continue to deliver this course for up to a further 100 people in the coming year.

As you will be aware, Government will be operating two new elderly residential facilities by the end of 680 the year. In order to operate these services we will need staff, and we are therefore pre-empting the need for staff by commencing to offer training in this field as well as hands-on work experience, and this will avoid having to do what the GSD had to do where they had to import labour in the care sector because of apparent lack of skill in our workforce. So, unlike the GSD when they were in office, we are tackling this issue head-on and we are co-ordinating our approach. Their excuse, Mr Speaker, when asked why residents were never 685 considered for employment in the care sector, was that locals did not want to carry out this type of work. That, statistics show, Mr Speaker, is far from the case, judging from the number of residents who have already either undertaken training or taken up employment in this field both by the Care Agency and private contractors. Mr Speaker, it is about giving the people the tools and the opportunity to carry out the jobs. Incidentally, a lot of the people who have undergone the training have already secured employment in the 690 care sector: a continued investment in Gibraltar's care and in Gibraltar's employment.

Furthermore, the Care Agency continues to offer ETCL and GRAD trainees the opportunity to have on-the-job training and experience, giving them the potential to apply for a vacancy within the Care Agency after gaining the necessary skills to undertake the work. Since this initiative commenced, we have already employed in the Care Agency 63 people who started their placement in the Care Agency either through 695 ETCL or the GRAD scheme: another success story, Mr Speaker.

I will turn to the different services of the Care Agency. Starting with Elderly Residential Services, one of the major achievements this year has been the fruition of negotiations with Unite the Union in relation to the nursing and nursing allied professionals who work in Elderly Residential Services of the Care Agency – essentially what used to be the Elderly Care Agency prior to the merge in 2009. Care Agency staff working 700 in this sector were transferred to the GHA effective from 1st November 2013 and now enjoy parity with their GHA counterparts on the basis of equal pay for equal work. Staff are deployed to the Care Agency under the management of the Elderly Residential Services.

In this process, the new agreement of Agenda for Change has been applied to all Elderly Care nursing staff and this claim was ongoing for over four years, ignored by the previous administration. I must take the opportunity to thank all from the Care Agency and Unite who formed part of the working group; the Care Agency and GHA management, who enabled the smooth transition of the process; and particularly the Care Agency finance team, who calculated the payment of arrears in record time.

The new regime has had a positive impact on the working conditions of this collective. Subsequently, the restructure of the nursing workforce supposes an increment of the hours of care provided for the elderly. It must be noted that since these new working shifts, post the commencement of the new working arrangements, there has been a significant decrease in the need for overtime, if at all. So while there has been an increase in expenditure due to the increase in salaries, there have also been very significant savings.

Yearly updates on mandatory training for nursing staff are being carried out as part of their continuous development. Collaboration with GHA professionals has been maintained since last year, providing in-house training in many different areas of nursing for Elderly Care staff. In addition to that, accredited modules run through the School of Health Studies and have been available for Elderly Care nursing staff. Furthermore, in conjunction with the School of Health Studies and the GHA librarian, there is a project to open a nursing library in Mount Alvernia, in order to improve the resources available for the nursing collective of Elderly Care.

Charge nurses and team leaders have attended to a leadership and management course, something which had never been done before in this service, Mr Speaker. There has been a campaign of awareness on safeguarding adults at risk, organised by professionals from the GHA and in collaboration with the Safeguarding Adults Committee. A further basic awareness course on safeguarding adults is ongoing at present for frontline professionals of both organisations.

A rotation of charge nurses on night duty has been implemented, providing a support and supervision framework of the night duties of the nursing staff. Satellite services, such as John Cochrane Ward, Calpe Ward and the Jewish Home, now receive nightly visits of a charge nurse, something that had never occurred before – the premises was run by the staff at night with no support from nursing management.

All policies are under review, Mr Speaker, with an aim of updating all procedures throughout the Elderly Residential Service.

As from March 2014, a speech and language therapist has been allocated to Elderly Services. This is an achievement, as in the past the residents requiring assessment had to wait for weeks, even months, before they were assessed by these professionals.

In our service, Mr Speaker, we do not only care for the residents; we also care for their relatives, and we have arranged for two informative sessions for relatives of people suffering from dementia to be organised at Mount Alvernia with the support of GHA health professionals. It has been an innovative, successful and welcomed initiative and will continue during this year on a regular basis.

Finally, I cannot talk about Mount Alvernia without referring to the iconic structure that has been in place for 10 years. I am, of course, referring to the scaffolding, which was initially erected to repair those balconies 10 years ago but has been in place so long, Mr Speaker, that the scaffolding itself has dilapidated and required replacement and the deterioration of the balconies is such that the scaffolding is now supporting the balconies. But I am delighted to announce that the balconies are finally being renovated and the works will be ready by the end of this month. Once complete, not only will this enhance the façade of the building, but also the quality of life of the residents, who will be able to gain access to them after so many years and be able to enjoy the spectacular views which has been blocked from them up to now because of the scaffolding. The retaining wall on the east side of Mount Alvernia will also be repaired after years of requests and being ignored.

Our elderly care facilities are being expanded and this will enhance the care that can be provided in the future. The RNH residential facility for people with dementia will be ready by the end of the year and we have already opened a new facility at the John Mackintosh Home, albeit partially at the moment. At present, it provides for residents of the Jewish Home on a temporary basis while this facility is being refurbished, and in addition there are 10 long-term patients from the GHA. The service is under constant review, of course, to ensure that all provisions and requirements for the welfare and safety of its occupants are met. A complete new approach to the concept of the building was required after the fiasco and waste of money incurred by the previous Government, causing delay to the works and therefore to its opening. Professionals from both the GHA and Elderly Care Services have worked together to make this project viable, safe and secure for service users. Once the Jewish Home residents are relocated to the refurbished Jewish Home, there will be a total of 54 residential beds available to the elderly.

The much needed refurbishment of the Jewish Home is now forthcoming. The building requires a full refurbishment due to the sorry state that it presents and inherited from the lack of action of the previous administration – because that is what happens to buildings, Mr Speaker, when they are not maintained and they are not kept up: they just dilapidate, and then repairs become more expensive. But at least we are getting on with it. The Jewish community will, of course, have an input in the design and works to be carried out to the building to ensure that their requirements are met.

765 Before I turn to the other services of the Care Agency, I must give credit to the Nursing Co-ordinator and her team, who have been at the forefront of the transition process and have made the opening of the new facility at John Mackintosh Wing possible. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

770 Turning to Social Services, Mr Speaker, as you may know, this is comprised of four teams: Children and Families, Adults, Drug Rehabilitation, and Probation and Disabilities. I can now state with pride that for the first time ever in the history of Social Services, the complement of social workers will be fully filled by September this year, bearing in mind that our complement of social workers is now higher than it has ever been.

775 We have entered into an agreement with a recruitment agency in the UK, which has enabled a faster response in the recruitment process. The days when it took an extraordinary length of time to recruit are now over. Let me add that, in the interim and while vacancies are being filled substantively, we have engaged supply cover until the recruitment is achieved so that the service is not affected and does not suffer.

780 We have also, in this financial year, added four new posts to enable newly qualified social workers to come into the service. This new post will provide that they be supervised in a programme of training; supervision that will equip them to apply for jobs as social workers as soon as they have acquired the necessary experience. The professional development continues with increased training for social workers.

785 One of the strategic priorities for this year has been investment in holistic procedures that will incorporate all authorities involved in social care. These procedures will be produced for three of the services: Children and Families, Adults, and the Residential Service. The procedures will ensure the safeguarding of our vulnerable people in a co-ordinated manner that all agencies can follow. It is envisaged that this project should be completed by the end of this financial year. This will depend on how the consolidation of all existing procedures and adaptation to legal advancements is affected.

790 I want to emphasise, Mr Speaker, that a lot of the advancements and positive developments we have now achieved in Social Services are as a result of working on an inter-agency basis and we have now been able to formalise good working relationships with the Health Authority, the Department of Education and in particular the Royal Gibraltar Police and their Safeguarding Unit, and the benefits of this are very, very apparent.

Let me now explain the different roles and what we are achieving within each of the services.

795 The Children and Families team is comprised of a number of different services providing for children and their families when in need. The main ethos of this service is that children thrive when loved and cared for, and generally this is within a family unit. Early intervention is essential so as to ensure that children do not need placements outside their homes. Although safeguarding and child protection is usually what gets into the public arena, it is the work that is now invested into the early stages that ensures that families move on from crises and resolve their difficulties. Mr Speaker, we are now changing our strategy, in terms of 800 child protection, and focusing our resources on and emphasising preventing crises from happening, because early intervention avoids family breakdown, criminality, domestic abuse and substance misuse, among other things; and that is why we are investing in this process. Allowing for this approach will prevent further pressure on a range of services such as care, health and education.

805 In keeping with our early intervention strategy we have introduced an additional service – the Parent and Child Parenting Assessment Programme. This serves both as an assessment and as a programme whereby the parent can acquire the necessary skills to be able to care for their child at a good enough level, and in some cases avoid the child entering the care system altogether.

810 Mr Speaker, as part of the restructure of Social Services following our review we have introduced a duty team, and this is a first point of contact for referrals. This year, we have seen a growth post of a social work manager in this team. This has enabled the development of databases to gather information so as to highlight the trends within society and where the needs lie.

815 A new initiative this year has been the development of a protocol and a database for domestic abuse. This has highlighted families where this is a common occurrence and intervention is required. However, it has also helped identify families where the difficulty has begun to arise, and support is offered so couples can learn to resolve their issues without this impacting on their children. As part of the development of the Agency's domestic abuse strategy, a new initiative – something that never occurred to the GSD when they were in office: two social workers and the Agency's psychologist will attend a training programme so as to deliver workshops with victims of domestic violence. They will also deliver the work with the perpetrators of domestic abuse. It is no longer good enough to safeguard and protect victims and their children. We have 820 recognised that the perpetrators continue to act out behaviour that they have learnt and punishment in itself is not the only solution. These perpetrators will continue to act on their behaviours and continue to be parents, and they must be assisted in making the necessary changes and breaking the cycle. We have our long-term team, as we change the focus from reactive to preventative, and we are developing what we do in the long-term team.

825 We are also in the process of a complete review of the Fostering and Adoption Service, and there is now a dedicated adoption and fostering social worker. This service is now offering support to pre-adoption placements, pre-adoptive parents and foster carers. Support provided is in terms of one-to-one, and formal training and supervision will be offered shortly as part of development within the service. Furthermore, people who sit on the Adoption and Fostering Panel will receive training at the end of this year, so that they 830 can meet the competences required to perform their duties.

The Court Welfare Team continues to advise the courts on children's issues relating to their parents' separation. The parenting programme is currently under review so as ensure that meeting the needs in terms of parenting changes as the needs of our society changes.

835 We have introduced a new service, and this is a respite service for children with disabilities following an assessment. This is offered by way of care packages in the community or, when necessary, residential care.

A working party has been established in order to carry out a review of the residential services. This review will provide information on two critical issues. The principal issue is that of how we are caring for children and whether the model being used is the better option. This review will also look at the issue of resourcing and the management structure. A working party has been formed for this purpose and will be 840 looking at all aspects and issues relating to children with challenging behaviour as well.

The Adult Services Department of Social Services has been able to focus on services for the most vulnerable adults in our community through the one point of referral system, which was introduced when we came into office. Management of the one-point entry system into elderly care, to include domiciliary care, day centres and residential care, has proved to be extremely successful and has provided care needed 845 to the most vulnerable clients in our community when they are in need of support, without the creation of endless waiting lists. There is now a needs-led criteria when considering who is most in need of the service. From 1st April 2013 to 31st March, the Adult team received a total of 540 referrals from people, ranging from professionals in different agencies to neighbours and concerned people in the community. Referrals have increased by 119 from the previous year alone. This number is increasing on a monthly basis as our 850 community realise services offered by Social Services are no longer stagnant but available to everyone who really needs them. I am pleased to say that the new systems implemented continue to ensure that all services are allocated in a fair and equitable way, based on each person's individual health and social care support needs.

855 The services being provided for the elderly in our community continue to be developed and increased at a significant and dramatic rate. This year, there have been a total of 53 admissions to Mount Alvernia, Cochrane Ward and Calpe Ward. Of these, 22 were people in the community who were at high risk and required admission to avoid a serious incident or hospitalisation, and 31 were admitted from hospital after being deemed to be long-stay patients unable to return home as they required 24-hour care. The change introduced by us to the admissions criteria has resulted in the most needy people being admitted first, 860 regardless of their time on the waiting list.

Domiciliary care services continue to be provided by two providers, and an additional 125 people have been granted domiciliary care this year. This means that by the end of the financial year we are providing domiciliary care to 229 people – more than trebling the number of people who are provided with this service since we came into office, because at that point only 75 people were receiving this service.
865 (Banging on desks) Additionally, 51 people already in receipt of domiciliary care were granted further hours. I am proud to say that we are providing more domiciliary care than ever, so many vulnerable people are benefitting from this initiative.

870 The newly introduced reviewing service for domiciliary care is working well. The new reviewing officer also carries out a quality assurance role, which helps the Agency keep checks on the private providers, ensuring the clients receive the best possible care.

The Agency is now working seamlessly with colleagues in the GHA. Out of the new domiciliary care recipients, 74 people were awarded care packages in order to expedite discharge from hospital and their recovery and integration in the community. This, together with increased admissions into Mount Alvernia, have reduced the amount of long-stay patients in hospital, which before would have blocked hospital beds 875 as people would have been unable to survive in the community without support.

Social workers now attend hospital multi-disciplinary team meetings on a weekly basis and support the discharge planning process by assessing patient needs and putting packages of care in place that will meet the patients' needs to prevent future readmissions into hospital.

880 Mr Speaker, I am very proud to say that the new day centre, which we promised in our first year of office, is now fully operational and is providing a service to so many elderly people in the community. (Banging on desks) This purpose-built day centre is certainly one of the jewels in the crown of the Care Agency. It provides a therapeutic and welcoming environment for the elderly, who otherwise would be isolated in the community. It provides a service that also monitors their needs on a weekly basis and 885 becomes a point of quick referral to social workers if their circumstances change and they require more support.

Five social workers from the Adult team have been trained in investigating officer and safeguarding lead manager roles within the safeguarding adult at risk procedures. Social workers have had placements in the UK on hospital discharge and assessments of care packages in the community. Social workers have trained in conjunction with the Royal Gibraltar Police in order to become designated risk managers of sexual offenders in Gibraltar and be part of the Gibraltar public protection arrangements and support other departments in the management of high risk offenders. And here is where the Social Services' close working relationship with the police is particularly important, Mr Speaker.

890 Social Services Adult team now have 137 clients receiving a quick response service. They are being contacted on a monthly basis by the Elderly Needs Co-ordinator and are being monitored through phone calls and police visits. This ensures that the most vulnerable in our community are not at risk, and this is another fantastic new initiative that we have introduced, Mr Speaker.

Turning to the Disability Service, this service has greatly improved. I said so last year and explained why, and we have improved again this year. We have worked on the objectives set down in our business plan last year with the aim of carrying out greater improvements and to develop the standard and quality of care at the Dr Giraldi Home and St Bernadette's resource centre.

900 Once again, we have embarked on a robust training programme to further develop employees professionally on extensive in-house and external training courses undertaken during this year. For example, during the period April 2012 to March 2013, training was undertaken by 161 members of staff and a total of 286 hours of training provided; but this year, training was attended by 497 members of staff and it amounted to 624 hours. This represents a total increase of training by 300%, Mr Speaker, and that is year to year in our administration. If we were to compare it to the little or no training provided before 2011, the comparative statistics are just shocking.

All medication, environmental and documentation audits have been reviewed, and these are now carried out on a monthly basis so as to flag up any issues which may arise and they can be addressed quickly. I am pleased to inform that the outcome of the last Environmental Agency visit at the Dr Giraldi Home in February was that everything was found to be in good order, to the extent that, for the first time ever, there was no submission of any advice or comment for improvement.

910 Our liaison strategy with the various Government Departments is now established and is producing very positive results, particularly in the professional relationship with the GHA and the Royal Gibraltar Police. In fact, we have provided training to the Royal Gibraltar Police on how to deal with people with learning disabilities. We continue to network with other Government Departments, as well as with other different groups and societies. This has created a strong and effective communication route with the following societies.

920 Additionally, parents and relatives are well informed of what is happening and have easy access to the service and to managers. By introducing monthly meetings with parents and relatives, held at St Bernadette's, families are kept informed and have an opportunity to provide feedback.

The home has also been refurbished recently, Mr Speaker, and we have also introduced a further flat so as to be able to increase the respite facilities that we can offer.

925 We now have a structured programme of activities in order to enrich the service users' social environment and we encourage them to engage in meaningful activities in the community. They are undertaking numerous activities, which are too long to list but they include things like weekly drama sessions at Bayside, attending supported holidays of their choice and participating in various charity events; but importantly, Mr Speaker, residents from Dr Giraldi and service users of St Bernadette's are now undertaking work placements supported by staff. This is a very important initiative, which gives them confidence and a structure to their day. In fact, we have two service users... Sorry, Mr Speaker, we have six service users who are currently in part-time employment.

930 This year, we have had an increase in admissions to both St Bernadette's resource centre and to Dr Giraldi, both to the residential service as well as the respite service, and we have therefore had to accommodate these growing needs. We have, very importantly, also developed a transitional policy for the transitional pathway for children with learning disabilities moving into adult services. This has been done in conjunction with Social Services and the Department of Education. We have also spent the last year concentrating on developing policies for staff at Dr Giraldi and St Bernadette's, so that everybody is clear on the framework within which they have to operate.

940 I am particularly grateful to everyone who works in the disability service, because of the huge improvements that they have achieved in the service during the year.

Now turning to the final department of Social Services, and that is drug rehabilitation. This past year has seen considerable investment in the physical fabric of Bruce's Farm Rehabilitation Centre. The facilities have already seen a significant transformation, which has enhanced the safe and comfortable therapeutic environment we aim to create for people suffering from various forms of addictions, which will make it 945 more conducive to their successful recovery. However, this by itself would be futile if we had not addressed the underlying causes which were preventing many people from accessing treatment.

We have worked hard to simplify the onerous and archaic systems and processes that prospective applicants had to contend with in the past – cumbersome procedures that had never been given any thought by the previous administration. Now, all agencies that link into drug treatment from Social Services work together to ensure that applications from anyone wishing to be admitted to Bruce’s Farm are dealt with expeditiously.

The results of the changes we have introduced speak for themselves. Since 2012, admissions to Bruce’s Farm have increased year on year. In fact, in 2013, Bruce’s Farm saw 49 admissions; the highest number in 10 years, Mr Speaker, and over double the number of admissions in 2011. That is how badly the old Bruce’s Farm, managed by the GSD administration, was failing people with addiction problems in our community. (Interjection by Hon. S M Figueras) No, absolutely; I agree, Mr Figueras. Yes, I agree; particularly in the field of Social Services, I have to say.

I recently announced that we have re-established formal contacts with Broadway Lodge – (Interjection by Hon. S M Figueras) Mr Speaker, perhaps Mr Figueras might want to refrain from scoring own goals, because if he invites me to comment on the GSD’s track record in Social Services I am happy to do so, but I would rather carry on with my speech. I recently announced that we have re-established formal contacts with Broadway Lodge, one of the longest-established and respected rehabilitation centres in the UK. This has opened a new and exciting chapter in the transformation of Bruce’s Farm. We are currently working on developing a partnership, which will include staff training, consultancy and staff placements.

I have always advocated for the inclusion of the voluntary sector and ex-service users as important stakeholders in how the service develops, and since assuming office my open-door policy towards groups such as Families, Alcoholics and Narcotics Anonymous has yielded very real and positive results. During our refurbishment, numerous members of these groups have given of their time to undertake voluntary work within Bruce’s Farm; something that rarely happened in the past. In my maiden budget speech, Mr Speaker, I referred to Bruce’s Farm as being out of sight and out of mind, and clearly this is no longer the case.

I would like to announce today a new initiative that we will be introducing at Bruce’s Farm, and that will be a top-up admission service, available to people who are in recovery, similar to a weekend retreat. It will be offered to anyone who wishes to take it up having undergone the 12-step programme, and the aim of this is to provide continued support to avoid relapse. In the past, I have referred to how we need to develop our community and outreach support for those who are unable to commit to the residential rehabilitation model for various reasons, and over the past year we have firmly established such a service, which is operated by two counsellors from Bruce’s Farm who operate for part of their week from the Gladys Perez Centre. They provide an invaluable service not only for those who complete treatment but for those who suffer from the fallout of addiction, particularly their families.

One important and very significant development has been the addition of one further counsellor, who will be based within the community on a full-time basis. This additional post will also enable us to provide a service to the prison, where we will be able to roll out a comprehensive rehabilitation programme for the first time ever. This has created additional rehabilitation routes to complement the work undertaken at Bruce’s Farm and will make decisive in-roads in addressing the well documented link between drugs and crime, which I referred to in my last Budget speech.

On the drugs awareness front, we have continued to work closely with statutory and official bodies, including law enforcement and various sporting associations. There are many events that the Care Agency has sponsored where the anti-drugs message has literally reached thousands of children. This includes the Mini-Olympiads in partnership with the Royal Gibraltar Police, as well as other events throughout the past year, such as football, basketball and volleyball tournaments.

The public will also become familiar with our high-profile campaigns that we have conducted with the Royal Gibraltar Police to address issues of concern, such as binge drinking, and at peak periods such as National Day and Christmas.

Our ongoing drug awareness workshops in all educational establishments from middle schools onwards have continued over the past year. The Care Agency has worked in close partnership with the very dedicated team at the Royal Gibraltar Police and recovering addicts to great effect to ensure the best possible outcomes for young people who may be exposed to the risk of drugs.

At a strategic level, members of the Drug Strategy Working Group, formed last year and led by myself, have continued to work together. We have attended key conferences in Strasbourg and Brussels at EU level, where we have established valuable contacts with the leading figures in various areas that will inform how we will develop our strategic responses to the challenges posed by drugs within our community. So far, Mr Speaker, this year our priority has been in getting our facilities and the services that we deliver right, so that we can now progress to working on these matters at a more strategic level.

1005 Finally on the point of drugs, I would also like to announce that the Care Agency will be introducing a substance abuse policy for staff. We provide a service where we care for the most vulnerable, and we cannot risk that anyone be under the influence of either alcohol or drugs. More importantly, the policy is not aimed at catching people out, but rather offering support where people have an addiction problem. That is why it is imperative that resources such as Bruce's Farm and the Community Counselling Service work, 1010 as these services will offer support.

Finally, Mr Speaker, I am responsible for the funding of many charities and community bodies. I would like to refer to the Clubhouse, and I will echo what the Minister for Health said yesterday on the wonderful job this organisation is doing. We work very closely with them and support them. Last year, we provided them with temporary accommodation and rescued them from the dilapidating premises they had been 1015 allocated at Toc H, which quite frankly were abysmal, and this has made all the difference to the people to whom they provide a service, but we are working together towards other premises.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all those charities and community organisations who work with me. I will not list them all, given that there are so many. Because they know that my door is always open, I am grateful for the meaningful engagement as we progress to improve services in consultation together, and I would also like to thank both unions for the work that we have done together this past year.
 1020

Mr Speaker, this Budget shows a real investment in services with tangible results, but the job is not easy as I am still dealing with many skeletons and gaps and problems inherited in the service. But a lot of progress has been made, and this is thanks to the dynamic teams that work with me and support me. Were it not for them, the changes and improvements to the service that I have referred to would not have been 1025 possible. I particularly want to thank the team in my ministerial office for all the work that they do continuously.

Mr Speaker, we will not lose sight of all that still needs to be done and we will not take our foot off the pedal. It is full speed ahead for us as we continue to meet all our manifesto commitments, as well as develop other necessary initiatives. Mr Speaker, we will continue to deliver. (Applause and banging on 1030 desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

1035 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to address Parliament on the Budget for the third time as Opposition Spokesman for Health, Social Services and Civil Contingencies. It is a duty and an honour for us on the Opposition benches to contribute to and vote on this vital discharge of the responsibility of Parliament.

1040 Firstly, it is with an air of sadness that I shall broach the subject of the City Fire Brigade, and I find that I have to very precisely repeat my Budget message of last year on the non-delivery of three key manifesto commitments.

One, a new much-needed relocated fire station, where again there is no budgetary provision for it in this year's financial Estimates Book; but at least, Mr Speaker, we have a new park!

1045 Two, the implementation of the review by Sir Ken Knight, the UK Government's Chief Fire and Rescue Adviser, of a new vision for the holistic operation and management of Gibraltar's Fire Service. Let us not forget that, despite all the Government's proclamations on publishing reports and transparency, we are still waiting, 19 months later, to see this audit review report of the City Fire Brigade which Sir Ken Knight conducted. And it ill behoves the Chief Minister to have chastised us at the last Budget about raising 1050 concerns for their non-publication of this report, and five others which they have still kept secret. The Members of the Government benches used to make sustained political play of the GSD Government's omission to publish the whole of the King Report. However, Mr Speaker, it appears once more that this is a case of 'do as I say and not as I do.' (A Member: Hear, hear.) This Government continues to refuse to publish reports commissioned by them and paid for by the taxpayer. So much for the new dawn, 1055 Mr Speaker!

And three, what about the delay in going live with the medical priority dispatch system – an essential pre scoop-of-the-patient triage system which will ensure that emergency ambulances are not called to incidents that are not emergencies, thus depriving those who really need them? This has lately become an all-too-regular occurrence. We have many reports of incidents where ambulances are called out to non-1060 emergencies in order for patients to get seen quickly at A&E, avoiding the unfortunately extremely long waiting times which might otherwise be encountered. We also have reports, Mr Speaker, of genuine emergency patients having spent up to half an hour calling for an ambulance because all three are unavailable attending to other patients.

1065 All these crucial commitments are still pending and still wanting – and I say 'sadly' because every fire officer and employee from the Department I have spoken to is deeply disappointed and disillusioned by the empty promises of this Government. Our City Fire Service is a vital service. It is an essential service in our community (A Member: Hear, hear.) and they deserve better, but are ultimately being failed by the Government that – let’s not forget – offered all things to all men. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1070 No surprises there then, because alas, Mr Speaker, it could well be that the GSLP Liberal alliance considers that window-dressing our city (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) and spending money on vanity projects, such as the £4 million on refurbishing No. 6 Convent Place, are more important priorities in the grand scheme of the Government’s limited vision.

1075 Hon. D A Feetham: A Venetian palace!

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: But at least, Mr Speaker, as you may have already heard, we have a new park!

1080 With regard to the Health Services in Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, I must firstly commend the clinical team, who have so successfully expanded and improved upon the day surgery unit at St Bernard’s Hospital. More resources and a new, enhanced care system have resulted in an efficient and problem-free experience for patients. Well done, GHA.

1085 The estimated budget of the GHA for this financial year now stands at £101.6 million. In just three years, the Health budget has increased by £12.4 million, an increase of around 14%. One might argue that, in itself, this is not unreasonable – that it shows investment in our community’s health services. This would be fine had it been planned, but the reality is that the increase was neither planned nor controlled. Spending for this past financial year, 2013-14, has gone over budget by £5 million, Mr Speaker; one of the 24 Government heads which have gone over their budgeted estimates and suffered from the poor financial oversight by the relevant Ministers because, Mr Speaker, throwing money at problems without thinking through the consequences is how this Government is managing our public finances. (Banging on desks) (A Member: Hear, hear.) (A Member: Yes!) Five million pounds over budget, Mr Speaker; no mean sum, especially when I quote the Hon. the Minister for Health from his Budget speech last year, who said, and I quote:

‘For many years... there has been a managerial failure to control spending leading to constant overspends of millions... this Government expects expenditure to be controlled and I have taken steps to ensure that this is the case.’

1095 So what happened, Mr Speaker? A £5 million overspend, which contributes to the £50 million over estimate spend this last year by all Government Departments, Agencies and Authorities together. And as the Leader of the Opposition pointed out, in order to keep these expensive Departments running, with nearly 600 extra public servants employed these last two and a half years, recurrent expenditure now stands at £95.6 million more than in the 2011-12 financial year when this Government came into power. And, Mr Speaker, no había dinero! This is the Government that said (Interjection) there was no money, that Gibraltar’s public finances were in a ruinous state.

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: The big lie!

1105 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Does the Government think the electorate is stupid? Is it the miraculous hand of God which has provided so bountifully (Laughter) since this Government came into power, or are they pursuing a relentless and populous stratagem which will mortgage the next few generations of Gibraltarians? (Banging on desks) (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

1110 And on the subject of financial management, for a Minister who claims he is listening to his staff, he is obviously not listening well enough to his Finance Director. On several occasions and at several GHA board meetings, the GHA finance chief has raised concerns that the senior structure at his directorate, and I quote, ‘lacks the necessary robustness’ to guarantee the proper accountability of a budget that now runs at over £100 million. A lot of management restructuring to get rid of the non-locals or GSD supporters, but little focus on succession planning for the crucial Department, necessary to ensure budgetary control in order to avoid an overspend of £5 million.

1115 Mr Speaker, I must emphasise that the Health budget represents about 20% of this community’s annual recurrent expenditure: one fifth of everything this Government spends. Lack of budgetary control has a very significant impact on overall Government expenditure.

Hon. J J Netto: Get rid of the finance Minister!

1120 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Let us examine in closer detail where this over-expenditure is occurring.

Sponsored patients saw a £1.9 million overspend this year, and spending is up 30% since the Hon. Minister took over the running of the GHA. But of course they have a manifesto commitment to implement, which includes, and I quote: and the solution to this is that now you can go for treatment to any hospital you wish outside of Gibraltar. In two years, the GHA has sent sponsored patients to 89 different hospitals outside of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker; 79 of which the GHA has no service level agreement with. This means it is very difficult to keep track on patients or vouch for appropriate standards, apart from anecdotal evidence, of course. And of those 79 hospitals the GHA has no service level agreements with, 21 are private hospitals. Private hospitals, Mr Speaker! GHA clinicians are baffled that we are paying over the standard National Health rate to send 114 patients, or patient episodes, to these private hospitals for little clinical reason at all. These private hospitals offer care that could be offered here, or in one of our tried and tested 10 hospitals the GHA has service level agreements with. Why would the Minister allow this new approach in the management of sponsored patients to develop, Mr Speaker?

We are also paying Xanit private hospital in Benalmádena over £¼ million a month for a service which St Bernard’s Hospital could offer by bringing in, as Xanit does, the clinical specialist from the Campo de Gibraltar and Costa area needed to treat the patients on the day. It is ludicrous that we should be paying such private healthcare rates when we could be keeping our patients in Gibraltar and bringing the specialists to them at St. Bernard’s Hospital, rather than continuing to send critical patients to Xanit. What could the GHA do to buy in clinical services for over £¼ million a month?

Economies of scale are not a forte of this Government, Mr Speaker. Spending money indiscriminately, whether it is sustainable or not, is more their style; a style lacking in courage and unnecessarily costly to our community. But at least, Mr Speaker, we have a new park and we will get a small boats marina for the bargain price of £24 million (Laughter) – y no había dinero, Mr Speaker!

The GHA spends around £30,000 per month outside of Gibraltar for specialist imaging, such as MRIs, PET, bone density and antenatal scans. Could it not be better used in training a few of our youngsters in these radiography fields, to purchase the necessary equipment ourselves and employ another radiologist for our own in-house imaging services? We presently have to subject our citizens to tiresome trips to Spain for regular scanning and MRIs because of the lack of vision to provide such essential services here at £30,000 a month. Financial planning and foresight is necessary, Mr Speaker: those economies of scale again.

The Health Minister, last year in his Budget speech, said that the GHA staff was healing from low morale from a lack of past GSD leadership. It would seem, Mr Speaker, that this healing is happening at an almost imperceptible rate. The Minister will be dismayed to learn that despite his efforts, including a couple of... shall we call them ‘entertaining’ appearances on the steps of St Bernard’s Hospital for the GBC open day, staff morale is reported to us as being lower than ever and a general malaise, stemming from the realisation that nothing much is changing, is setting in. You see, Mr Speaker, there are several indicators of an unhappy staff; a staff which is unable to shake off deep-seated discontent. They are rates of sickness and absence; the number of complaints made by the public; whether the staff are consulted in shaping their management and how top heavy management is; and the ability to recruit and retain specialist clinical staff.

1145

A review of information provided by and described by the Minister as ‘of little benefit’ and ‘for no apparent effect’ in response to Questions I asked at the last session of Parliament in May, has revealed that sickness rates for all employees of the GHA is up from 2012 to 2013. In order to provide some context and better enable the electorate to assess the extent of the malaise at the GHA, according to local leading human resources specialists, the average acceptable number of days’ sick leave in a year for a private sector employee is 4.4. This is set as a golden standard to benchmark against. Mr Speaker, to highlight the point, in 2013 the GHA administration and support staff each suffered an average of 11.4 days’ sick leave a year. Medical and allied health professionals suffered 12.4 days off sick, and nurses 15.5 days off each on average for the year. The total number of days lost to sick leave during 2013 was 14,825; 14,825 days of paying for cover, or where the public missed out on a service. Including the whole of the GHA staff, that makes an average of 16 days a year missed by every GHA employee, compared to a golden standard of 4.4. These figures take into account uncertified leave, short-term and long-term sick leave. The picture is indeed grim, Mr Speaker.

1150

1160

Another indicator to show whether our Health Service is healing are complaints from the public. The number of formal and informal complaints is indicative of public satisfaction with the GHA, and if you look at the statistics there are no vast improvements or a reduction in complaints these last two years. In fact, 2014 has got off to a shaky start for the first five months with the number of formal complaints already reaching nearly half the number that were recorded for the whole of 2013. The number of informal 1170 complaints for the first five months of 2014 are at 68; 76% of the number of recorded informal complaints for the whole of 2013.

1175 Despite sickness rates and complaints, the GSD's manifesto commitment for a new GHA management structure has been implemented. This was to be the answer to all of the GHA's problems. The hon. Members opposite finally got their way. They got a new GHA management, which conveniently removed the three non-Gibraltarian and one local executive members whom they had pinpointed when in opposition as wanting out of the GHA management team, irrespective of whether they were doing a good job or not. So now we have an even more top heavy management, Mr Speaker, with a Chief Executive who is not contracted to deliver on specific targets within a time frame – and this is not about the individual chosen; it is about holding the Chief Executive of the largest community budget to account, answerable to the GHA board.

1180 An extra operational layer of three unit general managers has been added to the GHA's management structure, plus an extra group of managers for clinical and corporate governance; all added to the existing GHA senior management team. And let's not mention the new GHA Strategy Development Group – a new management structure, Mr Speaker, which came from a £130,000 review, the report of which is still pending for publication and public scrutiny 19 months later; another report held in secret, Mr Speaker; a review of the GHA under new management which was set up in secret, with little or no consultation with clinical staff, only with a select few and imposed on GHA staff, despite their having no sight of the review report themselves, without the possibility to contribute.

1185 Another indicator of a sick GHA which is not healing is how well it can recruit and retain clinical staff. When the GSLP Liberals were in Opposition, they made much stock of the fact that the GHA, under the management of the GSD, was spending large amounts on locum or relief cover. Mr Speaker may find it interesting that the estimate for spending on relief cover this year is £2 million, the same as the amount actually spent in 2011-12. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) The Hon. the Chief Minister, in his Budget response last year, accused my analysis of being incorrect with regard to locum cover, while defending his Government's spend of £1.5 million that year; but it is creeping up again, Mr Speaker. Is this an indication that the Government's alleged success in turning the GHA around is attracting clinical specialists to work in Gibraltar and retaining them, or is the reality that they continue to face difficulties attracting doctors and nurses to work in Gibraltar?

1190 One thing is for sure, Mr Speaker: if this Government wants its people in key positions or has to honour promised promotions or positions for services rendered or because of family connections, they will do so. Having moved the goalposts for promotion after the vacancy notice for one district charge nurse, the Minister or another Minister ensured that all three applicants were given the promotion, even though it was not clinically indicated, making the service top heavy with 30% of the district nursing staff as managers. Why? Cronyism, Mr Speaker – the GSLP logo, (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) a pattern we see repeated on the GHA complaints review panel and in every Government Department, Agency and Authority. By denying other GHA staff the right to apply for what turned out to be three jobs in community nursing, the GSLP Liberal Government ensured that one of their supporters would get the job, of course at the expense of the taxpayer. (A Member: Shame! Shame!)

1200 So one must ask how the GHA is building a reputation for itself so it can attract new clinical staff. Well, unfortunately, we do not have enough Gibraltarians to fill the entire specialist clinical roles of the GHA, so advertising for these positions continues to be carried out outside of Gibraltar. For example, we have 16 specialist nursing positions presently vacant, where advertising for them will have to go outside of Gibraltar, as we do for doctors. Yet nursing and other GHA contracts of non-locals are being terminated after four years of work, disregarding any verbal or written contracts entered into with them under a GSD Government.

1215 We are extremely concerned by the GHA's stance and pernicious policy, and equally that of the Care Agency, towards contract and supply workers with reference to variation, termination of contracts, length of short-term contracts, permanent and pensionable status and gratuities. Employment rights are changing. Employees are being targeted and discriminated against as the 9th December has become the new 1st July law. The way staff – especially experienced and well qualified specialist nurses on contracts – are being treated is causing stress and anxiety among their work colleagues and morale is at an all-time low: that unhealed malaise I mentioned earlier, Mr Speaker.

1220 New working arrangements are being imposed without consultation or taking into consideration the interests of the patients who use the service. Most of the employees affected by the policy of this parochial and short-sighted Government are nurses in theatre, ICU, mental health and paediatrics. A continued exodus or cull of these specialists, fed up with this overly nationalistic and xenophobic policy, will have serious and detrimental consequences on the delivery of the high standards of care for the most vulnerable patients, potentially putting them at risk by replacing them with inexperienced staff, which undermines the available skill mix and will have serious consequences on the way we care for our patients and on manning

1230 levels. This is where we can foresee problems in retaining staff or recruiting new ones into these short, insecure contracts; something which has already been happening in the Care Agency with care workers.

The behaviour of this so-called ‘socialist’ Government towards non-local EU contract workers, who have demonstrated a high level of professionalism, expertise and commitment to our Health Service and Care Agency, is disgraceful and shows little regard for the welfare of workers, Mr Speaker. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (A Member: Yes!) (Banging on desks) If Gibraltarians working in any EU nation in which they planned to make their home were treated in this way, we would be protesting en masse outside of Parliament in Brussels, Mr Speaker.

1240 The Budget session is the opportunity for Ministers to laud what has been achieved in their Ministry the previous financial year and to promote their next lot of policies or initiatives for the financial year to come, supported by an estimated Budget, which is then approved by Parliament. So let’s go back to last year’s Budget to see if Dr Cortes managed to deliver on all he promised; or were they just empty words?

1245 Well, for the last two Budgets, 2012-13 and 2013-14, the Minister for Health announced the following would be delivered within the year, but we are still waiting: a conclusion to the negotiation of the consultants’ contract, with a new contract drawn up and signed – despite the Minister’s announcement yesterday that it was ready, we wait with baited breath; the opening of a children’s primary care clinic at St Bernard’s Hospital – or did I hear the Minister say yesterday that extra children’s clinics would now open at the Primary Care Centre, so perhaps a change of policy there; we still await a new Mental Health Act brought to Parliament.

1250 And most importantly – remember that noises about this have been made for the last five years – the medical complaints process was to be taken over by the Ombudsman’s office. We still await the necessary amendments to the Public Services Ombudsman Act, completed nearly a year ago, to come through Parliament. Hopefully, this will be presented at the end of this year, as the Ombudsman highlighted in a media interview a few days ago; but of course I must not forget – an improvement in the Minister’s eyes, no doubt – that the paid GHA Complaints Review Panel was repopulated by the Minister’s friends, many of whom are happy to publicly spout aggressive, vitriolic, anti-GSD rhetoric on Gibraltar’s social media.

1255 The Minister last year also promised that the new mental health facility would open last October – seven months ago – and then in December he said it would open this spring – last month. Perhaps they are reviewing the size of the rooms after many concerns were raised that they are smaller than prison cells. Or perhaps – we hope, Mr Speaker – that their manifesto commitment for providing on-site sheltered accommodation for those patients who can be cared for in the community but need home supervision and support is being explored.

1260 A stroke care protocol, a neurology service review and a management strategy for children with autism were also meant to have happened this last financial year, 2013-14. The stroke care protocol is still being developed, a neurology service is still being reviewed and certainly not enough for children with autism has been done for parents to be satisfied that the children are being offered all the support and therapies they deserve, Mr Speaker.

1270 And where is the final realisation that the present GHA board setup – exactly the same as it was since 1987, but with even less candour from board members, as they sit in public – needs a new governance system? The Hon. the Chief Minister at the last Budget said proudly how people can now turn up and listen to what is going on at the GHA board meetings. He means listen to the silence, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister was right in implying last year that, as an ex-board member, I should have admitted his governance needed changing, and if I may quote from my 2012 Budget speech, to refresh the Hon. Member’s memories, I said:

‘As an ex-GHA Board member, I note that the GHA Board process remains exactly the same – a process I disagreed with then and one which I was hoping to change, had I been given the opportunity.

If there was one lesson that came out of the 2008 global recession... it was that board governance... was unsuccessful in setting targets and holding chief executives to account. It was found that many boards tended to be incompetent groups of competent individuals. Their expectations, if stated at all, tended to be unclear and incomplete, and the executive reports reported against few or no criteria.

This was something I felt the GHA Board was also guilty of. In the absence of clear instructions or clear assignment of the Chief Executive, we found evaluating performance was an exercise in futility. The emphasis should not be on meeting in public; it should be on empowerment of the Board. Transparency is understanding how and why spending decisions are made. It is not just the production of data, presentations from the public which will be considered and the issuing of a multitude of press releases.’

1275 Mr Speaker, this is why a GSD Government would have further empowered the GHA Board, financial managers, consultants and doctors to exercise greater control over spending choices, budgets and service prioritisation, to ensure the proper balance between medical services, value for money and budgetary discipline.

1280 With regard to the GSLP Liberal Minister's way of leading through micromanagement and political interference, this has not allowed for our Minister for Health to cater for a clear separation of GHA activity from Ministry activity. Not a day goes by when we do not hear of the Minister's open-door policy to all, which ends in the interference of clinical decisions, helping individuals on a personal level, even though it means getting their preferred private hospital of choice. And this concern is not only levelled at the Minister for Health: we receive even more concerns in this regard, of political interference and micromanagement by 1285 the Ministry of Equality, Social Services and the Elderly, where every action at every level of the Ministry is paralysed until a final decision is taken by the Minister.

A Member: That is true.

1290 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And the Members opposite thought Sir Peter Caruana was bad!
But back to Health: an example of this political interference in clinical decisions is how, for a brief while over a year ago, natural procreative technology was suddenly advocated as an alternative to IVF and on offer privately via the GHA. The Minister hailed this in a press release as 'Government's commitment to healthcare goes beyond the NHS', where he showed surprise that I had questioned the validity of the GHA 1295 to pay for and offer such non-evidence-based, non-approved by NICE... or indeed a treatment available on the NHS. He even called me unreasoned and lacking consideration and sensitivity.

Well, thank goodness I raised the issue; and I know that clinical opinion and lobbying from within the GHA soon followed, because in answers to questions last month it seems that the Minister for Health has finally admitted the error of this political decision and NaPro technology is not on offer via the GHA, as 'access to this technology is currently under discussion' – the benefit of listening to your clinicians who 1300 know, Mr Speaker, before political interference or allowing third non-clinical parties to interfere in order to make the best clinical decisions for the patients.

Dr Cortes did listen to clinicians with regard to changing the Primary Care Centre appointments system to a one-month-in-advance system. However, as the Minister also agreed yesterday, it does not seem to be working satisfactorily because very little else has occurred to run alongside this new policy to support it.
1305 Every day, Mr Speaker, I have concerns raised with me about elderly citizens queuing outside the Primary Care Centre from 5 a.m. on the first day of the month in order to guarantee that they can get an appointment with their doctor; no more appointments available after 10 or 11 in the morning on the first day of the month, leading patients who genuinely need to review medication and control chronic conditions becoming lax about their own healthcare and not bothering for another whole month; the non-answering of phones to 1310 make an appointment on the first day of the month – patients spend up to three hours ringing the Primary Care Centre, with no-one answering the phone because all 60 lines are busy; the multiple booking of appointments with a doctor in the month by a now increasing amount of people, just in case they need them, as they know the available appointments will run out within hours – this leads to an increase of DNAs (did not attend), wasted appointments, as by the time the booked appointment comes round the patient 1315 concerned is not ill, and of course there is no cancellation list from which patients can feed into when DNAs or cancellations occur.

Why a patient cannot simply call at any time of the month to see their doctor, with a commitment to provide some form of a single medical appointment within say 72 hours, as in the UK, is unbelievable. Is this not the definition of a medical appointment: to see a sick person when they are in need? And patients 1320 who are unlucky in getting their prized appointment for the month end up in Accident and Emergency, swamping an overstretched service under enormous pressure, with only seven doctors 24/7 and often only three to five nurses. Nearly 50% of patients attending A&E should be seen by a GP, of which there are 17 in the Primary Care Centre from eight in the morning until five in the afternoon.

We understand that morale in A&E is very low: more of the GHA sickness, Mr Speaker. A&E has no 1325 management structure for the doctors or nurses. Doctors and nurses routinely work 12-hour shifts, with virtually no break, and they see 30 to 40 patients on a night shift – more during the day – and from 9 p.m.
there is only one doctor and no back-up. The risk from mistakes is significant, and I go back to one of the indicators: staff turnover and sickness rates are high in A&E. Patients naturally are becoming more upset and aggressive in A&E, with complaints daily as to waiting times as it is almost routine for a three-to-five-1330 hour wait in A&E daily.

The Primary Care Centre's current system is failing this community and the hospital; especially A&E is bearing the brunt. GPs are not given the space they need to focus on health promotion and education, which mitigates some attendance to GPs. The poor access to appointments and an A&E where care could be compromised: ultimately it is the patients who lose out.

1335 Mr Speaker, the Government has had two years to audit and get the primary care appointment system and the A&E service right – vital first-point-of-contact health services that reflect on the rest of the GHA. It is unacceptable that they have failed so dismally to deliver, so let's spend less money on sending patients to private hospitals and instead invest in these frontline services. But at least, Mr Speaker – in case he had 1340 failed to notice and so that he does not forget – we will have a refurbished No. 6 and we have a lovely new and green (Banging on desks) £5 million park! That is what matters, isn't it?

Gibraltar has about five and a half GPs per 10,000 of the population. This compares to about seven and a half per 10,000 of the population in the UK. Mr Speaker, the solution may be that we need more GPs; so some food for thought, as the Leader of the Opposition already mentioned yesterday. For the amount of £920,000 – the amount overspent by the Chief Minister on travel and entertainment this last year – we 1345 could have employed 10 more GPs for a year and the waiting list would have reduced by 33%.

Mr Speaker, along with the mental health facility at the former Royal Naval Hospital site, we also wait with baited breath for the opening of the Alzheimer and dementia Facility later this year perhaps; a facility which, after £12.1 million on converting the site, was nearly ready to open when this Government took the project over. For 16 months, the site ceased any activity, and now, after another £17.5 million to convert the 1350 conversion, the two facilities are ready and we must be awaiting, until later this year, the completion of the dementia day care centre – which is not a new concept, by the way, with more funding needed for that before the site is opened: £30 million and counting for whimsical changes and avoidable delays, Mr Speaker, y no había dinero! (A Member: Hear, hear.)

Notwithstanding the reckless devil-may-care spending spree of this Government, there is still no provision in the estimates for extra staffing to man the site, despite the training. Dates for these new facilities – first 18 months ago, then a year ago, then six months ago – were all expected opening dates. When will these two facilities finally open, Mr Speaker, and at what final cost? The Estimates Book includes no funding for the running and manning of the new facilities. Does this mean we may need to wait 1355 another year before the facilities fully open? Can the Government bear to add to the already extra almost 600 public sector workers who have been employed since they came into power? Or does the Government need to reign in overspending, as the Care Agency has also overspent its budget this last financial year by £3.7 million: by 17%.

Perhaps, Mr Speaker, the knowledge that the moment these facilities are filled one of the acute wards at St Bernard's Hospital will again fill with elderly long-stay patients awaiting a care bed – as Sir Peter Caruana predicted many a time when the then shadow Health Minister, Neil Costa, complained about the beds situation – is this what is stopping the Government from opening the facilities? Or maybe there is no more money to employ extra staff to run these facilities. We wait patiently. There certainly seems to be money to build a £24 million small boats marina, Mr Speaker! (Laughter)

Another site that was ready for use when this Government came into power was the former John Mackintosh Wing Home. It has taken two and a half years, another reconversion and another £4 million to finally release the property for social use. Mr Speaker, forward planning and vision are not strengths of this Government; more like 'making it up as we go along'.
1370

At the past Budget session, Mr Speaker, the Minister for Social Services said that under her watch, through constant reviews and working closely with management, the Care Agency is much less of a beast when she inherited it. From where we are, it seems that this beast is still alive and kicking, because as with the GHA, there are certain indicators which demonstrate the low morale and unhappiness within the agency. Sickness rates, turnover of staff and recruitment and retention of staff all point to this. Like other GHA staff, sickness rates among elderly care nurses this last year was higher than for 2012. They missed an average of eight days each a year, and that is not taking into account short-term sick leave or uncertified 1375 leave. When compared to the human resources gold standard of 4.4 days, there are twice as many elderly care nurses off sick than there really should be.

Another indicator is the high turnover of staff at the Care Agency and Social Services Department, which over two and a half years has seen 64 people resigning under this Government's watch in what is now the tamed 'beast'. In comparison, 69 GHA staff resigned in that period, in an Authority with a third extra staff employed there than in the Care Agency. In the Care Agency, the loss of, on average since this administration took office, a constant two members of staff a month... These include 44 care workers – 15 who worked with the elderly and 29 within other areas of the Care Agency. (A Member: Terrible! Terrible!) Six social workers have also resigned from their position. This demonstrates a high level of dissatisfaction and low morale at the Care Agency, (Banging on desks) especially when the Children and Families team has been under immense pressure to cover caseloads and effectively undertake the full range of essential tasks necessary for the well-being of our most vulnerable. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

The persistent loss of staff has also required a high number of supply care workers from private sector providers, filling in the gaps in order to provide cover and a service to our most vulnerable. Even these private carers are not lasting long in working for the Care Agency. Difficulty in recruiting and retaining staff in the Care Agency also extends to these private care providers. The result is that many vulnerable people have been deprived of the benefit of a close working relationship with the workers they relied and depended upon. Stability, continuity of care, familiarity and security with a regular group of carers is constantly under threat. For the Minister to have argued that staff turnover was as high during the GSD's

1400 time in office is nonsensical, because nothing has changed and this flies in the face of the taming of the beast that was the Care Agency.

1405 Last Budget, Mr Speaker, the Minister proclaimed that the Children and Families team was developing an adoption and fostering policy and that they were undertaking a review of the Adoption Act. Despite a commitment to such a review, in two and a half years there have only been seven adoptions and seven foster placements. Most worryingly, the seven foster placements took place in the first six months of this Government's term of office. There has not been even one foster placement in the last two years. 'Worrying' because there are many families in Gibraltar willing to provide a safe and stable environment for children and young people during a difficult time in their lives and who, for whatever reason, cannot be looked after in their own home. Such a vital service as this, which the Care Agency should be committed to in terms of training and supporting adults as potential foster carers, has not been happening and it means we are denying our most vulnerable children the breathing space to get away from a very difficult life. The Children and Families team has been so overstretched and under pressure that they did not have the time or the will to offer this vital service. We now hope that the extra social workers will pick up on the slack, and we look forward to learn more of any new measures with regard to fostering.

1415 Again, as announced at the last Budget, Mr Speaker, there is still no news on legislation to vet those who work with children in the voluntary sector. There is no news on the Challenging Behaviour Unit, or funding provision for it in the Estimates Book. It is good that our elderly are being provided with new facilities and options for domiciliary care and residential services, but it should not be at the expense of those vulnerable children who cannot defend themselves and who must rely on the state to make the proper and full provisions at their disposal and on their behalf.

1420 Another vulnerable sector of our community – the disabled – are still waiting for the Government to 'urgently honour', as their charity representatives described it, their manifesto commitment which said that in their first year they would legislate to further protect disabled people using the terms of the UN Convention as a model. The Minister has recommitted to this today. Let's see how it is enacted later this year as announced.

1425 Despite physical improvements in Gibraltar for those with disabilities, there is a way to go. Representations to us from those charities and those with mobility issues claim they are unhappy with the access from ramps on the beach to get to the seashore. They are unhappy that the disability stands at the Cavalcade and National Day do not cater for the families of those disabled to join them; and unhappy that there still is no appropriate, audited supported employment which actively and appropriately transitions those with special needs from education to employment and adult life, such as Project Search, a pioneering model that the Disability Society advocates.

1430 However, with this Government's poor track record on focused and accredited training, audited apprenticeship schemes and the Future Job Strategy – which my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino, will have some more to say on during his intervention, Mr Speaker – I am not surprised that the Sheltered Employment Scheme also leaves much to be desired. (Two Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk) One thing is throwing in the odd training day here, holding a conference day there and raising awareness by handing out leaflets, Mr Speaker; the other is actively working together with the groups and people who know what the real issues are, in order to design the services and provisions that really matter and that can make a difference in the lives of those with disabilities.

1440 Again, Mr Speaker, the Minister for Equality announced the setting up of a Domestic Violence Forum last year, which she says does not yet exist, despite the Minister stating it did so in answer to Parliament Questions. This forum was to make recommendations and act on initiatives that would come from them in order to tackle this scourge. I now look forward to any initiatives coming from the now set up forum which will be set up, because last year 55 incidents of domestic violence were reported to the Police, and in the first five months of 2014 there were already 84 cases reported against persons ranging from the age of 13 up to 76. About half of the cases will be legally pursued, Mr Speaker, ending up possibly in persons charged, but more frightening is that these are only the number of reported incidents. The dark figure of unreported crime can be anything from three to five times that figure, especially with domestic violence. It is to all these voiceless and frightened victims that we have a responsibility to react and to make a difference, and as the Minister said in a press release last year, 'to ensure that such violence is entirely eliminated in Gibraltar'; which is why I welcome the psychological support for victims and any new preventative measures that we put in place.

1450 In that same press release for the International Day of Eliminating Violence against Women, the Minister for Equality also said that:

1455 'This is not a partisan issue and I trust that we will be able to count on the support of the Opposition for our work on this front.'

Well, they do have our support, Mr Speaker, and we would like to hear of the work that is being done in this area and to contribute where we can.

1460 But not one policy in relation to women's equality issues has come from the Minister for Equality. The Equal Opportunities Commission is still three words on a manifesto page, despite a commitment today that it will be created sometime this year. The ideas, pilot projects and reforms remain elusive, despite press releases of the Minister attending a Women's Conference here, another somewhere else in the world, and another one somewhere else. The ideas are not brought back to Gibraltar yet. They remain abroad in those elusive conferences among those hallowed groups.

1465 Interestingly, while the Minister participated in the British Islands and Mediterranean Region Commonwealth Women Parliamentarians' Inaugural Conference, her contribution was linked to the participation by women in politics to push for increased representation. She highlighted the critical role that current women parliamentarians can play in inspiring other women to enter politics. Let us hope that this is the case. If not, the Minister's words on Women's International Day:

1470 'My aim is to mobilise meaningful change where this is necessary in order to achieve gender equality' are not just empty words. So we look forward to the conference early next year and to see what comes out of it.

1475 Mr Speaker, on 9th December 2011, Gibraltar experienced a new dawn. Dawn gave way to a cloudy day and the sun has scarcely shone in this community since. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Hanging above this community is a dark cloud of fear, control and secrecy, which engulfs Gibraltar as the GSLP Liberals' way beds once more into our society. Their answer to everything, as they figure out what they are doing, is to spend, spend, spend, and of course to blame the GSD. (A Member: Exactly!) The 'GSD could have done it in the last 16 years' argument no longer washes with the electorate. So much had to be done and was achieved by the GSD to pull Gibraltar up after 1996; and of course more remains to be done. But financial government is now the responsibility of this Government. They are spending money with reckless abandon, 1480 having inherited the GSD's golden legacy, Mr Speaker. What they do not seem to realise is that Gibraltar's public finances are not a bottomless pit. (A Member: Exactly.) What money we have we have because we still, as a community, have the resources available for the Government to spend. But one thing is clear: out-of-control spending must not be allowed to continue unabated.

1485 As my hon. Friend, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has stated time and again, including yesterday, the channelling of public money by Government through a private company, which is free to invest in whatever ill-advised project it decides and then use its private commercial status to hide its activities from public scrutiny, is scandalous and an aberration of the very concept of democracy and public transparency. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) This goes against all that European Governments – in particular, that of David Cameron – are successfully fighting to stop. This is a very worrying pillar stone of the Government's general modus operandi and more akin to the Governments of so-called banana republics than a community member of the European Union. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Even more seriously, it is a contemptuous affront and disrespectful to the people of Gibraltar. (A Member: Absolutely.)

1490 However, thankfully for Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, the sun has now begun to set on this Government's term of office, and as dusk approaches the winds of opportunity are starting to blow. The winds of change, like a fresh westerly after a spell of muggy levanter on a sunny August morning, will soon rid Gibraltar of the transient visionless and hopefully short-lived 'leadership' of this community by the GSLP Liberals and usher in the dawn of a new GSD Government when the Chief Minister calls the next election. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks and applause)

1500 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, given the presence of the Minister for Europe in Gibraltar, I now need to recess the House until 2.30, and invite Members to return then. They can, in the interim, go outside where the sun, the last time I checked, was shining very brightly indeed and there was a very fresh poniente wind.

1505 Mr Speaker: The House will recess to this afternoon at 2.30, when I think the Hon. Mr Gilbert Licudi will take the floor.

The House recessed at 11.40 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 2.03 p.m.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Gilbert Licudi.

5 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to report to the House on the areas that form part of my ministerial portfolio, starting with Education.

The estimates reflect that the amount required in the year ending 31st March 2015 for salaries, wages and expenses is £43,309,000. The forecast outturn for the year ended 31st March 2014 is £38,831,000. There is, therefore, a proposed increase this year of £4,478,000.

10 It should be noted, Mr Speaker, that a significant part of that increase relates to scholarships. Hon. Members will note a provision for 2014-15 of £14,865,000 compared to a forecast outturn in 2013-14 of £12,396,000. That is an increase of almost £2,469,000 just in the scholarships bill.

15 2013-14, Mr Speaker, saw 240 mandatory scholarships being awarded as well as a total of 96 discretionary awards. As a result of the changes the Government has already made since being elected into office in respect of mandatory, distance learning and discretionary scholarships, the Department of Education has already implemented a bespoke student data management system which is capable of keeping track and intelligently make use of student career data and progress.

The Gibraltar Internship Initiative in Washington DC is going from strength to strength with a record number of applicants expressing an interest this year – more than 30, in fact, have applied.

20 The Initiative offers students a unique opportunity and experience in support of their professional development. Successful applicants will have the opportunity to intern in the executive suites of Fortune 500 companies, international organisations such as the Inter-American Development Bank, the World Bank and International Monetary Fund, for example, as well as in great American institutions such as the Smithsonian or the US Congress.

25 The Initiative also includes academic sessions and classes delivered by professors from top US universities. Students are matched with potential employers according to their needs and interests, thus developing their skills as well as enjoying an unforgettable experience with students from around the world.

30 The Department of Education continues to support the private and public sectors with their training and professional development initiatives. Professional qualifications such as ACCA and ACA are funded in partnership with the industry as well as qualifications for port and maritime operations. Government's own Human Resources Department has been supported in obtaining professional Human Resource management qualifications for key personnel. Income Tax, Department of Transport, GCID, Youth Service and Technical Services, to name but a few, have all benefitted from Government's continued commitment to fund professional development courses and qualifications.

35 The Kusuma Centre at St Martins was completed on 16th September 2013. The Kusuma Centre is annexed to the main building and has been funded by the Kusuma Trust, to which the Government is very grateful for its continued support on this and other projects.

40 The annex has a classroom for the older pupils in the school, which is equipped with all the necessary facilities to make the area self-sufficient for the educational and other needs of the pupils. It also has a therapy room which is used by the occupational, speech and physiotherapists for group sessions.

45 The Kusuma Centre enables pupils to acquire independent life skills as well as developing self-esteem. The extension comprises a large classroom facility with immediately adjacent but separate purpose-built shower/bathroom and toilet facilities, a store room and a comfort/safe space room. There is also a large therapy room which doubles up for multi-disciplinary clinics with paediatricians and visiting consultants. At the lobby entrance there is a therapists' office and additional toilet facilities.

Mr Speaker, the conversion of the Old St Bernard's Hospital site into two new schools is well under way. The old hospital premises will house both St Bernard's and Sacred Heart Schools, with the latter being renamed Sacred Heart Middle School once the new school opens.

As announced previously, the Government is fulfilling a manifesto commitment to re-locate Sacred Heart in a manner which will allow the school, over time, to take an equivalent number of students as other middle schools.

The First School will have eight classrooms as well as a range of specialised teaching areas and spaces specifically designed to cater for this age range.

The Middle School will have 16 classes, as well as dedicated teaching areas for music, ICT, technology, art and science, in keeping with the needs of older children. The headteachers of the two schools continue to be consulted and have been involved in the design process from the onset. The relocation will provide the children and staff assigned to these schools with modern, comfortable premises in an environment which is specifically designed to be conducive to learning.

A noteworthy feature of this school will be a central glass-roofed atrium, which will be available for students and teachers to enjoy either for social or educational purposes. Both schools will be fully networked and equipped with ICT resources and facilities. They will both be fully accessible in order to cater for pupils, parents or teachers who may have mobility issues.

The new building will also house a shared sports hall, with a play area on top of the hall for the First School. Both the sports hall and the play area will be available for community use. This can be accessed separately and will house toilets and changing room facilities.

Mr Speaker, as I have said before, this is an extremely exciting project. We will create much needed school facilities in this area as well as sports facilities for the community. This will be, in fact, the first Sports Hall that will be built in the central or upper town area.

The project also makes use of the existing iconic buildings built in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries and which will be tastefully restored.

Mr Speaker, I will deal with minor works and refurbishment in schools.

(1) The flat roof at Bishop Fitzgerald Middle School, which serves as assembly point for the whole school, will be replaced during the forthcoming summer recess. The elevated escape routes will also be repaired. (2) Bayside School will have its drama studio floor replaced and the internal painting programme completed before the commencement of the new academic year in September. (3) The external façade of Bleak House will be repaired and repainted and the fire escape flooring repaired. (4) St Anne's Middle School will have its existing water membrane to the flat roof replaced in its entirety to prevent water ingress. (5) St Joseph's First School will have a covered walkway leading from the main building to the lunch hall in order to prevent the little ones from being exposed to the elements. (6) St Bernard's Nursery will undergo necessary internal and external works during the course of this financial year. (7) Rubber crumb flooring will be provided to the playing area at St Martin's Special School. (8) All exposed timber members at St Paul's First School will be treated with good quality wood primer and finished with a high performance gloss. And (9) a new fire escape route will be constructed for St Mary's School.

In the financial year ending 31st March 2014, the following works have been carried out inter alia: the new facilities at St Joseph's First and Middle Schools, which includes the new lunch hall, were completed at a total cost of £614,000; two new science laboratories at Westside School have also been constructed – the total cost has been £205,000; Westside School driveway has been resurfaced at a total cost of over £37,000; the windows at the external façade of St Mary's First School have all been replaced – the cost has been over £55,000; the works to provide the following schools with rubber crumb flooring have also been completed at a total cost of £155,000 – that is to Governor's Meadow First School, Hebrew Primary School, St Mary's First School and Varyl Begg Nursery; windows in the ICT and history area at Bayside School have been replaced at a total cost of £37,000; phased internal painting programme at Bayside school has also been completed at a cost of £46,000; the special needs works at Bishop Fitzgerald School to make access for pupils with mobility issues again that has been completed at a cost of £46,000; the Special Needs works at Bishop Fitzgerald First School have also been completed at a cost of £63,000; external repairs have been carried out at the Gibraltar College to its east and south stairwell of main building – the total cost has been £51,000; the toilet block at Sacred Heart Middle School was reconfigured and refurbished at a cost of over £12,000; the reception area at St Anne's Middle School has been relocated, a new storeroom constructed adjacent to the sports room, at a cost of over £21,000; St Paul's First School has had the east side fencing repaired, the west side debris netting replaced with a proprietary cover and the playground fence replaced with a brick wall – a total cost of over £55,000; and Notre Dame First School has had the deteriorated PVC tiles replaced at some classrooms, throughout all the school, at a cost of over £30,000.

Mr Speaker, this reflects the commitment we have entered into to carry out the necessary refurbishment to all the schools – a commitment which we have complied with during the course of the last financial year and, as I have already outlined, will certainly continue during the course of the next financial year.

Mr Speaker, I will deal with developing technology in schools.

110 Safer internet use: the Department of Education continues to engage with the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority, the Royal Gibraltar Police, the Citizen's Advice Bureau and other appropriate bodies in order to ensure that children and young people are fully aware of the potential dangers of careless internet use, especially in the light of the dissemination of personal data and content in social networking sites. Schools are kept fully briefed via programmed sessions aimed at children and teachers.

115 Smart boards: the continued financing of Smartboards has allowed us to have access to over 300 of these throughout our schools. These are housed mainly in classrooms but we will continue to increase their numbers and expand into specialist rooms. A regular maintenance programme for Smart boards was introduced last year and this is already showing benefits in terms of extending the shelf-life of relatively costly consumables such as the halogen bulbs in the Smart board projector pod.

120 Computer Science: a new national curriculum programme of study for computing in England will replace the old ICT curriculum and will set out to teach children 'computational thinking', as from September 2014.

125 The Advisory Service of the Department of Education attended a professional conference in London in order to keep abreast of developments in this field. The conference highlighted the changes that will take place within the primary sector to achieve this end. I am happy to report that some of the initiatives that were suggested as first steps at the conference, such as introducing children to programming, are already happening in a number of our first and middle schools. Early programming skills are already being taught through the use of software such as 'Scratch'. It is expected that all first and middle schools will be using this in the next academic year.

130 Tablets: schools in all sectors are looking to tablets as a means of improving teaching and learning in the classroom. Some teachers have piloted their use and it is an area which teachers are keen to explore. Having access to these is already throwing up very exciting ways of interacting with the pupils. First and middle schools are using them within the course of a lesson to allow the pupils to access software and data relevant to the lesson. They provide opportunities for pupils to practice or extend lesson objectives or to be engaged in active research through the internet. At secondary level pupils have been able to access course content and revision exercises set up by their teacher.

135 Maintenance: IT support and maintenance of ICT equipment in schools has undergone an enormous improvement – and I have already mentioned that to you in the course of Question Time, Mr Speaker, especially since the Government's IT and LD Department has taken over. All schools have reported that the response time to repairs has certainly improved.

140 Nurseries: applications for nursery placements are lower this year in comparison to last year, when we had 390 and in this year, 332, which comes up to 350 with late entries, have applied. There will again be a nursery place available for every application should parents wish to take up the offer they receive. Due to the fall in demand, however, it will not be necessary to open St. Mary's and Governor's Meadow nurseries in the afternoon, as was the case last year.

145 Special Educational Needs (SEN): in the UK the changes to the SEN Code of Practice 2001 are in the final revision stage. The Advisory Service recently attended a conference where the main changes for England were highlighted. The Department of Education is reviewing what the implications of the changes, if any, are for Gibraltar. The Advisory Service has also led a number of twilight sessions on dyslexia, for secondary teachers.

150 Special Educational Needs Co-ordinators in Schools (SENCOS) received additional training on how to support pupils with special educational needs in the areas of sex and relationships. This was a follow up to training they received last year on autism, where this sensitive and important issue was first discussed. In addition, the Autism Support Group Gibraltar recently held a 'Positive about Autism' Conference for parents, to which representatives from the Advisory Service and the schools were invited to attend.

155 It was important, Mr Speaker, to listen to parents' perspectives, as it helps to strengthen the parents/schools partnership. In addition, the Advisory Service has extended in-service training on autism to schools on request.

160 In May of this year, Mr Speaker, a small number of teachers along with a member of the Advisory Service attended a Hemispheres Think Write Handwriting Programme course which was organised for parents. The course focuses on helping children between three and eight years of age master the skills of writing. The cognitive framework of the Hemispheres Think Write supports children's learning by linking old and new learning together, expanding and categorising learning for ease of storage and retrieval, essential qualities for the development of automatic writing by the end of Key Stage 2.

165 English as a foreign or second language: Mr Speaker, due to the increasing number of pupils coming into our education system from all over the world, the Department of Education has now set-up a dedicated team comprising of a qualified teacher and two graduates to support schools with the teaching of English to non-English speakers.

Continuing Professional Development: the Advisory Service has also facilitated in-service in the following areas.

170 (1) Safeguarding Children Tier 1 Training – this multi-agency commitment, which education forms part of, has continued to offer training. (2) Dignified Care and Responsibility Training (DCRT) – this continues to be facilitated by the Advisory Service. Restraining children should always be a last resort strategy. DCRT is commended for its focus on de-escalation techniques and serve to reduce the need to physically restrain children. This course includes both the theoretical aspects, such as understanding aggression and aggression cycles, triggers, self-awareness and risk assessments, as well as the practical skills needed to safely restrain children.

175 (3) The new National Curriculum is set to roll out in the UK in September 2014. One aspect of the changes is in relation to the assessment and the abolishing of National Curriculum levels. Following attendance at a recent conference on ‘Effective Primary Assessment after Levels’, the Advisory Service will provide appropriate in-service training for the headteachers in the primary sector. (4) First aid courses in schools – this continues and is a part of a rolling programme facilitated by the Advisory Service.

180 (5) Mr Speaker, as I have mentioned earlier, health and safety audits of all schools were completed. We have this year entered into arrangements to train our headteachers and deputies in matters relating to health and safety. We are now able to provide the Level 2 Award in Health and Safety in the Workplace course of the Chartered Institute of Environmental Health for our school leaders. The course is designed to benefit our senior managers by providing essential knowledge on a range of issues. The course should highlight typical generic workplace hazards and suggest effective control measures. It is hoped that this should better equip the participants in all matters relating to health and safety and, furthermore, make them more aware of how their own actions can affect the health, safety and wellbeing of others. The ultimate aim is to train as many people as is deemed necessary in order to continue to safeguard the health and safety of all those who work within school communities.

190 Post-16 developments: Mr Speaker, in my Budget speech last year I emphasised that the public examination system in England was in a constant state of flux and that, accordingly, the Department of Education was keeping a close watch on 14-19 developments.

195 These developments in the UK are now gradually taking shape with a return to a more traditional examination system comprised mostly of terminal papers and doing away with the ongoing modular arrangement we currently have.

I am happy to report that the Director of Education and Senior Education Advisor attended a conference last November in London which dealt with these proposed changes. The Advisory Service has already held meetings with the senior management teams of both secondary schools to keep them abreast of these developments and to ensure that our schools are ready to take on the new challenges.

200 Mr Speaker, we in Gibraltar are justly proud of our examination results. It is acknowledged by all that our students do well and that we compare very favourably to other UK schools. Nevertheless, we should never become complacent.

205 This year we have undertaken a comprehensive analysis of our examination results with the aim of supporting those departments and teachers who most needed our help. The Advisory Service have met and spoken at length with some of the key players responsible for the constant assurance of quality. Where necessary, teachers have been sent on courses and conferences, to increase their understanding in all matters relating to education. In particular, specific subjects have been targeted. Furthermore, upon their return, teachers have been asked to brief others, sometimes across schools so that information is adequately disseminated.

210 Advisors have also spoken to heads of departments and observed lessons. The challenge, of course, is to ensure that children always learn to the best of their abilities and are afforded the best opportunities available.

215 But, Mr Speaker, our success of course cannot be measured just by examination results, important as these are. Our view, of course, is that education is about preparing our children to be the citizens of tomorrow; it is about awakening a passion for learning in all of them and getting them to enjoy learning for its own intrinsic value. The ethos should be on teaching to learn how to learn.

220 Our children therefore continue to enjoy a range of fascinating activities which we hope will contribute to this. Examples are: two drama practitioners from the famous Shakespeare’s Globe Theatre visited Gibraltar and carried out workshops and after-school sessions with students from both Bayside and Westside Schools and their drama groups; the Learning from Auschwitz programme continues to grow in strength and has attracted interest and participation from Year 12 and Gibraltar College students – pupils from middle schools were also invited to the first annual Holocaust Memorial Day; and the Young Enterprise Scheme continues to grow from year to year – in fact, the finals of the Company Programme were held last week. Furthermore, our pupils have also taken part in a wealth of competitions organised by the Department of Education. Amongst the many, the interfaith competition is worthy of special mention. There was real educational value here and the level of participation and commitment from teachers and students alike is testament to this.

Schools availed themselves of the opportunities offered by the speakers from the highly successful first Gibraltar Literary Festival. This year's Literary Festival, later on in the autumn, will include even more sessions from prominent speakers and writers specifically aimed at our young people. The Department of Education has been fully consulted in the choice of authors and personalities travelling to Gibraltar to talk to children about areas such as food, science, literature, language and history – and no doubt this year's festival will be another enormous success, as it was last year.

Furthermore, pupils have also participated in a wide range of worthwhile competitions. For example, the Gibraltar Post Office's letter writing competition which formed part of the Universal Postal Union International Letter Writing Competition; the Ministry for Culture's Spring Festival Logo and Short Story competition and the ever-popular Young Artist Competition; the Royal Gibraltar Police's Poster Competition which was part of their anti-drugs and promotion of sports campaign; and the Gibraltar Heritage Trust's 24th Annual Painting Competition whose main aim was to raise awareness of our heritage. There was plenty of participation by all our students in various schools in all of these events.

As part of their broader education, Gibraltar's teachers and pupils have helped to keep alive the generosity that Gibraltarians are famous for and have always prided themselves in, and have contributed to raise thousands upon thousands of pounds for both local and international charities.

We are very grateful – I have mentioned already – as always to the Kusuma Trust for their continued support in bringing outreach programmes in mathematics and science from both the University of Cambridge and the British Science Museum. This year we were once again visited by top British Universities who delivered their lectures and imparted sound advice to our senior pupils. Furthermore, our pupils have also participated in mock interviews designed to get them past the hurdle of even the most stringent admissions tutors.

The University of Gibraltar: Mr Speaker, plans to create a University of Gibraltar continue on track and are now at an advanced stage. It is envisaged that the University will open for business from September 2015, as per the Government's 2011 Manifesto commitment.

The legal framework establishing the University is also at an advanced drafting stage.

Mr Speaker, I am very happy to report that all institutions approached by the Department of Education have expressed their delight and enthusiasm at the opportunity of working with Gibraltar on the University project.

A number of meetings with senior staff and faculty members from the University of London have been held with a view to setting up collaborative undergraduate programmes. Working links between the Department of Education in Gibraltar and the University of London and the London School of Economics have been established; and as a result appropriate undergraduate courses, including computer science, law and finance, are currently under consideration.

Mr Speaker, as I announced recently, a Memorandum of Understanding with the University of Seychelles has been signed during my recent very productive visit to the islands and, as a result, there are now concrete plans and discussions to develop a joint Gibraltar and Seychelles universities Master of Science in the Marine Environment, designed to cover all aspects of the 'Blue Economy' and designed for those working or seeking employment in a maritime environment including shipping, renewable energies, fisheries, conservation and so on.

This will be a two-centre masters degree and it is envisaged that it will involve exchanges between Gibraltar and Seychellois students. We also expect that over time this unique course, offered in two exciting locations, will be very attractive to international students interested in this area. There will be other collaborative postgraduate programmes with selected internationally-recognised academic institutions, a number of which are already under consideration.

The University of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, will also be a principal driver in the creation and development of a locally-orientated knowledge base serving to underpin the further development of the key elements of our economy. It aims to do this by becoming a centre of excellence and fostering and developing quality academic research. It will also act as a central hub for all aspects of Tertiary or Higher Education activity in Gibraltar. It will be something the whole of Gibraltar will be proud of. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, our citizens have always been very respectful of each other, celebrating what we have in common and respecting our differences. This all begins in our schools, through commitment and a quality education which goes beyond teaching just to pass examinations. It gives me a sense of pride to see our young people develop into the citizens of tomorrow, particularly when one looks at the problems which some countries in Europe and the rest of the world face, with emerging extremism and violence borne out of a lack of understanding for each other.

Mr Speaker, on a slightly less positive note, let me address an issue on Education by reflecting on a policy paper recently announced by the Opposition.

In the first paragraph of the Opposition's policy document on education and training they say and I quote:

‘We believe that significant changes...’

290 – and this is a quote –

‘... to our education system should be made... in order to meet the educational challenges ahead, to make our system the best it can possibly be and one of the best in the world.’

Mr Speaker, it struck me as a little odd that having been in Government for sixteen years, as they were, that this same party who had the opportunity of making whatever changes they felt necessary should just over two years later make a public statement calling for significant changes to the educational system. But especially so, Mr Speaker, when one has a quick peep at Hansard and reads what the Hon. GSD Minister for Education, at the time, said in his Budget speech in 2010, when referring to the teachers and professionals involved in the educational process and said, and I quote:

‘...it is through their hard work and dedication make sure that we have in Gibraltar an education service in both academic and pastoral terms, that could well be the envy of any community of our size anywhere else.’

300 An educational system which is the envy of any community – and the hon. Members opposite suggest now that significant changes are necessary.

But that is not all, Mr Speaker. Twelve months later in their last Budget, before the 2011 Election, the same Minister said the following, and I quote:

‘It is their joint effort... working in a well-resourced, safe environment that ensures that we have in Gibraltar an education service in academic, vocational and pastoral terms that could well be the envy of any community of our size.’ (Banging on desk)

Well, it seems he just repeated what he said the previous year. Mr Speaker, almost identical language in 2010 and then again in 2011; and no sign at the time of a suggestion that they felt the need for any change, let alone the significant change that they now call for.

310 So how is it and why in their 2011 Manifesto in such a short period of time after having had 16 years of opportunity to implement changes can they suggest the ‘significant changes’ that they now profess are needed.

Mr Speaker, the wording of the policy document is basically copied from their manifesto and released as a new idea – a new idea which they clearly kept to themselves whilst they were in office for 16 years. The contradiction in what they say and what they actually do is there for all to see and is evident in just about everything which the Opposition does – but that, of course, is not new at all. (Laughter and banging on desks)

315 Telecommunications: Mr Speaker, which is another of my areas of responsibility. I have responsibility for certain aspects of the work carried out by the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority under the provisions of the Communications Act 2006. The GRA is an independent authority which, under the Act, regulates the following areas: electronic communications, which includes broadcasting networks, radio communications and licensing of the radio spectrum; and international co-ordination of satellite networks and licensing.

There are seven companies operating under the regime set up by the Communications Act providing a variety of fixed and mobile networks and services.

325 Currently, there are two active mobile operators – Gibtelecom and Eazitelecom, trading as Shine – providing 2G and 3G services.

Gibtelecom is the oldest operator and is well established with a range of services. Shine is now offering two pre-paid mobile voice plans and 3G services to customers over their independent mobile network. Shine’s network covers over 98% of the geographical area of Gibraltar.

330 4G, Mr Speaker, which is short for ‘fourth generation’, is the fourth generation of mobile telecommunications technology, succeeding 3G. 4G aims to offer users faster, more reliable mobile broadband internet for devices like smartphones, tablets and laptops. Loosely speaking, 4G is around five times faster than existing 3G services.

335 A 4G system, in addition to the usual voice and other services of 3G, provides mobile ultra-broadband internet access. For example, to laptops with USB wireless modems, to smartphones and to other mobile devices. Conceivable applications include amended mobile web access, IP telephony, gaming services, high-definition mobile TV, video conferencing, 3D television and cloud computing.

340 But what does, Mr Speaker, all this mean in practice? The faster speeds mean that websites load quicker and that you will be able to stream videos and podcasts without first waiting for them to buffer. Plus, you will be able to download large email attachments or other content from the web much faster. Applications which need to download data, such as maps, will work more smoothly, especially when zooming in or out, as this generally requires a lot of data. The speed differential should be akin to switching from 3G to WiFi.

Mr Speaker, in December 2013, the Government, through the GRA, issued a public consultation on proposals to license the provision of 4G mobile communications services in Gibraltar. The focus of the consultation was on the process for licensing 4G services and, in this context, to set out the GRA's plans for the spectrum bands which should be granted access for the provision of 4G services.

The fees for the use of 4G spectrum have been considered and the current fees for 2G and 3G have been re-evaluated. The proposed fees have been arrived at considering, but not limiting to, the following factors: demand for spectrum; availability of the required bands; and interoperability of technology allowed in the band due to sharing constraints or international sharing agreements.

Built into the award process is a methodology that took into account of the possibility of interest from new operators as well as current mobile operators.

Mr Speaker, I am happy to report that both Gibtelecom and Shine will be rolling out 4G services and have accepted the minimum criteria required for the rollout, which includes: launch date – 4G operators will be obliged to launch commercial services within 18 months of licence award; coverage at launch – 4G operators will be obliged to provide at least 70% population coverage at launch; and population coverage to be achieved – 4G operators will be obliged to provide at least 95% population coverage within three years of service launch. These operators will be able to provide 4G services by October 2015 at the latest.

Mr Speaker, in order to gain a better understanding of the present issues that affect the local broadband market, a data collection exercise was undertaken by the GRA. The results of this exercise have served to provide a better understanding of network access and of pricing issues in Gibraltar. This information will provide a useful backdrop to weigh against any competition issues which may arise during the upcoming broadband market review process.

Under the provisions of section 22 of the Communications Act 2006, the GRA is required to send to the European Commission, the Body of European Regulators for Electronic Communications (BEREC) and other regulatory authorities in the Member States, a copy of a market review notification inviting them to make representations on the proposed measures within a period of one month.

The GRA attended a market review pre-notification meeting with the European Commission in Brussels which dealt with the retail access and calls markets.

Before any National Regulatory Authority (NRA) formally notifies its market reviews, they have the opportunity of meeting the regulatory co-ordination and markets unit of the Commission in order to informally discuss their market analysis and proposed Significant Market Power (SMP) designations.

Preliminary feedback on the NRA's investigation is provided by the Commission's team which enables the NRA to make any amendments to its notification before being formally submitted.

The GRA is currently undertaking various market reviews in the electronic communications sector and a consultation on the following retail markets was published in January 2014: (1) access to the public telephone network at a fixed location; (2) publicly available local telephone services provided at a fixed location; (3) publicly available international telephone services provided at a fixed location; (4) wholesale broadband access; and (5) retail broadband.

Markets will be defined, the state of competition analysed and if dominant players are established, SMP obligations will be imposed in the relevant markets.

Mr Speaker, the Satellite Division of the GRA is responsible for looking after the interests of the satellite industry in Gibraltar, ensuring compliance with the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) Radio Regulations, all other international obligations and representing the interests of Gibraltar at international meetings.

The Division also assists with the co-ordination of satellites and orbital locations filed by the UK Administration with the ITU, on behalf of the Gibraltar-based company SES Satellites (Gibraltar) Ltd.

As I mentioned last year, Gibraltar's new national digital TV network, replaced the analogue TV network which was switched off on 31st December 2012.

The arrival of digital television and the switching off of the analogue TV network has been a positive move for Gibraltar. Not only has this new digital service offered TV viewers with a clearer picture and better sound quality, there is also scope for additional TV channels, information services and high definition TV.

At present, Gibraltar has two television broadcasters and two radio broadcasters. Gibraltar Freeview, the entity which operates the digital network, is, as the Chief Minister has already said in his address, pursuing business opportunities with other broadcasters to offer new channels, for both TV and radio, and widen the choice of programmes and information services for Gibraltar and internationally.

The GRA, Mr Speaker, collects administrative charges from providers of electronic communications services and networks, radio communications licence fees and other reimbursements.

During the 2013-14 financial year, the total collected was £1,474,028.26, which was paid into the Consolidated Fund. This compares to expenditure for all of the GRA's Divisions of just over £1.5 million.

Mr Speaker, I turn to the area of Justice. I would start my contribution on Justice by taking this opportunity to thank Mr Justice Barrington Black for the excellent and important work he did for the Judiciary in his acting appointment (Banging on desks) as Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar. And I am grateful for the support shown by the Opposition on this.

405 He was brought in primarily for the purposes of clearing a substantial backlog of criminal cases, which in large measure he did, and for that I wish to acknowledge his work and praise him for his efforts. I wish him a happy retirement and the very best for the future.

410 In the same breath, I would like to congratulate Mr Justice Adrian Jack who has recently been selected for the post of Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar and who will take up his appointment in August of this year.

The introduction of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act rightly introduces an expectation that court matters will be disposed of with reasonable time and it is for this reason that the Government agreed to fund a substantive post for a fourth resident Puisne Judge. On behalf of the Government, I welcome Mr Justice Jack to Gibraltar and I wish him every success in his appointment as a senior member of the Judiciary.

415 Mr Speaker, I turn to matters regarding legislation and I highlight some of the issues we have dealt with and are currently working on.

Hate crimes: Mr Speaker, last year I said in my Budget address that Government intended to introduce a Bill on hate crimes, which made specific reference to crimes based on sexual orientation and disability; providing that the courts must, where it is a contributing factor to an offence, take hatred – on the grounds of race, sexual orientation, disability or religion – into account as an aggravating factor when sentencing. This was done.

420 Furthermore, new offences of stalking and stalking involving fear of violence or serious alarm were legislated for, as were new powers for the Police, to enter and search premises in relation to cases of stalking, and introducing new sections on injunctions to protect persons from harassment, restraining orders on acquittal and a new offence of harassment of a person in his home.

425 Rehabilitation of offenders: the introduction of provisions on the rehabilitation of offenders was a manifesto commitment of the Government. Provisions for such legislation were included in the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act 2011. However, such provisions were based on UK legislation, which had become out of date and no longer fit for purpose to help reformed offenders resettle into society.

430 As a result, the UK changed their legislation in March of this year. This was based on research which suggested that the rehabilitation periods were too long and did not reflect the point at which reoffending tails off following a conviction. The changes in the UK meant that there was a very wide gap between rehabilitation periods in the UK and those in Gibraltar.

435 As an example, someone sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the UK had a rehabilitation period of four years, whereas someone sentenced to the same period of imprisonment in Gibraltar had a rehabilitation period of 10 years. As a result, I introduced a Bill in the last session of Parliament to ensure that rehabilitation periods in Gibraltar were modernised in line with current UK periods. The practical effect of the change is that those reformed offenders, who wish to go down the right path and contribute to society, are now better able to do so.

440 Companies: subject to the commencement of this legislation on 1st September 2014, Mr Speaker, the Government's manifesto commitment to introduce a much-needed and thorough review of companies legislation has been completed.

445 The review has involved consideration of proposals put forward by the Company Law Reform Committee set up by the Finance Centre Council and a consultation process including the issuing of a Command Paper. The Act, passed recently in Parliament, incorporates a number of issues which were raised also during the Command Paper consultation period.

450 Given that our companies legislation dated from 1930 – albeit amended from time to time – a major overhaul with a view to updating and modernising the legislation was required. There has been extensive work carried out in preparing the new legislation with much participation from private sector practitioners both at the preparation and the consultation stages. I am grateful to everyone who has contributed to this and, as I have already said, expect that the Act, together with the legislation passed to bring into effect the Insolvency Act 2011, will be commenced on 1st September 2014.

455 EU Directives: Mr Speaker, further to the increase in staff at the EUI Department, which I reported last year and which led to Gibraltar being for the first time in modern history up to date with the transposition of EU Directives, I am pleased to inform the House that a further four legal assistants have been recruited into the European Union and International Department during the course of last year in order to ensure that we remain up to date. This signals Gibraltar's commitment to compliance with international obligations.

460 Proceeds of crime legislation: During the course of the next financial year, the Government will introduce proceeds of crime legislation which, among other things, will allow the forfeiture or confiscation of assets arising from criminal conduct even in the absence of a criminal conviction.

Regulation of investigatory powers: Mr Speaker, the Government will also introduce, in the course of the next financial year, legislation to regulate the powers of law enforcement bodies to intercept communications, acquire and disclose data relating to communications and carry out surveillance. Similar 465 legislation was introduced in the UK in the year 2000.

The provisions of the legislation, which is currently being worked on and finalised, will include stringent safeguards – and it is important to stress that it will include very stringent safeguards – to ensure that the relevant investigatory powers are used in accordance with the rights in the Gibraltar Constitution and international human rights obligations.

470 Legal aid and legal assistance: Mr Speaker, as the House well knows, the Government has a manifesto commitment in relation to legal aid and legal assistance.

My ministry has been involved in a consultation process which has included the Bar Council, the Registrar of the Supreme Court and the Chief Justice. As I said only a couple of weeks ago, we are very close to finalising arrangements for a new system. This will provide a fairer and more cost-effective system 475 which will benefit those in need of assistance and provide value for money for the taxpayer.

I expect to be in a position to announce and hopefully publish the changes which will be made before the start of the new legal year in October.

Mr Speaker, I turn to matters linked with the Gibraltar Law Courts. The past year has been an extremely busy one for our Law Courts. Notwithstanding this, the improvements in the performance and services 480 provided reported last year, continue to be maintained and further enhanced.

The increase in the administrative staff complement, together with the appointment of an additional stipendiary Magistrate, has enabled the Magistrates' Court to hold second court sittings on at least two days per week. This has resulted in an unprecedented reduction of waiting time for hearings from six to eight months to now six to eight weeks.

485 For the Supreme Court, I mentioned some moments ago that this administration has recognised that for the administration of Justice to function effectively, both for the purposes of providing an efficient service to our citizens and also to effectively deal with finance centre commercial litigation, the minimum complement of judges required at the Supreme Court is the Chief Justice and three Puisne Judges.

490 The vast majority of applications received at the Supreme Court, continue to receive first hearing dates within five days of application and there continues to be no backlog of civil and family applications waiting for first hearing dates. Also the dates of those first hearings are typically within two to three months of the date of the application to the court.

In respect of criminal trials, it is worth noting that the two-year appointment of Mr Justice Black came to an end in April of this year, and during that time the court was able to set down for hearing two criminal 495 trials at a time. This resulted in the criminal list being cleared. However, the ongoing lengthy criminal fraud trial which commenced in the first week of October 2013 has meant that during this time only one other criminal case can be set down for hearing and this has resulted in some element of backlog being created.
Therefore in these terms, Mr Speaker, the arrival of Mr Justice Adrian Jack will mean that any backlog that has arisen should soon be tackled and cleared.

500 The electronic diary system for the Supreme Court reported on last year has now been installed and court staff has received training on its use. The system will become fully operational once it has been populated with all the necessary data.

The Gibraltar Courts Service website continues to be updated and developed. General forms for both the Magistrates' and Supreme Courts, which previously could only be obtained at the Law Courts counters will 505 soon be available for download in pdf format from the Website. Furthermore, arrangements are in hand for the Supreme Court daily court lists to be uploaded and displayed on the website.

Mr Speaker, in addition to the Gibraltar Courts Service website, we also populate and update the judgments website. Many of the judgements pertaining to Gibraltar from as far back as 1812 are available for viewing. This is a very useful source of information which is available to use free of charge on the 510 internet.

Counter services have also been enhanced with the introduction of facilities for the payment of court fees and fines via debit card at both the Magistrates' Court and Supreme Court counters.

515 Finally, in relation to the Courts, the Gibraltar Courts Service continues to look at ways in which to improve their services especially through the continuous training and professional development of all staff.
Staff have already received training in probate processes and procedures and this training has resulted in probates and letters of administration being dealt with within one to two weeks, when historically this process took approximately 12 months. That is a dramatic change and improvement, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

520 This year, the Gibraltar Courts Service will be looking at providing staff training in other areas in order to further improve the level of service to court users.

Mr Speaker, I now turn to HM Prison matters. Recent Prison Board inspections describe the atmosphere among prisoners as relaxed. There have been around 12 cases of indiscipline reported between June 2013 and May 2014, but most of them categorized as minor. This represents a four-fold decrease when compared to the same period for the previous year.

525 Although prison population figures are lower, management attributes such a marked decrease to the sterling work produced by prison officers and the rehabilitation and aftercare programmes now in place. Of these, I would highlight the support offered by the Ministry of Employment who provide counselling, welfare and work placement programmes for prisoners. Over 40% of the prison population is currently benefiting from these services in one way or another. Through such efforts some prisoners are being 530 released with offers, already, of employment, some finding stable work for the first time in many years.

Mr Speaker, in respect of the prison population, figures for the first four months of 2014 have seen a gradual recovery in numbers following the marked decrease seen in 2013. Daily average inmate population figures for January 2014 stood at 50 prisoners but the figure for April is 58 prisoners. These statistics should not detract from the benefits being noticed since the introduction of the programmes I have already 535 given details of. These are having a very salutary effect on the prison population. Recidivism is down and prisoners are giving the prison authorities very positive feedback.

Between June 2013 and May 2014 there have been a total of 14 female admissions and 4 juvenile admissions.

Mr Speaker, the prison was visited by his Excellency the Governor, Sir James Dutton, on 19th March 540 2014. His Excellency toured the facilities, and I accompanied him, and spoke to officers and prisoners. He appeared to be impressed with the facilities.

Prison management remains committed to the ongoing programmes on rehabilitation of offenders and enhancing educational and vocational opportunities to all those in custody, with a view to breaking the re-offending cycle and successfully reintegrating offenders back into society.

Mr Speaker, I will mention now matters related to international co-operation. There is significant international co-operation between Gibraltar and jurisdictions worldwide for judicial assistance. The most common types of requests are for service of process and the taking of evidence.

Under our laws, there are several methods that can be used to achieve a desired result. The most common is the Letter of Request (LoR), which is a formal request from a court to a foreign court for some 550 type of judicial assistance.

A European Arrest Warrant (EAW) is sometimes used by EU member states to seek the arrest and transfer of a criminal suspect or sentenced person to the issuing state so that the person can be put on trial or complete a detention period.

In a recent case, the Portuguese authorities issued a European Arrest Warrant for the arrest of an individual in connection with drug charges. The individual was sought by the Portuguese authorities on drugs charges emanating from an RGP-initiated operation resulting in the seizure of 6,000 kilos of cannabis resin in Portugal and the arrest of a number of persons. The individual was arrested in Gibraltar and after a protracted appeal he was surrendered to the Portuguese authorities.

This case serves to highlight the importance of international co-operation and how absolutely necessary it is for judicial assistance to work in order to ensure the pursuance of justice.
560

Mr Speaker, I now turn to policing matters – the Royal Gibraltar Police (RGP).

Re-establishment of the post of Chief Superintendent: Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Police Authority has approved the re-establishment of the post of Chief Superintendent. This reverses a decision taken some years ago to do away with the post.

The post re-establishes a needed rank between the Commissioner of Police and the three Superintendents, thereby providing the RGP with an improved management structure.

Gibraltar Police Authority Annual Report: Mr Speaker, the Government has outlined a number of strategic priorities, which have been taken into account by the Gibraltar Police Authority (GPA) in the annual policing plan, namely: the protection of children and vulnerable adults through the participation in the Child Protection Committee and multi-agency public protection arrangements and through education programmes aimed at informing children, in particular on certain dangers on the use of the internet; two, the continuing promotion of public safety in the context of zero tolerance with regard to drugs and violent crime and through neighbourhood policing initiatives to tackle anti-social behaviour; three, the development of an integrated IT platform for the criminal justice system to ensure an efficient use of 570 resources and to adequately equip the RGP with a modern communications and management tool.

Mr Speaker, every year the GPA carries out an annual public satisfaction survey in order to engage with the community and gain feedback on the relationship with the RGP.

The latest survey revealed an increased public satisfaction in the RGP. This seems largely due to the effectiveness of the neighbourhood policing concept, the tackling of anti-social behaviour in our streets and residential estates and the noticeable increase in Police visibility on foot patrol. In addition, a marked reduction in complaints against the RGP has also been noted. This, Mr Speaker, is very positive feedback and is welcome news, indeed.

Support and thanks towards the RGP has been expressed by the public for the RGP's continued support for interaction, particularly with juveniles and young children, via social media.

585 On neighbourhood policing, Mr Speaker, the RGP continues to deliver this policy, responding to community issues, from district offices in residential estates. These offices serve as multi-agency bases in the community.

The Government continues to support the RGP in its many activities and initiatives with regards to this strategy. The initiative has already seen very noticeable effects in bringing the Police back into the community. Officers operating from district offices are very accessible and residents regularly turn to the neighbourhood policing teams whenever they have concerns.

CCTV system: Mr Speaker, last year I made reference to Government's continuing plan for the roll out of CCTV in public areas.

595 CCTV has been installed in many areas around town and has served as a successful deterrent and a useful mechanism to prevent and detect crime. The installation of the cameras has proved to be an invaluable asset to the RGP and has further strengthened its capabilities in combating crime and gathering evidence.

Following recommendations by the RGP and calls from residents requesting the installation of CCTV cameras in other areas around Gibraltar, the public CCTV programme has been extended to include mid harbour estate – a programme installation which has now been completed and the cameras are fully-operational. Infrastructure at Laguna Estate is in the process of being upgraded and, where necessary, created in order to allow for the installation of CCTV. Moorish Castle Estate and Glacis Estate will follow. Proposals for camera locations within the Government housing estates are drawn up by the RGP in consultation with the Estates' Tenants Associations.

605 Mr Speaker, the expansion on the use of CCTV in Gibraltar continues and is kept under review. The initiative has already served, as I have said, to detect crimes by helping to either identify suspects or provide the necessary evidence for a successful conviction. It has helped to deter crime and has removed anti-social behaviour altogether in certain areas which had hitherto been plaguing residents for many years.

New Police vessel: the RGP has commissioned the construction of a new 25-metre patrol vessel specifically built to their specifications. The vessel is being built in Croatia.

The acquisition of the vessel will substantially increase the RGP's marine capability. This is in addition to all the assets we have already provided the RGP, by the addition of a further large vessel allowing RGP the capability to remain out at sea for prolonged periods and being out at sea in conditions not generally suitable for smaller craft. The vessel should be in Gibraltar and, we expect, operational in September of this year.

615 Criminal Justice integrated software: Mr Speaker, last year I mentioned in my Budget address that the RGP, together with other Criminal Justice partners and Government's IT and Logistics Department, were engaged in setting up a fit-for-purpose IT infrastructure platform suitable for the whole Criminal Justice System. Such a system will serve to improve service delivery within the whole spectrum of Criminal Justice. This will proceed during the course of this financial year.

The solution provides a single integrated solution for Gibraltar's law and justice organisations for the use of the Royal Gibraltar Police, Gibraltar Courts Service, Attorney General's Chambers, prison service and probation service.

625 The individual systems will be used on a daily basis by multiple individuals within each of these law enforcement organisations, thus enabling the process of managing information for each respective Department in an integrated solution from which each organisation gains a benefit. It is intended that the solution will utilise common sets of data. The software will be designed to prevent double keying and ensuring that the data sets are of a high quality, thus reducing the likelihood of error through duplication.

630 RGP Dog Section: General Purpose Patrol Dogs (GPDs) are highly trained and specialist dogs. The dogs, under the instruction of their handlers, are a much-needed tool in everyday Police work and are used successfully in the tracking of persons and recovery of property.

The deployment of the dogs is a useful asset in circumstances where co-ordinated crowd control, for example, and the mass movement of persons is necessary.

635 Funding this year has been increased to cater for the training of the handlers and increased kennel costs, given the augmentation of the Section by three dog handlers from HM Customs who now form part of the RGP.

Protective equipment: Mr Speaker, the Government has made available funding, over a three-year period, to bring up to speed the RGP's protective equipment for officers, weaponry and ancillary equipment.

640 Almost £136,000 has been provided for the purchase of additional firearms and protective equipment such as stab proof vests.

Campaigns: Mr Speaker, the Government welcomes initiatives that focus on improving road safety and awareness. These campaigns remind all drivers of the personal consequences of driving under the influence of drink or drugs and that an accident can ruin your life or that of others.

645 A number of campaigns have been co-ordinated by the RGP in conjunction with relevant ministries. In particular, I would highlight the anti-drink driving campaigns and drug awareness campaigns.

Trainee programme: The Police trainee programme has proved to be very successful. The programme, delivered in conjunction with the Ministry for Employment, allows our youth access to a scheme similar to the Police Cadet scheme, which ran many years ago. It provides trainees with the ability to gain first-hand 650 knowledge on Police work and, at the same time, provide the RGP with prospective candidates for employment if found suitable.

Small Island Forum: Mr Speaker, the RGP has reinstated the Small Island Forum – an organisation that has been inoperative for about 10 years.

Although the Forum has no particular formal status, it provides a convenient platform for the Chief of 655 Police of the member small territories to meet and discuss matters of common interest and concern. The reinstatement of the Forum was instigated by Gibraltar and comprises similar jurisdictions like Jersey, Guernsey, the Isle of Man and now includes the Cyprus Sovereign Base area. Its main advantages are the sharing of experience, knowledge and processes of interest to small territories.

European Association of Airport and Seaport Police (EAASP): Mr Speaker, the RGP is a member of the 660 European Association of Airport and Seaport Police.

The goal of the EAASP is to make safe international ports against threats of criminal activity and terrorism. The scope of their work includes promoting co-operation with international partners, delivering exchange opportunities between portal agencies and international ports, advising European and international policy-makers and promoting information exchange as part of a joint-funded project with the 665 European Commission.

In April 2013, the RGP hosted the 40th annual conference of the EAASP in Gibraltar. This was the fourth time the conference had been held in Gibraltar and it saw the highest number of delegates attending ever.

Not only was it a good thing for Gibraltar to play host to the conference a fourth time, but shortly after 670 the event, Commissioner Yome was elected President of the Association. The presidency of this influential Association is not only a significant personal accomplishment for Mr Yome, but also represents an important achievement for Gibraltar. The Government is very happy to continue to support Commissioner Yome during his presidency. [Banging on desks].

Mr Speaker, before I end my contribution I would like to refer to another matter in which I am involved
675 and that is the small boats marina, which is clearly becoming very popular because Members opposite have mentioned it in just about every speech that they make. So they must be very glad that it is coming on stream. (Interjection)

The tender for this project was awarded after a European public tender process (Interjection and laughter) to GJBS – the most economically advantageous tenderer.

680 Work has already started in earnest and the project is on course for completion next summer. Once ready, it will allow many who currently have their boats on land, or who have had their boats removed onto land by the previous administration, or who wish to have a boat but cannot due to the lack of berthing facilities, to enjoy marine activities from fishing to water-skiing or simply enjoying a ride on our waters.

685 The 700-berth facility is the biggest project of its kind ever undertaken in Gibraltar. It will also provide a promenade for public use as well as an outer wharf of around 600 metres for commercial use by the Port Department.

This is a much-awaited and anticipated project. It will be another jewel in the crown and another feather in this Government's hat – a hat which is quickly running out of room with so many feathers already on it. (Laughter and banging on desks)

690 Mr Speaker, before I end, I would like to thank my staff and all those who work in the various Departments which form part of my ministerial responsibilities, for their support, hard work and dedication to their job throughout the year.

Public servants play an instrumental part in helping us lay a strong foundation for progress. They are committed to a cause greater than personal ambition, and each day they tackle many of our most urgent 695 challenges and help us all move closer to a better Gibraltar. Recognition of the value of their work is important and I would like to take this opportunity to thank them for what they do.

Mr Speaker, let me end by saying that I, together with all of my Ministerial colleagues, continue to work enthusiastically to deliver on the manifesto pledges which the people of Gibraltar have entrusted us to fulfil. And we are, Mr Speaker, well on our way to delivering on what we set ourselves out to do and more that 700 we did not even envisage at the time – a feat that some, particularly in the Opposition benches, claimed was impossible to achieve. This Government promotes and supports fairness, equality and transparency. That is how we do business and I am proud of our record and significant achievements so far which have brought about such a positive change which is already apparent and being felt across all areas in Gibraltar.

Thank you. (Banging on desks and interjection)

705 Mr Speaker: There is a character in The Mikado who has responsibility for virtually everything known as Pooh-bah. I do not know whether that accolade applies to the Hon. Mr Licudi. (Laughter, banging on desks and interjection).

The Hon. Mr Costa.

710 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, it is, as always, a real pleasure and a privilege to deliver my Budget address to the Gibraltar Parliament. This Speech, Mr Speaker, marks my seventh Budget contribution as a Member of Parliament and my third as Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

715 For all of the reasons that I shall develop, Mr Speaker, it has been a rewarding year and one where my teams and I have continued to painstakingly develop and cement commercial relationships, which I am convinced will stand Gibraltar in good stead in years to come.

720 Moreover, insofar as is humanly possible among the various business trips abroad, weekly meetings of Cabinet, monthly sessions of Parliament, functions, events and the tide of all manner of correspondence – which of course, Mr Speaker, now includes personal Facebook messages, WhatsApp texts, ordinary texts, in addition to e-mails and traditional mail – I remain as committed as ever and as accessible as I have always been to all members of our community and very interested in listening to their ideas.

725 Mr Speaker, in discharging the constitutional obligations with which the Hon. the Chief Minister has entrusted me, the betterment of Gibraltar and of our community is always at the forefront of my thinking and of my decision-making process; and it is with this guiding principle in mind that I turn to my different areas of responsibility.

730 With your indulgence, I will start with Commercial Affairs. As this House will know, the Small Business Unit and I have focused on the preparation of an Office of Fair Trading Bill. We have carried out a thorough and detailed consultation with the Gibraltar Federation of Small Business, the Chamber of Commerce, the Trade Licensing Authority and the Department of Consumer Affairs.

735 I take this opportunity, Mr Speaker, to thank every single individual who has reverted with constructive comments and proposed revisions. After such a wide-ranging process, I can confidently say that this Bill will make sound and robust consumer protection and business-friendly law.

740 I am, therefore delighted to be able to inform this House that the Fair Trading Bill will today be published as a Command Paper. I also wish to thank from this House, Mr Speaker, my solicitors and, in particular, Ms Sarah Miles, who with unfailing tact and good-humoured patience endured my legalistic pedantry and my numerous requests for revisions to revisions.

745 The importance of the Bill cannot be underestimated and no one will doubt, on reading the Bill, that it is, in fact, transformative. With its introduction, a long overdue single point of contact to set up a business will finally be put into place as rightly demanded by the Chamber and the GFSB now for various years.

750 The OFT shall provide for the various licencing and registration requirements handled by different Government Departments to be dealt with under one roof. The single point of contact will ease an applicant's present administrative burden by supplying the applicant intending to apply for a trade licence with all the relevant forms to be completed relating to town planning, development and environment permits, employment registration, registration of businesses, registration for trade licensing and registration for tax and social insurance.

755 The overall objective of the OFT is to enhance consumer confidence and, equally as importantly, to ensure a fair playing field in Gibraltar's market. There shall be specific consumer bodies designated to be able to submit what are known as 'super-complaints' to the OFT where it is considered that a market feature, such as the structure of a market or the conduct of those operating within it, appears to be significantly harming the interests of consumers. The aim is to strengthen the rights of consumers, as they may not have the individual access to the information to judge whether markets are in fact failing them.

760 Critically, Mr Speaker, the existing Trade Licensing Act of 1978 shall be repealed upon the implementation of the Act and a revised, streamlined trade licensing procedure will be introduced. The Bill introduces and gives practical effect to a statutory presumption that an applicant is able to trade in Gibraltar subject to obtaining the required trade licence in respect of that business in accordance with the new Act.

765 There is also a statutory presumption that, if the criteria required for the original trade licensing application is still met by the applicant at its renewal date and there has been no breach of the terms of the licence since it had been granted, a renewal will be granted by the Authority.

770 Just as importantly, the new Office of Fair Trading will be adequately staffed and resourced in order to provide the most professional and efficient service possible. In particular and crucially, Mr Speaker, the OFT shall employ a legally qualified director to give effect to the provisions of the Bill. Enforcement officers will also be deployed to ensure that the Act is being observed and to take appropriate action wherever necessary. I shall say much more about the objective and functions of the OFT during the course of the debate on the merits of the new law.

765 To other commercial matters, Mr Speaker. The Small Business Board, which the House will remember I established when I first came into office, continues to meet on a regular basis and carries on its valuable work of identifying problems faced by small businesses in Gibraltar and seeking solutions. In particular, the Board considers in detail, ways in which the Government can provide the most propitious environment for small businesses to flourish and, equally, or more importantly, depending to whom one speaks, to keep overheads to a minimum.

770 One such fundamentally important measure, of course, was already introduced by the Government, which was to freeze the prices of electricity and water during our first term in office – a measure which the Hon. the Chief Minister confirmed during the course of his Budget contribution. And, as I do not tire of saying, the prize freeze is not a policy that can be underestimated or underrated by the community, not least when one considers that the price of electricity and water would already have increased by 15% since our election – that is to say, Mr Speaker, 5% every year – had the previous administration continued with their plans in this respect.

775 And, naturally, this is not the only policy of the Government that will have an importantly beneficial impact on businesses' bottom line. As hon. Members will recall, the Hon. the Chief Minister, in his Budget address, announced that businesses that make early payments of rates will receive a 15% discount. Again Mr Speaker, another measure that will really help businesses.

780 In this regard, it is important to highlight that this important reduction in rates arose as a direct result of the recommendations of the Small Business Board to the Government. To my mind, such a result is a very good example not just of the continuous and close discussion with relevant stakeholders but of the real accessibility of Government Ministers and our willingness to react promptly to sound representations that benefit our business community.

785 Further still, the Hon. the Chief Minister yesterday announced a series of important import duty reductions to 0%, such as in respect of sunglasses, writing implements and mobile phones, which will be a welcome boost to Main Street traders.

790 Further to the seminars the Small Business Board organised last year on online shopping and on pricing and invoicing rules, the Business Support Unit has continued to look at ways to encourage business in Gibraltar. Gibraltar's very first 'Small Business Saturday' was organised in early December. Discounts and incentives were provided by traders in order to encourage local business. Events and activities were also provided for all members of the family. It proved to be such a resounding success with the trading community, as well as with all members of the family, that a Christmas extravaganza was also organised on the weekend before Christmas, to further stimulate retail trade.

795 The House will also have heard the very exciting measure announced yesterday by the Hon. the Chief Minister to set up a committee that will assist in the setting up of start-ups and supporting new and innovative businesses as a further means of encouraging new economic activity within our community. It will be my pleasure to lead this team in partnership with the GFSB and the Chamber of Commerce.

800 I turn now to my transport responsibilities, Mr Speaker. I am thrilled to be able to make the second announcement of my address, which is to say that Gibraltar's very own Bassadone Motors has been awarded the tender for the supply of 20 Man Lions City midi-sized buses. (Banging on desks)

805 The good news does not end there, Mr Speaker. I am assured by Bassadone Motors that the first four buses will arrive in Gibraltar on 29th September of this year, with four buses being delivered every week for five weeks.

In other words, Mr Speaker, Gibraltarians will enjoy an entirely modern, eco-friendly and fully accessible bus fleet. By way of even further good news, the complete package includes a 10-year maintenance and after sales service programme and the option to part exchange the vehicles after six years have elapsed. The latter could, of course, result in significant savings.

810 We on this side of the House, Mr Speaker, are confident that the Man buses are the ideal buses for Gibraltar's urban routes as these buses provide great comfort and safety. Additionally, they offer the facility of flexibility and reliability for passengers by having two doors – an entry and an exit – coupled with a maximum capacity for 61 passengers – 24 seated, 37 standing, one mother and child seat and two tip-up seats – with ample space for wheelchairs, making these buses really accessible and versatile. The body length of these buses is 8.8 metres. They are equipped with a special solution air conditioning system designed for regions that encompass hot climates, a state-of-the-art video surveillance system and a ramp that offers easy access to passengers with reduced mobility.

815 The technology and engines of the Man buses are based upon modern engine and injection technologies, ensuring compliance with the Euro 6 exhaust gas limits.

820 Additionally, as part of Government's strategy on accident prevention, Man will be offering professional training to all of our drivers. As a result, we are persuaded that this training will achieve fuel saving together with a decrease in vehicle damage.

I am also delighted to say that this new fleet of environmentally-friendly buses will meet all of Gibraltar's topographical requirements, given the hilly and sometimes difficult nature of our terrain.

825 Mr. Speaker, with these buses we will also see the introduction of the latest state of the art in Intelligent Ticketing System (ITS). This will not only provide statistical data, for my hon. Friend, Mr Figueras, to ravage at some point, but will also incorporate GPS and WiFi facilities, thus helping those members of our society who are visually and hearing impaired as well as those who rely on their Smart phones. The ITS will incorporate talking signs and it is envisaged that real time arrival information will be a reality at 830 selected bus stops.

Once again, Mr Speaker, the Government is showing its unyielding commitment to invest in those areas of public services that bring about real improvements in the quality of service afforded to all of our citizens.

835 Mr Speaker, whereas the feedback received shows that the public is happy with the existing service and existing route network, I must say that we do receive requests for additional bus stops at different parts of Gibraltar.

Whereas I do not wish to anticipate the announcements that will be made on publication of the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan (STTPP), it will not have escaped the notice of hon.
Members that the midi-sized fleet will increase by two buses, from 18 to 20. The Gibraltar Bus Company will also purchase smaller, but fully-accessible buses for certain routes. As a result, new routes will be 840 introduced and these will be announced when unveiling the new STTPP.

As well as the buses themselves being wheelchair-friendly, a programme to improve the wheelchair access at bus shelters commenced following the successful implementation of access ramps in Market Place, underlining the commitment of this Government to enable those with disabilities to be able to access fully all the public services the Government offers. The work also highlights the Government's 845 commitment to providing a high quality, accessible public transport service and, in doing so, making areas previously inaccessible, accessible.

All bus shelters that required works to enable them to be wheelchair-friendly have now been completed in places where persons with disabilities most needed these facilities. It goes without saying that we will spare no effort in ensuring that we remain sensitive to the needs of persons with disabilities and remove all 850 obstacles, which might make their lives unnecessarily difficult.

Further still, Mr Speaker, on a separate but related matter, over the next months the general public will begin to see the installation of solar powered lights in most of the bus shelters following the trials at Market Place in keeping with the Government's environmental filter.

855 Mr Speaker, I now turn to my responsibilities for the Port and Shipping, and, in the first place, to the Gibraltar Maritime Administration.

The number of commercial ships on the Gibraltar Ship Register has increased to 322 overall at the end of 2013 and tonnage is also up, with a total of 3.4 million. The fleet is projected to grow again steadily this year, with new target markets identified.

860 Gibraltar remains an attractive registry for central and northern European ship owners, particularly due to the quality service given by the Department, local ship representatives and the reputation of the Gibraltar flag, which in March of last year achieved US Coastguard Qualship 21 recognition, one of only 20 recognised by the United States.

Mr Speaker, it pleases me to note that once again this year the GMA achieved US Coastguard Qualship
21 recognition and I am sure that the whole House will welcome and applaud such an important
865 professional accolade. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

The Gibraltar Yacht Registry also continues to expand its fleet. The number of yachts on the flag has increased to 814 at the end of 2013. And, Mr Speaker, in a continuous bid to further stimulate yacht registration, I can make a further announcement. I am pleased to see the introduction of two new products:
the registration of very large mega yachts, as well as registration of yachts under construction. The Yacht 870 Registry will now offer the complete package for yacht owners of any type, vessel size and construction, opening up the possibilities of increasing not just the number of yachts but the diversification of the fleet type.

The Department's core infrastructure is also being improved, with an overhaul of the internal quality management systems and new database modules for online payments, accounting and certification currently 875 undergoing testing. The GMA is one of the Departments at the forefront of our new e-government project.
A Smart phone app is also being finalised and will be released at the end of the summer.

The Survey Division has been provided with two new administrative support staff to handle work volume, particularly with port state control matters, freeing up surveyors to undertake more revenue-earning work on board ships worldwide.

880 Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the GMA's Seafarers' Section reported a record year for crew certification, with over 4,800 provisional and full-term endorsements issued in 2013 – a 20% increase in 12 months. The Department has prepared an online registration, submission and payment database to facilitate this service ever further.

885 The GMA also monitors and manages Gibraltar's cadet programme in the UK, co-sponsored with the bunkering companies, with five young persons presently undertaking training to be qualified British ship officers. Within the next six to seven years, we will have a sizeable group of qualified masters and chief engineers returning to Gibraltar and contributing directly to the maritime cluster.

The GMA co-sponsored the IBIA seminar in 2013's London International Shipping Week along with the Gibraltar Port Authority and was actively engaged with the Gibraltar Maritime Day in London.

890 The Gibraltar Maritime Administrator, Registrar of Yachts and a senior partner from one of Gibraltar's leading law firms were invited to the World Congress of Ocean conference in Hangzhou, China, in September 2013.

895 The conference involved presentations and networking with clients from the yachting, marine insurance and ship management sectors. The GMA has been invited again this year and a more targeted marketing campaign is in the planning stages, taking advantage of contacts made in the region, as well as HM Government of Gibraltar's new representative in Hong Kong.

900 Following the yearly visit to Germany to meet existing clients and possible new ones, the GMA were invited by the German ship owners, along with seven other EU flags, to a two-day seminar in Hamburg and Leer in January of this year. This allowed the GMA to make two major presentations and, more importantly, meet many ship owner/operators on a face-to-face basis.

The Maritime Administration was accompanied by one of the local representatives and the quality services offered by the flag were highlighted. As a result of these presentations, the Gibraltar Ship Registry has been approached to register three ships from new clients over the last month, including a high value ship construction project.

905 The GMA is continually exploring new avenues to expand its business by targeting ship owners in Scandinavia and the Far East this year and in 2015. As a result, the decision was made to increase the Department's marketing budget by 30% in this financial year, to enable both the ship and yacht registries to expand their marketing presence. Looking forward, some major events hosted by the GMA are lining up.

910 German ship owners, Mr Speaker, make up around 70% of the Gibraltar fleet. This is indicative of the importance of the market. As a result, the GMA will be co-hosting a promotional event in Germany with the leading local representatives this September, in which all aspects of ship registration in Gibraltar will be marketed and there will be the opportunity for technical discussions with current and potential clients.

915 We are also hosting this year the Red Ensign Conference in Gibraltar, in fact which started today, wherein all the British maritime registries will gather and discuss a range of maritime topics, monitor quality standards and look at future initiatives. This important conference provides a useful forum for delegates to network and share best practices as well as an opportunity for Gibraltar itself to demonstrate what we offer.

920 Finally, my ministry, the GMA and representatives from the Gibraltar Superyacht Group will be hosting a yacht marketing event at the Cannes Yacht Show in September of this year, where a range of yacht stakeholders and businesses will be invited.

This will be a showcase event for Gibraltar's yachting industry, from marinas to company managers, financiers to agents. With these new resources, new services, online facilities and an increase in marketing activities over the next year, the Gibraltar Maritime Administration is positioning itself as one of the high quality attractive registries for commercial as well as leisure vessels in Europe.

925 Mr Speaker, I now turn to the Gibraltar Port Authority (GPA). The end of the financial year shows the GPA as being well within the approved budget with a total expense, including capital expenditure, of £4,808,653 from a total approved budget of £5,142,000, therefore making a saving of £300,347. Additionally, total recurrent revenue for 2013-2014 was £6,116,326 and when offset against the total expenditure, shows a surplus of £1,307,673.

930 In fulfilment of manifesto commitments, work continues to improve port facilities and infrastructure, including the provision of enhanced facilities for operational personnel.

935 The new mess room and facilities for launches and crews has now been completed at the old ferry terminal at Waterport. As well as welfare facilities for crew, this site will also provide sheltered berthing and workshop facilities for the port boats. Work is now under way to design the new port workshop, in conjunction with the new premises to be created for HM Customs which will be located at eastern section of the Waterport ferry terminal.

In yet further announcements, Mr Speaker, it pleases me to say in the House that work on the new port administration building, incorporating a better location for VTS and improved accommodation, has started, with the first stage of demolition of the old building well under way.

940 It is envisaged that the new port building will be completed within 18 months. This will represent a further substantial injection of capital investment in the Port in order to fulfil yet another important manifesto commitment of reversing so many years of chronic underinvestment in our port.

945 The new electronic vessel management system is now fully operational and is allowing ships' agents to input data remotely in order to provide the most recent information on a vessel's movements, further streamlining port operations.

In line with further manifesto commitments, we have also carried out an extensive review of our port charges and the House will have heard the excellent series of measures announced yesterday by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

950 It is my opinion, as well as that of the Capitan of the Port and of the Marine Officer, that these new raft of economic measures, together with a slight relaxation on the limit of number of bunker barges operating in the western anchorage, is likely to lead to an increase in activity levels and reinforce our competitive edge amidst the recent financial crisis world-wide and the competition from neighbouring ports.

955 It also behoves me, Mr Speaker, to mention the close consultation with and useful proposals of the Gibraltar Port Operators' Association that led directly to the series of economic measures announced yesterday by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Mr Speaker, the House will remember that on 22nd May of last year, and as the Hon. the Minister for Justice announced a few moments ago, the Hon. Ministers for Health and Justice and I announced the 700-berth small boat marina project.

960 It pleases me tremendously to advise this House and small boat owners that this major project, to provide sufficient berthing to accommodate 700 small boats in accordance with another manifesto commitment, has now commenced.

The marina will be constructed in the mid-harbour area and will incorporate 400 six-metre and 300 eight-metre finger pontoon berths. It will have electrical and water points, secure entry to the pontoons and CCTV security cameras.

965 The introduction of the new reporting berth as part of this new project will realise yet another manifesto commitment. Plans are now being developed to accommodate members of the Port Authority, the Border and Coastguard Agency and Customs – the three agencies staffing the new reporting berth.

970 As the House will also undoubtedly recall, the reporting berth was removed by the previous administration, inexplicably so, as far as concerns those on this side of the House, removing this vital control on one of the most important entry points into Gibraltar.

On security, in addition to the new closed circuit television system that was introduced at the Port last year, enhancing both safety and security, the Government in conjunction with the GPA and technical services will be modifying the restricted area within the Port estate to comply with the UK Department of Transport's most recent recommendations.

975 And, Mr Speaker, no one, not even our political detractors can possibly doubt the Government's real commitment to our environment – and in particular, our marine environment. I take this opportunity to remind the House of the new and meaningfully deterring legal sanctions for polluters that I introduced last year, as well as the legislation, also enacted last year, making it mandatory that cargo transfer between ships must take place within British Gibraltar Territorial Waters under the direct supervision of the Port Authority.

980 Further still, last year the Port announced its participation in the Green Award scheme whereby a 5% reduction in tonnage dues is granted to all Green Award-certified vessels. As a result, the Port was presented with a Green Award reflecting the Port's corporate social responsibility by encouraging safe and environmentally-conscious shipping.

985 Even further still, the Environmental, Health and Safety Advisor, which is a post created by this Government, is providing a robust environmental, health and safety culture within the Port to ensure compliance with health and safety regulations and marine environmental legislation.

990 In addition to the Vikoma Alligator skimmer purchased last year, we have recently acquired 600 metres of oil spill containment booms, which will be pre-sited at both harbour entrances as well as the entrance to Ocean Village.

995 This is a major enhancement in our response time in order to successfully mitigate any impact of pollution to these areas. We have plans to complement this capability with the procurement of dedicated oil spill detection radars, which will enable timely detection of oil spills from vessels outside British Gibraltar Territorial Waters. Initial steps have been taken with the DPC approving in principle the proposed radar sites.

1000 Finally, a strategy for marketing the Port and its activities is constantly under review, with greater emphasis on face-to-face meetings and the development of relationships with industry stakeholders. The business strategy for the Port goes from strength to strength, with the attendance of key personnel from the GPA to important conferences not only in the cruising industry but also in the bunkering world and wider marine community.

Mr Speaker, you will be aware that our very own Bunkering Superintendent, Mr John Ghio, spoke at the recent high profile 5th Annual European Bunker conference in Rotterdam, organised by PLATTS, the leading worldwide provider of energy, petrochemicals, metals and agriculture information.

1005 This is a huge step in the recognition of the importance and reputation that the Port of Gibraltar holds world-wide, which this Government wholeheartedly supports. This was followed more recently by a delegation from the GPA, led by the CEO and Captain of the Port, promoting the port at Posidonia, the maritime industry's global showcase that is held every two years in Athens.

1010 The GPA is also looking into the possibility of hosting high-level conferences here in Gibraltar over the next 12 months to further enhance the port's profile across the shipping community. It also seeks to consolidate its reputation in the Mediterranean and northern Europe, and plans to participate in the principal global maritime event, the London International Shipping Week in September of next year.

Mr Speaker, we are confident that this forward-thinking marketing strategy, combined with the measures announced by the Hon. the Chief Minister, will reverse the moderate reduction in bunker activity which is a decline that started at the time of the global economic crisis as from 2009.

1015 Locally, stakeholder engagement continues to be built upon with forums being developed to represent commercial and leisure activities. The GPA continues to engage in dialogue with all maritime businesses to ascertain how the local maritime industry is performing and how best we can compete in such a dynamic environment.

1020 Further, Mr Speaker, the House will also recall the announcement made by the Hon. the Chief Minister that in order to promote the use of Gibraltar as a maritime jurisdiction, passenger tax at Gibraltar Airport has been abolished for passengers joining vessels.

Further still, Mr Speaker, in even more good news, the House will recall that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition noted that bunkering charges were down this last financial year by 33% over the 2012-13 financial year on the basis of the estimates.

1025 I am happy to report, however – and I am sure that the whole House will be delighted to hear, except the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition who is not sat where he normally sits – that revenue from bunkering charges is, in fact, up by 21.08%. (Banging on desks) Happy days, Mr Speaker, even when the Spanish authorities have – if I may put it as charitably as I possibly can – not missed a trick in trying to promote her own neighbouring port.

1030 Last but by no means least, this House will be aware that Bob Sanguinetti is the new CEO and Captain of the Port and has now been in post for just over a month. Delighted to have returned to his homeland after a highly successful career in the Royal Navy, I am pleased to say he is wasting no time in settling in and is already providing the drive and leadership needed to continue the growth and development of the Port. (Banging on desk)

1035 Mr Speaker, I turn now to tourism. I start with air connectivity and, in very brief terms, the relevant background since our election in December 2011.

As this House will recall, in 2012 easyJet operated its Liverpool service three times a week and Bmibaby, which launched a brand new route to East Midlands, operating three times a week. Both services were discontinued – for commercial reasons in respect of easyJet and the closing down of Bmibaby.

1040 As a result, it is indeed encouraging, Mr Speaker, that despite the loss of these two routes in 2012, visitor arrivals this year decreased only by a very negligible 1.1%, reflecting, however, the growth of passenger numbers in real terms on the remaining existing routes.

1045 Nonetheless and moreover, it will not have escaped the notice of hon. Gentlemen opposite that soon after the loss of these two routes Nicky Guerrero and I successfully negotiated with British Airways to increase the frequency on its London Heathrow schedules from seven to nine per week. We also successfully ensured that Monarch increased its frequency on its Manchester service to four per week all year round to offset the loss of the Liverpool route.

All of this, Mr Speaker, was in addition to negotiations with Monarch resulting in service to the Midlands being re-launched with flights to Birmingham three times weekly.

1050 As a result the net effect was that the loss of six weekly services to the UK was turned into an increase of seven weekly flights by 2013 with both regions affected – the North West and the Midlands – achieving a frequency increase and a brand new service from Birmingham respectively.

1055 Indeed, Mr Speaker, we continue to engage with airlines both for an increase in capacity on existing services, in addition to exploring the possibilities of opening up new links to regional destinations in the UK, as well as to other points in Europe. The latter being a particularly arduous task but one on which we have no intention to relent.

1060 Mr Speaker, I am sure it will please the whole House to know that the Monarch Airlines Birmingham service, which this Government managed to secure after the loss of service from East Midlands, carried over 29,000 passengers in the first nine months of operation and continues to show increasing passenger numbers in this year, highlighting how regional links to the UK can and do work.

Winter seasons, where traditionally traffic slows down, has in fact shown an increase in passenger numbers. London Luton services this last winter increased to four services per week for the first time in a number of years and Manchester services continued to operate at four services per week all year round. British Airways continued growing its nine times per week service to London Heathrow and easyJet introduced larger aircraft on specific days of the week this winter.

It is in this light, Mr Speaker, that it greatly pleases me to announce that the Airport has recorded a 20.5% increase in passenger numbers in the first quarter of 2014, compared to 2013. (Banging on desks) (Interjections and laughter)

1070 In real terms, this represents an additional 14,000 extra passengers compared to the same period last year. It is equally as important to note, if perhaps not even more so, that this growth, which I have just mentioned, has been in the traditionally slower winter months. This highlights my Ministry's and the GTB's ongoing commitment to the Airport by actively carrying out joint marketing campaign with airlines to promote Gibraltar.

1075 It pleases me even further, Mr Speaker, to say that to the end of May this trend has continued with total passenger numbers up by 16.3% over 2013. I am sure the whole House will hope with me that this growth is sustained over the entire year and beyond.

1080 Looking forward to this summer season, which started at the end of March, six destinations will be served from Gibraltar International Airport. Overall, services to the UK have increased by one weekly flight to London Luton over last year, with 33 weekly departures now on offer in the peak summer period. Sundays, like last year, still being the busiest day but now with seven services on offer.

1085 Mr Speaker, we continue to constantly engage with existing and new airlines in marketing Gibraltar to them as a destination for business and leisure, especially in the light of new hotel stock and refurbishments in existing stock, which will attract a new category of customer visiting the Rock. Only last month I have held meetings once again with our current operators in London. In addition, our very able team at the GTB continue to attend the important Routes Europe development forum to meet with airports and airlines face to face.

1090 Hon. Members can rest assured that our efforts are relentless in expanding air services in a very tough and competitive market. To illustrate how tough this job can be, in a recent television programme about Edinburgh Airport and in particular the first episode of the series, the route development team there noted that it can take up to five years for new routes to materialise, even for an airport the size of Edinburgh, which handled over 9 million passengers in 2013.

1095 As the House will recall, however, not long after this Government came into office my team and I were able to secure extra services by British Airways, an increase in capacity from Manchester and an entirely new service by Monarch Airlines from Birmingham, which clearly reflects, beyond any shadow of a doubt, the constant work that is constantly being conducted behind the scenes in promoting Gibraltar.

1100 Mr Speaker, the number of air arrivals and the growth that we are seeing this year, as I have just detailed a few moments ago, has also translated into noticeable growth in hotel occupancy. Indeed, in 2013 our hotel occupancy report shows that all arrivals at hotels increased by 3.4% over 2012. A not insignificant stride has been made in the category of Room Occupancy that increased by 1.7 percentage points and stood at 61% as an average for 2013.

1105 It pleases me further to say that although the statistics will not be tabled at this House until next year, the first quarter of this year in terms of occupancy also looks extremely encouraging. Once again, Mr Speaker, our tireless efforts in working with UK based tour operators, airlines and the industry in general is yielding tangible results for our industry.

1110 As I said last year, an advance in the provision and variety of bed stock in Gibraltar was necessary. The Sunborn Hotel has already opened for business and has brought a new product bracket in the form of five star accommodation to the Rock. (A Member: Hear, hear.) I am delighted to also report that the Rock Hotel's refurbishment programme is under way, that the Caleta Hotel is planning a major project and the O'Callaghan Elliott Hotel is also to undertake refurbishment works.

1115 Mr Speaker, like with air services, I think it is important to also properly set out the historical background and context of this important business to Gibraltar. An objective analysis of the facts will, in itself, explain the present situation in terms of cruise liner calls and passenger numbers – unpleasant as that may be for those who only wish to make political and partisan mischief and operate wholly disingenuously, in a vacuum. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1120 In this respect, Mr Speaker, I take the opportunity to remind the House, and the Hon. Mr Bossino in particular, that the number of cruise calls went down in 2010, when they were in office, in 2010, by 64 calls over one year! (A Member: Shame!) 64 calls, Mr Speaker! Sirens, alarm bells and all other manner of loud, jarring and uncomfortable devices should have gone off in my predecessor's office that something had seriously gone wrong and try to determine the reasons for this shockingly worrying loss of business. 64 calls over one year! Staggering! Shocking!

A Member: It was the Government.

A Member: Hear, hear.

1125 Hon. N F Costa: Well, I am just following your argument of last year.

Instead, the response of the GSD was to do nothing other than to continue to spend tens of thousands on a stand once a year that the figures clearly showed actually translated in a spectacular loss of commercial opportunities for Gibraltar.

1130 Mr Speaker, let me elucidate, mainly for the benefit of the Honourable Members opposite and the hon. Gentleman Mr Bossino's contribution in the House, that since our election we continue with our determined policy of one-to-one meetings and building up strong personal relationships with the industry.

1135 In particular, the GTB and I have done everything humanly possible to assure cruise companies that Gibraltar is ready to listen to and address their concerns. And the signs are already bearing fruit that cruise line companies are slowly once again increasing their calls to Gibraltar, (Banging on desks) as I have been able to illustrate by the series of press announcements. In this respect, I refer to my press releases in respect of Pullmantur, Thomson and Island Cruises and, most recently, Carnival UK.

1140 But, Mr Speaker, as encouraging as the signs are, it is also the case that cruise companies have their own itinerary, commercial and other considerations for not calling at Gibraltar. An element of fluctuation in calls and passenger numbers year over year is inevitable 1145 The key, however, for me is that we do not leave any stone unturned in ensuring that all that can be done is in fact done. In this respect, Mr Speaker, I am firmly of the view, having spoken personally with the top cruise executives globally, and local agents, that we have done as much as we can do to attract cruise liners. Indeed, calls for this year as at today's date are scheduled to increase to 180, with passengers numbers also anticipated to rise to 294,752 – that is to say, Mr Speaker, in real terms this year, 10,000 more passengers.

Once again this year, I have held meetings with senior cruise executives in the UK and Miami along with senior officials. This demonstrates the consistency that this Government has shown in promoting Gibraltar's assets as a cruise destination.

1150 Although the cruise lines are not yet in a position to move forward on the issue of cruise turnarounds, for their own commercial and itinerary reasons, we continue to pursue this opportunity and have once again pressed the case as hard as possible with three UK cruise companies earlier this month.

1155 As I announced last year, Azamara Club Cruises, through their agents in Gibraltar, M H Bland, have once again held an AzAmazing evening in Gibraltar on 31st May. This has been as a direct result of the success of last year's visits and is also a testament to all those involved in the organisation of these events, both in the public and private sectors. I am delighted that another event is scheduled for 5th September.

In addition, Saga cruises also held what they entitled as an Enchanting Evening at St Michael's Cave on 26th April, where passengers enjoyed a concert by the band of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment.

1160 Mr Speaker, I am sure that the whole House was delighted to learn in February of this year that Royal Caribbean International announced that its newest ship, Anthem of the Seas, will call at Gibraltar seven times in 2015 during its inaugural season. As I said in public at the time of this announcement, this sends out a very strong signal indeed that Gibraltar is a serious and committed player in this industry.

1165 So as not to stand still in the passing of pro-cruise legislation, this year we also announced changes to the Port Rules that regulate the discounts on passenger dues for cruise ships calling at Gibraltar. The amendment allows 'repositioning' calls from the Mediterranean to the Caribbean or vice-versa to benefit from a 100% markdown on passenger dues. There will also be further reductions applied, depending on the number of passengers on board the individual cruise ships, calculated cumulatively in respect of vessels belonging to a particular maritime line.

1170 Mr Speaker, another initiative we have taken this year, after detailed consultation with all relevant stakeholders individually and via the UK GTA, is the amendment to the Marriages Act, which I am pleased to note was passed unanimously by this House.

1175 One of the main provisions is that under the new legislation a passenger ship's master is now allowed to conduct wedding ceremonies on board Gibraltar's registered passenger ships under a special licence. This will provide an added bonus to this industry as a whole and, it is hoped, will act as a further incentive for ship owners to re-register their vessels under the Gibraltar flag.

Another of the changes in the new law is that couples married under special licence are required to spend at least one night in Gibraltar, either before or after the ceremony therefore creating more opportunities for the local hospitality industry within the market. There is the added flexibility that the visiting couple can spend the relevant night as the guest of a Gibraltar resident, rather than in a hotel.

1180 As I said in my press statement on this matter, this is yet another example of the Government's commitment to promote the Rock as a tourism destination and to be innovative in its approach to developing the activities of the Gibraltar Ship Registry.

1185 We also continue to participate in those events and organisations that help to promote Gibraltar as a port of call to the cruise lines. Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, is highly respected at Medcruise and within Seatrade, where we are often applauded for taking pro-cruise industry initiatives and for being very active in some of the ways I have just highlighted.

The feedback I receive at all meetings and events is that Gibraltar is good to the cruise industry and that it is a pleasure to see how a community welcomes cruise passengers wholeheartedly.

1190 The dedication of the GTB, the shore excursion agents, the shipping agents and all those involved in the industry undoubtedly shows the proactive stance that Gibraltar has in relation to tourism and reflects the dynamism and energy that we as a Government have brought to this sphere, so far, in our term of office.

1195 Mr Speaker, in respect of tourist sites receipts, the House ought to remember that the Hon. Leader of the Opposition noted that this head was down by 5%. It also pleases me to say that notwithstanding the very best efforts of Señores Margallo and Rajoy, tourist sites receipts are down only by 1.61% (Banging on desks) which reflects the sheer resilience of the economy.

Further still, in news that will hearten all Gibraltarians, overall global tourist receipts, even when including coach park receipts, is down only by 1.6%. (Banging on desks)

1200 Mr Speaker, let me tell those who would wish us harm from our own Parliament that it will take much more to strangle or kill our innate resilience, our love of our country and our entrepreneurial spirits than their disproportionate, unlawful and inhumane actions have tried to undertake. (Banging on desks) It is also a veritable testament to the unstinting professionalism, sheer hard work and undiminished dedication of the GTB and the private sector that these results speak for themselves.

1205 Mr Speaker, no-one can deny that the Government has invested in tourism in an unprecedented manner. The improvements in the first full financial year were there for all to see and have continued this last financial year. As a result, it will come as no surprise to Gibraltar – but it will nonetheless not deprive me of any pleasure in so announcing – that once again, for the third consecutive financial year, the Government will pledge an additional £1 million to continue to improve the existing tourist product. (Banging on desks)

1210 Mr Speaker, over three financial years this Government will have spent just over £3 million in improvements to the visitor attractions. In the six financial years previous to this Government coming into office, the GSD spent just over £1 million. Therefore we have invested 191% more in just three years than the previous administration did in six years – evidence, without any shadow of a doubt, of this Government’s pledge to invest in the tourist product for the benefit of all.

1215 Works on the second phase of improvements at the Great Siege Tunnels have been completed. A highlight has been the opening of the Holyland Tunnel, which affords marvellous views of the east side of Gibraltar. Extra mannequins have been installed and existing ones re-conditioned. The ticket office at the Great Siege Tunnels has also been refurbished. The viewing platform outside the Tunnels has also been reinforced for safety reasons.

1220 At the 100 Ton Gun improvements include new fencing, a new staff room and a new entrance that provides greater accessibility to the attraction. At Jews’ Gate the resurfacing of the viewing platform, which was started last year, has been completed along with the second phase of the replacement of the railings. At St Michael’s Cave we have introduced new sound and light equipment, completed the second phase of the replacement of the hand railings and installed stair lighting. These improvements have enhanced the cave for all to enjoy and has had a remarkable effect on the tourist experience in one of our most visited sites.

1225 The GTB took over the running of the World War Two tunnels attraction last year and one of the first priorities was the complete refurbishment of this site. Other improvements are planned for this attraction.

New signs have been installed within the Upper Rock area for those walking to and from the Nature Reserve and are now in the process of looking at additional signs within the Nature Reserve.

1230 My aim, Mr Speaker, and the aim of the Government, is not just to enrich our existing attractions to reflect our steadfast commitment to the tourism product, important as that is, but also to restore a sense of ownership and of pride in the intrinsic wonders contained in our touristic pockets of excellence.

These are some of our national treasures and we must, all of us, preserve them. At the same time, as a Government we also believe it is our duty to provide the best possible conditions to our employees, which we are achieving in attending to well and very long overdue refurbishments to staff facilities all over the Upper Rock – a win for tourists, a win for us Gibraltarians and a win for our staff.

1235 Turning to beaches, last year I announced further improvements to our beach and bathing facilities. This year the list of initiatives increases to include: the provision of a lifeguard weekend service as from 12th April, with a full lifeguard service as from 7th June; the beach facilities, including showers, have been available on weekends as from 12th April and daily as from 1st May; new beach umbrella stores have been provided at Camp Bay and Eastern Beach; the complete refurbishment of the swimming pools at both 1240 Camp Bay and Little Bay, including a new chlorination and filtration system – the pool at Camp Bay includes a new accessible ramp; waterparks have been installed at all the beaches – I confess that I have not tried these myself, but I am assured by numerous families that they are excellent fun and a very welcome addition and I do promise to try one of them very soon, and I ask the hon. Gentleman perhaps to accompany me as Shadow Minister for Tourism! (Interjections and laughter) I will let him choose his own bathing 1245 wear; new walkways have been provided at Eastern Beach, Catalan Bay and Western Beach – the new material avoids imbalances in the surface and is more durable; the toilets, showers and changing facilities at Sandy Bay have been refurbished; the lifeguard post at Western Beach has been relocated; a new lifeguard boat store has been provided at Western Beach; and new marine grade stainless steel steps have been installed at Camp Bay.

1250 Mr Speaker, once again, I repeat that no-one can, in any seriousness, doubt this Government's commitment to invest in projects that will be thoroughly enjoyed by the entire community and also by tourists.

1255 Sandy Bay, I think, deserves special mention. Mr Speaker, as detailed in a press conference last week, major coastal protection and regeneration works have transformed Sandy Bay from a pitiful state into a sensational beach, laid and enlarged with 50,000 tons of sand imported from Morocco.

Two curved groynes and a frontal breakwater have also been constructed to protect the beach from the full erosional impact of wave action and trap shifting sand. The project has been extended to include a submerged breakwater connecting the ends of both groynes.

1260 As I said recently, the achievement of an enlarged Sandy Bay, where there is now a permanent solution to protect the beach from disappearing, is an engineering feat in its own right. Our beach culture is vibrant and we are thrilled at the prospect of returning it to its former and magnificent glory.

I must, Mr Speaker, congratulate the Technical Services Department and all involved in this project for their efforts. (Banging on desks)

1265 Mr Speaker, perhaps here a brief parenthesis to just say that at a time when everyone is applauding the great strides made in the regeneration of Sandy Bay, some Members opposite thought to ask us whether there were spiders. I mean I wish there were arachnids that would turn me into Spiderman. Alas, there are no arachnids or other insects at the beach, (Laughter) but a magnificent beach instead.

1270 As the House will also be aware, the Gibraltar Bus Company also commenced a summer shuttle service last June to provide accessibility for the beach users of Sandy Bay. Once again, Mr Speaker, I take great delight in being able to announce more and more improvements to enhance what is a treasured Gibraltarian tradition and another important aspect of our tourism product.

1275 As I announced last year, WiFi hotspots have been installed at the following places: the Gibraltar Cruise Terminal; Queensway Quay; John Mackintosh Square; Casemates; the Frontier; St Michael's Cave; 100-ton Gun Exhibition; the Great Siege Tunnels; Moorish Castle; Europa Point; Gibraltar Museum; the Garrison Library; Eastern Beach; Catalan Bay; Camp Bay; Little Bay; Western Beach; New Coach Terminus facility; and Apes' Den.

The installation of the hot spot at Sandy Bay should be operational this month. Installations at Ocean Village started during the week of the 9th June. Limited coverage should be in place by 11th July with further access points added to cover black spots as from the following week. (Interjection)

1280 As I outlined last year, the Government has contracted with Gibtelecom for free access to a number of local websites at each location. Access to more general websites outside this 'walled garden' would be directed to Gibraltar's WiFi payment portal, where users would be charged online by the company at their standard WiFi rates.

1285 Mr Speaker, the first Gibunco Gibraltar International Literary Festival was held last October. It is my opinion, based on the numerous comments my team and I received from participating authors and attendees alike, that the event proved to be a tremendous success, with both speakers and audiences enjoying a literary feast for the senses.

1290 Further, this festival, certainly for us on this side of the House, is one of the many successful events that this Government has introduced with a view to encouraging event-led tourism, such as the jazz festival and the music festival.

One distinguished speaker, Booker Prize-winning author and poet Ben Okri, described the Festival as 'a triumph'. Not only did the festival attract some of the top writers in their respective fields, but it also provided national coverage in the UK media by showcasing a different aspect of Gibraltar.

1295 Following on the success of last year's event, I am delighted to say I am very much looking forward to the second edition of the festival, which will take place from 14th to 16th November. I recently launched the festival and revealed the names of some of the distinguished writers who will be participating in this year's event. I have no doubt that this year's festival will be just as good, if not better, than last year's; and I believe it will continue to develop on its success for many years to come.

1300 The United Kingdom Gibraltar Tourism Association (UKGTA) and the team at Gibraltar House in London continue to bring together all the tourism partners at their quarterly meetings. The Association has recently expanded to include the cruise companies based in the UK. This is certainly, Mr Speaker, an important development.

1305 Attendance is strong and the information exchanged in this forum is critical in the communication process between the GTB and the local and UK industry. It is a good opportunity to review the results of our deliberations, as follows: in August of 2013 Classic Collection holidays, one of the members of the UKGTA, announced for last summer to be up 21% on the previous year; in September of last year, and for the second time, Superbreak Holidays of the UK announced an increase of 300% year on year on bookings to Gibraltar; in March of this year another tour operator was added to the growing list of those featuring 1310 Gibraltar in the UK – as my Hon. Learned Friend, the Minister for Equalities, Samantha Sacramento, noted in her speech, Enable Holidays, which specialises in organising tailor made vacations to meet the specific travel and accommodation needs of persons with disabilities, included Gibraltar in its latest online business brochure; Cosmos Holidays, part of the Monarch Airlines group, also started selling holidays earlier this year to Gibraltar.

1315 Mr Speaker, it is evident once again that the GTB’s constant support and dialogue with these companies has yielded tangible results. We will continue our steady approach to this so that the local tourism, hospitality, leisure and retail industry has no doubt that it is this Government that is delivering the results they expect from a vibrant touristic approach.

1320 It is undoubtedly our concerted approach to joint marketing campaigns and the GTB’s direct marketing efforts in the UK and in other markets, that have been yielding results in our overnight tourism sector, as reflected in the hotel occupancy survey. It is precisely this sector where more growth is encouraged. Overnight visitors contribute greatly to the economy and deliver an always welcome revenue stream to all those involved in the leisure, retail, tourism and hospitality industries.

1325 Mr Speaker, before I conclude, I must thank all of my staff at my Ministry, the Gibraltar Tourist Board, the Gibraltar Maritime Administration, the Department of Consumer Affairs, the Gibraltar Port Authority, the Gibraltar Bus Company and the Business Support Unit for maintaining the, I must say at times, unforgiving rhythm of work they have come to expect from me and for their unstinting support in delivering this Government’s exciting programme. It has meant a lot of work.

1330 It is true to say, Mr Speaker, that it would simply not be possible for me or for any of the Members on this side of the House to have been able to stand in this House to make so many announcements or to report on the completion of so many projects without them. I owe them – all of them – therefore, a very big gratitude and I wish to do so from this House. And, of course, I take the opportunity to thank Mr Speaker, and the kind, patient and excellent assistance of your staff – namely, Frances, Stephen and Kevin.

1335 Mr Speaker, on this occasion I take the opportunity to add my gratitude to the former Clerk of the House Mr Farrell, who in my opinion was a formidable, always professional and also a kind public servant and, of course, to wish Mr Farrell’s successor, (Banging on desks) Mr Paul Martinez all the very best in his new post, which I know he relishes. I look forward to our future collaborations.

To conclude therefore, Mr Speaker, all objective commentators must agree that the Government has, in all of the areas of which I am responsible in this House, done as much as can possibly be done and acted always with the best interests of all of the entire community at heart.

1340 Along with the rest of my Cabinet colleagues, I look forward to this new financial year and on working every day to improve on the results of the year before and to work tirelessly every day for our entire community. (Banging on desks)

1345 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Selwyn Figueras. (Banging on desks)

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I have the honour and privilege to rise to address this House on the Appropriation Bill for the third time, and will be dealing with the following areas of responsibility: justice, planning, transport and traffic. I am looking forward to an uninterrupted delivery, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) if all hon. Members agree. (Laughter)

1350 Let me first thank the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister for agreeing to rejig the order of speeches as a result of which I will be speaking in reply to the Government’s addresses on planning, justice and transport leaving only traffic to come after me. I remain unsighted in that regard and I am wary of the possibility that there is likely to be announcements on findings or initiatives stemming from the sustainable Traffic and Transport Management Plan which may be significant and that I will not have the opportunity to address in this debate. (Interjections)

1355 I deal first with justice, Mr Speaker. In the first place, I would like to associate myself with the comments of the Hon. the Minister for Justice in relation to Justice Barrington Black and Justice Jack. It is almost as if he did that on purpose to confuse the House, Mr Speaker.

1360 I thank the Hon. Minister for his contribution in respect of that particular portfolio and take this opportunity to acknowledge that, despite their being clear blue water between Members on either side of this House in relation to a number of issues, I can happily say that my dealings with the hon. Member have been nothing but courteous, focused on the issues, and generally positive. I am grateful to the hon. Member for affording me that courtesy.

1365 It has been also a pleasure to work opposite him in relation to the various bits of legislation that we have worked on and developments in relation to the Justice portfolios are many and varied. Many, if not most, of which are welcome equally on both sides of the House.

The hon. Member will recall the exchange earlier this year in relation to prison occupancy figures as well as my acknowledgement and congratulations in relation to the very positive developments those represented.

1370 The passing in this House of the Companies Insolvency Act recently is another accomplishment worthy of congratulations.

I am particularly pleased to note the announcement this afternoon by the Hon. Minister in relation to the Proceeds of Crime Legislation – an issue that I had certainly dealt with on a number of occasions in the past, not least last year during the Budget speech where it was received rather interestingly by the Government Members.

1375 I am also happy to learn of the Communications and Data Surveillance Legislation that the Minister has announced. I think it will not have escaped any of the Members here that the threat of terrorism is ever present, particularly in the context of recent developments in Iraq and the news that many British men are now participating in the aggression in Iraq and the threat that that itself represents in terms of their brutalisation and return to the UK. So again I welcome that.

1380 Although there are many areas of common ground between us, Mr Speaker, there is one issue in respect of which we do not seem to agree and one which I move on to deal with.

The GSLP Liberal manifesto contains a commitment to increase the limits of qualification for legal aid and assistance and to explore other mechanisms to ensure citizens have appropriate legal representation when they need it. It goes on to say, and I quote:

‘Although there is a draft Bill already, these have not been increased for many years and a lot of people who should be eligible and need legal aid or assistance are not getting the cover.’

The long and the short of it, Mr Speaker, is that they have failed to deliver this commitment so far and instead made changes to our legislation which have effectively handed the benefit of gold-plated legal assistance to a handful independents in one high profile place, ignoring the plight of all the rest of, as he said it, a lot of people who should be eligible and need legal aid or assistance but who are not getting the cover.

1390 It is not like we have not made an issue of this either, Mr Speaker. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, when he shadowed this portfolio raised the issue in questions to the Minister in February 2012, generally about the reform, that the Government was contemplating and, specifically following the publication of the Legal Aid Amendment Rules in June 2012, the Minister confirmed that it would affect just that handful of defendants in cases caught within the definition of exceptionally complex cases involving fraud.

1400 In the Budget debate that year, the Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond alluded to the plight of single parents in saying that, and I quote:

‘Despite my hon. Friend, Mr Feetham, having prepared Legal Aid reform legislation, waiting to be implemented, it is shocking that this Government has only published new rules to expand Legal Aid that enables defendants, accused of complex fraud crimes, to hire expensive specialist lawyers at public expense. No thought has gone into, or takes into account, the plight of single parents, mainly women, who are not entitled to Legal Aid if they own the family home or a car. This blanket rule penalises lone parents struggling with mortgage payments, and with paying legal fees in order to pursue erring partners in their duty of care as a parent.’

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, as Shadow Minister for Justice in 2012, also alluded to it.

1405 – and I quote –

‘... in relation to Legal Aid, we simply do not agree with the recent legislative changes made by the Government which help a handful of defendants in one fraud case.’

The Hon. Minister for Justice conceded indeed in answer to a question I posed barely two months ago, and this is still within the quote, 1410 ‘... that there were also non-fraud cases which are exceptionally difficult and complex. In the premises, the logic for extending the recent Legal Aid rules to exceptionally difficult and complex non-fraud cases is, in my respectful view, unanswerable.’

1415 He went on to say or ask:

‘Why the Government has chosen to assist a handful of defendants in a fraud case, only they know, but it is certainly not the right and it is certainly not the fair thing for them to do. We urge the Government to therefore do the right thing and extend those rules.’

1420 In answers to questions, the Hon. the Minister said that they were not going to reform legal aid in a piecemeal fashion; but, with respect, that is in fact exactly what they did. Their failure to bring legal aid reform to this House is all the more mystifying given that they have indeed managed to conduct consultation, draft, publish and pass legislation in relation to many other areas and yet somehow have so far managed to avoid bringing the Bill for legal aid reform to this House.

They managed to stretch to issuing Amended Legal Aid Rules, effectively granting one group of defendants in one case in the jurisdiction unlimited legal aid.

1425 So, Mr Speaker, they managed to bring, amongst other initiatives, the Smoke Free Environment Act, the Civil Partnership Act and the new Companies Insolvency Acts – I mean no mean feat – but they have not managed to bring before this House a Bill for legal aid reform.

1430 The Hon. Minister inherited draft legislation which had been prepared in consultation with the industry and made to that draft Bill such changes that circumstances or policy dictated today. What it cannot do, with respect, Mr Speaker, is to take the better part of three years in Government, reviewing and considering draft legislation – one which the Hon. Mr Licudi told us he had in February 2012 – sit on it and fail to bring changes to the system which are needed in this community. (A Member: Absolutely.)

1435 Now, Mr Speaker, in relation to this, the Hon. the Chief Minister will likely say in his reply that it is the height of hypocrisy that we should be demanding such reform after only three years of their Government when the party I form part of was in Government for 16 years and in particular the Leader of the Opposition was the Justice Minister for the last four.

1440 Mr Speaker, the fact is that the draft legislation was at an advanced stage of readiness and would already be law had we been returned to office in 2015. What the Chief Minister will likely do is to accept that they have taken too long in this already but say that that is okay because the GSD never did it in 16 years, Mr Speaker. As is his style, he will validate his acts or omissions by reference to the omissions he claims himself to deplore.

1445 What he will be saying, Mr Speaker, is that they will continue to take their jolly time until such time when circumstances, whatever those may be, permit them to bring the Legal Aid Reform Bill to this House even if it means that many in this community continue to suffer the unfairness of being unable to challenge estranged partners who refuse to allow them to have contact with their own children simply because they have a job which helps them to get by but which excludes them from getting legal assistance. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1450 This issue, Mr Speaker, has been brought to the fore – How very melodical of the Chief Minister! The issue has been brought to the fore not just because general reform is long overdue, but because this Government's amendment of the Rules to, effectively, benefit defendants in just one case – (Interjection) yes, one case – ignoring all other possibilities for reform which they could have introduced, simply brought the spotlight to shine brightly on the Government's lack of general action in this respect.

1455 They have taken one area of legal aid and made a single change by regulations which has been for the benefit of exceptionally complex cases involving fraud – a euphemism, Mr Speaker, for one case; just the one case. (A Member: Absolutely.) They have made one change to a regime that requires, by their own admission, wholesale reform. Well, why, Mr Speaker? Why? Why haven't they extended this to exceptionally difficult cases not involving fraud? Cases which the Minister himself has accepted in this House do exist.

1460 In fact, in a reply to a supplementary question asked by the Hon. and Learned Sir Peter Caruana back in October 2012 as to whether they were going to extend this legal aid benefit to complex cases not involving fraud, the Hon. Minister insisted that his answer was – rather unhelpfully I think you will find – and I quote:

'No, we will do it, because we are considering Legal Aid and Legal Assistance reform generally so we will do it at that time.'

1465 That, Mr Speaker, is rather a confusing position to adopt. What is it that they are going to be doing? Are they going to extend the benefit or are they merely going to consider it?

I take the opportunity to ask the Minister once more: will this Government be extending the benefit of the Legal Aid Amendment Rules of 2012 to exceptionally complex cases not involving fraud? And if they are not, why not?

1470 Last year, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister criticised me for not focusing on figures but, with your indulgence, I will regale him with just a handful.

1475 The spending by this community on legal aid and assistance in the following financial years was as follows: in 2010-2011, £623,202; in the financial year 2011-2012 the spending was £1,049,863; 2012-2013, the financial year after the change to the Rules, £2,210,557; in the last financial year, Mr Speaker, the one that we are here to debate, the expenditure has been £2,659,000 –

Hon. D A Feetham: The goose that laid the golden egg.

1480 Hon. S M Figueras: I suspect, Mr Speaker, that the staggering amount of £2.7 million in forecast 1485 outturn this year will probably turn out to be significantly more. The estimate for next year is £1.6 million. I wonder whether, given the circumstances of the near conclusion of the case in point, we will see a significant reduction in the costs to the taxpayer of this one change of Rules to cover one group of defendants. How many custody or access hearings could be paid for with £2.7 million? (Severall Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

1485 I now turn to planning, Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister for his address in respect of this area of responsibility. Now, the Opposition benches are often lambasted for the delivery of set piece debates which do not respond to the speeches delivered by the Ministers, usually before the Opposition Members replies. That is not the case today at least in respect of one of my portfolios.

1490 Imagine my delight, Mr Speaker, when upon hearing the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister's intervention
 I found I would have to change nothing about this part of my speech for the simple reason that the Minister had treated us almost literally to a reread of last year's speech. I was able then to print a copy of the Minister's speech yesterday, which I found in the Hansard from last year to confirm that as a matter of fact little seems to have happened beyond this point last year which was worthy of note, except of course for more meetings of the DPC and applications, which the Minister reviewed in his figures.

1495 But the spending spree continues, Mr. Speaker. The Planning Department's expenditure for the year 2012-2013 was a little over £800,000 and the estimate for the last year was just a little over £1 million. The fact is that they have spent over £1.5 million. 'Y no habia dinero'. There was no money. (Interjections and banging on desks) I shudder to think what the hon. the father of the House makes of the profligacy of the many Government Ministers –

1500

A Member: That is why he is not here.

Hon. S M Figueras: – spending like there is no tomorrow.

1505 Mr Speaker, I acknowledge that two and a half years in and from the beginning of their term of office the GSLP Liberals have indeed opened up (Laughter) the planning. (Laughter and banging on desks) I hope the hon. the father of the House has had the opportunity to hear that last comment.

Mr Speaker, as I was saying, I do acknowledge that two and a half years in and from the beginning of their term of office the GSLP Liberals have indeed opened up the planning process locally in a manner which we did not contemplate in the GSD's manifesto in 2011.

1510 The GSD believed furtively then, as it does today, in the value of a planning process such like it was created by the GSD during their term of office, which allowed objectors to file their objections to projects for consideration by the DPC in closed meetings.

Some will recall the demolition of the North Gate of the Dockyard under the cover of a long weekend by the previous GSLP administration as an example of how things had been done until 1996.

1515 The development of the process by the Government now includes the expansion of the DPC's membership and the opening of meetings to public. It now publishes minutes of these meetings, although there is still some delay in relation to their publication, which is something that I have raised in the House in the past. And the Government runs projects by the DPC for guidance and advice but nothing more.

1520 This policy, Mr Speaker, has been somewhat hit and miss. It was the Hon. the Speaker's predecessor who presided over the exchange relating to the fiasco with the Grand Battery demolition... which demolition project went before the DPC after the wall had been demolished.

A similar and convenient circumvention of Rules, which after all do not yet apply to the Government, was also the Order of the Day in relation to and the presentation of Charles Bruzon House to a meeting of the DPC.

1525 The Deputy the Chief Minister also cited in his speech this morning two projects in his address as examples of the success of this policy – the Sunborn and the refurbishment of the housing estates. Well, all they do is prove that they paid lip service to the DPC and its concerns in relation to the Sunborn but that ultimately that project was completed as it was always going to be. The done deal, Mr Speaker. (A Member: Hear, hear.) As far as the housing estates are concerned, (Banging on desks) the Government 1530 wants to rewrite history, much like the Hon. the Chief Minister tried to do yesterday with the GSD's legacy, but to no effect.

What the Government now calls the start of the public consultation in relation to Laguna, Glacis and Moorish Castle Estates was actually a press release, Mr Speaker, number 455 of 2012, announcing a major refurbishment of housing estates. A statement that set out as another done deal that, and I quote:

1535

'There will be an additional residential floor added to above each of the buildings in the three housing estates.'

It went on, Mr Speaker.

‘This means that the roof problems being experienced by many of these buildings will finally be tackled once and for all.’

Well, that went well, didn't it, Mr Speaker?

1540 The Deputy Chief Minister went on to confirm in that statement that the Cabinet had given the green light to the proposals and that he was very pleased that they were moving forward. No mention of public consultation, Mr Speaker – none – just a reference to the fact that they were putting the project before the Commission, not to public consultation.

1545 What they then had to do was to backtrack – not for the last time – when the volume of resistance from the tenants associations and in the social media grew too loud to bear; at which point they succumbed to the populist approach to any resistance; and this, Mr Speaker, notwithstanding the fact that they must have, when they announced the projects, been of the agreed view that their plans were going to deal with a specific need in the community or at the very least seemed like a good idea at the time on which they will have had the benefit of input from the Government's own advisors.

1550 I suppose the taxpayer should now be grateful for the near half a million pounds being spent on social media monitoring, Mr Speaker. (Laughter) Government by social media. It is like a direct line to Convent Place (Laughter) There is no need to write in; there is no need to have a meeting with anyone in Government. I mean sometimes, I will be perfectly honest, I recommend to constituents who come and see me with a particular issue or stop me down the street not to raise it in this place because the last thing I want it to become is a party political thing, which happens very easily and it just has the result of it being side-lined. My advice often these days is put it on Speak Freely or whatever Facebook discussion/ribbing forum you prefer. (Interjections) The effects are sometimes immediate, Mr Speaker, but what a terribly dangerous thing that really is.

1560 Returning to planning, their signature manifesto commitment in this area, i.e. subjecting Government projects to DPC approval, not just for opinion and guidance, one of the many on the list which could have been made a reality with the stroke of a pen remains elusive. Why is that, Mr Speaker? Simply because they could not run the risk of coming up against refusal of the DPC in respect of any of their many projects.

1565 They say that they will make such projects subject to approval within this term of office and as part of the overhaul of the town planning legislation. We say that the delivery of that manifesto commitment has been conveniently and quite cynically tied up with the other developments in town planning practice and legislation to allow them the excuse and, more importantly, the time to get cracking on with the projects.

1570 Their wish to retain control over the biggest projects – projects with a community-wide impact – is evident in the application by the GFA – technically not a Government of Gibraltar project – in relation to the Europa Point Stadium. Presented to the community at large as another done deal, the Government quickly moved to quell any unrest within the DPC about the impact on Europa Point by stressing that Europa Point is the only plot of land the Government will give the GFA. End of discussion.

1575 Incidentally, Mr Speaker, I have to say that my jaw almost fell through the floor when I read GOHNS' statement in the context of the Europa Point Stadium suggesting that they were okay with the idea of this gigantic project, (Laughter) alright with the impact it was going to have on the area, yet clearly forgetting the issue that they had had with some random shrubbery back in 2011 when the previous administration sought to beautify the area and the Hon. Dr Cortes, Minister for the Environment, who is unfortunately not in the Chamber this afternoon, headed the society.

1580 The Europa Point Stadium project might as well be a Government one because, for all the openness of the discussions about it and the televised meetings – interesting though they were – the Government is saying it will only essentially allow the building of the Stadium at that site and the DPC will probably, on that basis, find itself with no choice but to allow the project to go ahead. To do otherwise could be, given the Government's stance, to say no to a Cat 4 Stadium in Gibraltar.

1585 But, Mr Speaker, frankly, if it is the Hon. the Chief Minister's view that the Stadium should be built at Europa Point then he is entitled to that view, as he should be entitled in our view to steer and sometimes even direct that projects should happen in a particular way or in a particular place. That is as much his right as it is his obligation as the political leader of this community.

1590 The Chief Minister, however, wants to be able to have it both ways. He appoints the Town Planner as the Chairman of the DPC but his own projects are not subject to his and the DPC's approval. He relinquishes control over most applications but keeps it over the most important projects until he is done starting them. He is at once the generous leader but 'cuando conviene', when it is convenient, Mr Speaker, he can push a project through quickly, as was the case with Charles Bruzon House; and although it is not strictly a Government project, as I am sure he also hopes will be the case with the Europa Point Stadium.

Another of the policies of this Government is that the Town Planner should chair the DPC. The Town Planner is therefore charged with the responsibility of making decisions which, although well qualified to 1595 make he or she, Mr Speaker – because this is not about the person of the Town Planner, whoever that may be from time to time, it is about the office of the Town Planner itself... the office of the Town Planner is not politically accountable for making those decisions.

1600 An example of the difficulty this raises is found in a planning application for 2,000 square metres of office space which was rejected back in 2012 on the basis that a member of the Commission had taken issue with the idea of demolition in principle. Notwithstanding the conversation that was held highlighting that the building that would replace the demolished one would be built for purpose and that the building to be demolished was of little, if any, heritage value. The project was refused on the basis of an in-principle problem with demolition generally.

1605 It is not to say, Mr Speaker, that had the Town Planner not been the Chairman that the project would have been given the green light, but it would have been down to a political decision taking into account the needs of the community, the impact of the project and the very urgent need for office space.

We would certainly, as was GSD policy in 2011, continue to publish minutes of the meetings of the DPC. We would further, as previewed by our statement on enhanced democracy last week, seek to involve the Opposition in the DPC as well.

1610 Our policy in respect of leadership of the Commission, however, remains firmly that of returning chairmanship of the Commission to the Minister with, from time to time, responsibility for planning. The GSD's policy in relation to the issue of Government projects requiring approval of the DPC also remains that Government projects should not be made subject to the approval of the DPC, though we will, as a GSD Government did at the time, take the opinion and the advice from the DPC as this Government does now.

1615 There can be no denying, however, Mr Speaker – and hon. Members will want to pay attention – that certain changes to the planning process in Gibraltar have been welcomed by the public; in particular, the public meetings of the DPC. On that basis, this Party would not seek to turn the clocks back in this respect and would, in recognition of a new expectation in relation to the public holding of meetings of the DPC, continue with this policy when returned to office in 2015; because you see we are not in politics to rule supreme or to leave only our mark on this community in the same way as we would not, if returned to office, take to Commonwealth Park with a bulldozer and some tarmac as our first act of Government. (Laughter) For the sake of tearing down any GSLP legacy projects, we will continue to hold meetings of the DPC in public.

1625 The Chief Minister and the Minister for the Environment should rest assured there really is no need for a Commonwealth Park Act, as they have proposed. They may be imputing to Members on this side of the House their own bad faith but I can assure them that the gimmick that is the proposed Commonwealth Park Legislation is as necessary as it will be effective in the long run.

1630 Although I do not shadow Environment any more, Mr Speaker – my hon. Friend, the Hon. J J Netto, doing such sterling work in this regard – I will deal with Commonwealth Park this morning in response to comments made by the Minister yesterday for a couple of reasons, (Laughter) mainly because I shadowed the Minister's portfolio for a while and, secondly, because this is a good opportunity to correct some of the misrepresentations which the Minister has made about the GSD's position in relation to the park.

1635 Mr Speaker, for the record and hopefully for the last time, the GSD does not take and never has taken issue with the idea or concept of the park itself. In fact, it looks very nice. I will be perfectly honest – I have no issue accepting that. That is not the point. Members opposite have always misrepresented this, probably because they cannot fathom the possibility of the GSD not knocking a project per se or because they prefer to do what they can to ensure that the electorate is unable to make up the nuance of our issues with the park.

1640 You see the point is, Mr Speaker, that we have only ever taken and continue to take issue with the fact that they were and continue to be dishonest with the electorate. 'Y no habia dinero,' there was no money. (A Member: Exactly) There was nothing left in the kitty and yet, despite their own play on how many important social and infrastructural issues had been ignored for as long as they claimed and the Chief Minister's own address to the Nation citing the doomsday memo, nothing got in the way of commencement of works on the park. A vanity project if ever there was one. One thing I have to say, and have said already, is it looks very good and I will visit soon on one of my many walks with my family because I actually enjoy walking.

1645 Which brings me on to another point: I may not be an environmentalist, Mr Speaker, but I do enjoy a casual and leisurely walk or cycle ride either here or across the way in Spain. I get around on my bicycle or, when it gets a little too warm, on my moped – so not in my car. So although I am not an environmentalist, Mr Speaker, and I would never want to be considered one either. It may be that other Members present and members of the public will be pleasantly surprised and do well and probably feel a whole lot better for it for making just some of the decisions I make on a daily basis because, as I have discovered, the green way is often the fun and healthy way too.

1650 Returning to conclude what I want to say in relation to the park, however, Mr Speaker, there is no cynicism here, other than that on the Government benches. It was them who knew all along that they would not provide two floors of parking under the park and dealt with it (A Member: Hear, hear.) by just adding 1660 the proviso in (Banging of desks) relation to the geotechnical survey which they did not even carry out. They have since been manically playing around with a jigsaw that is Gibraltar to find space for, and I quote, 'double the number of car parking spaces as there had been in Commonwealth Parade'. Wherever a flat plot of land has appeared in the area, down has gone the tarmac and paint to create temporary car parking facilities. In fact, work seems to be starting on the Marriott, which will give rise to a new shortage which they will now have to re-provide somewhere else.

1665 And if by hounding, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Minister for Environment means the questioning and holding to account of Ministers in this House, then he can rest assured that we will continue to hound him as he throws the taxpayers' money around as if it grows on trees, on parks and plants and trees and anything else he fancies on a given day.

1670 Finally, in relation to the park, Mr Speaker, and in reply to the Minister's comments yesterday, relating to his involvement with Wildlife Gibraltar Limited – and again I say it is unfortunate the Hon. Minister is not present but his team is adequately represented – I am grateful that he confirmed that we were only asking pertinent questions and that there had been no suggestion of impropriety. We have noted that he has never taken fees for directorship of the company.

Mr Speaker: May I intervene at this stage?

1675 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, by all means.

Mr Speaker: I think it is pertinent if Members are going to go over that ground again, of the question of a Member having a personal financial interest or not, that I should direct the attention of Members to page 76 of Erskine May and I am going to quote what is written there:

1680 'Disclosure and registration of personal financial interest.'

Now, should there be a lacuna in the Rules and Standing Orders of this Parliament then of course we go by the Rules and Standing Orders for the House of Commons, as explained in Erskine May.

'The House has two distinct but related methods for the disclosure of the personal financial interests of its Members: registration of interests in a Register which is publicly available; and declaration of interest in the course of debate in the House and in other contexts.

The main purpose of the Register is to give public notification on a continuous basis of those financial interests held by Members which might be thought to influence their parliamentary conduct or actions.

The main purpose of declaration is to ensure that fellow Members of the House and the public are made aware at the appropriate time when a Member is participating in the proceedings of the House, of any past, present or expected future financial interest which might reasonably be thought to be relevant to those proceedings.'

1685 So I would ask the hon. Member to consider very, very carefully the provisions of Erskine May and then to reflect on whether he should continue to raise the matter. My view is that he should not.

1690 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the indication and for the Chair's assistance in reviewing the relevant parts of Erskine May. I was in fact going to say, before the hon. Chair assisted in the way that Mr Speaker did, that I was not actually going to revisit his direct interest in the company –

1695 Mr Speaker: But does the hon. Member realise that the proper thing would have been for the Hon. Minister at the appropriate stage in the proceedings of this House – in other words when the item came up – for him to have declared an interest, if he did have an interest in the matter. He did not have to do that a week ago; he did not have to do that at Question Time. The requirement in Erskine May is that he should so at the appropriate time in the proceedings so that Members and the public know where the position is.

Now, he is not involved here. He has spoken already. He is not involved. It might be appropriate for the hon. Member later in the proceedings, if there is an item of expenditure with reference to Commonwealth Park, to do so.

1700 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I rise purely as a backbench parliamentarian and in making this I do so in the context of the implications of what Mr Speaker has said for Parliament. I want to make it very clear that I make absolutely no imputation in relation to the matter as it affects the Minister for the Environment or the facts relating to it.

1705 As Mr Speaker has just read out, Erskine May relates to conflicts in the parliamentary work. The award of a Government tender is not Parliamentary business; it is business by the Executive by the Government outside of Parliament and the Rules of Parliament do not apply to the conduct of Ministers, of their work as Members of the Government outside of Parliament. First point.

1710 Second point: I would urge Mr Speaker to consider a most unusual position – if the Opposition was unable to challenge the Government on potential conflicts of any Minister in relation to the work of the Government and the decisions of Ministers in relation to conflicts of interest not as parliamentarians but between their functions as Ministers and their private commercial interests.

1715 Now, I repeat – and I will every four sentences if necessary; we are all intelligent people and I do not think I need to – that this is nothing to do with Dr Cortes or the circumstances that have arisen about which I express no view. (Interjection) Yes, of course.

1720 Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I recognise the way in which he is making the point, and I am not going to try and speak about that aspect of it, but there is one aspect of how this debate has arisen, which I think is relevant to what Mr Speaker is saying and the reason why Mr Speaker is saying it, which I think the hon. Gentleman does not realise, and thence why he is making these points with which I think we can all agree.

1725 It is that Mr Cortes had spoken about this issue and the award of the tender etc, and when the issue arose it was put to him that he had not... or he was asked about an interest; and the point that I made at the time – and I think it is the point that Mr Speaker is making now – is that, in speaking about the award of the tender, if he had had an interest... in other words, in speaking about it here in Parliament, if he had had an interest then the Rule required him to speak to that interest before he continued. That is how it has all grown and thence the reason why it is parliamentarily relevant.

1730 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: I am grateful –

Mr Speaker: May I also add that the Hon. Minister had of course discharged his obligation by informing the Clerk of the House with respect to the Register of Interest. He had acted correctly in that respect so that matter is... we have reached closure on that. But then the matter was raised of his interest... whether he had a continuing... during the course of Question Time. Okay?

1735 Now, he dealt with that matter, satisfactorily. He gave an explanation here in the House. I fail to see the need for the hon. Member, having regard to what Erskine May has to say, to revert back to it.

1740 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, if that is your ruling so be it. I am sure in the context of this debate no harm will be done to anybody by just moving on.

I repeat – and I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister for the clarification that he has made – a distinction has got to be drawn between the purposes of the chapter from which Erskine May has been cited. Registration of Members' interests in the contexts of parliamentary business means that, if you ask questions on a matter in which you have a financial interest, you could be called to order, or worse now with the new regime in the UK, if you have not declared an interest in it and if, as a Member of the Government or perhaps even as a Member of the Opposition, if you move legislation, in other words, that is the parliamentary business to which I believe that material read from applies.

1745 Whether it is capable of being extended simply to participating in a debate... but I think in my own personal view – and of course it is for Mr Speaker to rule and not for me; I am just expressing a view as an outgoing parliamentarian – that it cannot mean that in a case in which the Opposition wished to raise... Now, whether debate is the right place to do it or whether you would bring a motion or whether you should ask questions, that is another issue about the appropriateness of the procedure.

1750 Mr Speaker: I think that in the context of what has happened, if the matter had not been raised during Question Time and the Minister had in fact had an interest, he would have been obliged during his speech on the estimates to have declared the interest. That would have been the appropriate stage in the proceedings of this meeting. (Interjections) That would have been the appropriate stage in the proceedings of this meeting for him to have declared an interest. The matter arose earlier during Question Time and he disposed of the matter.

1760 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, it is just that I was just going to speak to that question and your own contribution prevented me from finishing.

1765 The point that I am making is that you cannot, by declaration of an interest, sanitise an act of improper Government conflict of interest decision. It is a confusion of one thing with the other. The question of the declaration of interest in terms of the conduct of parliamentary works so that you can then go on to do it, despite your interest, is a wholly different issue to the situation that would prevail, if it were to arise – and I repeat I do not say it does in this case – if there were a genuine case of ministerial abuse of power, it would not be either an obstacle to the Opposition to raising it, nor would it sanitise it on the part of the Minister that he had declared his interest.

I think there is a confusion of two wholly different issues here and that is the only point I want to make.

1770 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might? I think the hon. Gentleman's distinction is absolutely appropriate and there is no challenge on the part of the Government, but you see he is speaking to an issue which did not arise and is not the context in which Mr Speaker is making the point.

There was never any ministerial conflict because there was never an interest which gave rise to the conflict and that I think has been accepted in the context of this debate.

1775 There was, it appeared, the outside of an allegation that the Minister had spoken in Parliament about something in respect of which he had an interest, without having declared the interest. And the Minister's point was to say, 'When I had the interest I declared it; when the interest changed I declared it. I did that before I spoke on the subject.' What Mr Speaker is saying now is, under Erskine May's Rules, therefore he had nothing to declare in the context of a parliamentary debate. Forget the issue of a ministerial decision because the issue did not arise. And for that reason I think Mr Speaker is absolutely right to bring to our attention that particular paragraph.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: If I could just add one thing and again, if I were to make criticism of the factual situation affecting the Minister of the Environment it would not be financial corruption. I mean you do not have to go that far to have a view that it might have been better done differently. And this is a genuine parliamentary debate.

1785 I know that Dr Cortes and his family and his wife have had a long standing and very successful – if I might say so for Gibraltar – association with the Alameda Gardens and many other things, and I suppose it is an extraordinary coincidence that might only happen in a small place like Gibraltar, that such a person could end up being the Minister for the Environment with responsibility for the very same Alameda Garden and other things that he has been interested with.

1790 But it nevertheless does provide with a legitimate area for political discourse in which different people, without making any accusations of impropriety against Dr Cortes, might well have different views. For example one bit just comes to mind to me which I think cannot be excluded by any idea of registration of conflict of interest is: some people might ask themselves, well, how is the Minister going to supervise this agreement?

1800 I mean Dr Cortes is on one side of the agreement and a member of his close family is on the other side of that. I have no doubt that he would find a way of doing it. He will delegate it to an official and the official will no doubt have... but there are issues which are of bona fide political debate which do not touch on whether there has been impropriety, either in the award process or in the Hon. Dr Cortes' status as Minister or in the fact that his wife remains a shareholder or whoever is the shareholder – some member of his family.

1805 There are issues of genuine political discourse about whether both sides of the contract are not so closely related that it makes enforcement and administration of a contract – which may not be necessary because it might all be so efficiently done, that there is never any disputes... but if there were, how would they be resolved? I suppose the Government will put in place some sort of mechanism to ensure that and that presumably would be the Government's answer in any discussion on the subject.

1810 Mr Speaker: Erskine May of course then goes on, in the section on the Register of Members' Financial Interests. There is provision there for any financial interests of the spouse or partner or any close member of the family. That is also covered in Erskine May and I do believe – I have not seen the Register of our own Register until I made my own declaration at the appropriate time but I have a feeling – that there is also provision there. There must be provision there because I was a Chairman of the Select Committee at the time – nearly 40 years ago – and it was based of course on the Register of the House of Commons.

1815 Hon. Chief Minister: Can I just deal with the – ?

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: I beg your pardon, Chief Minister.

1820 Mr Speaker's last intervention suggests that either I have not made myself clear in the point that I am making or that he does not agree with me.

If my point has any merit, the question of the Register of Members' Interests is irrelevant to this matter, to the extent that the Register of Members Interests is relevant, that's my point – 1825 Mr Speaker: No, no it is not. I tell you why it is not. It is not because the Hon. Minister, in answering the question the other day, made a reference to it and that was surely uppermost in the mind of the Hon. Mr Selwyn Figueras. He knows that the Minister did so.

1830 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just deal with... (Interjections) The hon. Gentleman has raised a point which goes beyond the debate that we are having, which is the issue of Ministerial conflict, which I think is the point that I take from him.

What Mr Cortes was saying in the context of the answer to that question – I think the hon. Member was not here at the time – was that he had not been involved in the award of the tender. In other words, he was not involved in relation to the tender which could have given rise to a conflict of interest if he had also had an interest in the company and then he disclosed the issues which related to his interest.

1835 So both in terms of the determination of the tender the ministerial issue, he had not been involved and, second, in terms of the parliamentary aspect of the debate or the question about how that tender had been awarded, he declared the interest as it had been. And I think that deals with both heads.

1840 Now, what happens with enforcement? Well, very simple, Mr Speaker. I mean the hon. Gentleman will have come up against this issue on a number of occasions, I am sure, when he was in Government and there were issues which involved individuals who had relatives that were involved in business. And I am sure it is very easy for him to understand how it was dealt with. There are Rules which deal with conflict so if one is dealing, for example, with contracts awarded to one's brother-in-law, one enforces those contracts in a way that ensures that one's brother-in-law gets no advantage from the fact that he is one's brother-in-law.

1845 We had a number of instances where successful tenders – tenders is too generous a word – where direct allocations of contracts under the previous administration involved – and again I am not suggesting there was anything improper – people who had filial relationships and the rules as to how those contracts were managed would have been those that we adhere to as to conflicts of interest, which I am sure they were aware of, which is the codes on conflict which we looked at when we were preparing this ministerial code that we will be bringing to the Select Committee. It is actually quite easy to deal with those.

1850 The hon. Gentleman himself had a close relative working with him and there would have been issues there to be dealt with.

1855 So I think the rules are settled as to what you do in that situation. We are going to bring to the Select Committee those rules so that they become the Rules of the Government as a ministerial code of the Parliament as a parliamentary code and of the Public Service as a public service code.

Mr Speaker: May I just say, by way of conclusion, I was not making a definitive ruling; I was just drawing attention to the provisions of the Rules in Erskine May. And I think there is a need to be guided by this because otherwise there is a danger of overstepping the mark. That is all I was meaning to do.

1860 I can make a definitive ruling if Members should so wish, but that was not my intention. The intention was to warn the hon. Member to keep within the bounds of Erskine May. That is all.

1865 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not going to rehearse any of the arguments either by the Hon. Sir Peter or the Chief Minister but just simply to say this: that this is the second year in a row that the hon. my colleague, Mr Figueras, has been substantially interrupted in the presentation of his speech. That is the second year... May I – ?

Mr Speaker: Interrupted by whom?

1870 Hon. D A Feetham: May I – ?

Mr Speaker: Interrupted by whom?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I finish?

1875 Mr Speaker: No, no, no. Answer that question before you finish. Who has interrupted him?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, your... Mr Speaker has – 1880 Mr Speaker: The Chair has. The Chair...

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker interrupted him last year. May I finish –?

1885 Mr Speaker: The Chair is entitled to interrupt the most senior Member of this House, the father of the House, the Chief Minister, and anybody else, should the Speaker consider that he is transgressing the Rules of the House. That is what the Speaker is here for.

He does not have to wait for a Member to finish his intervention in order to do so, because the whole purpose was to draw attention. I thought that there was a danger that the Hon. Selwyn Figueras was skating on thin ice and he may not be aware. I do not think I was very much aware when I was a Member of the provisions of Erskine May, but I am today because it is my business to do so.

1890 So I would ask the Leader of the Opposition, because really my intervention... I mean I did not want to provoke a controversy this afternoon. That was not my intervention. I was giving sensible guidance and I think the Leader of the Opposition must not transgress and go further than he should, because I am not sitting on either side of the House; I am here in the Chair to carry out my functions as required by the Rules, and that is what I have done this afternoon.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I –

Mr Speaker: I would rather he left it at that, but if he wishes to carry on I will not stop him.

1900

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I have not suggested otherwise. Mr Speaker appears to have got the wrong end of the stick yet again in fact with the point that my hon. Friend, Mr Figueras, was going to make. (Interjection)

1905

Mr Speaker, the point, the sole point that I was going to make is last year there were substantial interruptions with my hon. Friend, Mr Figueras. This year, unfortunately, for whatever reasons, there again has been an interruption. Mr Speaker has read from Erskine May and the sole point that I was going to make, before Mr Speaker asked me the question that he did, was that in fact Mr Figueras was just simply going to make the point that the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana had made in the course of exchanges, and therefore he could move on.

That is the only point that I was going to make, bearing in mind, Mr Speaker, that this is the second year that there appears to have been controversy. (Interjection) Quite frankly, I believe unrelated to Mr Figueras.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may, can I just invite the hon. Gentleman to accept that we have listened to Mr Figueras and have not interrupted him because there has been no reason to? We would quite happily have interrupted him if we felt that there was.

But can I just invite him and every Member of the House to consider that when we interrupt each other, we interrupt each other, but when Mr Speaker asks us to sit he is actually usually just giving us guidance or asking us to stick to the Rules. And can I just invite him also to think that the discussion I have had with the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana has actually been a very useful one about the issue and not one that we should have wanted to avoid.

1920

Mr Speaker: Perhaps Mr Selwyn Figueras would care to carry on.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful, and will say only that, as the Hon. Leader of the Opposition has indicated, the arguments raised so eloquently by the Hon. and Learned Sir Peter Caruana are in fact the only arguments that I was going to be dealing with in that respect.

1925

As it is clear... and I was going to concede of course the point that had already been rehearsed; and only in reply, Mr Speaker – because this had not originally been in my set piece speech – only in reply to the comments that the Hon. Minister himself made yesterday and brought to this debate. It was the only reason why I was going to be dealing with that particular point.

However, I am satisfied that the point is sufficiently well made and debated and will move on, Mr Speaker.

In relation to transport, I now turn to my... I had just dealt with planning – in case everyone else had forgotten, given that it has been so long since I was actually dealing with that particular point – I am now turning to my shadow responsibilities for transport.

I continue to enjoy a very positive discourse with my hon. Friend, the Minister for Transport, and I turn first to our buses.

I am grateful for the announcement that the new buses will be with us in short order. As we have discussed, the current fleet has provided the community with a bus service to be proud of for coming up on 10 years, I think it was; and, despite the servicing needs of an ageing fleet, the service is still one we can mostly be proud of.

In talking about the buses, however, Mr Speaker, a quick review of passenger numbers is quite apropos. There has been a decline in the number of bus passengers generally, Mr Speaker, in the order of about 13% year-on-year between 2012 and 2013. And this is taken from information that is available online and a brief comparison that I have made.

1945

It is interesting that there may be a variety of factors other than the buses themselves suffering from a general lack of appeal in respect of those figures, clearly. I mean one could speculate that the number of passengers on our buses might be detrimentally affected by the issues we have been experiencing since our neighbours to the north started applying additional pressure at the border.

1950

A review of bus passenger numbers suggests, Mr Speaker, if there has indeed been such an effect on the numbers, it was in fact a beneficial one, interestingly enough. Bus passenger numbers were, for the period of time between January and July of 2013, down on the same period in 2012. In fact, in July 2012, the number of passengers on the buses was 238,000 and, in the month of July 2013, a comparatively few

190,000 used the buses – a decrease in the order of 50,000 passengers in the same month year-on-year or 20% less. (Banging on desk)

1955 In August last year, however, one can observe how the numbers, year-on-year, equalise and how, from September to November, passenger numbers are indeed up last year, on 2012. I suspect this had a lot to do with the cross frontier workers and tourists are likely leaving more of their cars in La Linea to avoid the worst of the queuing following commencement of works on the artificial reef, which I note is forecast to have cost us in the region of £241,000 last year, but in respect of which there is only a token figure of 1960 £1,000 provision in respect of next year. I suppose that will have to grow ever slightly bigger to replace the concrete block we seem to have lost yesterday, Mr Speaker.

The above notwithstanding, the number of bus users overall is down 13% between 2012 and 2013. Again I only have the figures from January to May for this year and it shows that for the same period this year the picture has only marginally improved.

1965 I am hopeful that, with the introduction of the new buses – which the hon. Member has indicated today, but I can confirm that he had revealed to me in private earlier certainly – would start as early as September this year. We might see an increase in appetite for the use of public transport, because frankly, Mr Speaker, the more people we have in buses, walking or cycling, the less people we will have in their cars and that will accrue to the benefit of us all.

1970 As far as the expenditure on public transport is concerned, I would like at this stage to raise a point about the treatment of the contribution to the Gibraltar Bus Company at Head 44 of the Estimates Book. Mr Speaker, historically – which is to say until this year – we have always been provided with a breakdown of which company has received what – and perhaps the father of the House might be able to assist in this in terms of the Chief Minister’s reply whenever that may come – we have always been provided with a 1975 breakdown at Head 44 of which company has received what by way of contribution out of the consolidated fund.

As an example, we know that, of the £17.7 million that Government contributed to its own companies last year, £2.7 million went to the Gibraltar Bus Company for the 2013-2014 financial year. And that £3.7 million went to the Gibraltar Car Parks and so on. All we know this year is that the forecast outturn for this entire head at head 44 is £20 million and that the estimate for next year is £25 million. What we do not have is an analysis of where that has gone or is going.

Another point I would make, Mr Speaker, is that the expenditure of the Government-owned companies is nowhere to be found and would add that, to see this information or at the very least have the breakdown I have just referred to, would be very helpful indeed.

1985 Having dealt with the buses, Mr Speaker, I will turn to talk about cycling generally and the GibiBike scheme specifically. Financial cover for this project is to be found at subhead 5(zq) within the Improvement and Development Fund, on a list of disappearing Heads – much to my dismay, Mr Speaker. There was no provision for this last year and it is disappointing to see its departure from the Estimates Book due for next year.

1990 You see, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Transport – a Minister with whom, as I have already said, I enjoy a very positive relationship and in whom I have discovered a politician genuinely willing to work with his counterpart in Opposition; there are others too – and I have been at loggerheads on this issue since the very beginning of this Parliament.

I have appreciated and continue to appreciate that he is happy to keep me informed of developments in a variety of matters without the need for those matters to come before this House on a monthly basis. But we do disagree I think on the importance of an urban bicycle rental scheme like GibiBikes was. You see, Mr Speaker, it is patently obvious to me and the rest of my parliamentary colleagues on this side of the House that part of the political strategy of this Government has been to dismantle those parts of the GSD legacy which could, in their view, reasonably be dismantled in addition to the other strategic elements of knocking what they could not and blaming us for all that may have gone wrong during their term of office.

This is clearly not an indictment on the Minister himself, Mr Speaker, but on the policy that he has adopted as part of the Government, ostensibly in consultation with the Cabinet in relation to the GibiBikes.

Mr Speaker, I will concede that the scheme, as created in 2011, became problematic soon after launch. Its difficulties, both practical and contractual, which made it difficult for the scheme to succeed, notwithstanding its popularity and the growing membership it enjoyed, despite quickly becoming a sub-standard facility.

I bemoaned and continued to bemoan its demise, mostly because I am of the view that had there been genuine political will to either keep it alive or to provide an alternative, not beset by the problems of the original, it could have been so.

2010 It would not have been without its costs, Mr Speaker. I recognise that. If one were to speculate, given the cost of the original scheme, that a new one might have set us back between £300,000 and £400,000, would it not have been a valuable and worthy investment, particularly in light of the many other projects where this Government is spending so much more?

2015 As a solution designed to get people out of their cars and on to an eco-friendly alternative for getting around, GibiBikes was ticking all the boxes and if they were willing to spend £3 million on Commonwealth Park, £23 million on a small boat berth marina and were looking at spending in the order of £5 million – well, that is pure speculation – for new buses, why then could they not justify the expense of a new urban bicycle rental scheme?

2020 I suspect that there may have been some concern for the Hon. the father of the House's health had he been approached for approval of an expense of that order for the survival or replacement of a GSD legacy project and that occupied, as he must have been, with the projects in his own manifesto, that the Minister for Transport was certainly not going to allow himself to be distracted further by something of our own making. I understand all that, Mr Speaker, I do, but it would have been the right thing to do and I would have done nothing but congratulate him and his Government for investing in that.

2025 It is unfortunate that I am standing here today and that Gibraltar has effectively in that respect taken a step back when such an important step forward had been taken in 2011.

I also note, from a review of the Hon. Minister's intervention last year, that the bus company had created a website – and this is a point that may be of interest to the Hon. Minister. He also mentioned that a Facebook page and a mobile-optimised version of that site had been created and of these things I know a thing or two.

2030 Whilst I congratulate the Hon. Minister and the bus company on the Facebook page, which is very convenient and very useful in terms of keeping its passengers up to date with information and impact on the service, I regret to say that the website – certainly from a mobile perspective when really it would be at its most useful when you are on the move and you need to get information about the routes and other relevant information – leaves a lot to be desired. From the fact that the information it contains is cumbersome and unhelpful, to the fact that the mobile optimisation has clearly – and this is important – been done using a freely/cheaply available online converter, Mr Speaker, it does leave a lot to be desired.

2035 In fact, I think a cursory review of it by the Minister, even now, will help him to see how third party advertising lumped in with the use of this kind of free mobile conversion tool online is present on the page and, frankly, does Gibraltar's image and that of our bus company probably no favours whatsoever. So I would urge the Hon. Minister to review that at some point soon.

2040 In relation to the issue of taxi drivers and the quality of the taxi service, Mr Speaker, I have been having a number of meetings with a variety of representatives from a variety of organisations – all of them stakeholders in the successful delivery to Gibraltar of an integrated public transport infrastructure in which we all work together to deliver the best solution for Gibraltar Plc as part of the Opposition's outreach programme.

2045 I share the Government's wish that the initiatives that they have set upon in consultation with the industry will prove successful. As part of our continuing outreach programme, I will continue to meet with these representatives from all sectors affected by matters of public transport and will clearly keep a watchful eye on developments in this area and raise those issues which I may consider worthy of note.

One thing is clear, Mr Speaker: it does this community no favours for the political representatives in this regard to be unnecessarily at loggerheads and I believe that working to assist rather than to hinder efforts in this area can help bring benefits to the community at large.

2055 I now turn, Mr Speaker – rather briefly I will admit, given the lack of an address from the Traffic Minister himself before mine – to traffic.

Fortunately on traffic, Mr Speaker, there really is very little of note to speak of, other than in relation to the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Management Plan. The Plan has been heralded as the answer to all the traffic questions this community may have, but it seems that only the Government and a few other select people actually know what is contained within it.

2060 As an example of the lack of activity there is a provision of £155,000 in the improvement and development fund for this year for traffic enhancements, yet only £10,000 has been spent. Why the lack of spending? Everyone else was doing it, Mr Speaker.

2065 I also note that nothing has been spent on motorcycle safety campaigning either which, given the implementation of the Driver Licencing Directive potentially allowing individuals access to large powerful bikes without the EU required level of experience, would I think be even more important. I am not persuaded and neither am I satisfied that the implementation of the third Driver Licencing Directive – a matter which I have raised in this House on a number of occasions, Mr Speaker – has been done in an EU-compliant way. It is a matter that I fully intend to have reviewed when the GSD is returned to office in 2015.

2070 The Sustainable Traffic and Transport Management Plan is a matter of some mystery and intrigue, when it should really be something that we are all aware of as an exercise that they claimed would be conducted in public. All that was done in public was to stop people by the roadside at peak travel times for a few weeks last year and nothing else has been heard about it.

2075 I said it last year in my address to this House and I will say it again: this is clearly about the GSLP Liberal Government applying taxpayers' money to the purchase of some inspiration for the traffic section of their 2015 manifesto. They had nothing left to give, Mr Speaker; hence the search for ideas.

2080 On that basis, and until such time as we have had sight of the initiatives that stem from the study – it may happen in five minutes' time – we will only be able to assess the value of this expense standing at around £340,000 when we know what impact we will observe in the daily traffic difficulties most in this community experience.

2085 I will certainly be happy to congratulate – and do congratulate, in fact – the Government for the construction and delivery of the multi-storey car park at Eastern Beach which, from personal experience, is a welcome addition in the area. The development of that site, prompting the construction of the parking, is certainly something for which many will be grateful. Just one cautionary note: given the Government's stance on all things Spanish and the current situation, it might do well to procure English language printed tickets for the facility.

In conclusion, Mr Speaker – (Interjection) Yes, yes, very droll. (Interjection) Indeed. Penny wise, pound foolish.

2090 Mr Speaker, I will now take a couple of minutes to conclude, in saying that this is the third occasion on which I have the honour and the privilege of addressing this House on the Appropriation Bill. An opportunity to speak to the electorate in a manner which enables the Opposition to express its view on all aspects of Government activity and, where appropriate and indicated, to provide the electorate with a glimpse of what they can expect from their Opposition, should they seek to entrust us with Government office in little more than a year's time.

2095 The Chief Minister, in his Budget address as Leader of the Opposition in 2011, accused his predecessor of being concerned with nothing but the Election. He said, and I quote:

'It is just plain and simple, plain and cynical election: election, election – using taxpayers' money to buy taxpayers' votes.'

He made that charge just three years ago from these Opposition benches and yet the last two and a half years their whole term of office have been characterised by a spending bonanza, Mr Speaker. (A Member: Hear, hear.) Buying votes from the off, 'y eso que no habia dinero', there was no money.

2100 I suppose it is a case of easy come, easy go, Mr Speaker, because everybody knows that the reality is that this Government inherited a community with solid public finances and an economy growing steadily in difficult global conditions, so of course he embarked on his spending spree, exhibiting all of the hallmarks of the original GSLP administration with a vision for re-election and nothing else.

2105 The Hon. the father of the House must be beside himself with anger at the loss of control over the public finances. (Interjection) It pains me to say it, Mr Speaker, but I will. At least in this respect Gibraltar might have been in safer hands had he been able to hang on to the purse strings. (Interjection) It is almost as if the fox has been put in charge of the hen house.

2110 On another note, you will recall that, in my address to this House last year, Mr Speaker, I took the opportunity of raising a number of issues in respect of which I then offered this party's view of how they should and could be dealt with. I was, last year, the only Member – and it seems this year so far – to be interrupted in this House on a number of occasions – which interruptions, Mr Speaker, with respect, you rightfully declared inappropriate, given the Opposition's decorum during interventions by all other Ministers last year and generally in this House.

2115 Just today, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has now announced the Proceeds of Crime Act that they will be seeking to pass during this financial year, which is a source of satisfaction for me, particularly in light of the reaction that a suggestion of such legislation received last year. In fact it was one of the causes of the interruptions, I seem to recall.

2120 The Chief Minister then took it upon himself to launch into a personal attack on me for having had the temerity to suggest that not everything about Gibraltar under GSLP liberal rule is as perfect as they would like for us to believe it is. He prefaced his attack by saying how he had still retained some affection for me, Mr Speaker. It is probably for the better that he had because I cannot imagine, or rather I shudder to think, how much more he might have embarrassed himself if he had not.

He makes a point of misinterpreting my light-hearted approach to all but the most serious issues that we deal with here, as a lack of seriousness or respect for the whole of this place.

2125 It was somewhat surprising, if I am honest, Mr Speaker, to observe how personally he had taken what I had carefully constructed to be as balanced and positive an intervention as I could muster, without being accused of laying the groundwork for crossing the floor.

His reply last year was in stark contrast with when the Hon. the Chief Minister was sat on this side of the House and yearned for things to be done differently. He would say things like, and I quote:

‘Would that we could do that, [Mr Speaker, in relation to the]... debate on the state of the nation, without having to watch the Leader of the House in his reply perform the spectacle of hurling insults to those of us assembled on these benches (A Member: Hear, hear.) and not answering the substance of any of the points raised.’

2130

Funny then, Mr Speaker, how just last week on Wednesday afternoon – and I am trying to be sombre just so that he gets that I am actually being serious about it and that I am not being light-hearted – (Interjection) a week ago, in relation to supplementaries being asked in respect of, I think, the first question of the day, the Chief Minister said from a sedentary position, ‘deja que los coja,’ – ‘wait ‘til I get them’, Mr Speaker, in English.

2135

In this morning’s session he said ‘me voy a hartar con ellos’, from a sedentary position – ‘I am going to have my fill with them,’ from a sedentary position. (Laughter) I cannot think of a better translation, if I am honest, Mr Speaker. It is rather a charitable one I think, frankly. But I mean really, what is that all about? (Interjection) A threat, of what exactly? A tongue lashing. I mean who does he think he is?

2140

I mean he is a man, Mr Speaker; no more. One who happens to lead this community, and proudly so he should, of 30,000 by virtue of which position he owes everyone in this Chamber and the rest of the community at large the duty of directing the community’s affairs for the benefit of everyone in it.

But to hear him utter those words last week, Mr Speaker, as if they might strike fear in our hearts and dissuade us from our line of questioning, it was a sad indictment of what I fear he appears to have become – relishing the opportunity he would soon have to show everyone who is boss.

The thing is, Mr Speaker, that his reply last year, his general demeanour and approach to business conducted here, exemplified by his throw away comments last week, only confirm that in his brief term of office so far, the Chief Minister appears to have been consumed by the office which he holds, acting like he has been in that chair for most of his professional life and not, as is the case, a few short years.

The Chief Minister has readily on a number of occasions sought to justify his venom in this House by saying that his predecessor sought to ruin him and that the Hon. and Learned Sir Peter Caruana had charged him with being unfit to be Chief Minister.

Well, Mr Speaker, that was in response to precisely the same charge he levelled at the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana himself, quoting De Gaulle and saying that he had all the spite but none of the statesmanship. Mr Speaker, I wonder whether he considers his reply in the Budget debate last year was statesmanlike.

In reply to the hon. Member’s charge, the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana explained that, both by a combination of the ignorance he displays and the deceit to which he sees fit to resort, he is unfit to be Chief Minister of Gibraltar.

If I have learnt one thing in the short time that I have had the honour of serving this community in this House, in particular during the hon. Member’s reply in the Budget debate last year is that separating personal from political is something that the Chief Minister is either unable or unwilling to do. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk)

2165

What is more, Mr Speaker, I have learnt that the Hon. and Learned Sir Peter Caruana’s judgement of the current incumbent of No 6 Convent Place may have been, but by reason of his venom and unflinching determination to eliminate anyone who may speak out against his politics, (A Member: Exactly) and frankly, to my disappointment, entirely spot on. (Interjection)

If last year’s reply by the Hon. the Chief Minister was personal, Mr Speaker, this year I expect nothing less from the hon. Member. I would have thought that he would want to denigrate insult and attempt to humiliate us even more.

2170

Judging by the reaction to last year’s diatribe, he should feel free to go ahead and do his worst. Each insult and every poisonous remark helps us to show the rest of the electorate the serious problem that afflicts our community at the heart of our Government: (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

2175

The Chief Minister, Mr Speaker, might recognise some of those last few words (Interjection) He himself wrote and delivered the same words as part of his address in this House in 2011, on the eve of the last election. How fortuitous then that already we can use the hon. Member’s own words against him. That, Mr Speaker, appears to be the measure of the man.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that might be a convenient moment, I think, to recess for a few minutes, but if I can just give the House an indication, it is my intention to sit late tonight because tomorrow there are a number of other engagements in the evening and the House will not be able to get through much business. It is my intention to stay tonight until about 8.30 p.m. or 9 p.m.

I am told that there are refreshments and biscuits inside, y deja que los coja, me voy a hartar con ellos! (Laughter) and I think, with that, the hon. Gentleman and I can enjoy doing something together.

Mr Speaker: I think we should now recess until 6.20 p.m.

The House recessed at 3.55 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 6.20 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
For Second Reading –

2190 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Joseph Bossano.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I am happy to report to Parliament that the number of Gibraltarians in full-time employment went up again in 2013 to reach a new record high of 9,225, the highest figure since employment surveys started.

2195 (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

In October last year the Employment Survey showed 681 more Gibraltarians in full-time employment than in October 2011, and I anticipate that there will be a further increase in the current year.

To put this figure in context, I will remind the House of the performance of the Members opposite, who are so proud of their 15 years and so critical of our two years in this field. In the 15 years between October 1996 and October 2011, the Employment Survey Report records an increase in the number of Gibraltarians in full-time employment of 4.1%. In two years, from October 2011 to October 2013, the increase has almost doubled their 15-year performance, coming in at 8%. As I have said, I am confident that the survey for 2014 will produce a new record high.

2200 The GSD has always compared their performance with that of the GSLP when in Government, provided it suited them to do so, of course. Well for the record, the increase in Gibraltarians in full-time employment between October 1988 and October 1996 was also better than the 15 years of the GSD: 5% in eight years compared to 4.1 % in 15.

We beat their performance before, Mr Speaker, and we are doing it again. And there is a very simple reason for this. This aspect of our manifesto has always had a very high priority for us. What is the point of a growing economy and a growing labour market, if the jobs are going to outsiders rather than our own people?

2210 The GSD way was to deny what was happening, and to welcome the dependence on imported labour – at least it was like that until 2011. In 2011, Mr Montiel explained that the Government was now distributing construction works to building contractors participating in the scheme. These approved contractors, we were told, were getting work on condition that they co-operated with the Employment Service in securing jobs for its unemployed, and that this had ensured that jobs were available to those persons on the long-term unemployment lists who were willing to work in this particular important industry – his words.

2215 Mr Montiel was telling the truth when he told Parliament that the conditions attached to get into Government contracts were as follows:

2220 (1) All labour had to be duly registered prior to commencing work and throughout on terms no less favourable in any respect than CATA terms, and the use of Detached Workers was not permitted.

(2) Participants would be required to employ a certain number of workers specifically identified to them by the Employment Service from their client base. Such specifically identified workers could not be dismissed during the currency of the construction contract without the Government's approval. In the case of construction and labour contract companies, such persons – and indeed all other labour – had to be engaged on terms that were at least as favourable to the employee as CATA terms on every issue covered by CATA terms.

In the case of companies that participate in the Scheme, other than construction companies, pay had to be at least in accordance with the statutory minimum wage, and all other terms as per law.

2230 (3) The use of 'labour hire' companies would not be allowed, except with Government consent in its absolute discretion. Without prejudice to such absolute discretion, the Government will not consent to the use of any labour contractor that is not registered to participate in the Scheme.

Without prejudice to this absolute discretion, and subject to the aforesaid, the apportionment by value that the Government contractor had to carry out with its own labour, the Government would permit the use of the labour contractors that are registered under the Scheme, but the Government contractor would remain fully liable and responsible for their performance and compliance.

2235 (4) Any contractor or subcontractor who is found with any employee in breach of the law, unregistered for tax or social insurance, or in breach of the terms of the Scheme would be removed from the Scheme, and any outstanding contract terminated.

2240 (5) Any contractor, whose subcontractor or any other subcontractor or labour contractor, who is found on the construction project with any employee in breach of the law, unregistered for tax or social insurance or in breach of the terms of this Scheme would be removed from the Scheme and excluded from the contract.

2245 The onus thus on the Government contractor was to ensure that all the labour engaged in the project, whether employed directly by them or the subcontractor, or a labour contractor or anybody else, fully complied with the aforementioned conditions.

These conditions continue to be the same today – they still apply.

It is difficult to envisage a more comprehensive and watertight set of rules. It gives almost total control over the hiring and the firing of workers by private companies, on all Government contracts.

2250 There are two points I wish to make in relation to this, Mr Speaker. Firstly, although the conditions announced on paper were very tough, the theory and the practice were two different things. This is what is known as the GSD way of doing things: announcing just before the Election that you are going to take very tough action to give priority in the construction sector and elsewhere to the local unemployed, and then doing little or nothing about it.

2255 As far as I can tell from what we found from the records in December 2011, the net effect of this was that there were four approved construction companies with Government building contracts amounting to several million pounds who had taken on between them six unemployed persons – and given them work as labourers. It did not seem much of a result for such a tough policy.

2260 At the time, in 2012, I was prepared to give the previous Government the benefit of the doubt. After all, I had welcomed the initiative from the Opposition benches when it was announced as evidence that finally the Government was accepting my arguments of 15 years, that action had to be taken to increase Gibraltarian participation in the construction industry, which participation had been falling since 1996.

2265 So perhaps only six unemployed Gibraltarians were taken on as labourers because the unemployed could not be persuaded to work in this industry since at that time the GSD was theoretically forcing employers to take on labour whether they wanted or not, and Mr Montiel was telling Parliament the following:

2270 ‘Many areas of employment in the private sector are not attractive enough to the local unemployed. As I have stated in the past few, if any, are clamouring to replace foreign labour in the private construction market, catering, hotels, shops, bars or restaurants. Indeed, many of the long-term unemployed, offered the opportunity of a job under the construction or other supported schemes, have either rejected employment or simply been unable to sustain work on permanent employment’.

2275 As we now know, it is possible to provide employment for Gibraltarians in these areas, not least because if it were impossible, as the previous Government claimed, in effect almost the whole of the private sector would have to be operated on imported labour.

Mr Montiel, as well as having such views on the employability of Gibraltarians in the local market, had an expectation that returning graduates would find jobs by themselves. He told the House:

2280 ‘the reality is that of the vast majority of graduates, those who do not immediately find employment do not register as unemployed because they seek specific professional jobs. Other graduates that register for employment constitute a very limited number: currently there is only a handful of returning graduates registered unemployed.’

2285 Mr Caruana as Chief Minister in 2011 was even more specific than Mr Montiel. He said there were only six graduates seeking employment and that what the Opposition was trying to do was to patronise them with unnecessary offers of employment in manufactured non-existent jobs when the economy was entirely able to absorb them into real jobs.

2290 Well, we now know that none of this was true, Mr Speaker. As I have told Parliament in the past, we assumed that Parliament was being told the truth in 2011, and did not expect to find as many unemployed graduates as we did in 2012. If the Chief Minister of the day is saying there are only six, one can assume that maybe there are 12 – but what you do not expect to find is 60.

In fact, we have finished up taking on over 160 – 160 in the 27 months the Graduate Scheme has been in operation. All of them were unemployed when they were taken on – all 160. A hundred have now completed a period in the company and of these, 91 are currently in other employment and nine have left Gibraltar.

2295 What we found in December in the local workforce is the parallel of what we found in respect of graduates. There was a backlog of unemployed Gibraltarians, who had given up hope of finding employment. The very opposite of what the GSD was claiming in Parliament, namely that we had exhausted the supply of Gibraltarian employees and should be encouraging an increase in the number of frontier workers.

2300 So, at the same time as they were saying that there were no unemployed graduates, they were saying that there was no unemployment in terms of other persons interested in the available jobs and trying to justify this false statement by incorrectly quoting a number of statistics.

2305 The Parliament was told in 2011 that there had never been more jobs created for Gibraltarians than in the 15 years of the GSD. This in itself was a novelty in 15 years, because for the previous 14 years the hon. Backbencher regularly lambasted me for putting our people first, saying it was the worst type of jingoistic xenophobia – one of the very nice things he used to say to me when he was Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): You must be missing them!

2310 Hon. J J Bossano: I do miss them! (Laughter) He can always call me jingoistic again today from the backbench.

But he claimed that there were in 2010, 1,316 Gibraltarians in jobs that had not been there in 1996.

So in 2011 when he said this was exceptional it was the year of his conversion to my jingoistic preference in wanting priority in employment for Gibraltarians.

2315 The number that he gave us was not true then; however, it became true in October 2012 when the increase between 1996 and 2012 reached the figure of 1,341. The 1,341 was made up of 861 Gibraltarians in full-time employment, and 480 in part-time employment, compared to 1996.

Since then, the 1996 numbers of jobs has increased even more to reach a figure of 1,467. I can well imagine the song and dance the GSD would have been making of this figure if they had achieved it.

2320 They arrived at the figure that they quoted in the 2011 Budget, Mr Speaker, by comparing the October 2010 total, which was the figure available in that year, from the previous year's survey, which was made up of full-time and part-timers with the equivalent figure in October 1996 of 9,390.

2325 But of course, as the Survey Reports make clear, these are the numbers of jobs not the number of people in jobs. So we need to distinguish between full-time jobs and part-time jobs. The 1,316 figure quoted in the Budget of the GSD by the then Chief Minister, then turns into an increase in number of Gibraltarians in full-time employment of 260 in the period, from 8,207 in 1996 to 8,467 in 2010, 260 full time, an average increase of less than 19 a year in a 14 year period – not much of a record to boast of, Mr Speaker.

2330 Part-time employment in the same period showed an increase from 1,183 to 2,239, namely 1,056. However most of the so-called 'part-time jobs' were not jobs at all: this was when the policy decision was taken that Community Officers should not be limited to unemployed males over 60, but be offered to any 60 year old male still in employment provided their income from their full-time job did not exceed £20,000. When this policy was introduced in 2009 it was immediately reflected in an increase of 196 more Gibraltarian in part-time jobs, and by 2010, as I told Parliament in 2011, the figure had reached 700. So in reality the additional number of jobs in part-time employment went up between 1996 and 2010 by 356, excluding the 700, an average of 25 part-timers per year.

2335 So their 14-year record was an average of 90 in full-time and 25 in part-time.

2340 The Surveys no longer include the 700 Community Officers as part of the employment market or part of the private sector, and therefore the figures that we are looking at in this year's and last year's Reports exclude Community Officers and provide a better and a more accurate picture of the increase of Gibraltarians in employment.

Central to the philosophy of the GSLP has always been the relationship between employment and economic growth.

2345 The party has always been committed to a high level of economic growth and as a consequence providing high levels of employment, given that the earnings from employment are an important contributor to the size of the GDP.

2350 Throughout our days in Opposition, the reaction of Mr Caruana was to belittle my contributions to the budget debates, expressed most explicitly in 2009, when he made clear that my absence for the first time since 1972 from this Parliament in the debate on public spending was not something the GSD lamented, since as far as they were concerned my contributions were not something that they missed. For them, everything I had to say was worthless.

For Mr Caruana I was an economic illiterate, not even an economist. In spite of spending longer than anyone else studying our nation's finances and participating in the debates, it seems I had learned nothing.

2355 In the 2007 General Election when we were debating the prospective economic situation I predicted that the GDP in that year would come in at around £800 million, and that it would grow to £1.2 billion by 2011 – figures which were included in our 2007 manifesto.

The GSD way was reflected in their leader's reaction sitting next to me in GBC, next door, on the eve of polling day. His reaction was to ridicule my figures as sheer fantasy. Eventually two years later, or so, the 2007 GDP was published – and the figure was £804 million. Now, seven years later we have the final figure for 2011 and the result is £1.16 billion: £31 million less than what I had claimed was possible in 2007.

2360 (Banging on desks). (A Member: Hear, hear.) Not bad for an economic illiterate! (Interjections) Back of an envelope!

The rate of growth under the GSD between 2007 and 2011 has been 45.4% – impressive, 45.4% – and not the 50% I claimed in our manifesto.

2365 In 2011, the GDP estimates made by us whilst in Opposition was that the economy would come in at £1.1 billion and the result that we now have is, as I have said, £1.169 billion.

We are committed to achieving a 50% growth in 4 years and the published target figure is £1.65 billion, which as the Chief Minister said in his opening statement yesterday, is likely to be exceeded.

2370 This has been rubbished before, during and after the General Election. Such was the level of ignorance in such matters shown by the hon. Backbencher when he was Chief Minister, and in charge of our economy, that he kept on arguing that it was impossible to achieve annual growth of 10%, even when it was actually happening under his very nose. In 2011, it grew by 10.9%.

The growth achieved in the election year, was 10.9%, higher indeed, than we had suggested, but totally expected given the publicly funded public works programme and the housing construction programme in the run up to the election, that we are fuelling this growth.

2375 When I used to challenge the figures that the Hon. Mr Caruana used to quote and suggest that he might be wrong, he used to get very upset with me, Mr Speaker.

The idea that he could be wrong in anything he said or did was anathema to the hon. Member.

2380 The growth in the economy was happening not by design but as an inevitable consequence of borrowing and spending on capital projects, and it was highly dependent on the activity of the construction sector as I will demonstrate later on. And it is not exactly as it is happening now, as I will demonstrate later on. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Interjection)

2385 This was not the first time we had capital investment-led economic growth. The first time was between 1988 and 1992 under the GSLP, but in that period it was not financed by public debt increases and public works spending. It was much healthier, because it was the result of the largest foreign direct investment in Gibraltar's history creating infrastructure in land, buildings, housing and telecommunications which made possible the post 1992 restructure of our economy away from MOD dependence.

2390 Of course, when this was being done by investors from outside bringing in their money, the GSD way was to denigrate the result and call it an optical illusion. When it was done by them, by borrowing and spending our money in many areas where there was little or no return, simply to create a feel-good factor in advance of an election, it was an economic miracle.

The growth in the economy in 2007 to 2011 was, as I have said, more dependent on construction work than that of previous years. This is reflected in the share of the labour market taken by the construction sector which was as high as 15.4% in 2011 compared to 11.4% before 2007.

2395 In the last two years, construction has accounted only for 9.3% of the labour force, although it is likely to be higher in the current year. However, the average over four years will still be eventually less than in the period 2007 to 2011 – if I get my figures right again...

2400 As I pointed out last year when the Opposition generally – and GBC particularly – was making a big issue of the reduction in the number of jobs shown in the October 2012 survey, the reduction was not because we had an economic crisis as some would have it, but because the pre-election 'building boom' was over. The job losses were the inevitable result of the completion of a flurry of construction projects.

In 2014, we can expect a substantial increase in the construction labour force which will then be reduced after the current housing estates are completed.

2405 So if we look at our economy and how it is growing by reference to where the economic activity is reflected in job creation, we see the construction activity taking up a smaller share in 2012 and 2013 than it did in 2011, and the labour market growing outside the construction sector.

2410 Reflecting construction growth industry, in the non-construction sectors produced jobs of 18,813 in 2011, 19,511 in 2012, and 20,774 in 2013. So if we ignore construction – which can fluctuate depending on the volume of work that is going on – and we look at the rest of the economy, what we see is employment in the two years between 2011 and 2013 growing by 1,961 jobs, non-construction – 10.4% increase. Non-construction jobs in two years.

The employers providing these jobs increased in the same period by 158 and, of course, there was also organic growth from existing businesses.

By contrast between 2010 and 2011 the jobs created outside construction were 560 – just 3%.

2415 If we compare growth in the non-construction sector of the economy over 2 years – 2009 to 2011, so we have got two periods of 24 months – the growth is 5.1% in the two years of the GSD, or less than half what has been achieved between 2011 and 2013.

Excluding construction jobs, in fact the increase in the rest of the economy of 1,961 jobs is higher in the two years 2011 to 2013, than in the four years of the GSD from 2007 to 2011, when the non-construction sector went up by a total of 1,603.

2420 So, Mr Speaker, the remark from the sedentary position, as Mr... Selwyn likes to say, that we were doing the same thing is manifestly wrong! (Laughter)

The importance of this comparison is that it is indicative not just of higher growth but of more stable wider spread industrial coverage.

The other side of the coin in job creation is the level of unemployment.

2425 In January 2012, when we took over, the number of persons registered unemployed was higher than in the same month in the previous year. Throughout 2012, registered unemployment was higher than in 2011, and this continued to be so until mid-2013. It is only since the third quarter of 2013 that it has fallen below the level of 2011.

2430 This is as we expected and predicted during the election campaign, given that the numbers registered as unemployed did not reflect the real number of jobless. This was admitted by the Members opposite during the election, when they said it would cost £11 million a year to pay £1,000 a month to all jobseekers unemployed, implying that the numbers affected were in the 1,000 range, rather than the 450 range, the published figure.

2435 The fact that they knew this to be the case in 2011 did not stop them from claiming in 2012 that I had created the unemployment when I took office.

I put it to you, Mr Speaker, if Members opposite behave like this, is it that they do not realise that what they are saying cannot possibly be true? Is it that they are so incapable of understanding simple arithmetic in opposition, that they can no longer make the same calculation that they used to make in Government?

2440 The workforce, we used to be told, is made up of those in employment and those registered as seeking employment. So if one goes up, the other one must go down. If there is a relatively stable number of Gibraltarians available for work, then more unemployment in 2012 should have been reflected in less Gibraltarians employed – but Members know that the opposite is true.

In 2012, the number of registered unemployed Gibraltarians was higher, and the number of Gibraltarians with jobs was also higher. So how can this be possible?

2445 I remind the House of the argument used by the hon. Backbencher, when he was Chief Minister to prove it was impossible. He told us that we must understand that in a population that is not increasing in numbers as far as Gibraltarians are concerned, and which is getting older so that more and more of those numbers fall into retirement, it was hardly surprising that the number of Gibraltarians going into work cannot rise.

2450 In other words, since the total available number of Gibraltarians does not rise, the numbers entering work cannot rise, or can only rise very slowly. Mr Caruana informed us, it was impossible for him to increase the number of Gibraltarians in employment because in effect, he was telling us they simply did not exist.

He said:

‘I know they expect me to solve everything in this community, but this is something I cannot do anything about.’

2455 Those were his words, and he explained why it could not be done. He said it would require real mirages to produce more Gibraltarians of working age than the mothers and fathers have chosen to create through the normal procreation process – which we all understand what that is!

2460 Well, Mr Speaker, in 2012, the number of Gibraltarians of working age with full-time jobs increased, and the number of Gibraltarians registered as unemployed also increased – both increased. Unemployment did not go up because people who were working under the GSD lost their jobs in 2012, as the GSD propaganda machinery immediately started claiming at the beginning of the year. By their version, it seems as if in 2012 I had achieved what the former Chief Minister admitted was impossible for him to achieve.

Given that he has never, ever admitted to being wrong or mistaken about anything in the 15 years he was in Government, it gives me great pleasure to explain how, finally, I have done something which he said he was not able to do.

2465 Let me hasten to add that it is not the case that I was able, over Christmas 2011, to breach the normal procreation cycle, as he put it, and produce more newly-born Gibraltarians of working age in January, in excess – (Interjection and laughter) that is normal now, Mr Speaker (Interjection) – in excess of those that were already there in December.

2470 They were there then; and they were already throughout 2011, and it was hidden unemployment. They were there between 2007 and 2011 when the number of jobs in the economy was going up and the number of Gibraltarians with full-time jobs was coming down. They were there between 2010 and 2011 when Mr Caruana discovered that the cleaners in his office were frontier workers and introduced a requirement that all the cleaning contractors should employ locals, who clearly already had to exist unemployed in order to be given the job; and also, when the construction companies were told that if they wanted government contracts they had to employ Gibraltarians who were already unemployed. Or is it that all these new workers were suddenly going to come in existence out of nowhere in breach of the normal procreation process?

So if I did not create a new generation of Gibraltarians of working age on 9th December 2011, how did I manage to do what Mr Caruana said he could not?

2480 Simple, Mr Speaker: I will now explain how many Gibraltarians of working age there were in 2012, who presumably were not in existence in 2011, according to the then Chief Minister; and I will tell the House how I arrive at my estimate of the numbers involved.

2485 As I have previously told the House, the practice before 2012 was to run vocational training schemes, the so-called VTS, from Bleak House and to have a quota of persons on the VTS work experience placements for up to 12 months. The opportunity to join was based on being on a waiting list until someone else finished and vacated the place. However, the numbers involved were allowed to go up in the second half of 2011 in the pre-election period resulting, at one point, in up to around 400 VTS placements. Even then there were still some 70 persons waiting to join in 2012. Those on these waiting lists were deemed not to be seeking employment and did not register as unemployed.

2490 We included them in the unemployment list and we offered them a placement in the Employment & Training Company after February 2012.

2495 The VTS Scheme paid those on it between £265 and £450 a month depending on age. We started the training programmes with a salary of over £900 a month, between two and three times the salary that was previously being paid, making it much more attractive and therefore encouraging more people to come forward.

Thirdly, there was a political commitment to encourage Gibraltarians to seek employment and we had an influx of long-term unemployed who had previously given up hope of finding work, which increased the numbers registering from lapsed, in the first nine months of 2012.

2500 In other words, the combined effect of our initiatives did not increase the numbers without a job, but the numbers available for work and registered that previously were unrecorded. Let me show some evidence of this.

2505 The House knows that I believe it is more accurate to monitor the labour market by reference to the numbers in full-time employment than by looking at the total number of jobs including part-time jobs. This was something that I consistently argued from the Opposition. The number of part-time jobs is misleading as an indicator.

2510 I have given the example of how community officers positions were extended from the previous practice of being available only to persons registered as unemployed, and moved to being offered to those already in employment, with wages below £20,000 – half of the private sector workforce is in this bracket. It enabled the GSD Government to claim that more Gibraltarians than ever now had jobs. If anything, what was happening was that more Gibraltarians than ever now had two jobs assuming the part-time role was accepted as employment which in fact it was not.

When the GSD was arguing that the number of Gibraltarians with jobs was going up but could go up no higher because we had run out of people, the numbers in full time employment was actually going down from 2007 to 2011.

2515 In October 2011, the position was that the workforce, made up of persons registered as unemployed and persons in full-time employment was 8,907. The position a year later, calculated on the same basis, shows that the workforce had grown by 600 persons to 9,588.

2520 This position in 2012, clearly demonstrates that Gibraltarians available for work, was being understated by about 500, because as I have pointed out, and as was previously argued by the GSD Government, the workforce is made up of all the people unemployed and all the people employed. So, when there are 600 more people employed and unemployed than there were the year before, it must follow that there were 500 people unrecorded and 100 recorded.

2525 If, in fact instead of using the full-time figure, we use the part-time figure, that the GSD prefer, we get a smaller increase between the two years, but not much difference. The comparable figure now goes up from a total workforce of 10,650 to 11,250, and on this basis the increase is just under 600 between 2011 and 2012.

2530 In 2013, unemployment started coming down as employment increased, showing that the unregistered supply of labour from 2011 was now considerably reduced. The total workforce still went up but now the increase was about 100 compared to the 600 or so between 2011 and 2012. This is what indicates that the 2012 increase was inflated because it included 500 persons already there from 2011 but previously not recorded.

2535 So the indications are that what we would expect in terms of normal, average year to year growth of the workforce is not zero as was argued before, but 100. And if you get in one year suddenly 600 more people available, which is made up of those working and those unemployed, then the 600 cannot all have been produced out of thin air in one year.

Lack of training in construction skills has been an element in the shrinking share of construction jobs held by Gibraltarians between 1996 and 2011. Although there is a cyclical element to the demand for construction skills and therefore some of that demand has to be met from outside at peak levels, the core level of work should eventually be made up fully by local labour. Historical data suggests that this core workload requires around 1500 construction workers predominant on maintenance work.

The lack of Gibraltarian labour was established by the studies carried out by us in 2012 and later that year we set up a separate construction training company dedicated to providing the supply of local workers that the industry required. We set out to ensure that we could fill vacancies from the local unemployed and give effect to the policy put in place for Government approved contractors by the previous administration.

We need to start by looking at what was already there in terms of training.

The Construction Training Centre was built with the use of EU funding and took its first trainees in 1996. From 1996 to 2011 a total of 245 trainees were involved, for example in the wet trades, where the greatest skills deficit existed then and now – now worse. Thirty six out of the 245, in the whole of the 15 years, completed Level 1; 42 completed Level 2; and 6 completed Level 3. Six in 16 years.

As we were frequently told by the previous Government, the Level 2 is considered sufficient to obtain employment and be paid the craft rate in the industry – but it is well known that employers frequently argue that the trainees are not skilled enough to be able to work alone after completion of Level 2.

The output of 48 at Craft Level or higher – that is 42 with Level 2 and the six with Level 3 – 48 in 16 years equates to an output average of 3 a year. It is hardly surprising therefore that we discovered a chronic shortage in this area when we did our skills audit and found that only 7% of the wet trades in the private sector was provided by Gibraltarians and 93% were non-Gibraltarian.

Since our training is demand driven, it was obvious that this was the area to encourage people to take up training in. We also found that employers favoured City & Guilds as the awarding body and wanted masons, that is, people who could undertake all four skills: brickwork, rendering, plastering and tiling, rather than just one.

A third element in the strategy adopted to improve results was to place trainees in the industry before starting in the Training Centre so that it would hopefully result in higher numbers completing the course. This idea was like that which has been done in teacher training for years where potential candidates are introduced into the school environment before they start teacher training so that they can understand what is involved in the job.

Increasing the pay for trainees to the level of minimum wage – over three times the level at which it was being paid to a 16 year old under the previous scheme – also made the training more attractive. Of course the members opposite have criticised this just like they criticise everything that has been done so far to improve skills and increase employment for Gibraltarians.

Well I am happy to report, Mr Speaker, that in the first year 73 trainees took Level 1 City & Guilds in the wet trades, and 60 were successful in obtaining their Level 1 in one module, 53 in two modules, 50 in three modules, and 47 were successful in all four modules. Those completing all the Level 1 modules will be going on this year to obtain Level 2 and then will be able to enter employment on the craft rate. Those who were not successful in one, two or three of the modules will have the opportunity to do again the missing modules.

All trainees are currently in employment in the construction industry.

Clearly, this is only the start of a wide-ranging training programme which will progressively address the skills shortages we have identified which are not limited to the areas that I have just drawn attention to. It involves other construction trades and other industry areas.

I have said the construction industry has had a declining number of jobs held by Gibraltarians throughout the years since 1996. The table for all employees in the Employment Survey for that year, 1996, showed that in the private sector 541 of the jobs in construction were held by Gibraltarians – in 1996. By 2010 the Employment Survey available in the Budget of 2011, when the GSD finally admitted they had to do something and announce the requirement for Government contractors to take on and give employment to Gibraltarians, the figure had dropped to 479.

In the year to October 2011, in the run-up to the Election, when the huge construction boom was taking place, the Gibraltarians in the construction dropped even further to an all-time record low of 423 – October 2011. Clear evidence that their tough line with the construction companies announced in the Budget was a paper tiger, Mr Speaker. Little wonder they now attack us for carrying out what they promised to do but never intended to see through, because it was just a vote catching pre-election gimmick.

By October 2012 in our first 10 months we started recovering the lost ground. Gibraltarian jobs went up to 452 a 6.8% increase in 10 months. In this year's Employment survey report for October 2013 Members will see a further increase to 486, 14.9% higher than the level at which it was left by the GSD in 2011, and also higher than the level at which it was in 2010. Clearly we still have some way to go to get back to the 1996 where the level was 541 but I am confident that the 2014 Survey in October this year will show a further increase getting us closer to the target, and clearly shows that it is possible for Gibraltarians to get jobs and hold them in the private sector in the construction industry.

Important as this area is for the reasons explained above, it is not the only training taking place.

2600 Mr Speaker, Mr Bossino last month issued a statement which claims that there was a lack of good quality, or indeed of any training. (A Member: Shame!) The best is still to come! (Laughter)

This is a matter of judgment and obviously Mr Bossino is here reflecting (Laughter) the GSD way. The construction training, as I have spelt out, is providing training and jobs on a scale that never existed before, and which they previously said was not possible – not that they did not want to do it – because Gibraltarians did not want to work in this industry. That was their excuse.

2605 The skills deficit that he claims exists did not come about in the last two years: it has been the result of the previous 15 years and the facts are there to prove it, I have just given them to him. But I do not expect him to admit it.

2610 What is, however, totally unacceptable is that he should accuse me of something which is not true and he has made up. He said then that he had been sharply critical of the abandonment of partnership agreements which the GSD had negotiated when in Government with some of the major companies in the private sector.

Not true, Mr Speaker.

2615 Not true that he had been sharply critical of this, prior to last month, when he said it in May. To my knowledge he has never made any mention of this before, so he has not been critical of it, sharply or otherwise.

Not true that I have abandoned any such agreement because I have no knowledge of any such agreement having been in existence on 9th December 2011. I have not seen any list of any major companies in the private sector that have entered into any such agreements. I have not been provided with lists of trainees in any such major private sector companies out of the 400 who were in training in November 2011.

2620 The only training I am aware of, outside construction and the engineering in Gibdock, was provided by Gibtelecom who was 50% state owned. This training has continued for those already there. Initially the position was that the company felt it was not able to offer employment to those completing training, but subsequently it has agreed to offer contracts for a fixed period of time. The requirement for skills specific to telecommunications will be kept under review in the light of the expansion that may be possible for this industry from now on. Like all training it will be linked to known job opportunities.

The old VTS, which accounted for the bulk of the 400 or so trainees in 2011, was a work-based scheme. Training included a 12 month work placement with a local company to gain hands-on experience and training in real job situations. Typical placements included messenger work, manual work, retail sales, hotel and catering in the private sector, and office work in the public sector.

2630 In 2011 there were a number of individuals in the public sector who had already spent many years on VTS gaining experience, but had to compete with better qualified competition for jobs when vacancies were advertised. A number of these individuals are still in this position. Most of the others were in areas of the private sector where Mr Montiel had said that few, if any, were likely to want to work. I do not know why he was training them!

2635 The VTS was totally discredited, in our view, because employers treated employees as ‘parked’ with them, in many instances when they had no real need for them. In other cases, because employers were using them as free labour and recycling them with replacements every year.

2640 Although we had reports of this in Opposition we never came to the conclusion which Mr Bossino has now come, namely that the employers in question did not have their names published by the then Government, because they were GSD cronies subsidised by the GSD by being supplied with free labour. (Banging on desks)

I do not believe they were. (Laughter)

2645 Mr Montiel has admitted that there was abuse of the system by the private sector, in this Parliament – he admitted it here. However his defence was that it did not exist under the GSLP before 1996, it was because there was no VTS training in place. According to the GSD only 28 of this work experience trainees found employment at the end of the year. Of course, there was no requirement to employ them, nor was there a known vacancy prior to the placement being agreed.

The Employment Training Company has replaced this and has achieved to date, a much higher rate, of the order of 60% in trainees obtaining employment after the training period.

2650 Therefore 28% was very high quality and our 60% are dead end jobs. So what are they proposing? That we go back to the old discredited system?

2655 In addition to such placements there has been structured training provided in the following areas outside construction: Hairdressing NVQ Level 1; Literacy, Numeracy and IT; bus driving training; Introduction to Elderly Care and Dementia; Level 1 Basic Construction skills; ASDAN; Customer Care; Health and Safety; First Aid Courses; Book Keeping OCR; training courses for the maritime sector; Level 1 Basic Carpentry at HM Prison; Police Cadets Scheme; meetings with the Insurance Institute to set up online exams; and the Merchant Navy Cadets, which are funded by the bunkering companies and not by my Department.

There is an important contribution to the training programmes that we ran for the unemployed which is derived from the European Social Fund (ESF), especially in areas of identified categories such as the long-2660 term unemployed. The person that has been co-ordinating this programme, Mrs Jenny Garcia, who was previously placed in Bleak House and previously to that in the Education Department has had long experience and expertise in coordinating with the UK, the allocation of European Social Funds for Gibraltar. As part of this work she has to ensure that the training we are giving qualifies with the EU funding criteria and qualifies as to content and the eligibility of beneficiaries.

2665 I hope the hon. Member opposite understands that the training programmes that are offered to the unemployed are put together by professionals who were there before 9th December 2011, and know what they are doing, and have got a lot of expertise. Therefore, if I have to rely on advice as to the quality of what is being provided I think I choose to be advised by the highly-respected professionals in my Department rather than the self-serving partisan views of the hon. Member opposite, if he will forgive me for saying so. (Banging on desks)

2670 The net movement of employers registered with the Employment Service is reflected in the numbers at the end of each month. This figure shows a regular increase on a year-to-year basis. In September 2011, the number of employers was 3,560 and increased to 3,972 a year later.

2675 There was another increase in the year to September 2013 when it reached 4,168 and a further increase to 4,321 by the end of March 2014.

This is supposed to be the net effect of new businesses coming in minus the removal of businesses no longer trading. However, I am not confident that this is the case and so we could be talking of in excess of 761 new business start-ups in the two and a half years from September 2011 to March 2014.

2680 My concern about the accuracy of the data is that it is quite possible, just as it is with employees, that records may still include businesses whose activities are no longer there, and have not been removed. Although I have been trying to get the system more up to date and accurate this has not yet been achieved to my satisfaction and I am hopeful that it will improve as we go along.

2685 An important source also of funding is the ERDF programme in which we have again obtained funding for business start-ups. The success in obtaining the allocation we have is entirely due to the efforts of the unit and in particular the accumulated expertise of the Director, Charlie Collinson, who is highly respected in UK and EU by his counterparts.

2690 The contribution that the unit makes in dealing with EU funding should not be underestimated. In the context of the level of capital and recurrent expenditure it may seem small beer, but it is quite unique. Most Government Departments spend money and a few collect taxes, but the EU programme unit brings inward investment. It facilitates and enhances the attractions of Gibraltar by topping up with EU funds private or public capital investments.

They are a small, self-contained unit. They get on with their job and they produce results. And I want to thank them for doing so well and requiring so little of my time to do it. (Banging on desks) The results they have obtained for Gibraltar – not me – are as follows.

2695 During the last financial year 14 EU co-funded projects were approved with a value of £5.3 million. The current EU co-funded programmes recently finished resulted in the following: 81 EU co-funded projects; 372 new jobs created; 39 jobs safeguarded; 41 new business start-ups; and £5,518,042 of private sector funds entering the economy as a direct result.

2700 The new programmes are currently under negotiation and envisaged to commence in September/October 2014.

Mr Speaker, progress with the Savings Bank continues and we hope in the current financial year to have in place, and in operation, the facility for the electronic use of accounts which will permit the Government to credit payments to accounts and for account holders to withdraw cash from ATMs. I would not wish to put a date on when exactly this will be in place because it is in the hands of the technical people whose brief it is to do it as soon as possible, subject to being confident that it will work as intended.

2705 As Members already know, the funding of the 100% commutation for Civil Service final salary pensions, on terms which I recently explained in detail in answer to a Question, is proceeding well with most people settling for commutation levels below 100%.

2710 I do not see why something that enables civil servants to benefit from more than 25% commutation if they so wish, should not be supported by Members opposite, especially when at the same time it helps to fund the returns to savers available from the Savings Bank. 100% commutation is now available for both public and private pension arrangements and it is only Members of this Parliament that are still subject to the old limitation of 25%.

2715 It will therefore be necessary to make provision for pensionable service in this House to be included in the new arrangements.

2720 The GSD Government, in fact, at one stage announced their intention to convert the Gibraltar Savings Bank into an annuity pension provider. They said they would be publishing details of the scheme within a few weeks on having made the announcement. This never materialised, but I recall the Hon. Mr Caruana telling us at one stage that it could become a very big business, bringing to the Savings Bank hundreds of millions of pounds – which presumably would not be considered public debt.

So the idea of expanding the role of the Bank in an area related to pensions, in principle, was acceptable to the GSD at one time before we came up with a similar idea.

2725 The GSD Government, in fact, at one stage announced their intention and we have now proceeded to do something similar in linking savings to the provision of the opposite of the annuity, which is in fact like a reverse annuity.

The forecast out-turn for the financial year 2013-14 was estimated at £50 million surplus and £45 million of this is to be transferred to the Social Assistance Fund to provide a grant to Community Care in order to increase the reserves of the charity. As the Chief Minister announced, we expect the figure in fact to be higher than £50 million.

2730 I need to remind the Members opposite again this year that they were responsible for deliberately running down the reserve of this charity in the 15 years they were in Government. This was defended on the basis that once the reserves run out, the work of the charity would be discontinued and the pensioners would receive an equivalent payment as a statutory entitlement from the statutory benefit fund which the GSD claimed would provide more protection for pensioners.

2735 Although at the time it was announced, I stated on behalf of the Opposition that we did not believe that what they were saying was possible, I confirmed we would support it if we were shown how it was going to be done. Since 2011 we have offered to proceed with the implementation of the GSD alternative if it is capable of providing the benefits to pensioners that they claim.

2740 I have found no trace of any such plan or legislation in preparation in my Department. This House was told by the then Chief Minister that there had been some slippage in the drafting of the necessary changes which would be implemented in 2012 after the General Election. If the House was being told the truth then I have to point out that the refusal to share with us the solution to what was described as a ticking time bomb is indefensible. If there is still a ticking time bomb time out there, then the responsibility for it rests entirely on their shoulders.

2745 Mr Speaker, I have taken note of the views expressed by the Leader of the Opposition which, as he said yesterday, happened when I was not in the House to hear them.

I hope he accepts that it was not that I was avoiding listening to him, and that I was away because I had not yet had time to put together my own contribution which I am now delivering.

2750 He does not risk my wrath by reminding me of the fact that he used to listen to me in the past and that he still subscribes – he tells me – to some of the policies I advocated; on the contrary I welcome it.

2755 I particularly welcome that he still believes in prudence in public spending and in looking after the interests of future generations by providing for a rainy day fund when we enjoy surpluses. That is certainly a major departure from GSD policy, whose former leader when he arrived in Government after 1996, ridiculed the concept and stated, ‘The rainy day is today’ – and started spending as if there was no tomorrow.

2760 What was a novelty in our days in the 1990s under the GSLP has now become a norm for many countries in the world and many have set up rainy day funds. I have to say that I am sorry that his deputy, who used to listen to my speeches in his youthful days, does not seem to have retained any of my ideas or think them as worthwhile any more. I hope he keeps him firmly in check and does not allow him to drag the GSD back to the spendthrift days of the hon. Backbencher. (Laughter)

In closing, Mr Speaker – (Interjections)

A Member: You certainly do need someone here, that’s for sure! I am not letting him go though!

2765 Hon. J J Bossano: There are a number of points I wish to make in relation to the areas of expenditure for which I am responsible.

2770 The number of posts shown in the Head 24 in the Employment Department shows a reduction of 24 AAs. This is for the reasons that I explained last year when the newly recruited AAs were initially charged to my Department pending their deployment during the course of the year. Of the 25 posts therefore only one has remained in the Employment Service, the others have been distributed to various Departments and are now charged to Personal Emoluments sub-heads wherever they have been placed.

2775 The two Government owned companies, Gibraltar General Support Services and Gibraltar Cleaning Services previously shown under Head 14 Environment are, in this financial year, included under Head 24 Employment and Labour. All three Heads of Expenditure, 23, 24 and 25 – Hon. Members opposite will be happy to hear – have kept within their approved budgets in 2013-14 and show little change in 2014-15.

2780 Mr Speaker, there is a final thought I want to share with Members opposite. I am proud of what I am doing to help people into employment, and proud of the fact that we are providing ever more training opportunities to increase the number of Gibraltarians in jobs in key areas of our economy. Proud that we have given help to some more mature, long-term unemployed to set up their own small business and earn a livelihood. I am grateful for the co-operation we are getting from many employers and proud of the commitment shown by trainees and the success rate we have obtained. Though I will not be satisfied for as long as there is somebody able and willing to work and still unemployed through no fault of his or her own.

2785 The work that I do, Mr Speaker, is sufficiently rewarding for me to be happy to devote seven days a week, 12 hours a day to the task. This kind of commitment is the GSLP way of doing things, abandoned by the Leader of the Opposition – partly, it seems – when he converted to the GSD way. Early in 2012, when he joined me on a television debate, he was still talking the GSLP way when he said he wanted what we were doing to succeed, and that he would be the first one to welcome it.

I am still waiting for this to happen.

2790 I can tell Members opposite that if they cared for our country and our people half as much as I do, they would be happy to see success. They would be happy to see our efforts succeeding and get as much satisfaction as I do. Every day with one single Gibraltarian less on the dole and one single Gibraltarian more in employment, irrespective of his or her political view, should be a source of satisfaction to all members on both sides of this House.

2795 Let me therefore share one final statistic with Members. Last Friday was one of my happiest days in Government since 9th December 2011. On Friday, three Gibraltarians registered as unemployed and 20 registered their terms of engagement as employees. This means more than a drop in unemployment. To me this is more than a statistic. This means there are 20 fellow citizens who will be taking home a pay packet at the end of this month and three whom I will have to do my best to find a job for.

2800 Even though it is abundantly clear that more is being done now than has ever been done before, the only thing the hon. Members opposite do is try and find fault. Well, I have to say to them that if they put partisan political interests before what is in the best interest of our people it does them no credit, and it does not say much for them, Mr Speaker, as sons and daughters of our nation. (Banging on desks)

2805 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, it is an honour and absolute privilege to present my first Budget address in what is our Government's third Budget since the General Election of December 2011 in relation to the areas that form part of my ministerial responsibilities – namely, Financial Services and Gaming.

2810 But before doing that, Mr Speaker, I hope you will allow me to say that it is an even bigger pleasure to be speaking after the Father of the House, a man who has again today demonstrated his total commitment to Gibraltar and its people, and has been doing so, Mr Speaker, for an incredibly long period of time. I was proud to have sat in this Parliament with him and indeed, Dr Joseph many years ago, and I am equally proud today to still listen and learn from everything he does.

2815 Mr Speaker, in effect, the Father of the House is the architect to the economic system that we have enjoyed ever since he first stood in Government in 1988. From entering with an MoD spending of over 70% in our economy, to leaving it with less than 10%, introducing home ownership to Gibraltar, introducing the Europort investment which many across the floor described in those days as a white elephant, to the introduction of community care, in all of these things today, Mr Speaker, we still enjoy the fruits of his labours, of his thinking and of his sheer care and dedication for Gibraltar, (A Member: Hear, hear.) and for that, Mr Speaker, I shall always be grateful. (Banging on desks)

2820 At the same time, Mr Speaker, I think it is only right to make an observation on a number of the things that have been said from Members opposite, if I may. The Leader of the Opposition who obviously will have agreed with everything I have said, because whilst all these things were happening he was on the same team, yesterday referred to, Mr Speaker, to illustrate in effect the doom and gloom that the Members opposite wish to paint the Gibraltar of today in, quoted some numbers which I thought were quite staggering. Mr Speaker, he said that tourist sites were down 5%; bunkering charges 33%; ship registration fees 17%; Eastside anchorage 45%; Upper Rock visits 3%; yacht arrivals down 13%; coaches arriving 33%; and Gibraltar Museum revenue 27%. This to give a picture to the people of Gibraltar, Mr Speaker, of an economy in sharp decline, despite, as is usual, everything that he had heard for the three hours previously from the Hon. the Chief Minister hitting a quite realistic and accurate depiction of a totally different scenario.

2830 Mr Speaker, why issue or deal with these numbers to give an impression that everything is going down, especially so, Mr Speaker, when the Museum entrance charges that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition refers to in its totality is £22,000? He tells us that £22,000 is going down by 27%. In fact, Mr Speaker, his numbers are totally wrong, because like him, I am not very good at maths, (Laughter) so I asked somebody else to have a look at the maths –

Mr Speaker: I am prepared to give the Hon. Member some lessons, if he wishes!

Hon. A J Isola: I would be grateful, sir!

2840 And I sought some advice from my Department and asked them to have a look at these numbers, and what they came back to me with, was in fact the real figure, in terms of the Museum entrance charges being down, is that it is not 27%; it is 0.17%, which amounts to the grand total down of £39, Mr Speaker. (Laughter) (A Member: Ruined!)

2845 When you consider that he also said the bunkering charges were down 33% and in fact, as my Hon. Learned Friend, Mr Costa corrected, and said it was up actually 21%, that £122,000 extra kills the £39, the £4,400 that were short on coach terminal fees and the £52,000 which were short on tourist site receipts. So much, Mr Speaker, for the Big Lie.

2850 Mr Speaker, when they then come and tell this Parliament that the spending is out of control – 1,000 homes – clouded in improvements to all the estates, £100 million; small boats marina; Gibraltar International Bank. Mr Speaker, I struggle to understand how they can say those things, when those very things were in their own programme and manifesto in 2011.

2855 Indeed, when we issued a press release, Mr Speaker, on 16th December announcing the Bank, the first thing the Opposition did was come back and say, it was their idea to do the Bank. But they seem to complain when we come to Parliament and vote for £25 million share capital into the Gibraltar International Bank, because we want the Bank to be strong and secure, and well above the regulatory capital that is required.

2860 Mr Speaker, I have always held the view that to be involved in politics there are two fundamental criteria that you require to have, the first of which is a good sense of humour and the second to do the right thing for the right reasons. Over these past months, Mr Speaker, the Members opposite in Opposition have issued a series of very interesting policy documents in three areas which I believe will test anyone's sense of humour and certainly, Mr Speaker, they tested mine.

2865 The first of these is the policy document on education and training which my hon. Friend the Minister for Education, Gilbert Licudi, has already highlighted and considered. Well, Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition can pant, but he has got a little way to go!

2870 If one then considers, Mr Speaker, the Members' opposite recent policy paper on housing, it is equally staggering, equally inconsistent and equally amusing because having spent 16 years in Government, having built houses for sale and indeed for rent, and at the end of that process having allocated many, many hundreds of flats, when they finish, they then come to the people and publicly say that the allocation of houses from now on should be means tested.

2875 Mr Speaker, it is almost like complaining your steak has not been properly cooked after you have eaten it. Another staggering statement to make, Mr Speaker, and frankly a little late to have such a thought, if in fact that was a genuine view and not just an attempt to say something new.

2880 But Mr Speaker, the most staggering policy document of all is one that they launched recently entitled 'Enhanced Democracy'. Because, Mr Speaker, this is the party that in their election manifesto of 1996 promised more meetings of Parliament, talked about a democratic deficit and promised the people of Gibraltar many things which in 16 years they simply failed to deliver.

Mr Speaker, I quote from their 1996 manifesto:

2880 'House of Assembly; there will be regular and frequent meetings and question times... The House of Assembly must be the true expression of democracy at work in our community.'

Mr Speaker, when you consider that in 2007 there were two sessions; in 2008 three; in 2009 three; in 2010 three; and in 2011, Mr Speaker, barely two, how on earth can we take them seriously and how can they now talk of 'enhanced democracy'?

2885 This in effect meant that the Opposition could only ask questions of the Government, as we now do on a monthly basis, twice in one year. And now these same people are coming to the people of Gibraltar and saying that they want enhanced democracy. Mr Speaker, I do not know if they have woken up one morning and suddenly learnt what the word 'democracy' means, but assuming they understood that word these past 16 years, I would be intrigued to discover what they mean by 'enhanced'.

2890 But Mr Speaker, 'Enhanced Democracy' does not stop there. They also call for a Public Accounts Committee, and I quote:

'to have oversight on how our money is being spent'.

Well, Mr Speaker, I then wondered what, if anything, they thought of this idea in 1996. Surely not. Surely not, Mr Speaker! Well yes, I am afraid so and again I quote from their 1996 manifesto:

'We will appoint a Public Accounts Committee in the House of Assembly to scrutinise Government expenditure of your monies.'

2895 (Interjection) Sixteen years later, whilst they were in Government, Mr Speaker, has there been a Public Accounts Committee?

So Mr Speaker, one thing is very clear: they are only interested in democracy, enhanced or otherwise, when they are in Opposition, because they had 16 years to do it and they chose not to. Why now do they seek to copy their policies of 1996 and try and sell them to the people as new? Why was it not important when they were in Government, Mr Speaker?

2900 In truth, if you scroll down through their policy document, what in effect they are seeking under the umbrella of democracy, is a bigger role for the Opposition. They call it a broader role, Mr Speaker.

But Mr Speaker, there is still more. Point 2 of their proposal contains their idea – now in Opposition – to have a member of the Opposition sitting on statutory bodies, and they suggest having a seat on the Development and Planning Commission, because they believe that that would be, and I quote, 2905 ‘appropriate’.

So what did they promise the people in 1996? Yes Mr Speaker they did, and I quote again from their manifesto of 1996:

2910 ‘We will initiate an open and modern planning process...’

And they also said this:

‘Gibraltar is our home. It is wrong that decisions which radically affect our surroundings should be made so secretly that you only learn about demolitions...’

– and then it talks about construction and developments –

‘...once it is too late.’

Well, Mr Speaker, I like to be fair and they did indeed introduce a requirement – as the Hon. Mr Selwyn just mentioned, if I may call him that (Laughter) – to provide for a requirement for public notice of all 2915 applications and the right to object, but they still maintained secretive meetings behind closed doors and they never instituted an open and modern process.

But they had no need to worry, Mr Speaker, because we have now done what they waited for 16 years to do. Mr Speaker, they obviously like the system and they now want a seat.

Mr Speaker, for a party who when in Government allowed the Opposition to ask questions twice or at 2920 the very best three times in a 12-month period, when the meetings of the DPC were held behind closed doors and in secret, and when the Members of the Opposition were not even extended the courtesy of an invitation to a Government drinks party, it is staggering how in such a short period of time they have come to the view that in fact the Opposition has a real and much more important role to play in local politics – and of course, Mr Speaker, in the exercise of our democratic system.

2925 Well how very convenient, Mr Speaker. What they really mean is ‘enhanced opposition’, not democracy – and after 16 years in Government with little democracy and nothing enhanced, now that they are in Opposition they have suddenly remembered they forgot to set up the Public Accounts Committee. Pa'lante, indeed! (Laughter)

2930 Finally Mr Speaker, before I move on, I believe it is entirely appropriate to congratulate my Hon. and Learned Friend, the Chief Minister on his recent appointment to Queen’s Counsel, but particularly so, Mr Speaker, because it has been granted on the recommendation of our recent visitor today, the Minister for Europe and I quote:

2935 ‘in recognition of his distinguished role as an advocate for Gibraltar both internationally and domestically, and his commitment to the rule of law’.

Well, Mr Speaker, so much for the noise from the other side of the mishandling of our affairs this past year. Maintaining my sense of humour, Mr Speaker, I make that two QCs for the Government and one for the Opposition, all of course, Mr Speaker, richly deserved.

2940 Moving to Financial Services, Mr Speaker, I have to say that what this Government found in December 2011 was that in financial services there was a total lack of adequate resources of the office of the Finance Centre, and a lack of adequate funding, which in effect meant that we had a huge amount of catching up to do as opposed to other jurisdictions, like for example Malta, who had been investing heavily in resources and funding to raise the profile of their jurisdiction.

2945 Mr Speaker, the estimate for this year for marketing is £350,000, but will be reviewed and I believe will result in the highest investment spend in our history for the financial services sector, quite apart from the huge investment already made in our Senior Executives tasked with the marketing of our jurisdiction.

Mr Speaker, the financial services sector accounts for some 14% of total employment and contributes around 20% to our GDP. Overall, there has been an increase in employee jobs in the finance sector this past 2950 12 months of some 123 jobs.

Mr Speaker, I have always believed that it is important to give credit where credit is due and certainly the previous Government's Income Tax Act of 2010 delivered to Gibraltar a conclusion of the transition from the offshore to the onshore, which is absolutely fundamental to our success as a financial services jurisdiction. The industry has grown consistently these past years, but the problem was, in my opinion, Mr Speaker, that without an effective plan to review our product range, be innovative in the creation and exploitation of new areas of business and then not, most importantly, have a serious plan to develop our international presence and raise our profile, we were running a risk that we were simply slipping further and further behind. That is our assessment, Mr Speaker, of what has happened and of what we intend to put right.

As a result, Mr Speaker, when I took over from my Hon. and Learned Friend, Mr Gilbert Licudi, some 12 months ago, I carried on the work that he had started and focused on a number of areas.

Firstly, Mr Speaker, we continue to listen and engage heavily with the Finance Centre Council, the individual associations all the professional bodies, and indeed individual firms engaged in financial services business, to gather from them what they believed our core products were, which markets they believed we should be focusing on and indeed how we should be attending to the raising of our profile in this space.

Mr Speaker, that threw up a whole raft of different issues including, I must say, the need for a five-star hotel, curiously, as clients of these firms were dissatisfied with the quality of the hotel stock as the lack of a serious five-star proposition was prejudicing the ability of their clients not just to visit Gibraltar but indeed to host conferences and functions here.

Mr Speaker, the financial services community and indeed the gaming community were delighted by the arrival of the Sunborn and very many conferences and functions have already been hosted on it, to the betterment of Gibraltar Plc.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, we engaged as promised the four 'Jimmy's', as they were then known, Senior Executives working in the finance centre in specialised areas and one based, working from Gibraltar House in London.

Thirdly, we reviewed our product range and this of course is an ongoing process – the introduction of QROPS which is proving to be a successful and profitable area of business for our sector. We are shortly, in fact in this session of Parliament, introducing QNUPS, after further discussions with HMRC. We have also introduced the new Companies Act and Insolvency regulations, superbly driven by the Hon. Mr Licudi, and we will also shortly be introducing a series of legislation requested by STEP in 2010, which we are now finalising. All designed to enable our sector to keep up with competing jurisdictions and indeed stay ahead in certain areas.

Fourthly, Mr Speaker, we refreshed and rebranded the Finance Centre, now known as Gibraltar Finance, with for the first time its own website, social media connectivity, new branding, all of which now give the professional look and feel the sector has been calling for.

Fifthly, and perhaps most importantly, Mr Speaker, we have completed our first ever business development plan. A business plan developed hand in hand with the sector, having first heard in detail from them what we should be promoting and where they thought we should be going and finalised with their total support.

Why, Mr Speaker, is this so important? Well, for the first time ever, the financial services firms know exactly 12 months in advance what we are going to be doing during that year, which conferences we are going to be attending, supporting and indeed speaking at, and of course, Mr Speaker, which jurisdictions we are focusing on and in what areas.

So, Mr Speaker, the insurance community know where we will be all year, as do the funds and the private client community, also. This has involved a complete review of every single conference and event in the market, and selecting the events we believe will be of most benefit to our players.

Finally, Mr Speaker, we will shortly be announcing that we propose to engage the services of an international public relations firm to assist us specifically in the promotion of our financial services industry by addressing the trade media for each of our sectors, better informing the public of what we have to offer and raising our profile in the right places.

Mr Speaker, I strongly believe that the combination of the new Gibraltar Finance team working to our Business Plan, with our innovative website and social media outreach, together with the private sector supporting all of these efforts and now a leading PR firm beating the drum for Gibraltar, we will at last be equipped to support this important sector of our community like we have never done before. This investment is and will continue to pay dividends for the benefit of all.

Mr Speaker, I believe it is appropriate at this stage to express my thanks to the Senior Executives for their work, expertise, innovation and support in these past 12 months, Mr Speaker, as well of course as the remainder of the team at Gibraltar Finance who each in their own way play such a critical and pivotal role in the work that the financial services sector depends on us to do, across a whole range of areas, both in Gibraltar and abroad, in dealing with our marketing and logistics, as well, of course, as handling all our Cat

2 and HEPSS applications. They are the ones who ensure that all of our events go as smoothly as those members of the public that have visited will know they do.

3015 Mr Guy Canessa, Mr Speaker, is a quiet man in the team who with very much care and attention to detail cares for all of our exchange of information matters and is our much valued technician. I must also, Mr Speaker, thank Mr Jimmy Tipping, the Finance Centre Director who drives Gibraltar Finance forward, working with the remainder of the team and always having an uncanny ability to pre-empt so many of the issues that come across my desk on a very regular basis. He has been especially good in his support to me in my dealings with HMT and HMRC, as well as of course with all OECD matters. He has been in the game for some years and his knowledge, expertise and calm approach have been invaluable to me. I am 3020 grateful to each and all of the team, who do a stunning job for the sector.

Mr Speaker, we have repeatedly said that our philosophy of compliance with international standards is one area that we are committed to and believe strongly in. Our position on exchange of information, TIEAs, FATCA are all well stated, as is our desire to ensure notwithstanding these, that a level playing field with our competing jurisdictions is maintained. There is no question that the environment in which our financial services sector has worked and will work in the future continues to change at a pace that few would have 3025 dared to predict.

However, Mr Speaker, that is the brave new world in which we work and it is essential in our view that we remain in the mainstream in implementing and adopting these standards. Every challenge brings with it opportunity and I have every confidence in the ability of our professionals to embrace and benefit from these challenges.

The Parliament will also be aware, Mr Speaker, that we have recently had our Phase II review by the OECD which will report back at a meeting in Paris in September, which follows on from the Peer One Review in 2011.

Mr Speaker, as at 21st March 2013, Gibraltar had implemented all of the recommendations contained in the Phase I review and we now await the results of the Phase II review, which we expect later this year. We will continue to work closely with the OECD until the completion of the Report. I must also report that we are shortly to issue a full consultation document on the merits of the central register of beneficial ownership, as has been announced previously and contained in our published action plan, and further Mr Speaker, as to whether such a register should be public or otherwise. Mr Speaker, although we have already 3035 engaged in direct consultation with the sector, we have felt it appropriate to extend this consultation process more generally, and the documentation will shortly be released to the public.

Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister has already mentioned, the Gibraltar International Bank was announced last December and the works are ongoing to make this a reality later this year. Although for a number of reasons the building works have been slightly delayed, all other aspects of the new Bank including its technology platform, its management team and its systems and operations are on course to be concluded in anticipation of the building works being completed.

Mr Speaker, there is no question that the number of credit institutions not just in Gibraltar but around the world are reducing and therefore more than ever, Mr Speaker, there is a need to ensure that Gibraltar will have the banking facilities that it requires and deserves not just for our people but for our business community as well. I am grateful to all those associations and professional bodies that have welcomed and supported the announcement of the establishment of this Bank, and I look forward to continuing to work with them in the months ahead. In particular, Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Bankers' Association and the Finance Centre Council have been most helpful and supportive in this process.

My sincere thanks also, Mr Speaker, to the Banking Committee who have supported and advised us in putting this project together, and to all those professionals who are working with us to deliver this to our community, including of course our CEO and COO.
3055

Mr Speaker, over the past 12 months – dealing now with funds and asset management – our Senior Executive in this field, Mr Philip Canessa has worked very closely with us and of course, Mr Speaker, with GFIA, the Association, and has exhibited, attended and/or delivered a presentation at a range of conferences and events, including Invest 13 in Geneva, the Bloomberg Hedge Fund Start-up in London, the Fonds 14 in Zurich, the Euro Hedge Summit in Paris and the Hedge Fund Start-up Forum in London. In addition to those, Mr Speaker, we also attended in early June the highly regarded GAIM 2014 event in Monaco, where I was afforded the opportunity to deliver the opening address at its plenary session.
3060

Further, Mr Speaker, in April this year, Gibraltar Finance supported a hugely successful private sector organised funds conference, here in Gibraltar, on board the Sunborn which was sponsored by several local financial services firms. Mr Speaker, around 50 Swiss asset managers attended, and the feedback on the conference received from delegates, sponsors and local firms was enormously positive. A further conference for Swiss asset managers will be organised in the future, and I was particularly pleased by this initiative, which we were delighted to support.

3070 Mr Speaker, it has always been our Government's desire to attract conferences to Gibraltar, particularly when we are able to bring so many Swiss asset managers to see the jurisdiction, as they did, meet the professionals and understand our unique strengths in this area.

3075 Mr Speaker, moving forwards, Gibraltar Finance will further be attending and exhibiting at the Hedge Fund World Asia Conference in Hong Kong, at Invest 14 in Geneva and the Hedge Fund Start-up Forum in Zurich.

Mr Speaker, I am sure Members will agree that no effort is being spared to raise the profile of our funds sector internationally, whilst at the same time maintaining very close contact with all local professional firms to ensure that our product range is updated and relevant in this sector.

3080 Mr Speaker, in the area of private clients, the Senior Executive has been actively involved both domestically in working closely with the sector, as well as internationally in raising the profile of our jurisdiction and promoting Gibraltar as a place to do business. I am delighted to report, Mr Speaker, that significant progress has been made in a number of long outstanding initiatives such as, for example, concluding the Capital Requirements Directive, the Customer Safeguard Accounts legislation and work continues, Mr Speaker, on the STEP legislation which I referred to earlier. Five pieces of legislation which 3085 have been pending since 2010. Mr Speaker, it is appropriate also to thank those professionals who have and continue to assist us in the drafting and preparation of this important legislation.

3090 Mr Speaker, I am also grateful to my Hon. and Learned Friend, Mr Licudi, for steering the introduction to Gibraltar of the Companies Act 2014 and the regulations relating to the Insolvency Act. I have only partially been involved in that process, which he has driven with some skill and patience, in bringing all the various parties together to complete the passage of that Bill and which has delivered to Gibraltar a consolidated, modern and updated piece of legislation which has been welcomed by all practitioners in the private sector.

3095 Mr Speaker, with regards to business development, our Senior Executive has also attended a series of conferences in London, Birmingham, Manchester, Geneva, as well as numerous privately arranged forums and meetings in Leeds and privately arranged meetings in Amsterdam and Rotterdam in support of private sector initiatives. In addition, Mr Speaker, a number of seminars have been hosted in London at Gibraltar House.

3100 Mr Speaker, you will note that our marketing in the United Kingdom has not been limited to London, at the specific request of the private sector, and we have now extended this with visits to Birmingham, Manchester, Leeds and these will most certainly continue.

3105 Mr Speaker, I would also like to refer at this stage to the work of Mr Paul Astengo in driving through the entire re-branding of the project that Gibraltar Finance has been through, as the contact point in delivering this very well received change not just in relation to the branding, Mr Speaker, but also of course to the website and our presence in social media. To give you an example, our combined social media audience has grown from some 50 persons in 2013 to now in excess of 3,000. This is an important medium, as our ability to communicate with some 3,000 people, cheaply and efficiently enables us to keep all of these participants updated and in many cases enabling the recipients of these messages, Mr Speaker, to further distribute them through their own systems and networks. Our database, Mr Speaker, has also increased to some 2,800 contacts who can be contacted and sent updates as and when developments arise in 3110 the sector. This interaction at every level is a vital component part of the work of Gibraltar Finance, which is most certainly not limited to attending functions, conferences and events.

3115 Mr Speaker, since September of 2013, our Senior Executive in London has been in post and has proactively marketed Gibraltar not just in London, but using this as a base to meet financial services players in the north of England, in the south of England and indeed in the west of England. Mr Victor Galliano has hosted and attended a series of events at Gibraltar House, both individually and in support of other members of the Gibraltar Finance team. He has been involved in actively promoting Gibraltar as a jurisdiction for credit institutions and has succeeded in attracting interest in this area, one of whom, Mr Speaker, will be arriving in Gibraltar next week to engage with our regulator in discussions.

3120 In addition to marketing in the UK by making direct contact with professionals there, he supports the other Senior Executives whenever necessary and indeed attends events and conferences with them.

Mr Michael Ashton is the Senior Executive in Insurance and Pensions and we have worked closely together in considering new areas of business for the insurance and pensions community, in diversifying our existing insurance base and exploring how better Gibraltar as a jurisdiction can service the insurance and pension sectors.

3125 Mr Speaker, Gibraltar has been hugely successful as a motor insurance jurisdiction and that growth has continued from the work undertaken by the previous administration and now accounts for some 16% of the UK motor market. We are keen, Mr Speaker, to continue to develop this sector, not only in the United Kingdom, but indeed on a pan-European basis and enquiries in this area are increasing. But Mr Speaker, we must also work to diversify our insurance offering to other areas where we hope to replicate, in time, the 3130 success of our motor community.

Mr Speaker, there has also been an enormous effort both on our part and on the part of Gibraltar Finance to finalise discussions with the United Kingdom to allow portfolio transfers of run-off or legacy insurance to take place between the United Kingdom and Gibraltar. This has been a long process and has been pending for too many years. I believe, Mr Speaker, that we are close to finalising these discussions and I believe that I will be able to announce shortly that this type of business will soon be able to be managed from Gibraltar.

We believe, Mr Speaker, that there is an opportunity for Gibraltar to develop expertise and attract new business in this sector, as we have done with other EU jurisdictions, including the Republic of Ireland. We believe the timing is right to engage in this business, as the implementation of Solvency II will undoubtedly lead to a greater interest in transfer and legacy portfolios to run-off specialists.

Another area, Mr Speaker, which excites us enormously is the rapid growth in the global insurance linked securities market (ILS). This market, Mr Speaker, looks set to see the catastrophe bond and insurance-linked securities sector hit a major milestone before the end of June with record issuance of over $10 billion coming to market in a single 12-month period. We have been working hard, Mr Speaker, since last summer to position Gibraltar as an alternative jurisdiction within the European Union and have been greatly encouraged by the support and contribution that a number of the major ILS participants in the world have extended to us to ensure that our guidelines, when formally published, will be fit for purpose, competitive and attractive to the users in this industry. I expect before the end of the summer, Mr Speaker, that we will be able to issue our own ILS guidelines, and I very much hope that this will be yet another significant new sector that we will introduce for our insurance, legal and accounting community. Mr Ashton's work in this area has been extraordinary.

Further, Mr Speaker, our QROPS sector continues to grow with a record number of schemes now in place and with these showing every sign that they will continue to grow well ahead of one of our competing jurisdictions, being Malta.

Mr Speaker, we are also consulting the sector and the regulator closely in relation to legislation that we hope to introduce to further improve and enhance our regulatory environment in the area of pensions, and I hope before the end of the summer to also have these proposals available for consultation.

Mr Speaker, as you will be aware, there is an amendment to the Income Tax Act which will be considered during this session and which seeks to introduce to Gibraltar the new product of QNUPS.

Mr Speaker, in addition to these areas, Mr Michael Ashton has attended a series of events and conferences in Hong Kong, Bermuda, Manchester, New York, the recent Gibraltar Day in Bermuda which he put together, all of which continue to raise in a serious and professional manner Gibraltar's appetite for business in the insurance sector.

I have to say, Mr Speaker that the visit to Bermuda was extremely successful, and I am delighted to report that a number of the people that we met during our visit have already been in contact with our regulator.

Mr Speaker, I believe it is also important at this stage to ask you to note that our regulator currently has before it a number of new insurance company applications and indeed an insurance intermediary application. I have absolutely no doubt, Mr Speaker, that these numbers will increase as Gibraltar's profile in this area continues to grow. I must thank Michael Ashton for his professional and expert knowledge in this area who continues to drive the marketing sector of this effort with such great style and success.

In conclusion on financial services, Mr Speaker, there is no doubt that as a financial services jurisdiction, we will need to work harder than ever before to catch up on the lost years where unfortunately – and I genuinely mean unfortunately – our investment in business development and raising Gibraltar's profile fell short of where we believe it should have been. However, Mr Speaker, with the renewed vigour and energy that this Government has brought to the Finance Centre Department, now known as Gibraltar Finance, we will catch up and we will maximise our ability to attract new business to Gibraltar. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, I must thank Mr Marcus Killick our outgoing CEO of the FSC for his 10 years of work in driving the Commission forward in the manner that he did and also welcome Samantha Barrass who joined us in February. We will be working closely together to improve what we have and how we deliver these functions, but more of that on another day. I must also thank the members of the Board of the Financial Services Commission and the Chairman for their work. They enjoy our confidence and support.

Mr Speaker, moving on to gaming, Gibraltar continues to be established and recognised as a world leader in remote gambling. It is an industry undergoing constant change, development and challenge, and those principles apply as much now as ever before. We have continued to operate as the Members opposite did, in carefully scrutinising new entrants and believe this is in the best interest of our community and operators.

In October last year, this Government hosted the first business breakfast for remote gaming industry professionals in the City of London. The initiative was built into the Gibraltar Day in London programme of events, which for the first time was extended to include this community. Over 80 key players in the industry, including chief executives, directors, lawyers, accountants and telecommunication providers attended. We look forward to revisiting the event again later this year.

3195 Mr Speaker, the Government has been attending the ICE Conference in London for a number of years now. This year I attended in February and met a series of operators and suppliers with interests in Gibraltar. In particular, I met with representatives from four companies who wish to pursue licensing in Gibraltar. Two of these have now completed that process and the other two are in train. It is my expectation that at least two further licence applications will be submitted in the near future and others may well follow.

3200 In the last year, we have continued to strengthen the base of the industry with the addition of six more licensees, and we expect that pattern of modest growth of high quality suppliers to continue, but also for some further consolidation of businesses to take place as markets mature and more and more jurisdictions seek to directly licence and regulate the industry.

3205 As of 31st March 2014, there were 30 licence holders in Gibraltar, although since that date two of our smaller licensees have been subject to takeover by other Gibraltar licence holders. Five of the remaining 28 are pure game software suppliers to customer-facing operators located here and in other places; 18 are exclusively or almost exclusively customer-facing operators; and five are 'hybrid'. The distinction is not just a matter of detail. I mention it because it is an illustration of the increasing diversification and complexity of the remote gaming industry and why we will look to develop and amend our arrangements in the near future, as other jurisdictions amend and adjust their own.

3210 More and more companies providing specialist business services to the traditional remote gambling companies are seeking to establish themselves in Gibraltar. These are significant and equally complex industries, which support the industry. They look for the traditional benefits of doing business in Gibraltar and to use the internationally recognised Gibraltar brand as leverage. We should look to ensure that we properly and effectively embrace these industries, where it is in our mutual interest to do so.

3215 Mr Speaker, it will not have gone unnoticed that there have been significant changes with regards to the land based casino. Its acquisition by a world-leading group of gaming companies earlier this year reflects again the quality and status of this facility and they are most welcome to Gibraltar. The casino continues to employ in the region of 160 management and staff, and the House will be aware that it remains a viable and popular venture, offering a variety of services to our community.

3220 Mr Speaker, as at the end of March this year, there were over 3,000 employees in the remote gambling sector in Gibraltar. This is an increase of 387 on the same date last year and a similar increase to the preceding 12 months. In terms of GDP contribution, gambling and betting activities are estimated to contribute 25% to GDP and represent some 14% of total employee jobs. This includes all employers trading in gambling activities.

3225 The Government revenue from remote gaming tax for 2013-14 has decreased slightly to £11.6 million from £12.1 million in 2012-13. This is attributed to the consolidation of licences held by one licensee from four to two. Without this consolidation, the tax would have increased by approximately £500,000.

3230 PAYE from remote gambling operators totalled £22.8 million for the year – an increase of some £4.6 million from the previous year, which can be attributed to the substantial increase in employees as a whole in this sector, with particular reference to three of our larger licensed operators.

Corporate tax received from gaming operators for the same period currently stands at £28 million. This represents an increase of £10.8 million from the figure stated last year, which can be attributed to notably higher corporate tax payments effected by four of our licensed operators during the financial year.

3235 Mr Speaker, I would highlight, that under the current rules, corporate tax payments are requested twice a year – in February and September. These payments could reflect both payments based on actual profit, with submission of accounts, or on account payments based on the previous years' profits which could result in over or underpayments in the numbers that I have given the House.

Overall, direct Government revenues from gaming, PAYE and corporate tax from gaming operators have again increased this year.

3240 It goes without saying, that as we host and licence most of the world's major remote gaming operators and suppliers, we must ourselves ensure that our legislation and regulation keeps pace with industry and global developments. We are working closely with the GBGA and having regular meetings with them to ensure that our legislative framework remains fit for purpose, and reviewing generally our gaming proposition with operators.

3245 All will be aware that during the last year, and continuing to date, discussions and representations have been taking place about the impact of the UK Government's proposals to licence, regulate and tax remote gaming operators located outside Great Britain, but supplying services to consumers in the UK. I will not repeat the arguments, but I will say that we would be affected by this course of action, since the supply of the lion's share of such services emanates from Gibraltar.

3250 This Government has continued to make clear to the authorities in the United Kingdom that these proposals, individually and collectively, have serious weaknesses in their development and delivery, and have the capacity to cause irreparable harm to what is currently a world leading industry. But these representations are not just for the benefit of the industry in Gibraltar or its consumers, who also stand to pay a heavy price as regulatory standards lessen and more poorly regulated jurisdictions become the new baseline for others to follow. The loss of business to unregulated markets and an increase in the grey market will harm not just Gibraltar, but of course the UK Government and its consumers, which the Act is intended to protect. We know Gibraltar operators will comply with the law, but the further fear of other operators not complying with the UK proposals makes the position even more challenging, as the level playing field reputable operators seek will fail to be achieved.

I should also mention the continuing licensing and regulatory demands faced by the Gambling Division. Earlier this year, two vacant regulator posts were filled. The unit is now up to its full complement of six staff and the Gambling Commissioner. The Division will shortly be moving into new accommodation at Europort that will better cater for their needs. Regulators from across Europe and indeed, the rest of the world, regularly visit Gibraltar to see our set-up. Gibraltar is probably the best regulated jurisdiction in the world for remote gambling activity, and we are very happy to share our ideas and best practice in regulatory ethics.

Mr Speaker, characters no less eminent than the Governor of New Jersey lays claim to Gibraltar's status, with his wish that his own state may soon become the primary remote gambling hub for that continent. The challenge of course is to bring the rationale and method to fruition, which is something we wholeheartedly support, as it improves the reputation of the industry worldwide.

We have all seen, Mr Speaker, the very many steps forward taken by the industry since the inception of gaming as far back as 1996. We must, nevertheless, be prepared for and be sufficiently flexible to accommodate steps back. Although, even at this very late stage in the development of the UK Government's proposals, their impact on the Gibraltar-based industry is still unclear, with the industry continuing to grow in terms of licensees and employees against this highly visible and well publicised series of proposals.

Mr Speaker, whilst some companies will trim back operations at a particular point in time for a particular reason, we also see expansion amongst other operators. This is the dynamic nature of the Gibraltar gaming community, and one which we are now accustomed to and embrace. We will continue to work closely with the GBGA and indeed the individual operators with whom I meet regularly. We are a listening Government and the gaming operators will bear testament to that statement, as we continue to work together to meet the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead.

I must, Mr Speaker, thank our regulator, Mr Phill Brear and his team for their complete professionalism in working with the industry and providing us with practical and incisive advice on the sector at all times. We are privileged and most fortunate to have him with us.

The Licensing Authority under Lorraine Britto must also be thanked for their consistent and quiet good work in keeping everything to date and to the greatest detail. I cannot understate the importance of this sector to our community, or indeed our Government's commitment to it.

A further innovation this year, Mr Speaker, has been the introduction of a Liaison Department within my Ministry. The thinking behind this was to facilitate, originally for the gaming community, all the interaction between the operators and Government Departments. We were keen to improve the efficiency of our Departments when dealing with operators to avoid delays and assist us in resolving any difficulties they experienced, such as for instance with work permits, residence permits, detached worker permits, the Hospital or indeed any other Government Department. The initiative was warmly welcomed by the gaming sector and it has proved to be most helpful to them.

As a result of this success, Mr Speaker, we have decided to extend this function to include the financial services sector, where it has been equally well received and being used more and more. The Liaison Department is managed by Lizanne Olivero and is now considering many of the processes we have to see if these can be improved to facilitate the process further. The detached worker permit is one example of this having now been completed. I am grateful to Lizanne and Tania for their continued great work and commitment to this function.

Mr Speaker, I cannot close without thanking Julian Baldachino my Senior Officer, Lourdes Piri my Secretary and the remainder of the team, who 12 months ago welcomed me into the offices of my Hon. And Learned Friend, Mr Licudi, which has been my home this past 12 months. With no fuss and complete professionalism, they have just got on with the job, and I am extremely grateful to each of them.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion, we have made huge strides in all of these areas since December 2011. We face challenges across all areas, as the world of commerce is more competitive and more mobile than ever before. But today, Mr Speaker we have the assets in place, the will to move forward, and the commitment to invest in making our growth a reality. In real partnership with the private sector I believe we have a good story to tell and it really is incumbent on us, Mr Speaker, here and now, to leave no stone unturned in the delivery of that message. We intend to continue to work closely with the GBGA and the operators, and the Finance Centre Council and all professional firms, to ensure that these two areas of enormous importance to our community are given every possible support and opportunity to continue to grow.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, may I with a short congratulations to the Hon. Member for his maiden speech, invite the House to recess for five minutes, for a comfort break, before we come back and take one more speech before we adjourn?

3320

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Bossino will take the floor? (Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.)
Very well. We will have a short five-minute break.

The House recessed at 8.05 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 8.24 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
For Second Reading –
Debate continued

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Bossino.

3325

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this is a debate on the Appropriation Bill and as such, it is not purely a debate on the figures. It is in reality, as the Hon. the Chief Minister I think said in his first Budget speech when he was on this side of the House, an opportunity for all of us to take stock as to where we are and where we are going in respect of our respective areas of responsibility. In effect, it amounts to a State of the Nation debate.

3330

In relation to areas of responsibility, Mr Speaker, I have many. Since I assume responsibility for Financial Services when I was appointed Deputy Leader by the Leader of the Opposition, I shadow now a total of seven areas, spanning four different Ministers, or 40% of the Cabinet. I promise that the speech will not be as long as it ought to be, given the time that we are still in this House.

3335

Mr Speaker, as has been a constant theme in the contributions made by my hon. friends, recurrent expenditure in each of the Departments which I shadow have been the subject of increases, save for Social Security where the payments to the Social Security Fund no longer features as an item of departmental expenditure to the tune of £9.5 million as explained by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

3340

The Leader of the Opposition on Monday has already made a reference to the astronomical increase that there has been in terms of recurrent expenditure. All of this from a Government which electioneered on the strength of an argument which said that we were in the midst of financial ruin. Who can forget the Hon. the Chief Minister's statements frantically describing what every man, woman and child would owe in debt, or his Ministerial Statement to the nation on 18th January 2012, which he claimed he was forced to make from No.6 given the seriousness of the position as he put it? Who can believe them now?

Who can accept that with the very little new and real investment which has come to the economy in the wake of the arrival of the New Dawn, something which the Chief Minister promised when he was first interviewed as Leader of the Opposition in 2011 would arrive shortly after December 2011, which is the date that the election was held? Is anybody able to accept that they are able now to relish in a spending spree?

3350

Does the answer not lie or not rest in the fact that they were less than candid at the time of the election and that in fact, what they inherited was not financial Armageddon, but a treasure trove which they are showing no compunction in spending at will? (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) That is the answer, Mr Speaker, they know it to be true and the electorate know it to be true.

3355

We were served on Monday morning with what can be described as nothing other than an apology, an excuse by the Hon. the Chief Minister for the first, I would say, 80% of his almost three hour speech, for the continuing high level of expenditure to which he would be subjecting this community in this financial year.

3360

Mr Speaker, I was criticised last year by the Chief Minister for not dealing with the figures as well. Well, that of course is not true. I reviewed diligently the Budget Book at the time, as indeed all my colleagues have, but if I had not, then he should have been well advised not to have encouraged me to look at it again, because it makes very depressing reading for him.

It is not directly one of my areas of responsibility, but I will be permitted just for one moment to dwell and refer to one particular item of expenditure. It was indeed referred to by my hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition in his delivery: Head 2(13) relating to protocol and entertainment, where we see that there is a forecast outturn for 2013-14 of £1.05 million, when the estimated expenditure was £320,000 – a difference of £730,000. Talk about sticking his snout in the trough! (Laughter)

This was from a man who used to analyse like a forensic accountant the former Chief Minister's travel arrangements. Whether he used the VIP lounge became matters of national importance for him. Of course, we now know that he was not necessarily behaving in this way because he wanted to make political mischief, but in fact because he was green with envy. He was probably thinking, (Several Members: Hear, hear.) 'You just wait until I am Chief Minister!' because he really is making the most of it, isn't he?

Let us look at some of the Departments, just some of them for which I have shadow responsibility.

(1) The contribution to the Borders and Coastguard Agency has increased by £887,000 from an actual expenditure of £3.8 million to £4.7 million.

(2) Civil Aviation had an estimate of £2.5 million with a forecast outturn of £3.2 million.

(3) In Employment and Labour, the actual expenditure for 2012-13 to the estimate for 2014-15 has increased by £2.5 million. A Department which itself has seen a 15-fold increase in expenditure. (Several Members: Oh!)

(4) The estimated figure for 2014-15 for the Port and Shipping Head is also up from the forecast outturn for 2012-13 by £713,000 and as indeed the Hon. the Minister for the Port said earlier today during the debate, the market budget is up by 13% of the GMA.

(5) Financial Services too, there is an increase whichever way you look at it, but the comparison between the estimate for 2014-15 and actual expenditure for 2012-13 amounts to £340,000.

Finally, Mr Speaker, (6) Tourism had an overrun for 2013-14 of £485,000 with a difference of £740,000 between the estimated figure for this year and the actual expenditure for 2012-13. Figures which had themselves already overrun last year by almost half a million pounds.

3385

And that is, Mr Speaker, without even mentioning the £14 million expenditure expected from the IDF fund under the Boat Moorings – presumably that relates to the small boat marina for this financial year. And these are not matters which are outside the Government's control. The Hon. the Chief Minister referred to, I think, fuel costs and tuition fees. These are all matters which are very much within the Government's control. Proof that just in my areas of responsibility they have been able, in two years, to spend their way through this Parliament when there was apparently no money in the first place. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

3390

Mr Speaker, in relation to Tourism, one of my areas of responsibility, what we have heard of the Minister's contribution has to be seen in the backdrop of the very much increased expenditure that I referred to. I mean, it would really be a very sad and worrying case of ministerial incompetence if he was unable to account for some measure of success, because he really is throwing money at it, isn't he? But one is duty bound to remove the spin and look at the hard facts as shown by the statistics, as best we can.

3395

Because there is certainly one attribute which the Minister has and that is the ability to use fantastically sounding adjectives to hype things up. We see them time and time again during the course of his previous speeches and in press releases, and we saw it again today. We have heard how 'satisfyingly dynamic' his year has been, or how he has been in 'hot pursuit' of new airlines, or how he has pursued a 'vigorous policy' in this and that –

3400

Hon. D J Bossino: 'Resounding success', 'very exciting measures' – that was this year (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks) The man has really lost his true vocation in life.

But let us look at the hard facts, shall we? I think that is important to do so, if one is going to have any objectivity, as he referred to during the course of his intervention. A constant, irritable – I am sure for him – reminder on the occasion of each of the Budget speeches I have given in this House, in my three years in this House, is my reference to the cruise line industry figures.

The Chief Minister last year patronisingly pointed out to me in his reply that my exposition of the poor cruise industry figures was misconceived because, silly me, I should have realised that cruises were booked a year or so in advance, so that I was being critical last year of the last Administration's performance. Well, quite apart from the fact that that particular argument is no longer available to the Minister, because two years in and despite the Minister's much vaunted one-to-one meetings and marketing strategy, the figures in comparative terms to when the GSD was in office have in fact gone down.

But you see, it was the Minister himself in his first Budget speech in 2012 who used what he described as improved cruise passenger arrivals as a result of his new found marketing policy. At that stage, i.e. May 2012 the figures were indeed looking as if they were on the rise. Little was he to know at the time that the final figure for 2012 was going to be 33,253 in terms of passenger arrivals lower than in 2011. You see the figures cannot be used when they suit you and not when they do not – 2011, Mr Speaker, being the benchmark. Are we going to have agreement in relation to that, because that is certainly the benchmark which the Hon. the Chief Minister used during his intervention?

3420

So let us make those comparisons and I will do so during the course of my intervention in relation to Tourism. Because the hard fact based on the figures is that as far as the cruise passenger arrivals are concerned for 2013, there is absolutely – borrowing the Hon. the Chief Minister’s phrase – nothing to write home about. Cruise liner arrivals, although higher in terms of cruise vessels arriving than in 2012, at 179 compared to 173, the figures still represents eight less than the position in the benchmark year, 2011. And such a distance away from the top figure of his predecessor at 238.

As I have told him before, in this House and outside of it, the magic is not in the total number of cruises, welcome as a higher number may be, but in how many passengers they bring. It is here where the picture is not as rosy as he would let us believe with his ‘spin-escape’ use of language. The total figure for passenger arrivals for 2013 has come in at 278,129 – a full 47,000 less than when we left it and 13,700 less than in 2012. And even his expected figure for 2014, let us see if it materialises, which is around the 290,000 mark, will be less than 2010 – the lower figures which he quoted with a lot of drama which actually came in at 303,000.

I am sure the Minister regrets much of what he said in 2012. You see, a much more politically mature – if I may so – position to have adopted is to have recognised the sterling work of his predecessors when the GSD was in office and then said, ‘Look, I will try my best and improve on that, on very firm foundations’, and then say, ‘Look, it may take me two or three years before we reap the results of my one-to-one marketing strategy, my new found marketing strategy.’

But he has placed so much store on his personal contact form of marketing and was so quick to attribute the success of that policy to the misleading increased figures he saw when he gave his first Budget speech in 2012 that I feel compelled again this year, Mr Speaker, to expose the fallacy of what he has been arguing up until now. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

He really needs to work out something else to reverse a potential downward trend, which I have referred to. This is all the more so when we look at the lower figures coming through the frontier. We saw about 657,925 less people arriving by land in 2013 than in 2012. If you look at land frontier visitor arrivals, the position in 2014 does not promise to get any better, if a comparison is done with the positions in April 2012 and April 2013: 222,000 less motor vehicles coming through if one compares the April to April figures for the two years I have just referred to as well. There are also less visitors to the nature reserve, which actually brings me to a point which I have made previously in press releases, about the need to devise a well-thought-out strategy to get more people here.

The cruise liner industry is certainly a potential revenue earner, as is of course our airport, but more thinking needs to go into how to bring new markets here, especially and precisely because of the difficulties that we are facing at the frontier and the intention behind it, which is to put pressure on us economically.

This issue came into sharp focus with the small business Saturday campaign which the Hon. the Minister referred to and was conducted during last Christmas. Whilst a welcome initiative, it cannot be a replacement for new fresh markets coming to our shores. What that initiative brought was really the same market, the Gibraltar market to our streets. I mean there are so many articles which one same individual can buy.

Roundabout that time, interestingly I came across an article from the UK Travel Association, which reported that an estimated, I think it was something like almost four million Britons would be heading overseas during that Christmas and New Year period, with Morocco interestingly being one of the favourite destinations. Could that market not somehow, if there is forward planning and a proper marketing strategy, not be marketed to bring those visitors here on a short-stay destination, and I offer that to the Minister for his consideration.

In terms of revenue raising, the Minister has stated quite boldly in the past in this House that his aim was and I quote, ‘to make the GTB self-funding so that the savings made to the taxpayer can go towards social essential services such as health, education, social services, etc.’ The fact is, despite what the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services has just said, that site receipts are estimated to be £3.5 million for 2013-14, whilst the estimated expenditure for that same year is at £4.4 million. He is out by £1 million!

Whilst the position of the last GSD year was that revenue stood at £3.3 million and expenditure at £3.2 million. A more balanced position indeed and more in tune with what his own stated aim is.

Mr Speaker, I take the opportunity now to comment on some of the figures revealed in the Tourist and Hotel Occupancy Survey Report of 2013, which were laid before Parliament only last week. But here too, we see some figures which seriously challenge the spin which we have heard the Minister deploy in his speech.

We see that the tourist expenditure in Gibraltar from those coming via cruises has gone down again from the position in 2012, from £10.5 million to £9.97 million. A figure in 2012 which had itself reduced from 2011 which showed expenditure at £13.16 million.

The expenditure from yacht visitors is also down from 2012 and many of the previous years to that one. Expenditure from visitors from Spain is, as one would expect, considerably down from 2012, bringing the overall tourist expenditure down from 2012 from £245 million to £207 million. Interestingly, for the period between 2003 and 2013 covered in the report, it is still the 2011 figures which are the highest – again that benchmark.

Although I have covered these figures in detail previously, these show also that the overall air, sea and land arrivals are down by 1.1%, 5.1% and 5.8% respectively in each category.

3490 Just pausing there for one moment, in relation to land arrivals, when I heard the Minister for the Environment say that he had every intention to continue with his reef laying programme, you could almost hear the entire community groaning, ‘Oh, please don’t! Please don’t! Spare us!’ People are not staying here, Mr Speaker, because of his wonderful parks. People are staying here because they are locked in Gibraltar – or does he not appreciate and realise that?

3495 Although the hotel occupancy survey will be the subject of greater analysis over the next few days, I would point out that the room nights sold, albeit higher than in 2012, remain lower than the position in 2011. It is welcome to see that the room occupancy rates are slightly higher than they were in 2012 as the Hon. Minister mentioned earlier – I think it is about 61% – although still not as buoyant as they were in 2003 to 2005 where the average for those three years stood at 67%. That is the benchmark he should be working towards, under the GSD Administration. The number of arrivals is also slightly up on 2012 but still slightly lower than in 2011.

3500 Given the figures I have referred to, they really do put into perspective, the hon. Member’s statements at last year’s Budget, where he said the Government shares the Chambers’ view, i.e. the Chamber of Commerce, that tourism is the lost pillar of the economy, which can remain resilient in times of economic hardship. If it was lost, I am not sure that the Minister has found it and if that is his definition of resilience, then please God, I hope he is with us on this one.

3505 Last year, the Minister announced that a project would start soon and one which had been planned for some time now, which was the Lester Hotel. This is what he said last year – I am not sure if it was featured in his speech on this occasion – explaining that this would add to the current four-star hotel offer in Gibraltar. I know that we have had many debates in the past in this House, certainly in the time that I have been here, but references have been made to previous Parliaments about what the word ‘soon’ means. But again, the Minister’s statements need to be questioned when a year on, there appears to be no movement in relation to this particular project.

3510 Mr Speaker, I take this opportunity in relation to my Ports areas of responsibility, the appointment of the new Gibraltarian Captain of the Ports, Mr Bob Sanguinetti. We all know that from this side of the House, that he has a very hard act to follow in Captain Roy Stanbrook and we wish Mr Sanguinetti all the best in his endeavours.

3515 But in relation to the Ports, I am afraid that I also have to report to the House bad news, because the figures simply do not support the picture, again, which the Hon. Minister seeks to paint and there are some warning signals in respect of them which I would ask him to heed.

3520 The number of ships which have called for bunkers has dropped as at May 2014 from the comparable position in May 2013, the figures being 2,300 compared to 2,576, with a difference in gross tonnage of some 11 million. Although I note that the forecast outturn for 2013-14 in respect of Port arrival and departure tax and bunkering charges are up from the estimated amount, the overall expectation appears to be that the GPA, the Gibraltar Port Authority, will be less of a revenue earner than previously if one goes by the estimate figure for this coming financial year.

3525 The Minister has denied in the past when I have asked him questions in this House, that there is any political pressure from Spain and I trust therefore that this is the case. But the Government should do everything within its power to reverse what appears to be a downward trend, given the importance of this particular area of activity to the economy.

3530 I take this opportunity too to acknowledge the sterling work which has been done by the Gibraltar Maritime Association led by Mr Richard Montado. Here we have seen increases – it is true – in the number of vessels registered in the last two years, (Interjection) which is a continuation of the increases which can be seen since 1997, after we came to office. The figure then was 27 vessels with a gross tonnage of 330,000. The figure now stands at 332 vessels with a gross tonnage of 3.4 million.

3535 But here too, Mr Speaker, the Minister is still to beat the increases presided over by the GSD between 2001 and 2002 when, for example, there was an increase of 45 vessels and between 2008 and 2009 with an increase of 38 vessels being registered. His increases were 11. (Interjections) This is from the information which is published on the website.

3540 However, where we are also seeing a downward trend is in the number of ships calling. The overall figure, which includes bunkers, for 2011, stood at 275 million gross tonnes and for 2012 it was 277 million gross tonnes and for 2013 it stands at 254 million.

Yacht arrivals are also seeing a dip from the 2011 figures with an almost reduction of 1,000 between 2011 and 2013.

3545 In aviation, another of my areas of responsibility we see how there has also been a reduction in the number of scheduled flights, at least on the 2013 figures that I have seen. I have seen, although it is gratifying that there has been a greater use of the airport and, other than as a very attractive backdrop to the Chief Minister's appearances on Spanish TV, given the slight increase in the number of passengers arriving in it from 2012 under the UK scheduled flights for seats used. Here too, more must be done.

3550 The Minister has previously referred to widening links to other destinations. These need to be established. We have seen how the Marrakesh flights, which were welcomed with so much fanfare by the Hon. the Minister for Tourism and if I recall correctly and accurately, also the Hon. the Chief Minister, it appears to be faltering with very low factors.

3555 But I take this opportunity to refer to the recent press reports, and indeed to the Deputy Chief Minister's comments yesterday, regarding the despicable actions by the Kingdom of Spain with regard to the Gibraltar Airport's exclusion now in relation to the Association Agreements with Georgia, Moldova and the Ukraine. These actions on the part of Spain represent a flagrant breach of her obligations under the Cordoba Agreement for 2006 and we in the Opposition condemn them wholeheartedly.

3560 Mr Speaker, I now turn to my other area of responsibility Employment. The Minister for Employment, the Hon. Mr Bossano, appears not to realise that I am now charged with this responsibility on the Opposition benches. He appears not to realise that the former Hon. Mr Lewis Montiel is no longer in this House. He appears not to realise that the former Chief Minister is now a former Chief Minister, he is a backbencher. We are now led by the Hon. Mr Daniel Feetham. Why does he continue to lambast these two individuals? (Laughter and interjections) Is he living in the past? Is he unable to look into the now and into the future?

3565 And I must say just by way of comment, when I heard him say at the end of his intervention, it really sounded like a political swansong on his part. I mean is he leaving us? Is he retiring? Is he not standing for the next election? (A Member: No, no!) I was getting somewhat emotional almost! And we had it also from the Minister for Financial Services.

3570 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Now, that would sound like a pitch for the Chief Minister's job.

Hon. D J Bossino: Or perhaps indeed, a pitch for the Chief Minister's job, if he is not in fact resigning.

3575 Hon. Chief Minister: He would only have to ask. (Interjections)

Hon. D J Bossino: And just as a final comment, Mr Speaker, in relation to what he said again at the end of his speech in connection with his policies, (Interjections) any criticism on our part would be interpreted almost like an act of treachery. But that is the nature of the man. Those of us who have seen him and observed him politically for many years know that to be the case.

3580 The hon. Gentleman will no doubt recall when during the course of my Budget intervention last year, the first time that I made an intervention in relation to Employment, I described him as a leopard which never changes its spots and his retort, under his breath – he will recall, he is already nodding – was that those were good spots. Well, I and indeed the majority of the electorate on eight out of the eleven elections in which he has stood – and he is very fond of statistics – 73% worth of elections have agreed with my assessment and not his, that those spots are not good spots. (Interjections and laughter)

3585 The Hon. the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister – (Interjections) Exactly, the Hon. the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister agreed once upon a time with my assessment when we supported the Gibraltar National Party in the 1992 and 1996 General Election, (A Member: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks) or has he forgotten that, Mr Speaker? (Interjections) Oh, Mr Speaker, very few.

3590 On the last occasion, I referred to his many outlandish statements which he made, which included some like Gibraltar being at the time when there were 12 nation states in Europe, the 13th nation state. I also referred to a statement he made publicly during this term of office, that he would eradicate – those were his words – he would eradicate unemployment. I think it was in a debate he mentioned earlier in January 2012.

3595 Those of us who have observed the hon. Member in his political career for many years will know that he is prone to making such statements, even if he then fails to deliver. But you see, the same happens with his manifesto commitments. The parties now in power have made a song and dance of the primordial importance which they lay on the delivery of, as they have described them on umpteen occasions, they are very specific, time sensitive, manifesto commitments. But when it comes to the hon. Member, what he does in practice very rarely reflects what it says on the tin. It was therefore important to analyse what was in fact promised to the electorate at the last General Election – an electorate which in many respects was hoodwinked into believing that what was promised would be delivered.

3600 At page 25 of their New Dawn manifesto, under the title 'Future Job Strategy', it states very clearly that as from 1st February, there will be a new dedicated training strategy with a maximum of three years and a guaranteed full-time job on completion. It then goes on to read, and this is the purposely confusing bit, that all trainee employees will be covered by contracts of employment with a wholly owned Government company.

3610 Just dealing with that last point first, for those of us on this side of the House who were following employment matters very carefully at the time of the election, it was very clear that the impression that was sought to be given was that the full time job on completion would be within a Gibraltar-owned company. Ask the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and the PDP, Mr Elliott Phillips, who had participated in a debate during the course of the election and put that interpretation to Mr Licudi, who was in that debate – and that was not challenged by the Hon. Mr Licudi during the course of that debate. (A Member: Absolutely.)

3615 But you see, this is not what in the event was rolled out on 1st February 2012. But perhaps, let us give them the benefit of the doubt. On the very strict analysis of those words, Mr Speaker, it is possible that what in fact has been rolled out is what was described in the manifesto – although this is rather odd, is it not, given that the hon. Member clearly falsely describes himself as being a plain speaker and borrowing one of his favourite phrases, calling a spade a spade? Why did he not use clear language in this case? The answer must lie in that he wanted people to give the words the alternative and more electorally favourably interpretation which I described earlier.

The important part of the text is that, however, which refers to and I quote again, ‘a dedicated training strategy’. This it clearly is not, despite what I have heard the Minister say barely two hours ago. There is nothing in the nature of a strategy in the Future Job Strategy. It would have been different, Mr Speaker, if the hon. Member had set out a detailed plan from day one on how he was going to provide training, training with proper qualifications within a certain period of time, which would give our young people the opportunity to better themselves and acquire transferrable skills, to obtain real and sustainable jobs, with good prospects for the future. Proper vocational training that is what they are asking for and that is what is required. But this alas, was not what has been on offer and the fact is that there simply is no strategy for this.

The House will recall when the hon. Member claimed that initially the trainees would be employed for a period of 11 months. Three years, albeit set out in terms of a maximum period, but suddenly three years did not quite sit well with the hon. Member. It then became a variable period: it was not quite three months, it was six and depending on how long the training would be required and now it is pretty much a standard three-month period. No evidence, Mr Speaker, there of any forethought of any forward planning of any, dare I say it, strategy.

3635

And why do I say supposed training, because in the main, based on the information which has been provided to date in this House, there is simply no substantive training involved in the FJS. What the hon. Member is providing at great expense, and he knows that this is a dividing line between his party and my party, given that it has been the subject of public debate, this is nothing other than a very expensive placement programme running just in salaries – just in salaries, Mr Speaker, and there are added costs – as at April 2014 at £12.606 million.

3640

Then he claims that there are all these companies in the private sector that are so infused by his strategy that they are almost queuing up outside his offices at the ETB or Town Range or wherever he may be in any given moment, eagerly awaiting to sign his partnership agreements with him. I have asked him, both in this House and outside of it, for details of who these companies are, but he flatly refuses to provide them. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) What evidence, Mr Speaker, can he show other than numbers on a piece of paper that the private sector is genuinely engaged?

3645

On the basis of the anecdotal evidence that I have from speaking to people in the private sector, and not just in the construction industry, because we cannot forget that although the hon. Member has an almost obsession with the construction industry, according to the manifesto commitment the FJS is not limited to that particular industry. There is no evidence, Mr Speaker, that this has been welcomed by them.

3650

Speak to the stakeholders out there, speak to the retailers up and down Main Street: it would seem that those companies which he is referring to as being participant in the scheme are simply doing so because in the main they will be receiving Government work. Indeed he has said so himself. He has admitted so himself, quite blatantly, that as part of the deal, if you want to set up a company and have it registered in Town Range at No. 6 – although we see very few of those companies being added on to that list – and yes, Members of this House will remember that nobody knew about this until we carried out a search in Companies House, of the existence of such companies – the quid pro quo is that you do take on these trainees but there is no genuine effort –

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker. Point of Order.

That is not true. I have not said so and I challenge him to say when and where.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this is not a genuine effort. This is not a genuine effort by the private sector to engage with the state in assisting our young and unemployed in bettering themselves, by obtaining recognised qualifications. It is far from it. The scheme, on the basis of the evidence that we have, is nothing 3670 other than an artificial scheme supported with large amounts of public money, millions of pounds as I referred to earlier, in order to get people into jobs without any regard or account being taken of their medium to long-term future. What a shoddy way of dealing with people's lives! What short-termism and lack of foresight!

3675 Mr Speaker, just to deal very briefly with the final paragraph of his page 25, under 'Graduate Employment', it is in very clear terms on this occasion. It says:

'Gibraltar graduates who have decided not to take up the statutory entitlement of a Post Graduate Scholarship and wish to return to Gibraltar...'

3680 That is the qualification. It does not say 'graduates who are also registered as unemployed'. Did he not expect that there were going to be more than six or more than a handful?

Hon. Chief Minister: So you could apply.

3685 Hon. D J Bossino: No, because it has to be returning graduates. I returned some years ago, as the Hon. the Chief Minister knows. (Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.) And then he says that they will be given a three-year contract as research assistants and will be involved in undertaking the research work of the Department... Many of these – I certainly know of a few – all they are doing is filing. What type of research work is involved there, Mr Speaker? (Interjections) Again, it does not do what it says on the tin, Mr Speaker.

3690 But he does not need to hear this from me. He does not need to hear this from Members of the Opposition. Does he not realise that very few people are with him?

3700 Mr Speaker, he has questioned that the GSD entered into partnership agreements with the private sector. Has he not seen them? It was publicly available in the press. They may not have been the subject of a formal written agreement with a seal on it, but they were certainly... He himself mentioned the Gibtelecom Scheme, but there were others, with electrical companies. I have got them here: with electrical companies, with gaming companies. What were they if not agreements, Mr Speaker?

3705 And in relation to the Health Service as well: the Minister for Social Services portrays the three-week courses as a revolution in training, if I quote her. But there were in fact agreements with the relevant entities which provided participants with NVQs.

Only last week, we saw how the Editor of The Chronicle had this to say about a part of the Government's policy and how it impacts on expenditure generally. He said:

3710 'The provision of summer jobs, the graduate schemes, are great for short periods and keeping these youths out of the true unemployment figures, but true employment for young Gibraltarians, especially graduates flowing back home, requires sustained development of the economic machine.'

3715 And that must be right. It is the private sector which can best provide real and sustainable jobs for our young people.

3720 But there is no real engagement with the private sector, as I said earlier, and instead of using public money in the manner that he is doing, he should encourage and enthruse a willing... because that is what we found when we were in Government: it was a willing private sector to participate in the investment in real and proper training and sustainable employment. Only then will they go some way to plug the skills gaps he is talking about. And we are not against good workplace-based training which subjects trainees to rigorous assessments. What we are against are expensive 'make work' schemes.

3730 But going back to the question of whether there is any proper and real engagement of the private sector, if that had been the case, why is it that his Department has been unable even to persuade the Sunborn to take a substantial number of trainees, in an area where he himself has recognised as being one where there is a dearth of local people wanting to engage in this type of work, in an area in which, if all the promises made by the Minister for Tourism are to be believed, will see further hotel growth in the immediate future – from a private sector employer who has been the beneficiary of public money in a very big and real way. Money to the tune of an excess of £30 million and yet not even they can be persuaded to participate freely and willingly and enthusiastically in their training scheme. Mr Speaker, what a joke!

3735 Why is it that despite the promise by the CEO of the Sunborn that he was placing 200 foundation jobs, whatever those are, with the ETB where the CEO was wanting to embrace the local – as he quotes in The Chronicle piece on this – the local employment market, talking of providing training locally and yet a mere 46 Gibraltarians had managed to secure jobs as of May this year. Does he not recall his words in this House when he said that he was and I quote:

3740 ‘totally committed to ensure that every single Gibraltar resident that, as a result of the policies of the government, has been faced with an avalanche of competition from out of Gibraltar will not be put in that situation from 1st Feb on...’

3745 i.e. 1st February 2012. Another cast iron guarantee which seems made of a more malleable metal than he professes.

But let us go back to page 25 of the manifesto, under the heading Skills Audit. There is another promise to carry out a full skills audit of the labour markets which they claim would be undertaken in the current financial year, i.e. 2011-12, to prepare the final action plan of the Future Job Strategy from April 2012. What a renegeing of such a clearly worded manifesto commitment – one which is not open to any possible alternative interpretation than what it actually says! And I am not sure whether the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister’s duties as the box ticker of manifesto commitments include the crossing of some of them out. (Laughter)

3750 Because I am afraid, Mr Speaker, that there is simply no wriggle room out of this one. They are in such difficulty that the hon. Member, who is not a particular fan of lawyers, actually had to rely on the Hon. the Minister for Justice on one of his interventions to defend him, by using as much legal imagination as possible in defence of the indefensible. Why do they not just admit it, they pulled the wool over people’s eyes and they continue to do so?

3760 And all this begs the question: what is the final action plan of the FJS which we were all waiting with baited breath would be implemented by April 2012, because the skills audit was not finished by then? Or is it just that what has been dished out for the last two and a half years is not in fact the final action plan after all?

3765 Mr Speaker, I have noted in the Budget Book that it is proposed to reduce quite considerably – and the Hon. the Minister for Employment mentioned it earlier – and dramatically the staff complement at the Employment and Training Board from 38 to 14 and he explained the reasons for that. (Interjections) But what is going on at the ETB? What is going on at the ETB? It actually, for the first occasion featured in the Ombudsman’s Report this year, where the Ombudsman said:

3770 ‘I have to make special mention of the Employment Service where there has been a significant increase in complaints during this year. The average complaints for the years 2010 to 2012 were 6 per annum, whereas during 2013 we have recorded a total of 23 complaints. The nature of the complaints has ranged from lack of replies when seeking information to alleged unprofessional treatment and dissatisfaction regarding claims for payments under the insolvency fund.’

3775 (Several Members: Oh!) And it goes on:

‘It is hoped that this increase has been due to a transitional period of staff changes and/or shortages. As Ombudsman, I will closely monitor the trend over the coming months and if there is no change I shall have to meet with senior management to express my concerns and offer the assistance of my office to identify and address pockets of concerns.’

3780 What is going on at the ETB which requires a dedicated public officer to liaise between it and the gaming industry?

3785 The Hon. Member for Financial Services will recall that he made the announcement in a debate which I had with him on GBC back in January and this is something which I welcomed on the spot. But does the fact that this is required in the first place not speak volumes as to the lack of service which has been provided by the ETB for which the hon. Member is ultimately ministerially responsible?

Hon. D A Feetham: There is the Ombudsman on the unemployment list next week! (Laughter)

3790 Hon. D J Bossino: And then we will move on to the Labour Inspectorate. No mention made of that. Here there very clearly is a difference in approach, but perhaps more importantly Mr Speaker, in mind-set between them and us. We have seen how the Minister has no compunction whatsoever to appoint, by gazetted notice, some six individuals as labour inspectors under the statutory authority of the Employment Act. These individuals have quite important and draconian powers under the Act as Labour Inspectors – but yet they are trainees. They are trainees and I make no comment as to their competence or otherwise, but the 3795 fact that they are trainees suggests that they do not have and have not had the benefit of a fully-fledged appointment and should have had a fully-fledged appointment under law.

They are not professional public servants, for example, who were the ones doing the job before. Who is to stop any of these individuals from exercising the right to enter premises or seek the disclosure of documents? There is absolutely nothing to stop them. And this coupled with the fact that the original complement of civil servants, Mr Speaker, is no longer there.

3800 And all of this combined together must result in a poorer service being provided and therefore, importantly, unscrupulous employers getting away with much, much more than they would otherwise have ordinarily do, (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) because the Minister has suggested that the intention is that the trainees are to be limited, even to carry out research. Who is doing the inspecting then?

3805 And finally, in relation to this area of responsibility, just to comment on the employment survey again tabled last week of 2013: what we see here is a continuing increase in public sector employment, to the tune of 7.8% from last year, which itself had already grown by 9.1%. It is interesting to note that, despite the Minister's stated policy, the growth in the number of Gibraltarians in jobs has been reduced from 5% in 2012 to 1.2% in 2013 – i.e. 126 more.

3810 Although we see more Gibraltarians in the construction industry, for example, than Spaniards – a bee in the Minister's bonnet – one would need to see how many of these are employed, or rather one would need to see that many of these are employed for the public sector, we see a considerable jump from 162 to 261 in 1999 in the number of full-time Gibraltarians employed in the construction industry under the wholly owned Government company section.

3815 Interestingly, there is also a jump under the same section in the Public Administration industry bracket, between 2011 and 2013 from one – yes, one – to 150 for Gibraltarians employed. So the totality of Gibraltarians employed in wholly owned Government companies, i.e. in the public sector, has grown from 491 in 2011 to 908 in 2013, with in excess of 500 more Gibraltarians than in 2011. Again, I need to repeat – in wholly owned Government companies. Many of these, Mr Speaker, I assume will be accounted for by the fact that they are employed by the FJS scheme companies, which rank as Government companies.

3820 Yet the total for full-time jobs in the private sector, and using football speak, shows Spain beating Gibraltar 581 to 452.

3825 So, Mr Speaker, the conclusion to make, is that the increase in the number of jobs for Gibraltarians in the construction industry is being driven by the public sector and therefore with public money. Arguably, even those in the private sector could actually be driven by public money, given our view of the reality of how the FJS actually works.

3830 Mr Speaker, I will deal briefly with one of my other areas of responsibility, which is financial services. I must say that I was somewhat surprised by the Hon. Minister for Financial Services' adversarial approach at the beginning of his speech. One would have been forgiven for thinking that he was venting his frustrations, I think, dating back to 2000, when he was last a Member of this House, going back to 1996. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham)

The fact is his areas of responsibility are I think something which – one of those areas I think which ought to enjoy cross-party support. I think it is important to dwell on some of the main areas which are impacting on this area.

3835 In relation to gaming, one of the threats which we continue to face is that of the point of consumption tax, I think it was referred to by the Minister in his intervention. The issue must be one of the central ones of concern for the local gaming industry, an industry which continues to be very much welcome in Gibraltar, as he rightly pointed out.

3840 The need in my view to ensure a steady and responsible growth in this area has been the subject quite rightly of cross-party consensus. We did it in our time and the Government now continues to follow in that policy, and I welcome that.

3845 The Opposition notes recent press reports which revealed that the Gibraltar Betting and Gaming Association had written to the UK Government and the Gambling Commission a letter before action. Mr Howard, the President of the GBGA was quoted as saying that the new law, which reportedly seeks to establish the UK Commission as the industry's world-wide regulator, would, with the planned tax changes, drive consumers to the un-regulated or poorly regulated market. The hon. Member will recall that was the subject matter of our debate on television back in January.

3850 This issue of course is a central one in the analysis which the GBGA also made in its study of the impact of the UK Governments point of consumption proposals, I think if the hon. Member has had an opportunity of reading that particular document.

3855 I encourage from this side of the House the Government to do all it possibly can to assist in ensuring the industry's continued presence locally. In this regard, it is of, I think, crucial importance – and the softer issue has actually come into sharper focus – and to ensure that these continue to work well, for example the broad band connectivity, electricity supply, banking, accommodation and frontier flow. All these things need to be addressed by the Government.

3860 One further development has been the setting up of the Gibraltar International Bank, also referred to by the Minister. We have debated at some length in this House matters relating to the regulation of the Bank, as well as its setting up. The Chamber of Commerce has said in the press, by emphasising the importance that the Bank operate on an arm's length basis, independently of the Government and under proper 3865 management and subject to all the rigours of FSC regulation and supervision that would apply to every other bank in Gibraltar. We on this side of the House agree with this analysis and will be keeping as far as we can and are able, a watchful eye, particularly in relation to the Bank's lending terms and whether they are commercial, especially in the light of the expected demand and requirement that there will be for lending once the new housing estates come on-stream. We will also be looking at how the Government Bank seeks to invest its retail deposits and regulatory capital.

I also raise briefly, Mr Speaker, the imminent arrival into our Statute Book of the Solvency 2 directive on insurance which regulates, amongst other things, the amount of capital that insurance companies in the EU must hold to support its business. The concern here is how the more stringent capital requirements will impact on smaller Gibraltar insurance companies. This is an important consideration, because whilst the 3870 Gibraltar insurance industry has grown considerably over the last 14 years in particular, it has still predominantly, I understand – I am not an expert in the field – but made up of small insurers operating within the constraints of a lower capital base and the larger players operating either in Gibraltar or elsewhere.

3875 According to the latest statistics, in relation to insurance, the sector employs 240 people, the majority of whom are in fact Gibraltarians. The industry is obviously also an important net contributor to Government coffers in terms of corporate and PAYE tax and other fees such as rates and rents. For all these reasons, this is a matter which will require considerable sensitivity in terms of approach from both the Government and indeed the regulator.

3880 The issue as reported in the press is of concern to those in the industry locally. One of our local insurance stakeholders has openly accepted the logic behind Solvency 2, but equally has concerns about the timescale to achieve compliance with the requirements that, to quote him, 'some people in the industry need to have a wake-up call.'

3885 I note that the Government is working with the Gibraltar Insurance Association and the FSC in a Joint Steering Committee, dealing with the transposition of the directive. We welcome this on this side of the House.

We also note that the industry has recently been asked to contribute towards the regulatory costs of implementation of Solvency 2 through a direct levy which they have agreed to.

3890 Just pausing there for one moment, Mr Speaker, in relation to the FSC, I take this opportunity to welcome the arrival of Samantha Barrass as its new CEO, who replaces Marcus Killick, who I know was well known to the hon. Member opposite. Mr Killick's work over 10 years on the job has to be recognised and acknowledged and we do so from this side. The ability to secure a fine but crucially important balance between proper regulation, but at the same time the flexibility which is required to make our financial services industry work, is one which we hope that Ms Barrass will be able to emulate.

3895 And Mr Speaker, to conclude, the Hon. the Chief Minister said, going back to the beginning in his budget intervention, that this was a ground-breaking budget and indeed game changing. Indeed it is –I had better get it right! (Laughter) It is game changing in three respects. First, it is the budget with the highest level of expenditure ever. (A Member: Oh!) Secondly, it does not give us the full picture of where our finances are. (A Member: No!) Thirdly and finally, the net public debt in monetary terms is the highest ever.

3900 Perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister should gloat less about his record and start to govern this community responsibly before it is too late.

I am grateful, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks).

3905 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, actually I have been looking forward to that one, but I feel very let down and disappointed. Mr Speaker, after that damp squib of a speech, can I suggest that the House adjourn to 9.00 a.m. tomorrow morning?

ADJOURNMENT

Thanks to parliamentary staff;
 Thoughts in memory of Sir Joshua Hassan

3910

Mr Speaker: Before we adjourn to tomorrow morning, there is a couple of points I want to make. One is to thank the staff of this Parliament who have arrived here this morning well before we did and who will not be able to go home until after we have left, on what has been a very unusually long day. (Banging on desks)

3915 And secondly, this afternoon while I was looking through some papers in connection with the manuscript of my memoirs, I came across the fact that on 1st July 1983, Sir Joshua Hassan and I were travelling back from London that day after a historic meeting with Margaret Thatcher, and half an hour earlier, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition had drawn my attention to the fact that today, 1st July, is also 3920 17 years since the death of Sir Joshua Hassan and he who was described as the Father of the Gibraltarians, perhaps we might spare a thought for him.

I now propose the question which is that this House do now adjourn until Monday at 9.00 a.m. (Banging on desks)

I now put the question which is that this House do now adjourn until Wednesday 2nd July at 9.00 a.m. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Passed.

3925 The House will now adjourn until Wednesday 2nd July at 9.00 a.m.

The House adjourned at 9.25 p.m.

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Wednesday, 2nd July. Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill 2014. Budget speeches continue.

5 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Paul Balban.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, It gives me great pleasure to stand here today to deliver my third Budget address. Time and tide wait for no man and this is becoming so evidently clear now. How time flies. One would be forgiven to think that on this side of 10 the House one should be getting increasingly nervous, as our end of tenure looms ever closer. Surely, our political shadows should already be rubbing their hands together in view of this waning time, before what they feel should be a feeding frenzy on a banquet of unfulfilled manifesto commitments, but alas for them there should be no left-overs, not even a morsel to be devoured.

We are doing well, Mr Speaker. This Government, true to its word, is doing extremely well. I will only 15 speak for the ministries that I am responsible for but everywhere we turn change is now most definitely in the air. Gibraltar is being transformed and it is there. Change is now glaring in our faces.

Mr Speaker, a year on from my last Budget speech where I announced the construction of low cost affordable housing as being one of our major flagship manifesto commitments. Well, I am now happy to report that this has now become a reality.

20 Ground was broken only months ago and the Aerial Farm Site, soon to become Beach View Terraces, is already there looming right in front of our very eyes, growing day by day. I do not think that people prior to this summer were so aware that we had progressed so far in such a short amount of time, but now, as we follow our daily exodus to the beaches, it is there – Beach View Terraces. Truly affordable homes! Something which was born during our last tenure in Government – a concept that was sadly never equalled 25 successfully by our predecessors.

Mons Calpe Mews is also on track and running on schedule, as announced. In no time at all we will also see this starting to take shape. Both of these new estates are truly low-cost and affordable. Where else 30 would someone be able to buy a one-bedroom flat for £27,600 or a 4-bedroom flat for £73,360. Surely, the only complaint would be, and has been, that people want more of these types of flats, the demand has been that great! There were over 3,000 applications for these 895 flats. The demand has been so great simply because of the dismal record of our predecessors when in Government. People who have been given the chance to purchase are truly ecstatic, and are now eagerly awaiting their new homes.

35 Mr Speaker, as a result of the success of these new projects, it is clear that we cannot stop here. In fact, we will not stop here, we will carry on building low-cost homes as there is clearly a need and demand for this type of housing initiative, not only for those who are on the waiting lists but for the many upgraders who have also shown a clear interest in purchasing as they have outgrown their homes and now require larger accommodation. These families have shown an interest in releasing their properties to Government for subsequent sale.

40 Mr Speaker, this Government does not give priority to those who wish to purchase 100%. There is already a housing market out there for speculators – but not this market. We work strictly by the criteria that we announced and hold firm by this. Priority has been given to those applicants who were on the housing waiting list on or before the 9th December 2011; after this, those who were on the pre-list on these dates, followed by those who were on the Housing List after 9th December. Then those who are currently tenants of Government flats will be allowed to purchase and then upgraders will also have an opportunity as 45 long as flats are still available.

Our counterparts may criticise, as they would have done things differently. They did in fact do things differently – very differently. They sold to the highest bidder. They sold to those who chose to buy 100% over and above those who could only purchase 50%. That was their policy. Nevertheless, they were very successful in one other thing – and I think that no one could deny them of this – and that was allowing the waiting list to rise and rise to around 1,500 – the level that we inherited on 9th December 2011, when it was this Government who had brought the housing waiting list to an all-time low of 459 back in 1996.

Mr Speaker, also in keeping with our manifesto commitment on the construction of flats for the elderly in the style of Albert Risso and Bishop Canilla House, we have already announced two more blocks which will be purpose built for these specific needs. The professional opinion of occupational therapists and other relevant professionals have been consulted so that these flats will suit these exacting needs. The flats will be spacious and completely wheelchair accessible. As already announced, one block will be within the Mons Calpe Mews Development and will be known as Sea Master Lodge. The other will be Charles Bruzon House constructed at Europort Avenue. A total of 143 flats will be available within these blocks. We are also working on new Albert Risso-style accommodation on the site of the old Queen's Hotel.

60 Mr Speaker, our policy of holding regular meetings with the Tenants Association continues. Either I or senior members of my Ministry continue meeting with the established Tenants Associations on a regular basis. These meetings reinforce our contact with the tenants and many issues are highlighted and sorted out during these meetings. This keeps my Ministry in touch with the real issues that concern our tenants and affords early warning of existing and impending problems for immediate remedial action. Tenants Associations express their appreciation for this platform from which they can communicate their problems directly to senior Housing ministry officials who are truly empowered to assess such matters and take swift corrective action. In this way, tenants may have more regular contact with the ministry by way of its ground staff, who are the ones who deal with all the important day-to-day issues and this greatly speeds up the process of getting work done.

70 Mr Speaker, a complete restructuring exercise of the Reporting Office was carried out last year in order to maximise this Office's efficiency and effectiveness in dealing with the numerous day-to-day reports and counter enquiries from members of the public. The Reporting Office has established a close relationship with the Housing Works Agency's Customer Services Support Office, resulting in an efficient exchange of information that truly benefits Government tenants.

75 All customer enquiries received at the Reporting Office are dealt with within the same working day, where possible, and the success of this endeavour is evident in the significantly reduced incidence of customer calls directly to the Agency.

Mr Speaker, I am happy to say that since we addressed this matter we have not received one single complaint relating to the non-reply of phone calls. On the contrary, we have now received praises for the way that the calls are being handled.

80 We keep monthly phone statistics to ensure a good and efficient service to the public. We now also have an email address where persons can make reports directly to the Reporting Office without having to make a phone call or coming to the counter in person.

85 Mr Speaker, El Turno has now been in operation for over a year and tenants are happy with this new service being provided. Government is now considering the possibility of extending this to other estates in the near future. A team constantly oversees that the service runs smoothly and are quick to tackle any emerging queries so as to ensure a seamless operation. This is yet another commitment which this Government has fulfilled, making the lives of residents more comfortable.

90 Mr Speaker, as I announced last year, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar is committed to targeting practices of anti-social behaviour within Government Estates that affect many law-abiding residents. One key issue of major concern resulting in anti-social behaviour was directly related to tobacco concealment, especially within Glacis and Laguna Estates. In this respect, the Government has embarked on a programme of placing CCTV cameras in strategic locations within these estates. This scheme is in its initial stages but will develop as the refurbishment works of the estates progress.

95 The Government has also introduced a number of measures to eradicate the sale of tobacco from within these estates. The collector of customs has exercised his discretion in keeping with the Government's declared policy and views on the public interest. This has been applauded by tenants and their respective associations alike.

100 It was very disconcerting, evoking strong feelings of fear and insecurity, witnessing individuals stripping to their undergarments or dismantling their vehicles in order to conceal tobacco. Tenants feared for their safety and that of their children, and rightfully so. These persons on many occasions would challenge anyone who tried to detract them from their activity, at times showing violent or threatening behaviour to those who complained or even challenged them. These estates, Mr Speaker, are now a better place. Furthermore, tobacco can now only be sold at reduced quantities between the hours of 8am and 8pm, 105 and there is an increased presence of both RGP and Customs personnel in what are known as hot spots around Gibraltar and other Government Estates.

At Mid-Harbour's Estate, CCTV cameras have already been installed both in the garage and podium levels in order to curb anti-social behaviour at these locations too.

110 Mr Speaker, in last year's Budget speech I announced the erection of scaffolding to signify the commencement of a massive investment in the external refurbishment of our existing housing stock – housing stock which had been forgotten and neglected for many years.

115 Today, I can proudly announce that the rewards of this investment are becoming increasingly apparent as projects gather momentum. Indeed, my staff and I receive encouraging feedback from tenants of the estates undergoing refurbishment. No-one could possibly deny, irrespective of which side one sits, that this will totally transform Gibraltar. The estates being tackled at the moment will be visible from afar and are the first buildings one sees shortly after crossing the frontier into Gibraltar. The first block to have been unveiled at Laguna Estate, Rodney House, shows the impressive and remarkable change that Gibraltar was crying out for. It was most definitely time for change.

120 The change within these estates will also see the installation of lifts in the vast majority of blocks, which will make life to the many residents so much easier. These works are not simply aesthetic but they will tackle the serious issues that rip right into the fabric of these ageing blocks: water penetration, dampness, lack of ventilation and other symptoms of neglect.

125 Mr Speaker, the rolling programme to refurbish and embellish Government's historically neglected housing estates has also now seen the complete refurbishment of Kingsway House in Alameda Estate, including an upgrade of its lift facilities as commenced by the GSD Government. True to our word, we have respected and continued with these works. The refurbishment of Red Sands House is now well underway and is estimated for completion in October this year. Picton House, Victoria House and Alameda House will successively undergo the same treatment in due course.

130 Mr Speaker, at Laguna Estate the refurbishment of Rodney House, as just mentioned, is only awaiting its lift, which will be fully operational in a few weeks. Smith Dorrien House is at an advanced stage of refurbishment and Mallard House, Forbes House, Landport House, Orillon House and Bayside House are well underway.

A further four blocks – these being Maidstone House, Blackwatch House, Nelson House and Causeway House – are currently in the initial phases. We are on target and we will deliver as promised.

135 At Moorish Castle Estate, Castle House, Ince House and Wall House are in the intermediate phases of refurbishment and the construction of the first monopitch roof is soon to commence at Castle House. Works on Tarik House are also scheduled to commence shortly.

140 Mr Speaker, at Glacis Estate, George Jeger House is already in its intermediate stages. The refurbishment of Referendum House and Constitution House, which includes the provision of individual lockable storage compartments along each communal corridor, is currently in the initial to mid-phase and progressing well.

145 Work has also been carried out at Varyl Begg Estate as part of the continuous embellishment programme. The Ministry for Housing has carried out the refurbishment of the internal courtyards of Alert House, Repulse House, Valiant House and Royal Sovereign House. These consisted of the repairs of spalling concrete to the corridors and staircase slabs, the repainting of all balustrades and letterboxes and the cleaning and re-fixing of the existing gutters.

150 The demolition of the existing access ramps and the construction of new ramps, which complies with all current regulations and disability requirements, are also being undertaken. All existing bin stores have been extensively refurbished and upgraded throughout the estate and are now completely waterproof, tiled, painted and have self-closing and lockable doors.

The pending refurbishment of Varyl Begg Estate includes an upgrade of its surface water drainage systems, road resurfacing and re-paving. Also included is the demolition of inadequate access ramps to be replaced by new disability access ramps constructed to approved specifications. The area will also see the re-painting of its parking bays, which have now worn away.

155 Mr Speaker, not only has this Government concentrated on the projects and commitments announced within its manifesto and in the run-up to the 2011 General Elections, but we have also tackled other building refurbishment projects that have been seen to be in need of works and maintenance.

Other Government housing stock undergoing or scheduled for refurbishment include: St. Joseph's Estate, Anderson House, Sandpits House and New Police Barracks.

160 The external refurbishment of St. Joseph's Estate is now complete. Essential external repairs have been undertaken to St. Joseph's Estate, which includes a much-needed toddlers playground in the area, the re-surfacing of pavers to access walkways to the middle and upper area of the estate, the upper east area parking bays to the estate have also been re-surfaced and the drainage rationalised to prevent ponding.

165 Extensive repairs to retaining walls within the estate have also been undertaken including the rearrangement to the slope angle of the stairs to the common areas. The replacement and re-levelling of the pavers throughout the estate to improve the drainage of surface water has been completed.

This is currently phase one of several refurbishment phases to be undertaken to the estate. Subsequent phases will include extensive repairs to several roofs in order to eliminate the long-standing water penetration problems being experienced by some tenants of the estate.

170 These works are scheduled to commence shortly. Other phases will include the redecoration of the building façade, railings, staircases and extensive repairs to the entrance doors.

Mr Speaker, Bado's Building is now completed.

175 Gibraltar General Construction Company Limited (GGCCL) has been engaged to assist in clearing the historical inherited backlog of external works, pensioners' bath to shower conversions and GHA Occupational Therapy conversions; and I am happy to say that there is a marked improvement in the turnover of works. In this way, it is possible to make allocations allowing people to acquire their much-awaited home sooner.

180 The GGCCL has extended its role to provide further assistance to the Housing Works Agency (HWA) in tackling the most labour-intensive internal repairs. Close co-operation between these two Government entities has seen the secondment of experienced HWA operatives to optimise GGCCL's growing industrial-operations capability.

185 The current Self-Repair Scheme represents a vast improvement over the scheme in operation under the previous administration, in terms of accountability, financial control and service delivery. Whereas before tenants were issued with local purchase orders which could be easily abused – exchanged at suppliers for unrelated items of similar value – the current scheme requires a site visit by a senior Housing Works Agency operative to assess the requirement, type and quantity of materials to be issued. The senior operative also provides professional advice, care and attention throughout.

190 Following the initial assessment, the requisite paperwork is raised to draw the required materials from Housing Works Agency stores and materials are delivered to tenants' homes at a pre-arranged date and time. The paperwork provides an audit trail to verify proper accountability for all materials issued under the Self-Repair Scheme.

195 Indeed, the success of the current Self-Repair Scheme is reflected by increase in demand and the positive feedback received from tenants availing themselves of this service. Government has increased funding substantially this year to satisfy growing tenant-demand. This shows our ongoing commitment to all Government tenants.

200 Mr Speaker, the activities of the Housing Technical Division and those of the Housing Works Agency will, at long last, be amalgamated with the transfer of Housing technical staff and assets to the Housing Works Agency. This will facilitate a seamless flow of activities across the full spectrum of construction disciplines from conceptual, through planning stages to final execution of works. It is envisaged that this merger will create a synergy that overcomes the typical operational barriers that exist between competing organisations to augment the value of services extended to Government tenants.

Mr Speaker, I will now turn to my other areas of responsibility as Minister for Traffic and Technical Services.

205 As part of this Government's projects, a further two car parks were opened in 2014. Firstly, South Pavilion car park, which offered 43 parking spaces on a monthly rental basis. This facility has been greatly welcomed by residents of the area.

210 Without a doubt, the one building that I am proudest about so far – and I say so far because Beach View Terraces could, in my opinion, surpass all expectations – has to be the high quality construction of Eastern Beach car park and its completion in record-breaking time, on 9th June 2014 (Banging on desks) just before the bathing season. Mr Speaker, this is a sign of the times – a sign of a new Government with a new style of working.

215 As most stood in awe and disbelief at how remarkable GJBS had constructed this splendid parking facility in time and on budget, and where absolutely no compromise had been taken on the quality of materials and workmanship. This car park stood, offering a total of 436 parking spaces on three different levels, of which two floors are protected from the unrelenting summer heat.

Users are delighted to be able to find free parking at the beach, mostly out of the scorching sun. Parking will be free during the daytime hours for beachgoers from 8am and 10pm. After this time there will be a charge to ensure that the intention of this car park remains – that is as a beach parking facility and not a long-stay free car park.

220 In the future, the new contactless e-ID card will provide the access key to this parking facility. Parking facilities at Catalan Bay have also been extended onto an area of reclaimed land adjacent to the present car park – allowing for a further 100 parking spaces, bringing the total to 328.

225 Western Beach car park was opened 21st August 2012, providing a total of 109 free parking spaces. A further 78 spaces were gained at the New Air Terminal car park by extending the available space by successfully relocating Air Terminal staff to an alternative parking facility within the confines of the Terminal Building itself.

230 These spaces will operate as Pay & Display during the busy hours when aircraft arrivals and departures place a large demand on parking space. After this time, these very spaces will become free to allow overnight parking for persons wishing to avail themselves of this facility – hence, despite the closure of the old Air Terminal parking facility, a net gain of 70 overnight spaces have been gained in this area.

235 Mr Speaker, turning my attention to traffic now, I would like to report that the new criteria for granting frontier passes to those persons who have a medical condition has been a great success. The assistance of the blue badge Medical Advisory Panel reviewing the medical conditions of frontier pass applicants ensures that the information provided is accurate and up to date. This new Government development secures the integrity of the scheme.

240 Mr Speaker, the introduction of the Motorcycle Compulsory Basic Training Course for riders is now well underway and being delivered in-house by our qualified driving and vehicle examiners. The course structure covering a mix of verbal instruction and practical training is a tremendous success. Feedback from the public at large has been extremely positive.

245 Notwithstanding, as part of Government's initiative to further reduce motorcycle accidents, the Reach for Life campaign will very shortly be introduced. This campaign will offer essential tips to our riders so that they ensure that pillion passengers, especially and specifically small children, sit appropriately on the seat with both feet on adequate and secure footrests.

250 The demand for the issuing of the new photo card driving licences continues to be on the increase, yet the waiting times for the issuing of these driving licences is at an all-time low – around five to six working days. This, combined with an extra business counter being provided in the offices, will ensure an improved service for businesses and the public at large. On the technical side, the Vehicle Licensing Department has also recruited two new vehicle testers, replacing promotion and retirement. This recruitment has reduced the roadworthiness appointments immensely to around nine days.

255 Mr Speaker, notwithstanding the above, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department continues to use information and communication technology as a tool to achieve better customer services. The general public is now able to access a number of online services and applications via the new e-Government portal; to name but a few are: roadworthiness test bookings – the MOT, driving test and theory test bookings. Furthermore, the Department is also working on a service to purchase personalised number plates online.

260 These services will allow people to access and pay for such facilities at any time and from the comfort of their own homes. This comes as a wealth of new market footprint coverage opportunities for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Department that will appropriately cater for market demands and service requirements.

265 As part of Government's initiative to provide personalised support to assist applicants wishing to undertake the new driver certificate of professional competence, initial qualification training provided by the Department is ongoing and continues to be a success. In the past year, 18 drivers have successfully passed the bus licence and eight drivers have successfully passed the lorry licence.

270 Moreover, Government, in an effort to ensure that all directive requirements are met, is continuing to deliver the 35-hour periodic training for existing drivers. 2014 is seeing the delivery of both the bus and lorry CPC.

275 Government is confident that all the outstanding training will be brought up to date by August of this year, shortly before the directives deadline of September 2014.

280 Mr Speaker, the carriage of dangerous goods by road can involve the risk of traffic accidents, taking into account the safety requirements of vehicles transporting dangerous goods and, in accordance with the Transport (Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Road) Regulations 2010, Government has taken the initiative and provided training to a number of the Department's technical staff in order to qualify them for the issue of an authorisation certificate to vehicles carrying dangerous goods within Gibraltar under conditions laid down in these Regulations.

285 Qualified persons from the Vehicle Operators Services Agency in the UK have delivered this course. At present, seven officers have taken and successfully passed the course and are now authorised to issue ADR certificates, the other five officers will be attending the course throughout 2014.

290 Mr Speaker, further to and in keeping with our manifesto commitment, I am satisfied that all the relevant outstanding EEC regulation and amendments have now been transposed. Furthermore, and in anticipation, the Department is now studying future directive proposals in order to expedite their swift 280 implementation as and when the need arises. To this end, I can proudly state that to date the Department has successfully completed all the commitments as set out in our manifesto.

Mr Speaker, as stated in our manifesto, there is a great need to extend and regulate the provision of parking bays for disabled persons in Gibraltar. In this regard, Government is planning on introducing meaningful changes to the blue badge scheme. Part of these changes is to ensure that the badge holder is 285 aware of his/her responsibility in guaranteeing its proper use.

This review has formed part of the Traffic Plan. As stated, Government is always looking for ways in which to improve the blue badge scheme and therefore in consultation with all relevant authorities and associations this system will be looked at on a yearly basis with the initial and first year of operation being based on overall statistics and feedback from users of the scheme.

290 This system will look into the individual use and highlight any misuse of the blue badge permit. Government is confident that the data gathered will suggest whether these changes to the blue badge parking scheme have been a success, in addition to highlighting any need for further improvement.

Furthermore, in an effort to support our citizens with mobility problems, Government is presently looking at increasing the number of disabled bays and also increasing the size of the present parking bays in 295 order to assist and facilitate those persons with severe mobility problems. The number of disabled bays available has increased since December 2011 from 92 to 115.

Mr Speaker, I would now like to turn my attention to Technical Services. During the past financial year, the Technical Services Department has, as is customary, been involved with a number of projects covering a wide range of areas under their defined responsibilities, such as highways maintenance and works to the main sewer, as well as coastal protection and rock fall prevention works and works for other Government 300 entities.

On the coastal works side the main project, which Technical Services has been responsible for delivering over the past year, has been the beach protection and regeneration works at Sandy Bay. Two curved groyne have been constructed on either side of Sandy Bay, joined by an underwater breakwater 305 which has completed, with the last few quantities of rock armour being placed along the central section.

In addition, the regeneration of the beach is now complete through the importation and placing of 55,000 tonnes of sand. The Department has had to overcome a number of challenges to deliver this project, some of which were non-technical in their nature and I give credit to them for the manner in which this has been seen through to completion. Sandy Bay has seen a major transformation arising from the completion 310 of this project and in so doing we have honoured yet another of our manifesto commitments.

Turning now to cliff stabilisation and rock fall protection projects, the Department completed the project to clear the rock fall protection bund at William's Way. This area had suffered a major rock fall and landslide a few years ago and, even though the bund did its job at the time, it required clearance in order to fully restore the retention capacity of this protection measure. This has now been successfully achieved.

315 Assessments and designs for slope stabilisation works above Windmill Hill Road were also completed and works have recently started on this project as part of the Government's on-going cliff stabilisation and rock fall protection programme, which will continue during this financial year.

Mr Speaker, with regards to Highways Maintenance, the works programme has continued apace over the past year with ongoing repairs to roads, footpaths and retaining walls.

320 Resurfacing works have been carried out during the past year to Fountain Ramp and City Mill Lane, as well as the surfacing of a new car park on Devil's Tower Road. The replacement of pelican crossing lights and equipment has been undertaken in a number of locations working jointly with the Gibraltar Electricity Authority and this programme will continue during the coming year. The Department also continues with its ongoing annual programme in liaison with the GHA Occupational Therapy Department and the new 325 Equality Department, with regards to undertaking improvements to our roads, in particular pavements, with a view to making pavements more disability-friendly.

As in previous years, the Department continues to successfully manage road closures and diversions on the public highway, both for its own in-house works and for all other utility companies and contractors, in a manner that balances the need to undertake works against allowing vehicles to circulate. The increased 330 construction activity generated by new projects makes this task ever more difficult. Road closures are avoided during peak times wherever possible, and after hours and weekend work is the default condition imposed on contractors in order to minimise inconvenience to the public.

Mr Speaker, as stated last year, a comprehensive major resurfacing programme has been prepared by the Department, aimed at tackling the under investment in road maintenance over a number of years. Work on 335 the first phase of this programme has already started. This first phase involves the full resurfacing of Rosia Road and Line Wall Road – two of our main roads which have not seen full resurfacing for countless years.

The works will be undertaken at off-peak times and weekends, thus avoiding the traffic disruption that would inevitably ensure should these works be carried out during normal working hours.

340 The second phase of the highways resurfacing programme will include the resurfacing of Queensway from Ragged Staff roundabout up to and including Waterport roundabout, as well as the Sundial and Harbour Views roundabout.

345 This Government has been well aware of the constraints posed by the importation of asphalt via the land frontier and this has been the traditional method used in the past ever since the production of asphalt ceased back in 1990. Hence, this administration was clear that if a highways resurfacing programme was to really work then we would need to revert to local production which would allow us to dictate when resurfacing work took place and not only when it was possible to import. In this way, it is possible to keep traffic disruption to a minimum by working during the quiet hours. Advance notice has been given to utility companies so that all non-emergency works could be carried out prior to the commencement of these works to avoid the re-opening of newly-resurfacing roads.

350 Road users will no doubt be able to feel the difference after so many potholes and uneven surfaces, which we have tolerated but never got used to.

Mr Speaker, true to our manifesto commitment, we were surprised that Dudley Ward Tunnel, which had remained closed for many years since a tragic accident caused by rock falls, had re-opened at a cost to the taxpayer of £10 million, yet certain essential works which would make the tunnel safer were simply ignored.

355 Mr Speaker, I am happy to state that we are now putting these things right. We have worked closely with the essential services to ensure that their needs and general health and safety concerns were addressed. Works have now started in providing a new firefighting main and emergency telephones along the full length of Dudley Ward Way tunnel in line with our manifesto commitments. Mobile phone coverage will also be provided and during the coming year the ventilation requirements will be assessed with a view to improving the current situation as much as possible, working within the constraints imposed by this ex-military tunnel. Yet another manifesto commitment box is in the process of being ticked.

360 Mr Speaker, moving onto sewers, during the past year works to provide flood prevention measures along the southern end of Fish Market Road were successfully completed, as well as the second phase of similar works at Wellington Front. The third and final phase of the Wellington Front project will be completed during this financial year and, once finished, the habitual flooding that affected this area during periods of concentrated heavy rainfall will no longer be a problem.

370 The state of Gibraltar's main sewer and storm water drainage networks remains a matter of great concern for this Government. The lack of investment and neglect in the past of this unseen, yet essential aspect of our infrastructure continues to cause problems, as evidenced by the need to undertake major repairs to a collapsed storm water culvert on Europort Avenue. This has now been completed and the road reopened.

375 Funding is once again being provided this year to continue with the sewers rehabilitation programme started last year. This involved, amongst other works, the de-silting and inspection of the main sewer along Line Wall Road. Arising from this, work will start shortly on the relining of a section of said sewer and this will be progressively extended to other areas.

Funding is once again being provided for the purchase of equipment in order that the operational ability of the Garage and Workshop is enhanced. They will continue to provide a service to maintain the fleet of Government vehicles, including the refuse collection vehicles.

380 Over the past year, the Department has also delivered other projects including the demolition of the old air terminal complex, which was completed, as was the conversion of the magazine located at Ragged staff car park into what will become a transport museum.

385 Mr Speaker, a major project which Technical Services has been instrumental in delivering is the new Commonwealth Park. Even though this is under the remit of the Ministry for the Environment, it has been driven through all its stages by Technical Services in yet another example of inter-ministerial co-operation. Everyone is justifiably proud of what has been achieved in creating this oasis in the centre of our city for the enjoyment of all. (Banging on desks)

390 Mr Speaker, this brings me to a major manifesto commitment under my Ministry, working in conjunction with the Ministries for Public Transport and the Environment, in the form of the delivery of a new Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan for Gibraltar. Work on this project continued throughout the past year with the completion of the data collection stage involving a variety of public surveys ranging from interviews at car parks, on buses and at the roadside right up to individual households throughout all of Gibraltar. Online questionnaires were also available.

395 The data obtained was collated and analysed and then used to create a traffic and transport model for Gibraltar as existing. From this, potential options to bring about changes in the way Gibraltar moves have been developed and assessed. These will form part of the Plan, which the Government will be making public in the near future.

Mr Speaker, as can be seen, Technical Services Department will this coming year continue to deliver on their defined responsibilities maintaining public infrastructure and will continue supporting and providing 400 technical input across the board throughout all relevant Government Ministries and Departments in all manner of projects, large and small, in order to deliver on the Government's extensive and comprehensive programmes.

Mr Speaker, I am fully confident that the Ministries under my responsibility are right on target to fulfil all our commitments as set out in our manifesto and in our pre-election campaign. We are on target, Mr Speaker, and I am confident that we are on target to complete all of them.

Mr Speaker, finally, I would like to conclude my contribution to this budget address by thanking all of my staff who have worked hard to see our dreams and ideas slowly become a reality. Thanks go not only to those who ensure the rolling out of our commitments, my senior members of staff, but also to those who go by unnoticed, who perform the valuable function of assisting at counters, having to put up with difficult situations, carrying out MOT's, repairing our Government fleet of vehicles, repairing and maintaining our housing stock, managing our car parks, maintaining our highways and our sewage infrastructure, to ensure our construction projects progress to schedule, all my technical staff and all office and clerical staff helping to make our essential departments tick.

In particular, I would finally also like to thank my personal ministerial staff for all of their help and support during the past year.

Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Steven Linares.

420 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have been a Member of this House for 14 years. It is a great honour and privilege for me to deliver my third budget speech as the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage, Youth, Utilities, Postal Services, Fire and Rescue Services, Refuse Collection and Civil Contingencies.

I will commence with Culture and Heritage. The House will recall that during my last budget speech and more recently in my contribution during the Second Reading of the repeal of the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency Act in March, I explained the mess that we inherited in relation to the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency. I outlined, amongst other matters, the way in which the previous administration gave wage hikes to people just weeks before the last General Election. (Two Members: Shame!) (Interjections and laughter)

430 I cannot help but mention to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition that when he mentioned the fact that the Culture and Heritage budget had increased this year from £3.8 million to £5 million, which represents a 31.6% increase, he should consider the fact that the forming of the Agency, which was their doing, it cost the taxpayer an increase of 100% – i.e. from £1.9 million to the £3.8 million. (Two Members: Oh! Shame!) It has been a long process to undo the structure that we inherited.

435 I need to say that the Government is conscious of the fact that it was not the fault of those who signed up to work for the Agency, since I would have signed up too. It is the previous Government that must take the (Interjections and laughter) Absolutely – yes, you laugh, of course! (Interjections) Yes. And now I am a Minister and I have inherited that. It is the previous Government that must take the political responsibility for their actions. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

440 So undoing this mess took courage and good will from all parties. I am pleased to say that we will be signing contracts within the next few weeks, which will map out the future for the Culture and Heritage in Gibraltar.

The Heritage Division part of the repealed Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency will be run by Knightsfield Holdings, as it has been for the past 20 years. The Ministry for Heritage will be responsible for other heritage issues. The Government is happy to say that we now have an archaeologist employed in the Ministry to help us with our now well-established heritage filter. I explained this last year.

We will also count on the professional expertise at Knightsfield Holdings, should we require it.

450 Since the heritage filter on Government policy was established and given that the Development and Planning Commission became an open forum, there was a need for an in-house archaeologist to advise us on these matters. On a day-to-day basis the Ministry will also be charged with upholding the issues that will arise after the coming into force of the new Gibraltar Heritage and Antiquities Act. The indications are that this Act will be in our statute books some time this year. We have been working very closely with all stakeholders on this Act and it is very encouraging to see that at last there is light at the end of the tunnel. This is something that the Heritage Trust has been pushing for years before we came into office. They have been fully involved and consulted.

455 The Government's relationship with the Gibraltar Heritage Trust is a positive one. There is plenty of contact between my Ministry and the Trust. I regularly meet with the Chairman and the CEO and they know that my doors are always open for them.

460 We have been able to work closely on many projects. These include: Hardings Battery, the Giralda Gardens, Grand Battery and many others. The Gibraltar Heritage Trust can now also boast new modern, state of the art offices and retail premises in the centre of town. The Main Guard has been restored with the contractor working very closely with the Trust throughout. I am happy to say that their new premises have been able to successfully blend the old with the new.

Our manifesto states:

‘HERITAGE TRUST

We will re-establish a relationship and co-operation between the Heritage Trust and the Government. We will not seek to interfere in the business of the Trust at all.’

465 We have delivered on this promise.

The restoration of a number of other sites have also taken place during the last financial year. These include: parts of the Charles V Wall; the bunker at Eastern Beach, which is being put into good use by the Blue Fin Club; the ARP Shelter opposite the Museum, which was totally abandoned. This Second World War Shelter had debris inside from when the King’s Bastion Leisure Centre was constructed. Little or no regard was had at the time of the heritage value of this particular place. It has already been refurbished.

470 The Montagu Bastion Chambers on Line Wall Road is yet another place of historical interest which was abandoned. Many people were not even aware that it existed. By liaising closely with the Trust we have been able to not only restore this beautiful place but also to house in it the Gibraltar’s Exhibition of Modern Art (GEMA). (Banging on desks) It is currently holding the Little Constellation project.

475 Another project which has already started is that of Wellington Front. It is yet another of our manifesto commitments that is well on its way. Wellington Front will be restored to its original glory. All outhouses that were constructed after the original period will be knocked down. Some of the Second World War features will remain. Work on its historical problem, which was flooding of the area, has now been completed. All the area will be beautified and the vaults will house some clubs, scouts premises, and other leisure amenities.

480 Our Manifesto stated:

‘WELLINGTON FRONT

Wellington Front needs to be entirely refurbished in order to make the most of the City Walls and provide premises for clubs and societies that need to be centrally located. This will also involve having to deal with the problems of flooding in very wet weather.’

We are on the way to delivering this promise.

The Northern Defences was put out to the public for expressions of interest. These have now been gathered and the Government is in the process of looking into the possibilities that this site can offer. 485 Needless to say that the heritage value of this whole site will be taken into consideration together with its commercial potential as a tourist and leisure area.

As is now known, my offices have moved to the City Hall. This iconic building which housed the housing department is yet another building which had been left to deteriorate. It will now be restored.

490 The fact that my offices are now there is in line with our commitment to heritage and fulfils a manifesto commitment which states:

‘CITY HALL

We will move the housing department out of the City Hall and into purpose built offices. The City Hall will then be exclusively used for cultural and historical events.’

We have delivered on this promise.

The bid for the UNESCO World Heritage Status will be an important area of action during this financial year. The nomination will be put forward in January 2015 and the process of inspection and evaluation will follow.

495 We are currently engaged in the process of preparation of the nomination dossier, management plan and accompanying documentation. The House will be aware that the nomination will be put forward on our behalf by Her Majesty’s Government in the UK. We are in close contact as partners in this bid.

500 UK advisers have been out to Gibraltar and form part of a Steering Committee, which we set up last year. The Steering Committee is made up of members of the Government Departments and other stakeholders, including the MoD, GONHS and the Gibraltar Heritage Trust. It meets quarterly to evaluate progress with the bid – the next meeting being this Thursday, tomorrow.

505 I should first tell the House that Government, following the recommendation of the Steering Committee, and taking into account comments made by the UK Technical Evaluation Panel, agreed earlier this year to an extension of the site’s boundaries. The site to be nominated now includes the cliffs above Gorham’s Cave, right up to the peak at O’Hara’s Battery, and the Catalan Bay Sand Dune. Put together, this area represents an exceptional landscape, which has survived since the time of the Neanderthals.

We are working on stabilisation of the cliff area directly above Gorham's Cave to ensure the safety of persons working in the caves. We are removing all metal and other rubbish, which has accumulated on the beach as a result of winter storms, and the old scaffolding has been removed and will be replaced. The steps leading down to the site are being repaired.

510 There are caves along this path, which have been vandalised over the years and we will be undertaking works to remove graffiti. I sincerely hope that the importance of these caves comes to be appreciated by all.

It will be possible to view other areas of the site from various vantage points on Sir Herbert Miles Road. It is not intended to open Gorham's or Vanguard Caves to a large number of visitors. These caves are too sensitive and would be adversely affected. However, the Government will consider limited viewing by small groups with guides.

515 In addition to this, the plan is to provide viewing platforms at the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Europa Advance Batteries, so that visitors to Gibraltar can enjoy the sites without causing damage. Similar arrangements are in place in a number of existing World Heritage Sites. It is also part of our strategy to encourage tourist visits to the site by boat. The best view of the site is from the sea and it is from here that it is best understood. We will offer the possibility of small groups landing to see Gorham's Cave with professional guides.

520 During the course of this financial year we will be opening Parson's Lodge as an interpretation centre. Here we will offer interpretation for tourists who can then visit the caves either by road to the Europa Advance Batteries or by boat from a future refurbished Rosia Pier.

In addition to the Neanderthal story, Parson's Lodge will tell the story of the relationship of people and the limestone of the Rock – from caves to tunnels and batteries. This financial year will see a number of projects to restore and bring to life other sites and areas of historical and heritage interest. We will be announcing these, as and when they are completed.

530 A new company has been formed by former employees of the Agency. Gibraltar Cultural Services (GCS) is based on the same principles as the Environmental Agency Ltd and Land Property Services Ltd. They will be able to organise and maintain cultural services.

Properties such as the Ince's Hall Theatre, Gustavo Bacarissas Galleries at Casemates, Central Hall, the Fine Arts Gallery, the John Mackintosh Hall Complex including the theatre, committee rooms, etc, the Mackintosh Hall Library, Casemates Square, The Mount for bookings only at this stage, and changing room vaults at Casemates will now be under the auspices of this company. They will also be responsible for the administration of a number of committees, for the management of the art collections, and for the management of the premises held by clubs and associations.

540 GCS have been and will be running, supervising and monitoring the events which have traditionally been in our social and cultural calendar. These include: the New Year Celebrations & Fireworks; Young Artists Art Competition & Exhibition; Drama Festival, in which we now have international groups participating; Logo Competition for the Spring Festival; Short Story Competition; Spring Art Competition & Exhibition; the Miss Gibraltar Pageant; Spring Festival, which now extends to eight weeks; Zarzuelas which are now four; Book Crossing Days – maximum of three; Summer Nights increased from six to eight or even ten weeks; supporting the SDGG in all celebrations to do with National Day and week; National Week Classical Concert, which will be reintroduced this coming year; the International Art Competition & Exhibition; Poetry Competition; Autumn Cultural Programme; Saturdays Arts & Crafts market at Casemates.

545 They will also be responsible for the Calentita night and fireworks. The House will know that the date of these events was changed to a Saturday, so that our Jewish community could also take part. The event was improved even further this year. It was extended into Market Place, where a long table and benches were introduced and even marquees were put, for the first time. The Government has received very positive feedback on the Calentita night.

All the above improvements to events fulfil the manifesto commitments which states:

‘CALENTITA

We will maintain and improve community events such as Calentita, which are already taking place.’

555 Once again the Government has delivered.

GCS has during this time of change been involved in many new and exciting events and projects. The Little Constellation project is proving a very useful forum with which to foster cultural links with other nations. The Ministry of Culture is fully participating in this event, which comprises other comparatively small countries, such as Andorra, Cyprus, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Malta, Monaco, Montenegro and San Marino. It also includes European geo-cultural micro-areas, including Canton Ticino from Switzerland, Kaliningrad from Russia, Åland Islands, Faroe Islands, Jersey, Guernsey and Gibraltar.

560 The project is based on an intensive dialogue between these two identities through the privileged eyes of contemporary art practice, by the Little Constellation Network. This is an international network of 565 contemporary art – based in San Marino – which aims to organize and promote projects with a specific focus on current artistic research activity in these small states of Europe. It networks with all these countries to find out how Modern Art is influenced by their size.

‘Listening to the Sirens’, which is the current project underway in Gibraltar, is of a cultural dialogue between two territories – San Marino and Gibraltar – that share a common path of research and interest in contemporary visual culture. The Exhibition is currently open at Montagu Bastion, which I said before, will 570 now house the Gibraltar Exhibition of Modern Art (GEMA).

The GCS has also been involved in a number of other events such as: this year’s Holocaust Memorial Day; the Queen’s Baton Relay in May, together with the Gibraltar Commonwealth Committee; the Literary Festival, working closely with the Gibraltar Tourist Board that leads on the event. Through the good offices of members of the Gibraltar Tourist Board and the GCS, it is now possible for local artists to participate in 575 the Royal Academy Cultural Exchange that has seen local artists enter into competition for participation at the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition 2014; participation by local artists at the Biennial of the Young Artists from Europe and the Mediterranean – Mediterranea 16 – Summer 2013; Organising Festival of Lights, which will now include the switching on of the Christmas Lights, that will now become an annual event. The GCS will also be charged with supporting the Cavalcade Committee for this January event;
580 organising the Small Business Saturdays in December as they did in 2013, in conjunction with the Ministry for Tourism.

In all these events we strive to emphasise the environmental awareness and more importantly to make all these events inclusive to all our community. Very recently the Government was gifted by the MoD the entire content of the HMS Rooke Library. Soon these books will form part of the John Mackintosh Hall collection. I would like to thank the MoD for this and I am sure that it will definitely add more value to the already vast collection at the John Mackintosh Hall. We would also like to thank the John Mackintosh Hall Trust who have funded books which students at GCSE, AS and A2 levels can use. This has been achieved by working closely with the Department of Education who were able to advise on the books that were required.

There has been a vast improvement in the facilities at the John Mackintosh Hall over the past couple of years. All the changing rooms and dressing areas for the theatre have been refurbished. All the committee rooms have been transformed into bright, pleasant areas with the state of the art equipment. The Charles Hunt Room is used to hold meetings of the DPC in public. It is also used by others as a conference room. The reception area has been painted and new furniture has been purchased. All the wooden and metal balustrades have been restored and painted.

The John Macintosh Hall celebrated its 50th anniversary this year. It is therefore very fitting that all these refurbishments have been carried out at this time.

Mr Speaker, an exhibition took place in April to celebrate this occasion. During this financial year we intend to continue to improve and maintain the John Mackintosh Hall. There is in the estimates, waiting for the approval of the House, an amount specifically for purchasing artwork. The Government was recently able to acquire six artworks by Gustavo Bacarisa, which will now form part of its collection.

The Garrison Library has also been able to develop. The staff there have been able to secure a project called ‘Bordering on Britishness. What it means to be a Gibraltarian’. They have been able to help in the organisation of many cultural and political events. Events such as the Literary Festival and the meetings of the Foreign Affairs Committee. They are further involved in the digitisation of documents.
605

Mr Speaker, the reforms and changes that have been made were carried out in full consultation with the employees. At all times, we have been able to work together to unravel the great mess that was the Gibraltar Culture and Heritage Agency. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) I wish to wholeheartedly thank all those at GCS, Knightsfields Holding Ltd and the Garrison Library for having engaged on this matter in such a positive manner.
610

Moving on, Mr Speaker, to events which are being organised by the Ministry for Culture. It can be seen that our commitment to have an annual mega-concert is well and truly fulfilled. This will be the third year in which the Ministry will be involved in organising of what is easily the biggest event of our music calendar. The Gibraltar Music Festival is attracting many top international artists to Gibraltar. (Interjections) I can take it, it is okay. It is just that they do not like what they are listening to, it is okay. Never mind!
615

The brand name of the Gibraltar Music Festival is attracting international attention. This year we have a line-up which is second to none: The Script; Rita Ora; John Newman; Tony Hadley, from the very well-known Spandau Ballet; James Arthur; Roger Hodgson, from the famous band Supertramp; Clean Bandit; Maxi Priest – a legend in the world of music; plus our very own Adrian Pizzarello, Headwires, Georgia Thursting, and Orfila. The Festival will run as it did last year from 12.00 midday to approximately 12.00 midnight and it is geared for all ages. This year again children under the age of 13 will be able to go free, when accompanied by their parents.

625 The Gibraltar Jazz Festival, which continues to attract people to Gibraltar, will now also go into its third year. Last year we saw the Blues and TV Jazz star, Jules Holland and his band perform in the Queen's Cinema. This year the production team is working to have a great line-up, which will be announced soon.

630 Mr Speaker, another event which is attracting a lot of interest abroad is that of the Gibraltar World Music Festival. This is a festival that exposes music from around the world. This year the Festival's theme was Chindia. The festival saw musicians from Japan and China, who played eastern music with traditional instruments from the east, from Israel with musicians playing percussion instruments, and from the UK, which had a fusion of Hindi and modern music. This Festival attracted interest from abroad and I would say that more than half of the audience that filled the Cave came specifically to Gibraltar to see this show. It also exposes the multi-cultural aspect to Gibraltar, of which we are so proud.

635 All the above and all the sport events which I will mention later are in line with the policy of the Government of Events-Led Tourism.

We have been able to work closely with the Gibraltar Tourist Board so that these events are marketed abroad with the GTB network. We also use social media websites and other marketing tools to be able to announce these events in order to attract people to Gibraltar. So the above fulfils the following manifesto commitment:

'JAZZ FESTIVAL

We will promote a jazz festival in which the Government will sponsor an international act. This will also help to showcase more widely the great talent already available in Gibraltar in this field. The Gibraltar Jazz Festival will be part of the Spring or Summer Events. The first festival will begin in 2012. This will be in addition to the mega concert we will organise each year.'

640 The only innovation to the manifesto is that we have decided, with the jazz fraternity, that the best time of the year for this festival is in the autumn.

'MEGA CONCERT

As we committed ourselves to doing in the last elections, a GSLP Liberal Government will sponsor an annual music Festival for our youth. The concert will be promoted internationally and will count with the use of Government facilities as well as financial backing.'

Again, Mr Speaker, we have delivered on our commitment.

Mr Speaker, I move on now to my responsibilities for Sports and Leisure.

645 As Minister for Sport and Leisure and Chairman of the GSLA, it gives me great pleasure to see more and more people taking part in sporting activities. The reason could well be the success of the GFA in obtaining membership of UEFA. This seems to have spilt over into other sports to encourage greater participation.

650 Children are starting to get interested in sport at a younger age. It is incredible to see that in a population of 30,000, we have registered 40 sports: 22 of these are internationally recognised in one way or another and there are approximately 8,300 sportsmen and women registered in all sports associations. This represents close to 30% of the population involved in sports.

655 These figures do not include those who practise sport but are not registered under a specific association. For example, it does not cover those who do Batuka, Zumba, attend fitness classes, etc. For this reason, facilities need to be adequate and maintained in a fit and proper state for our participants not only to enjoy their chosen sport, but to be in a position to excel in it.

The fact that participation levels have increased and that standards are rising has increased the demand on the Ministry of Sport and on the GSLA. For this we need to move the GSLA, as an authority and institution, to another level.

660 In relation to facilities, Mr Speaker, I am pleased to say that we have been able to refurbish many parts of the Bayside Sports Complex, which were in desperate need of repair. The Old Victoria Sports Hall has seen a transformation. The Hall has seen the refurbishment of all changing rooms and toilet facilities. The corridor areas have all been painted and the Hall has had all the roof girders and walls refurbished and painted.

665 All the hot water that serves the changing rooms at the Tercentenary Hall is now heated via solar panels. A monitor at the entrance to the Hall shows the amount that we are saving on electricity by using this system. The aim is to extend this to the whole complex.

The main pitch and pitch No. 2 have been resurfaced with a new FIFA Two Star astro-turf pitch. This astro-turf is also valid for International Rugby matches and we have been able to see a number of them already.

670 The lighting system has been upgraded which has seen an increase in Lux from 200 to 1,200 which means that it now complies with the proper standard to have events televised. Some of the old turf has been recycled to the 5-a-side areas at the complex. The three Padel Tennis Courts have been resurfaced. The boathouse area and the slipway is now being used by the Jet-skiing Association. Jet-skiers can now place their jet-skis in this area and use the slipway without affecting the day to day running of the complex.

675 Mr Speaker, during this financial year, we will see a number of other facilities within the Bayside Complex, which will be built and/or refurbished. This includes the stay and play area. Offices will be built below the hockey stands, and new build within the area where the staff car park is now located. This will include changing rooms for officials, press conference rooms, media rooms, VIP and new bar areas. The bar facilities will be changed to a proper built cafeteria, sports bar area will be located at the entrance to the 680 Tercentenary Hall. This will replace the existing bar which is called 'El Murga'.

The hockey lights that I mentioned last year have already arrived and will be in place during the summer. We have now been able to work with the Education Department in order for the allocation of schools for community use to be extended beyond 31st May and we will also soon be able to make these facilities available during the summer.

685 The skate park, which was situated in Landport, has also been relocated in the car park by the east entrance to the stadium. We have been able to rearrange the whole area in order to provide bar facilities and more parking.

The GASA swimming pool, as I said last year, has been transferred to the GSLA. It has been transformed to the extent that it is unrecognisable. It was a complete mess. There was, for example, no air treatment system and this was affecting the health of users. There were broken tiles in the changing rooms and main spectator areas. There was no disabled access to the spectator stands, to highlight only but a few of the problems.

690 Mr Speaker, I am pleased to announce that we have completely refurbished the whole building. We have re-designed and improved the changing rooms for all. We have provided a new accessible toilet. We have built new offices for the staff and for GASA. We have increased the space available for participants by the poolside by building an extension to the pool to accommodate swimmers in competition.

And more importantly, Mr Speaker, the pool is now an example of how we can use sustainable energy and make vast savings in order to maintain the operation of all systems in the pool. Mr Speaker, we have placed solar panels on the roof and installed a system that now powers and controls the temperature of the water in the pool, heats the water for the showers in the changing rooms, and powers the air treatment, pumps and filter system.

700 The system is also producing more electricity than it needs for all this and we are therefore going to extend it to the other pool. The savings are considerable. As an example, the GSLA had to spend an average of £2,500 per month on diesel to power the filter and the pump system and now we spend zero. (Banging on desks) Zero.

705 Currently, we have been making savings to the tune of £104,000. A projection of the savings was done before the system was put in place and it was envisaged that the investment made would be paid for within five years. It is working so efficiently that now this investment will be paid for in half that time, i.e. in two and a half years.

710 So not only have we got all these systems running for the pool, which was badly needed, but we are making savings of approximately 85% of the running cost of keeping the pool. During this financial year we will continue to improve on other facilities within this complex, namely the senior citizens pool next door.

Mr Speaker, we had a manifesto commitment that stated:

'MID-HARBOUR BATHING

We will explore locating a bathing platform in front of the Mid-Harbour Estate so that people can swim.'

715 After exploring this possibility and having had more professional advice about the location, the Government decided that the best place for this was the Bathing Pavilion next to the GSLA pools. Mr Speaker, it is with great pride that I can announce that the Gibraltar Bathing Pavilion is near completion. My Ministry have led on this project, which will be handed over to the Tourist Board for them to run in the same way as the beaches, once it is complete. (Banging on desks) I am also very grateful to the Project
720 Manager, Mr Chris Riddell.

The general public will be able to enjoy swimming and leisure facilities second to none in a short period of time. A floating solution has been constructed which includes two 25-metre swimming pools, two toddlers' accessible pools, recreation areas, outdoor bar, lifeguard and first-aid posts, exercise areas, restrooms, showers, and dressing rooms. and a number of other facilities which will make up the Bathing Pavilion. All the above accessible to all. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

725 Mr Speaker, on another matter, the House knows that the GSLA have been involved in constructing and maintaining of all parks in Gibraltar. New parks and play areas have been constructed at Catalan Bay, Schomberg Estate and Vineyards Estate. The construction of the Catalan Bay Park fulfils a manifesto commitment which states:

‘CATALAN BAY – THE PARK

A children’s park has been provided but in a relatively unsafe area which is difficult to access with prams. We will re-provide it in a safer area in consultation with the residents.’

730 A number of meetings took place on site with residents in order to ascertain their needs and now the new park is ready.

In this year’s estimates, we have allocated funds to complete the manifesto commitment in relation to Catalan Bay which states:

‘CATALAN BAY – STREET LIGHTS

We will ensure that all areas in the Village are well lit – in particular the areas giving access to the Caleta Hotel.’

735 Mr Speaker, the GSLA has also refurbished a number of parks and ball playing areas in: Laguna Estate; Edinburgh Estate; Europa Point; Varyl Begg Estate; Chilton Court; and the Park opposite the Trinity Cathedral. The refurbishment of this last park is yet another manifesto commitment that states:

‘DUKE OF KENT HOUSE PARK

We will maintain and upgrade the park and playgrounds in the square opposite the Duke of Kent House.’

Mr Speaker, fulfilled.

740 A number of other playgrounds are currently being refurbished and/or are under construction – I see that the hon. Member is getting fed up, it is too much he cannot take it, you see! – Sir William Jackson Grove; Harbour Views; Waterport Terraces. This is a manifesto commitment, which is ongoing.

We can now say that we have a team of three workers who are specifically charged with the maintenance of the Parks. They have been provided with workshops, vehicle, tools and resources to allow them to go around the parks and tackle issues of general maintenance.

Mr Speaker, our manifesto states:

‘CHILDREN’S PARKS

The children’s parks have only been upgraded in an election year, before they were neglected. They have cost a massive amount of money. They must be looked after. We will ensure that existing children’s parks are properly maintained and refurbished as necessary to encourage that the investment made using public money endures as much as possible.’

745 There are more manifesto commitments in the field of sports and leisure that have been fulfilled and are ongoing. These are: Elite Athlete Assistance; Sports Injury Clinic. It will be seen in the estimates that on page 188, Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, Appendix J, Payments (28), an amount has been earmarked for both these items. These items have also been discussed in the Gibraltar Sports Advisory Council (GSAC) on a number of occasions. The GSAC are in the process of defining who is an Elite Athlete in each sport, since they all differ from each other.

750 Further we are currently working with stakeholders in order to see the best way in which we can have sportsmen and women tackle injuries in a way in which they can return as quickly as possible to continue practising their sport.

755 Assistance for Non-Recognised Sports: this is an ongoing item, which I can say we are currently engaged in delivering. The sports concerned know that they have our full backing to be able to achieve their goals by being recognised internationally. Our staff at the GSLA is there to help them by advising them on how to establish themselves in a manner which will be acceptable to the international organisation they would like to join.

760 Paint Balling Park: the paint ball park is ready and this amenity will be included as part of the sports summer programme. We are also awaiting for the paint balling fraternity to organise how they will run it. It will enable them to organise competitions and at the same time will allow the public to participate in this leisure activity.

765 Chess: we will continue to support the chess tournament, which is a great event, as we promised in our manifesto, and further we have been able to support the local chess association as and when they have needed our help. The Gibraltar Chess Open has become the biggest open chess tournament in the world. It has been recognised as the best organised tournament in the world. HM Government will continue to support this event. We have also had the opportunity to support the 3rd Junior International Tournament, which is held in August here in Gibraltar. I would like to thank the organisers and the sponsors for the way in which they have developed and supported this tournament.

770 Mr Speaker, works are well under way to relocate the Pistol Shooting from its present location to the area of the Retrenchment Block. The GSLA are involved in the sponsoring and the facilitating of events, such as the Wildcats British Championships, Backgammon International Tournament and Ten Pin Bowling Mediterranean Challenge Cup. The Gibraltar Darts Trophy is an event which is organised by the Ministry for Sports.

775 When analysing the value of organising and sponsoring these events, it is important to understand, what are the benefits to our economy? In doing this analysis which has been done using all sporting events and the well-tested formula of expenditure by tourism, we see that over 15,000 bed nights have been sold. Multiplied by an average of £100 minimum per bed night, it means £1.5 million a year which the economy benefits. These figures are not inclusive of all other events such as the Gibraltar Music Festival, the Jazz 780 Festival, the World Music Festival, the Literary Festival and others.

Mr Speaker, the deficit of the King's Bastion Leisure Centre continues, but I am happy to say that we have been able to reduce this from the levels it reached under the previous administration. This has been achieved by terminating the contract that the previous administration gave to King's Bowls. This was an OPEX + contract. It meant that the company running the ten-pin bowling facilities would do so by having 785 all its costs paid for and on top of that a 30% mark-up was added on. So we had a situation where the more the company spent on costs, the more they would earn in profits!

We have been able to terminate the contract and we have awarded it to the company running the catering in the centre, but this time with the cost greatly reduced and no 30% mark-up on costs. Further, we have been able to reduce by half the amount that used to be paid to the GSLA for the running of the centre.
790 The centre will soon be run by the people who are currently managing it. We are hoping that during this current financial year, we will be able to reduce the costs of the centre and at the same time provide an even better service to the general public.

Before I end my contribution in relation to the sports, I would like to acknowledge the good work that has been done by the retiring CEO of the GSLA, Mr Joe Hernandez. (Applause and banging on desks) He has been active in this field of work for over 25 years. He was involved with sports within the Government first and then in the GSLA. He has been a civil servant for nearly 38 years. Thank you, Joe.

In the past year, the whole of the Gibraltar Youth Service has undergone a number of significant changes, more noticeably within its structure and staffing arrangements. The administration role of the Gibraltar Youth Service has moved to the main offices of the Ministry for Culture where the staff continues 800 to provide support for the Youth Service.

Through this support the burden on youth workers of having to do administrative work is greatly reduced, which means that they can now concentrate on producing and running programmes for our young people. The management and total complement of the youth workers in the service has increased and has been restructured. What was the Team Leader's post is now that of a Principal Youth Officer. The posts of 805 two Senior Youth Officers to assist the Principal Youth Officer have been created and the complement of Youth Officers has increased from four to five.

Therefore in total we have moved from having one team leader and four youth workers to eight in total to concentrate and direct youth work. This has fulfilled numerous recommendations from the Gibraltar Youth Service Review of 2008, which has never been tackled by the administration of the Members 810 opposite.

Recommendation 11 of that Report states:

*'The Service should consider its staffing requirements and structure with the aim of
a) making the post of the Senior Worker more manageable, reducing the post holder's operational responsibilities to enable more strategic development*

– i.e. the reforms of the administration –

'b) allowing management responsibility to be delegated to full time youth workers, consistent with their current grades'

– i.e. creating the two senior youth and community post workers –

'c) increasing the part time paid establishment, with staff on appropriate permanent contracts to be negotiated, as the most cost effective way of increasing the direct delivery of youth work.'

– i.e. increasing the complement with the permanent youth workers to do this.

Recommendation 12 of the Report that they never put into place, Mr Speaker, read as follows:

'Up-to-date job descriptions should be provided for all posts in the service.'

By renaming and creating the posts the job descriptions have been re-evaluated and they are now clear 815 as to the role they are to fulfil.

Mr Speaker, the interviews for four new Youth and Community Workers have already taken place and the ones selected are in the process of joining our team soon.

820 In relation to material resources, I am happy to tell the House that the Youth Centre has undergone some significant refurbishment and now, in addition to its new front entrance which is now visible from Line Wall Road, it boasts a new kitchen, complete paint redecoration and it also offers a separate project/resource room.

The Laguna Youth Club has received a new air-conditioning system. The Plater Youth Club has received a fresh coat of paint. This year more funds have been made available to continue the refurbishment programme.

825 Since 18th January this year the Youth Centre has been opening during the weekends. The Youth Service is analysing this initiative to see how this is working with a view to opening all other youth clubs. This fulfils another manifesto commitment as follows:

‘YOUTH CLUBS

Resources will be made available for.... youth clubs to open at weekends.’

830 Mr Speaker, I am pleased that the Principal Youth Officer has also met with the newly established Unite the Union Youth Section. During the year 2013-14, the Gibraltar Youth Service has offered young people a wide variety of personal development opportunities and fun activities. These include: a film project; an Easter project; a Spring fun-day at the Plater Youth Club; Aquapark/Tivoli trips; Clean Up the World; Isla Mágica; Halloween events; cycling marathons to raise money for GBC open day; residential weekends, which was the Plater Youth Club and Youth Centre organised a ‘feel good’ residential weekend that took place at the Retreat Centre; Christmas and Cavalcade events; trips to Sierra Nevada.

835 Mr Speaker, the Youth Service team has been very committed to continue operating the four youth clubs. In addition to normal club opening hours, the team has also worked closely together to offer young people the opportunity to take part in new community projects with outside organisations. These include the Luce Foundation project; the PSHE... and Personal Support with both Bayside and Westside Comprehensive Schools and the College of FE; Social Services training programmes; safeguarding children; working close with the Royal Gibraltar Police neighbourhood policing units in the areas of the four youth clubs.

All four youth clubs combined resources under the Youth Service in order to provide a trip to Aventura Amazonia in Marbella during May and the Luce Foundation Summer Camp took place at the beginning of June.

845 The Youth Exchange project for a partner group from Wales is to take place this month in July and the Youth Service is supporting the Cheshire Homes flag day this coming weekend. A group of young people also took part in a Heritage Trust project to plant trees in the Upper Rock in March 2014.

It is obviously clear, from all that has been done above, that our manifesto commitment has been fulfilled. This reads as follows:

‘THE YOUTH SERVICE

We will work with the Youth Service and Youth Workers to provide better facilities and more frequent events at Youth Clubs – where the work being done keeps young people out of trouble.’

850 Despite the fact that we have fulfilled our manifesto commitment, the Youth Service will continue to develop to deliver quality programmes for young people and more importantly programmes that they... identified with. For this reason the Youth Advisory Council will be re-established as from September and a new Active Citizenship programme is currently being planned, starting in the autumn of this year.

855 As the hon. Members can see, the Youth Service is an extremely busy organisation and it has provided a wide range of activities for our young people. With the new Youth and Community Workers in post in a few weeks’ time, we hope to continue our success and look forward to an even busier and promising year ahead.

860 Mr Speaker, I now move on to my responsibility as Minister for Utilities. I will start with electricity. The House will recall that the GSD had made arrangements to build a Power Station at Lathbury Barracks with a company called ETDE. ETDE was in a Joint Venture with Volker Stevin. The station was to cost approximately £126 million and was to be fuelled by diesel. This project would have made us rely on diesel for the next 30 years.

865 The price of diesel is increasing by the day. It would have meant that electricity bills which are currently subsidised by the Government to an average of 40% would have had to be increased by 5% to the consumer each year for 20 years. This would have been unsustainable. Talk about prudent management of taxpayers’ money!

On top of that, as the House knows, diesel is far from environmentally friendly. These are some of the untold truths before the general election. The power station planned by the Members opposite did not go 870 through the planning process. (Interjection) It was not subjected to press or public scrutiny. Anda! Pa'lante!

(Laughter and banging on desks) Indeed, consumers were not even told about the increase to them in the cost of electricity. The then GSD Government kept this a secret. Yes – pa'lante! (Laughter and interjections)

875 Even if this contract had gone ahead, Mr Speaker, the GSD's power station would not have been fully functional even today. (Interjection) Generating capacity would have been diminished. It is true – absolutely true! Mr Speaker, he is now saying that what I am saying is not true! It is true, because of the time that it would have taken to have done the Lathbury Barracks, you see. Therefore, today, there would not have been the power station functioning. True. It was untrue. And all the untruths that the Hon.
Member's side did not say during the general election – that is the untruths.

880 A Member: The Big Lie.

Hon. S E Linares: Generating capacity would have been diminished after the fire at Waterport Power Station. There would have been a real possibility that areas would have been cut off for certain times during the day on a permanent basis until the power station was complete. It is for this reason that we took the 885 decision to bring in the turbines and more recently the new skid generators. Now we have 55.8 MW installed and 40.8 MW available at any given time which is enough capacity. I know that the hon. Members are getting jittery about all these truths that we are saying.

890 Several Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. D A Feetham: Would the hon. Member give way? Hadn't we better take your speech as having been read already?

895 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): That is so disrespectful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I was working – for the hon. Member to know – (Interjections) since he has made the allegation that somebody must have prepared this for me –

900 Hon. D A Feetham: I have not said that, Mr Speaker.

Hon. S E Linares: Implying. And therefore –

Mr Speaker: Will the Hon. Minister... do not give any credence to that remark and just carry on.

905 Several Members: Hear, hear! (Banging on desks)

Hon. S E Linares: Thank you, Mr Speaker, for acknowledging that it was – 910 Mr Speaker: You should not take any remark into account. As if, nothing had been said. Just carry on.

Hon. D A Feetham: Because I did not make the remark.

Mr Speaker: No, right, fine. (Interjection and laughter)

915 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, as the Chief Minister announced on Monday, the contract for the construction of the new power station has now been awarded to Bouygues Energies & Services. The cost of the contract will be £67,958,000 to construct an 81 MW power station in the North Mole Road after the completion of the competitive tender process.

920 The power station will house six MAN engines – 'MAN' is the make, Mr Speaker – half of which will be gas only and three other MAN engines will be dual fired. This will include best available technology to deliver the more resilient and secure electricity generation supply in Gibraltar. The company has awarded the power station contract to the parent company of ETDE.

925 ETDE was the company who, in a joint venture with Volker Stevin, was awarded the construction of the power station at Lathbury Barracks. The power station at Lathbury Barracks would have supplied 65 megawatts of power and would have been, as I mentioned above, single fuelled, diesel only. This award not only provides Gibraltar with approximately 30% more installed generating capacity but it is also almost half the price than Gibraltar would have paid if the Lathbury power station would have been constructed using the same company.

930 So not only are we paying half the price with more capacity, but the new power station will operate using natural gas, with diesel as a back-up. The use of natural gas as the main fuel reduces air-borne emissions considerably and it also costs about a third of the price of what diesel currently costs. This makes this option a win-win for Gibraltar in financial, technical and environmental terms.

935 Mr Speaker, an additional incentive which we are considering is the fact that we could, for a further £8.5 million, incorporate a heat recovery system which would produce more electricity or even produce water at no cost in consumption.

Water: continuing with Utilities and therefore as Chairman of AquaGib, I can report that the company has been able to maintain and improve all levels of services. A total of £11.3 million has been undertaken to ensure that infrastructure for the provision of potable and seawater supply and sewage is maintained to customers.

940 The RO plants producing the water are also maintained despite the fact that the cost in electricity consumption is exorbitant. I will go on to explain a little on this later. The service to clients is now greatly enhanced by the creation of a website. Now customers can pay their bills and make applications for the supply of water online. This is another part of the e-Government initiative, which has been taken on by AquaGib and which was launched during this financial year. In addition to the recurrent expenditure, 945 AquaGib has continued to invest on capital projects as part of its assets replacement plan.

This aimed at maintaining and improving the water infrastructure assets as provided for in their contract with HMGoG. During this period a total of £598,000 was spent on capital projects. This has included two major projects to extend the AquaGib potable and seawater networks to areas of Gibraltar, which had previously been supplied by the Ministry of Defence's water distribution system. The fact that the MoD 950 was responsible for the infrastructure and the customer was AquaGib has been a problem that has existed for many years and has never been tackled.

There were many customers who were within the MoD infrastructure but who complained to AquaGib when they had a problem which could not be solved in a timely manner. The successful completion of the projects has enabled AquaGib to have a full control of and provide increased levels of service to customers 955 in these areas. The two projects of this nature include the building of a new potable water pumping station located within the Waterworks, and a new pumping main from that station to AquaGib Middle Hill Potable Water Service Tank. This has enabled AquaGib to provide its own potable water supply to customers in the Middle Hill area of the Upper Rock.

The other has been the extension of AquaGib potable and seawater mains from the junction of Middle Hill Road to Europa Road/Lighthouse area. This has enabled AquaGib to provide its own potable and seawater supply to customers in these areas.

960 Mr Speaker, I am pleased that in conjunction with this project Technical Services, with the same contractor, have been able to construct a pavement along the road leading to St Bernard's church to near the old 1772 Club. Walking to the bus stop from Elliot's Battery, Europa Terraces and Europa Mews is now much safer. I know that, because I live there. 965

The Multi Stage Flash (MSF) Desalination Plant, which was producing fresh water through a process of evaporation and condensation undertaken by multiple stages, was built in 1980. This was operated by 15 employees. In 2008, under their watch, it was decided to decommission the MSF Plant and replace it with RO plants. One would have thought that the employees currently operating the MSF would be deployed to 970 operate the RO plants. No, that was not the case. What happened was that the previous administration agreed to have these men continue on shifts, fixed overtime and allowances, despite the fact that there were no distiller to operate. Overheads and maintenance costs also continued. The fact is that in 2008 an approximate £1.2 million per annum has been spent.

975 The worst thing about this is that it was even agreed to maintain the manning levels. This meant that when one employee retired or moved on he had to be replaced by someone else to be employed to do nothing. Further the company that set them up, the RO plants, were also contracted to operate them at an annual cost of approximately £400,000. So we have a situation where 15 men are without work to do and being paid whilst the company pays two operators to run the RO plants. The cost of this disaster has been an expenditure of £1.6 million per annum. This is what we have inherited from the hon. Members opposite.

980 I can now say that this issue is close to being resolved with the co-operation of the union, the management and more importantly with the employees.

I now move on to my responsibility as Minister for the City Fire Brigade. During the past financial year, a number of officers from the City Fire Brigade have attended various courses at the Fire Service College, UK. These have included Fire Safety Engineering, Fire Safety Smoke Control for Inspecting Officers and 985 Fire Safety Smoke Control design. Numerous officers have also attended the Incident Command Courses at levels 1, 2 and 3. There has also been Heavy Goods Vehicle Rescue courses, a Hazardous Materials and Environmental Protection course. Two Recruitment courses were also attended, in May 2013, February 2014, were five firefighter recruits successfully passed their training.

990 Eleven members of the brigade attended a breathing apparatus maintenance course provided by Dreager, in Newcastle UK, and two officers attended a Tunnel Safety Conference. Additionally, various locally run courses were attended, which include two officers completing the Blue Light Driving Instructor's course delivered through the Customs Department. Four officers attended the Maritime Casualty Handling and Survival at Sea courses provided by the GHA and the Port Authority, and all three watches have attended presentations on security awareness delivered by the RGP.

995 During the year there have been seven promotions within the City Fire Brigade: one Divisional Officer for Operations and Training, one Station Officer, two Sub Officers and three Leading Firefighters. The brigade has provided Fire Safety Courses to 334 persons from 32 different companies and organisations – for example the GHA, Post office and the Gibraltar Bus Company.

1000 Ten fire drills have been undertaken by the fire Brigade in different Government and private buildings, and Community Fire Safety talks and advice has been delivered on 12 occasions to schools and other agencies. The Fire Safety Department has also carried out nine Fire Investigations into the cause of fire at various incidents; 438 building applications have been processed and issued with fire safety requirements; and 180 building applications have been completed, inspected and approved.

1005 A new initiative of focusing fire safety advice in areas which have recently experienced a fire has been introduced – known as Hot Targeting. This provides residents of the affected area with booklets and advice, and has been well received by those affected.

1010 Operationally, the brigade has responded to 1,598 calls from 1st June 2013 to 18th June 2014. These can be categorised as 369 fire calls, of which 100 were actual fires, 252 false alarms with good intent and 17 malicious calls. The Brigade has also attended 948 Special Services, 550 of which were emergencies, for example: 352 lift rescues, 6 rescues of persons, 19 road traffic collisions, amongst others, and a further 428 Special Services classified as requests, which include entry into locked premises, flooding and rescue of animals, amongst others.

1015 The City Fire Brigade Ambulance was dispatched on 281 occasions in its commitment to the Health Authority as a third ambulance, and the Brigade control room mobilised the GHA Ambulance on 4,901 occasions.

1020 One of the most noticeable fires during this period was the fire that occurred at the Waterport Generating Station. This involved three appliances from the City Fire Brigade, the recall of 18 firefighters for the incident and to maintain fire cover for the rest of Gibraltar, the assistance from the Defence Fire Service. The incident impacted on the whole of Gibraltar due to the interruption of electricity, but what would have been a disastrous incident was dealt with by the Brigade within a few hours.

Electricity supply – thanks to all the new generators and the capacity that we have – was restored within a few hours later without injury or loss of life. (Banging on desks)

1025 Yesterday, we had an unfortunate incident of a fire breaking out at the workers' hostel in Devil's Tower Road. All workers were evacuated and have been housed temporarily at the Queen's Hotel. I must add, as I stand, Mr Speaker, that yet another incident happened last night. It was near midnight when one of the boats in Queensway Quay also went on fire and I can now say that I was in touch with them all night, whilst I was preparing my budget speech. I thought I would add this on the Queensway Quay and also...

1030 It is due to the fact that the City Fire Brigade are in the front line and are valued by the present Government, the announcement made by the Chief Minister is recognition of this. They might be in the fire station for weeks and months, but then when it comes to the crunch, we might get in one night, two fires.

1035 This pay rise will mean a 5% increase plus the elimination of the 3% abatement – i.e. 8% more in the wage package. We are at present still working at the Audit Report which includes terms and conditions with staff. I would like to congratulate them all, and all the essential services, and in particular the Fire Brigade, for the professional way in which again they tackle situations and the exemplary service that they provided Gibraltar.

1040 Mr Speaker, I now move on to my other responsibility of Civil Contingencies. During the last financial year, HM Government has invested substantially in the development and modernisation of the command and control unit necessary for disaster management. This will increase the infrastructure available to the front-line emergency services, through the purchase of this command unit. The state-of-the-art Joint Command Unit is expected to arrive during October and user training will start immediately.

This year Government is investing substantially in developing a modern C3 Co-ordination Centre as part of the major works currently taking place at No. 6 Convent Place. Investing in both the Joint Command Unit and in the new facilities within No. 6 will ensure that we can adequately respond to a major incident in an efficient and co-ordinated manner.

1045 Meetings of the Civil Contingencies Committee have taken place frequently. There were six during 2013 and three during the current year. The last one took place only last Wednesday. There have also been a number of one-to-one meetings between myself and the C3 co-ordinator. In addition, I have attended C3 organised events, such as security training for all Government Departments' security officers and specific presentations.

1050 Meetings of the C3 and exercises which are conducted now were virtually non-existent before December 2011. Staff at the Civil Contingencies Office are engaged in updating response plans and in consultation with others, planning both table top and full scale exercises. Two of these exercises have already been held, involving all relevant responding agencies and, where appropriate, the MOD involved.

1055 During 2014-15 the facilities available to the Civil Contingencies organisation will be greatly enhanced.
It is without doubt a far cry from the state I found the Civil Contingency when I was honoured by the Chief Minister to be its Minister. A bunker that was not fit for purpose, that when we have a power cut all the power would cease and therefore communication to the outside world would not exist.

1060 Mr Speaker, I now move on to Refuse Collection – another of my responsibilities. We are in the process of working with the unions and their representatives on a number of issues which we hope to resolve amicably during the current financial year.

In relation to the postal services, Mr Speaker, as I mentioned in last year's budget address we have had to implement an EU Directive, which will mean the liberalisation of postal services. We are working closely with all stakeholders on how we can achieve this without affecting employees and at the same time improving the service and making it cost effective.

1065 Renegotiating the collective agreement, in full consultation with all affected, is one important part of this jigsaw. We have also been able to re-grade the management post. We had four ML4s and now we will soon have one ML3 and three ML4s. This has been a long-standing issue which I am glad to say has now been resolved with the unions, staff and management. The postal service is yet another Ministry that is undergoing e-Government changes. A contract has been signed by the Royal Gibraltar Post Office for an 1070 Electronic Point of Sale (EPOS) with Escher to install computers for our counter clerks at 104 Main Street.

1075 After the refurbishment of the Main Street Post Office later this year, we will have electronic receipts, chip and pin, scanning and universal counters for all products, including Redirections and PO Boxes linked to the new ID card system. The Royal Gibraltar Post Office is now a member of .post which aims to integrate the physical, financial, and electronic dimensions of postal services to enable the facilities of e-post, e-finance, e-commerce and e-government services. The UPU became the first United Nations organisation to obtain a sponsored top-level domain from the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) in 2009.

1080 .post uses the latest internet security. It is the first STLD to be 100% secured by Domain Name System Security Extensions (DNSSEC), a set of codes for securing the Domain Name System (DNS), the global database system that translates a computer's fully qualified domain name into an Internet Protocol (IP) address. It is the most secure STLD on the net right now. You can trust a .post domain is not taking you to a fake postal website.

1085 The postal services have now got their own website. They have introduced a number of customer care improvements, including the new and improved Global Customer Service System run by the International Postal Corporation.

1090 Mr Speaker, as is the norm now with our New Dawn Government, our environmental filter means that we will soon be purchasing electrical vehicles and three-wheeler concepts. The electric DXP three-wheeler is a convincing response to a variety of postal delivery needs and is considered safe due to it having three wheels. Mr Netto might laugh but it is the most environmental vehicle that there is in the market. I am sure as the former Minister for the Environment, he really welcomes this, because this vehicle has had very few accidents, when compared with the traditional ones. It is tried and tested and low maintenance with less emissions and quiet operations. It is more responsive, easy to manoeuvre, high load, with trailer 270 kg plus per driver, low running costs, significantly higher efficiency in postal deliveries and EU licences. It also boasts a TÜV quality certificate.

1095 Mr Speaker, we will introduce new and improved definitive stamps that are self-adhesive. We will be a rebranding the registered services between tracked services and countries that only receive a signature service, with new bar-coded labels. We are working towards the introduction of a new and improved express letter service – currently, we are still negotiating with Royal Mail. That will have a new barcode.

1100 Later this year, we are going well in an insured service within the EU, with the registered letter service that will be introduced. We will have a new bag tracking system called CAPE Vision.

1105 Mr Speaker, I am happy to say that the Postal Services organised a hugely successful CEO Postal Forum conference here in Gibraltar, where issues such as sharing best practice were discussed. All delegates thought it was great value for money, not for profit. Postal countries that attended were the Vatican, Seychelles, Mauritius, Tristan Da Cunha, Liechtenstein, Iceland, Greenland, Åland, Faroe Islands and all the Channel Islands.

A number of statutory requirements in relation to security arrangements will come into force on 1st July. All staff who accept mail will have been trained on issues of dangerous goods when declaring goods to the Postal Services. Mr Speaker, all in all the Postal Services will progress into the 21st century.

1110 Mr Speaker, at this point, I would like to thank all my staff in all the Ministries in which I am involved, and all those who work for all the Ministries for which I am responsible for.

Mr Speaker, with this, all that is left for me to do is to support this Bill. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Edwin Reyes.

1115 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I have already mentioned last year that the present Government had acted responsibly in continuing to pursue UNESCO World Heritage Status for Gorham's Cave and its adjacent sites. Indeed, Mr Speaker, work in this respect had really commenced via the Museum Team during my personal tenure as Minister for Heritage, and therefore I continue to wish the Museum Team all the best for the future in their ongoing excavations at Gorham's and Vanguard's Caves, an outing which normally takes place during these summer months.

1120 The GSLP Liberal manifesto gave a commitment not to permit the destruction of important heritage sites or colonial style buildings. However, now that they are in Government I feel it has had to accept that this vision is not always easily achievable, more so when expert advice deems it not possible to salvage the façades of buildings we would all like to retain – such as in the case in respect of the Old Risso Bakery where sadly the façade will now have to be lost.

1125 The GSD is pleased to see that the Main Guard at John Mackintosh Square has been restored and that the Gibraltar Heritage Trust is, of course, the primary beneficiary of such a project. This restoration project is extremely close to what my party had planned and therefore I hope this House is now unanimous in wishing the Heritage Trust all the best for the future.

1130 Mr Speaker, pending manifesto commitments by the present Government includes digitising the content of the Gibraltar archives and transfer of the archives themselves into the Gibraltar Garrison Library. I still await news of how and when this will happen.

1135 Likewise there does not seem to have been much development on the commitment to make a new world class heritage site of the place where the first Neanderthal skull was found. That is the skull of Gibraltar Woman. The Opposition is interested to find out how Government intends to develop a world class tourist site for visitors and Gibraltar residents alike so that we all may see where she lived.

1140 Mr Speaker, through the collective celebration of social events, participating Gibraltarians contribute towards reinforcing our identity, our culture and our history as a people and a community. Both the performing and fine arts fraternities always prove themselves to be very proactive within their own specialised areas, and I take this opportunity to congratulate all the groups and individuals who have done Gibraltar proud through their international participation and I am happy to say in many cases even getting top awards gained. (Several Members: Hear, hear.)

1145 Through its manifesto the GSLP Liberals adopted the slogan, and I quote, 'Culture needs to be nurtured'. Now that they are in office, Gibraltar hopes that this promise will be delivered and therefore I remind Government that the committed itself through its manifesto to provide, and again I quote: facilities for teaching of music and instruments to young people; establishment and funding for a Gibraltar Philharmonic Orchestra; run a 'learn an instrument' campaign amongst young people; establishment of an academy of the performing arts administered by an Arts Council; seek to establish Gibraltar as part of the touring circuit for UK and Spanish theatre productions; and the Gibraltar Art Collection will be permanently displayed for public viewing. Therefore, Mr Speaker, with your permission, I have to ask, when will these projects become a reality?

1150 What we do know is that Government has purchased both the Queen's Cinema and the Queen's Hotel sites for the development of a theatre and its related activities. However, there are mixed feelings among the local community as to how these sites will be developed and above all at what cost. Given that the decision has already been taken, I sincerely hope that the development of these sites will be real value for money, and that our local culture in the widest sense of the word is enhanced.

1160 Mr Speaker, it is now just over a year since we offered our collective congratulations to the Gibraltar Football Association on their success to become the 54th member of UEFA. Gibraltar as a whole rejoiced spontaneously upon hearing the excellent news of attaining full membership of UEFA. Therefore I would earnestly hope that Gibraltarians will continue to support our teams in all international competitions – especially, Mr Speaker, those competitions which our clubs will participate in as from this week for the very first time, such as the preliminary stages of the Champions' League and Europa League.

1165 We trust Government will remain ever mindful and continue with the already long existing policy, which they inherited from the GSD, to assist all local sporting bodies to overcome any foreign governments' politically inspired attempts to block their membership of international sporting bodies. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) This policy will certainly continue to receive the Opposition's support and I take this opportunity to wish other sporting associations such as rugby, tennis, and the local branch of the International Olympic Committee, amongst others, all the very best in their continuing battles to obtain their respective international memberships which we all know are rightfully and legally theirs. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1170 The Government is presently working closely with the Gibraltar Football Association towards the provision of a further football pitch and related facilities. In fact, quite large sums of money will be spent on this project, which will be of direct benefit to the football fraternity. Estimated cost of a new stadium, we are informed, could be anything from £20 million to over £40 million. But as such we still do not know what Government's, or in other words the taxpayers', contribution will be and how much of it will be through either grants or loans.

I must take this opportunity to remind Government that much needed basic facilities for other sporting associations like rugby and cricket cannot be and should not be completely sacrificed in the process of enhancing only football. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) I urge Government to be ever mindful that a level playing field must be provided for all sporting associations. More so as it is a manifesto commitment of theirs and I quote, to:

1180

'... monitor the demand for additional facilities for all other sports to ensure that existing facilities are developed further in line with our community demands...'

The Government is committed through its election promises to:

'... provide renewed facilities for the playing, teaching and development of both cricket and rugby at Europa Point.'

and I end the quote.

It is obvious the Government has modified its policy over the past year and this has resulted in highly divided public opinions in respect of the proposed development for Europa Point playing fields.

Hon. D A Feetham: Very diplomatically put.

Hon. E J Reyes: There is a large amount of discontent towards a decision that Europa Point is the only suitable and available site for the future development of an UEFA-approved football stadium. The possible enhancement of Victoria Stadium into UEFA-approved facilities which we are told are required for the hosting of certain types of football matches has apparently been ruled out by Government and perhaps even along with other possible sites. This in effect means that the Development and Planning Commission has been presented with a fait accompli, without Government openly taking responsibility for the decision which has been presented as a GFA project. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) And therefore, Mr Speaker it is the GFA who is solely being blamed for the decision that (A Member: Shame!) Europa is the only possible site. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, these feelings are being expressed by many – (Interjections) Mr Speaker, these feelings are being expressed by many because it appears that the DPC's role is now limited to only recommending modifications to the design, as it is unable to challenge Government itself upon the choice of the actual location for a new football stadium. However, there is still some hope among the electorate that the DPC may even be bold enough to decide that the location is not suitable for the design submitted and might even direct not only GFA, but also Government itself to look for an alternative site.

1200

The GSD recently embarked on a public consultation exercise in respect of educational matters, among ideas put to the community at large there exists a possibility of vacating Bayside School's present site which would then in turn perhaps even offer the opportunity of a suitable site to upgrade and enlarge the existing facilities at Victoria Stadium. Given the strong concerns expressed by many about constructing a huge football stadium at Europa Point, I personally urge Government to investigate further the feasibility of constructing a suitable football stadium, meeting UEFA standards by encompassing Bayside School's present site as part of an enlarged Victoria Stadium football and other related facilities. (Interjections)

1205

Mr Speaker, although I am a firm believer that individual sports governing bodies should be allowed to manage their own affairs with no political interference, I once again urge Government to take a particular interest, especially through the Sports and Leisure Authority, to ensure that publicly owned facilities are used in a fair manner for the benefit of all sports lovers. There is both a duty and moral obligation by the Sports Authority to ensure that where desired by a citizen, membership into individual clubs and even the relevant governing body is open to all in an equal and fair manner.

1210

I must mention again this year, Mr Speaker, the Government has a manifesto commitment to provide separate premises for martial arts clubs and associations in one large martial arts centre. I would be most grateful for any information as to when this will actually materialise.

1215

Mr Speaker, the forecast outturn for expenditure relating to the Stay and Play Programme for 2013-14 is given as £19,000, yet provision for 2014-15 for this same programme has been reduced to a mere £2,000. I therefore ask, is there a reason for this drastic reduction of what in the past has proved to be a very popular and valuable programme?

1220

Likewise we are looking at provisions for playground expenses. The actual expenditure in 2012-13 was £208,559 and forecast outturn for 2013-14 is £170,000. Yet the allocated sums for 2014-15 is reduced to only £80,000. It therefore begs the question, are our children not expected to continue using playgrounds as has been the case over the last few years?

Mr Speaker, there is widespread consensus across society and political parties in Gibraltar that our educational system is both a most important investment as a community and also a justifiable source of pride for a community our size.

1230 It is now over 42 years since our local education system at secondary level was changed from one of selective schools, with admission into grammar schools coming through the 11-plus system, into a comprehensive education system. It is fair to say that throughout these last 42 academic years, our schools have been able to successfully meet all challenges presented to them in many different shapes and forms, such as the introduction of a national curriculum, changes to public examinations etc.

1235 Therefore, Mr Speaker, the Opposition wishes to take this opportunity to thank and congratulate all members of the teaching profession both past and present who have contributed in a highly professional manner towards our students' continued successes.

1240 However, after over 40 years, it is time to reflect, and together with teachers and parents and the community as a whole we should take stock and see if we are as best prepared as possible for the educational challenges of the next 40 or 50 years.

With this in mind, Mr Speaker, the Opposition wishes to offer food for thought and asks all stakeholders to offer their views in respect of the following.

We ask, how best can we equalise subject choices at secondary level so that both males and females have real equal opportunities?

1245 We ask, do we need to broaden the educational and vocational scope, with the potential to mix both, especially at post GCSE educational stages?

We ask, do we have an adequate programme to ensure that our less academic children, who may not necessarily follow a full range of GCSE examinations, obtain as good as possible and relevant education programme to prepare them for future adult working life?

1250 We ask, given it is now over 40 years since implementation of comprehensive education, should we look and see if a co-education system, either throughout all secondary school years or only at post-GCSE, could actually help to better prepare our students for both university and adult working life?

1255 Mr Speaker, although we have been informed that plans for the establishment of a University of Gibraltar are at an advanced stage, we still wait for the implementation of Government's pledge to provide a Second Chance Education Programme through the establishment of their promised National Institute of Adult Continuing Education. We sincerely hope that this does take off the ground as soon as possible. and that when it does materialise, it will be established with real links with the local labour market sectors.

1260 Mr Speaker, Government has still to announce their definitive plans for the Housing Works Agency, and whenever I have asked for details of progress in this respect, I have been told that it is being considered at Cabinet level.

In effect, what has happened over the past three years is that an ever-increasing number of home refurbishments are contracted out to private companies, without going through any type of transparent and accountable tender process.

1265 The number of staff members employed at the Housing Works Agency continues to be reduced, so does this mean that what the future holds is that all refurbishment works will simply be allocated to private contractors and without being subject to an adequate and transparent competitive tender process? (Interjections)

1270 The GSD worked hard in consultation with Unite to reform the old Building and Works Department and its transfer into the Housing Works Agency. This project provided brand new work shops and depots and from its origins delivered vastly improved services to Government housing tenants.

1275 Therefore the question now is what plans does Government have for the Housing Works Agency and all its employees? Like the Opposition, Government knows there are indeed many excellent craftsmen and professionals within the Housing Works Agency. So I must stress that it is important to ensure that the correct and proper administration procedures and resources are in place for housing maintenance and repairs to be carried out.

Given the reduction in the number of employees, we must ask for clear answers in respect of how will the Agency be expected to carry out its duties if the Agency is not given the human resources required to meet work loads and targets.

1280 Under the section dedicated to youth, the GSLP Liberal manifesto states that young people who are entitled to housing will not wait more than three years for a home. Given that there are presently a large number of young persons registered as applicants seeking their own homes, I must ask on their behalf for a firm date when Government will deliver on this promise. After all, Mr Speaker, it is now almost three years since they were elected into office.

1285 The visible presence of scaffolding in some housing estates leads us to conclude that the promised refurbishments are well underway. However, Mr Speaker, many residents in these estates have expressed concern at the length of time works are taking to be completed. In some cases concerns are made worse because the quality of workmanship in some of the phases of works already completed leaves somewhat to be desired. I therefore urge the Minister for Housing to ensure that quality monitoring is strictly adhered to and perhaps he can deploy members of staff from his Department to ensure that this is being carried out.

1290 Residents in estates where refurbishments are taking place would welcome the publication of target dates for completion of different phases of the planned works.

Government pledged that everyone on the housing waiting list and on the pre-list as on 9th December 2011 would be re-housed before the next general election. This in effect means that 1,415 homes need to be allocated during their present term in office.

1295 In order to meet their target Government pledged through their manifesto that they would build high quality homes both for rental and for sale. Three years into their term in office there have still been no announcements of new homes to be built for rental – resulting in great disappointment for those who are unable to afford purchasing their own home.

1300 It is highly disappointing to see that the only new rental homes to be built will be exclusively for senior citizens and in some cases, like the one at Charles Bruzon House, will be around 17 in number at, from what I can deduce from questions answered in this House, a cost of close to £130,000 per home. Perhaps, Mr Speaker, something is not quite right in my mathematical calculations there.

1305 In respect of the two projects for home ownership, there is great discontent amongst many applicants on the priority system being used to offer these homes for purchase. Whereas in respect of rental homes applicants are offered these in precedence order corresponding to the room composition for which the application is being considered, this seems not to be the case when it comes to home purchasers.

1310 What in effect is happening is that applicants who would only qualify for a one or two-bedroom home under rental allocations are being allowed to purchase up to four-bedroom homes despite this being well above the housing application entitlement. For applicants to be able to purchase, on a co-ownership basis, homes which are above their entitlement is not perceived as being fair. And applicants with larger families who really need the larger four-bedroom homes feel badly done with in this offer.

Mr Speaker, why are there different rules in respect of the size of home offered for rental when compared with co-ownership?

1315 The GSLP manifesto commits them to eliminate the housing pre-waiting list, but this has not yet happened and we still have to hear by when this is going to take effect.

Another manifesto pledge was to provide a separate additional housing list for applicants who are living in Spain and wish to return home. In many cases, Mr Speaker, these families moved into Spain due to their original home purchase becoming too small for the family needs and the absence of an affordable larger property in Gibraltar. This, like I said, led them to seek properties beyond our shores.

1320 However, because they have already been home owners, these families cannot file an application for either rental or co-ownership homes. I therefore ask, surely we can find a fair way whereby we can assist these families to return back to Gibraltar. (Interjection) As a separate housing list for this type of applicant has not yet materialised, can you blame those families who feel let down by the present Government after they have already been almost three years in office?

1325 Mr Speaker, I must say is it not ironic that Government Ministers, still in the Opposition mode style of politics, should choose to rubbish the Opposition's new policies in the budget speeches to score cheap political points? As if they do not have enough on their own plate to deliver their over-ambitious manifesto, they desperately and nervously have concerned themselves over our new policies.

1330 Does not the Government realise that there is always room for improvement in housing, in education, in democracy, and indeed in all policies, however good we deem the system to be at the time? It is about striving for excellence and evolving policies – something the Governing parties perhaps do not recognise as they spent 16 years in opposition stagnating, visionless, without evolving their own policies, just waiting some day hopefully for their turn to govern. (Banging on desks and interjection)

1335 In stark contrast, Mr Speaker, in just two and a half years in opposition we have already revisited our policies, consulted with stakeholders and in a process of discussion we are proud to offer the improvements and enhancements we and the many organisations and individuals with whom we have consulted have together developed in the pursuit of excellence. Our vision and the statement announcing it is being mischievously and quite dishonestly misinterpreted for their own political gain. (Interjections)

1340 Mr Speaker, it is tradition that in closing Members of Parliament offer thanks, and I wish to offer a particular thanks to the staff here in this House, at the personal level, for their continued patience whenever I turn up and ask for sometimes what is quite trivial but time-taking matters.

1345 I must single out yourself, Mr Speaker, for your patience in when I seek a few moments of your time. I remember those days back in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when you were my Deputy Head teacher and I was perhaps a rather outspoken or mischievous little long-haired teenager, but you always treated me with the greatest of respect. Now that we have both matured in years, your respect is still there and you make me feel so much as your equal when I am in this Chamber that I will forever be grateful for that, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, your advice has always been sound and, although even if at times we have not agreed, I see your ulterior motives when you have to rule upon certain matters here in this House. However, sometimes 1350 the demands on the Speaker are not just from what is being said across the floor, but sometimes, and I beg forgiveness if I have also sinned into that we are tempted to tweet and therefore are not being entirely honest or fair with our Members.

1355 If I have been boring today, Mr Speaker, in the way I delivered my speech, I seek forgiveness and I will accept criticism across the floor. But let us put our face behind our comments and please let us be clear whether it is the individual who is boring or the Opposition's policies that are boring, and then we can take it up in a true democratic, parliamentary manner.

1360 Likewise, Mr Speaker, I do not wish to return back to those school days where you had to sometimes control us in little petty things and trying to keep like a football score, where there is two QCs or one QC or whether we have two school teachers on this side and only one on the other, and Mr Speaker, having to act as a school teacher refereeing in the middle, let us hope, Mr Speaker, that we all learn from the past and that we can work together for the good of democracy in the future.

Thank you, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

1365 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, after another very boring speech (Laughter) from the Opposition, can I invite the House to recess for a few minutes to then hear what I am sure will not be a boring intervention from the hon. the backbencher, who has never said anything boring in this House in all the time that I have been here.

So I would invite the House to recess until 10 to 12.

Mr Speaker: The House will now have a 10-minute recess.

The House recessed at 11.40 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 11.51 a.m.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
For Second Reading –

1370

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Sir Peter Caruana.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

1375 This is the second occasion on which I rise from my remote and lonely spot in the back benches of this House to make a backbench contribution to this Budget debate.

Mr Speaker, as the House knows, I do not have responsibility for any of the matters that have been discussed today and so with the House's indulgence, I will just limit myself to a comment on some of the issues that I have heard, which I think I would like my views recorded in Hansard about.

1380 Mr Speaker, there cannot be any doubt that there are now more Question Times in Parliament and there cannot be any doubt that the House meets with more monthly regularity, and the Hon. the Chief Minister knows that I have been willing and never churlish in my recognition of the good changes that they have introduced into the parliamentary workings of this House, which on balance I think have been constructive and enhanced parliamentary activity. But, of course, Mr Speaker, the quality of parliamentary endeavour is not just a quantum matter; it is also a qualitative matter.

1385 The fact that we are meeting more frequently may, but necessarily does not mean that the Opposition is better able to do its job, is better informed and the Government is more forthcoming with information. In that respect I would venture to suggest that despite all the great improvements that they have made to the procedures of this place and to the way we carry on about our business, there is one area in which I think they still lag behind the position as it used to be before and that is that I believe that the GSD Government were more genuinely forthcoming with information about Government business and also about Government companies than the hon. Members have hitherto been.

1390 I am always amused when the hon. Members make the point that this terrible undemocratic, uncommitted to democracy previous Chief Minister in 16 years... the House only met twice a year. I think actually it met twice a year once in an election year. The amusing part about the reference, Mr Speaker, is this, that of course however bad they think my record was about a system that of course fully complied with the constitution that we had, our record was better than the GSLP's when it was last in Government. Of course thereby implicitly being very critical with the approach to parliamentary democracy of the now Minister for Employment, the then Chief Minister, the Hon. Joe Bossano, whom they extoll and eulogise in every other respect, but nevertheless inadvertently criticise him for that as a necessary consequence of the implicit criticism of us.

Mr Speaker, I think parliamentary democracy moves forward. The way the House works moves forward. I recognise the hon. Members have taken steps forward. I do not accept the inherent criticism of the way it used to work before and that does not impede me from recognising that in many, many respects it works better now.

1405 If I could, just for the record, record that when the Hon. Mr Isola uses as one of the instances of hypocrisy the fact that we now call for a public accounts committee whilst not having set one up, if one was not set up it was not because we did not try or offer it, but the then Leader of the Opposition – again the Hon. Joe Bossano – was not in favour of doing so and the Government, all of whose Members are Ministers on the front bench, cannot by itself populate a public accounts committee. It is a nonsense. So unless the 1410 Opposition is willing to co-operate with it, there cannot be one and that is exactly what happened.

Mr Speaker, I think that subject to sight of the way the figures have been built up and on the assumption that they have been built up and calculated in the same way and using the same methods and using the same data input as they have always been, the continuing growth in GDP is very pleasing indeed, and indeed as is very pleasing the fact that Government finances appear to be holding out, keeping up and indeed increasing 1415 as they are, and the hon. Member has been able to announce the surplus that he has done, albeit subject to the points that have been made by my hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition in relation to items of expenditure that are no longer reflected there.

Mr Speaker, I could not help thinking when I was hearing the Chief Minister say that we have taken our nation's economy to a quantum leap of growth, that he might more generously have acknowledged that the fact that just two years into his mandate he is able to announce continuing economic growth on that scale, continuing Government finance increases on that scale and continuing budget increases on that scale. It cannot be, cannot be in his view the product of what he has been able to do in the last two years which could not possibly have had the necessary economic effect to be reflected on that scale in these macro-economic indicators, and that the legacy that the GSD left him is reflected, not in his distorted debate about 1425 the level of public debt, which as far as I was concerned was the election issue and that is it... you know, he won the election. That is not the legacy that the GSD left him. The legacy that the GSD left him is not the so-called black hole about which, if he does not mind, I will say a bit more in a moment. The economic legacy that the GSD left him is a state of public finances, a state of the economy that has allowed him to announce and to continue to announce healthy and increasing Government surpluses every minute that he has been in office, starting from 12th December 2011. (Banging on desks) That is the legacy that he inherited from us and clearly there has been progress in that legacy on their watch.

It is very pleasing frankly to see the growth that there has been at a time when there has been uncertainty surrounding that industry in Gibraltar – for example, in the level of employment in the online gaming industry. That is obviously contributing a significant amount to the Government's tax take as are other things, such as the 2010 Income Tax Act, which has now brought many more companies into the tax net. That is now bedding down and hopefully will continue to increase and to provide more and more corporation tax revenue, as indeed is contributing to the increase in personal taxation from self-employed people, the changes that we introduced into the law to require self-employed people to bring them closer to PAYE payers and make them pay on account ahead of the financial year and not lag and often defer personal tax liabilities.
1440

So it is really no difficulty frankly and ought to be no difficulty and is no difficulty from the Opposition benches to note with pleasure and satisfaction that despite the threats and challenges it has faced, the economy of Gibraltar continues to prosper and the Government finances continue to hold well, and we shall, I suspect, continue to disagree as to whether that is the GSD's legacy that he has inherited or there is some other articulation of it that he prefers.
1445

When talking about the black hole, Mr Speaker, let us be clear. The 'black hole', as he calls it, arises from expenditure incurred by Government companies on building housing estates, on building all the various projects that the GSD built through Government companies. Of course, if by the black hole he tries to give people the impression that there was an unpaid liability of £100 million that he has had to make good in terms of putting his hands in his pocket and paying people £100 million that the Government had left unpaid, which I suspect, whether he intends it or not is the impression that most laymen get when they hear the expression '£100 million black hole'. That is simply not the case. How does he imagine that the Government was able to get £100 million worth of public projects done without paying the contractors... without buying the goods and the materials?
1450

So all of that, all of the expenditure that is reflected in what he calls the '£100 million hole' was paid and funded by the Government and went to reduce the Government's reserves and therefore to increase the net public debt, that he may have found a bookkeeping situation in which the accounting relationship between the Government as lender to those companies of the £100 million and therefore that the Government was owed £100 million by those companies, and that he has had to do the necessary to reflect that in the estimates of the Government and in the Government's accounting, is probably entirely true. I do not vouch for the figure of £100 million, but there is bound to have been a very substantial figure under that heading, but that is not fairly described to people, who would not otherwise understand what he means, as a £100 million hole in public finances, which as I say most people would wrongly understand that there was £100 million of unfunded expenditure which was not reflected in the Government's expenditure figures.

1465 So, Mr Speaker when he uses the figure... usable cash reserves, this is not a particularly normal – of course, if the Government has usable cash reserves it means that there is – and this is what he means when he says that there was no money in the kitty... When the Government spends money it either uses its cash reserves, being money that it has in excess of what it owes or it borrows money, at which point it becomes cash reserve, and then uses it. But in both cases it increases the net public debt, because whether you bring 1470 in more money and spend it by borrowing it and spending it, or whether you use the cash reserve that you have got, both increase the net public debt, because the net public debt is the formula between gross borrowings and the cash that you have. So if you spend the cash, you increase that public debt. If you increase the gross debt and spend the cash, but not if you do not spend the cash, then you also increase the net public debt.

1475 This is why I used to argue with him, obviously not as persuasively at election time as he argued it, as he argued the contrary, this is why I used to argue that the only economically meaningful debate about debt had to be around net public debt, because gross public debt, disregarding the amount that you had in the kitty, was irreverent. The real measure of uncovered financial exposure by the Government is the net public debt, that is to say the difference between the total lump sum that it owes and the cash that it has sitting in 1480 its piggy bank – the cash reserve – and the difference between the two is what the Government owes that it does not have money to cover and that is the net public debt. I kept on trying to urge him that the net public debt was what he should be arguing about and that that was very healthy, and that I would be willing to increase it. If it required a change of legislation because the next year's revenues were not enough to help me fund my own manifesto commitments had we been elected, we would have done it, because the net 1485 public debt as a proportion of GDP is within every known bound of prudential limit.

Of course, having driven me from office on this basis, for all intents and purposes, and having on the basis that he would not increase net public debt and that he would fund his programme by some other means, which we said was impossible, and remains impossible, it transpires that what they have done is not because what we have said was impossible they have made possible, it is because they have done what they 1490 said in the election campaign they would not do, which is to increase the net public debt. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) So they have done what they told me in the election campaign I was irresponsible for saying that I would do and they have done what they told me in the election campaign (Several Members: Hear, hear.) they would not do.

On that basis it is possible, of course it is possible what they have done is adopted the GSD's policy of how to fund a manifesto commitment, whilst staying within prudential bounds and legal bounds, because he 1495 has been fortunate in that I would have been willing, whilst keeping within economically prudent guidelines, to have changed the law to increase the debt ceiling, the debt limit, which I acknowledge would have been necessary, unless I had had found a situation which he has found in, which is a huge increase in Government revenues, which has made it unnecessary to change the law in order to increase net public 1500 debt; but net public debt has been increased. The sum of money that the Government owes today is higher than it was when he arrived in office. He has increased net public debt and as far as I can recall that was almost the entirety of the economic debate between us at the time of the election.

And but for pointing out the fact that this is in my view an entirely reasonable and objective, even though self-serving comment about what has happened since the election campaign in relation to what was 1505 said during the election campaign, let us be clear. I think the levels of net public debt remain, even increased as they have been, well within the levels that are prudent in macro-economic terms by any European standards. So I am not saying any of this to criticise the level of public debt. They are at the level, or perhaps lower for all I know, than they would have been had we been in office, but that was not the nature of the debate that we had at election time.

1510 Mr Speaker, I am glad that the Government is able to keep expenditure growing at less than revenue. I am not quite sure why the hon. Member... well, I was not sure until he said so himself later, eventually, why he was going into all the comparisons of GSD expenditure. I used to make it a virtue in my Budget speeches of saying that the wealth that the Government was creating... the wealth that the GSD government 1515 created had to be distributed and that there were four ways of distributing it. One was to cut income taxes for everybody, which we did every year that we were in office. The other was to build capital infrastructure for Gibraltar, which we did. And the third way was to improve public services, which I think we did. The last two require public expenditure and it was our objective to keep public expenditure growth less than public revenue growth. So our object was always that revenue increases would be bigger than expenditure increases, but we did not achieve it on more than half the times. I think in our 15 years, about half the 1520 number of years we managed to keep revenue growing faster than expenditure and in the other half we did not, and expenditure grew faster than revenue, but the net overall result was that overall revenue grew over the 15 years that we were in office by £257.6 million and that overall expenditure grew by £249 million,

1525 that is to say by £8 million less. A very... Yes, the Hon. the Minister for the Employment is not the only one with puntería in his balancing of figures long term and it did not happen by accident. It did not happen by accident (Interjection) It happened because there was a policy objective that it should be so, which whilst it did not succeed every year, nevertheless the fact that it was a policy objective meant that the result would always be there or thereabouts, as indeed they were.

1530 Now, Mr Speaker, I do have to, for the sake of the accuracy of Hansard... I do not want to get into all this business about the frame, in what terms we should frame our debates. I think everybody knows that parliamentary debates follow a certain political and partisan course, and it is almost now expected of us. But I think it is important that Hansard should reflect the correct position, which is not the one that the Chief Minister described, in respect of GSD expenditure growth, even though I acknowledge that he was not being particularly critical or intending to be critical. He was just trying to make good a point, which I think is not good, that 90% of the growth that there has been post-election in recurrent expenditure is down to spending commitments incurred by the GSD Government.

1535 But you see, Mr Speaker, when he was quoting figures and wanting to make them sound as not scandalous, but as impressive as possible to underline the point that he was seeking to make, I have to tell him that he made a very considerable error. He started by telling us that expenditure in the first Budget that had been designed by the GSLP Government in 1988-89 was £71 million, and he said and when the last Budget that the GSLP designed in 1996 – yes, it would have been... the elections were in May and the Budget would have been more or less designed 1995-96 – he said was £73.2 million. Well, Mr Speaker, he cannot possibly believe... and then he said and then immediately revenue... and then he started with 2001-02 at £126 million. Well, Mr Speaker, he could have done better than that. He could have started almost in the first Budget that we designed, which was the next one.

1540 He has made two critical errors. The first is to look at the figure only for Consolidated Fund, which is not... The figure of £71 million and £73.2 million is Consolidated Fund expenditure and that led him to the second mistake, which is that he appears to have forgotten that one of the great political issues of the day was precisely the fact that the then GSLP Government was channelling huge percentages of recurrent public expenditure through places other than the Consolidated Fund and that they were not reflected in the Consolidated Fund; and that much of what he has subsequently gone to include in his calculations, completely wrong, of 400% increases in public expenditure is no more than the consequences of – because he is looking at the Consolidated Fund – no more than the consequences of us moving expenditure which was taking place already under the GSLP Government, bringing it back into the Government, bringing it back into the Consolidated Fund, where of course it suddenly appeared, but it did not represent increase in expenditure.

1545 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): That is why I have calculated from £110 million.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: We will come back to that in a moment.

1560 It did not represent increase in public expenditure. Mr Speaker, the figures, if he wants them, and as I would want to put in Hansard, each of these figures has been given by me annually in a Budget, but I am reading from Table 1 in the Budget brief that I used to get at Budget time from the Financial Secretary, which I am sure he still... well, I hope he still gets one to the same very high standard.

1565 Hon. Chief Minister: I have it here.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the actual growth in recurrent expenditure in 1997-98 over 1996-97 was 3%, and I can give the figures. It increased from £123.2 million to £126.9 million, an increase of 3%.

1570 The following year 1998-99, it had increased from £126.9 million to £132.4 million, an increase of 4.3%. The following year from £132.4 million – if he likes I can leave out the points, just for the purposes of illustration – it had increased from £132 million to £141 million, an increase of 7%, and the year after that from £141 million to £155 million, an increase of 9.7%.

1575 By 2001-02 it had increased from £155 million to £170 million, an increase of 9.5%, and the following year from £170 million to £178.9 million, an increase of 5.1%. The following year to £201.6 million, an increase of 12.7%, the year after that from £201.6 million to £208.6 million, an increase of 3.5%, and the year after that from £208.6 million to £223.3 million, an increase of 7%.

1580 In 2006-07, from £223.3 million to £234 million, an increase of 4.8%, and then to £265.7 million, an increase of 13.5%, and then to £286.5 million, an increase of 7.8%, and then to £304 million, an increase of 6.4%, and to £353.7, an increase of 16%.

Then regrettably for the year 2011-12 in this table of overall revenue, I only have the estimate, which I am sure is not what the figure came in at, (Interjection) but in the estimate I have got it here at £372 million, which I have calculated which is 5.2%, but I am sure that that is not the figure that was in the outturn. (Hon. Chief Minister: £421 million.) I am obliged to the hon. Member.

1585 Mr Speaker, up to and including the forecast outturn to the year 31st March 2011, which I acknowledge is six months short of the Election date, the overall increase in expenditure was in gross terms 202.1% in 15 financial years net of inflation, which would be economically the more interesting figure because the Government expenditure does not increase by the rate of inflation; it is falling and public services are not being maintained. Adjusted for inflation the real growth in recurrent expenditure over the 15 years, net of 1590 inflation, was £112.9 million. Again, always subject to the fact that my figure is really only accurate up to the end of the year 2010-11, and I have not been able to work in the last six months or the effect of the last six months or nine months of our last term.

So those are the figures. I would be delighted if the hon. Member would update this and table it in the House so that it lies in the Hansard if he does not think that my quotation from them has been accurate. I 1595 am perfectly happy that this is the GSD's record in increase in overall... but it has got to be overall expenditure and overall revenue. The debate cannot be limited to the Consolidated Fund expenditure and the Consolidated Fund revenue, because that would not be a meaningful measure of what the Government has spent, nor would it be a meaningful measure of what the Government has collected if the debate is not at the overall level.

1600 So, Mr Speaker, there has not been a 400% increase, and the annual average is not 18%, which subject to him correcting me now is a note that I had taken of what he has said. I do not know if those figures are correct. I had heard him say...

Yes, I am happy to.

1605 Hon. Chief Minister: I do not want to interrupt him. I will reply in the debate.

The figure that I gave was 18% average growth per year, not working from the figure of £73 million, but working from the figure of £110 million, which I gave them credit for in their Budget because of their argument of hidden expenditures. The £110 million, which is the first Budget they designed, of Consolidated Fund expenditure, which is where the debate is between me and the Leader of the Opposition, 1610 the £110 million to £421 million which was the forecast outturn for the end of the 2011-12 year, that works out to the 18% that I gave the House.

But I will reply... that is just the figure. I will reply in my reply.

1615 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: But even with what he has just said, he cannot... the starting point for his figure as comparator cannot be a Consolidated Fund figure, but the last figure that he is going to deduct it from to work out the percentage increase is the overall expenditure figure, and that is not comparing the same thing. That is comparing the increase between expenditure channelled through the Consolidated Fund and the total... and at the other end comparing it to the overall expenditure, including public expenditure, other than through the Consolidated Fund. Mr Speaker, he cannot do that. The figures speak for themselves.
1620 We have all got the same sheet of paper. We are only missing...

If he has got this sheet of paper in front of him, which he should have, he only has one more relevant column in it at the end than I do. These are the figures and the percentages are worked out and stated there. I have not calculated anything. I have read straight from the brief to the Chief Minister, which is the last one that I received, overall revenue and expenditure over the last 15 years. So this is not an issue about 1625 which we need to argue, in terms of who said what. Let us just table in the House the updated version of this page. Then the figures will speak for themselves and it will not be necessary for either of us to quote any figure or to argue with each other about what are the best comparators for them.

Mr Speaker, I congratulate the hon. Member on the composition of the Board of the Gibraltar Investment Bank. Clearly, there has been a careful balance – two lawyers and two accountants. I am sure quite a lot of juxtaposition and careful negotiation has gone into the choice of the directors, but the hon. Members know, because it was something that I would like to have done and did some exploratory work and the case for it has become stronger since Barclays Bank announced its departure from Gibraltar, I am a supporter of the establishment of a bank of this sort provided that it operates with that degree of arm's length independence from the Government, which will make its risk decisions, its interest rate products 1635 decisions, its lending decisions, its investment decisions at arm's length from the Government, and that the Government is not effectively to subsidise a loss-making bank, and that it should be loss making because it is in effect making politically-driven unprofitable uncommercial decisions.

Subject to that caveat, I think that the establishment of a bank of this sort is a good thing and I congratulate the hon. Member for doing it. I think that the Board, and the kind of person that he has mentioned, gives a fair degree of comfort that the condition that I had attached may be satisfied, hopefully 1640 will be satisfied, and that it will continue to operate in that way, and that being so, I think this would be a very good contribution.

1645 Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister during his speech, as indeed he has done in this magnificent publicly funded four-page advertisement in the Chronicle – of course, there is no element of public funding of party political propaganda in this; I am sure there is not, of the sort that... No, absolutely – (Interjection) No, that's...absolutely. It is a wonderful advertisement I am sure he will reap all the benefit, yes, yes. (Interjection) No, I am not being cynical here. I am not being cynical, Mr Speaker.

1650 But as he said here as well Savings Bank reserve up from £2 million... from £20 million from £144,000, and this was the (Hon. Chief Minister: £1,444...) Yes, £1,440, and this was the statistic that he said that his calculator had difficulty in calculating the percentage increase because he did not have enough zeros, and he described this as a phenomenal reversal of the fortunes of the Gibraltar Savings Bank.

1655 Well, I have to tell the House, Mr Speaker, that I think it is nothing of the kind. Mr Speaker, a bank only needs reserves against the risk of capital losses. The purpose that the reserves of a bank serve is as a pot from which to pay depositors their money should the investments of the bank go bad and the bank should suffer capital losses. That is why banks have reserves, and indeed that is why our previous Savings Bank legislation, the one that we changed, said that the bank had to have a reserve. What happened was that we changed the law so that the bank, the Gibraltar Savings Bank, could not make investments, which exposed its capital to losses. Having changed the law so that the Savings Bank could not invest depositors' money in a way that exposed those moneys to capital losses, there was no longer a need for reserves. We had removed the need and the justification for reserves.

1660 The fact that there is now a reserve again is not by virtue of a phenomenal reversal of the fortunes of the Savings Bank, but rather by virtue of the fact and to reflect the fact that once again he has changed the law to once again expose the capital of depositors in the Savings Bank to losses, albeit subject to the Government guarantee, of course, of depositors' money in the Savings Bank, and that he has changed the law not just to allow the sort of investments that could always have been made that expose it to capital losses, he has changed the law, as he knows, because it became controversial in the context of the CFC company, considerably to allow effectively what has happened and that is for half, or almost half or about half of the Savings Bank's deposit money to be invested in the shares of just one company called CFC Limited and the rest is the subject of well-known political debate about what the Government can, or might, or has or has not done, and whether there is a good, bad or indifferent investment, whether it will be profitable or whether they will not be profitable, that is a separate debate. I suspect that some of them will be profitable and others may be less profitable.

1675 But I only make the point in the context of the point about the reserve, which is that it is now prudent to have a reserve again because the Savings Bank is once again statutorily free, which we made statutorily unfree, to invest the money in a way that exposed it to losses and therefore the need for the reserves which we had moved and therefore took the reserve into Government. It was the Government's money. The reserve when it existed –because it needed to be there because the law required it to be there because the Bank's capital was at risk – was never depositors' money. It was always Government's money and therefore when the need for the reserve disappeared, the Government took its money out. Now, the hon. Member is putting it back – good for him – because he has changed the law again to allow the Savings Bank to do things for which there is a need to have a reserve. I would not describe that as a phenomenal reversal of the fortunes of the Savings Bank.

1685 Mr Speaker, talking of the Savings Bank, I wonder whether – either in his reply or notwithstanding that, it is revenue and not an expenditure item, perhaps in the Committee Stage, it does not matter –whether the hon. Member would be good enough to just explain to us the breakdown of the figure of £32 million estimate for this coming year, about £28.6 million outturn of the interest on investments. He will find this, as you know, at Appendix L, page 194 of the Budget Book. The interest of... and I am obliged to him. The interest on investments forecast outturn for this year just ended stands at £28.6 million at a time when the Savings Bank had a total of £815 million on deposit, £290 million of which was Government-owned on-call moneys, and £527 million of which was deposits. So it was on-call, investment accounts, ordinary accounts, bonds, debentures issued to savings...

1695 So the Government had...this is not the Government. Yes, the Savings Bank had to invest, so to speak, £815 million of cash, which we know it placed about half – do not hold me to the exact per cent –about half in the purchase of preference shares in CFC and the other half, I suppose, remains invested as it has always been invested in the Savings Bank in this or that cash or near cash, short-term notes of some kind or another. But it is really difficult for me to comprehend how that sum of money could produce a revenue of £28.6 million, given that interest rates that the Savings Bank... that any of us can get on our money are not much more than 1%. They are probably less than 1%. So I assume that what that means is that much of that £28.6 million has actually come back to the Savings Bank from the CFC as dividend on its preferential shares.

1700 Yes, if he wants to –

1705 Hon. Chief Minister: In case it assists him, Mr Speaker, just before I do my reply this afternoon, if he wants to check it, there was an answer to a question – I understand this is now on the website – which the Leader of the Opposition asked about what amounts Credit Finance Company limited received as dividend from the redeemable preference shares in the last Question Time, and he may see that number. So it will help him in his analysis, but I will reply in detail with the £32 million.

1710 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes, I am aware of that dividends received by the Savings Bank, not by... CFC would be the payer of the dividend. Yes, it is just he spoke inadvertently. (Interjection)

1715 Mr Speaker, really what I was interested in is whether the hon. Member could explain how that money represents distributable profit of CFC, because otherwise, and I am not saying it is the case, but unless CFC has made £28.6 million of distributable profit... and he knows that the phrase ‘distributable profit’ means something in law. It does not mean just money available to the company, it means from distributable reserves – in other words accumulated income profit – the only other way that CFC could fund that degree of dividend, which is much higher than the going rate in the markets, is that it should be using capital to make dividend payments, which of course would be wholly wrong and I am not saying is the case. But those are the two alternatives and I would just like to understand, if the hon. Member is willing to provide me with the information, of how that figure of £28.6 million relates to the profitability, which is the only thing from which dividends could be paid, from the profitability of CFC, so that I can continue to assume, as I do now, that it is not to any degree funded by unreal unmade profit, or worse still, capital. In other words that the Government is just not... that CFC is not just paying back under the guise of a dividend part of the money that the GSB invested in the purchase of the shares in the first place as that would simply be recycling capital and pretending that it is dividend. I am not assuming that that is what has happened, but I would welcome an analysis if he is able to and willing to, so that that can be transparent and visibly not so.

1720 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member pointed out to me gently, but nevertheless suggesting that I was wrong when I had said that the pension commutation business that CFC is now in, that the consequence of that was not to flatter – (Interjection) That that did not flatter the Consolidated Fund expended –

1730 Hon. Chief Minister: I accept that –

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: That it did or it did not? (Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.) Oh, so. I understood him to say that he had not flattered – 1735 Hon. Chief Minister: No, what I said was that the hon. Gentleman’s analysis was right and that he had expressed it very eloquently – that there is an element of flattery in the accounts. (Interjection) But the only point I made, if I can help him, is that the flattery is not the full amount of the commutation – (Interjection) it is the difference between... exactly, those are the issues.

1740 Hon. Sir Peter Caruana: Because I was just going to ask him... when my understanding is that he had said the opposite when he was on his feet yesterday, I was just going to ask him whether I was wrong because I could only be wrong if he had said what he did not say if the Government was itself paying the gratuity to CFC. That is not the case, so therefore they are flattered –

1745 Hon. Chief Minister: It is paying the pension.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Exactly. So they are flattered – (Interjection) So the Consolidated Fund expenditure is flattered basically to the tune of the gratuity that would have been paid in a lump sum on the day of retirement to the civil servant, which is no longer being paid for out of the Consolidated Fund –

1750 Hon. Chief Minister: But not to the total amount –

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: But not to the total amount of the pension, because it continues to be paid, albeit to CFC... the balance. I understand that.

1755 Hon. Chief Minister: Such a substantial amount –

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Member –

1760 Hon. Chief Minister: It is 25%.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes, it was 25% of civil servants’ pensions.

1765 Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister also spoke about webs of companies and whether we had contributed to, subtracted from, imitated, kept all the GSLP's company, and I cannot resist the temptation just to point out, for the sake of the record, that he focuses on the wrong word. When we spoke back then about a web of impenetrable companies, the emphasis was not on 'companies', the emphasis was on impenetrable 'web'.

1770 There is nothing wrong with the Government having companies – nothing wrong at all. What was objectionable is that they were a web vide the picture, the chart in our 1996 manifesto, which graphically illustrates the extent of convoluted inter-relationship of one company almost 'unfollowable' and that it was impenetrable because the Government would not answer questions in this House about it.

1775 We have more companies perhaps. I have not counted them, but if he says we have more, I have no difficulty accepting that from him; but they are not impenetrable and they were not a web, because one of the differences which I am still hoping the hon. Members, pursuant to their policy on which they have made some strides to improve the quality of parliamentary life here, the one area I referred earlier to one or two areas in which they were still worse than we were or not as good as we were, was precisely in this area.

1780 I made it clear that under a GSD Government, the GSD Ministers would account for and answer questions in this House for Government agencies and Government companies for which they were ministerially responsible as if they were Government Departments. It is true that when the hon. Members used to ask us, 'What is the state of this negotiation? What is the state of that tender? What is the state of that negotiation?' we used to say, 'Not yet, because it could prejudice the commercial negotiation'. That is true whether it is a company or whether it is the Government, but this the GSD Government did not decline to account in this House for the financial transactions of its companies in the same way as it did for the financial transactions of the Consolidated Fund itself, and the big difference is that they take the opposite view. (Interjections) Yes, and they do the opposite.

1785 So, yes, we have more companies I accept, but they are not... whatever they asked, Mr Speaker. Whatever they asked about... I am talking about Question Time. (Interjections)

1790 No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Members... I cannot answer his question here and now. (Interjections) No, Mr Speaker, but that is not because there is not an answer to it. It is just because I am not ready for it. It is a question of which I have had no notice. I mean, with notice of the question – (Interjections) Yes, the hon. Member knows that Hansard is replete with references to answers, such as, 'I am not accountable in this House for that'. (Hon. N F Costa: Never!) Never... I am not talking about you. I do not know why the Hon. Mr Costa points the finger unless he is –

1795 Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Order!

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Unless the hon. Member is speaking for the whole Government, I am not interested. It suffices that one does it.

1800 Mr Speaker, all I say is that it would be another step forward. It would be another step forward in what the hon. Members have already done in their parliamentary... if they were to adopt a willingness to treat companies as an act of business convenience by the Government, rather than as a means of defraying, delaying or denying in the worst of cases, accountability and explanation to this House for the conduct of the business of those companies, which I am sure are all doing Government projects and this or that, but which if they were being done through the Consolidated Fund, we could ask questions of the Opposition, either we or you, whoever is in opposition can ask questions. If they are done through a company the Opposition cannot asks questions unless there is a policy such as the one that we adopt.

1805 If the hon. Members say that I am mistaken and that contrary to what I have said it is their policy and their position that they will answer questions about Government-owned companies, their business and their finance, subject to commercial and sensitive... while during negotiation as if and to the same extent as if it was the Ministerial Departmental responsibility of the Minister, which is what I used to say to my Ministers they must do, then I withdraw what I have said and I applaud that that should be the case because that would restore the position to what I presently believe it is not and if the position is different to what I believe it to be, the hon. Member will not find me ungenerous in acknowledging that it is not the case. But frankly, I do not think that is the position, but if it is and in his reply, in addition to criticising me for having said it, he will assert that that is the position, then that would be very, very pleasing and very satisfactory and very satisfying too. You see the difference between an Opposition spokesman and a backbencher. (Laughter)

1815 Mr Speaker, I accept the Hon. the Chief Minister's invitation as a past Chief Minister to serve on his Consultation Committee or Council. I think it is a useful piece of architecture and as he knows from the number of occasions on which we have spoken, I regard it as part of my responsibilities to this community as an ex-Chief Minister to assist him, in terms of transfer of information, transfer of knowledge, transfer of experience and assisting, as I am sure he will do in favour of his successor, because over and above party politics, we all have the same interests that no-one, no-one in any country should think that they can score 1825 goals past the Gibraltar Government because there is a new man in No. 6, and this assists in creating architecture that I think is a jolly good idea and I have no hesitation in accepting.

1830 As I congratulate them also on having on their watch defended successfully in the tunnel litigation, the careful and considered and well-advised decisions that my Government made, and particularly me in relation to the termination of the then tunnel contract, it was a big decision, but one carefully taken on advice at every step, and I think the results that they have been able to achieve in the litigation, I think shows that and sends a signal to contractors that think that they can win tenders cheaply and then apply improper pressure or inappropriate pressure to secure a renegotiation, which is just, apart from anything else, it renders the tender process undermines the integrity of the tender process. It sends a strong signal to future tenderers that the Government of Gibraltar is not going for that and has deep enough pockets to resist, finding itself... and bear in mind that the hon. Members will not give me credit for it, but we did this knowing – because it involved many, many, many tens of millions of additional pounds for the Gibraltar Government – knowing that it would prevent us from making any meaningful start in an electorally sensitive project in the run-up to an election. I do not know whether that was a circumstance that the contractor thought he might be able to exploit, but certainly I would expect any Gibraltar Government to frankly have done the same.

1840 Mr Speaker, the hon. Member said, and I would agree with him, that it is a salutary objective that he has as an objective making tobacco revenue surplus to Government's fiscal needs. Well, I think that that is true, although I do not think we should be shy in Gibraltar. I do not know to what extent there is agreement or disagreement across the floor of this House on this, but I am not one of those who thinks that the mere existence of a market for the supply in Gibraltar of tobacco is any more illegitimate than the fact that there are products in Spain that are cheaper and where Gibraltarians go to Spain to buy there. It is true that the tobacco trade has aspects to it which are unsalutary, which damage Gibraltar's reputation and make our international critics' job easier.

1845 And therefore, I note that the hon. Member is committed to tackling some of those dimensions, but in wanting to make the Government's fiscal position not... making it irrelevant – I want to choose my words carefully – making tobacco surplus to Government's fiscal needs, we should not, in my opinion, be consciously acknowledging that a properly controlled – non-illegally operated, both in Spain and in Gibraltar if they want – tobacco trade is a legitimate source of business for Gibraltar, which does not mean that it is not a good thing, and that however legitimate it might be, it is not sensible for the Gibraltar Government not to want its fiscal position to become dependent on any one source of revenue, and tobacco... I used to curtail the growth of the on-line gaming industry, because I did not want Government's fiscal revenue to become dependent on that. I used to discourage more gaming licensees, because I did not want employment prospects in Gibraltar to become dependent on the on-line gaming industry. Diversification is a good thing and I think the hon. Member does well to take steps in the direction that he has mentioned without becoming apologetic for the existence of a properly regulated tobacco business and without feeling that there is a need to eliminate it all together. I will say a little bit more about this if the House will bear with me just for...

1860 I am not quite sure that I agree that it is necessarily a sensible thing simply to put a freeze on new licences, because all this does is attach a huge premium value to the existing ones, without imposing some sort of restriction on the transfer of those licences. I know that there is a Bill on the Order Paper, or has it been passed already, about restricting transfers of licences when people have been convicted of offences and things of that sort, which of course does not deal with this point. I think that there may be other ways of being able to achieve this objective, which does not simply reward the existing holders of licences by giving them what will become a very, very, very valuable piece of paper, if the position is that the Government will give no more.

1870 Mr Speaker, I am gratified to hear from the Deputy Chief Minister, the Hon. Dr Garcia, that the Government is firm in its commitment to fight. He did not say it, but I understand and accept, given that I have been on that side, to the best of their abilities given that the outcome is not in their hands... the exclusion of Gibraltar from further civil aviation... I think this is shocking. (Interjection) I think it is shocking, not so much now that the United Kingdom does not do something more proactive, but indeed that the other European Union Member States and the European Commission that has stood idly by and watched a small community of 30,000 people invest a very significant sum of money in building a new air terminal, precisely to obtain the benefit of this, and then thinks nothing of allowing Spain to renege on those commitments. I think, personally, I think it is one of the most shocking examples (Banging on desks) of lack of morality in the highest places in the European Union and I think... I do not know what we can do about it but whether perhaps... I do not know whether this fact that I have just said is commonly known amongst those people. Perhaps the Hon. Chief Minister might consider writing to EU member countries, members in Coreper or the Committee that deals with these exclusions to point out the fact that we have honoured our part of the commitment and showing pictures and give them another opportunity to say that it 1885 was too big and too expensive; but we did all this and that the least that the European Commission can do is not be quite so accommodating of Spain's willingness to just not honour its obligation.

1890 Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister – and I am going to rush through the last couple of points now – the Hon. the Chief Minister has launched a debate on whether it is still in Gibraltar's interests to remain in the common Customs Union or whether there is a case to be made for a change of that status, and I think has sensibly committed himself to a full consultation on that. Mr Speaker, I do not want to bore the House with legal details, but very often this is thought of as just being VAT. Of course VAT is not the measure from which we are excluded. The fact that there is not VAT in Gibraltar is one of various consequences of the fact that Gibraltar is not part of the EU for the purposes of single market in goods. Members will know that the European Union is built on four freedoms: the freedom of movement of goods, of services, of capital and of people. And that we are part of the European Union. In other words, all the treaty provisions relating to freedom of movement of services, of people and of capital apply to Gibraltar, but the freedom of movement of goods does not.

1900 Because we are not part of the single market in goods, no measure adopted by the EU under the Articles in the treaties dealing with single market in goods applies to Gibraltar, because the Articles themselves do not apply to Gibraltar. Amongst those provision that do not apply to Gibraltar for those reasons are turnover taxes. Turnover taxes are not just VAT, they are excise duties as well, and by the way, amongst the measures that do not apply for that reason but that would apply if we chose to try and join the Common Customs Union is a whole raft of other non-tax measures, which have been promulgated in the EU under the Articles dealing with the single market in goods. I cannot give him right now the list, but –

1905 Hon. Chief Minister: Article 108.

1910 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes, for example, one that springs to my mind immediately is all the plethora of EU regulations on the labelling of products, on the labelling of food, all of that is theoretically not applicable to Gibraltar today because they are single market in goods measures and we are not a member. So the debate and the consultation and the economic cost in that discussion and in that analysis has to be wider than VAT, which I am sure it would be. There are lots of consequences to this and there are, Mr Speaker, economic and political impacts. So the economic impacts would be first: what would be the implications for the private sector, in terms of impact on demand for its goods and services?

1915 The Hon. Minister for Tourism would wish to consider, for example, whether it may have a negative impact on cruise companies' willingness to programme cruise visits to Gibraltar. One of our selling points is precisely that they can load up... that it gives them certain VAT-free selling facilities, because they have touched in a non-VAT port, but I just use that as an example. There are lots of potential impacts on the private sector, which the Government will want to carefully consider in consultation with the industry when it does its cost benefit analysis.

1920 There is of course a potential very significant impact on Government revenue, but of course that has got to be considered in a level-headed way because what is the impact on Government? Amongst the impacts on the private sector of joining the Common Customs Union would be that industry would have to get used to operating a VAT system, which is cumbersome and expensive. One of the reasons why we were excluded from the single market in goods when the UK joined the EU in the first place was precisely that the UK Government – the Hon. Mr Speaker may remember this – was that the UK Government said, 'Look, I am going to leave you guys out of this. I am going to negotiate for you a derogation from this, because VAT is a very expensive tax to collect', and it is true. The cost-to-yield ratio is higher than any other form of taxation, because it has to be administered at every level of economic activity, and the UK Government said to the then Government of the day in Gibraltar, 'This is very expensive. You are going to lose a lot of your tax collection on collection costs. Therefore, we think we should protect you from this and we will leave you out of it', and that still holds good. It continues to be an expensive tax to collect and that also has to be factored in, in terms of the burden on cost and industry.

1935 But then of course VAT would be instead of import duty and it would be for the Government to consider whether as between VAT and import duty whether there is any fiscal implication for the Government of that; but it is not just VAT, it is excise duty, which is levelled in addition to VAT on such things as tobacco, alcohol and petrol. So what does the European regime provide? What would be the consequences for Gibraltar to be liable to the excise regime? Well, it is not a standardised tax. There is a minimum level at which Government's in Europe have to set excise duty on tobacco. A minimum level at which they have to set it on petrol, fuels, and a minimum level at which they have to set it on... which have I not said? Alcohol, if that is the one I have not mentioned of the three.

1940 Government revenue and Government's ability to maintain its revenue from these three products depends on the demand continuing to exist, because if the demand survives any change, then the Government will continue to collect its revenue, subject to what it may have to contribute to the EU of it, in terms of excise duty. So the question is... and no country charges the minimum. So the difference between 1945 the price of tobacco in Spain and the price of tobacco in Gibraltar is not just because we do not impose the minimum excise duty, it is because Spain imposes excise duty at a much higher level than the minimum required by this measure. It may well be – I do not know. I have never done the calculation – it may well be that imposing the minimum level of excise duty, you could try this now by modifying import duty rates to come close to the current level of the minimum excise duty to see whether what effect it has on demand. It 1950 may well be that establishing excise duty on tobacco, petrol and all these other things, at the minimum level still leaves a sufficient price differential with Spain that sets it at much higher than the minimum level, such that the demand will continue to subsist and the Government's revenues will therefore not be as adversely affected as some people might rush to conclude. But these are all things, Mr Speaker, that require very careful analysis, very careful consultation, very careful number crunching, very careful modelling, because 1955 the implications could be very significant.

There are of course private sector issues for the Hon. the Minister for Gambling to take into account.
 One of the locational advantages for us is the whole VAT thing on marketing costs and all of that, so there are issues to consider. And, of course, abandoning our current status in favour of possibly a new one, if that is what the consultation process throws up, would be the opposite of what the hon. Member did just 1960 yesterday in import duty. So, on the one hand he lowers import duty in order to reduce the cost of products to our retail outlets. Of course, he would not be able to do that if we impose VAT and excise duty and it would be a cost that he would be placing, having taken it off... carried on with what we were doing, but having significantly gone further, then it would just be putting that burden back on our retail trade.

Then there are political implications. Of course it would require a renegotiation of the UK's Treaty of 1965 Accession. I think you can almost certainly assume that the speed and ease with which Spain's consent to that change of Treaty which would be required, the speed and ease with which such consent is forthcoming is probably a measure of the extent to which it is not in Gibraltar's interests to do it; but that would be a very rough and ready rule of thumb, which I am not saying you should substitute for the careful analysis.

Of course, if we went through the process of this analysis and concluded that on balance it was worth 1970 doing, there are always going to be pros and cons, but if on balance it is worth doing, I am sure that in the balance that tipped it in favour of doing it there would be the political dividend of perhaps a more fluid frontier, of greater respect for our EU rights and diminishing Spain's ability to interfere with fluidity at the Frontier. But, of course, if that did go into the balance in that way as a positive factor, we would have to be dead certain that we would be the beneficiaries of that dividend and that that dividend would come, because 1975 we have seen how Frontier queues – yes I have nearly finished – how Frontier queues can be created just by placing a double filter 10 yards beyond the customs post.

The existence, the fact that goods are in free circulation in the EU when they are in... one of the consequences of us not being in the Common Customs Union and the single market in goods is that goods that are in France are in 'free circulation', as they are called, throughout the whole common Customs 1980 Union. You can move this manufactured item or this pair of shoes or that... you can move from one country to the other without paying duty. It is in free circulation. The fact that we are outside that regime means that goods in Gibraltar are not in free circulation in the European Union; but goods that are in Spain are certainly in free circulation. That does not stop the Spaniards putting police controls on the road just beyond Campamento. We would have to be sure that there would not be recourse to any such device to 1985 claw back any political dividend from the measure to the extent that that political dividend has gone into the balance and formed part of the carefully balanced decision to go ahead with this measure. So, Mr Speaker, it is a wide and deep issue. He always says this, together with Schengen. My understanding is that that might be a little bit of a red herring.

I personally do not think that it is legally possible for Gibraltar to have a different status in relation to 1990 Schengen than the United Kingdom. At least that was the position that was adopted against the Government of Gibraltar when I was in Government and the UK was negotiating all the police and judicial co-operation measures, and these decisions... some were called decisions and some were called... and we were always told, 'Look, it is not legally possible for Gibraltar. So you have just got to sit there and wait to see what the UK decides and the same regime has to apply to you'. I just do not see how we can... or if that situation has 1995 changed. I have heard the Minister for Europe say casually in a newspaper that he had no objection to Gibraltar getting closer than the UK to Europe if that is what... but from that political statement to a legalistic assessment of whether Gibraltar can make any choice in relation to an inter-Governmental Agreement – well, some of it is inter-Governmental, but now a lot of adopted into the Schengen acquis, different to the United Kingdom's, would be a change of what the position was when we were in 2000 Government.

Mr Speaker, very pleasing to hear the Hon. the Minister for Justice explain the report to this House on his Government's plans to arm the Police with even bigger boats. I think that this is something that we... I know it was a subject of some to-ing and fro-ing between us when we were each on a different side of the House, as the Deputy Chief Minister will recall, but never mind. It is a good thing. I wish I could interest 2005 the hon. Members, and I know that the UK Government probably does not like it, but nevertheless I could interest the hon. Members in the context, particularly of bigger boats, to revisit their consideration of the Borders and Coastguard Agency. The Borders and Coastguard Agency was partly driven by the need, the desire, once we had bigger boats, to populate the manning of these things on a multi-agency basis. Customs officers, police officers, you will not be able to man these boats just with policemen. Apart from being very expensive, it is in respect of many functions a waste of policing resources.

The hon. Members have chosen not to proceed with the Coastguard bit of the Borders and Coastguard Agency. It does not require fusion. It can be done on secondment, as many UK agencies do, and many examples in the UK are multi agency which are populated on secondment by officers but working together to do a common job. I do not know whether they remain implacably opposed to that or whether they would be willing to visit and reconsider it. Obviously, it is a matter of policy for them.

Mr Speaker, absent from today's session, the Hon. the Minister for Employment, he sort of came in to do a little bit of Caruana bashing and then he left. (Laughter) Mr Speaker, he has done a jolly good job of... almost succeeded. He has done his best to seduce me back into our traditional debates today. (Laughter) He obviously misses debating with me as much as I miss debating with him, but I am going to resist the temptation of the seduction to which he has submitted me yesterday. But I have to say in dealing very briefly with the points that he has made, and without allowing myself to be seduced, that I do not recognise the factual basis for his references to me in the facts as I know them.

Mr Speaker, when I told this House that there were only six unemployed graduates, it was because there were only six graduates unemployed registered as seeking work with the Employment Service. In the same way as when they bring us statistics to this House about how many unemployed there are of this or that category, men, women, the construction, it must be on the basis of the information available to them, which at any given time of course there may be people who subsequently decide to enter the labour market and therefore become economically active. Hon. Members know that the definition of an economically active person is a person who is either in employment or out of employment, but seeking employment, as opposed to my wife who is unemployed, but has no desire to work, does not seek work, and therefore is not regarded by anybody as being unemployed (Interjection) But she is a graduate. Okay? (Laughter and banging on desks) Do you see what I mean? So I think it is important to put all these things in perspective. (Interjections)

Mr Speaker, I think it is too late. I am in the twilight of my political career. It is too late for me to save or enhance my political reputation and by the same token I think it is probably too late for the Hon. Minister for the Employment to undermine or sully, for the very same reasons, my political reputation. So I do not intend to engage with him in point by point detail by detail. He is not here, but I am sure he is listening to me on the radio. Affectionately listening to me on the radio – (Laughter) I bet right now his moustache is twitching and he is scratching his moustache with his mischievous smile on his face.

The record is this, Mr Speaker. First of all the Hon. Minister for the Employment, the Hon. Minister Bossano knows that he has to treat figures about Gibraltarians and non-Gibraltarians in work cautiously for the reason that is warned by the Government Statistician every year in the Employment Survey and remains in the Employment Survey for 2013 and just tabled in this House. This nationality split – that is to say between 'Gibraltarian' and 'Other British' – presents problems of accuracy. Some employers classify all their British employees, including Gibraltarians, under the 'Other British' category, and since no personal details are provided, it is not possible to differentiate between the two categories. In other words, whilst everybody that registers as a Gibraltarian... whilst everyone that is registered, because it is done by the employer, in the employment surveys as Gibraltarian is certainly Gibraltarian. Amongst the British 'Other British' category, there will be Gibraltarian British and non-Gibraltarian British, thereby distorting, insofar as concerns identifying Gibraltarians, the comparability of both figures.

But the published figures of Gibraltarians in employment, subject to that point that I have made, which would make the figures better, not worse, are that in 1988 there were 8,836 Gibraltarians in employment. In 1996, by the time the Hon. the Minister for the Employment had finished being Chief Minister, there were 9,390. In 2010, which is the latest figure available here, there were 10,706, and that figure had risen again in 2011. There has been a significant growth in the number of Gibraltarians in employment, not a fall in the number of Gibraltarians in employment. A very significant increase in the number of Gibraltarians in employment during the GSD years in Government, as there had been to a limited extent to a more limited extent because they were in office for fewer years presumably, under the previous GSLP Government.

Mr Speaker, when we left office the number of Gibraltarians in employment stood at record levels. So all that presentation by the Hon. the Minister for Employment with which my Learned Friend, Mr Bossino, otherwise disposed of anyway, based on somehow there being fewer Gibraltarians in employment is a complete nonsense. Mr Speaker, the fact that some Gibraltarians – mainly I suspect as a matter of personal choice – passed from being full time to part time is invariably a matter of choice. The hon. Members know that there is no tradition, that there is no syndrome in Gibraltar of employers converting full-time jobs to part-time jobs over the heads and wishes of employees. One never hears about this in the newspapers; it just does not exist as a phenomenon. So if at any given time there is an increase or decrease in full time or part time, it is because individuals are making choices either to move to part-time employment or employers are accommodating individuals, usually it has to be said women in connection with starting families and things of that sort into more part-time employment.

2070 But, Mr Speaker, the suggestion that somehow the Hon. the Minister for the Employment in just this year alone... he says there are 650 more Gibraltarians. Well, where were those 650 before Mr Bossano worked his magic during the last 12 months? They certainly were not registered as unemployed because there were not 650 Gibraltarians registered as unemployed. We know that from the unemployment statistics. So where have they come from? This idea that in a workforce the size of ours it is possible... yes, 2075 by reference to the reproduction joint collective effort of all married and non-married reproducers 18 years ago (Laughter) that it is possible for there to suddenly appear in Gibraltar 650 new additional Gibraltarians to put in employment that were not before even registered as unemployed, let alone where they were physically, barely needs articulating. It is so obvious that it cannot be the case.

2080 Not only did we have record numbers of Gibraltarians in work, but, as importantly, their take home pay, their disposable income, the amount of money that we put into the pockets of Gibraltarian families also rose to record levels. (Banging on desk) So it just was not more Gibraltarians working, it was more Gibraltarians having more money to spend in their households in whatever way they pleased.

Mr Speaker, my final point, I promise, and it is very briefly made. I will just limit it to saying this to the Hon. Minister Linares, who is temporarily absent from the seat in which he has been sitting all morning. 2085 (Interjection) If he wants to... he is now returning to the Chamber. (Laughter and banging on desks) Mr Speaker, if he wants to make a comparison of the cost of his new power station and the one that we had contracted, and he wants to do it in a way which meets the Chief Minister's standard of 'framing the debate in honesty', then he has got to compare like with like. He has got to give us an explanation of what was included in our contract of £100-odd million, what is and is not included in his, so that we can see whether 2090 it is fair to allow people to run away with the false impression that they are getting for half the price what we had contracted to get, which is a complete and utter nonsense. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) So in the interests of framing the debate in integrity, let us have in this House...but again I know this is not the case, but again, if he can demonstrate that I am wrong he will not find me unready to quickly, apologise to him.

2095 What I think he should now do is that you should publish and lay in this House – and I challenge him to do so – the contract specification of the one that he terminated, including all his termination costs of it, and including all the lost opportunity, including the land costs that he is now going to incur, all the things, the pluses and the minuses of the package that we contracted for and the package that he has contracted for, so that we can make a real interpretation of the comparison and be certain that when comparing like for like, 2100 generator for generator... machine, he may not actually be paying more than we were paying for our generating machines. (Banging on desks)

I am a grateful to the House for indulging me, a backbencher... a mere backbencher, for an hour and twenty minutes.

ADJOURNMENT

Chief Minister (Hon F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, that was of course in very many ways an excellent riposte to the speech of the Leader of the Opposition that we had to hear on Monday, for reasons that I will 2110 be explaining to the House when I can continue with my presentation of the Appropriation Bill in my reply tomorrow at 11.30 in the morning.

So I therefore move that the House adjourn to tomorrow until 11.30 in the morning.

Mr Speaker: The House will now adjourn to tomorrow at 11.30 in the morning. 2115

SECOND READING

Appropriation Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved

Clerk: Sitting of Parliament, Thursday, 3rd July 2014.
Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill 2014. Budget speeches continue.

Mr Speaker: All hon. Members having contributed to the debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill, I will now call upon the Chief Minister to exercise his right to reply.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, when one does not hear much credible opposition to a Bill presented by the Government, one has to wonder whether there is any point, really, in rising to reply; but the fact that things are not credible, does not mean that they might not linger in people's minds, and therefore it is, in my view, necessary to reply.

Mr Speaker, this has been, actually, quite a busy week for Gibraltar. Budget week is always going to be a week that is exciting for our community, in terms of the State of the Nation analysis that we do in this House, and of course the numbers that are published, although hon. Members and the House have the estimates since April, our community only sees them when we start this debate. But this year we have had on Budget Day also the very welcome visit by the Minister for Europe, the Rt. Hon. Mr Lidington, the publication at one minute after midnight, the immediate next day on the Tuesday, of an excellent Foreign Affairs Committee Report, the very title of which I think is reflective of the Foreign Affairs Committee's always very positive attitude towards Gibraltar. The very next day the visit, the return visit of 'EU Inspectors', as the press likes to call them, from the European Commission, and today we round up this Budget debate. So a very full week indeed, not just for politicians in Gibraltar, but I think for the whole community.

But, as I have said before, Mr Speaker, I am first and foremost in politics because I am a Parliamentarian and therefore this debate is always in the year the highlight of this week for me, or at least some aspects of it are. Mr Speaker, we heard, with my own speech included, already 10 speeches from Ministers, Ministers who have demonstrated in the speeches that they have given to this House that they really are in the thick of delivering on manifesto commitments – really in the middle of it. No question of any excuses. Here is what we are doing. Here is how we are doing it.

We heard announcements about the new Power Station tender being awarded, one of the most important projects that any Government will have the honour to discharge for our community. You were in one of such Governments, Mr Speaker, in the 1980s, that delivered the Power Station at Waterport. It is my honour to lead a Government that will deliver the next Power Station for Gibraltar.

We had announcements about new tenders for buses to be delivered for our community. We heard about new homes being delivered for our community. We heard about car parks finalised where they are most needed, in record time, and a University to be delivered in time before the next General Election by September of next year. All of that, Mr Speaker, in addition to two new schools being delivered in the Upper Town, in this community delivering one new school has always been a huge positive. We are delivering two, and the person who is delivering them is also delivering a University.

40 All of that, Mr Speaker, in the context of huge growth in the Gaming Industry, an industry that has grown half again in the two and a half years that we have been in Government – over 1,050 extra jobs in the last two and a half years – but not just jobs for outsiders because, Mr Speaker, we have heard about more jobs for Gibraltarians than ever in the history of Gibraltar. The highest number of Gibraltarians in employment, the highest number of jobs for Gibraltarians in two years, an average of 325 every year. Six hundred and fifty jobs in two years. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) We have heard about those achievements. We have heard about our political work to ensure that European skies remain open to airlines flying to Gibraltar and we are not excluded from European Rules and benefits.

45 We have heard about replenished beaches and new incentives for the bunkering industry and we have heard about great advances in domiciliary care and care for our elderly. If that were not enough we, of course, heard about a Health Service that is now coming in on budget and working well, introducing new mechanisms for patient care, day surgery units that work and keep beds free and we have heard about the details of that new Power Station from the Minister, who is going to be responsible for delivering it, as well as great advances in sport and in culture. A new gallery opened, Gibraltar's exhibition of modern art. And you heard that, Mr Speaker, from Ministers at the top of their game, delivering game-changing progress in each of their areas of responsibility. In fact, Mr Speaker, I think it is fair to say that for most of this session, seven tenths of it... or ten seventeenths of it rather, the House has been in quite buoyant mood, like, I put it to the House, the Nation is, when Ministers have been setting out what they have been working on in delivering for our community. But it was in the midst, Mr Speaker, of that crisp, fresh, sunshine that saw these Ministerial interventions delivered – incidentally, crisp, fresh, sunshine in a Poniente breeze, the hon. Lady opposite might like to note – that we heard perhaps some of the most irrelevant and unpersuasive speeches of the Members opposite, with some notable exemptions, which I shall come on to.

60 But, Mr Speaker, the whole debate and the whole attitude that hon. Members have taken to the debate really puts me in mind of one particular phrase of Kipling's, from probably one of the most powerful poems in literary history... Members will remember it, 'If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken, twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools...' from If – because, Mr Speaker, although I had heard the saying that the truth hurts, I had not actually seen quite how much hurt the truth could do until I had the temerity to tell the truth on social media. You see, Mr Speaker, I invited hon. Members at the beginning of this debate to frame the debate in honesty and I am a man who frames his debates in honesty and his tweets too, and that is why, Mr Speaker, I tell it like it is in here and I tell it like it is outside, and I am going to tell it as it is in here this morning too.

70 I think there have been few more boring, more inconsequential and more flat speeches delivered in this debate on the Appropriation Bill in the years since this Parliament has been considering an Appropriation, than that of the current Leader of the Opposition. It is true, Mr Speaker, I actually posted a comment about the speech by Mr Netto, who had a similar snooze-inducing effect on me and, I put it to the House, on some other Members too, but I think actually that I have to give it to him, maybe that is why he is the Leader of the Group that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition outdid even Mr Netto in the poor quality of his very short speech.

75 I was going to do a detailed analysis of the Leader of the Opposition's speech, but of course there are two issues mitigating against that. First, I have done so in my opening speech, before he delivered his address; and second, because there is little to analyse, but there is much to correct, Mr Speaker. In fact, the little that there was to analyse, Mr Speaker, was actually so effectively contradicted by the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana, that I will deal with many of the things that Mr Feetham said in great measure by agreeing with the contribution by the hon. the backbencher. In fact, Mr Speaker, I think it is fair to say that the contributions on some of those benches opposite have been so at cross purposes that one of the things that I will be doing today is showing how Mr Caruana's arguments... Sir Peter Caruana's arguments, excuse me – assist in dealing with the Hon. Leader of the Opposition's arguments and how one of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's arguments assists me in dealing with Sir Peter's arguments himself. Of course, what that results in is that the Caruana argument checks Feetham, the Feetham argument checks Caruana, and it is a stalemate for the GSD.

90 One of the other things I will do is I will review for the House and the community's amusement, if nothing else, the extraordinarily badly designed advertisement placed only in one of our national daily newspapers that Members opposite appear to have wanted to waste their funds on. Well, I am delighted to see them wasting money before an Election is called, Mr Speaker.

95 I am also very sorry, Mr Speaker, to see that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition decided that he was just going to deliver the speech that he came with and that he was not going to adapt it in any way. He was not going to see that some of it might have been rendered entirely irrelevant by the facts I disclosed, or indeed actually quite dangerous ground to continue to delve into, but never mind. I actually understood why he was stuck, why he had checked himself into a corner on this political chess board when I saw what he had sent to the printers. There was no way out. He could not just change the speech. He would have to change the speech and the advert, all too late by then probably, knowing what print deadlines are like for that sort of advertisement.

100 Mr Speaker, I think it must have dawned on him as it must have dawned on all of them opposite – almost like the new dawn of 9th December 2011 – that they had a serious problem with this Budget, because I did not just express it as a game-changing Budget, it was a game-changing Budget, in particular because of what is actually being delivered and because of the analysis that discloses why recurrent expenditure has gone up and who is responsible for recurrent expenditure going up. One of the few things 105 on which the hon. the backbencher and I will disagree this morning is exactly what the increase in recurrent expenditure has been and what it is attributable to.

Mr Speaker, there are some people, I assume, in this community, who just will support either of one of the two main parties because they are tribal and they simply have an ideological bent, which puts them in one side or another, and that is absolutely fine, Mr Speaker. I support Liverpool Football Club, even when 110 they lose. In politics one says that, you know, one needs one's friends when one is wrong; not when one is right. Oh, my goodness, do the chaps opposite need their friends. There may be some people, Mr Speaker, in this community, who are convinced by a sound bite and who are convinced by a headline, but actually, apart from those tribal supporters of each of our particular parties, I ascribe to the electorate in Gibraltar the ability to do very careful analysis. They listen and they understand and they make up their minds for 115 themselves. They are not carried away by a sound bite or a headline.

So, Mr Speaker, just taking a first look at the 'big lie' advert, one of the things that is the premise of all of the speeches we have heard, and of this advertisement, is that we said that there was no money; and that has now been proven to be untrue. Well, why can we demonstrate, Mr Speaker, that that was no big lie? There are a number of ways of doing it... yesterday we obtained another.

120 You see, if hon. Members do not want to continue to have to speak against me and what I said during the course of the General Election campaign, which is not as they characterise it... but anyway, let us look at what the man they have oft described as near the Holy Grail of Gibraltar politics said yesterday. I said we were near the debt limit, Mr Speaker, yes. Members opposite said that is not true and it was never true. Goodness gracious. Sir Peter, yesterday, was to his credit, and in the style and guise of a backbencher not 125 involved in the political cut and thrust, entirely straight forward about the position as it had been. He said that when he was a – el telefono de los aludidos [Inaudible] (Laughter) He said that when he was leaving the Administration he was reaching the limit and he would have gone for a resolution to borrow more, and he confirmed it yesterday in this debate. Mr. Speaker, I say to him that his honesty, in the way that he presented his argument, enhances him in the eyes of the House, no doubt, as he describes himself as being 130 in his twilight years in this place, which he made it clear also yesterday. This is what he said, and these are his exact words:

'On that basis [...] of course'

135 – he is talking about debt –

'it is possible what they have done'

140 –talking about us –

'is adopted the GSD's policy on how to fund a manifesto commitment, whilst staying within prudential bounds and legal bounds, because he has been fortunate and in that I would have been willing, whilst keeping within economically prudent guidelines, to have changed the law to increase the debt ceiling, the debt limit, which I acknowledge would have been necessary...'

145 Now, that is not the ogre, Fabian Picardo, who cannot count, saying it. This is Sir Peter Caruana, a man whose citation for the receipt of his Knighthood was his prowess, economically in relation to Gibraltar, and who has of course, as a previous Chief Minister, the respect of the whole House and yesterday was very clear in the way that he was making his address. So when the first part of the big lie advert – it is incredible how that now can start to mean something else, the big lie advert – the first part of the big lie advert and the 150 first premise that the hon. Members were trying to persuade us of and spin in this House was that we had lied during the course of the General Election...it has been a theme they have been developing for over two years – that the debt ceiling had been reached or was being reached. Well, that is now actually confirmed by the man who was their leader. In fact, it is just not confirmed by the man who was their leader, it is not just Sir Peter Caruana, ex-leader of the GSD, who has confirmed that the debt ceiling was being reached and the 155 only way to fund the GSD's manifesto commitments was to change the law in order to move the ceiling, this was said by a man, who the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has described as possibly the greatest Gibraltarian politician of our time, or of all time, depending on who is listening; but I do think he is trying to be quite flattering when he says either of those two.

160 And so, although it is not something that... I know he does like to butter people up at different times in order to persuade them to continue to support him, that is more than just butter, that is lard that you are pouring on there. But anyway – (A Member: Jam!) That is not jam. That is lard. (Interjection and laughter) But you know I have always been very honest with Sir Peter. He is a man who enjoys my respect. I do not consider him the greatest Gibraltar politician of all time, let's face it, but let's face it, he stood there yesterday, in all honesty, and flatly contradicted every theory that has been advanced by his successor, as 165 Leader of the GSD, and which had been the basis of his intervention on Monday in his reply to me and had been the basis of this, no doubt, expensive exercise in an attempted public relations. But I am very grateful to the man that the Leader of the Opposition describes as the greatest Gibraltar politician of all time because if he wants to take steps towards that accolade being real, then telling the truth in this House is obviously one of them and not allowing this mendacious attempt at misleading the people of Gibraltar that appeared in one of our newspapers yesterday to prevail, is an important way forward.

170 But there is another aspect of what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition said and that his Deputy repeated not just in this House, I think even outside it, about the level of debt today and how high it is. Why should I reply to that? Why should I sit down and write a paragraph that deals with that issue and explains it, Mr Speaker? It is an important issue, but should I sit down and think of a form of words to use to explain actually where we are? I do not need to, because Sir Peter was very clear yesterday in what he said about that. He said, talking about the level of debt today:

180 '... let us be clear. I think the level of net public debt remains, even increased as they have been, well within the levels that are prudent in macro-economic terms by any European standard. So I am not saying any of this'

– talking about the dispute between him and me at the Election –

185 'to criticise the level of public debt. They are the level, or perhaps lower for all I know, than they would have been had we been in office...'

So do I need to say to hon. Members opposite there is no issue with the level at which net debt is today or will they take it from what – he will allow me to say, in the fondest possible terms – the horse's mouth? I assume that he will want to go back, and where the advert talks about 'net debt higher than ever', he may want to add, 'but greatest Gibraltar politician of all time says it is okay', because he prays him in aid whenever he 190 thinks he is wobbling in the leadership of the party, so he might want to pray him in aid on this argument too. So obviously now, not so firm on the issue of net debt, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition wanted to continue with what he has been spinning outside of this House as the big issue that he obviously wants to fight the next Election on, because he seems to be fighting an Election every single day, which is the huge increases in recurrent expenditure. Why he does that to himself, Mr Speaker, I just do not know.

195 I have spent a good hour... I do not like to speak for two and a half hours in a Budget debate... you know, I leave that to the man who he thinks is the greatest Gibraltar politician of all time. I would rather do short addresses, but I had to do it because he had been goading me on recurrent expenditure, so I gave him the benefit of the analysis of where the recurrent expenditure increases came from. I demonstrated to him that their increases in expenditure with their continuing cost were responsible for about 45% or so of the increases in recurrent expenditure. Then I demonstrated that another 40% or 45% were the things which are at large –the market forces, the diesel fuel, the cost of the scholarships etc – and I therefore had demonstrated to him that in the amounts of the increase, if it was £20 million in one year, if it was £15 million in one year, GSLP Liberal spending represented 10%. Two million in the context of £20 million. I am sorry to do this exercise for him, but I am left with the impression that they cannot count. Two 200 million in the context of £20 million, £1.9 million in the context of £19 million, and therefore in the context of a budget, which might be £440 million, 1% of the budget... even less.

205 You see, Mr Speaker, to continue to then get up and say the problem with this Budget is the increase in recurrent expenditure is either to say to him, 'Look, do not bother addressing me on any subject because I am going to be a brick wall just because I think it is more useful to attack you on recurrent expenditure' or to say 'I have got a different analysis', but he does not make the analysis, Mr Speaker. He then talks about the size of the increase in cash terms, but does not descend to particulars. He does not analyse what those millions are for. He does not look at the amount that is diesel, the amount that is students, and therefore the only other conclusion that one can make is that he is saying he would cut it. So if he is not interested in looking at what the increase is and saying, 'Well, fair enough. We gave those pay rises. I understand that is 215 the £15 million. Fair enough, that £30 million is diesel fuel. We were wrong to contract for another diesel powered station, but you are going to get us out of it because you have gone for gas.' It is criticising the £66 million increase. What is he saying? We are going to cut the electricity for three hours a day to burn less diesel. We are going to send a third of our students to London instead of all of them. We are going to cut back public sector pay. We are going to sack a third of the public servants. Which is it? He needs to tell me
 220 which it is. Which part of the increase would he not have done? Or is he simply going to go into the next Election saying, ‘We are going to stop recurrent expenditure from rising even beyond inflation?’ Inflation is 2%. There is £2 million of some budgetary increases. He has got to stick his colours to a mast. I know that he is used to going from mast to mast – GSLP, Labour... GSD. What is left? There are not many masts out there. But on issues, and on arguments, if he wants to have the argument, he has got to stick his colours to something. What would he cut?

We were responsible for 10% of the increase. He says it is £100 million. Well, look, I was working with a different figure, but let us work with the figure of £100 million. We were responsible for 10%. They were responsible for 90%. Okay. They... or the market forces were responsible for 90%. Will they cut the market forces bit out? Would they cut back on the things they did? Is he saying... look, he says it all the time. He criticises Sir Peter all the time for things he used to do in Government, which I do now, and he sometimes criticises me and therefore is criticising him. Is he saying he was wrong to increase public sector pay by 2.7%, 2.9% and 2.5%? If that was wrong, you have saved £15 million. I assume he would also say that I was wrong to raise it 2.5%. Fair enough, it is a belt-tightening argument. He gets up and he says to all public workers in Gibraltar, ‘We are going back to your salaries where they were in 2010. It was wrong to go to parity plus. We stick with parity, the 1% increase, and we are saving £15 million for our community’, an argument which I do not share; but if he thinks it has to be made, he must make it... £15 million out of £100 million.

Another £30 million, the cost of the diesel... ‘Ladies and gentlemen, people of Gibraltar, tonight as from midnight there will be no electricity until tomorrow at six o’clock in the morning. Do not worry, you will be able to heat your boilers and feed your children because it will only be for the six hours in the evening that there is no electricity’. He might find that John Cortes agrees with him, you never know. (Laughter) It is a quarter of the day, six hours. It is an argument, so he might save an important part of the £30 million.

‘My dear students, we cannot send you all, as the costs are too high. It is now £12 million. The increase is £6 million. We are going to send x number. You have to compete’. I would have respect for that position, but I would not share it. I would say to people, we can run this economy, because in the same way as we have the highest recurring expenditure in history, something I will remind Mr Bossino of, he forgot to say we also have the highest recurrent revenue in history. Right? We can run this economy, but we need to stop making the mistakes they were making. We need to replace the diesel with gas, which is cheaper, and we need to do other things, but we do not just say we are going to stop the recurrent expenditure.

Anyway, he must think, Mr Speaker – the Leader of the Opposition – that people cannot add up, that they are not doing this exercise, because it is all very nice to be told that you are spending too much. It sounds good the first time. We might all think, ‘Oh, careful, I might be spending too much’, but when you are told every day you have to say, ‘What should I spend less on?’, and if they were not the Opposition, if they were the Government, what would they be spending less on? Well, the Holy Grail, the oracle has said he would be spending more. That he would have changed the debt ceiling and gone for more spending. Well, look, I do not necessarily disagree with him. We are doing it in a different way, but we agree that we have to continue spending for growth. It has worked for this community within prudent levels and we still run surpluses. But what are they saying? If he makes the argument on recurrent expenditure, even he must realise he cannot get away without saying where he would cut the expenditure. He nods, but he never answers. He got up and he delivered a speech that criticised the expenditure, but he did not say what he would cut. So he is a critic, Mr Speaker, but he is not answering his own question.

Anyway, the other thing that the advertisement says that we lied about was the fact that there was only £2 million left in the kitty. You see, of course, Mr Speaker, that is not something that we said at the Election. The advertisement says that we said at the Election that the borrowing limits had been reached – well, we more or less said that and two and half years later Sir Peter Caruana has admitted it – and that we said there were £2 million left in the kitty. We did not say that at the Election. We did not know that at the Election.

The Hon. the ex-Deputy Chief Minister, the Leader of the PDP, Keith Azopardi, and I found out... I do not know whether it was on the Leaders’ debate or on one of the questions and answers at the Mackintosh Hall (Interjection) Oh, was it the Leaders’ debate. I have tried to block it out. (Laughter and interjection) The Hon. the then leader of... the Hon. then the Chief Minister told the community that the debt was £520 million. It was not £450 million or £480 million any more. and it was four days later, on 13th December, that I received what I have already referred to him in shorthand, so that he does not forget it, because it appears that he has problems with retention and that is why I give names to things, so that he remembers... the ‘doomsday memo’, which tells me not that I am going to have £2 million left in April. I am left to work that out myself. It tells me that there is £60 million left and three and a half months to go y la paga de Pascua por salir.

Right, so, let us be clear. We did not know that there were £2 million left in the kitty at the time of the Election. We found out four days after the Election; but if he says it is not true, he should have the decency of making clear that the people that we are saying are misleading the public are the people who misled their Government, the people in the Treasury. I do not think anybody in politics in Gibraltar before has ever suggested that the people in the Treasury mislead the public or their Government, another little thing in the memo, in the advert, which is now demonstrated to be true by an empirical objective measure. I do not 285 know whether he has got the doomsday memo still from last year. I remind him that it is attached to the printed version of my speech he can find on the website so I do not have to read it to him today. No, the memo; not the advert. I assume everybody has got the advert. Most fish and chips salesman are making very good use of it today and I would very much look forward to receiving my churros on Saturday wrapped in it. But I mean the memo. The thing that matters. The thing from the Treasury, not yesterday's 290 newspaper from him. I mean the memo from the Treasury. He can look at it online because a little bit of thought might actually help him with a better argument for next year, instead of just this argument about a lie, because you see the lie is not put on the lips of the politician; it is put on the lips of the official and that is absolutely unfair.

I am very sorry to see that people who have served their Government very loyally and served this 295 Government very loyally, regardless of the partisan colour of it, have to suffer being called liars in advertisements in newspapers and in the political discourse. They do not deserve it, because even the greatest politician, Gibraltarian politician of all time has now admitted that there was a need to go for more borrowing, that there was no money left in the kitty because we were reaching the limit. I think if they had to choose, if the public had to choose between the Financial Secretary, the Chief Minister of Gibraltar and 300 the ex-Chief Minister of Gibraltar on one side and the current Leader of the Opposition, Daniel Feetham, on the other as to who they believe, the people of Gibraltar are not going to take very long to make up their minds.

But another thing that he said, really riding into it, despite the many warnings in my opening speech, was that the Government that he was part of was very good at sticking to budgets and that we were very bad
 305 at sticking to budgets and we really had to get some budgetary discipline. Well, Mr Speaker, the fascinating thing about numbers is that they do not lie, as Joe Bossano often says to me. In the 16 years that they were in office, they managed to overspend on departmental expenditure, not £1 million, not £2 million – these are not my numbers, these are the Treasury's... they managed to overspend by £158,289,000.686. I will do it later on in another context, but I did not have the soul to divide that by £120,000 and tell the community
 310 how many doctors they could have had for that. (Interjections) (Banging on desks) I think it is something like a thousand and some left over. It is incredible... £158 million in their last year in office. The glorious 15th or 16th, they overspent by £24 million. If they would have had another month, they would have won the Election. Even I would have voted for them if he had turned up at my house with his cheque book. (Laughter) For goodness sake, £24 million of overspend. Ni se compra, ni se vende, el pueblo, decian.
 315 (Laughter) £24 million; £13,700,000 the year before; £11,300,000 the year before; £12,400,000 the year before that; £14,400,000 the year before that; £7,700,000 the year before that; £8 million the year before that; £11,100,000 the year before that – of course the year of the Election; £650,000,000 the year before that; £9,700,000 the year before that; £6,500,000 the year before that; £12,000,000 the year of the Election before that; £4,300,000 the year before that; £3,500,000 the year before that; £2,500,000 the year before 320 that; and £9,600,000 the year after the first Election.

Discipline in departmental spending, and this is a Government of which he was a member. Well, I mean, it is Danny. He was a member in the last four years, a supporter for the three before, an opponent for the three before that in his own party, and a hostile aggressor against it for the first four years. So it is not 325 fair to say that he was a member of it. He was only a member of it for four years and we do not know of those four whether he was a supporter of it for much of them, but anyway, never mind. One of the things that he does is he accuses me of being a huge over-spender in No. 6 Convent Place. Well, fascinatingly, one of the things in the advert is that No. 6 expenditure is 93 % higher than any other Department and there is a 67% increase in staff at Convent Place. Well, I do not know where he has worked that out. Maybe it is because in my ministerial responsibility I took IT, that added 20, and we employed nine in the EUID. Does 330 he not understand that as portfolios move around, people are accounted for in different places? Even he must understand that, so it must be a mendacious attempt at presenting things in a way that he thinks is going to go his way. But let us look at this terrible Chief Minister, this terrible Chief Minister who is overspending in 6 Convent Place. What is the overspending in 6 Convent Place that the terrible Chief Minister is doing? Let us not just look at the numbers, let us see what the numbers mean.

Private sector legal fees are up from £50,000 to £200,000. Look, it depends on what needs to be drafted. Communication information expenses are up from £975,000 to £1.8 million. Private sector legal fees are up 335 from £250,000 to £780,000. Government lobbying, hospitality and travel is up from £300,000 to £1.17 million. Sundry grants are up from £300,000 estimate with a forecast out-turn of £215,000 actually to £5.15 million. Oh hang on, that is 2003-04. (Laughter) And 2003... 2002, private sector legal fees up from 340 £50,000 to £382,000; communication and information expenses up from £192,000 to £975,000; a budget of £6,700,000 went up to £12.6 million. It was not me. It was the oracle, the greatest Gibraltarian politician of all time admittedly, admittedly at the time of joint sovereignty... admittedly, and admittedly costs of No. 6 have gone up at the time of renewed hostility by Spain – absolutely true. But look, it is the same sort of increase, almost identical, but over 10 years later.

345 Before we look at the detail of that, we will talk about the numbers of people employed in Convent Place, well look that is just an adjustment of people moving from Department to Department depending on the change of ministerial portfolios. But given that he has opened the can of worms, I am very happy to report to the House that the information I had, which only went back to 2003 in respect of public sector employees, excluding the MOD, I now have back to 1998. So if the House will recall that I said on Monday
350 that in the Employment Survey, which is the October survey, in 2003 there were 2,938 people, excluding the MOD, in the public sector and that that went up – I will not bore you with all the other details – it went up to 4,804 when we took over in the payroll in December 2011, an increase from 2003 to 2011 – less than ten years – in eight years, of 1,866 people in the public sector under the GSD. That is an increase of just under 40% in the size of the public sector.

355 I now have the figure for 1998, which was 2,857. The increase in the public sector between 1998 and December 2011 was from 2,857 to 4,804. I do not think hon. Members should be visiting at our door any huge concern about more people at Convent Place because the portfolios have been distributed in a different way. This is not recruitment into one Department or other. This is a huge change – 68% almost. So even accounting for the fact, as I told the House on Monday, that we took on people from the MOD and sell 360 services to the MOD, as a result, but it is not a zero sum game, we lose a bit in the interim, there is a huge increase in the public sector. Can they please explain to me how they can be concerned about a few more people at Convent Place if they have supported this huge increase? Not all of it is MOD... not all of it. So I assume that the criticisms are levelled at me today by the advert and straight back at you, Sir Peter, given the increases that we can show.

365 But then he says, ‘You don’t just overspend on recurrent expenditure, Chief Minister, you are terrible. You overspend on capital projects’. Vanity projects, they call them... vanity projects. We are spending on vanity projects and overspending. Well, Mr Speaker, I do think there is something going on and I have not quite worked it out. I think one of them – I still do not know who – is probably the most Machiavellian politician that this planet, let alone this nation, has ever seen, because why would it be in their interest to 370 draw me back to one of my other favourite Election issues, which was the cost of the Airport? Approach of that went from announcement in all splendour – I still have the Chronicle at home, I keep it with my rosette – at £25 million to be partly funded by the European Union to £84 million entirely funded by the people of Gibraltar, and actually, as the hon. the backbencher said, entirely useless because the other side have failed – entirely useless for the reason why it was built there – have failed to deliver on their part of the bargain. Very nice it is too. No, this is not an architectural competition. But look, if at £84 million, you did at least 375 produce something that looked fairly alright. So be it. But anybody would have got sacked for that overspend, and he did. The CEO of Gibraltar PLC was fired for a 236% increase in price on what he used to describe as one of Gibraltar’s ‘flagship projects’. So much for the over spenders; but it would be unfair on the now Leader of the Opposition to visit that on him, because I am sure that whilst the then Chief Minister was beavering away to ensure that that Airport was completed in time for the Election, he was beavering
380 away to see whether he could take the leadership of the party just before the Election in time to try and win it. And the Hon. Mr Bossino said to us, which I will come to in a little while, that he does not want to hear about Montiel or Caruana anymore, it is a new team. (Laughter) So let us look at the new team.

385 What about the new Prison? I know the hon. Gentleman was not allowed to do many projects that involved spending of cash whilst he was Minister for Justice, but the new Prison and the new Courts were things that he had issues with the plaques over. I know that there was a swift changing of plaque at the Prison as to who opened it and did not open it, and there was a huge malaise for days over the fact that the Hon. the now Minister for Justice has his name on the plaque in the Courts and not him. But anyway, let us look just at the finances.

390 New Prison... because he was not in charge of the Airport, he was in charge of this. The original contract sum for the Prison £5.2 million; an extra floor £0.45 million; prolongation costs £0.94 million; final costs que tardó más tiempo £8.1 million. A £3.1 million overspend. A 55% overspend. Well look, I accept that projects are overspent on. We all know they are, but do not make a virtue of things being in on budget, when even you have been presiding over a 55% overspend. Say, ‘things cost more than you usually 395 expect them to cost’. There is the po ya que esta aspect to any project. Okay, we understand that, but do not pretend that your virtue is that you will not ever overspend.

400 And then, Mr Speaker, if that is just an anecdotal example, let us look at the Courts. That project, which incidentally nobody ever described as a vanity project. Nobody describes the Courts as a vanity project. Nobody describes the Prison as a vanity project, but the seat of Government is a vanity project or a park in the centre of our city, which thousands of our people already use, is a vanity project. These are not vanity projects. Maybe they were just ‘vanity plaques’ that he was going to put up on the wall to describe himself as the person who opened them. Those were £7.5 million original cost. The final cost... there was a lot of talk about Mr Bossano being upset at overspending and that is why he was not here, so I do not know whether I want to put him through this, but the final cost was 82% overrun – 82% over run. He is tranquilo now because you are no longer here to commit this sort of overspend. (Laughter)

Oh, there is nothing wrong with an overspend if there is a problem and it has to happen, but do not pretend that you do not ever overspend and we are overspending and how in control you would have been, because to do the exercise that the hon. Lady wanted to do, the overspend of the £9.3 million on the Prison and the Courts together, at £120,000 a year, £130,000 a year, is 72 doctors (Interjections) Mr Minister for Health. It is a nonsensical calculation. It does not make any sense whatsoever. It is one year's pay for those doctors. You could have them for one year and then get rid of them, or you could have five for a lifetime; but the hon. Lady does a calculation which is meaningless, which is to divide by the one year's salary the amounts that she wants to divide. Well, her present leader – because I do see him in that in perfect tense – would have been responsible for 72 doctors, if he had not overspent. For a year, we could have had GPs everywhere if he had not overspent, based on her calculations; but never let a detail or a fact like that get in the way of a good sound bite.

And then the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition describes No. 6 Convent Place as a Venetian palace. Well, I entirely agree with him. I entirely agree with him. When I walked in there, Mr Speaker, with the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, the day after the Election, we found ourselves in a Venetian palace with terracotta walls and blue and yellow curtains and chandeliers from across the seas. Look, everyone has their own tastes. Venetian palaces are not for me. Blue and yellow curtains are not for me. There was a refurbishment of this office of the Chief Minister of Gibraltar into office of the Venetian prince sometime in the Financial Year 2001-02. It was literally a refurbishment... a redecoration. Not one square metre of extra office space was added. It was just, you know, a paint job, lift, new curtains and the odd chandelier. The costs of that redecoration were in excess of £1 million 10 years ago... 12 years ago. That does not include the paintings which the hon. Gentleman bought in the United Kingdom of Naval scenes involving Gibraltar and, in particular, the Battle of Trafalgar, which hangs in his room, which cost in excess of £100,000... a £100,000. We could have hung a doctor on the wall for a year. (Laughter and banging on desks) That would have been good for the blood pressure of the incumbent in the room. (Laughter) Doing the calculations that the hon. Lady... That painting no longer hangs in the Chief Minister's office and I will say to the Hon. my predecessor as Chief Minister, I think it is right that paintings like that should be bought and repatriated to Gibraltar. I just do not think that they should hang in the Chief Minister's office where only the Chief Minister sees them. I am much more modern and more technical. I prefer television so I can watch PMQs or anything that may be happening. That painting is now exhibited publically, I understand, in the museum so that people can see it. It is no criticism of the fact that an important painting about Trafalgar was brought home to Gibraltar, but the overall cost of the palace, as it was when Dr Garcia and I walk in there for our first cup of tea, £1.15 million.

The costs of turning it into a modern office, which will be the Head of the Administration of Gibraltar, the Office of the Chief Secretary or the Deputy Chief Minister and of the Chief Minister, where investors from around the world will be received and see the modern face of a thrusting Gibraltar – £4 million. Yes, £4 million, but we are actually going to add three times the floor space. We are not going to spend £4 million painting terracotta, adding a few chandeliers and a few curtains. By the way, I have got the cost of each chandelier and of each piece of carpet and of each curtain here. Some of it from John Lewis and some of it bought locally. We are going to add three times the office space to that office to turn it from a Venetian palace into a modern office building where civil servants will be proud to do their work... and without the damp, everybody who has ever worked in that building will be happy to know.

Anyway, I do not know what it is that makes him think that people who work in the Law Courts should have a modern office environment in which to work, but people who work in the Office of the Chief Minister should not have a modern environment to work in. I happen to think every civil servant should have a modern environment in which to work and that that could make actually the real estate of the Government of Gibraltar work much better for the Government of Gibraltar; but more of that anon.

One of the things he wanted to concentrate on and the advert plays a lot on, is this idea of travelling like a president, because of course in the simplistic analysis the overrun in the cost of travel is, 'Fabian spending an extra million in the way that he crosses the Atlantic'. I do not think there is a suite expensive enough on any aircraft to cost us that much. So they might have wanted to do a little bit more analysis.

Ninety three per cent higher than all other Departments are the costs of Convent Place. Well, protocol, entertainment and travelling, he said this in his speech, Mr Speaker:

'Travel entertainment was an item that I focussed on last year. The estimated figure was £390,000. The actual was £1.3 million or a massive 287% over budget, Mr Speaker.'

Two hundred and eighty seven per cent, is that not what the Airport overrun was? But that was in millions, not in hundreds of thousands. Well, Mr Speaker, not all of it is travel, it includes lobbying and we have had a rather difficult neighbour for the past year, he may have noticed, quite like in 2002-03. In fact, 465 the overspend there was almost exactly the same and the budget was almost exactly the same, because the budget has been £390,000 for the past 10 years, a very good reason to up the budget I would have thought because it has been the same for 10 years (Laughter) and there are times when it needs to be exceeded.

The Hon. the Chief Minister, the previous Chief Minister spent more in 2002-03 than I have spent this year; but he was the Chief Minister. He was the incumbent and he had to make the decisions about how, if 470 necessary, to spend money in order to steer us through that very difficult period of joint sovereignty, and I have had to make similar decisions now about where to travel to, where to send people to, where to lobby. As the incumbent, I accept that that money has been spent, but I expect people to realise in the short, medium and long term whether it has been spent for the right purpose, otherwise, hon. Members may simply find themselves, if they do not accept that, arguing with the identity of the person who makes those 475 decisions, because they themselves have said as part of their political discourse, that this is the worst year Gibraltar has had since the closed Frontier.

The Hon. Mr Bossino called it despicable, the attitude of Spain. If I had said that... my God, they would have all been on their feet asking me to be more measured and reasonable. I will come to that later on. But if it is just that it is Fabian Picardo making the decisions and not Peter Caruana that makes you wonder or 480 argue against that overspend, then your arguments need to be a little bit more refined. The Chief Minister of Gibraltar has to make decisions in difficult times to spend more, and history will judge whether I have made the right decision or not. I am very hopeful that it will demonstrate that the Deputy Chief Minister, I and the rest of the Cabinet have made the right decisions about extra spending this year because of what has been happening, and I think that we will see impressive benefits... not just benefits, impressive benefits very 485 shortly for all our people at a political and a commercial level as a result. I do not need to say, of course, that criticism of an overspend like that, which is almost identical to the overspend in 2003-04 or 2002-03, is as much as a slap on me, if it is just the overspend that has been criticised as it was, or would have been on Sir Peter.

But, anyway, I should not be surprised if that is what they were saying because one of the things that 490 they have been constantly repeating for the past six months or a year is that in the past two years, they have transformed the GSD. Well, there is good reason to take that badly if I were the greatest living Gibraltarian politician of all time and I had been leading the GSD as, if I may say so, an Election winning machine for 16 years and then somebody comes along and says, 'Guess what? I have transformed it'. 'Well, good luck. Into what?' 'We will see'. But I guess one has got used to the new leadership of the party and even some of 495 those who used to be in the party before criticising what the party used to do.

Anyway, I want to thank Mr Figueras, in part, whilst I continue dealing with the Leader of the Opposition, for at least having been very clear in expressing the position of the GSD in relation to the Commonwealth Park. He said in his speech, 'the Commonwealth Park is a vanity project.' The Collins dictionary defines a 'vanity project' as something that is worthless or useless. I do not think that anybody in 500 this community, other than perhaps six of the seven people that I am looking at, think the Commonwealth Park is worthless or useless, or that the refurbishment of No. 6 Convent Place when it is finished will be worthless or useless. I certainly do not think the Airport is worthless or useless. I think it is too big, it has cost too much and we will never get our money back; but it is not worthless. It has got a value. A valuer will come and give it a value and it is not useless. People can at least shelter from the rain in it whilst they 505 wait for aircraft. But to describe for the first time a green open area in the centre of our city that our whole community has welcomed with open arms, is to have reached a level of political honesty that the others have not been brave enough to reach, which I will remind the community of for the next two years every time somebody asks me about whether or not the GSD support Commonwealth Park, whether the GSD would have built Commonwealth Park. They would not. It is a worthless or useless project and it would still 510 be a car park, or somebody might have broken ground with a development there. For us, it was neither worthless nor useless. I will be very interested to see how Members opposite vote on the Commonwealth Park Bill when it comes to the House, given that what we are going to try to protect with that Bill is a worthless and useless park. It was a manifesto commitment. We are doing what we are required to do. Our attitude to our manifesto is that it is an instruction from the population. They have voted that to be done.
515 They do not elect us on a manifesto for us to go off and do what we like. They elect us on the manifesto to do what it says on the tin. It may not have two levels of car parking under it, but it has got the trees and the grass. Anyway, we delivered it.

I do not want to labour the point, but the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition then went on to talk about the level of public debt. He said net debt is bigger than ever, but as Sir Peter said, and this is a direct quote:

520 '... the net public debt as a proportion of GDP is within every known bound of prudential limit.'

The greatest Gibraltarian of all time.

525 So having disposed of his arguments on the level of debt, having disposed of his arguments with the issue of recurrent expenditure, having analysed how that arises, having demonstrated it is principally market forces and their spending and having heard yesterday the man that the Leader of the Opposition describes as the greatest living Gibraltarian of all time, or the greatest politician of all time, and his attitude to import duties and the revenue from tobacco, where he and I are in full agreement, as I think, he, I and at least all the Members on this side of the House are in full agreement, I do not think I need to deal with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition's attempt to use this as an issue to concern people. So there are really only two 'bits', if I can call them that, of his speech and therefore of the advert that he was wedded to, that I need to deal with, and one of them is Credit Finance.

Mr Speaker, let us start at the beginning on Credit Finance. He said something to GBC when he got out of here that he did not say here. I guess it is because he thinks I am too busy to watch him on the news; but although it is not pleasant, I do try to. I do understand why GBC say that Newswatch is one of their highest pullers as a programme because I guess its 69% of our population tuning in to watch him drop a new clanger. Asked by the interviewer: 'Now, the use of the Savings Bank, which you have been very critical about in the past... but £800 million of deposits this year. Is this not an indication that people have a very high level of confidence in the Savings Bank?' Response from the Leader of the Opposition, who could not accept it was confidence because otherwise two years of trying to undermine confidence in the Savings Bank would have been evaporated in a puff... Response from the Leader of the Opposition: 'Well, what I think it suggests is that the Gibraltar Savings Bank is paying a rate of interest for its debentures, which is far higher than the market rate'. I can sense the greatest Gibraltarian politician of all time flinching. (Interjection and laughter) No te voy a dejar. No te voy a dejar, no te voy a dejar] Do not worry. I do not think it is going to stick.

Interest rates by the Gibraltar Savings Bank: 2005 – 7%; 2005 – 5%; Government debentures, 2011 – 4.25 %. My goodness, I thought Government's borrowed for less than that... 4%. 1st January 2011, interest rate – 5%. I really do not know whether he calls you the greatest Gibraltarian of all time because all he wants to do is smack you about with these arguments. The interest rate that was thought appropriate by the Government of which he was a member is now too high and the only reason why people have confidence in the Savings Bank. Of course it is not. People have confidence in the Savings Bank because they have absolutely no confidence in anything he says to try and undermine it. That is why it has gone from £300 million to £800 million (Banging on desks) paying the same rate of interest that was paid on the Government debenture. It demonstrates that the things he says do not add up. If there was one thing that brought a smile to my face about the fish and chip wrapper, it was the bit on Credit Finance Company, because it is either an attempt to dupe of the sort that we have never seen in Gibraltar politics – i.e. a downright lie in the newspaper – or such a clanger that it does not actually benefit somebody who, as Leader of the Opposition, must be seeking to hold the highest political office in this land. If he has it, and I am sure he does, he needs to look at the bit on CFC, £400 million to CFC, and then an addition a cuenta de la vieja: £30 million – Sunborn; £1 million of loans facilitating GOG arrears. I do not know how they misspelt that one, 'facilitatlong' GOG arrears. I do not know. It is not English. It must be a discrete accounting term, f-a-c-i-t-i-l-a-t-i-o-n-g GOG arrears. I really do not know what that means... £23 million pension commutations; £50 million loans. Total – £356 million.

Well, first of all, as he must know, because I have explained it to him ad nauseam, they have put in separately the lump sum of £50 million of the loans. Obvious and pernicious double accounting. Obviously and perniciously double accounting, inflating the amounts that have been lent by Credit Finance, flattering their argument by £50 million. I guess because it is such an unsustainable argument, you will now find something to support it. But he knows the figure of the loans is not £80 million; it is the £50 million. He has had it from us. It is below £50 million in fact, I think. But if you add it up, Mr Speaker, 30 + 1 + 23 + 50 – and you are the maths tutor, not me – is 104. Take 104 away from 400, it is the wrong calculation. It is the wrong calculation, but it is their calculation. It is not 356.

Mr Speaker, if the Clerk could assist, we have been exchanging details in respect of Credit Finance for some time and I am not sure that he has it, I am passing to the hon. Gentleman something that may assist him in these arguments that we repeatedly have about Credit Finance, about whether things are on the website and what the calculations are, etc, etc, because it really is quite improper that he has put this information in front of the Gibraltarians, which is so dreadfully wrong. Most of them can add up and they would have realised that this is wrong. But I hope that what I am passing him now will be of assistance when he wants to do this calculation again. (Interjection) Not at all, but it is, Mr Speaker, so that he can...it is a calculator Mr Speaker, which I have bought myself (Laughter and banging on desks) not with Government money, with my own money, so that he can do his addition in time for next year's debate, so that when he puts this sort of thing in front of people, he can at least get the addition right. I have not even bought it with the surplus, Mr Speaker. I bought it with Picardo money. So I hope he takes it as it is intended, as an aid to his job as Leader of the Opposition.

Mr Speaker, we have agreed... I told the hon. the backbencher – as he seems to prefer to be called that these days (Laughter) – when he thought I had suggested that there was not an element of flattery of the Government accounts, that we had agreed that there was an element of flattery, but that the flattery was, as we agreed, the element of the gratuity, but the pensions were still being paid and therefore it was not the amount of the commutations that were being paid. So if there is £23 million paid in commutations over two financial years, and we assume that has been paid relatively evenly in any year, 25% of that is approximately £3 million. It may even be less, but let us assume that the flattery of the accounts is £3 million. It is the only bit in the advert that they actually recognise as a Government expense – absolutely right. It is the only one that is a Government expense. So, £3million of flattery of the Government accounts in each financial year, the last one and this one, produces only £3 million less in the surplus. Still a record last year and still a huge record this year, busting even the record that was in the book, because from 65 – if he takes it out and puts 65 and then presses the bit that looks like a minus and 3, he will get 62... and what was predicted was 50. So still a record. So can he please go out of here and evangelise, not this nonsense, but that in fact even with Credit Finance factored in, we are still running record-breaking surpluses, and what they call the flattery of our accounts is so minor as to really have absolutely no effect whatsoever.

I hope I have demonstrated to the hon. Gentleman, the backbencher, because it is now my reference to him, not the other fellow's reference, so it is not the greatest politician of all time, it is the backbencher, that, we do answer questions about all Government companies, even Credit Finance, which they pretend we do not. We just do not give one specific detail, and he said, 'I would expect you to answer questions from companies about companies that you are directors of, etc, etc, which are Government wholly owned, but not the commercially sensitive aspects' and we have determined, on advice – which I am sure he would have if he was here – that giving the names of the borrowers is sensitive, and giving the names of the commutees is sensitive. That is the only thing that we are not giving, in the same way as we do not give other aspects of the information of Government companies which is in the commercially sensitive world. And sometimes it is not sensitive to the company; it is sensitive to the person that is dealing with the company. Other than that, Mr Speaker, my Government will answer questions in respect of any company which is a Government wholly-owned company, of which a Minister is a director or otherwise, and we have demonstrated that, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, one of the things that the 'churro' paper does, is talk about affairs with Spain and rising tensions pointing to high risk. Well, the hon. Members have been developing in the past few months, the concept of the GSD way of doing things versus the GSLP/Liberal way of doing things. I assume that they have thrown Dr Garcia in with us on this and they are not just attacking me; but look, I am quite happy to leave him out. He does not deserve to be dragged into it. He has always been very straight forward and measured about these things and is absolutely clear on the fundamental issue of Spain.

So let us look at what the GSD way of doing things is on affairs with Spain, because ironically they seem to think it is their ace. The GSD way of doing things on affairs with Spain is going to Seville, to Forum Europa, and saying, 'Well, maybe one day in a referendum, I might be minded to recommend an Andorra-style solution'. The GSD way of doing things is not the GSLP/Liberal way of doing things. We will not be saying that. But, in fact, although there is video evidence of that, although it has been played in a number of our broadcasts, although there has been an element of denial, but everybody knows what the Hon. the previous Chief Minister said. In fact, one of the reasons why he cannot be described as the greatest Gibraltar of all time in my book, there is actually also printed evidence of what the GSD way of doing things is. Look, there is no problem with this being the GSD way of doing things, but it is the GSD way of doing things is what hon. Members are defending.

This is a magazine from the Basque Country, called El Mes, from the height of the joint sovereignty dispute in May 2002. I do not make it a habit of reading magazines from the Basque Country, but it was brought to my attention by a member of our community. The hon. Gentleman was then on a mission to explain the Gibraltar position in Spain and the GSD way of doing things is as follows – and Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, I am going to read this in Spanish and then translate it into English:

'Lo que pienso yo, es que España tendría que mimar un poco a los Gibraltareños hasta que nosotros digamos, bueno, la bandera Britanica la bajamos nosotros mismos.'

Peter Caruana, May 2002:

'What I think, is that Spain should woo the Gibraltarians a little bit until we say, "Oh well, the British flag will be brought down by us."'

The GSD way of doing things, is not the GSLP way of doing things. If that is the way of avoiding high risk, well, I am not going to be saying anything quite like that in Spain any time soon. I do not know whether it is the sort of thing the hon. Gentleman says in Universities up and down La Piel de Toro, but you know, I am not going to be saying it. I might have a slightly more hostile reception as a result.

But, look, Mr Speaker, that was the hon. the backbencher when he was Chief Minister, but when the hon. Gentleman himself broke his holiday in August and returned to Gibraltar on his white charger to come and assist us last August, he said that he did not rule out removing the Reef in North West BGTW as part of 650 a wider settlement in Gibraltar's national interest, if that safeguarded the security and stability of BGTW, however unlikely that appears to be. That is the GSD way of doing things, though this GSLP/Liberal Administration ain't removing the Reef. So they want to remove the Reef. They want to lower the British flag. They want to be wooded in order to be persuaded to do that, and they might one day recommend in a referendum an Andorra-style solution. That is the GSD way of doing things and I respect that that is their position. It is not ours. I will always seek to persuade them not to pursue that line. I will particularly seek to persuade the Hon. the current Leader of the Opposition to go back to his days when he was much more staunch on these issues and also Mr Bossino, so that they return to a staunch position where they will never be wooed into lowering British flags and they would even resile from the idea of removing the Reef in BGTW, because it was created for a good and sound environmental purpose, and if you do things for a good and sound purpose, you should not remove them for a bad reason based on blackmail.

660 And, you know, Mr Speaker, our way of doing things, about being very clear about what we think about the future of Gibraltar and the sovereignty of Gibraltar, being friendly about it, not aggressive, but not changing our position... friendly, but firm, because diplomacy, as I have said before, is not duplicity. You cannot go, in particular, in the social media world in which we live, there and say one thing and come here and say another. People, thank goodness, will see through you and so we are going to be very clear in our position, and one of the greatest criticisms that the hon. Gentleman has made of me, was that whilst he was sunning himself in Southern France, before he got on the white charger to come back to Gibraltar, I had said in an interview that the behaviour of the Spanish Government was like the behaviour of the North Korean Government. He has said repeatedly that this was terrible, that this was not measured, that this was totally unfair and that I should not have done that. Of course, I understand that, given what I have just done as an analysis of the GSD way of thinking that, you know, that is not the language they want to use – that is not 'Come and woo me so I can lower the Union Jack', that is standing your ground and telling it like it is.

665 So I assume that although he did not seek, it appears to me, to intervene with the Foreign Affairs Committee that was here and he has not thought it relevant to write to the Foreign Affairs Committee, even a letter asking them to support Gibraltar, because they have not exhibited it as evidence, I assume he will have read their Report and I assume he will now be writing to Sir Richard Ottaway telling him that you think it is absolutely terrible that in paragraph 72 and 73 of the Report, they have exhibited a chart and commented on the fact that the Spanish Ambassador has been summoned to the Foreign Office on five occasions, only one less than the Syrian Ambassador, and that they have compared that to the fact that the North Korean Ambassador has only been summoned three times. They are saying that Spain is worse than North Korea. How dare they? We will never persuade them to persuade us to lower the British flag if we carry on telling them the truth like this. So, Mr Speaker, I sincerely hope the hon. Gentleman is scribbling away. Put the calculator to one side and I will lend him a pen if he needs one and tell the Foreign Affairs Committee that this business of the North Koreans is not helping at all.

680 One of the things that they have been doing for the past few weeks is criticising the appointment that we have made in Hong Kong, and the hon. Gentleman has been very vocal about this issue, giving interviews to GBC etc, etc. He said, 'You know, this packet must be worth over £¼ million and this man has been appointed without interview'. Mr Speaker, I tell him because he may want to find out himself. Does he know how many people his Government appointed without interview and competition, who earned more than £¼ million? I do. Three. I think two of them do an excellent job. They were appointed by them. They are excellent professionals and they do an excellent job, but there was no interview and they earn in excess of £¼ million. They are excellent value for money. I think one of them is worth at least three and a half doctors.

685 Another one was Mr Benzaquen. A member of their Executive, who went from earning £60,000 to earning £250,000 almost overnight in fees, I mean even the backbencher is frowning at the thought, but that is the forecast out-turn. He was very busy. He had a lot to write in that newspaper. From £60,000 to £250,000. No interview and a member of the Executive of the GSD. Two hundred and fifty thousand pounds to a member of their own Executive. Well, I think that helps to put their criticisms into context. I do not criticise the other two appointments. I think they were appointments properly done, as I said in the last meeting of the House. Some appointments have to be done in that way, if they are the right appointment and it is the right individual, and they were and they are because they are still serving; but the other one, a member of the Executive, my goodness gracious... we will come to cronyism a little bit later, but this really takes not just the biscuit, the digestive, the chocolate on it, and the whole box that I would be eating if I was not on a diet. (Laughter)

700 And, in any event, Mr Speaker, when they criticise things, they have to say also in relation to capital projects, what they would have done instead or what they would not be doing. So every time they criticise what we are doing, can they please say that they would not do it?

705 So, Laguna Estate: refurbishment too expensive. Go down to Laguna Estate and say you will stop it. Glacis Estate: refurbishment too expensive. Go to Glacis Estate and say you will stop it. You know there is nobody there who votes for you. Moorish Castle Estate, tell them you will never refurbish the Estate, 710 because they will never vote for you. Tell them because you say that it is too expensive and you must therefore be saying you would not do it. Or tell everybody who is going to have one of those boats at the 700-berth Marina that you are not going to be doing the Marina.

715 We have acquired these commitments and we are going to see them through. Should something happen, and an Election have to occur, and you know, you cannot take Elections for granted, as I will come on to Mr Figueras, and you were to form Government, people need to know which of the projects you will stop, especially knowing that the hon. the backbencher has said that you can continue spending in the way that you would like, which is with more debt. So you have got the money, but you criticise all the projects. So what is it you are going to do? You are going to go back to giving Raf another £¼ million a year? So you might not be able to do one of the blocks at Laguna or Glacis? What are you going to stop? Are you going to stop the two new schools? Those are almost done, thank goodness, and might be away from your prying attempts to stop things. Are you going to stop the New Diesel Power Station? Are you going to carry on spending £30 million on diesel? Are you going to tell Main Street that in order to do so, you are going to put their electricity up by 100%, which in cumulative terms will be 200% or 300%? Stand up and say so. Stand for something man. That is the GSLP/Liberal way. You must still have some of that in you? But do not just say, 'This is too expensive and I wouldn't do it', or say, rather, 'I won't do it. I'll stop it. It's too much money'. We did it. We stand for something.

720 We were elected on 9th December and in the first Cabinet meeting, which was the first working Monday thereafter, we stopped every single Government project going – every single one of them. We have a manifesto to deliver. Our manifesto to deliver; not yours. But look, you have got the cladding in your manifesto and so every time you criticise it and say it is too expensive, can somebody please tell me whether you actually intended to do it or whether your manifesto this time and the cladding of Laguna and Glacis, was just as the hon. the backbencher said to Gerard Teuma in the interview before the Election, 'Well, it's just a wish list of what we might do'. That is a transcript I treasure by the way. A manifesto for the GSD, in the GSD way of doing things, is a wish list. For the GSLP/Liberals, in our way of doing things, 725 it is an obligation. That is what we have been elected to do. It is a covenant with the people. So, please tell us, which of the revenue raisers, or of the current expenditure raisers or capital projects you would stop. Do not just sit there and say, 'It's too expensive', say 'I'll stop it, because it's too expensive', or 'It's so expensive, but it has to be done'. Much of what the hon. Gentleman said was just... you know, it is too expensive. No analysis. He might as well just... Next year, why does he not just get up, if he is still there, and say, 'Bah, humbug!' and sit down and then we can just carry on with the debate. If he is not going to make any analysis and he is just going to say, 'Oh, it's too expensive', then just say 'Bah, humbug!'

730 Anyway, I am very sorry that they only got one week's notice of a dinner. I sometimes only get 24 hours; but, you know, I put country before party and off I go. You know, if they like, they can just tell me that I should stop inviting them, but I was very critical of the previous Administration for not inviting Members of the Opposition to events and therefore they get invited. By the way, it adds to the recurrent expenditure, but they are invited. If they have a party event on, do both of them have to go to party events? Is there such distrust between, Leader and Deputy Leader, that when we have an important American Chamber of Commerce event in Gibraltar, with an ex-Cabinet Member of the Obama Administration in Gibraltar – you know, months out of the Administration and very influential – neither of them can come because they have to go to a GSD event a week later. I only had one week's notice. Talk about party before country or, you know, 'I can't trust the other fellow, not to knife me with all the members if I am not there to watch him'. Look, I shall try and organise Gibraltar's affairs so that it does not clash with GSD events until they have sorted themselves out or they can decide to put country before party next time. Maybe that would be a salutary change, the beginning of the transformation which the community might welcome.

735 We have also had inflicted on us in the past month the new democracy that they are going to bring to us if they ever win a General Election. In dealing with the hon. the backbencher, but I may as well do it now, I wanted to say that of course changes have to be qualitative and not just quantitative, but they are. We answer all questions, and I have given him now the information about our attitude to Government companies. But there is one thing he did, which Mr Bossano never did when he was Chief Minister, and therefore why we are not in some way criticising Mr Bossano when we criticise him, and that is, that Mr Bossano never had one meeting in any calendar year, and the hon. Gentleman, I am afraid to say, did.

740 In 2002, he had one meeting of the House for Questions in March and the only other meeting of the House... (A Member: 2003.) 2003, the year of the Election – was in December, for the ceremonial opening. So, for the whole year, he had an Election in November. For the whole year he had one meeting in March. Only in the awkward position of being asked questions once in March, and the Constitution was silent on it; but what did his innate sense of democracy, of transparency and accountability move him to do? Have two meetings? Have three? Look, he is not as much of a Parliamentarian as me and maybe he did not want to have nine, right? One meeting for Questions. When you gentlemen have been up the rudder, you have demonstrated what your democratic credentials are and what you say now in trying to get the rudder 770 back, about what you do when you are back, does not really cut much ice given the evidence that you left us behind.

775 Anyway, sometimes in politics one gets things right and one gets things wrong. It is important when you get them wrong to apologise and move on, and I want to do that today. I want to apologise to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition for having called for his resignation. I want him to stay as Leader of the Opposition at least until the Election, and if possible, until the Election after that as Leader of the Opposition. He is doing us a fine job as Leader of the Opposition. I do not know if people who support the GSD feel the same way, but I would ask him please to accept my apology, grovelling as it is, and to not for one moment consider leaving. (Hon. D A Feetham: Apology accepted.) Thank you so much, because he is right. There is a perfect storm brewing and it is nowhere near me. I can smell all sorts of devices. I can see a house of cards type ploy. This is getting very interesting, even from those of us that only get titbits. We are very much enjoying it, so please stay in post. Thank you for acceding at least to that request. I feel very comforted.

780 This week sees in the United Kingdom the reunion of probably the best set of comedians the world has ever seen, in Monty Python at the O2, and because of this debate, one has been unable to travel. So I am therefore extraordinarily grateful to the Hon. Mr Figueras for his performance yesterday, which at least ensured that I could smile. Mr Figueras needs to be reminded every time that he makes an intervention in this Budget session which, like the Leader of the Opposition, I hope he will continue to do from the Opposition benches for many years – of the facts. The facts that get in the way of these arguments that he wants to put, because they might sound so good when he is writing, long hand or typing, but the facts get in the way and they need to be relevant.

785 When he is criticising the sterling work that the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister has done in opening up the Development and Planning Process and saying, ‘Ah, you didn’t take your projects there. Ha, ha. But we’ll keep it open. We’ll keep it open’, he needs to remember what they did with their projects. Forget the fact that it was a secretive, behind closed doors Commission. Forget the fact that they did not even publish the minutes, but remember the fact that something like the new Power Station, which would have been much more of a blight on the landscape than a Football Stadium, whether you love it or you hate it, because the Football Stadium, the last time I checked, did not have four chimneys spewing black smoke into the air, into the area of Jews’ Gate where people stand to look at the view, that under the gloriously democratic and open GSD did not go to the Development and Planning Commission.

790 And then when he carries on he criticises the Town Planner. Again, I do not know what he has got against the Town Planner, but every year the Town Planner comes in for a bashing from the hon. Gentleman and it is frankly, quite unnecessary. We believe that the professional should be in charge of the operation, because he has no political responsibility and therefore he makes professional statements there which help the Commission to do its work. He has chosen to say that Charles Bruzon House was rushed through, I guess because he has detected in his social media monitoring that there are some people... because the works are going to be ongoing next to a school who have huge concerns because they have children there, well, we share those concerns. We share those concerns. He, like I, has been in a school called Bayside, which is next to a tower block. This is Gibraltar. As long as there are not any problems in the construction period, which is down to the technical people working very hard to ensure that there is not, hey look, at the end of the day it is another school next to a building, once the building is completed.

800 But Charles Bruzon House was not rushed through. Charles Bruzon House went to the DPC, even though it is a Government project, in 2013, and then it went back a second time in April 2014. So how was that rushed through? It has gone twice. He can look at the minutes. He might actually one day want to turn up because he shadows this portfolio and he has never been, I understand, to the DPC, because the people who are at every meeting tell me they have never seen him there. If he wants to talk about the overspend of £1 million to £1½ million, please lady and gentlemen, look and ask about what the money has been spent for. Right, good, I am going to give you the answer if you plan to, because it is not for a subject to criticise this Government. This is a settlement of a claim made against the previous Administration, which we were advised we had absolutely no chance of winning, for locating a batching plant next to a place where they had granted permission for luxury housing. The advice was that we did not stand a snowball’s chance in hell. It is the settlement sum of the problem that they got us into, based on the advice of the lawyers that they instructed at the time, and nobody, believe me, gives away £½ million of taxpayers’ money without looking at every possible alternative to avoid paying it. So a bit more care, a bit more care when trying to criticise overspending as he did yesterday, because yesterday he was not asking; yesterday he was criticising. Next time, look before you leap. Ask before you criticise, and if there is a good reason to criticise, it is your job to criticise. But if there is a good reason to criticise now, it is a reason to criticise the decision makers that are on your side of the political fence.

805 I do not think we are ever going to agree on GibiBikes, but I gratefully acknowledge on behalf of the relevant Minister that the hon. Gentleman has now started to accept that what we inherited was an absolute fiasco of a scheme.

I am very pleased that he is going to welcome the new buses. I am not going to get into details as to ticketing systems etc, etc, but I must tell him that his contribution this year once again demonstrated a huge misunderstanding of some aspects of life that one would have expected him to know better than most. During the course of his debate he talked about legal assistance having been extended only in respect of one particular criminal matter. No. When he checks the transcript he will see that he has gone on and on about legal assistance, when he should have been going on about something called Legal Aid. As every lawyer will know, Legal Aid is the measure of cost paid to lawyers in criminal proceedings. Legal assistance – and he was reading his page, I could not believe it – is what is paid in civil legal proceedings. He should at least have got that right. He will be embarrassed when he reads the Hansard. I was going to give him a copy of the Legal Aid and Assistance Act, so that he could work out the difference, but I got held up buying the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition a calculator. (Laughter) I thought that that was more important in the context of a Budget debate. But we have had a judgment now in that case.

We have even had – and the hon. Gentleman should have done his research – statements by one of the lawyers in that case three or four weeks ago when they raised the issue, and the lawyer said, ‘We actually started proceedings to have this aid extended’. I am very happy to tell him now, Mr Speaker that if he pauses for thought and takes some advice, he might be told that a particular trial might not have been able to go ahead if the Government had not made the changes that it made, because of the principle of equality of arms, and therefore... Oh, look, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition groans. Everybody was actually nodding until he groaned because everybody got the point, but he needs to understand – (Interjections and laughter) I know, they are starting to be like the noddies in the back of the car. He needs to understand that important legal principles like that are not determined at the whim of politicians and the politicians do not change laws to spend more money on Legal Aid, huge amounts of money on Legal Aid because they want to, because all of that money spent on Legal Aid would have been even more surplus I could have declared here to see go even redder. If we have made a change which was necessary in a particular field, it is because we have been advised that we had no alternative to do that or otherwise a particular trial might not have gone ahead, and I think we could all agree... that motion, that it would have been bad for Gibraltar as a jurisdiction if people had simply not been tried as a result and had managed to get themselves discharged. So perhaps a little bit less innuendo when they make remarks about the particular case and the changes that were made in the Legal Aid, and more thinking.

Mr Speaker, Mr Bossino says there have been astronomical increases in recurrent expenditure. Well, I forgive him, Mr Speaker. I forgive him because he is trying to pretend to support his current leader so that the other one becomes a little bit dazed with all the support, stops looking behind himself and allows him to pounce at the right time, because Mr Bossino is far too clever, having heard my original speech, to walk into that one. Having heard that the increases in recurrent expenditure had nothing to do with this Government or ‘minusculey’ to do with this Government, he was obviously trying to lull his leader, his current leader – I know it hurts to think of him in those terms – into some sort of false sense of security so that he could pounce at the right time; but I must tell him that I have changed my mind about all this. I am now backing Mr Feetham as leader of the GSD for as long as I can persuade him to stay. I am going to do my best to ensure that he does not become the Leader of the Opposition and that Mr Feetham is there for many, many years... if he gets my drift.

He said that the GSLP said – obviously also wedded to the advertisement – the GSLP said ‘We were in the midst of financial ruin’ and there is a lot in that sentence. The GSLP said... you know there is still the Liberal in him who cannot bring himself (Laughter) to criticise his old leader, quite right too. Some things run thicker than just the water that is politics, Mr Speaker. Who can believe them now? Well, Mr, Speaker the answer is everyone can believe us now – everyone. Everyone (a) that has seen the figures from the Treasury and the doomsday memo; and (b) anyone who heard the hon. the backbencher yesterday, who told us in that moment of lucidity and transparency and honesty that what was in the doomsday memo was right and that he was going to have to go for further borrowing. So that is completely clear now. That is why people believe the Government and the Treasury and Sir Peter Caruana and they do not believe the advert, because we are not asking them to believe one politician or one party leader, we are asking them to believe the Treasury – that is who produces the memo.

I guess he now, in this transformation that he has had, now has great difficulty believing anything that Sir Peter Caruana says, given the way he treated him at the time of the supposed – as he might have thought it might have been, I assume – handover of the Leadership of the GSD. But look, this is what Sir Peter said:

885 ‘...he has been fortunate’

– about me, and –

890 ‘in that I would have been willing, whilst keeping within economically prudent guidelines, to have changed the law to increase the debt ceiling, the debt limit, which I acknowledge would have been necessary...’

Mr Speaker, I know that old school rivalries die hard, but he has always been a man who has been interested in forensic analysis. Look at the numbers in here and just because it is me, do not take the contrary view. Look at the numbers. Look at what Sir Peter has said. Open your eyes and believe.

895 I will accept, Mr Speaker, that absent having to show this support to lull the other into an anaesthetised sense before stinging, that he would not have had anything to do with anything as shoddy as this because I know that he can at least spell. But he should remember before he delves further into this argumentation of the big lie that he knows that when the choice becomes of believing the Financial Secretary, Sir Peter Caruana, who is now in Hansard saying these things – so however much the Hon. the Leader of the 900 Opposition persuades him, I will always remind him of what he said in Hansard – and Fabian Picardo over Daniel Feetham on the other side, he knows that people will believe so. Close enough to lull, but not so close that he gets tarnished by this idea of the big lie.

I fear that he risks going too far, because yesterday he said that we had inherited a treasure trove that we were spending at will. Well, where is it? Where is the treasure? He has heard the erstwhile horse of the horse's mouth say, 'There was no treasure trove. I was going to borrow more'. So can he stop having Long-John-Silver-style visions when he is writing his speeches about there being a treasure trove somewhere and appreciate that d-e-b-t was the way that the manifesto was going to be funded, with a higher debt ceiling, and the hon. the backbencher has now confirmed that as much as the Treasury has? So, no treasure troves. Next year a speech which does not rely on a rainbow and a pot of gold at the end of it, please.

910 He said I should apologise for the continuing high level of expenditure. Well, again you see in every phrase there is a hidden gem. In the same way as the absence of Liberal after the GSLP told us so much about his psyche, there is the understanding of the truth: the continuing increase in high level of expenditure. Thereby recognising that the high level of expenditure had been rising and rising and rising and therefore correctly identifying when it started, which was under the previous administration.

915 But, of course, when they talk about the highest level of expenditure ever, as if it were a very, very bad thing... I mean they say it repeatedly, 'This is the highest level of recurrent expenditure in the history of Gibraltar'. I do not know whether they actually bother to look at this, but I invite the hon. Member to look at page one of the estimate... actually, the one that is numbered one. If he looks on the calculator it is usually between zero and two. Does he have it? Mr Speaker, £547,390,000m is the highest ever figure of 920 revenue for Gibraltar – the highest ever. So if he is going to say, 'Say sorry for the highest ever level of expenditure', could you please also, Mr Bossino, say, 'Thank you for the highest level of revenue ever'? I do not think the debate is this simplistic, but if he wants to have it in this way... if he wants to come here and say, 'Say sorry for the highest level of expenditure ever', the eyes just need to go up one line to see the highest level of income ever.

925 Of course, he just had to deliver the speech he had written. He had to deliver it. I do not know what it is about them that they do not like to change their speeches. Maybe on a Sunday afternoon, in the hinterland or at home, this sounded fantastic as it was tapped away onto a Mac Apple, or whatever it was that it was typed into, and the hon. Member was so wedded to it and wedded to support for his leader and wedded to the churro paper advert, that he just had to deliver it; but the Hon. Mr Costa had just uttered statistics that 930 demonstrated that half of what he was going to go onto say was wrong. The Hon. Mr Bossano had made it impossible for anybody to deliver any speech in opposition to the current Minister for Employment, other than 'Well done, Joe', and that maybe did not sound so good to the hon. Member. It was – and I recognise of my old school chum that it was – a devastating blow that the Hon. the Minister for Employment delivered with the Employment Survey barely a week before the statistics had to be discussed. A 935 devastating blow. Few might have got up to argue cogently in respect of any particular issue that there might have been wrong with those figures; none did from the other side because no argument was raised. The numbers spoke for themselves.

But then he said this, Mr Speaker, 'The Estimates Book makes depressing reading'. Well, I suppose if he looks at the revenue and feels that he has to thank me for it, it would. The Estimates Book makes 940 depressing reading: protocol and entertainment £1.05 million, when the estimate was £390,000. Obviously having forgotten or never known about the much higher increase in 2002-03.

And then he said this, 'Talk about sticking' – at me – 'his nose in the trough'. I have lost so much weight, Mr Speaker, and he still wants to denigrate me like that... how ungentlemanly, Mr Speaker. I can 945 get described as a farm animal, but saying that somebody is boring in their delivery requires a press release on how rude one is. Well, look, I have a fairly thick skin. I suppose pigs have thicker skin, but I have a fairly thick skin and so being told that I have my nose in the trough is not going to hurt me. Water off a pig's back, Mr Speaker. (Laughter) But does he think it is me, Mr Speaker? Does he think that my nose has been the one that sucked up the extra £700,000? Does he know who he is talking to when he is saying that, because it is not just the Chief Minister who has been in politics with him for 20-odd years and therefore 950 has a very thick skin, this is everybody that accepts an invitation to any of the parties, as they like to call them, any of the events. That is where the overspend is, so every time they stick their noses in the events trough, every VIP invitation they accept, every time they break bread at a Government dinner or lunch, every tapita that they enjoy, there they are oinking away, nose in trough... snorting away, I assume. I am going to sidle up to him the next time he is at a Government event, Mr Speaker, and just quietly stand by to see if there is any snorting or oinking going on as they Hoover up these £705,000 of additional expenditure that they enjoy so much now that we invite them to all of these events. (Interjection) Well, you have got a pretty big nose. (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, he does like to say that we give out contracts to friends, talking about one particular contract, which is the Airport contract, for advertising, which is repeatedly talked about. He then said, 'Giving contracts to friends'. Well, I have told him before and I will tell him again there was only one individual who was not transferred, as a transfer of undertaking occurred at the Airport from Terminal Management to GATL – Gibraltar Air Terminal Ltd. He was not transferred. He was not employed. He was not contracted. He was excluded a dedo. So this is not an a dedo appointment. This is an a dedo exclusion, and what we did was we corrected that. That is not giving a contract to a friend; that is actually righting a wrong, as I have told him before.

Then he complains that the Borders and Coastguards Agency is expending £800,000 more. Well, they have a lot of work. They have Department for Transport responsibilities, if we want to keep our Airport open, and they are running a visa waver scheme that is working very well.

In relation to the Civil Aviation spend, he complains that there is an overspend there and he needs to understand what it is for. It is the amount that they agreed in Government. They were going to pay the MOD in respect of the runway every year, which we, when we were preparing the estimates, believed we had renegotiated with the MOD. The MOD was not then able to finalise agreements and we are still holding over their agreement in respect of the runway whilst we finish a new agreement in respect of the runway – this is called the Commercial Use Agreement. That is where the overspend is, having to pay the amount they agreed to pay and not the much lower amount we believed we had got the MOD to agree to pay.

I note, Mr Speaker, he did not even welcome the OFT Bill, although he is supposed to be shadowing Commercial Affairs. The Office of Fair Trading Bill... no welcome. But to a very great extent – and I suppose he did not even mention the freezing of energy prices – one thing or another, at twenty to nine in the evening, he just came to read what he was told to read or what he felt he had to read in order to lull his leader into a false sense of security. He literally that night, at that time of the evening, at twenty to nine in the evening, he came, he read, he bored us. He was another one, Mr Speaker. He came, he read, he bored us. No mention of the fantastic improvements at Sandy Bay. He is the Shadow Minister for Tourism. I think he is the only one who has not mentioned them. No mention of the good news of hotels. No mention of the numbers that the Hon. Mr Costa disclosed in respect of flights. No mention of the fact that despite the onslaught against Gibraltar at the Frontier, we were only down 1.6% at tourist sites. On cruise passengers and on cruise calls, he ignores that under them cruise calls fell sharply by 64 and does not realise that we are rebuilding.

Well, he ignores a saving when it occurs and so he talks about something being overspent, but when you do not spend £333,000, in one particular head he does not point that out. He does not think that is disgraceful, but neither does he think that he should give you an apology for not having pointed it out. Anyway, Mr Speaker, lots of snouts getting in the way of a good speech, I suppose.

He would love to pin the problem with bunkers on us, but he has sources in Singapore and he will be able to read about what is happening elsewhere. He will then see that the world market in bunkers has been down (a) as a result of worldwide economic trends; and (b) as a result of new rules which require ships to steam more slowly, and therefore they take less bunkers. But he will be extraordinarily disappointed to know – in fact so disappointed that he decided not to comment on it, although it is an extraordinary statistic worthy of congratulation – that bunker charges are in fact up last year in Gibraltar by 21%, confounding our enemies. (Banging on desks) Why did he not mention it, Mr Speaker? Why did he not remark about it? Why did he not change his speech about it? Why is he not listening to me? Very simple, Mr Speaker, because it does not help their cause. It does not help their cause that Minister Costa has delivered bunkering charges up 21% this year and that is why he ignored it.

It is normal, Mr Speaker, for any Government to welcome a new airline. Any Opposition should welcome a new airline and we of course will welcome any new airlines that come which are private sector initiatives, but I think that is absolutely normal. He seemed to criticise that before going on to say that of course in the GMA they have never had it as good as they had it in 2001-02, I think under Joe Holliday at the time, when they had had their record year and they had registered 45 ships. I fear that the Minister for Tourism has got a snout that is not going to let me get through this, he is so enjoying it, because he has just reminded me that last year, under this Administration, the GMA had its record year with 54 registrations and he had said it before the hon. Gentleman got up on his feet. He is supposed to be an able barrister. I mean that much of a change he could make. No, he could say, 'Mr Speaker I was going to say that the record year had been under the GSD at 45 registrations, but I have heard, and I am very happy for Gibraltar, the Hon. the Minister for maritime affairs say that last year they registered 54. I want to welcome that on behalf of the Opposition because what is good for Gibraltar is something that we welcome'. I have not even 1015 had to make a note. I was able to do it and I am sure he could have done it too, but he was not sincere in his speech. He wanted to deliver the nasty speech. The nasty party's nasty speech – that is what he wanted to deliver. He was not going to be shaken by any fact or any matter that might turn it into something a little bit other than just an onslaught.

1020 And he says, Mr Speaker, that people are staying here using our beaches and using our park – that 'vanity project' – only because they are locked in, and I was put in mind with that phrase of something that he will remember too, in 1985 when the... in 1982, when the frontier opened for pedestrians, I think, and that lady famously said, 'We have been here locked up like cats for so many years'. For a moment I saw him as the image of Carmen Warr (Laughter) standing by the frontier, finally liberated once it had been opened. I do not think many people at the Commonwealth Park have the feeling of being locked up, or at Sandy Bay. I think they feel very free actually that at last they have a green area in the centre of the city. I recommend to him that the next speech he writes on his laptop on one of the benches on Commonwealth Park. He might actually reach a different conclusion. I think there is a large measure of agreement between us that Spain's action in resigning from the Cordoba Agreement is despicable. I feel very able to say that I am delighted he still has that element of fervour in him that he can; but, of course, that might not be considered measured and reasonable language by those on that side of the fence.

1030 He does not like it, Mr Speaker, when we refer to Mr Caruana or Mr Montiel in any of the issues that we are talking about. So when we are talking about the 22 who were found jobs on average in the years that they were in Administration and we remind him that Mr Montiel was not in the office at the time... and when we talk about Mr Caruana, Sir Peter Caruana when he was Chief Minister and all of the issues that that gives rise to, I know that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is Mr Montiel's lawyer. He does not have to get too fidgety. I am not going to say much more. In all of those instances, Mr Speaker, we are perfectly rightly reminding them of what they did when they were in charge.

1040 What he cannot do, Mr Speaker, because it makes no logical sense, is say, 'We left you a golden legacy and a treasure trove, but do not talk about the past'. Well, it almost seems, Mr Speaker, as if he knows that there is no treasure trove, even before Sir Peter said so, because if he does not want us to talk about the past, it is because the past is best forgotten. The past is best forgotten, I agree. They have an abysmal record in employment and that is why it is right that the Hon. the Minister for Employment reminds the community constantly of what happened when they were in Administration, so that nobody sleepwalks into letting them back in; but I really had not expected that. That is why I can see this house-of-cards-style issue playing out. I can see the rivalry there – it is obvious. Fine, so be it. (Laughter) It is a very good thing. I am not shy of rivalry; it is a very good thing. He and I have enjoyed a rivalry for many years and there can be a friendship and a rivalry without a problem, but what I did not expect was, 'Do not talk about Sir Peter'. I knew it hurt that he did not come good on the promises about the leadership, but to say, 'Do not talk about Montiel. Do not talk about Caruana anymore'. This was quite incredible.

1050 I had seen him passionately follow Joe Bossano, and then turn his back on him, deny him three times quickly as he moved over to the other side; but now to see him do the same thing to Sir Peter, whilst still seated on the same side, this is of biblical proportions (Laughter) It was Peter who denied Christ (Laughter) and now it is happening the other way round – (Laughter) Absolutely fascinating. But, there is no other way. There is no other way to get away from 650 Gibraltarians more in jobs in two years, an average of 325 a year, other than to simply bury one's head in the sand, and deny the past and pretend it and they did not exist.

1060 But he says, 'There is a very poor service going on in the ETB. What is going on in the ETB?' I heard him say in a moment (Laughter) of slight passion, and he looked like a 90-year-old waving his walking stick, 'What is going on in the ETB?' It is terrible. There are now complaints, complaints that the phone is not being answered at the ETB and everyone here of course will want every public office to have its phones answered at the first possible moment. I will tell him what is happening at the ETB. They are finding people jobs. (Laughter) They have gone from answering the phone and employing 22 people a year, to not answering the phone and employing 325 people a year. I know which ETB I prefer. (Laughter) I just need to send them some people to answer the phone. It is not a difficult thing for the Government to do.

1065 He has heard me make the analysis about how many people they employed into the public sector, so he does not really want me to go through that again, because his complaint that the numbers are up 7.8% really do not sit very well with the fact that they went up 60% in their time, if not 68%. I still have not got the figure for 1996. So he needs to be careful with that one, and that is another area to avoid next year para no hacer el tonto. Financial Services and Gaming, Mr Speaker, up 1,050 jobs – 50% in two and a half years – so all the growth is not in the public sector as he has pretended. What a pity to see such talent wasted, Mr Speaker. Anyway, I am backing Mr Feetham as leader of the GSD for as long as I can.

1070 Mr Reyes reminded us that we gave a commitment not to destroy heritage sites, but now that we are in Government that commitment is tempered as a result of professional advice. Well, it always was going to be subject to professional advice. Nobody on this side of the fence is going to want to see a building that is about to fall down stay there simply because there is a heritage value to it. I think we have a cross-party 1075 agreement on that. But on the issue of the Main Guard, he said that they had planned it for years and they were very pleased to see it happen. Well, they planned so much for years, Mr Speaker, and what we have done is demonstrate to them how much can be done in a few short years by actually getting on and doing it.

1080 He then went through a list of issues that we were still pending delivery on: digitising the archives, replacing the place of the Neanderthal skull and delivering culture. He said, 'When?' Well, look, Mr Speaker, I am grateful that he is reminding me of my manifesto commitments. I have got them all in my head. They are all going to be completed on time before the next Election, but if he wants to help us to win the next Election by doing more than just reminding us of what he wants us to do, our position always had been – it is important that Mr Bossano hears this – that there were only two people who we would not accept in the GSLP, and that was Mr Feetham and Sir Peter. But now that Sir Peter has started to accept that everything we have done makes sense and is right, I am quite happy to propose at the next AGM that we should lift the veto there, and of course there is no veto for him if he wants to come in and help us to make sure that we comply with all our manifesto commitments on time.

1090 Then he said that we had inherited from the GSD a policy of supporting our sporting bodies to get over international hurdles put in the way of membership of their international federations. Well, yes, we had inherited it from you, I recognise that, and they had inherited it from us in 1996. A much more elegant way of putting it so that it is not an issue between us is that we all agree across the floor of the House, as the House always has before he and I were Members of it and regardless of who was in Government, that all our sporting associations should be entitled to form part of their international relevant bodies and without anybody putting political obstacles in their way.

1095 He said that the further football pitch was going to be a huge cost – that may come back to haunt him, just like the estimate that the Hon. Leader of the Opposition made about the Power Station costing £120 million, which it is not going to do – and that other sports need facilities too. Well, we agree, and I have told him across the floor of the House because it is an issue that I am dealing with, with the Minister for Sport, because it involves lands and other issues, which are inter-ministerial, that we looking and working with cricket and rugby to deal with those issues.

1100 Then he went on to say that the educational system is a source of pride, but after 42 years it needs to be changed and explained in that way why they put out a policy that simply asks questions and gives no answers. Well, I have no difficulty with them doing that, but I think we had the Hon. the Minister for Education explain to us what was their position before the Election and what is their position now, and that was amusing enough. But they put out a consultation which does not give any answers; it just asks questions. I have done that too, in some respects, because in some instances that is what you have to do. You have to make up your mind with information from the public, from the community and from business. When I did it, his leader said that it was disgraceful that I was not leading the community and telling them what I thought the results should be, but when they do it, it is the right way of consulting. Do not worry, I am used to it. So is everybody else and that is your problem. Then he said that what we should not do is gamble with Education in the future, and I could not agree with him more. That is absolutely right and I entirely agree with him.

1115 He took us to the Housing Works Agency, and said, 'What are you doing? For every two that goes, you only employ one'. Yes, I want to ask him... I have written to him already asking him a question that he asked me to write to him on at Question Time. I am going to write to him again, given his speech, to ask him to please clarify to me, given that they were in Government at the time but he has asked the question now, what it was that they intended to do with the Housing Works Association, because they are the ones who signed the agreement and said, 'Two out, one in', and that is a law of ever-reducing numbers which will get to zero at some stage.

1120 He expressed concern on behalf of constituents about the length of time that it has taken to refurbish their estates, because the refurbishment started a year ago and it is not finished yet. I really do not believe him I must tell him. It may be that one of his supporters with nothing else to talk to him about has tried to make a conversation in that way, but I do not believe that somebody who has been on an estate that has not been refurbished for 50 years, who has seen the refurbishment process start a year ago and knows it is going to finish by next August or September, is saying, 'When is this going to finish?' He is saying, 'Thank goodness this has started. Thank goodness this Administration has not listened to what you guys are saying about this being too expensive. I am really looking forward to next summer'. If there are slight personal issues, there are on every building site, I am confident that the Government and our contractors can deal with it.

1130 He will be, I hope, very happy and not cynically disappointed to hear that of the 1,500 people who were on the waiting list at the time of the last Election, approximately two thirds have already been housed, and that therefore we are very much on track to deliver on that fundamental manifesto commitment. He will not be so happy to hear that when he said that £130,000 per home at Charles Bruzon House was an extortionate amount of money and it was far too expensive, I am told today that that is exactly the same cost as every apartment at Albert Risso House. I really could not quite believe it. (Interjection) I could not quite believe it. Six years later, despite inflation and the move in the market, what he said was too high is what they paid six years ago – another one not to repeat in the future. Talk about a hostage to fortune.

1140 But he said that we were nervous about their new policies. I want to tell him that we are delighted with their new policies. They should continue to roll them out, as many of them as possible, because they really do help people to see them in their real light, especially this sort of policy and this sort of... More of this, please. More of this as soon as possible, because if he thinks that we are stagnating and visionless and we are too thirds of the way in delivering through what they described as too ambitious and too expensive a manifesto, well, then I think there would be many people in the Western world who would like to have Governments as stagnating and as visionless as this, delivering 10.3% growth... and Mr Bossino would like to recall, because he has just looked at it a minute ago on page 1, the highest recurrent revenue in the history of Gibraltar and the highest surplus in the history of Gibraltar. So stagnating and visionless like that I will continue to be for many years, I hope.

1145 Mrs Isobel Ellul-Hammond used some very peculiar language in her address. She talked of us culling people and that is extraordinarily unfortunate because when you cull a person, what you do is you kill them. So she has made an accusation against the Government – in figurative terms... I am not suggesting that she says we have killed anyone – that we are culling people because of their nationalities. Well, there is another document that we give them just in time for the Budget session, which is called the Employment Survey. The Employment Survey tells them who is employed in our economy and what their nationality is, amongst other things. I do not know whether she bothered to look at it, but next year before making allegations of culling, she might like to look at it, because having been accused of culling for nationalistic reasons, despite what the Hon. Mr Bossino has described as the despicable campaign by Spain against Gibraltar, despite the Foreign Affairs Committee in the United Kingdom having identified that the Ambassador from Spain had to be summoned two more times than the North Korean Ambassador and thereby no doubt incurring the wrath of the Leader of the Opposition for having mentioned the words ‘North Korea’ and ‘Spain’ in the same sentence, if she had looked at the Employment Survey she might not have erred quite as she has. Compared to October 2012, Spanish employee jobs in the economy grew by 653, an increase of 18.1%, which means they now represent 18.6% of all jobs in our economy. That is not a cull. That is a reproduction – (Laughter) Otra vez, ya vamos a llegar al tuyo, no te preocupes. How can she call that culling... with a straight face?

1155 And then the calculations that she made about average sick leave, which she tells us was absolutely terrible at 15.5 days in the GHA and this is the measure of whether people are happy or not... in a place where illnesses run riot obviously, because people work with illness every day and what might apply to a car show room does not necessarily apply to a Health Authority – actually the GHA tells us that the figure is 14.8 days, not 15.5; but she said her gold standard was 4.4 days of sick leave. Next year, can they please excite me intellectually a little bit more and make this harder? The principal auditor had to take an interest in the Gibraltar Health Authority in 2007 because sick days had got so out of control. I am told from a sedentary position by others that she was a Board Member at the time. (Laughter) I am going to say it like that because I am not sure that she was... with that get out. The staff then was smaller, right. So there were in fact 200 less sick days taken in 2013 than in 2007, even though there was a larger staff.

1160 In 2007, when I am told she was a Board Member and when they were in Government, led by a man who they have described as the greatest Gibraltarian politician of all time Otra vez (Laughter) morale, one would have expected would be so high, led on the Board by the hon. Lady, led in Gibraltar by this paragon (Laughter) and with Mr McCutcheon in charge of the Gibraltar Health Authority. (Interjection and laughter) But really, one would want to ask oneself, what went wrong in the Health Authority where the golden standard of 4.4 was not the standard they hit? It was 18.2. (Laughter) If we take the whole of the GHA together, every GHA employee, actually it is 11.6 in 2013, led by the man who brings them joy once a year by dancing on the steps. (Laughter and banging on desks) So in 2007, three and a half days more per member of staff, and really, if her assumptions mean anything, she needs to really go back to the drawing board and ask herself what she and everybody else who was involved in the GHA then were doing wrong.

1170 Then she complains about overspending in the GHA. She said it was £5 million. It was not. It is actually £4.3 million of recurrent... £1.8 million is the pay review. So if they do not like that, she might want to say, next time she goes down to the Health Authority to shake people’s hands, she might want to say, ‘Look, I really like you. I really value what you are doing, but I am getting rid of the latest pay review because I have criticised the increase in the recurrent expenditure’. One million pounds was the result of Agenda for Change and also an agreement entered into by them. So £1.8 million pay review, their cost, and £1 million Agenda for Change, their cost – £2.8 million out of £4.3 million... I know they hate it when we break down the figure and show them it is their fault – and the rest was largely sponsored patients. So I propose to her to control that she should go down quickly to the Health Authority. We will allow her access. (Interjection) Stand outside the sponsored patients’ office and say, ‘The GSD wants you to stay in Gibraltar. We are not sending you away, and if the GSLP insists’ – it was GSLP Liberals – ‘on you going away for treatment, then I will be able to criticise the costs next year in the overrun. And you, person standing there doing a sterling job helping them, you are not having your pay rise. And you, nurse, you are going back to where you were before Agenda for Change because I am now against this rising cost'. Otherwise can she at least not be hypocritical and not criticise the cost, which she would probably have incurred as well and in fact which principally they incurred.

She likes to criticise Xanit so much, and yet it was the GSD that started to use Xanit. The referrals are always supported by clinicians. There is absolutely no political interference whatsoever. It is really quite incredible that she takes the attitude that she takes, but I am not surprised, because as I have demonstrated by reference to data in relation to sick days, she has complained about Xanit, about recurring expenditure and all things which now she sees she should not have complained about if she wants to make any sense. She has complained about complaints. This is becoming more like Monty Python all the time. 'I have got a complaint about complaints. Is this the complaints office?' (Laughter) 'No, this is arguments'. (Laughter and banging on desks) Well, Mr Speaker (Interjection) it is really quite incredible to see and a credit, a huge credit to a man, who has demonstrated that the things he is good at, he really is good at. (Interjection) Quien, tu? (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, I am going to give Members the data for complaints and so they might wish to make a note. Complaints 2005 – 215... in fact, I will give them the breakdown: 2005 – formal 96, informal 119, total 215; 2006 – 74 formal, informal 122, 196 total; 2007 – formal 52, informal 140, total 192; 2008 – 57 formal, 140 informal, total 197; 2009 – 53 formal, informal 129, total 182; 2010 – formal 60, informal 105, total 165; 2011 – formal 48, informal 96, total 144; 2012 – formal 39, informal 109, total 148; 2013 – formal 39, informal 90, total 129.

In 2007, there were 192 complaints and people took 18.2 days off of sick leave in the GHA. In 2013, there were only 129 complaints – each of them matters – many of them encouraged by the Minister himself, who likes people to make formal complaints so that the process can be gone through and we can learn from anything that has gone wrong... not discouraged, as used to be the case in the old days – and people took 14.8 days off sick leave. I think that ship has been steadied, all credit to Dr John Cortes. (Banging on desks)

I am not going to pretend to do the mathematics that she does with the GPs again, because we would be here all day demonstrating to her how wrong she is about this. There is so much that I have been provided with where I can contradict her, but it is already five past two and the nose and the trough needs soon to be united. (Laughter) So I will leave a lot of that, apart from that I must say I was very disappointed with her attitude to Commonwealth Park. To say constantly, 'Well, at least we have a park. At least we have a park', as if that were not relevant or important. Even in health terms it is important, let alone in environmental terms; but we know they think it is a vanity project, therefore useless and irrelevant.

The issue of fixed-term contracts, sickness, absence and staff turnover at the Care Agency is something that has been plaguing that Agency since the time that they were there. They introduced the fixed-term contract. How can they complain about this now? It is absolute nonsense, but we are getting used to that from her. The turnover in the Care Agency, which she raised as an issue, I have the numbers for two... she may like to make a note to ensure she never refers to this again. In 2010, the turnover was 72, which is 14%; in 2011, the turnover was 81, which is 16%; in 2012, the turnover was 23, which is 4%; and in 2013, 35, which is 6%. I will accept her congratulations for having got that turnover down. In the Social Services Department of the Care Agency, the turnover in 2010 was 25 – 13.8%; 2011, 20 – 10.5%; 2012, 9 – 4.7%; and 2013 the number was 14 – 6.5%. Apologies also graciously accepted (Laughter) in relation to that issue.

Mr Speaker, we think we are doing a lot for children with autism... the Minister for Health has said so. The Minister for Social Services has said so. She has raised this issue with us. She knows and others know that they can raise any concerns they have about issues like this with us at any time and we will deal with being able to work on these issues whenever we can. Things like this should surely not be the sort of thing that becomes part of the political to and fro. We are open and ready to listen to ideas, to work together on these issues. We are in Government now and therefore they need to come to us for things to be done. But if they are ever in Government, on issues like this, should anything come our way, we would go to them. Let us not make this a football, please. There are plenty of other things that we have kicked about today that we can have a lot of fun with and we can enjoy without having to go down that road.

I think the Minister for Equality is doing a fabulous job in relation to all matters of equality. That does not mean women's issues. That means equality. Everybody equal, whatever dangly bits one may or may not have, however one may like to use them (Laughter) and that is what she has been achieving, Mr Speaker. It is not about women. It is not about men. It is about equality.

If we are revising the size of the rooms in the dementia facility, it is because what they left us was really not fit for purpose and once we open it, people will realise that we have done a fabulous job in doing so, as we have with the John Mac Home. We had to spend £4 million because they also left us something there that was not fit for purpose. We had factored that into the equation of being able to rehouse people. We showed it to very many people. Nobody wanted to stay there. Some could not, because of the way it had been designed.

1260 Of the overspend of £3.7 million, 2.6% is the extension of Agenda for Change and the £900,000 is domiciliary care. Please, let us, on the back of an envelope, on the back of a postcard addressed to the Chief Minister or the Minister for Social Services telling us which of those two she would cut... the pay cut of £2.6 million or the £900,000 on domiciliary care. Please, if she does say domiciliary care, can she not ask us about the waiting list and urge us to hurry it along, although they did nothing about it?

1265 Again, on the disabled, the SEC system I am told is new, so finding complaints seems very difficult and project search is something that we are taking advice on. As she knows, some of our people have travelled there very recently. We think we are being much more proactive on fostering and abortion... sorry, adoption, and therefore we are surprised to see her take these points at this stage.

1270 Well, Mr Speaker, what can I say? I think that deals with everything, except there are two things that I want to refer her to. Just like the Leader of the Opposition, she has had today her own bundle, and so I am just going to go through the bits left in the bundle.

1275 Total recurrent expenditure and overspend in the Gibraltar Health Authority, Mr Speaker, average 8.24%. The variance between 1997-98 and 2011-12 is a total of an overspend of £55 million... £55.8 million. It reaches 11.95% overspend in 2011-12 and 10% in 2008-09. In 2012-13 the variance is down to 1.13%. Well done, John Cortes. This year it is up again because of sponsored patients, and no doubt in some of their years it would be sponsored patients too, because as the Hon. the former Chief Minister said, spending on Health... look, it has to be controlled, but nobody is complaining because it is being spent on Health as long as it is spent in the right way. As he said, we redistribute that income, this record income in different ways. One of the ways we do it is by giving good healthcare. Now, she needs to decide if she wants to stop spending on Health and criticise overspending or ask us what the overspending is on. Let us analyse why we did not get it right in the estimates. How can we get it right next time? But a blanket complaint like that actually just serves to show up that in their time the overspending was usually worse than in ours.

1285 Mr Speaker, she has repeatedly accused us of cronyism – repeatedly. There is absolutely no reason to accuse us of cronyism. We have demonstrated in every instance that we have acted entirely properly in keeping with our practice and if anybody was ‘crony style’... cronyistic or whatever it is, that one, however you conjugate that word – it was them in the way that they made a dedo appointments. But, Mr Speaker, she seems to read everything that is put on social media. She is ever present on Twitter and Facebook. Has she not read the article that says that I am not being cronyistic enough? (Laughter) Does she not know that the criticism that is levelled at me and the party apparently is that we are not doing cronyism? ‘Picardo’ says Panorama ‘is soft to his enemies because he mistakenly thinks that is the way to win them over, and says, “There are people who expect things from me who are not getting them”’. I do not think I have ever been described as a ‘softie’ by any of them, except for the hon. the backbencher, who once said I did not have the steel to deal with negotiations with the GGCA. That was only in an interview de la radio in 2011-12 Budget. That was only because they had finally given up on him. They had taken him for as much as they could and he could not buy them, however hard he tried at that stage, Mr Speaker.

1290 Well, we are not being cronyistic in anything that we do. We are being very careful to be a Government of all of Gibraltar. It may be getting us into some element of criticism when somebody who says that they are supporters of us feels that they are not getting something that they feel they deserve. As I said repeatedly before the Election – and I actually meant as we all meant when we said in the Election on this side of the House the things that we were going to do – we were not going to be advancing anyone simply because of the party that they might belong to. Everything was going to be done on merit and I think that we have more than demonstrated that in the way that we have run the Administration of this country’s affairs in the past two and a half years.

1300 Let me quickly, Mr Speaker, move on to Mr Jaime ‘yawn’ Netto to deal with the issues he raised. A lot of what Mr Netto raised, we have already dealt with in our presentations. We have dealt with the issue of the Power Station. We have dealt with the fact that it is going to be gas etc, etc, and so I assume again a lot of his preparation was before the announcement. He wanted to defend diesel, but they are all against recurrent expenditure going up. One of the biggest costs is diesel, and he is either on his own defending diesel or they have wheeled him out to defend diesel. I do not think anybody believes that our environment was better looked after when he was the Minister than when Dr John Cortes, Minister for Environment, is the Minister. We are all very concerned about Western Beach. We are doing as much as we can in order to try and resolve that.

1310 He wants to return to culling apes. Well, we think that we can resolve the issue of the apes. We are on the way to doing it and we think that our solutions are much better than killing animals, which are sentient, and that has been our position for some time. Their position was that they should be culled. In the eight years I have been in this House they hardly ever culled, despite it being their position that they should cull, and they hardly provided any other solution; hence the problem we have today. Most of the macaques, if not all of the macaques that we have today, were engendered – i.e. created in monkey bellies before we were elected. So look we are dealing with it and it will happen. (Interjection) Well, blame the GSD when it is true, because it is true. If you do not like it, do something about it. Change your understanding of the world so that you do not say things which open you out to this sort of criticism.

The Alameda Gardens are not dilapidated and I am really not seriously going to deal with Barbary partridges today, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, the hon. the backbencher, as I said yesterday, has never said a boring word in this Parliament, to his credit. Yesterday, he moved the political debate of this community on by his statements as to what the state of the debts had been at the time that he left and how he would have funded his manifesto, statements which I have already referred to. So, Mr Speaker, I do not intend to go through that again. I am delighted that he has said the things that he has said about the economic performance. If he will allow me a personal reflection, it is a huge satisfaction for me personally to be here today, three years after I was there being called by him ‘unfit to govern this community’ and to receive his congratulations for the fantastic economic performance that we see today demonstrates that he is a man who is more interested in the wellbeing of Gibraltar than in a petty political argument that we might have had in the heat of battle three and a half years ago. I am very grateful to see that I have confounded my critic and that the numbers speak for themselves, and that he said the things that he said yesterday.

He knows that I have been quick to congratulate him also, whenever honour has been bestowed upon him... when he became a bencher in the Inner Temple and when he took his Knighthood – so I am grateful now for his kind words about the economic performance of my Government, especially juxtaposed to the things he used to say when he was much more enlivened in this debate. I am very grateful indeed. He knows, Mr Speaker, that the people who served him in the Treasury do an excellent job and would never put pen to paper to say anything that is one penny out and we can all rely on the information that they provide. His and my understanding of what a £100 million hole is in Government finances is slightly different because we did find that there was some of the £100 million that had not been accounted for yet – part of it had been incurred; not all of it had been incurred. It was £100 million spending commitments, he will know, and part of the debate was that we had to stop spending. I will come back to him, Mr Speaker, on issues related to – as it is pretty late now – Credit Finance Company Limited.

The issue of jobs, I want to deal with very quickly, which is to say only this, if I have not said it already, that when we were fighting it out in the Election campaign and Mr Licudi and Mr Bossano made the announcement of the excellent Future Job Strategy, which is working so well and already delivering fabulous results for our community, we had calculated – as he knows it became an issue in that campaign – that the minimum wage at £10,000 each per economically active individual who took it up would cost £4 million, because there were 400 people registered unemployed. The Hon. Mr Feetham was quick to come back to us on television and tell us that this policy was madness because it was going to cost £10 million – (Interjection) £11 million in fact. Yes, indeed, thereby disclosing that the number of economic actors, who were not gainfully employed, was closer to 1,100. I put it to him Mr Speaker, that if he uses... and he has never needed a calculator, but if he needed to, I am sure that his new leader would lend him the calculator I have bought for him – if he takes away from 1,100 or from 1,000 the 650 who have been found jobs, he will find himself with a figure of 350, which is the unemployed now. That is the simplistic explanation and there is much more detail in Mr Bossano’s speech that set out the detail of it, but it is not as if we have created 650 new Gibraltarians. Mr Feetham told us exactly where they were so we could find them and give them jobs. (Interjection)

Mr Speaker, I have not heard anything in the course of this debate which changes my mind in recommending to the House this Bill. If I may, just before I move on, thank the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana for his statement in relation to our consultation on Schengen and the Customs membership and the issues of excise, which we are fully aware of on this side of the House, because we have been researching it in some detail, but not all members of our community are. When he speaks, I know people do tune in to listen and so I think it has been a very helpful pointer to where the debate may go in the future.

But I have heard absolutely nothing in the course of the past two days which shakes me from my view that I should commend the Bill to the House, but hon. Members opposite have criticised so much, have really attacked the increases in spending so much without wanting to think about what it was that they were attacking, without wanting to investigate them, and then having been given the information and have continued to be of that view, that I am going to invite them not to support the Bill, if they mean any of what they have said.

So my view is this Bill is as good today as it was when I got up on Monday and I commend it to the House as a record breaker. This is as much a new dawn today as it was on 9th December. I have seen, Mr Speaker, as has John Cortes, young children walking around that are the fruit of the IVF policy that we have implemented. The new dawn, Mr Speaker, has a name and a surname, and it is working. It is working and delivering the best possible results.

But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman opposite me criticises me at the United Nations, criticises me when I go to Spain, criticises me on every issue that he can, and now he is criticising me on these record

1380 breaking numbers. Well, Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House, but if they have the gumption to stand for what they believe, then they should not vote for this Bill to become an Act. (Banging on desks)

1385 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st day of March 2015, and further sums of money to the service of the year ended 31st day of March 2013 be read a second time. Those –

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Much more briefly, Mr Speaker, yes.

1400 A Member: Surprise, surprise! It is unanimous.

Mr Speaker: By a small matter of 17 to 0 – (Laughter and interjections) – the ayes have it. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

BILLS

SECOND READING

Appropriation Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved

Clerk: Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Before lunch, the Clerk was cut off before he was able to stand up to proclaim that the Appropriation Act had been given a Second Reading. So for the record he should do so now.

5

Clerk: The Appropriation Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Appropriation Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

10

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

15

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

20 Clerk: The Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Act 2014.

Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

25 Mr Speaker, this is a short Bill, which was published on 3rd June 2014. Hon. Members will therefore note that the six weeks required after publication before the House is able to proceed upon such a Bill have not expired. I therefore yesterday certified this Bill, under section 35 of the Constitution, as one which could not await a longer period for the House's consideration, having consulted previously with the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and having explained to him the Government's position in respect of this Bill.

30 The fact is, Mr Speaker, as I have indicated to the House, we shall not be calling a meeting for July in order to enable certain of the works to proceed, which are required in the antechamber and for the fitting of a lift to make this place accessible, and as a result this Bill, which could not otherwise be considered until I think the 16th July, could not come to consideration by the floor of the House until the third week of September. The Government considers that in the public interest this Bill needs to be on our Statute Book before then. It relates to issues which pertain to the retailing of tobacco and how that particular commodity can be retailed, and in particular how people, who are holders of tobacco licences, who breach the requirements of the Act are to be dealt with and their ability to dispose of their licences before courts dispose of any matters relating to offences which may have been committed under the Act.

35 The Bill is quite self-explanatory and I have had an indication from the hon. Gentlemen that it enjoys Opposition support. So I do not pretend to say more than that at this stage, although I will deal with any queries that hon. Members opposite may have if they express any.

40 In discussions with my Hon. And Learned Friend, the Minister for Justice, he has indicated a better way of dealing with 6B(1) in a way that is slightly more flexible. So instead of the type of notice that the Collector is going to require retailers to erect on their premises being set out in the legislation, I will be moving an amendment at the Committee Stage, which I am going to attempt to give written notice of in a few moments before we move to that stage, which will take the wording of the notice out of the Act in case it becomes necessary at any stage to make slight amendments as Customs allowances etc change, so that there is not the need to come here to amend the wording.

45 I will propose a wording which will nonetheless require the Collector to publish the type of notice that he wishes retailers to erect in the Gazette, as well as giving them notice directly in his discretion as licenceholders. That would be a more flexible way of ensuring that both the community at large and each retailer is notified of any changes and that this House does not need to become involved where simply a small amendment to a notice may be required.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

55 I will now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Tobacco Amendment No. 2 Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

60 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that... oh, hang on. I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Commonwealth Park Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

65 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to establish a park to be known as Commonwealth Park and for connected purposes.

The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

70 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to establish a park, to be known as Commonwealth Park, and for connected purposes be read a first time.

75 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to establish a park, to be known as Commonwealth Park, and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Commonwealth Park Act 2014.

Commonwealth Park Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

80 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

80 Mr Speaker, I mentioned Commonwealth Park extensively in my Budget speech, as have other contributors to this week's Budget debate, so I will keep this brief. In any case, Mr Speaker, it is the thousands of our fellow citizens, especially the hundreds of children who have, through their happy faces, their laughs and their excitement, already indelibly stamped on our community the reality and the success that is Commonwealth Park.

85 Mr Speaker, I have had few more enjoyable moments in my two and a half years as Minister than seeing my three-year-old grandson Ryan running with joy and giggling away as he experienced the grass under his little feet and splashed away in the play fountain. To me, Mr Speaker, that means many times more than all the glum faces, and all the comments of doom, and all the cynicism and all the criticism of the actually relatively little cost from all the Members opposite, and the whole community agrees. Mr Speaker, the Opposition's cynical view of Commonwealth Park, which clearly continues even now, is very reassuring to us on this side of the House as it proves categorically that they are not in touch with the pulse of our community; but that, Mr Speaker, is clearly not good for Gibraltar.

90 Commonwealth Park is an asset to Gibraltar that will bring huge benefits socially and healthwise to the people. It provides an area of beauty, by day and by night, bringing nature into the heart of our city. Mr Speaker, even after its opening, even after it has been so welcomed and acclaimed by our community, Commonwealth Park is still referred to mockingly by the Members opposite, notably by the Opposition spokesman for Health, when she kept on alluding to it in her Budget Speech of just a few days ago, insinuating that the investment in the park had been a waste of money.

100 Mr Speaker, little children, youngsters and teenagers, the middle aged and the elderly are all making use of this incredible new asset. Mr Speaker, people are commenting no parece Gibraltar. Well, Mr Speaker, what this Government is doing and what it plans to continue doing is that this sort of thing si parecerá Gibraltar will be Gibraltar (Banging on desks) because that is a new Gibraltar we are creating – a different Gibraltar. A Gibraltar that provides for the wellbeing of its people, to paraphrase the lady opposite, Mr Speaker, para eso está el dinero, para el pueblo.

105 Mr Speaker, the lady must clearly not be aware that there are plenty of studies that conclude that trees and green areas in urban settings serve to reduce aggression and improve the health of the surrounding community. Again, Mr Speaker, can the Opposition not take one step away from their obsession with Commonwealth Park and accept that they were wrong? Can they at least, Mr Speaker, support this Bill?

110 Mr Speaker, the response of the public to the park has been tremendous. Clearly it is something that the people wanted and something that the people want to keep; therefore, it is only correct, in the same way as the Alameda Gardens are protected in perpetuity and set out for the enjoyment of the community and visitors alike, well into the future, that this House should legislate to ensure such protection.

Following this, Mr Speaker, the rules of the park will be published in regulations as subsidiary legislation. It is with this purpose of ensuring that any change in use of this new and beautiful asset should 115 require the approval of this House that I commend this Bill to the House, not just for my little Ryan, but for all the children of Gibraltar for many years to come... nay, Mr Speaker, in perpetuity.

I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

120 A Member: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the principles and merits of the Bill?

125 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes.

Well, Mr Speaker, my little Gabriel is actually enjoying the park as we speak. It is his birthday and from Parliament I would like to wish him a very, happy birthday. It is his eighth birthday today (Banging on desks) and he too is enjoying the park, Mr Speaker.

130 We have never, Mr Speaker, taken issue with the park. Indeed, I note that the hon. Lady, when it was completed, actually tweeted that it was a very, very nice park. I happen to think it is a very nice park. We all on this side of the House think it is a very nice park, that perhaps we question the Government's priorities in pursuing the project of a park at the expense of perhaps pursuing a different type of project. In terms of its timing the park has gone first when other things that Gibraltar needs could have perhaps been given a greater priority, but nobody takes issue with the park Mr Speaker, and I want to make it absolutely clear.

135 Of course we also took issue with the fact that the way that the hon. Gentleman actually proceeded with the project after the General Election was different to the way that the project was characterised during the General Election, because of course the parking underneath the park mysteriously disappeared after the General Election, when we were telling them before the General Election that it is not possible to build a multi-storey underground car park underneath that park for geological reasons. The hon. Gentlemen... they said, 'No, we have taken expert advice on this and it is perfectly possible', only to bin the idea of the underground car park after they got elected. Perhaps we have been critical of what was, in our view, quite blatant cynicism on their part, but there is nothing wrong with the park and everybody on this side of the House thinks it is a wonderful park.

140 In relation to the Bill, Mr Speaker, when the Bill in relation to Alameda Gardens was brought before this House, my instinct at the time was to vote against the Bill. My instincts were to vote against the Bill because one cannot constitutionally, I thought, and legally I thought it was a complete and utter nonsense to come to this House and say, 'We are going to do something in perpetuity', because you cannot bind a future Parliament and really it was an artificial nonsense. (Interjection)

145 At the time I was persuaded by the Hon. the Chief Minister to support it on the basis that actually the wording 'in perpetuity' already existed in the Public Health Act, from which those aspects had actually been extrapolated, and indeed, because of it, we said, 'Right, okay. Well, if it is in the existing legislation already, we are going to be supporting it'. Having had time now to consider the position, to go back and see the reasons why that wording was included in relation to Alameda Gardens, I have to say that my original instinctive reaction to that Bill was absolutely correct, because of course the Public Health Act dated back to the 1950s. The wording of the grant of Alameda Gardens 'in perpetuity' was actually taken from the original grant, the original lease... the original grant from the then British Government to the people of Gibraltar. It was granted... 'Alameda Gardens are granted to the people of Gibraltar in perpetuity' and that then found its way into the legislation, but it does not make it the correct form or sensible form of wording or formula or legislative practice in relation to anything else, Mr Speaker.

155 The reality is that something continues to be so for as long as this Parliament wants it to be so. To say that it is going to remain a park 'in perpetuity' is just a gimmick and a nonsense –

Hon. D J Bossino: It adds nothing.

165 Hon. D A Feetham: – and adds absolutely nothing.

Mr Speaker, for those reasons, we are not on this side of the House prone to vote in favour of gimmicks or nonsense and therefore we will not be supporting this Bill.

170 A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the principles and merits of the Bill?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, thank you so much to the Leader of the Opposition for having confirmed that they are not going to be supporting this Bill on the basis very much that is in 175 keeping with their description of Commonwealth Park, whether his son is there or not, as a vanity project, namely one which was useless and now the Bill to protect it is nonsense.

Well, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition cannot mean the things that he has said if he has recalled the slightest bit of the constitutional law that he learnt whilst he might have been at University, because it is not nonsense to legislate in perpetuity. One legislates in perpetuity until another Parliament comes and undoes it, unless they do not, in which case legislation will stand in perpetuity. So, Mr Speaker, whether the word ‘perpetuity’ is in the Bill or is not in the Bill is not really a reason for voting in favour or against anything. In fact, what we have seen in the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is a desire to speak against this Bill and vote against it, full stop. If he had wanted really to deal with the issue as a legal issue, he would have said, ‘Look, I have a concern only about the word “perpetuity”’. He would not have described it as nonsense and he would have said, ‘I have thought of another word we should use’, and I invite Members opposite to think of making the small amendment which would allow the Opposition to support the Bill.

So he has come here wanting to vote against the Commonwealth Park Act, not wanting to be constructive, extending their attitude of lack of support for what is happening at Commonwealth Park de facto into now this de jure expression of the park which will be the Commonwealth Park Act.

190 Mr Speaker, he says that they supported everything about the park, except perhaps the priority it has had in respect of the Government’s delivery of manifesto commitments. Well, again, Mr Speaker, I cannot take that point seriously. The hon. Gentleman I know likes to do social media mischief by saying, ‘Oh, a park before a power station, isn’t that terrible. A park before a housing estate, isn’t that terrible’.

Well, Mr Speaker, things are done when they can be done and some things are easier to do than others. We did not have to decide whether to power the park with diesel or with gas. We have not had to take any legal advice as to where to put the stacks or how high they can be. We have not had to consider with technical experts whether we should have six floors, eight floors or 15 floors on the park. It is a park and it is therefore easier and quicker to deliver than a power station, than a housing estate, or a waste treatment plant or any of the other things which are in our manifesto, which are timed to be delivered during the lifetime of the Parliament and which we are delivering during the lifetime of the Parliament.

So he has set up two excuses in order not to support the Bill and they will forever – in fact, Mr Speaker, in perpetuity (Laughter) – be in the Hansard as nothing more than that, ruses set up to avoid supporting what is, in my view, a very worthy Bill, which will ensure that this green area remains a green area for as long as somebody does not come to this Parliament and persuade the majority that it should be something else, and there maybe circumstances in the future where that is necessary, but we want to add this extra layer of protection for the park. We think it is the right thing to do. The use of the word ‘perpetuity’ in the Alameda Gardens protection in the Public Health Act is a useful model, if that comes from the original grant, well, that is a very good reason for having it in there; if it did not, the fact that we might all want to protect the Alameda Gardens is a very good reason for having it in there. Now that we are, with the opportunity to make this Bill, we want to express it in the terms that will provide the greatest amount of protection for the longest period and we want the Act itself to be a deterrent in the way it is expressed.

Mr Speaker, the concept of supremacy of Parliament is extraordinarily clear, from Dicey onwards we have all understood what it meant, and we do not need the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition trying to pretend that the use of the word ‘in perpetuity’ is a legislative device that does anything other than express the wish of this Parliament today, and that is a very good reason, Mr Speaker, because it is the wish of this Parliament today to support this Bill as drafted.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Sir Peter Caruana.

220 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Obligated, Mr Speaker.

Last night I had dinner in Queensway Quay Marina and as it was such a pleasant evening, my wife and I walked back to Irish Town from Queensway Quay Marina and we routed via the park, which looks absolutely spectacular.

Different people would design spatial use differently according to taste; that is true. I would have done one or two things differently, but that is just one person’s preference over another’s. The park, I would rather have seen it where we would have built it, opposite the English Steps and not in Commonwealth Parade. It would not have been as big as this, but it would have been the size of one third of the combined football pitches and the space in between the two. So we can argue about whether the pond is too big or too small whatever. I am not going to submit it to that sort of criticism. It is a beautiful public amenity. I would prefer to see it in a different place, not there, but that also is a matter of opinion. So in signalling to the House that I cannot support this Bill, it is not because I am not willing to eulogise one of their flagship projects, which I have just done.

Clause 3 of the Bill – notwithstanding that I have heard what the Hon. the Chief Minister has just said – is a legislative nonsense. There is a case for legislating for the park to give yourselves powers to make rules and regulations for its administration or for any other purpose to do with its running or with ... but to legislate that the Commonwealth Park shall be perpetually set apart for the health, recreation and enjoyment of all persons, the key words there are ‘perpetually set apart’ because a park may not necessarily be for health, recreation and enjoyment. Children may fall over and hurt themselves and that is not for their health or enjoyment. So let us not be pedantic. A park is necessarily for people’s enjoyment and for people’s health, so the purpose of this is not in the words ‘health, recreation and enjoyment’, it is in the words ‘perpetually set apart’, that is the crux of this clause.

It is a legislative nonsense in two respects. First of all, because it is an attempt, which I think he acknowledges is ineffective, but nevertheless an attempt to go as far as he thinks he can into making it as difficult as possible for anybody to do differently, but of course it does not provide any greater protection for the longest possible period because it is still the same seven-day process or whatever it now is following the new constitution – (Interjection) Yes, thank you. It is now a six-week process to amend to repeal this Bill as any other Bill.

Nevertheless, the device to try and get everybody in this Parliament to say today that we are all here committed to perpetually set this apart. I am not... I think it is a fantastic facility, but I am not prepared to now commit myself that in three, four or five years’ time there may be a project of greater need for Gibraltar, of greater socio-economic need for Gibraltar that may require some of us, who may be in the House at that time either on this side or on that side in Government, to take the view that the park has got to be made smaller or that that end of it has got to be given up for some other necessary function, it is just an unreasonable, in my opinion, thing to say and unnecessary. I think it is unnecessary for the hon. Members to have the credit that they deserve and that the community may choose to give them for having executed this project. I think this is a wholly unnecessary device, which can only have as its objective getting us all to sign with our Parliamentary blood to never undoing a grand GSLP/Liberal alliance Government project. Religiously, I cannot support that, and I do not mean religiously in the church sense, I mean it in the word’s technical meaning. Religiously, I cannot support such a device.

I am told that the hon. Member has asked for words to be suggested in the alternative, and I would propose – and I am not going to make it a formal amendment unless there is an indication that they might be willing to support it... there is no point – that the words ‘perpetually set apart’ shall simply be changed to ‘operated as’. The Commonwealth Park shall be operated as a park for the health, recreation and enjoyment of all persons. Well, fine, Mr Speaker, to the extent that that is acceptable to them, what it means is that the difference between us is in the space between the meaning of ‘operated as’ and ‘perpetually set apart as’, well, that is not just semantics. That is not just semantics, it is about... and I cannot imagine that somebody might want to dismantle all of that park. I can see that in due course there may be a Government that decides that there is too much flat land allocated to it and the use to which it is put does not quite... also an unlikely decision, but possible. I cannot imagine that anyone would want to remove the park from there altogether, but that is not a reason for committing ourselves, us 17 individuals, that there will never be another need of Gibraltar greater than the desirability of this park, desirable as it is, and that is what I have difficulty with.

It is just an unnecessary curtailment of our obligation, as 17 Gibraltarians charged with this Parliamentary governance and those 10 charged with its executive governance, to abrogate our rights to make decisions in accordance with the needs of Gibraltar as they are at the time. I would be making the same point – if this was not about the park – if it was about the price of fish. This is not about the subject matter of the Bill, it is the concept.

Yes, of course I will give way to him, although he did not give way to me this morning. (Laughter)

Hon. Chief Minister: Because I knew what you were going to do and if you had not done it, they would not have done what you indicated they had to do.

Mr Speaker, this is about the curtailment of executive power in effect. If he will just bear with me, let me tell him why I think that is the case.

What we are trying to do – and it maybe that there is a measure of agreement that we can reach in what it is that we are trying to do – we are trying to take away from a putative future Chief Minister, who as he knows is the person who would agree that the land could be used for another purpose, the sole decision-making power to decide that park can be something else. So what we are trying to do is not shackle this Parliament, but empower it to be the entity that can decide in future, should those circumstances arise, that the park should be used for something further, because we think this is more than just a plot of land now that the executive can decide to use in a different way... much as the Alameda Gardens – for the reasons we have been discussing before and in another meeting – have also now got that character.

So if he takes that away from my intervention, a form of words that if it is offensive for him to think that we are, with the word ‘perpetuity’, shackling the Parliament in some way, and he can quickly think of a way that actually is empowering the Parliament – like, for example, ‘shall not without the consent of this Parliament be used for a purpose other than to be a park’ – I think maybe that has the effect of empowering the legislature over the executive in respect of this particular plot of land.

300 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has to understand that I do not speak for the Opposition. I am a backbencher. I do not have a position as spokesman. I think it is clear – (Interjection) It is clear that this will be a matter for the Leader of the Opposition and my other colleagues on this side of the House.

305 But look, I am glad to hear what the Chief Minister has said, because if the object, if the purpose of this Bill is to make the ‘change of use’, for want of a better phrase, away from a park and a decision for the legislature rather than for the executive, I think that that is a legitimate objective. In this and in any other area of executive power that the Government of the day, whoever it is, decides that they want to add what he has called a ‘layer of protection’ from executive whim.

310 But look, Mr Speaker, if the Bill read, ‘Commonwealth Park shall be operated as...’ to which he could add if he wanted, ‘operated and preserved as a park for the health’, then by the law of Gibraltar the park could not be used; not only could it not be used for anything else without this Bill being repealed, but it would have to continue to be operated as, so they could not even close the park down, let alone use it for something else. They could not cease to operate it as a park, never mind cease to operate it as a park and apply it to some other use. They could not do either of those things without repealing this Bill and that would be, in my opinion, a perfectly proper legislative provision – (Interjection) Yes.

315 Hon. Chief Minister: So, Mr Speaker, with that understanding, which is really where we are going –

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Only with the backbencher.

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, absolutely.

320 A Member: Good enough for us.

Hon. Chief Minister: With that understanding, that is where we are going.

325 The use of the words ‘in perpetuity’ is simply there until a future Parliament wants to undo it. So whether you like it as a device or not, it is removed when a future Parliament removes it. So, with that device, can he just remind me of the words that he was proposing?

A Member: To operate it exclusively –

330 A Member: Operated as and preserved as –

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Be careful with the exclusivity, because it means he will not be able to organise certain sorts of events in it. It might be perfectly appropriate. I just think operated exclusively... I mean he can add it if he wants, but he has got to be careful though that there is not a debate.

335 If the Minister for Heritage decides that he wants to organise a concert there, that someone is not going to have him prosecuted for breaching the Commonwealth Park Act or whatever this is going to be called.

A Member: Commonwealth Park – (Interjections)

340 Hon. Chief Minister: I think that the father of the House...He likes to be referred as such. The Father of the House, the oldest Member sensibly is suggesting that in fact we achieve it by leaving the Bill as it is, and adding the words, ‘shall not without the prior consent of the Parliament be operated other than as...’

345 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): In perpetuity.

Hon. Chief Minister: ‘... in perpetuity’.

Hon. Sir Peter Caruana: I am not going to...

350 Mr Speaker, the Opposition voting against this Bill is not the most important Bill that we will vote against. How much effort the hon. Member thinks it is worth making to obtain the Opposition’s support for this Bill is a matter entirely for them. I will not be supporting a Bill that in my personal opinion purports to bind this group of parliamentarians, including me, into what decisions we can make personally about this, as legislators, about the future use of this park.

355 So if he wants to leave the word ‘perpetuity’... he has expressed to me what is his objective, which as I have understood him was to make sure that an executive could not without the consent of the legislature cease to operate the park or use it for... or the land for any other purpose. I have offered him a formula of words that necessarily achieves that objective. If he wants to continue to put in the word ‘perpetuity’, I do 360 not think it is worth... or ‘perpetually’ or anything like that, which as he knows is a word that gives me difficulty. Fine, they are going to pass the Bill. More important Bills like this have gone through on a Government majority (Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed.) and so I do not think it is very ... I leave the decision entirely for him.

Mr Speaker: If no other Member wishes to contribute, I will call upon the mover to reply.

365 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I have very little to add to this exchange. I am very pleased of course to have heard the words of praise from both the official Opposition and the hon. the backbencher. The park is, as I said, for all of Gibraltar to enjoy, including, of course, the Members opposite. They have recognised the value and the beauty today, I think probably for the first time.

370 I think we have discussed the issue of change in words, and having had a brief discussion I am persuaded that we should keep it as it is. Mr Speaker, after all, it is Parliament at this point in time that decides that it shall be perpetually set apart. A Parliament in another point in time can take a different decision and then they have every right to come here and change that; but if the majority of this House feels that this is correct, then that is the decision that we have to take.

375 So I will leave it at that and when I am asked to, I will give notice for the Committee Stage and Third Reading.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Would the hon. Gentleman give way to me just before he sits down?

380 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: I would qualify what he has said with these words: it is true that future Parliaments are not prevented from repealing this Act, but he personally, and I personally and anybody who votes in favour of this Bill personally, will have the legal power to do it, but they will be countermanding their own vote today. (Interjection)

385 Their own vote today was that it should be perpetual. If any of the people here in the future vote for this land to be used for any other purpose, they will be contradicting themselves in a way, yes; but his recognition, his recognition that he will be free to do that with just a shrug of the shoulders is the very purpose... is exactly the very same argument why we say it is unnecessary. I am grateful to him for letting me interrupt him.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the shrug of the shoulders was in no way meant to be offensive. It was saying... well, you know, these are –

395 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: No, it was not the shrug... I did not interpret it as offensive. The shrug I interpreted to mean that it could easily be done and – (Interjection)

Hon. D A Feetham: Will you give way?

400 Mr Speaker, I have very patiently listened to the exchanges between the hon. the backbencher and the Minister (Interjection) and also the Chief Minister – (Interjection) Absolutely. I have not wanted to intervene to see whether some measure of agreement could have been reached that would have been acceptable to the rest of the Opposition as well. I have to say that we have absolutely no difficulty with the wording that the hon. the backbencher has suggested. From the very beginning I have said that it is the word ‘perpetually’ that we find, as the Opposition, offensive, and that is the reason why we are voting against the Bill. But I wanted to make the position clear, less it be suggested that somehow the rest of the Opposition are not being reasonable by not – (Interjection) I beg your pardon? (Interjections) Yes.

405 Of course I want to add this as well, that simply because we are voting against the Bill, and I think that for the reasons that I have said during the course of my own intervention and I think it was clear from my own intervention, does not mean that we have any intention should we win the Election in a year’s time to bulldoze the park and build blocks of flats. (Interjections)

410 I have to say, Mr Speaker – (Interjections) Mr Speaker, I have to say, and I speak only for myself in relation to this, because one never knows what the position is going to be. I speak for myself. I think it is an excellent idea. It is an excellent park and I would not wish to see it used for any other purpose, but the reality is that what I would not wish to do, which is what I said during the course of my intervention, is do anything that can be interpreted as binding us in any way, shape or form in the future.

415 And of course I also think that it is a legalistic nonsense to add the word ‘perpetually’ and for those reasons we are voting against it. But there is no intention, and I want to make it absolutely clear, after the next General Election to go in with the bulldozers and bulldoze the entire park – that is not the point. (Interjection)

420 A Member: You will give way back to somebody –

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, I am giving my way back to the Chief Minister.

425 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, at least now it is clear that what they want to do is pretend until the next Election that they are not going to bulldoze the park, but leave themselves the doors open after the next Election for the possibility of bulldozing the park, and I thank hon. Members opposite for making their position clear.

430 Why it is they cannot live with the word ‘perpetually’... I am minded to move an amendment to include the words ‘eternally, until Armageddon or salvation come uponeth the whole of the world for all time’, but I think given that I do not think they stand a chance of winning the next Election, we are alright with ‘perpetually’.

Dr J E Cortes: Per omnia secula seculorum Mr Speaker, I have nothing further to add, so I will wait to be called to give notice for Committee Stage.

435 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to establish a park to be known as Commonwealth Park, and for connected purposes, be read a second time. Those in favour? (Government Members: Aye.) Those against? (Opposition Members: No.) The Opposition are...?

440 Hon. D A Feetham: No.

Mr Speaker: Carried by Government majority.

Clerk: The Commonwealth Park Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Commonwealth Park Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 445 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Are all hon. Members agreed that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

450 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010.
The Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a first time.

455 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Income Tax Amendment Act 2014.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

460 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

Mr Speaker, the principal purpose of this Bill is to enable QNUPS, Qualifying Non-UK Pension Schemes, to be offered from Gibraltar. Hon. Members will be aware that QNUPS are pension schemes established in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom and which must fulfil certain conditions in order to be recognised in the United Kingdom. Indeed, Mr Speaker, as the Government announced in early 465 March, we have been in consultation with the Gibraltar Association of Pension Fund Administrators and in discussions with HM Revenue and Customs in order to enable to allow Gibraltar based QNUPS to be recognised in the United Kingdom.

Broadly, Mr Speaker, QNUPS recognition can be achieved, among other ways, by fulfilling the following two conditions: (1) The scheme must be open to persons resident in the country or territory in which it is established; and (2) the scheme is liable to taxation on its income, which we have set at 2.5%, as indeed we did with QROPS in 2012 and either of the following conditions: (i) the scheme is approved or recognised by or registered with the relevant tax authorities in the jurisdiction in which it is based; or (ii) the scheme rules must provide that at least 70% of the member's relevant scheme are designed to provide a lifetime income. The new Section 14B of the Act will amply provide for these and other conditions to be 470 met.

Mr Speaker, QNUPS are highly attractive for a number of reasons, not least because they can invest in a wide range of assets and because they are exempt from United Kingdom inheritance tax on a member's death. The fact that we will now be able to offer these pensions schemes from here is an important step, a further step in establishing Gibraltar as an international pensions centre.

480 Mr Speaker, I should mention that the Government has taken this opportunity to amend section 14A, which allowed for QROPS, Qualified Recognised Overseas Pension Schemes, to be recognised in order to clarify the language regarding the jurisdiction from which funds in the scheme may be transferred. Specifically, these amendments are subsections (2) and (5) of section 14A. The amendments do not alter the substance of the transfer jurisdiction provision.

485 Also as regards 14A, we are introducing an amendment to allow the Commissioner of Income Tax to vary the commutation percentage of 30% in case of any changes that are made in the United Kingdom legislation. This amendment is to be found in subsection (3)(a) of section 14A. Incidentally, this flexibility for the Commissioner is included in the new section 14B. We will of course keep QROPS and QROPS legislation in the United Kingdom under review and introduce any needed changes to our own legislation as and when those may be required.

490 Finally, Mr Speaker, you will note that I am moving three amendments to the Bill. The first is simply to capitalise 'tax' in the long title. This is in a letter, Mr Speaker, that I have forwarded to the Speaker and I have copied the hon. Member on 24th June.

495 The second and third is remove the wording 'as to residency' since it might be taken to mean that the source of income could only be funded by a resident of the United Kingdom or Gibraltar, something which is not required by the UK's QNUPS legislation and which would therefore unnecessarily restrict QNUPS offerings. The substitute wording makes a reference to the UK's statutory instrument that sets out the actual criteria for QNUPS.

500 Mr Speaker, I would like to say how happy I am with the efforts of the Finance Centre executives, in particular in this case, Mr Michael Ashton, in bringing to fruition this exciting development for the pensions industry in Gibraltar.

Mr Speaker, I commend this Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)

505 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker.

510 The Opposition will be voting in favour of the Bill. I have had the opportunity of discussing the provisions contained in it with the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services, who has just spoken on the Bill, and I need to recognise, acknowledge and thank him and his team, in particular Mr Lloyd DeVincenzi, who wrote to him in relation to the points that I raised yesterday by e-mail, in respect of which I think all of them have been addressed.

515 But simply to refer to some of them, for example, I think clause 2(a) which amends the wording in section 14A of the Income Tax Act is a very helpful amendment indeed. Mr DeVincenzi is absolutely right when he says that that particular clause... section rather, required clarification. I can understand why it would have been confusing to both practitioners and those in the Income Tax office, having read through it, and indeed the Minister and I had opposite interpretations as to the effect of that particular wording and I think that the amendment, as it currently stands, clarifies the issue very satisfactorily.

520 I also raised a point in relation to clause 2(c), which says that for the purposes of this section, ‘the term “country, territory or jurisdiction of the European Union”’, which appears in the previous section, ‘means the United Kingdom’. I simply asked why is it exclusionary of all other states within the EU. It has been explained to me. At the moment it only relates to the UK, but the wording would remain as it stands in order to give the relevant authorities the flexibility to add other states of the EU, and I think that is something which ought to be welcomed and I accept the explanation given by the Hon. Minister’s team in 525 relation to that.

Mr Speaker, clause 2(d) of the Bill... yes, which is in effect the entirety of new section 14B or soon to be new section 14B, which is in effect, as it has been explained, introduces into the Statute Book the QNUPS products. My question was the wording as it stands. The wording of soon to be section 14B is very similar to section 14A, which is currently in the Statute Book. I do not understand, given the very difference 530 in substance in terms of the wording, why there was a need for an entire new section. That again has been addressed and explained to me and I am happy to accept and vote in favour of the wording as it currently stands, subject to the amendments, which have been moved by the Minister and given notice to me today. I daresay some of them, I think, as a result of some of the points that I hopefully helpfully made to the Minister yesterday.

535 Mr Speaker, there is also a reference to a Statutory Instrument, which is then defined as meaning the Statutory Instrument enforcing the United Kingdom in the exercise of the powers conferred by the relevant section of the Inheritance Tax 1984, which is the English statutory provision. I think that is very useful and it ought to be there and it is something which I welcome in terms of the drafting.

540 An explanation has also been given, which again is satisfactory, as to why it is that it is going to be... that this particular provision is going to have retrospective effect to 6th April 2006, which also features in section 14A and it has got to do with the dove-tailing of the provisions as they stand in England and Wales.

So, for all of those reasons, I am very happy with the Bill as it currently stands and the Opposition is equally happy to be supporting it.

545 Mr Speaker: Does the mover wish to reply?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, just very briefly.

I am grateful to the hon. Members for their support. In effect the 14A and the 14B, one strand of the 14A is for QROPS and the 14B is for QNUPS, in effect replicating the main difference being that in 14B there is reference, as the hon. Member has said, to the Statutory Instrument which sets out the criteria in the United Kingdom legislation as to what is required for a pension scheme to qualify as a QNUP.

Mr Speaker, the changes that have been made to 14A are basically to simplify and clarify some of the language and I am grateful to the Members. I do not think there is anything further to add.

555 I am excited by yet another product. Obviously as hon. Members will know, the QROPS that were introduced by my Learned Friend, my predecessor the Hon. Mr Licudi, have proved extremely successful with the pensions industry. We have a number of schemes that are leaving one of our major competitors, Malta, trailing in our wake, and the number of members of each of those schemes is growing at an alarming rate. So I am delighted with the success of the QROPS product and I am very much looking forward to QNUPS doing equally the same for our pension’s community, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)
560

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Income Tax Amendment Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 565 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

COMMITTEE STAGE

Commonwealth Park Bill 2014;
Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014

570 Clerk: Committee Stage and Third Reading.
The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House should 575 resolve itself into Committee to consider the following Bills clause by clause: the Appropriation Bill 2014; the Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014; the Commonwealth Park Bill 2014; as well as the Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014.

In Committee of the whole Parliament

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to appropriate sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st March 2015 and further sums of money to the service of the year ending 31st March 2013.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Mrs Ellul-Hammond.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with regard to Other Charges, 14 Grants (b) Other Grants and Donations, the estimate was for £530,000 and the forecast outturn was £815,000. And again, there is an increase for the estimate this year. Could the Hon. the Chief Minister provide a reason as to why it has increased? Are there new beneficiaries as part of the donations and could he provide a list and amounts for them, please?

610

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Chairman.

These are, as she rightly says, the annual grants. Some of them have increased and some of them are the same. They do not all increase. There is, for example, here the one that has increased, which I think is the one responsible for the increase, is the Multiple Sclerosis Therapy Centre increase, which goes up to 615 £468,000. This is the provision of oxygen, which is not done through the GHA. It is not funded through the GHA now, it is funded through here, and I think that is what results in the increase.

Mr Chairman: Any other questions?

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Chairman, I am grateful.

As I indicated earlier today during the Chief Minister's reply, in subhead 2(b) Land and Property Management shows an overspend of £620,000 over the estimate and the Hon. Chief Minister did indicate that... did explain certain reasons why there was an overspend. Is this the entry for that overspend?

Clerk: Head 14, Environment, subhead 1, Payroll.

720 Mr Chairman: The Hon. Mr Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, thank you, Mr Chairman.

In relation to Head 1(a) Salaries for the Ministry, we have an estimate for 2013-14 of £46,000 and a forecast outturn of £46,000 and yet the estimate for this new financial year is £72,000. Could we have an explanation for the increase?

725

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): If you look at the establishment, Mr Chairman, there are two new Environmental Protection Officers and one additional Executive Officer and that makes up, I believe, the difference.

730

Hon. J J Netto: I am not quite sure I follow the Minister because the one I have quoted, which is 1(a) Salaries, is in relation to the Ministry and if the Minister looks at the establishment figures at the beginning of the page, it is exactly the same number. So we are not talking about the staff members in the Department, we are talking about the Ministry. So the numbers are the same, but there is an increase in the figures. So what is the explanation?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, sorry, I get it now.
There is now the PA of the Minister, who is now an HEO grade, rather than an EO grade.

Mr Chairman: Is there any other question?
Payroll, stands part of the Bill. Yes?

Hon. J J Netto: Sorry, there is one other issue I would also like some explanation, if I may, Mr Chairman?

In relation to 1(e) Salaries, which is the salaries of the Department we are talking about here. We had an estimate for 2013-14 of £710,000. We have the forecast outturn, which comes to a lower figure, and yet we have an estimate of £900,000. Again here, if we actually look at the figures for the establishment figures, it has only gone up by two particular persons, so it is basically a jump of £900,000 against a forecast outturn of £662,000. It is quite an extraordinary tall figure and I would like some explanation.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Chairman.

I am advised that there we do have the additional Environmental Protection Officers. I am also advised that the Senior Officer's salary was last year being filled on an acting capacity and the actual salary of the Senior Officer, who had been seconded to the Care Agency, was shown elsewhere. That is the explanation for that difference.

Hon. J J Netto: I am sure there must be more than that explanation, Mr Chairman, because even if we add two extra bodies... the wages for two extra bodies, and if we take into account the comment on the Chief Executive, it still could not account for the difference between the estimate and the forecast outturn. It is just too big a figure.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: It also takes account of the vacancies that there have been that are now coming in and I believe it also takes account of the possibility of taking on more Environmental Protection Officers.

Hon. J J Netto: What vacancies are coming in, because it is not reflected in the establishment figures?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The establishment figures show the posts, but it does not reflect whether any of those were vacant during the course of the year.

Mr Chairman: Payroll, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman.

Could I ask in relation to 2(a)(iii) Enforcement and Diving Section, there is an entry, which is a new entry, of £20,000. Could the Hon. Minister please explain what is envisaged will be happening during the course of this financial year with regard to this amount of money?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly the Enforcement Officers came in during... I think halfway through last year and therefore that is another reason why it did not reflect in the earlier question. This is a new section which is carrying out enforcement of different bits of legislation, as I described in my Budget address, and also the diving section, which is now carrying out things like, for example, the translocation of certain species when they have to be moved for some development. They are doing monitoring, tagging of underwater structures, like reefs and so on, so that is a new activity which is very new and just came in during the latter part of the last year, and that is what that is about.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I could move the Hon. Minister to item 2(3)(c) Air Quality Monitoring, it goes from an estimate 2013-14 of £363,000, which also shows the same forecast outturn, but there is an increase in the estimate for the new financial year of £440,000 – almost, say, £100,000 more. Could the Minister please enlighten us as to why?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I did mention this in my speech as well. This is the purchase of new equipment to be able to fulfil our obligations under EU and to extend the monitoring to other substances, 795 for example, metals, throughout Gibraltar, and not just in one or two areas. So it is to do with improving the air quality monitoring, which obviously will have the ultimate effect of informing how we improve the air quality.

Hon. J J Netto: In relation to item 2(3)(e)(i) the running of the Alameda Gardens, Mr Chairman, we see 800 the difference between a forecast outturn of £900,000 to an estimate of £1,105,000. Could the Minister please provide some information as to why there is increase in the expenditure?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, it was the estimate the previous year. There were a number of vacancies which had not been filled which now are going to be filled.

805 Also the 200th anniversary of the Alameda Gardens is coming up in April 2016 and this will allow certain works to be carried out in preparation for that. I am sure that the hon. Member welcomes the fact, as he had criticised the Alameda Gardens, that there is going to be some more investment this year.

Hon. J J Netto: Does it mean that the new investment is to do with the particular pathways of Alameda 810 or to do... what is extra?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am not sure of the detail, but I am happy to provide him with that information if he writes to me, but obviously I am not sure of all the details and what that is going to concern. I believe it does involve some repair to pathways, but I stand to be corrected.

815 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, in relation to item 2(3)(f) Apes Management Expenses, Healthcare and Food, we have a forecast outturn of £180,000, yet the estimate is £300,000. Can the Minister provide some explanation?

820 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly, again the estimate the previous year was £273,000. This has two main elements in it: (1) it brings in the Ape Management Plan, which he is very keen to see and which he will see very soon; and (2) this takes account of the Gibraltar side costs of the export operation, which we are planning for a few months' time.

825 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, in my Budget address, one of the things I criticised the Minister for was the question of the GONHS contract in relation to the culling of seagulls. What I did mention at the time was the fact that in previous years I think the contract originally that GONHS used to have for the culling of seagulls was something to the tune of £100,000 and the FERA company had something like £110,000.

830 We have noticed by the figures provided by the Minister that the FERA company now does not exist.
GONHS seems to have subsumed both the amount of money that they had before in GONHS, plus the FERA company, and they are culling much less seagulls than they used to do before for less money.
Therefore I think it is not a value for money initiative in having terminated the FERA contract because we have one company only doing much less than what they used to do before.

835 Given the criticism, how is the Minister going to account for the fact that we are putting basically the two budgets that existed before in the two companies into one, GONHS, whilst we are having less culling of seagulls?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Chairman, the FERA used to take in the first year a lot more... I think it was close on £200,000 or £199,000 for a six-week contract, so obviously value for money is something that I think we had better not talk about.

840 But certainly the details of how this is going to be broken up, that does not necessarily mean that all this money is going into one contract. The details of how this is going to be broken up and so on are being discussed by the Department's Chief Executive and during the course of this year she hopes to roll out a gull culling operation which will show figures.

845 Clearly, obviously of course, if figures for culling drop it could be one of two things: it could be less effort or if the effort is the same, fewer gulls. This is a study that has to be carried out. This figure includes a study to see how successful the gull culling is in real terms, but it is something that is still being sorted out.

850 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, with all respect to the Hon. Minister, if he wants to do any more study, he should have done the study before he took the FERA company out from providing such a service.

The question that the Minister really needs to state is whether GONHS needs to employ many more people to compensate for the loss of the FERA company in order to match the figures that both FERA and GONHS used to cull before.

855 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am wary of going into too much detail in this particular Bill, but if he writes to me, I am happy to give him more detail.

I must say that there was a study carried out before, but in this kind of study you have to do it regularly because you have to chart the trend and see how populations are changing. So a study was done before, but you have to do this regularly and I am sure that the hon. Member agrees.

860 As I say, the details are being dealt with by the Chief Executive, not by me personally. So if he does want more details and he writes to me, I will ask Dr Torres to draft a reply that will satisfy his questions.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, as far as satisfaction I will certainly be raising questions in Parliament in the future, rather than writing letters.

865 But can I move on to item 3(l) in relation to conservation measures? I know that there is an entry, it could be a nominal entry of £1,000, but given that there is an idea of doing some particular projects on conservation, could perhaps the Minister provide some information?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Thank you.

870 It is a nominal sum. If you consider that we are at the point of publishing an Upper Rock Management Plan, which is not yet totally costed, that is the main reason for having that token entry there.

875 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, finally on 2(4)(f) Commonwealth Park, I see that there is an entry for the maintenance of the park of £100,000, but if I do recall in answer to one of my questions by the Hon. the Minister, I think he did say that the maintenance would be £160,000. If I am right, does it mean that we need to amend this particular figure?

880 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Chairman. This document was obviously prepared before the tender process had run its course and because there is some flexibility in the upkeep of planted areas and so on, the intention is to keep it within the Department's budget.

Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 15, Equality and Social Services, subhead 1, Payroll.

885 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

890 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to Other Charges 2(7) Equality, there is a figure for £100,000. Could the Hon. Minister say what this is for?

895 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): It is the same figure as last year, Mr Chairman. I recall that the hon. Lady asked me the same question last year and the answer is the same as it was last year. It is projects that we have in the forthcoming year. Some of them which had been planned this year. We have not been able to undertake all of them, but certainly the intention is to undertake them this year. A lot of it will have to do with the establishment of a Commission – (Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And conferences?) Yes, and conferences and awareness initiatives related to the projects.

900 Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 16, Education, subhead 1, Payroll.

905 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, if I may?

910 On Head 2(12), there is an entry for contract officers of £46,000. Can the Hon. Minister please enlighten us a bit more on what the £46,000 entails?

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Yes, Mr Chairman.

This relates to the educational psychologist who has been recently engaged on a contract. She has in fact replaced a previous educational psychologist who was also on a contract and so it is not new money. The 915 previous payment was made, I believe, under Salaries. We were told that this was incorrect because it is a contract position and therefore it should be reflected separately. So it is the same position, but a new person having taken a new contract and being reflected in a different way.

920 Hon. E J Reyes: I am grateful, Mr Chairman, to hear he has the accounting staff, who obviously advise us on where to best charge it.

Just below that one, Head 2(13), there is a forecast outturn in respect of relief cover of £23,000 having been incurred in the last financial year, and yet once again we revert back to the previous estimate of only £1,000. So if we are only expecting £1,000 as well, why was there an additional expense of £22,000 occurring in the last financial year? Can the Minister assure us that this was just a one-off expense incurred and not something that is foreseen, otherwise I am sure his estimate figure would have been a bit higher?

925 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman.

This is for relief cover. There was a token amount set out at the beginning of the year because we do not know. This is, I understand, administrative cover that was supplied by a private contractor. At the beginning of the year we do not know how much relief we are going to require. This is the amount that was actually expended last year and again we are providing the usual token cover next year because we do not know exactly how much relief cover will be required.

930 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, but Mr Chairman.

I am not quite certain. The Minister has just said it was in respect of administrative cover by a private provider, as opposed to being teaching cover, and it is completely different to cover by teachers. What sort of administrative cover was needed that we had to engage a private contractor?

940 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, certainly. The teaching cover is provided elsewhere under Payroll, in particular cover for maternity/paternity, which is £530,000, and temporary cover for other absences, £400,000, which is due for this year. This is generally the supply list which we now do, particularly for maternity leave, we do on a contract basis because we know how long the person is going out on maternity leave. Whenever teachers go off sick there is certainly a supply list which continues to be used, as the hon. Member well knows. So that provision for teachers is covered separately and this is purely for administrative cover when it is needed.

945 Hon. E J Reyes: So may I rephrase my question? What is meant by administrative cover? Does it mean clerks of the Department of Education? What is meant?

950 Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, it is essentially clerical workers within the Department of Education and within the school environment. Clerical where there is either maternity leave or extended sick leave and there is a need for a cover, but separately from the teaching cover, which is provided from the supply list and which is provided for separately.

955 Hon. E J Reyes: Am I right then, Mr Chairman? Indeed, I think the Minister mentioned that this was contracted through a private supplier or whatever, so it is not like the teacher supply where you put your name down on a list and then if need be you are called up, this is done through an agency. If that is the case, because these relief cover in schools could end up having contact with pupils and so on, is there any type of vetting or whatever, given the proximity with young school children involved?

960 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): This was a decision that was taken a couple of years ago, which I think we mentioned when we introduced it for the first time, which was that there were some Departments that had a relief cover vote predominantly to cover office staff. In other Departments when office staff was away on sickness or other absences, the remaining staff were simply expected to cover the workload with whatever was left. We decided to standardise the procedure and every single Department now has a relief cover Head, but it is primarily the clerical staff in the headquarters and it might mean also the cover, for example, of a school secretary. But the people who do that cover are in fact people that are recruited through an agency and they cover throughout the Government, not just in the Education Department.

1035 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, in my contribution I mentioned that the Head had kept within the approved Budget and that there was little change for this year. When the Hon. Member opposite Mr Bossino spoke, he said that the Employment and Labour Department had seen a 15-fold increase in 1040 expenditure. A 15-fold increase in expenditure would mean that the vote was going up from £60 million to £234 million, which would make it 50% of the entire Budget. I do not quite know how he got that figure, but I hope he does not think he is voting to spend £234 million in the Employment and Labour Head. I do not understand how he calculated that there had been an increase of £32.5 million.

1045 So since clearly this thing was set in the general principles of the Bill, and we have now come to this point and the figures are in front of us, I would welcome clarification to see if somebody in my Department has been going up by 15-fold or is going to be spending £32.5 million without my knowing it. I want to find out.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, the spots are very much there. (Laughter) Still.

In relation to this, it is interesting that the Opposition is now answering questions of the Government; it should be the other way – (Interjection) Exactly. We are preparing and readying us for Government.

1050 Mr Chairman, in relation to the 15-fold increase, the point I made was that it is a 15-fold increase from where we left it, and that is –

Hon. J J Bossano: In this Department?

1055 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, that is the point I made and wonder if that exists.

But given, and I was going to... I toyed with the idea of raising the point and in the event I thought I will raise it some other time, but given that he has given me the opportunity, I will ask him this. He gave an explanation in relation to the staff complement. He gave an explanation I think as to where the AAs, the Administrative Assistants... I think he said they would be distributed to other Departments, but can he give an explanation as to why he feels that there is no need for them in his Department? As I understand it, the intended position is that they would go down from currently a complement of 25 AAs in his Department down to one.

1060 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes, because it is going back to what it was before. It went up. It went up as a temporary measure, and I explained it in last year's Budget, but since there is not an increase this year of £32.5 million to my knowledge, and he is responsible for the things that he says in this House and we are now at the point of approving the expenditure, if he thinks he is approving an increase of £32.5 million, I would like to know where he got the £32.5 million from.

1065 Surely, Mr Chairman, if he has stated in Parliament in the general principles of this Bill that the vote has gone up by £32.5 million, he has to make himself responsible for the things he says. If he has made the figure up, he should retract it.

1070 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, he is obviously – as I pointed out to him during the course of my intervention – more used to being on this side of the House than on that side of the House. He seems to be very intent in asking questions. (Banging on desks)

1075 I really do not recall referring to that figure in terms of expenditure, the £32.5 million. I will check my notes, but I do not recall making a reference to that particular figure. The Hansard is there, but I will check my notes as to what I intended to say. If I said that figure, it may have been uttered in error, but I will double check it. I will write to him.

1080 Hon. J J Bossano: I suggest if he gave wrong information that he should stand up the next time and retract it.

Hon. D J Bossino: I will check it.

1085 Mr Chairman: Is there any other question under Other Charges?

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman.

1090 Mr Chairman: The Hon. Jaime Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: I am not quite sure whether we are dealing with Other Charges or not. Are we on Other Charges?

1095 Can I therefore raise one particular question in relation to 2, 8 and 9? These are sums of money, which in the last financial year were allocated to Head 14 Environment, under the title of Relief Cover. I am trying to get my head around this issue as to what is the relief cover that was being provided last year by the Environment Department and then why has it been transferred over to Employment.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, I think the hon. Member, Mr Chairman, is misreading the footnote.

1100 What has been transferred is not the relief cover; the relief cover was there already last year. There was a token vote of £1,000 and during the year £14,000 was spent because there were people absent on maternity leave and sick leave, and again there is a vote of £1,000 this year.

The footnote refers to subheads 8 and 9, which is Gibraltar General Support Services and Gibraltar Cleansing Services, which comes to £2 million, which was previously in the Environment.

1105 Hon. J J Netto: That is right. So what is it that this particular company, Gibraltar General Services Limited, will be providing for? (Interjection)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, if the hon. Member remembers anything from the time that he was in Government, he will remember that when employees were moved from one Head to another, there was always a footnote telling you where you could find them in the previous estimates.

1110 The footnote here tells you that if you look at the outturn for the Environment you will find that there are disappearing subheads, which are now appearing in this one. It happens every year. It happens throughout the Departments and it happened when he was in Government and all it means is that the responsibility for a particular activity is now under me, as opposed to being under the Employment for the Environment. Nothing else has changed.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may assist,

1120 I think that previous to it being the Environment in the year before we came into Government, the budget was under Technical Services. It is only because some of the activities that they do happen to be Environment related that they were passed to me, but a lot of the other activities are not and therefore there was no absolute logic that they should be under the Ministry for the Environment. I am more than happy that my hon. Friend has taken them over. The same services are still provided and those that work for the Environment still do and so on. There is no issue there at all.

1125 Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1150 Clerk: Head 28, Public Transport and Commercial Affairs, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, yes, just a couple of queries.

1155 In relation to the establishment figures, under subhead 6 Gibraltar Development Corporation Staff, is set to go up by six and perhaps the Hon. Minister is able to provide some clarification as to why that is to happen.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Chairman.

1160 Five of them relate to Transport Inspectors and the other GDC employee in the last year appeared as an HEO, but then the transfer from the HEO to the GDC did not happen and she stayed as a GDC member. That is right. So last year it appeared as a civil servant and this year it appears as a GDC because the transfer did not happen.

1165 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1170 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 29, Housing Administration, subhead 1, Payroll.

1175 Mr Chairman: The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Chairman.

1180 I was just going to quickly ask in respect of the Other Charges, sub subhead (2), the Operation Expenses, and in particular Consultancy and Professional Fees Enterprise, the estimate was £15,000 and the forecast outturn was £35,000... then also additionally it may just assist you to ask at this point in relation to sub subhead (3), Marketing Promotions and Conferences – whether perhaps the hon. Minister would be able to describe the events, in terms of Promotions and Conferences, that that expenditure Head covers?

1185 Hon. N F Costa: Sorry, could the hon. Gentleman repeat the question?

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, indeed. I am happy to assist, Mr Chairman.

1190 Sub subhead 2 Operational Expenses (a) Consultancy and Professional Fees – and this is on Head 28... yes, we did go back – and on sub subhead (3) on Other Charges it is Marketing Promotions and Conferences, I was wondering whether the Minister could perhaps provide a flavour of what it is that those events were that are covered by that expenditure?

1195 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, I am afraid that from the information that has been provided to me that there is no list of breakdown of the conferences or promotions. So, if the hon. Gentleman will allow me, I will seek that information and write to him. I am grateful.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, sorry, there was the other point on subhead 2, which was the Operational Expenses, the Consultancy and Professional Fees Enterprise. Could he just explain what that is? I do not recognise it.

1200 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Chairman, this relates to a breakdown of invoices to ISOLAS, regarding amendments to the OFT, and also for work relating to a breach of contract to Hassans.

Mr Chairman: Right, so that is Head 28, Other Charges, stands part of the Bill. Come back to Head 29.

1205 Clerk: Head 29, Housing Administration, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1210 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, if I may, Mr Chairman?

1215 On subhead 2(2)... the Minister is going to have to help me on this one – on subsection (n), which is a States Cleaning of Internal Communal Areas, I think it is quite understandable what that one is, but just before that on subsection (i) it says Cleaning of the Estates. My first question is: am I correct in assuming that this the cleaning of external areas in the Estates, as opposed to the internal communal areas within a given block? Can I start with that first question?

1220 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Chairman, the cleaning of the Estates, the subsection (n) refers directly to 'El Turno' whereas subsection (i) refers to the other general cleaning of the Estates that was always there, which is the roads, pavements etc.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you Mr Chairman.

1225 So having established that, can I home in on (i)? The actual expenditure in 2012-13 was £2,600. An estimate was made for the following year of doubling that figure and providing up to £5,000, yet the forecast outturn is double or quadruple the previous year –it goes up to £10,000. Now for the forthcoming year we go back to what had been sought before, which is down to £5,000. So given that figure having quadrupled from one year to another, why are we only having what was the real expenditure last year? Was it because there was someone off cleaning or some other explanation the Minister could enlighten us with?

1230 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, the over expenditure was as a direct result of a need to replace fused bulbs with energy saving bulbs.

1235 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, I am not that content about this. Is there no other better way of accounting for things that are connected with lighting and so on, given that there is a subsection there of electrical services and so on, than putting it down to cleaning of the Estates? It does require a bit of a stretch of the imagination to clean the Estate and say the expenditure was in respect of buying lower energy consuming bulbs. (Interjection and Laughter)

1240 Hon. P J Balban: I did not hear the question. Could you repeat the question?

1245 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, what I was trying to get at is that my logic at least said when cleaning of estates one tends to think of cleaning, hygiene-wise and so on. I did not quite expect to have an expenditure for buying less energy consuming light bulbs to be classified under 'Cleaning of Estates', and I said more so because there are other subheadings, like, for example, electrical services, and it might perhaps have made a bit more sense to have that one distinguished as separate. Electricity is very very separate to buying bleach or detergents to use with mops and buckets.

1250 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, it is actually a cleaning and maintenance contract and under the maintenance contract it also includes changing the bulbs. The bulbs have been changed for ones which are more environmentally friendly, which are the bulbs of LED with lower energy consumption, and these are more expensive than the regular bulbs which were changed before.

1255 Hon. E J Reyes: Fair enough, Mr Chairman, and should I require a further breakdown, perhaps I can in the future question and ask the Minister for a breakdown of what were traditional detergents and light bulbs and so on.

Mr Chairman: Is there any other question? No.
Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

1260 Clerk: Head 30, Technical Services, subhead 1, Payroll.

1265 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

1275 Mr Chairman: Payroll, stands part of the Bill.
Head 31, Other Charges.
The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Chairman.

1280 Three queries in relation to subhead 2 on Operational... or rather on subhead 4, Motorcycle Safety Campaign Expenses, a query why there has been no expense given for the estimate of £6,000.

Then on the Incentive Scheme, am I to read from the £2,000 forecast outturn that that is just for hybrid vehicles that have been registered this year?

And interestingly in respect of (6) Tachograph Cards there is quite a significant estimate there of £85,000, an expenditure of £900.00.

1285 Finally, actually on (2)(c) Driving Licences, that I have just spotted here, there is an estimate of £115,000 and an expenditure of £2,000.

Perhaps there is an explanation for those entries. Thank you.

1290 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, I start off with subhead 2, 4 first of all, and the query was to do with Motorcycle Safety Campaign Expenses. The underspend was actually due to the fact that the motorcycle footrest campaign is in the process of being launched and was expected to be carried out in the last financial year, but for logistical reasons it is going to be done this year. So that is the reason why that appeared and disappeared there.

1295 As to item (6), the Tachograph, the funding has been put in place for the purchase of equipment and related expenses in respect of the implementation of the tachograph card, as per EU Regulations, and we are actually still under negotiations with the DVLA in the UK.

1300 Then we go back to Driving Licences, which is (2)(c), the under-expenditure was actually due to the non-purchase. There was a need for an extra 5,000 driver licence blank cards so that it was budgeted for, but because there has been a change in service provider in the UK, this spend and delivery date has now become March 2015.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Chairman.

1305 Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 32, Utilities, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1310 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, if I may?

1315 In relation to item 2(b), which comes under the heading of Commercial Works, I notice that the estimate for the financial year 2013-14 was £1½ million, and yet the forecast outturn is almost twice as much and it comes to £3 million. Could we have an explanation as to why the expenditure has been almost doubled the estimate?

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Chairman.

1320 I have been informed that there is much more commercial work that the GEA is doing and therefore it would be also reflected in the revenue, so the more commercial work that the GEA does, the more revenue at the other end that they get. So the increase there has been is obviously the pay or the costs of the GEA doing these commercial works, but there will be more revenue elsewhere.

1325 Mr Chairman: Stands Part of the Bill.

Hon. J J Netto: Can I just in relation to item 2(4)(a) contract AquaGib Ltd, there is an increase in the new estimate to £2,210,000 from... well, either the forecast outturn or the estimate. So could we have an explanation as to why the increase in the contract for AquaGib Ltd?

1330 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, this is the shortfall in the non-increase of the tariff, as regards our policy not to increase water charges – (Interjections)

Mr Chairman: Any other question?

1335 Hon. J J Netto: I think the Hon. the Chief Minister was referring to item 2(3), which is in lieu of the water tariffs, I was not referring to that one. I was referring to item 4(a), which is to do with the contract with AquaGib Limited for salt water.

1340 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, it is a contract that there is with AquaGib, and therefore if there are more services to be done, the contract has to go up. So there is more to do, so therefore the fee of the contract goes up.

1345 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, I am not quite clear, because if there is more to do, as the Minister classified, I would have thought that that would have come under additional maintenance, but I am talking about the contract of AquaGib. Could he provide better clarification for that?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, it is the salt water supply contract. In the contract it states how it goes up. Every year it must go up, so that reflects the going up and it is in the contract. It is to do with the contract with AquaGib.

1350 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, if I may?

If in the contract it says by how much it has to go up from 2012 to 2013, it only went up by less than £3,000 and from 2013 to 2014-15 it goes up by £½ million. I do not see a proportional increase.

1355 Hon. S E Linares: I keep on getting informed that it is in the increase of the contract, so I would suggest that it is – (Interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, the relationship between the Government and AquaGib is one where the fresh water is charged to the customer, but the salt water is not metered. It is not based on consumption; it is based on the areas that are covered.

1360 Part of the areas that are covered keeps on increasing, both with new estates and with the transfer of MOD estates to the Government of Gibraltar, which previously were not in the original contract. The contract is based on the areas covered and not on the water supplied and that is why it can change from one year to another, depending on how much AquaGib takes over as responsibility for the supply of salt water.

1365 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, if it does assist, in my Budget Speech I said that there was a capital investment of £595,000, I think it was on two specific projects that were included. So therefore those two projects, which include salt water supply to those properties, are to do with the increase here.

1370 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

1395 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, in relation to 2(1)(e) Office Cleaning, Government Cleaning Scheme, the forecast outturn was £31,000, up from £25,000 estimate, but again the estimate for this coming year is £25,000. Could the Hon. Minister explain if it cost £31,000 to clean in last year, because that is reflected in the forecast outturn, why is that not again estimated for this coming financial year?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, it is called budgetary control – (Laughter) Absolutely. So much for the arguments that they put...

1400 It is in the estimates. We estimated £25,000 and last year, if you see the actual, was £30,000. Then we estimated £25,000. The forecast outturn is £31,000, so this year we want to control it again to £25,000.

Hon. D A Feetham: May I commend the hon. Gentleman to No. 6 Convent Place?

1405 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, he certainly can, Mr Chairman, where we will gift to him all of the data, which I went through this morning, so that he can look at exactly how much they overran in their time. I have it in my bag. I think that the total cost overrun in the 16 years that the GSD was in power was £158 million and the last year, Mr Chairman –

1410 Mr Chairman: No. No.

Hon. Chief Minister: It was £54 million.

1415 Mr Chairman: No, that is the end of that.

Hon. Chief Minister: Okay. I am quite happy to carry on if he wishes.

Mr Chairman: Please call the next Head. (Interjection)
1420 You have a question on the other charges? Very well.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, under 2(2) Operational Expenses (a) Maintenance of Fire Service Equipment, again the same question. It was estimated £20,000. The forecast outturn was £27,000 and again estimated for this year £20,000. Is the answer the same, budgetary control? (Laughing)

1425 Hon. S E Linares: Absolutely. (Laughter)

Mr Chairman: Any other question on Other Charges?

1430 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, Mr Chairman.
I will be asking the Minister next year to see if there has been any budgetary control under those subheads.

1435 But finally, under Other Charges (3) Brigade Review the estimate last year was for £8,000, and that was not used. Now, again, £8,000 is budgeted for this coming year. Could he explain what that £8,000 is for, because I believe in answer to questions he said that Sir Ken Knight had offered his services pro bono and I was just wondering what the £8,000 is for?

1440 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, it is not only to do with Ken Knight. Ken Knight was not doing it pro bono. Ken Knight was doing it at cost, not pro bono, and therefore the difference could be that he could be charging that. But there are other issues in the review that we need that amount that has been estimated... or approximate.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1445 Clerk: Head 38, Culture and Heritage, subhead 1, Payroll. (Interjection) Sorry, Head 36, I beg your pardon.

Mr Chairman: Head 36, Culture and Heritage, Payroll, stands parts of the Bill.

1450 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

1455 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you Mr Chairman.
I see the introduction under 2, subsection (vi), Contracted Services, Culture and Heritage, which the Minister explained in his previous reading of the Bill, the contribution is going to be £3 million. Can I ask, at this stage, is it just a contribution of £3 million, which is then used in whatever, or are there going to be detailed breakdowns later on coming in a future thing of how the £3 million was actually used and what the 1460 outturn is... whether we actually went over the £3 million or was any money left over from the £3 million?

I am enquiring how the accountability during the course of the financial year will work.

Mr Chairman: Can I direct the attention of the hon. Member to the footnotes. Has he noted the footnotes? (Interjections) You are asking about – (Interjections)

1465 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman.
What I am asking is... I know they have estimated £3 million. I am asking is that £3 million, 'Here you are. It has been given and I am going to demand these services from you'? I am asking will a future edition of the Estimate Book say, 'Right, in the forecast outturn we actually went over £3 million' and then one can query or whatever, or is it just going to be £3 million off and then that is it?

1470 Hon. Chief Minister: No, what will happen, Mr Chairman, is that he will see if we have contracted services what the next amount we will have to pay will be. So if next time it is £2½ million, he might say, 'Well, what happened? How did you save that money?' Whereas if it is £3½ million, he might ask us that question, 'How did the contract change? Why are you paying some more?' It is a contracted service, and so in the same way as you have other contracted services, for example, Master Services (Hon. E J Reyes: Exactly.) where we pay an amount, we cannot account for what happens outside of the payment of that amount other than as client.

1475 Hon. E J Reyes: The Chief Minister's clarification has actually answered what I was trying to get at. I am so grateful that has cleared up that point for me. Thank you, Mr Chairman, and the Chief Minister as well.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1485 Clerk: Head 37, Postal Services, subhead 1, Payroll.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, could I ask, because I notice that in Payroll (1)(a) Salaries, the estimate is lower than the forecast outturn, and in fact it is lower than the estimate of the previous financial year, but when I look at the establishment figures for the complement, it has actually gone up by two individuals. Could I have an explanation for this? (Interjections)

1490 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, sorry for the delay.

If I remember correctly and just by the word 'arrears' rang to my ears, excuse the pun, but there was payment that was due to the postmen and women and therefore it was to do with the back pay that they were owed, it was to do with the fact that the increase in their wages was not given to them from 2008 or 2009. There was no increase given to them and we backdated it since they did not get it. It was given as back money, so that is the difference there.

1500 Hon. J J Netto: So presumably the arrears that the Hon. Minister is referring to is in relation to the amount of the forecast outturn, which is much greater than the estimate for the last financial year.

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman. We paid it out and therefore it is £1.4 million and so now (Interjection) the difference, that difference is the back money that was paid through the salaries. (Interjections)

1505 Hon. J J Netto: So are we saying that those arrears that were owed to the complement were part of the calculation when we did the estimate for 2013-14?

1510 Hon. S E Linares: Not necessarily, because there is a difference of £1.337 million to £1.48 million and then it goes down to £1.2 million. There could well have been payments in the estimates and prepared for 2013-14 and 2014-15 this year.

Hon. J J Netto: No, Mr Chairman, the point I was trying to labour on, if I am right at least, is that when we had the estimate for 2013-14 for the complement of £1,337,000, that represented the amount of people in the last financial year was 64.

1515 However, now we have an estimate for this new financial year, which is less than the estimate of the last financial year when we have a higher complement of 66, by two. To my knowledge that has got nothing to do with arrears being paid to the men.

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Chairman, that is the explanation that I am given, that it is the arrears, so – 1520 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, I accept that is the only explanation that he has been given, but it does not seem to be clear to me that the explanation has a sense of logic.

Hon. S E Linares: Well, it might not have a sense of logic to the hon. Member, but it does have a sense of logic to the Treasury people and those are the ones who have given me the advice. (Interjections)

1525 The explanation is similar to what I am saying, that in 2013-14, if we look at 2013-14 it is £1.3 million, and therefore that calculation could have included some monies that were to do with back money or any other that was owed to them at the time.

1530 The estimate for this year to every single postman and woman is £1.2 million that we have in the Book and so it is not that we are going to underpay anybody else. The calculations are done as is there. The £1.4 million is the difference between that. The £1.4 million is the back money that was paid.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman. I think I understand the hon. Member is saying that the forecast outturn is of course higher because there has been that expenditure of money and so on.

1535 If I can take the Minister a financial year further back, the actual expenditure of 2012-13 is £1.344 million and what we are estimating for 2014-15 by having two more employees, one of which is an HEO and therefore it is a substantial salary, the other one being an Administrative Assistant, which is much lower.

1540 Even the figure two years later on is lower than the actual expenditure of 2012-13. I am leaving out the 2013-14 because there was an element of payment of back money and so on, which I think the Minister has tried his best with the explanations. But, two years further down when everybody else's cost on the payroll goes up, there seems to somehow be here the only Department that increases a complement by two people and yet has a saving of what... £60,000/£70,000, or something like that.

1545 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Chairman, another explanation could well be that people who retire or have retired, retire at the top end of the scale, and therefore if you recruit people at the bottom end of the scale, they will be earning much less. Therefore we have recruited, in fact, some of the supply ones that were around... we recruited. So, because the complement is increasing and maybe from the 40 single operational grades some of them have retired and gone and now, we get new ones in and they come at the bottom of the grade. That could well be another explanation.

1550 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, it could be an explanation. But I understand and I have lived within the Civil Service and know that there is a difference between someone entering a particular grade at the top, but a £70,000 interest... It is something that the Minister for Employment, I am sure, would like to look at these figures and would probably take it as a personal challenge. He will look into it and we can take it up at another moment, Mr Chairman. I am not going to take any more time. I trust the Hon. Minister will certainly welcome the hobby I have given him for the coming weekend. (Laughter and interjections)

Hon. J J Bossano: I will have the explanation for the next meeting, Mr Chairman.

1560 Mr Chairman: Any other question?
Stands part of the Bill.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, I do not think we have covered Any Other Charges.

1565 Mr Chairman: We have not covered Any Other Charges yet.
Payroll, stands part of the Bill.
Other Charges.

1570 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, thank you.

1575 In relation to item 2(3) Outgoing Mail and Bulk Mailing, there is quite a sharp drop in the forecast outturn of £100,000 against an estimate for 2013-14 of £400,000. Could the Minister please provide some information as to why this is?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, this is an annual thing; it is not a scientific thing. It depends on how many letters go out and when the postal services pay out each other, balance out each other, then that will be worked out at the end of the year. So the estimate again is £400,000 and the forecast outturn was...

1580 if you look at the actual in 2012-13 it is £348,000. So therefore there was an estimate of £400,000 and then the forecast outturn came down to £100,000.

This year they have estimated £300,000 and so it is a thing that goes up and down depending on the volume for the postal services, which is mail and bulk mailing. So it is to do with how many letters, parcels and things are sent to different parts of the world.

1585 Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1595 Clerk: Head 39, Youth, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1600 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, may I ask on subhead 2(2)(c) Office Cleaning, where it says Government Cleaning Scheme, there was an actual expenditure in 2012-13 of £2,392 and the forecast outturn is only £3,000, even though there has been an estimate of a huge increase up to £16,000. Something must have happened that the expenditure was not incurred and we have gone for a near halfway figure of what the previous year's estimate was of £10,000.

1605 Can the Minister say what had been estimated but never actually took place, hence giving us that grateful saving of £30,000? What is he expecting to happen that will require perhaps even £7,000 more than we predicted was spent at the last financial year?

1610 Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Chairman, it was not budgetary control, so we will get that right from the start. (Laughter) It was to do with the instructions that were given to try and clean and do all the cleaning of the youth clubs. Youth clubs were not... it was not that they were not cleaned, it was that there was only one cleaner that was doing the whole shift of trying to do all the youth clubs.

1615 Therefore, like he rightly says, although the actual was £2,300 and then it went up to £16,000 because the instruction was given that you can have a company or you can contract people to clean the youth clubs, they are only actually spending £3,000 and we have said, 'Right, okay. We will go down. We will have a little bit, not £16,000. We will go down to £10,000, see if with £10,000 you can then do all the youth clubs'.

1620 But it is to do with the cleaning of the youth clubs. Obviously we are hoping and envisaging that they will use more. They are open during the weekends and so these are the issues that might increase the slight expenditure there.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I am grateful, Mr Chairman.

1625 Can I just be a little pedantic and suggest to the Minister that perhaps for the following year... my first interpretation when one sees 'office cleaning' is you tend to think of a small private space that one of the youth workers tends to have and from the explanation the Minister has explained, that this could encompass the whole moreso communal areas in respect of the youth clubs, perhaps a little change in the wording there saying, 'Youth club area cleaning' or 'club areas', other than making us simple-minded people just think at the beginning of a space where the youth worker is, as I know they tend to work within very confined spaces trying to give as much area as possible for the enjoyment of our youngsters?

1630 Hon. S E Linares: I will definitely give those instructions to the Treasury and they can do it... no problem.

1635 Mr Chairman: Other Charges, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Head 40, Financial Services, subhead 1, Payroll.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1640 Clerk: Subhead 2, Other Charges.

Mr Chairman: The Hon. Mr Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you Mr Chairman.

1645 I wonder if the Minister could assist in relation to the items under 2(1). They are all the subject of considerable reductions and I think in respect of three of them a nominal amount of £1,000 provision is being made. Can he explain why that is the case?

1650 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Yes, budgetary control, Mr Chairman (Laughter) and obviously LED lighting, which is working very effectively.

Mr Chairman, obviously when I was elected in the by-election and took over my Ministerial responsibilities, in order to exercise more budgetary control I share an office with my very good friend, the Hon. and Learned the Minister for Justice, and therefore the costs have been apportioned between the two Ministries and that is really why it explains that difference.

1655 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Chairman, also in relation to – thank you for that – (3) Marketing Promotions and Conferences, I see that there was not any actual expenditure in 2012-13, no estimate in 2013-14, a forecast outturn of £17,000 for 2013-14 and a considerable increase in terms of the estimate for this coming financial year of £120,000. Can he give an explanation in relation to that?

1660 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, I think he mentioned Marketing Promotions and Conferences, but I think you were referring to Consultancy Services.

1665 Hon. D J Bossino: You are absolutely right. My error.

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, consultancy services, Mr Chairman, is a consultant that we are using for specialist services in relation to, for example, the National Risk Assessment, which is being prepared. It is an obligation under the forthcoming Money Laundering Directive and the FATF requirements, which is in process... it is being publicised. Also, legislative work which the consultant is also doing, and that is just for this forthcoming year.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

1695 Clerk: (b) Supplementary Funding.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: That concludes clause 2.
Clause 3.

1700 Mr Chairman: Clause 2, stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clause 3, Head 44, Contribution to Government-owned Companies.

1705 Mr Chairman: The Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful Mr Chairman.

This is the point I alluded to during my intervention the day before yesterday and it was in respect in particular of the fact that there is an analysis missing from this year's Head 44 that was present both in last year and the Budget Book the year before, which provided information as to where the contributions were going.

1710 As an example, we know from last year's Budget Book that of the £17.7 million that the Government contributed to its own companies, £2.7 million went to the Gibraltar Bus Company and that £3.7 million went to the Gibraltar Car Parks Ltd and so on. That analysis is not here and I was wondering whether there was any particular reason for its omission this year.

1715 And as an additional point, which I also raised in the intervention and which the Chief Minister did not deal with in his reply, I also note that the expenditure of the Government-owned Companies is not within the Book and I merely made the observation that... I do not know what the protocol is in that respect certainly, but merely to point out that it would certainly be something that would be helpful and I do not know what the policy is in respect of that. Perhaps the Chief Minister can assist.

1720 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, the trading companies have never been reflected in the Book, even when they were trading when they were in Government. What we have been doing for some years, since we were elected, is giving his right of breakdown here of what the contribution is going for, but what we had found is that on occasions it was necessary to change the allocation of the contribution. So what we propose to do, which I think the hon. Gentleman will find more useful and I think will be helpful to the House, is to provide the breakdown of the £25 million on the outturn, rather than on the contribution. So, in other words, next year in the Book he will have how the £25 million has been distributed in the companies. (Interjection) It may be less or it may be more – (Interjection) yes, and the contribution for the following year. So in that way he will see exactly where the money goes, and obviously where the money goes will indicate the estimate of where it is going next, but it is not always exact because it is company expenditure.

1725 So the estimate breakdown will be replaced with the outturn breakdown so that we know exactly where the money has gone, rather than where it is intended to go, and that will give us a guide of where it is likely to go the following year.

1730 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, I am grateful for that, but I am keen to understand why it is... I mean it is only an estimate at the end of the day that has been provided thus far. I am keen to understand why it is that the estimate has been assessed as no longer necessary or unhelpful, because I do not know what the position –

1740 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, we could simply give him a breakdown that suggests five, five, five and five, depending on... or not like that, but depending on salaries etc, but we would rather give the House a detailed breakdown of where the money has gone and because it is in the companies, the companies are not like the Departments. Remember, there are different employment rules that apply in the companies etc. There is much more flexibility in companies and so it is not so detailed. It is not so fixed and so we think the best thing to do is to give the House the actual payments of where the money has gone and that is what we intend to do, which will show him exactly where the money has gone and will likely be a better guide – it will be like the columns – to where the money is going to go the following year.

1750 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, that is the decision of the Government. At the end of the day they have provided an explanation and we are not here to debate it.

1755 Just to say that it is helpful to have an estimate or an indication as to the present intention of the Government of where it intends to invest its money. I mean that is what you did last year. Now that may change because the Government may do something different. I certainly at the moment struggle to see the benefit of the practice that the Hon. the Chief Minister is going to be effectively deploying in the future departing from the practice as last year, but at the end of the day we are not here to debate it.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, let us be clear.

When they were in Government they did not show any of these losses anywhere in the Book, which was the subject of debate between us and it will, I am sure, continue to be. What we are saying is we have to 1760 cover these losses. This in part goes to the black hole, but is also recurrent expenditure. We are now bringing that onto the balance sheet.

1765 What we are saying is having brought it onto the balance sheet with indications of where the money was likely to go, because it is company expenditure and not Departmental expenditure which is not as rigidly fixed, we would rather show you where the money actually has gone. We think that is the best way of doing it. Members opposite next year will have the benefit of seeing exactly how this money has been spent and that will be a better guide for them of where it is likely to be the next year, subject of course to the fact that in the companies it is not as rigid in terms of moving money from one area to another, because that is the business efficacy that companies bring to the Government.

1770 But they will see something, which we never saw when they were in Government, which is how there is a distribution of contributions to the company to cover their liabilities and they will see it as it exactly occurs, rather than as an estimate.

1775 Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Chairman, why have you not put the figures of how it is that you have spent the money this year as an indication for next year?

1780 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, we are looking to introduce a new system of accounting for the companies in the Book in the context of this financial year and that is the decision that has been taken; therefore, in the next Book he will have that breakdown. He cannot with any moral authority assert that we should have done that which they completely failed to bring into the Book. We brought it into the Book as estimate. We now think that in order to give even more precision to the Parliament of the way that the money is spent, we will bring it not as estimate, but we will bring it as outturn. That is our position.

1785 It will be here from next year. It is absolutely much more accurate than the estimate and its transparency of where money is spent, rather than where money is going to be spent. Our estimate is that we need £25 million to contribute to the companies. The distribution will be as to how that is actually distributed, which is what the Parliament should know... how was it distributed.

1790 The hon. Gentleman will know that in Departmental monies there is an exercise and a paper trail for virement of money from one to the other. In the companies, because the contribution is just down to companies, the money can be spent in one place or another and there is much more change in the way that companies can account for things and that is why we want to bring to the Parliament, the actual expenditure to be entirely transparent with the Parliament and the people of where every penny has been spent, and I cannot imagine anybody wanting to stand in the way of that.

1795 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, it is not that I am standing in the way of anything. He has outlined... and I apologise to him for my inquisitive mind, but he has just outlined what is a change of policy. I am just trying to understand the change of policy, because of course if he is trying to be more transparent, then I commend him for that. If he is trying to be more transparent and what he is saying is, 'Well, we want to give actual figures', because those actual figures then give a better more precise guide as to how the money is going to be spent next year, the point I am making is you had an estimate last year... give precise figures.

1800 This year, because this year you had precise figures in relation to the estimates that you gave last year and it would appear this year in the Book, because we would then have, on his own rationale by parity of reasoning, a better more precise guide for next year. That is the only point I make.

1805 I understand the explanation that he is giving me, but of course that does not mean that I am not entitled to make the enquiries that arise out of his own explanation. (Interjection)

1810 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, he can make whatever enquiry he likes, I do not mind. I think if he had an inquisitive mind, he would not have fallen into the traps that I laid for him in my opening speech and he would have asked himself whether he should say some of the things he said about recurrent expenditure. It is what I say (Interjection) because I also have a mind inquisitive enough to make those determinations for myself.

1815 But I do not think he realises what he is pursuing. He can simply ask me in the next Question Time to give him the breakdown for this year. I am not pretending to hide it. I am going to give it for the following years coming forward, but at the time that the Book was prepared, we decided to introduce the new policy and we did not put in this year's breakdown.

1815 He should just take his inquisition into the next Question Time where he can ask me for the breakdown which will stand as the – (Interjection) Sorry?

A Member: You obviously do not like questions.

1820 Hon. Chief Minister: No, I love questions. It gives me an opportunity to run rings around you. (Laughter) So if he just asks the question, he will have the breakdown and then as from next year it will be in the Book as actual breakdown.

Clerk: Head 102, Projects.

1850 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, under Works and Equipment, item (u) Civil Contingency, if the Hon. Minister could explain there was a forecast outturn in 2013-14 for £120,000 and an estimate for this year of £200,000. Could he confirm is this one for the mobile units that were purchased and is it £200,000 for the upgrade of the bunker or is it the other way round?

1855 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Chairman, it is to do exactly what she has just stated, which is to do with the wonderful, necessary and very important command unit that we have bought. It is an estimate. We know more or less what it is going to cost, but we envisaged that there might be other things like software or computers that might have to be included and also some training, although the training is going to be funded by the company that is doing it, but there could well be extra training that we do. So that is what it is.

1860 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, the £120,000 is also for the command unit from last year, as well as the £200,000 estimated?

1865 Hon. S E Linares: In order for the command unit to be done you have to pay a sum upfront, which is the £120,000, which then procures the thing and they start doing it. They will not start doing any command unit unless you pay them up front and then the rest is the balance.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Chairman, what I would like to ask, because I see in Reclamation Projects an entry of £200,000, is this money for the new site of the new Power Station? I would not say so, because of the amount of money we are talking about here. So what likely reclamation are we talking about if it is not 1885 the one for the Power Station?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, most of the reclamations, as he knows, will be paid through the companies, because they produce assets and they go into the companies and that is the way they have always been accounted for. So this may be revetment works on some reclamations – ((Interjection)) Yes, 1890 maybe. We have not got the information here. I can check and it is an interesting thing to check because of all of the costs of reclamation are elsewhere in GLRC or somewhere. So we will have a check on that and let him know, but I am almost sure it is going to be revetment work on existing reclamations. It may be a study, as well, into reclamations.

1895 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: Subhead 5, Other projects.

Hon. J J Netto: Just perhaps one clarification in relation to 5(n) Boat Moorings, and the entry of 1900 £40 million. Is this £40 million for one financial year or are we talking about this particular project straddling into two financial years with a balance to be paid in the next financial year?

Hon. G H Licudi: Yes, Mr Chairman.

1905 That is the estimate of what we expect to spend during the course of this year. The project will be completed, as I have said, by the summer of next year and therefore it will straddle another financial year and the final amount will be paid during the course of the next financial year.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, yes, in relation to subheading (r) the Sustainable Transport and Parking Plan, I note £340,000 is a forecast outturn for 2013-14 and an estimate of £100,000 for 2014-15.
1910 Could the Minister explain whether this is just the cost of the contract to Mott MacDonald or whether it also includes expenses in relation to the gathering of information in the survey?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, this is actually a token figure provided last year, despite £400,000 having been bid for. The over-expenditure incurred was in relation to payment of consultant's fees. The 1915 funding for this year is the balance to complete the plan.

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, I just want to be sure of the point because the hon. Minister referred to the estimate last year and the outturn, but he has actually dealt with the estimate for 2014-15. Could he just say, because I am not certain of what I heard, that the £340,000 has exclusively gone to the consultants or 1920 whether that also included expenses in relation to the gathering of information?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, I will have to find that out exactly, but I would assume if that is to do with the whole traffic plan that it would include, in my opinion and I would have to check, the actual survey in the plan as well. I am pretty sure, but I will have to confirm that. But in my opinion it would be the whole 1925 lot.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Chairman.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I may?

1930 It is one particular question that really applies to three particular items and so it is the same thing. It applies to 5(s), (t) and (u), and the question is that we had some sort of estimate for the last financial year, but no forecast outturn obviously, as those particular projects never started and so there was no expenditure. Then in terms of the estimate, I see in those particular items £1,000. Is it likely that that a nominal fee just 1935 in case the project starts? Why do we have this situation?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, this is a token figure.

Hon. J J Bossano: Just to have a Head there –

1940 Hon. P J Balban: It is just to have a Head in the place where we need to charge and we know where to charge from.

Hon. J J Netto: So is the project going ahead or not going ahead?

1945 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, as far as (s) is concerned, the filling of city centre paving stone gaps, that is one of our manifesto commitments and we have already found the suitable material and we are going to go ahead with that project. The project, yes, is going ahead.

As far as...

1950 Mr Chairman: Is there any other question? (Interjections)
Any other matter here?

1955 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Chairman, as I said earlier, the £1,000 are simply token figures and so it very much depends. They are there in case – (Interjections) yes, it depends on the time the project started and whether it started later on in the financial year, then obviously it will be less than if it is started earlier, and then it will be more. But they are token figures and it is just to have a Head in place for those projects.

Hon. J J Netto: So the Minister has not got a clue as to whether it will start or not start. That is basically what he is saying.

1960 Hon. Chief Minister: The Minister is in exactly the same position, as every Minister has been who has come to this House with a token set out in the estimates, to ensure that if possible a programme starts that year and there is a Head open for it, and if it does not that it will happen another year, where the Head will already have been open.

1965 I think the position has been put clearly. There is now a very clear indication from the Minister that (s) is likely to start in this financial year, but (t) and (u) are not yet ones that we can say with any certainty are likely to start in this financial year.

1970 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, with the greatest respect, if he has no certainty, why put an entry into the Estimate Book?

Hon. Chief Minister: Because the budgetary style adopted by this Parliament for centuries, if it had been around for that long... decades, as it has – is to put a token when you might start – (Interjection) Well, you might start. So you give yourself the ability to start.

1975 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Chairman, another point – not to pick on the Hon. the Minister for Housing – on point (x) Soft Loans and Repairs to Housing Estates, a couple of questions.

1980 Would the Minister be able to say what proportion of the £2.1 million outturn has gone to Soft Loans and what proportion has gone to Repairs to Housing Estates; and, if so, in respect of both the loans and the actual repairs, what estates that is in respect of?

1985 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, he will see that FS is the reference there, the Financial Secretary, who is here and is the person who administers that. He will remember that in the course of my Budget Speech I announced that the Soft Loan element is the contribution by the Government to the interest payable on loans, so that a cushion is provided by the Government. The Financial Secretary tells me he does not have the breakdown here, but he is able to provide it.

So if the hon. Gentleman wishes to write to me, the Financial Secretary can provide him with that information. It is in my Ministry because it is the Financial Secretary who deals with it.

1990 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Chairman, if I may?

1995 There is an item 5(z)(h) Reef Creation Programme and there is an entry of £1,000. I do not know whether the Minister for the Environment perhaps could enlighten us as to what reef in particular he has in mind, or the Department has in mind during the course of this financial year?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, this is a token sum. The creation of additional marine habitat is something that I mentioned in my Budget Speech. This refers mainly to the possibility of sinking of vessels, which has been carried out for many years, and is also related to the creation of habitat within reefs. That is where the immediate plans are, like in the planting of sea grasses. So this is really related particularly to that.

2000 Hon. S M Figueras: Apologies, Mr Chairman, just to come back to the point which we have been discussing, the entry on (x) is Soft Loans and Repairs, and I just wanted the Hon. Chief Minister to confirm that it is in fact just soft loans in respect that we are talking about? He also mentioned interest only in respect that that took £1 million of the forecast outturn.

2005 Hon. Chief Minister: No, I said that the Financial Secretary did not have the breakdown between soft loans and repairs with him, but he can give him that breakdown. And with the soft loan element, what the Government does, which I announced in my Budget Speech... in the last one and I think I repeated it in this one, the way I was explaining another aspect of it is that the Government funds the interest (Interjection) to make the loan soft. So there is a grant by the Government. If you go back to my Budget Speech, I have explained it. (Interjection) No, it is not. No.

2010 The breakdown of how much is interest and how much is repairs – (Interjection) exactly, and that is what he will get from us if he writes to the Financial Secretary and give it to him.

2035 Clerk: Yes.

Mr Chairman: Yes.
Clause 4 or 5?

2040 Clerk: Clause 4. (Interjections)

Mr Chairman: Clause 4, stands part of the Bill.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, I propose a recess for five minutes.

The House recessed at 6.50 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 7.15 p.m.

Appropriation Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

2045 Mr Chairman: Okay, we are on Clause 5.

Clerk: Clause 5.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

2050 Clerk: Clauses 6 and 7, relating to Appendices B to J.

Mr Chairman: Does any Member have any question or any clarification that they wish?
Yes, the Hon. Mr Netto? (Interjections) Yes, okay.

Clerk: Appendix B, Gibraltar Development Corporation.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, perhaps, Mr Chairman, just a quick clarification because I notice on the first page, page 150, on the Establishment figures, the title of a Conservation Officer, and given that this falls within the Gibraltar Development Corporation, could I have some sort of clarification as to the nature of this Conservation Officer, in terms of what that person is doing and whether that particular person is seconded to a particular Government Department, Authority or Agency?

2060

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Chairman, as the hon. Member knows, from what was said before, the decision was taken by the previous Government in 2011 to put everybody in the Civil Service. If he goes back to the statement the Government made then about the GDC as it was then, which is what was restored after 9th December, the GDC effectively has no function of its own. None of the people here that are paid by the GDC do work for the GDC, just as was the case before when the GDC existed before and before the decision was taken to dismantle it.

2065

So everybody here is working for an entity which is shown in the pages that follow, which tells you the different Departments. Treasury, Convent Place, Environment, Equality and Social Services, Telecommunications and Justice, these are the Departments that effectively are supplied by the GDC with labour. So the GDC really is like an employment agency, which is non-profit making. It pays people and it charges a client, a Department, for the money that is paid to the employee. So in effect the 116 people that are being employed in 2014-15 are all distributed as is shown in pages 153, 154, 155 and 156. That is it. That is what they all are. The Conservation Officer is somebody in all probability in the Environment, I would imagine, because that seems to be the most –

2075

A Member: I think it is Heritage.

Hon. J J Bossano: Or in Heritage, yes.

2080

But each of them are there on the basis that, for example, when the gaming companies or somebody else wanted to recruit somebody that was not going to be made part of the permanent complement of the Civil Service, rather than employed directly in something new, which would then have to be a gaming agency as it were, what happens is that they are shown in the GDC. The GDC then charges the Head of Expenditure in the gaming area as Other Charges and this is exactly what was being done until the decision was taken that everybody should be made a civil servant in October 2011, in which case the GDC would have disappeared and everybody would have been shown in the Civil Service complements.

2085

We gave everybody that had been moved the opportunity of coming back and continuing with the relationship that existed before. As Members know, about 60 decided that they did not want to come back and 90 decided that they wanted to come back, and therefore it is the people who came back plus new bodies that have been created in new areas. So where there is a new grade appearing here... in this case the Conservation Officer was there last year, but I understand that he is in the Heritage and it is about conservation of buildings, rather than conservation of flowers or plants.

2090

Members will see, for example, that there are changes. We have got five Transport Inspectors here and there were none last year; but it is not that they are doing any work for the GDC. There was a Counsellor last year, but there is not one this year. So in effect in the course of the year the GDC provides a home for the people that different Departments wants to recruit who are not Civil Service grades and then they are put into the complement of this, but in effect the GDC of its own initiative does not create complements because it does not have any money of its own to pay people anyway and it charges Departments or Agencies or whoever for the people that it supplies.

2095

But the actual Conservation Officer was there already last year and I thought he was in Conservation in an Environment, but it is in an Environment, in terms of buildings that the person is responsible for. But it is a grade that was there already, not a new one – (Interjection) I do not think I should name the individuals, but – (Interjection) Sorry.

2100

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, for the explanation... sorry, Mr Chairman. I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for the explanation given, but I think we are somewhat confused because I think that the Hon. Minister for the Environment in a helpful way was saying that this was someone seconded to Heritage, and I think that even the Minister of Employment also mentioned Heritage, and yet when I look at the pages... in fact, the actual Minister told me in the first part of his speech to look between pages 150 and 153 (Hon. J J Bossano: Yes.) but the only entry I see is for the Environment on page 153 for a total of £27,000. So I am not quite sure whether we are talking about this Conservation Officer is seconded with Environment or is seconded with Heritage. Could I have some clarification there?

2115 Hon. J J Bossano: There is a staff service salary which is £50,000, which is Head 2, No. 6 Convent Place, but I do not know whether that is this particular officer or not. The fact is that the identity of the individual would tell us what it is, but I do not think it is right to mention people's names. So – (Interjection) it is under No. 6 I am told, yes. (Interjection)

2120 Hon. J J Netto: So do I take it that – (Interjection) So the Hon. Minister is saying that this particular officer is seconded in No. 6 Convent Place?

2125 Hon. J J Bossano: What I am saying is that the GDC gets paid out of the No. 6 Convent Place vote for one officer, which is shown as 'Technical Division', and that officer I am told is a Conservation Officer. So what this tells you is in terms of the pay that is shown in the payments, which is reflected on the income side by the receipts that the GDC has, this gives you a breakdown of the receipts from the Head of Expenditure that has been voted.

2130 That is to say we have already, Mr Chairman, voted in the Head 2 for the pay of this Conservation Officer, and this Conservation Officer is shown in the breakdown that says 'Technical Division'. So it is somebody who is a Technical Officer in No. 6, which is I think where he was before 9th December 2011 in charge of work that is being done on conservation projects and with a background in heritage and conservation.

2135 Mr Chairman: Any other question?
We are dealing under clauses 6 and 7 with Appendices from B to J.

Clerk: Appendix C, Gibraltar Regulatory Authority.

2140 Mr Chairman: Please indicate if there are any questions or otherwise we cannot make any progress.
We are at Appendix C and we are dealing with Appendices up until J under these two clauses. (Interjections)

I do not have to say 'stands part of the Bill' because... I do not think I do have to because the Appendix does not stand part of the Bill. It is the whole clause. I will then call out –

2145 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Chairman, what you want us to do is to indicate which ones up to J –

Mr Chairman: As the Clerk –

Hon. D A Feetham: – rather than –

2150 Mr Chairman: As the Clerk calls out the Appendices, please indicate if you have any question.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, that is what I thought. Yes.

2155 Mr Chairman: Okay?
So we are Appendix C.

Clerk: Appendix D, Borders and Coastguard Agency.

2160 Hon. D J Bossino: I see that Borders and Coastguard, 'Office Manager' is in italics and it is going to be replaced by an 'Administrative Officer' according to the notes there. Is the idea to subsume that particular office? Is that officeholder to become an AO or is the AO to come from outside? I just do not understand how that is exactly going to work. Can an explanation be given?

2165 Hon. Chief Minister: There is no such thing as AO's or anything like that in this Agency. Those are grades which you are imputing from the Civil Service. (Interjection) Sorry? (Interjection) There would be no AAs within here, unless there were people who were seconded to the Agency as AAs and were in any particular level of the Agency.

2170 But what is happening here is that the Borders and Coastguard Manager is becoming... is not going to be replaced and there is going to be an Administrative Officer instead, which is what the CEO has advised us was what he needed.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am not sure I follow the Chief Minister.

So when there is a reference here to Administrative Officer, it is not necessarily referring to the Civil Service grade. Is that correct? (Interjection) It is just a description being given to that particular position.

2175 Hon. Chief Minister: An officer who is going to do administrative work.

Hon. D J Bossino: So the Borders and Coastguard Office Manager will now be known as an Administrative Officer, but not necessarily to be equated to an AO within the Civil Service grading.

2180 Hon. Chief Minister: She is not going to... the Manager is not going to change name; the role is going to change.

Hon. D J Bossino: And will be known as an AO, but not necessarily an AO à la Civil Service.

2185 Hon. D A Feetham: Is it the same person? (Interjection) It is the same person. It is not that you are basically effectively doing away with the Manager and replacing her, as you said, by an Administrative Officer.

2190 Hon. Chief Minister: I do not know the answer. I do not get involved in who the individuals are that do these jobs. I try and stay completely away.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am not asking about the individual. I am just trying to understand.

2195 What you are doing is you are doing away with the Manager's job and is it that there is already an Administrative Officer there that is effectively... so, in other words, doing away with the Manager, but there is already an Administrative Officer there or is it that somebody is being converted from Manager to Administrative Officer? That is the question.

2200 Hon. Chief Minister: I do not know the answer to that because I do not get involved in the day-to-day running of the Agency. I allow the CEO to do that and whether he is recruiting somebody to that post or he is converting somebody to that post is not an item on which I am sighted.

Clerk: Appendix E, Gibraltar Health Authority.

2205 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with regard to Other Personnel, item 15, could I have further clarification for the employers pension contributions, which was estimated last year at £693,000 and the forecast outturn went up to £900,000 and now there is an estimate for £1½ million? If the Hon. Minister could explain the increases please.

2210 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I am told that this is a reflection of the number of people in posts. (Interjection) It is people who have joined the number two and number three – (Interjection) Okay, the guaranteed superannuation. So it is people who have joined and therefore more provision has to be made in there.

2215 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with regard to other recurrent expenditure, item 26, the ICC Health Centre, I am assuming that increase in the outturn and the estimate... is that linked to the new expansion that the Primary Care Centre will see?

2220 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The hire or the rental of the ICC had to be reviewed because the contract expired and therefore there was an increase and it did include a couple of extra rooms, and that is what is reflected there.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, item 34, School of Health Studies Expenses, is the School of Health Studies not run by the ETB and why does it come under the Head of the Health Authority rather than the ETB?

2225 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, the School of Health Studies is run by the Health Authority. The Government's Training Officer takes the role of supervising the School, but it is actually run as part of the Health Authority.

2230 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Finally, Mr Chairman, under Capital Expenditure there is an item of £3½ million estimate for this financial year. If the Hon. Minister could give an indication as to what this amount is for, please.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, I can give a general indication.

2235 About £¼ million, I believe, is for the new CT scanner that is due to be replaced this year and the tender is already in process. There are also works to be carried out in an expansion to the ground floor therapy and cardiac rehab area. There is also a whole programme of replacement of equipment and purchase of new equipment. There is a rolling programme to replace equipment in all the wards. As I say, a lot of the equipment, which was bought new for the Hospital, is now reaching the end of life and that all comes from there.

2240 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Chairman, can I just ask the House to note that the estimate for 2013-14 and the forecast outturn for 2013-14 demonstrates a difference which is £6 million, which is quite a short difference compared to the differences we looked at this afternoon historically in the GHA.

2245 Clerk: Appendix F, Care Agency.

2250 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with regard to item 36, under Other Recurrent Expenditure, Security Services, there was a forecast outturn of £110,000 from an estimate of £39,000. If the Hon. Minister could confirm if this is in relation to security services for individuals with behavioural problems that needed looking up.

2255 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: It is actually also in addition to a security guard at Bruce's Farm because there was a concern about having vulnerable people up in the Upper Rock and having untrained care staff with them; but it is something that may be redressed when we do the training. But it has been in relation to unforeseen needs for security.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: And finally, Mr Chairman, again, Capital Expenditure, there is an amount of £250,000. If the Hon. Minister could perhaps provide us with a general breakdown of what that will be for.

2260 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Sorry, I did not hear that... in relation to which part?

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Capital Expenditure.

2265 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: There have been a number of capital improvements this year – for example, we have finally been able to fix the balconies at Mount Alvernia after quite a substantial period of time of 10 years. We have also had – (Interjection) In Mount Alvernia not only have we fixed the balconies, but there was a problem with the retaining wall. It is an east facing wall at Mount Alvernia and that required a substantial amount of work done to it. Generally we have had to undertake refurbishment in the whole Care Agency Estate. As you know, the Care Agency owns a lot of buildings and it requires constant refurbishment.

2270 Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Yes, can the Hon. Minister confirm, Mr Chairman, you mentioned that this is work that has been done and so you are referring, I am assuming, to the forecast outturn figure. I am asking about the estimated figure of £250,000 for 2014-15 and if that is earmarked for anything specific.

2275 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Chairman, the refurbishment works are not complete and so it is something that straddles both financial years. There are issues that we have in relation to... we need to purchase vehicles for the Care Agency as well and that is included in this. There are various things that we needed to continue too. There are certain buildings that require a facelift and uplift because a lot of them have not been refurbished for a long time. This will include things like, say, for example, the refurbishment. Some of it will refer to the refurbishment of the Jewish Home, for example.

Clerk: Appendix G, Gibraltar Port Authority.

2285 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Chairman, on Payments, 18, under Training, there seems to be a constant figure there of £60,000 as the outturn and the estimate again. Does that include as well those that the Minister said, who were being trained, so there would be the future port operators and so on or what? Does he have an indication of some sort of breakdown, even if it is rough on what the training actually comprises?

2290 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Chairman, while the breakdown is being looked for...from memory I can tell him that the training this year has in fact related mostly to the new recruited VTS officers and in fact also, if I recall correctly, the amount spent as a result of the recruitment of the five additional VTS officers came in higher than that, but the exact information is being obtained for me.

2295 Yes, Mr Chairman, as I was saying there is a course relating to VTS, also courses relating to STCW Fire Fighting, Personal Survival at Sea, Social Responsibility and First Aid, and also a course on counter-pollution equipment familiarisation. There is also a course on internal auditing and quality management. There is also the course on VTS supervisor, and various health and safety courses and also a course relating to accident investigation.

2300 If he wants, and he writes to me, I can certainly give him the full detailed course and the breakdown of the actual cost so that he can have a better idea and a full picture.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I am grateful, Mr Chairman. Yes, I think I had better take it up there and we can look at more individual items.

2305 Thank you.

Clerk: Appendix H, Housing Works Agency.
Appendix I, Gibraltar Electricity Authority
Appendix J, Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority

2310 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, on Payments, section 14, the Stay and Play Programme, which is part of the Summer Sports Programme – in fact which was extended as well to encompass the Easter period and so on – the forecast outturn in respect of Stay and Play is £19,000 and yet the estimate has been drastically reduced down to £2,000. Perhaps the Minister wants to enlighten me somehow or other?

2315 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, the thing is that we do not want to isolate or segregate the Stay and Play as an item on its own and so what we envisage to do soon is to incorporate it within the Sports Development Projects all in one inclusive, and therefore there is no separation of the Stay and Play as a separate unit. Why should we have Stay and Play and not the other sports – chess or the football or whatever? It should all be incorporated and what we have done this year is cut down so that we can have 2320 that specifically, at least for that part, but we are hoping that next year we will incorporate it completely to the Sports Development Unit. I hope that...

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, if I take that for my understanding we have cut down by £17,000 and so it has not been done away with altogether to keep a provision of £2,000. Understandable, but that cut 2325 down was £17,000 in the way it is reflected here in the Book.

Taking what the Minister has said on board, if I look further down at number 24, Sports Development Project, it still remains £150,000. I thought perhaps then that one might have now been inflated by the £17,000... you know, rob Peter to pay Paul, and so we are actually £17,000 worse off in available funds.

2330 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, that is correct, there is £17,000 less; but should we need more money, we would get supplementary for that. But we are hoping that we can do it with the same amount of money that we have for Sports Development Projects. So, yes, you are right, it is a cut down, but it is not going to be necessarily a cut down from the Stay and Play.

2335 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, and I think the Minister when he was trying to explain to me, he mentioned the Sports Development Projects, which is what I looked at straight away, but then he mentioned that the eventual aim was to make it part of the Sports Development Unit. Was that a simple slip of the tongue, because the Sports Development Unit has £10,000 allocated and from my recollection that is something that they use? It is sums of money that they use throughout the year and not what the programmes –
2340 (Interjection) Sorry? Sports Development Unit is number nine, because the Minister mentioned the words Sports Development Unit, I immediately had to look at what was there. (Interjection) He meant... oh, that is understandable, Mr Chairman. In fact it is better, because that way it goes down on the record in Hansard that he means Sports Development Projects, which is number 24.

2345 Mr Chairman, whilst I have the microphone on, can I take the Minister to sub-point 20, the Playground Expenses? The actual expenditure in 2012-13 was £208,000 and in 2013-14 it was £170,000, yet he has kept the estimate the same even though the expenditure was £90,000 more than what was estimated last year. Does he have any information that could enlighten me on that one?

2350 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Chairman, it is to do with what I said in my Budget address. We have now a team of three people who before used to do some parts of the parks; now they are completely engaged in doing the parks. We can then cut down on certain costs that we had in the park – for example, security, opening and closing and other issues that the parks have. So this maintenance team will take on board this type of work on a 24/7 basis.

2355 So we are hoping that... and that is why we put the same estimate, because this year we carried on because of the way of restructuring the whole of the maintenance team it has taken a little bit of time and therefore we are hoping that this year we can...in fact I can tell you that they started on 1st July, which is only yesterday. So they have started and are now engaged totally on the parks and that maintenance team will then hopefully be on budget and not what we have been paying for, which is the forecast outturn at £170,000. There have been many costs to that.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Chairman, so if I have understood it correctly, I think the Minister is saying that a lot of that expense went to things that actually... human resources and so on. So the human resources are being catered for elsewhere and so on.

2365

The actual maintenance costs, sometimes the replacement of equipment and so on, is that then really the main bulk of what the £80,000 is left?

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, because they are incorporated in wages somewhere else. So, yes, it would be replacement and tools and equipment, and basically – (Interjection) yes, exactly.

2370

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, with regard to item 26, Elite Athletes Assistance and Injury Treatment, there is an estimate of £80,000. Could the Hon. Minister explain what that is targeted for?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, again, that was as stated in my Budget address in which it will deal with both those items which is a manifesto commitment. It is the Elite Athletes Assistance and Injury Treatment.

What we have done is incorporate them both together. We had them, last year, divided. If you look, it is £40,000 and £40,000. We have done the £80,000 this year, because again we do not know how many athletes are going to be injured and we do not know how many athletes are going to be elite. So we took the decision of incorporating them both and therefore that vote will cater for both.

2380

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, but could he explain... where did the £20,000 go to? Paying health professional or to...

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Chairman, these were certain athletes that were given certain monies to be able to fulfil their...for example, there was a chess player, a tennis player, and what we did was we gave them some aid in order to...it was deemed...

There were certain criteria that they were elite and they were doing well and therefore we gave them some money aid to fulfil their sports. So it is not to do with any health issues.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Chairman, could the Hon. Minister then explain what the injury treatment bit is then that would be included in the £80,000?

Hon. S E Linares: Well, that will depend, because again we are working, together with the Sports Advisory Council and all the Associations, on how we best deal with this and therefore again it is all put together. We do not know how many players will be injured and therefore it is like a sum which we reckon could well fulfil that, but if it does not, if it is less I am sure Mr Bossano will be very happy that it is less, and I will be very happy because we do not have any injuries; but if it is more, we will have to then review it as and when it comes. (Interjections and laughter)

2395

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: Mr Chairman, we are saying injury treatment? By whom, then? By the GHA? By a separate injury clinic? He has not quite explained how that system works.

2400

Will that individual sports man or woman not go to the GHA? Would they receive separate sports injury treatment? If he could elaborate.

Hon. S E Linares: Well, Mr Chairman, we are not in a position to say that yet, because we do not know yet which is the best way to do it. There are issues. I mean the obvious, one is, do we allow a sportsman and woman to take preference to somebody who has an ill. We do not know how to do it. We would probably use the private. We do not know at this stage. So it is still open whether we go through the public, i.e. the GHA, or through the GHA that we go to the private.

Hon. Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond: So, Mr Chairman, the Minister is saying that this £80,000 at the moment is a token figure while you explore and implement a new service.

2410

Hon. S E Linares: Yes.

2415 Clerk: That concludes clauses 6 and 7.

Mr Chairman: Clauses 6 and 7, stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Clauses 8 to 11.

2420 Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The Schedule, Parts 1 to 9.

2425 Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Tobacco (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

2430 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Tobacco Act 1997.
Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

2435 Clerk: Clause 2.

2440 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Chairman, I have given notice of an amendment, which does what I suggested earlier, which is change Clause 6B(1) from the wording at the moment that says, ‘a notice displaying the following statement’ and sets out the statement, to ‘a notice displaying a statement in such terms as may be required by the Collector of Customs (and set out it by Notice in the Gazette) shall be exhibited at every premises’. I have given written notice of that proposed change.

I understand it is not controversial.

Clerk: The long title.

2445 Mr Chairman: I think I should put the amendment in the terms moved by the Chief Minister.
All in favour? (Members: Aye.) All against?
Clause 2, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

2450 Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Commonwealth Park Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to establish a park to be known as ‘Commonwealth Park’ and for connected purposes.

2455 Clauses 1 to 5.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: Schedule.

2460 Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Clerk: The long title.

Mr Chairman: Stands part of the Bill.

Income Tax (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

2465 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Income Tax Act 2010.
Clause 1.

Mr Chairman: I really do not think that there is a need for an amendment; it is typographical.

2470 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Yes, Mr Chairman, but there are a series of –

Mr Chairman: We might as well move it –

2475 Hon. A J Isola: –there are a series of other changes which are in a letter, which I have given notice of.

Mr Chairman: But on another occasion, if that sort of thing happens, there is no need for an amendment. If you just point out that it is typographical and then get the printers to – 2480 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Chairman, but there are a series of others in clause 2, which are in the letter that I have given notice of.

Mr Chairman: Okay. Fine. (Interjections)

Clause 2, we will put the amendment of which the Minister has given notice. Those in favour?

2485 (Members: Aye.) Those against?

Clause 2, as amended, stands part of the Bill; and the long title, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

GOVERNMENT MOTIONS

Honorary Freedom of the City of Gibraltar – Conferred upon Sir Graham Watson – Motion carried 20 Clerk: Government motions.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

'This House resolves that the Honorary Freedom of the City of Gibraltar be conferred upon Sir Graham Watson for his outstanding defence of the interests of Gibraltar and promotion of the wishes of the people of Gibraltar in the European Parliament and elsewhere.'

25 Mr Speaker, I think that Sir Graham Watson needs no introduction to anybody in this Parliament and indeed anybody who may be watching the proceedings of this House. He has been a stalwart defender of the rights of Gibraltarians in his capacity as one of the representatives of the people of Gibraltar in the European Parliament.

30 He is of the Liberal Party, but we know that those that represent us in the European Parliament of all the political parties that we have the choice of electing in European Parliamentary Elections do an excellent job. There are some that go further than others in discharging their obligations to the people of Gibraltar and I think Sir Graham is one such person. He has distinguished himself in the way that he has looked out for Gibraltar. Once we became his constituents, he has been careful to ensure that issues which relate to Gibraltar are referred back to Gibraltar to the Government of the day, to those in Gibraltar who he knew he could take clear soundings from on how issues might be relevant to Gibraltar and of course, in particular, he has had a very strong relationship because of his partisan affiliation with the Deputy Chief Minister, who is the Leader of the Liberal Party in Gibraltar and has therefore become his first port of call and his representative in Gibraltar.

40 But it was obvious to those of us who were able to observe the recent visit of a number of Gibraltarians to Brussels of all political denominations that Sir Graham was there for them throughout the period of their important visit, and that really represented what Sir Graham has been doing for Gibraltar. He really has been going beyond the call of duty, beyond his obligations since he became our representative and since we became his constituents. Now that unfortunately he will no longer be representing us in Brussels as an MEP, it is right that the people of Gibraltar should recognise his stalwart efforts by the bestowing of this award of the Honorary Freedom of the City.

45 Mr Speaker, if I may, before I sit down, the hon. Members will have seen that there are a number of motions bestowing the Freedom, the Medallion of Honour and then the Medallion of Distinction. We have not done many of those since we were elected. We were concentrating on issues related to the politics that we discussed yesterday – let us not go back into that debate – and we have now had an opportunity to look at the question of the honours that this House bestows. People watching and listening should see this lengthy list that the Parliament will be considering today as a catch-up in respect of the Medallions of Distinction that we feel should be awarded and the Medallions of Honour that should be awarded. We do not expect always to be coming back with a long list, although there may be instances where worthy individuals are brought to our attention that we will be bringing to this House for distinction, but today that is why we are dealing with all of these motions together.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

60 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, the Opposition will be supporting the motion. I am not sure whether Sir Graham Watson – I will be corrected or I will be told no doubt in the Chief Minister's reply – is in fact a member of the Liberal Party... I mean the local Liberal Party. It makes absolutely no difference, Mr Speaker, because the Opposition does not look at these things in terms of membership to any political party associated with local political party partisanship. At the end of the day really, the test is to look at whether somebody has defended Gibraltar, whether somebody has made an outstanding contribution to the defence of Gibraltar, to the defence of the rights of the people to self-determination, to defence of our sovereignty, and certainly this is an individual who really has gone out of his way to do precisely that.

65 I have to say, as I have said publicly when the result was announced of the European Elections, that I was very, very sad indeed to see that somebody who has worked so hard to advance the interests of this community was not elected at the European Elections – that was a very, very sad loss for Gibraltar.

70 But I am happy, on behalf of the Opposition, to support this motion today.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question... oh, sorry.
Does any other Member wish to contribute?

75 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, I thank the hon. Member for his support and for his words. I would be grateful also for the opportunity to say a few words on the motion.

80 Sir Graham was an MEP from 1994 until 2014, which is 20 years. He was one of our seven MEPs and then six MEPs from when Gibraltar voted in the European Elections for the first time in 2004. But even before he became our MEP, I remember in 2002 going to there was a congress in Bath of the European Liberal Democrats. This was a time when we were fighting against the joint sovereignty campaign and there was a motion which was tabled in that congress supporting the right to self-determination of the people of Gibraltar and supporting our European Union rights as well, and it was Sir Graham Watson then, before he became our MEP, who actually chaired that particular meeting. So even before he was elected for this constituency he took an interest in Gibraltar issues.

85 I think the Chief Minister has made the point very well. What Sir Graham has done is to go beyond the call of duty and while there have been many MEPs and MPs, and there still are, who are friends of Gibraltar, I think Sir Graham took it a step further and he went beyond what would have been expected of him. There is an example of that in 2006, where for the first time we managed to overturn a civil aviation measure, which sought to exclude Gibraltar from its application. There was a vote in the European 90 Parliament, which Graham organised by tabling an amendment, and it was to do with disabled air passenger rights. We won the vote and for the first time the Parliament took out a clause which sought to exclude Gibraltar from the application of a new measure. What happened after that is that Cordoba came into play within a few weeks and obviously that meant the new measures would apply to Gibraltar automatically, but this was the first time that something was done in the Parliament where we actually managed to overturn 95 the exclusion of Gibraltar from EU, a new aviation measure, and it was largely due to Sir Graham Watson's efforts.

In 2014, as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said, in May of this year the European Elections took place. Graham won the Gibraltar vote with 66% of those who voted actually doing so for him and for his party, and unfortunately, regretfully, because of the situation in the United Kingdom and because of the way that we are as a joint constituency, he was not elected to represent us.

But certainly I think it is very fitting and very welcome that the Chief Minister has chosen to move the motion and I certainly will be supporting it.

105 Hon. D A Feetham: Would you give way please?

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I should also have said during my contribution, also in response to a contribution that the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister made during his speech, that I think that it is a good 110 idea for this individual to somehow be kept on, on behalf of Gibraltar. I note that that is the intention on the Government side and it will have support on our side. I think that we cannot afford to lose...

Provided it is obviously done transparently and all the rest of it, leaving all that aside, I think that it is important that individuals, such as these, with the wealth of experience and the contacts in Europe to be kept on, on behalf of Gibraltar, and certainly I think that the choice by the Government of keeping Sir 115 Graham Watson working in some capacity in Brussels on behalf of Gibraltar is a good decision and we will also support that.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the hon. Member for his words of support and this is something the Government is looking into. Obviously there are two sides to the equation and we need to see what emerges from it, but he is right that Sir Graham is very well connected. He has managed to facilitate meetings for us and attendance at events and conferences, which would simply not have happened without his contacts, and so I am certainly very grateful for that support.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak?
125 The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): If I may, Mr Speaker, just some very brief words.

I have got to know Sir Graham over the last two and a half years. His attitude in private is as enthusiastic in favour of Gibraltar as it is in public. He hosted a visit that I paid to Strasbourg about a year and three months ago and facilitated meetings with Commissioners, with MEPs and so on, and the doors that he was able to open were quite impressive.

But just one point that I would like to make, the Freedom of the City of Gibraltar is conferred by this House on behalf of the city, but the fact that the Liberal Party, clearly because of Sir Graham, did so well in the recent European Elections, means that on this occasion that the conferring of the Freedom of the City is almost by public acclaim by the city and I think that says it all, Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)
135

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Steven Linares.

140 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, just to say through the years as a Liberal Member, a member of the Liberal Party, I have gone to many, many conferences in which Sir Graham has been present. He was not only a politician; he was a personal friend of mine. I had gone to his house. I had eaten – (A Member: He is.) Yes, he is, sorry. Yes, okay. Sorry. He is a personal friend of mine and I have lots of contact with him, with Dr Garcia, and like I said, he has invited me to his home and I have met his family and so it is not only the fact that he has done a lot for Gibraltar, but he is very close to us as friends. Therefore this motion is very, very fitting to Sir Graham and I am really pleased that the people of Gibraltar now recognise all the sterling work that he has done.

Thank you very much. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other Member?

Yes, the Hon. Albert Isola.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, just very, very briefly.

I have only known and worked with Sir Graham for the last 12 months, since my election to this House, and I think it is absolutely crucial that we understand and recognise, as we are doing today, the importance of people like Sir Graham and others before him and hopefully many others after him, with the good work of the Gibraltar office and hopefully an office in Brussels will deliver in times of need, because at the end of the day, Mr Speaker, Gibraltar needs desperately to have friends. In our times of need, as indeed in 2003 and 2004 and in this past 12-month period when the going gets tough, we need our friends and Sir Graham Watson has certainly been standing aloof and above all others in standing up for us at every possible juncture and difficulty.

For me, Mr Speaker, I find that Sir Graham has been an absolutely exceptional individual and an exceptional friend of Gibraltar and I am delighted to support the motion, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful that the Members of the House who have spoken have indicated their full support for this motion. The Leader of the Opposition referred to the partisan aspect of this and said it was not relevant, and he is of course absolutely right.

The House has conferred the Freedom on members of the different United Kingdom political parties who have shown their affection and their support for the people of Gibraltar in the discharge of their functions in different Parliaments, some of them in the House of Lords, some of them in the House of Commons, and Sir Graham now in the European Parliament, regardless of political affiliation and it is right that we should continue to do that. And just springing to mind, Lord Bethell of the Conservative Party and Andrew MacKinlay of the Labour Party to think of only two of the many who have rightly had the Freedom bestowed on them by different generations of Parliamentarians in Gibraltar.

I am grateful for the indication from the hon. Gentleman about the work that Sir Graham might do for Gibraltar in the future, and of course any such arrangement is entered into transparently. Whether the details are to be published is another thing, for the reasons we have discussed before in relation to another person who has given equally distinguished service in the European Parliament, and that is Glyn Ford, who represented Gibraltar's interests in the European Parliament even before we were his constituents. But he will excuse me for jibing at him, that we are considering a £¼ million package with an allowance for his children's education and some housing allowance in Brussels. I am delighted to see that he supports that, even though there is only one Sir Graham Watson and we cannot interview for another one.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. (Banging on desks)

Gibraltar Medallion of Honour –
Bestowed upon Ernest Montado CBE –
Motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

'This House bestows the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour upon Ernest Montado CBE, who has served and contributed to the interests of Gibraltar and its people in an exceptional manner that is particularly worthy of recognition by this House on behalf of the people of Gibraltar and in particular, for services to the public service in politics; Mr Montado having served as Chief Secretary under four successive Chief Ministers.'

Mr Speaker, the contribution that Ernest Montado has made to the public life of Gibraltar has been recognised already to a great extent by the bestowing upon him of the award of Commander of the British Empire, the CBE, which is indeed a very high honour bestowed by Her Majesty on those who have shown exceptional service in whatever walk of life they may have pursued.

The Government considers that people like Ernest Montado must also be recognised directly by the people of Gibraltar for the work that they have done. To an extent, to many the recognition by this Parliament of the work that they have done is perhaps, dare I say, as important, if not more so than recognition by the award of CBE in a different way, because of course an honour from Her Majesty, such as being made a Commander of the British Empire, is hugely important, but a grass roots recognition of that work – and I say grass roots, because this Parliament represents the people of Gibraltar – is an honour from the people up, rather than from the sovereign down and it can mean just as much.

Mr Speaker, the trajectory of Ernest Montado in the Civil Service is one that is well known to all Members of the House and it is clear that people should not be bestowed honours for doing their jobs as Civil Servants, and there is no question of this being a reflection of simply an honour being bestowed because Ernest Montado did his job. This honour is being bestowed because Ernest Montado did more than just his job, and having served four Chief Ministers in itself is no mean feat, in the sense that he was able to enjoy the trust and confidence of four different Party Leaders of three different political parties at different times in Gibraltar's history, spanning Chief Ministers of different generations. At least he served four different generations of Chief Ministers as well. If I may say so: Sir Joshua, representing the first Chief Minister, yourself the second – a different generation of Chief Minister – Mr Bossano the third and Sir Peter Caruana the fourth.

And in that service, I am very jealous to say, you had somebody who was not just the Head of the Civil Service, able to run the administration entirely admirably with the support and respect of every civil servant, who thought of Ernest Montado as a just and equitable leader of the Service, but also you had a political advisor with a small p, who understood the political issues between Her Majesty's Government and Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, who understood the issues with the Kingdom of Spain and all the surrounding issues, and therefore was not just somebody who might turn up to take a note. He was somebody who was very useful to have available in the service of Chief Ministers and I daresay that the work that he did is as important a part of the advancement of the people of Gibraltar as the work done by the Chief Ministers that he served, and I can put it no higher than that.

I have had the pleasure of working with Mr Ernest Montado in private practice, but not with him serving as a civil servant. After I became Chief Minister, he made himself available to me so that if I needed anything he would happily, at absolutely no cost, assist the Government of Gibraltar. He has on two or three occasions done so and we have been very grateful indeed for him doing so in a way that seeks absolutely no reward, but as he says, simply to continue his service in the service of his people, the people of Gibraltar.

Therefore it is absolutely right in my view that it should also be the people of Gibraltar who recognise the service given by Mr Montado by the bestowing of the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour, which short of the Freedom is the highest recognition that this Parliament can award for a lifetime of service.

I therefore, Mr Speaker, commend this motion to the House.

Mr Speaker: Does any hon. Member wish to contribute to the debate on the motion?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, very shortly.

Mr Speaker, we are absolutely delighted and certainly from a personal perspective, I am absolutely delighted in being able to rise today to support this motion to bestow this honour on Ernest Montado.

The Hon. the Chief Minister said that we do not bestow honours on people just simply for being civil servants, but this is a man who has actually been a Chief Secretary with distinction. He has served the people of Gibraltar with absolute distinction and he is one of the most distinguished Chief Secretary's, the most senior person within the Civil Service we have ever had here in this community. A man who has always been, even after he retired as Chief Secretary, at the end of a telephone, extremely, extremely approachable.

A man who has always been a fountain of knowledge, and in the same way as the Hon. the Chief Minister has had dealings with Mr Montado professionally, I have also had dealings with Mr Montado professionally. In the same way as the Chief Minister has been able to draw upon his knowledge when he has been a Chief Minister in an informal, as I understand it, consultancy terms, I have been, as Leader of the Opposition, also been able to telephone Ernest in moments where there has been or I have had some doubt about any particular issue or I have wanted to bounce something, use him as a sounding board, and he 250 has always been somebody who has been there at the end of the telephone or been prepared to meet with me to always give me very sound advice, impartial objective advice.

I think that he is a man who thoroughly, thoroughly deserves this particular honour and we are certainly delighted in supporting it.

255 Mr Speaker: Does any other...?
The Hon. Joseph Bossano.

260 (Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety) Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I do not want to say a great deal, because I think we all know Ernest very well... those of us who have been around in politics for a long time, but I think there is something about what he was able to contribute which was directly the result of his own progression within the Service.

265 He built the Statistics Department which we have today. He started off there and in fact the increasing sophistication of our numbers, which other people do not seem to enjoy as much as I do, I think he is responsible for having put us on that road. Of course it is very important that because he was from that part of the business, he was able then to take on the role of Financial Secretary, and take on the role of Chief Secretary and on occasions acted as Deputy Governor. So he actually brought when he was finally in Convent Place, having had a career within the Service, that touch on all the important bits of the business. He dealt with the United Kingdom, as the Chief Minister has mentioned, and he had a great deal of knowledge of how to deal with people in the Foreign Office and in Government Departments in the United Kingdom. He was often able, certainly in the ages that I was there, to go off and doing it on his own without the need for a political directive as to what the policy was because he instinctively knew what the policy was.

270 And he, himself, of course was at a very early age in the young AACR, so he had also that instinctive political element as you know, because it was in the old days of the AACR that he had that instinctive element of feeling nationalistic about Gibraltar, feeling that the protection of our people and our country had to be the very core value of everything that we did, and that if we had to have differences of opinion with London in order to defend our homeland, then so be it. And I think he brought that in, in a way which did not in any manner or form dilute his basic commitment that he had to be a completely impartial civil servant and therefore he gave the advice, whether the recipient was getting the advice he wanted to hear or not, which he felt professionally was the correct advice, but I think it came with the kind of commitment he would have had, had he chosen to be a politician in defence of Gibraltar. So I think it is a good opportunity that we remember just how much he has done for Gibraltar.

280 Mr Speaker: Does anybody else wish to contribute?
Mr Edwin Reyes.

285 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

I rise to make a very small contribution as well. I think we all share the same thoughts about Mr Montado's qualities and as a Parliament we are above all highlighting his contributions towards politicians on whichever side of the House they have sat.

290 But I am sure I also speak on behalf of my hon. colleague, Steven Linares. We have both had the pleasure in the past of being Presidents of the Gibraltar Teachers Association and Mr Montado had this ability to offer us sound and impartial advice that we obviously both took advantage of at some stage or another. Whether it be at social functions or whatever, we used to pick his brains, and say, 'How do you think a politician will react when we come up with this claim?' and so on. I must say that Mr Montado always remained faithful to all the politicians, but you could see at heart that he was a worker. He was a civil servant and would really have made a very good trade unionist had he not had such a wonderful career within the Civil Service itself and perhaps would have become one of the leading personalities had he chosen that path.

300 So I wish to record on behalf of all trade unionists, and I know Mr Bossano and Mr Netto would also wish to join me, thanks, Mr Montado, for your contributions and above all for your sincerity every time you offered any advice.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, very few words.

305 I think I must be one of the few people in this House at the moment who actually served as a civil servant while Mr Montado progressed in his career from statistician to Chief Secretary, and I recall those days well, back in the mid to the late 1980s.

I served in the Civil Service, both as an EO and then as Manager of the Health Authority at the time and I have great memories – a theme that has been said across the House this morning about him – of the guidance and advice that he could give and the fact that he bestowed great confidence. When you knew that 310 Ernest Montado was dealing with a matter, then you knew that it would be dealt with fairly and that the problem, if there was one, would be resolved.

He was and continues to be a man, as I say, who bestowed great confidence and a man of great wisdom and I think that that is a quality that is all too rare, and therefore I am very, very happy to support this motion.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to Members on both sides of the House for their support of this motion.

If I can just deal with one of the things that the Hon. Mr Reyes said, accepting everything he said, but just reminding him that politicians are workers too and if Ernest Montado had decided to become a politician and he had stayed on this side of the House, certainly he could have done so without forgetting that he was a worker. (Laughter)

320

Mr Speaker, I think one of the things I omitted to say when I was presenting the motion is that one of the qualities that I identify in Ernest Montado – and I think the Hon. the Minister for Employment, Mr Bossano, who as Chief Minister served with him, as you did, encapsulated – was that he would give the opinion that he believed was right, whether it was or not what the politician wanted to hear. That on some occasions is expressed as having the courage to speak truth unto power and it is one of the most important functions that civil servants fulfil and I think that Ernest Montado represents that quality. He does not shy away from giving an opinion, which he believes is the right opinion, simply because of the standing that the person he may be expressing that opinion to may have and the fact that they may obviously think the opposite.

I think it is also true to say, although I stand to be corrected, but I think it is true to say that Ernest Montado is probably the Gibraltarian to date who has attended the most sessions of the United Nations where Gibraltar has been represented, because he did all of those which involved Joe Bossano and he did most of those that involved Peter Caruana, whilst Sir Peter went to both of the Committees, and that is indeed a distinction. I think he, in his period will have attended meetings – you will be better placed to confirm this or not – with delegations that attended Brussels and Airport Agreements, now discussions, all the way up to the discussions in Cordoba that led to the Trilateral and the Cordoba Accords, and if he was not there, he was certainly in the background involved in the preparation for those meetings etc.

335

In fact, I seem to recall from my discussions with Ernest that there was one occasion when he was not just Acting Deputy Governor. I think there was one occasion that for one reason or another there was even a need for an Acting Governor, and he was an Acting Governor. I do not think he was the first Gibraltarian or the only Gibraltarian to have filled that function, but he was certainly one of the few Gibraltarians to have fulfilled that function. And in keeping with the bestowing of the CBE on him, I think the fact that at the time of an older constitution he was able to enjoy the confidence of the United Kingdom Government, such that he might be entrusted with the Office of Governor of Gibraltar, demonstrates the sort of man that we are bestowing the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour on today.

340

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, may I ask leave of the House to associate myself with what has been said?

350

Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Ernest Montado was economic advisor of the Government during the years when I was Minister for Economic Development and Trade, and in 1986 when Joe Pitaluga retired, Sir Joshua and I persuaded him – and we had to persuade him – to take on the job of Chief Secretary because he had set his heart on being Financial and Development Secretary. But we pointed out to him that we had no doubt that he would be able to do much more for Gibraltar in the post of Administrative Chief Secretary than he would as Financial and Development Secretary and I think events have proved that that has indeed been the case.

355

The Chief Minister is quite right that there has been one other Gibraltarian to have acted as Governor and that was Sir Howard Davies, and in fact my last comment is to say that I regard Ernest Montado as the greatest civil servant that Gibraltar has had since Howard Davies. (Applause and banging on desks)

360

Hon. Chief Minister: Would you give way? (Laughter)

Mr Speaker, there is one thing which I have omitted to mention, which your intervention has prompted me to, which is that Ernest Montado has sat in this House and very few civil servants have sat in this House. But when he has acted as Financial and Development Secretary in the days of the 1969 constitution, there have been some occasions when the Financial and Development Secretary was absent from Gibraltar and therefore he stood in his place and came to this House to represent him. So he has also been a Member of this House, something which is highly unusual for a civil servant.

Mr Speaker: I am now going to finish up with an advert. He is collaborating with me now in the writing of my memoirs (Interjections) so he is still someone that I cherish enormously.

I now put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried. (Applause and banging on desks)

Gibraltar Medallion of Honour –
Bestowed upon John Alcantara CBE –
Motion carried

375 Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

'This House bestows the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour upon John Alcantara CBE, who has served and contributed to the interests of Gibraltar and its people in an exceptional manner that is particularly worthy of recognition by this House on behalf of the people of Gibraltar and in particular, for services to the law and politics; Mr Alcantara's main achievements being his time as a puisne judge of the Supreme Court of Gibraltar and his service as Speaker of the House of Assembly.'

380 Mr Speaker, John Alcantara is very well known to the community, but I want to start with something that I found out only when I read Gibraltar: The Making of a People, the book by the Deputy Chief Minister, which stands as one of the necessary tomes that anybody wanting to understand our politics must read. What I found out there was that the John Alcantara that I knew as a law student as a judge had actually been a firebrand young politician in the AACR in the years after the war and that he took the route of the law only after deciding not to take the route of politics; but he was to come back to politics in a 385 different guise much later in his life.

John Alcantara is not a man who covets any honours and I wonder whether we will be able to persuade him that the recognition of his people must result in him accepting this Medallion of Honour. I am sure we will be able to because he has demonstrated all the best qualities that Gibraltarians have... the ability to discharge functions that had not previously been associated with Gibraltarians, to sit in judgement over 390 other Gibraltarians and to do so entirely dispassionately as the law requires was something that others believed could not be done by somebody from this community and required the importation of skill from outside, and John Alcantara demonstrated that that was not in fact the case. Today, we have a Chief Justice, who is a Gibraltarian, and after him, of course, very distinguished service by Felix Pizzarello, both as magistrate and as Supreme Court puisne judge also.

395 I came to know John Alcantara, in my own legal practice, as a Judge of the Supreme Court and then also as a magistrate. He went in his retirement back to the Magistrates' Court when he was asked to do so because Gibraltar had a long interregnum between the appointment of a magistrate and a successor and we needed somebody to fill the role and the then Government asked him to come back to the Magistrates' Court and he did as good a job in the Magistrates' Court as he had done years before when he was 400 magistrate before being elevated to puisne judge.

He and Nati moved away from Gibraltar to Belize for some years so that he might be able to obtain the experience necessary to become a puisne judge in the Supreme Court of Gibraltar and having done that, and having served with such distinction in the Supreme Court, he was bestowed his CBE. He came back to politics, Mr Speaker, late in his life to become Speaker of this House. He was Speaker when I was elected 405 and he discharged also then the function of Mayor as you are doing now. And Speaker of this House I found him always to be affectionate for all Members and assisting in as much as he could, advising Members on both sides on how they could make their contributions better, which usually involved the word 'shorter' (Laughter) and always kind in his approach to all of us.

Mr Speaker, I do not want to say anything about the reasons why John Alcantara stopped being Speaker, those are recorded in Hansard. I often come across the passage when I review... in preparation for my 410 Budget debate, my discipline is to review all the Budget debates before, read again what Chief Ministers have said before and what Leaders of the Opposition have said before, and I come across that difficult passage, which I think marked all of us a little bit who were here in the House that day.

415 But John was good enough to stay as Speaker for a very special session of this House, which was the session in August when we celebrated the 300th Anniversary of a British Gibraltar, which he presided over as Speaker of this House, and he presided over other functions that day as Mayor.

Mr Speaker, John Alcantara is regarded by people in this community with the very, very highest regard for the work that he has done for this community in every function that he has undertaken. He recently lost Nati his wife, and I hope that the people of Gibraltar will be able to demonstrate to him the affection in which they hold him and the regard in which they have, the work that he has done, by the bestowing of this Medallion of Honour. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I had hoped to be able to rise to say I associate myself with every single word the Chief Minister says and then perhaps to say a few words and sit down. I have to say that he has injected an element of controversy that has been unnecessary by reference to the passage in Hansard in relation to the reasons why Mr Alcantara decided to leave. I have to say, Mr Speaker, unnecessary... but nonetheless, we are delighted to be able to support this motion in the same way as we supported the other motions.

I did not have the privilege of either appearing in front of Judge Alcantara, as he then was. I was a barrister in England from 1992 until 2000 and also I never coincided with him in this House when he was Speaker of the House, but I have had dealings with him on a social basis, in the sense that I have met him I have spoken to him. He has always been extremely, extremely courteous. He comes across in my mind as a very patient man, a man who is able to listen, and a man that again, as with Ernest Montado, is able to impart on an objective premise advice that is always useful.

But anybody, Mr Speaker, that is able to serve this community with the distinction that Mr Alcantara has been able to serve this community by actually holding three of the most important positions that you can hold as a member of this community, including Speaker and also a Judge of the Supreme Court, I think that deserves recognition, and for all those reasons, Mr Speaker, again the Opposition is happy to support this motion. (Banging on desks)

(Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety) Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, like most people who have been around, and they have been around for as long as I have been around (Laughter) we have had a lot of things in common and things on which we disagreed.

Certainly, at a personal level I have always thought of him as a good close friend of mine and in his rulings in this House, there were rulings that I was not happy with, but the whole purpose of having a Speaker is that the Speaker is the one who decides the ruling. I remember at one stage where he decided that we were asking too many supplementaries and he would ration us to two supplementaries each and then he made an exception for me because I was the Leader of the Opposition, and so he allowed me to have three. (Laughter) Perhaps because not everybody thinks mathematically like I do, the result of that was of course that we immediately increased the number of questions and then we were entitled to put as many questions as we did as supplementaries to a bigger number of questions in the first place.

But the decisions that he took were the decisions that he wanted to take in order to make sure that the Parliament did not degenerate, frankly, into Members wrangling with each other, as opposed to getting on with the business, which is what the Parliament exists for and what we are being paid to be here for. It is inevitable that frequently, because we have got strong views, we forget what it is that we are supposed to be doing and question the opinions of each other. I think he did a very good job as a Speaker. We supported him throughout the time that he was here when he was doing things that we enjoyed and when he was doing things that we did not enjoy, because at the end of the day... clearly, I never appeared before him as a judge (Laughter) and it would have been a very bad thing if I had because I am not a lawyer. (Laughter)

So I am happy to associate myself with this and I wish John all the very best and he knows how much affection I have always had for him and how much respect I have had for him as our Speaker. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the indication of support from the Leader of the Opposition. I do not see how a reference to a historical fact can inject an element of anything that is partisan...

I did not make any remarks about what happened and how it came about. I am just saddened by what happened. I am sometimes saddened by some of the things that I do, let alone things that others do. So I do not think I injected any partisan element at all, but if hon. Members feel that I have, I invite them to go back to read the Hansard for the Budget debate in respect of the Chief Minister's reply for 2004, and then they can make up for themselves what it is that happened that day and see what partisan aspects might arise.

But, in any event, what is important is that we are jointly telling John Alcantara that the people of Gibraltar consider that he is worthy as a recipient of the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour and we are all doing that together. I sincerely hope that he will appreciate that on behalf of the people of Gibraltar we believe that he is worthy of this distinction.

Mr Speaker: Again, before I put the motion to the vote, may I associate myself with the remarks of someone who occupied this Chair for eight years? To discharge the functions of Speaker and Judge in a community, such as Gibraltar, is no mean task and I am very happy to see the House recognising the contribution which Judge Alcantara has made to Gibraltar.

480

I now put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister. All in favour? (Members: Aye.) All against? Carried.

Gibraltar Medallion of Honour –
Bestowed upon Aurelio Montegriffo CBE –
Motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

'This House bestows the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour upon Aurelio Montegriffo CBE, who has served and contributed to the interests of Gibraltar and its people in an exceptional manner that is particularly worthy of recognition by this House on behalf of the people of Gibraltar and in particular, for services to politics; Mr Montegriffo's main distinction having been his services as Minister for Health.'

Mr Speaker, Mr Montegriffo did a lot more than just be Minister for Health. He was, people often say, a very distinguished Minister for Health, who in the old days with a different type of Health Service, with a different numbers of beds, would make a point every day of visiting every patient and coming to their bedside and asking them how they were and how the service was being provided.

490

He was of course a Minister in the time that he was in the House of Assembly and in the City Council before us. He was a representative of the Association for the Advancement of Civil Rights, the AACR, the party of which then you became Leader and represented as Chief Minister.

495

I am reminded, Mr Speaker, that he was actually one of the members of the AACR that represented that party at the Constitutional Conference of 1969, chaired by Lord Shepherd, which achieved the preamble, the famous preamble to the Constitution on which many of us relied for many years in respect of the continued British sovereignty of Gibraltar and the Gibraltarians' rights to influence that.

500

He is a man who is now very advanced in years. A politician of another generation, Mr Maurice Xiberras recently told a Gibraltarian publication that Mr Montegriffo had been able to say that he had held Mr Xiberras in his arms when Mr Xiberras was a baby, and that is how many generations back we are going in respect of Mr Montegriffo.

There is a reference in the national archives, which I have been trying to obtain in time for today, but I have not been able to receive so I only have the tantalising reference that the entry for Mr Montegriffo in the national archives in the United Kingdom in document FCO83/50 is this:

505

'Remarks made by Aurelio Montegriffo, Association for the Advancement of Civil Rights (AACR), Member of the Gibraltar House of Assembly, regarding independence for Gibraltar'

510

The reference suggests that it might have been something said in the 1950s, so he must have at some stage also been a firebrand in his day. Mr Montegriffo served Gibraltar with absolute distinction and that is recognised on Her Majesty having bestowed on him the CBE.

In my legal practice Mr Speaker, one of the photographs that dominated our dining room for many years was the photograph of Her Majesty the Queen when she visited Gibraltar, and flanking Sir Joshua and Her Majesty is Mr Montegriffo. He was the Minister designated by the Government to receive Her Majesty up the Rock and show her certain of the views that she was seeing from there.

515

When we had the proud occasion to receive in Gibraltar Prince Edward whilst we were in Government, one of the things that we organised, because I think that was the particular anniversary of the visit to the Rock by Her Majesty, was that Mr Montegriffo should see him where he had seen Her Majesty and show him and his wife Sophie how the views that Her Majesty had seen almost 60 years before had changed in that time and he was very happy to assist us, almost 60 years later, as he had done 60 years before when Sir Joshua had asked him to do the same thing.

520

Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Health Authority has been revolutionised over and over again, and every Government claims to have done that; but the Gibraltar Health Service, along the lines of the National Health Service, was only created once and Mr Montegriffo had an important hand in that and we all take the benefit today of it in different measure.

525 So I hope the House will be united in my moving of this Medallion of Honour for Mr Montegriffo, who I am sure will appreciate that the CBE that Her Majesty was happy to bestow upon him is now also supplemented by the people of Gibraltar bestowing upon him the Distinction of the Medallion of Honour.

530 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I have never had the privilege of meeting Mr Montegriffo and never had the privilege of speaking to him, but everybody that I have spoken to, and I have spoken to a few people about this... about not only this one, but the others, but this one in particular, because I have never met Mr Montegriffo, and the former politicians that I have spoken to about this all tell me that he is one of the most distinguished Ministers that has ever served this community.

535 On the basis of the advice that I have been given and obviously listening to the Chief Minister, we are absolutely delighted to support this particular motion and to support the bestowing of Mr Montegriffo with such an important honour by the people of Gibraltar to supplement as well the honour that Her Majesty provided him a number of years ago in the award of the CBE.

540 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as the current Minister for Health, I think that it is only right that I should lend my support to this motion, but also because I remember Aurelio well. He was a good friend of my late father and in fact they served together on a number of Boards at the time, including the Board of the then Medical and Health Department.

545 Mr Speaker, when I had the pleasure of serving as a member of the staff of the Health Authority back in the 1980s, Aurelio Montegriffo was remembered well and with great affection by the employees of the time. He is a special person and was a very special Minister, showing great care and affection for staff and patients alike. Mr Speaker, he was a very special man of that very special generation and I am very, very pleased to support this as the current Minister for Health. (Banging on desks)

550 Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute before I call upon the Chief Minister to reply?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the indication of support from the other side of the House and I have nothing more to add.

555 Mr Speaker: Again, may I be permitted, having served in this House with Aurelio for so many years, to associate myself with what has been said about him?

The Chief Minister is quite right. Aurelio Montegriffo was the prime mover of the concept in the AACR of the right to our land where he used to speak about the need for Gibraltarians to have a concept of nationhood buttressed by an independent attitude of mind.

560 I, myself, personally owe him a great deal. He was my mentor in politics and helped me tremendously in my personal life and why not... even in my spiritual life. I owe him a great debt of gratitude and I am very, very happy that I should be in the Chair today when the House, on behalf of Gibraltar, is honouring him in this very suitable fashion.

565 I now put the question in the terms of the motion of the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Gibraltar Medallion of Honour –
Bestowed upon Albert Poggio OBE –
Motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name, which reads as follows:

'This House bestows the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour upon Albert Poggio OBE, who serves and has served Gibraltar and its people in an exceptional manner that is particularly worthy of recognition by this House on behalf of the people of Gibraltar in particular, in his representation of Gibraltar in the United Kingdom and amongst other UK Overseas Territories.'

570 Mr Speaker, Albert Poggio has served three Chief Ministers of Gibraltar, starting with the Hon. Mr Bossano, spending fifteen and a half years with the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana and now has been working under my Administration for the better part of two and a half years.

Mr Speaker, in debates in this House I have indicated that as far as I am concerned Albert Poggio can continue to serve the people of Gibraltar for as long as he wishes and it is my pleasure that he should do so because the work that he has done since he was entrusted by the Hon. Joe Bossano, with the representation of Gibraltar in the United Kingdom, has been second to none.

Mr Poggio is unfortunately getting advanced in years and he looks much better than he ages, because his age is now 70 or almost 70 – those who are almost 70 are very insistent that they are not yet 70, but 70, I understand, is the next birthday – and we therefore unfortunately may find that Albert himself tells us that he does not want to continue representing Gibraltar with the level of energy that he has been showing until now. Therefore it is hugely fitting that we should start the process of recognising the work that he has done.

He has already an OBE from Her Majesty the Queen, but there is a more fundamental aspect to this motion perhaps than there has been in respect of some of the others and it is this that when the time came to mount the campaign for Gibraltar to continue to be British, facing a joint sovereignty threat from the United Kingdom and Spain where the relationship between the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom and the Prime Minister of Spain became so close that they thought that they could do a deal over the heads of the people of Gibraltar, of course things had to be done by Gibraltarian politicians, which included a referendum which included a huge amount of work outside of Gibraltar. Only yesterday we were talking about the cost in lobbying etc at that time, but the relationships that Albert Poggio had built between 1988 and 2002-03 with representatives in the House of Commons and in the House of Lords became the key factor in politically stopping joint sovereignty short of the final say, which the people of Gibraltar had in the referendum, that stopped the whole idea in its tracks.

And recognition by the Sovereign of the work that he has done is therefore important and he has it; but in particular recognition by the people of Gibraltar of the role that he played in that campaign for the Government of the day, I think is long overdue. It is I think impossible to imagine that Gibraltar could have achieved what it achieved if we had not had that fire power in the Commons and in the House of Lords that Albert Poggio represented then and represents now and I hope will continue to represent for many years in the future.

If we had a House of Lords then I certainly would be putting Albert Poggio in it. He moves within the House of Lords and within the House of Commons with its senior Members just like a duck in water and, Mr Speaker, it is quite something to see. It will probably be very few people beyond higher office holding Gibraltarian politicians who see that because... for those of us who get to access the Commons and the Lords with Albert, but it is quite something to see a Chancellor, to see a Prime Minister and to see any other Minister of the UK Crown or an ex Minister immediately recognise Albert Poggio as Albert, and say, ‘Hi Albert, how are you doing? Who is that bloke who is with you?’ Like the old joke of somebody standing next to the Pope and someone saying, ‘Who is that standing next to Danny?’ for example. (Laughter)

Well, Mr Speaker that is the sort of recognition that Albert Poggio has in the Commons and in the Lords. The Chief Minister of Gibraltar is very well recognised in Gibraltar, but walk down the corridor of the Commons with Albert Poggio or down the corridor of the Lords with Albert Poggio and you become the bloke that is standing next to Albert, and that recognition by Members of the Commons and the Lords of Albert is a recognition of Gibraltar. It is a recognition therefore of the work that he has done and of the importance of the work that he has done. It demonstrates in my view that Joe Bossano was absolutely right to entrust him with the job, that Peter Caruana was absolutely right to entrust him with the job. I know that towards the end there were issues there, but I am right to continue to entrust him with the job and it is why I would like to see Albert continue to do this work for as long as he wishes and as long as he is able.

And it is important that in this case, not just Albert know that the people of Gibraltar recognise the work that he has done, but that the rest of the world realise that the people of Gibraltar recognise the work that Albert has done and continues to do for Gibraltar.

620 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, the Opposition again will be supporting the motion and I have to say, because we are all in such a convivial mood and such a forgiving mood, that I forgive Albert for retweeting a tweet from the hon. Gentleman, the Chief Minister, and I quote:

‘Brilliant Joe Bossano reminds the House GSD called him “an economic illiterate”. So much for “statesmanship” from the GSD... Same Old GSD.’

Mr Speaker, it was a retweet by the Hon. Albert Poggio, but as I say we are supporting this motion and we forgive him for doing so, Mr Speaker.

625 Mr Speaker, Albert Poggio is somebody that I have known for many, many, many years in a personal capacity, not quite since I wore short pants, as the Hon. the Father of the House always wants to remind me, 630 but certainly when I was a young barrister in Manchester and I had to travel to London to appear in the Royal Courts of Justice. I always, always used to pop in to the Gibraltar office in the Strand and he would always update me about the situation in Gibraltar. We would talk about politics and about the issues that were affecting Gibraltar. He was always extremely, extremely well informed and he was, in my view, very, very patriotic about Gibraltar. He is somebody that not only is doing a job, but he feels the job too. He feels what he is doing and he puts his heart and he puts his soul into his job.

635 The Hon. the Chief Minister said that his work has been, in relation to the joint sovereignty, was second to none. I think that politicians apart and certainly leaving aside the contribution that was made by the hon. the backbencher, then Chief Minister, Sir Peter Caruana, that shall forever go down in history as one of the most courageous, intelligent defences of Gibraltar ever in the history of this community, and I think that for a non-politician he is probably right, that no non-politician did more to assist Gibraltar in that campaign than Albert Poggio, because the relationships and the contacts that he developed in the United Kingdom were second to none.

640 And if the Chief Minister... and I do not know I have not spoken to Mr Poggio about this. I do not know what his personal feelings are about continuing or not continuing, I have not discussed it with him, but if the Chief Minister can persuade Mr Poggio to remain to do the job that he is doing and to continue to serve Gibraltar in the United Kingdom, I think that it would be an important step for Gibraltar, because I do think that he plays a pivotal role in what he is doing currently and what he has done indeed going back to the 1990s, for all the reasons that the Hon. the Chief Minister has outlined.

645 So I have no hesitation, Mr Speaker, in supporting this motion.

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute?

650 The Hon. Mr Bossano.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Well, Mr Speaker, the next time I see Albert when he comes to Gibraltar, probably sometime next week or the week after, I shall have to tell him that he ought to know better at the age of 70 than to go around tweeting! (Laughter) I do not tweet. I leave that to youngsters, who will eventually grow out of it.

655 Albert actually was involved in doing something important for Gibraltar well before he was involved in the Gibraltar office, because he was involved during the siege years in organising travel arrangements with chartered aircraft between Gibraltar and UK. He had a lobby already, which he organised, of London-based Gibraltarians, who were constantly going round – as we were doing, for example, in the London branch of the integration party – going round ensuring that wherever there was somebody speaking about Gibraltar anywhere, there was always a group of Gibraltarian to intervene or heckle the guy or whatever was required to redress the situation.

660 When we came in we thought that it was important for Gibraltar to have more than the tourist office, which is what it used to be before. I recruited Albert at zero pay, as the House would expect me to – (Laughter and interjections) Zero pay. He came into the office and he gave it the political content that the office needed and he actually converted what was already there, which had been started by the AACR. As you know, Mr Speaker, initially with people in the Labour Party, who were close to George Jeger and us, people like that, who were the initial lobbyists in the House of Commons, but he actually made it a much more professional lobby. He gave them much more support, in terms of feeding them information which we wanted them to be aware of from London, and in effect the Gibraltar lobby, the Friends of Gibraltar in the United Kingdom Parliament in the Lords and in the Commons, I think became and continues to be the best organiser and the most powerful lobby that there is in terms of any dependent territory and sometimes in terms of other interest groups that have got a declared lobbying function there.

675 Everybody recognises that if anybody in the United Kingdom starts toying with the idea of behaving in a way which is detrimental to Gibraltar's interest, that lobby can be mobilised at short notice and has a lot of support within both Houses of Parliament beyond those who are individual Members – well beyond. They have proved it by their ability to call for motions and for the participation that has been in debate. All that work is the result of Albert's involvement. If Albert had not been involved in moving from having a tourist office to having in effect a High Commission with him as the High Commissioner, then [de facto, it not de jure] then we would not have been able to mobilise the support in Parliament that we have been able to and that it is there and I think the most important thing in terms of Albert at some stage deciding to pass the mantle on to somebody else. I have advised him that he should stay there with me until we are both 90, but he still has not given me an answer.

680 But the important thing is of course that this transfer and these contacts and this knowledge cannot happen with somebody finishing on Friday and somebody else starting in on Monday. It is as simple as that. So there has to be and there is a need to have somebody that has a lot of learning to do from Albert and a lot of involvement in the personal contact. What Albert can do in Parliament he can do, not because he is the representative in London of Gibraltar, but because he has developed a personal relationship with MPs and 690 he continues to do it every time there is an Election when new MP's come in and others go, and the ones that stop being MPs continue to support us within their involvement in the political parties in the United Kingdom. So it is a lobbying function that has been there from the day that Albert took over in the Strand and continues to grow in strength.

695 And therefore he deserves this and much more than this, but the job that he has done in Gibraltar initially ex gratia and eventually paid (Laughter) can only be paid by the affection that the people of Gibraltar have for him. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

700 I rise again to take the opportunity because I do not want the occasion to go without being recorded that Albert Poggio also made his services always available to the trade union movement. Sometimes successes or failures from trade unions can end up having political consequences, so I think Albert saw his role in the biggest and widest sense of the word.

705 I am very grateful to Albert and I concur completely with the Chief Minister. I have had the privilege of walking into Westminster with Albert Poggio, and yes, one can only remain shocked at the way... I even at some stage thought that Mr Speaker might even stand up in the Chamber to say good morning to Albert. He does have that ability, that charm, that personality, that sincerity, that gift of being able to get along with everyone. He is at a personal level a very generous man as well. He will not let you go off without ensuring that you have had a meal and so on and if he is around he would even contribute. I do not know how on earth he manages it, but he certainly gave us a very good lunch that someone paid for, and so I am grateful for that, Albert.

710 But, yes, on behalf of all those of us who have been involved with the trade union world, we must record as well our grain of gratitude towards Albert and the contributions that he has made in facilitating our lobbying when needed in the United Kingdom.

715 Mr Speaker: The Hon. Albert Isola.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. Albert Isola): Mr Speaker, I have had the pleasure of working with Albert in a number of different ways over these past 20 years and I have got to know him and I consider him a very good friend.

720 I think that what Albert has done for Gibraltar, not just in the lobbying sense as my hon. Friends, the Chief Minister and the Father of the House have so eloquently described, which is of huge importance, but he has also done much more than that of course. He has assisted commercially. Only some two months ago he arranged a meeting for me to meet and brief a whole group, a huge group of Parliamentarians in the Deputy Speaker's Office on the gaming situation. I know he has worked at the Chamber of Commerce and I know he has obviously worked, as has been mentioned, in the tourism sector, but he has also done a huge amount for Calpe House and for those Gibraltarians who are in need of the help and assistance when visiting London at such a difficult time, he has always been there for each and every one of them and I think that is also worthy of merit.

730 Mr Speaker, I associate myself with the comments. I think Albert is an exceptional Gibraltarian who has given us all exceptional service and it is absolutely right and proper that we should commend him for that work.

Thank you Mr Speaker. (Banging on desks)

735 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am even more delighted to be moving this motion now that I know that Albert knows a good tweet when he sees it and retweets it, even if other tweets might be disappointed. (Laughter)

But the hon. Member opposite has on his twitter feed, the following:

740 'Leader of the GSD and H M Opposition Gibraltar, partner of Hassans. Any retweets are not to be taken as an endorsement of the views expressed.'

So by his own measure it may be that Albert was not entirely supporting what I had suggested and he might assuage his conscience in that way.

745 I am delighted, Mr Speaker, that Albert Poggio looked after him when he went to see him in London in those days when he was a barrister in the United Kingdom and no doubt also treated him to a great lunch as he does all of us when we have been to London to see him, whether or not in Government, as Mr Reyes has confirmed. In those days obviously he was receiving him as a staunch supporter of the GSLP, no doubt in those years when he was a barrister in the United Kingdom, but Albert treats us all the same whatever partisan affiliation we may have.

750 Mr Speaker, I said that Albert Poggio had coordinated efforts in London under the Government at the time. I was not pretending that it should be otherwise, but of course I cannot associate myself with the remarks that the hon. Gentleman made about that time. Sir Joshua Hassan played an important role, a hugely important role in Gibraltar's history when the Frontier was closed and strategising and getting us through that time was equally important. I mean for goodness sake, General Elliott was hugely important in 755 the defence of Gibraltar at the Great Siege. I do not know that I am prepared to accept that the hon. the backbencher had the same effect, but anyway...

Mr Speaker, I am also delighted to have heard this morning that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition agrees with me that Albert Poggio should continue to do this work for as long as we are able to persuade him that he should, given that I put him back in the role when I was elected, because he had been removed 760 from it, and I am delighted to have taken that step. I am vindicated by what the hon. Gentleman has said during the course of the more acrimonious debate that we have had on the Appropriation Bill. I have been able to show that from having been unfit to govern, the hon. now the backbencher considers that he can congratulate me for the economic performance of the Government and that I have confounded my critic in respect of that.

I am therefore delighted that my greatest critic today, as democracy requires, the Leader of the Opposition, agrees with one of my decisions, which was to put Albert Poggio back into the role from which he had been removed by the hon. the backbencher and I am grateful to the Hon. Mr Bossano for having reminded us of the work that Albert Poggio does with the Overseas Territories, because in the same way as he strides as a Colossus through the Palace of Westminster, he is a Colossus also in the Overseas Territories 770 world. He is the longest standing of the UK representatives and the most experienced of the UK representatives. Other UK representatives of the Overseas Territories look to him. He has really exemplified what the role of a UK representative of one of the Overseas Territories should be to such an extent... and it was an issue that the Hon. Mr Bossino, who is absent from the Chamber at the moment – I am sorry I am going to speak about this in his absence – picked up, that on one occasion Mr Poggio had 775 been referred to as 'His Excellency', which is the moniker that is used to describe Ambassadors and High Commissioners in the UK, and Albert portrays the importance of Gibraltar in the United Kingdom to such an extent that people consider him to be an Ambassador and refer to him as such.

Mr Speaker, Gibraltar House was bought... the present Gibraltar House was bought under the previous Administration and the role that Albert Poggio played in obtaining that property was huge. This 780 Government at the time from Opposition supported that acquisition, if not the style and manner of its internal decoration, but we certainly supported the acquisition. We think it was an excellent acquisition to make and it stands as an important investment for Gibraltar and a very good shop window of what Gibraltar is today.

785 Hon. D A Feetham: Will you give way?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, let me finish. I will give way before I finish.

And, Mr Speaker, the important role that Albert Poggio has played in respect of Calpe House also cannot be understated in any way and I am very grateful to Mr Isola for having reminded the House of that.
790 I think it is important to say that he has not just played a role in Calpe House in the past. He is playing today a hugely important role in the developments that Calpe House is seeing in the improvement of the service, but this is exactly the sort of thing that one associates with Albert Poggio.

Whether it is the Chief Minister of Gibraltar that arrives in London for meetings with the Foreign Secretary or the Prime Minister or it is a citizen who arrives in London, low and not looking forward to 795 medical treatment and having to go through a difficult time in their lives, Albert Poggio is there in equal measure for all of us and that is the measure of the man.

The hon. Member wanted to say something, so I will allow him to do so now.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is not true to say that the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana when he was 800 Chief Minister removed Albert Poggio from the political role and the lobbying role – that is simply not the case. What he did was – (Interjection) No, he sent an office manager to deal with the administrative side, but he continued with the political lobbying and the political side, which is effectively what this House is actually saying Mr Poggio does best, because his contacts in those areas are second to none. I just wanted to make that position clear.
805

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker that is not true.

What happened was that Albert Poggio was removed from his role as political representative of Gibraltar. Somebody else was sent in his place and it eventually became clear that only Mr Poggio could be 810 political representative. Mr Speaker, this happened very shortly before we were elected and given that the hon. Member wants to refer to it, there was a blazing row at No 6 Convent Place. It really descended into something which was not edifying at all for a Chief Minister to have done, which was not uncommon at the time. Unfortunately he has opened the door. People were shouted at and screamed at and Albert Poggio was 815 shouted at and screamed at and he was sacked. Thereafter, Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister thought again and instead of sacking him changed what he was doing in London and sent somebody to do his job. But nobody can do the job that Albert Poggio has done in the way that Albert Poggio has done it and therefore,

 Mr Speaker, I was delighted to be able to reinstate him and I am very grateful that the hon. Member got up and said what he said so that I could...

820 He has opened the door. I would not otherwise have gone down, but it gave me great pleasure to put Albert Poggio back from where he had been removed wrongly by the Hon. then the Chief Minister, and the record reflects all of this and I am sure that there are memos and notes that reflect it.

Mr Speaker, Mr Poggio unfortunately at the time felt very hard done by and even had to instruct solicitors at the time.

825 But the truth prevails, Mr Speaker, and right prevails. We won the Election and we put him back where he should be, which is where he is today and where I hope he will stay for as long as he is able and now we recognise properly everything that he has already done and I am sure will continue to do, but the truth shines through. (Banging on desks)

830 Mr Speaker: May I say that on two occasions when my wife and I have had occasion to visit the United Kingdom in rather difficult circumstances, I immediately received, on both occasions, a telephone call from Mr Poggio making himself available should I need his assistance, and that I think is an indication of the kind of person that he is. I am very happy to be associated with the comments that have been made.

I therefore put the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister. All in favour?
 (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

835 Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my

(1) Mr Ernest Lima, for services to public health, in recognition of his pivotal role in the establishment of the Gibraltar Health Authority and its administration and functioning over 25 years;

 Self-Determination for Gibraltar Group and in particular the work done to establish the celebration of National Day on 10th September each year;*

(3) Mr Fortunato Azopardi, also known as Forty Mr Speaker, for work he has done as a founder member of the Self-Determination for Gibraltar Group, as a result of his commitment to the application now annual Gibraltar Fair;

(4) *Ms Adelaide Canessa MBE for services to education and having worked tirelessly in the education 840 Mr Speaker, we are dealing now with the Gibraltar Medallion of Distinction. The Medallion of Distinction is in the hierarchy of honours below the Medallion of Honour.

In some instances, Mr Speaker, there are people who are worthy of recognition, who are not recognised with the Honours from Her Majesty that one might consider is appropriate for them, because of course although we are a thriving community of 30,000 people, Mr Speaker, it is not the case that there are simply honours that one can pick for those that deserve them that we can then see bestowed upon them.

845 The number of honours available, 'State Honours' available as they are known, is spread in the United Kingdom and throughout the Overseas Territories and therefore Gibraltar's quota is a very small amount. There may be a very worthy recipient who does not receive a State Honour because unfortunately the quota is not there and the person that does receive it may not be more worthy than the person who does not, although all would be equally worthy of receiving them.

850 The previous Administration prepared for the House these two Medallions – the Medallion of Honour and the Medallion of Distinction – so that they could be used in appropriate circumstances. We think that the list of people that we have brought to the House is a list of people who deserve that recognition, and the fact that they deserve recognition does not mean that others do not deserve recognition who we will bring to the House for the House's consideration in future.

855 Mr Speaker, each of these has a small citation. I could speak on all of them for a very long time. I do not intend to do so. I think everybody knows who the people we are dealing with here are, and therefore I would simply say that each of them is in the view of the Government worthy of this Medallion of Distinction for the work that they have done, which is reflected in the paragraphs that follows in respect of each.

860 Mr Speaker, I am happy to say if the hon. Member at some stage in the future wishes to have Government support for others that he might think are also worthy of recognition, he only needs to notify me. There are people in our community that reach different Members of this Parliament in order to be able to put suggestions to us. I formally say today to the public within the same way as they are invited to make 865 any of the media of communication that people can use to contact me, whether it be by snail mail, i.e. a letter, or a more modern use of technology, they should feel free to get in touch with my office if they believe that somebody is worthy of nomination for the Gibraltar Medallion of Distinction or indeed the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour.

870 Mr Speaker, I do not intend to say anything else about the individuals as set out in this motion. Each of them I think has a citation that demonstrates that they are worthy recipients of recognition by this Parliament by the bestowing of the Gibraltar Medallion of Distinction.

875 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is the last opportunity that I have of rising today, and perhaps before I –

A Member: There is another motion.

Hon. D A Feetham: Is there another motion? Well, I will say it now in any event.

880 Mr Speaker, certainly I hope that I speak for all Members of the House in wishing the Clerk a happy birthday for tomorrow. I know that it is his birthday tomorrow and Jaime Netto's birthday today, and I wanted to mention that before I get one last opportunity.

Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister has said that there are other people who are equally as worthy of receiving recognition for this community, I agree. I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister for his indication that he will take those on board.

885 I think that there are some worthy recipients. For example, in relation to the Medallion of Honour, I think that Mr Joe Pitaluga, who was Chief Secretary for many, many, many years and one of the greatest civil servants that Gibraltar has ever produced, is somebody who is worthy of that particular recognition. (Banging on desks) and I hope that that is something that the Chief Minister perhaps will take on board the next time that these Honours are also bestowed.

890 In relation to this particular honour, the Gibraltar Medallion of Distinction, William Serfaty, for example, who was one of the founders of the SDGG, and not only one of the founders, but he is the first member of the Self-Determination Group that actually addressed the United Nations, I think that I am right in saying – the Hon. the Father of the House can correct me if I am wrong – and over 10 years he was Chairman of that organisation.

895 Dr Leslie Zammit I think is also worthy of recognition posthumously. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) Mr Robert Balban for youth and charity. Dr Rene Beguelin for medicine and diabetes charities.

900 And indeed, despite the fact that I am often at the end of not his waspish tongue, but certainly his waspish pen, the father of the Hon. of the Deputy Chief Minister, Joe Garcia for services rendered to journalism. And indeed, I think that Dominic Searle the Editor of the Gibraltar Chronicle. Those are the ones that come to mind and perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister can bear those in mind the next time that he comes to focus on these issues.

Mr Speaker, I am not going to talk about all of these. I note the citation. We will be voting in favour of this motion and I would like to just simply highlight a couple of these.

905 Melvyn Farrell for example, I think that... I am extremely glad that the Hon. the Chief Minister has brought this motion in respect of Melvyn Farrell. I foreshadowed something myself when I addressed the House on the occasion of Melvyn's retirement as Clerk of the House. I really cannot think of anybody who is more worthy of this particular distinction than Melvyn Farrell, somebody who has served Gibraltar, and indeed this House, for many, many years.

910 Lionel Perez is somebody that I hold in high personal esteem. He was my drama teacher for many, many, many years. I think he was the only person in the world that has forced me to wear tights, Mr Speaker, (Laughter) but I do not hold it against him. I still remember his words ringing in my ear, [niño te voy dar una piña] He used to say to me [niño te voy dar una piña] He was an excellent, excellent, excellent teacher, excellent teacher, and I have to say that somebody whom even still today I really enjoy sitting down and talking to and exchanging opinions, very worthy indeed of this distinction.
915 Those really are the only two that I wish to simply perhaps give a special mention because in Mr Perez's case, he was a teacher, one of my favourite teachers at the Boys Comprehensive, and Melvyn Farrell because of the high esteem that everybody in this House holds Mr Farrell.

920 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the words of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, and indeed with the introduction of the motion by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

I would also associate myself in particular with what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said in relation to Mr Joe Pitaluga. There has been a lot of reference to the sterling work which has been undertaken and discharged by another senior civil servant, in Mr Montado, but I think it has to be recognised on this side of the House and I am sure it will not be controversial on the other side of the House 925 to also particularly recognise the sterling work undertaken by Mr Joe Pitaluga when he was Head of the Civil Service before Mr Montado. I think Mr Montado was Mr Joe Pitaluga's successor. And for many, many years, spanning many Chief Ministers, but in particular Sir Joshua Hassan.

I think the Hon. the Chief Minister when he was referring to Mr Montado made a reference to Mr Montado's visits to the UK in relation to the Brussels process and then Brussels Agreement.
930 Mr Joe Pitaluga's work in relation to that I think also has to be recognised and acknowledged. He was an extremely hard worker. I have heard anecdotal references of the light in his office at Secretary's Lane flickering away and being on for many hours in the night and he was also a highly intelligent man, and I think that ought to be recognised in a motion at some point in the future by everybody in this House.

Mr Speaker, I, like the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, wish to make a reference to some of those 935 individuals who are listed in the motion before us. By mentioning them I wish not to exclude anybody and I hope that they do not take it badly if I do not mention them particularly by name, but I mention them because they have had either an influence in my life or I have got to know them over the years.

The Hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned Mr Perez as being influential when he was at school. I would make a reference to Mr Kevin Dobson in particular. As the Hon. the Chief Minister knows when we were in English class with him, I always have very fond memories of the debates that he would organise, 940 and there was one or two in particular which I am sure the Hon. the Chief Minister will immediately recall, and unless I am mistaken – and the Hon. the Father of the House will be glad to hear this – I think I participated in that debate either as Chief Minister or perhaps as leader of the Opposition, but as leader of a GSLP Government or a GSLP Opposition, whilst the Hon. the Chief Minister was... he was more of an establishment guy in those days and he led the AACR. No doubt he will recall who won the debate. I think I won the first one – he is nodding his head – and he may have won the second one. (Interjection) No, I do not think so. (Laughter) There is well – (Interjection and laughter) There was a recording (Interjection)
945 because if the Hon. the Chief Minister will recall Mr Dobson actually took his video camera to school and to class on that particular day and recorded the proceedings. Goodness knows where that may be now, but I wanted to make special reference to that. A reference to the motion which says that, 'for having left a lasting legacy in the education of generations of Gibraltarian men', and I am sure that both the Chief Minister and I can vouch for that.
950

I also wish to associate myself with what the Leader of the Opposition said in relation to Mr Melvyn Farrell. We have all said what we had to say in relation to him already, but I think a special mention on the occasion of this motion ought to be made. The man is in many, many respects and in more ways than one a gentleman. He has provided I think all of us with assistance in our endeavours whilst conducting our affairs in this House and I can certainly vouch for that personally, Mr Speaker.
955

Finally... or penultimately actually, I would like to make a reference to Mr Dennis Matthews, who I know personally as a friend. I associate myself personally with the services that he has made to the people of Gibraltar, particularly in relation to his fighting the Self-Determination corner, which was started during the time that Mr Bossano, the Hon. the Father of the House was Chief Minister. Again, one of those gentlemen who does not look his age and still finds the energy and the time to write those speeches and travel all the way to New York as he has done recently on two occasions. I think that ought to be quite rightly recognised by the Members of this House.
960

Finally, Mr Speaker, a very special mention I think ought to be made of Mr Elio Victor for his services to young people in Gibraltar, and of course Mr Victor was also a candidate – if it is the Mr Victor I am thinking of, and I think I am right in that – with the GMP with me in the 1996 General Elections. The Hon. the Chief Minister and indeed the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister who led that party in those Elections will recall the fun I think that we had in particular... oh yes, and the Hon. the Minister for Sports, absolutely.
965 The fun I think that we had during the course of that campaign.
970

I remember very vividly when we thought that we were going to get at least the Leader of the party into the House and the opinion poll suggested that we could. In the event it did not happen. I think we all received a shock when we saw the results of the exit poll, which were accurate in the event, and we achieved less than 5% of the vote.
975

But despite the very disappointing result, Mr Victor was always there as a source of good fun, good advice and just really a good chap indeed. And I do welcome the fact that Mr Victor features in this motion. I am grateful.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker?

980 Mr Speaker: Mr Edwin Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

985 If I may, I am very glad that the Chief Minister in presenting this motion has nominated persons from a very wide range and different type of contributions and activities in the community, and particularly pleased, as I am sure is the Minister for Sport, that there are good and very worthwhile sports personalities nominated on this, above all, Mr Speaker, because I do not think we will have another opportunity. In the same way that we have got the Father of the House, the Father of the Commonwealth Games, Charles Flower, is nominated here, and that prompts us I think to call upon this House to unanimously wish the best of Gibraltarian luck to all our worthy sports men and sports women (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) who will be representing us in Scotland in the forthcoming Games.

990 Also, Mr Speaker I know that the Chief Minister has to keep the citations succinct and so on, but I have to mention that in respect of the educational list, there is something that at least in my personal professional life as a teacher should also be recorded. Mr Julio Alcantara as the first Gibraltarian Director of Education had the uneasy task of implementing in Gibraltar the National Curriculum that had been introduced in the UK. I am sure the Hon. Steven Linares joins me as well in thanking Mr Alcantara in the way that he handled that and discussed that with us in the trade union movement, because what we did was we actually cherry picked what we thought was best to ensure that our children received a good education, but we did not fall into the trap of what later on they learnt in the UK were the mistakes of all these league tables and so on and so glad that alongside Mr Alcantara, who had also been involved in implementing what we called in the trade union world the 'Baker Agreement', the 'Blue Book', all those different terms that were used for the implementation of new pay and conditions, Mr Alcantara had to oversee that, the changing of a certain number of working days and so on, and he was very ably supported and we had no problems in entering negotiations with the then Headmistress of Westside School, affectionately known to us as Lally, Lally Canessa was there and of course my other personal friend Dr Bernard Linares at Bayside School. So I am really grateful, Mr Speaker, that the Chief Minister found it fit to recognise these people and in the record it will show that they also had a particular contribution to make to the introduction of both the national curriculum and the new terms and conditions for teachers.

Thank you.

1010 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the opportunity to rise to just add my two pence worth to the discussion on the motion, and in particular in relation... I associate myself of course with all the comments of hon. Members present in relation to all those on the list certainly, but I would like to just add a couple of comments in respect of a couple or three of them.

1015 Starting with Mr Fortunato Azopardi, obviously a man for whom I have close personal affection and whom I also understand, and it may well be common knowledge, but I certainly only learnt it this morning, that he was indeed the originator of the idea of the 30,000 red and white balloons being deployed on National Day – (Interjection) from what I understand, yes – and which, of course, depending on the prevailing winds on any given National Day would have sent the community's message really very loudly and very clearly to precisely the people in a very targeted fashion that we would otherwise prefer to ignore such strongly held local sentiment.

1020 In relation to the former Clerk of the Parliament, Mr Melvyn Farrell, I had the opportunity of only a short year and a half or two of working with him, but I was always very grateful to him for always being happy to provide guidance and assistance, despite the differences that there may have been in relation to the posing of questions and whether those are accepted or otherwise. He was always the messenger and I tried my hardest not to be the one to shoot him.

1025 Finally, Mr Speaker I am gratified personally as well to see Mr Christian Santos on the list, a person with whom I have had the opportunity over many years of sharing the stage and like other Members, I am sure, being entertained by the very original and the very entertaining works which he has brought to this community.

1030 I would also like to take the opportunity of specifically to record on Hansard that I associate myself with the wish expressed by my Hon. and Learned Friend the Leader of the Opposition in relation to our wish, and my personal wish as well, that Dr Leslie Zammit be recognised by the Hon. the Chief Minister. As a person who I spent many, many summers working in the Bayside drama studio to deliver annual plays, which were frankly a significant part of my teenage years here in this community and make up for a lot of who I am today, and that certainly is something I wish to record. He was taken tragically too soon, depriving this community of so much more that I am sure he would have been able to (A Member: Hear, hear.) contribute. I therefore just want to place on record that he would certainly be a worthy recipient and certainly an honour that I am certain his wife Olga would be only too proud to hear of his receipt of.

1040 That concludes my contribution. Thank you. (Banging on desks)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker I am grateful for the indications from the hon. Members that they will be supporting this motion.

Can I just say to them, Mr Joe Pitaluga already has the Gibraltar Medallion of Honour. I am surprised that Mr Netto, Mr Reyes and Mr Feetham have forgotten. We actually bestowed it in 2008 (Interjection) on Mr Pitaluga for all of the reasons that Members opposite have said. It was unanimous and so we have in effect re-run that debate and it has been a pleasure to hear. (Laughter and interjections)

But anyway, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has given us a list of people who we associate ourselves with the things that he has said. Many of them are already or were already on the Deputy Chief Minister's running list for December. I have given an indication to the Leader of the Opposition, which I am happy to give to the whole community, that I intend to bring these motions both in June and in December... or rather in July when we have the July session, and in December and the names they have mentioned I think absent, one or two of them were already on our list and so it is a pleasure to see that we will be able to see them unanimously supported.

William Serfaty, I have always got on with very well as a member of the SDGG and the Hon. Leader of the Opposition is right, he is the first Chairman of the SDGG to have addressed the UN. The reason we did not move on this occasion that he be included is because Mr Matthews has indicated that he is leaving the Chairmanship of the SDGG and we are therefore honouring him on this occasion, but Mr Serfaty will be honoured by us on the next occasion.

Mr Leslie Zammit has been mentioned and Mr Zammit, who unfortunately passed away very early in his retirement, was Deputy Headmaster of Bayside whilst I was there. (Interjection) Well, in the time I was there he was Deputy Headmaster. He is to a very great extent responsible for my having been able to access Oxford University, because he organised for me all the exams I had to do, outside of the run of the normal organisation of the school, and if it had not been for him in his position and the manner that he organised them, I do not think I would have been able to do those examinations. I remember it was unfortunate that I had to do three entrance papers and they were all scheduled for the same time on the same day and therefore the only alternative I had was to sit the three of them one after the other and do nine hours. And if I may say so, figuratively, he held my hand through that period, which was also a period when construction was going on at Bayside School and therefore it was a particularly difficult time and he was extraordinarily helpful to me personally, and therefore they find me very happy to support the proposal that Leslie Zammit be honoured in this way.

Mr Speaker, the Government will amongst others also be proposing that Ralph Heskett be bestowed the Medallion of Distinction. He leaves us this weekend, having been our Bishop, and he is therefore going to be one of the names we move after he has left.

Mr Jose Netto, who has an important role to play in the history of trade unionism in Gibraltar will also (Interjection) Sorry? You are right. He has got the Honour, not the Distinction.

So, Mr Speaker, there is a list of people in this community who have not been recognised because of the absence of State Honours, or enough State Honours in the way that we think is appropriate and therefore we will certainly be moving that they receive this Distinction.

Mr Speaker, of those who are being bestowed these Honours, I did not intend to say anything more than the paragraph said, but Members opposite have said something and I want to associate myself with the things they have said about the people they have said it.

Melvyn Farrell, Mr Speaker, was at No. 6 Convent Place an important tool in what a Chief Minister did until 1996 when he was moved and No. 6's gain was our loss eventually when he came to this Parliament and he therefore started to fulfil an important function here. As the present Clerk will know now, they are at the heart of our democracy. They are at the heart of our political battles. They have to steer a very difficult course between both sides, and all Clerks have... and Mr Melvyn Farrell did of course steer that course very carefully and very elegantly so that we all felt that we could confide in him when necessary.

Mr Speaker, Kevin Dobson has a place very close in my heart, as he does in the heart of the hon. Gentleman opposite. He prepared us for this life that we lead today with his instruction in the language. It is unfortunate that the hon. Member has blacked out that I beat him in all of those debates (Interjection) when the hands went up and that he has not yet beat me in any Election that we have stood for, even if it is just an argument over a constitution when we were aged 16. I hope that will continue for many years and Kevin would be very happy to see us – (Interjection) Kevin would be very happy to see us having this argument today, because I know he held us both in great affection, as he did everybody who he taught.

Mr Speaker, Lionel Perez taught in a different less gentle way (Laughter) but just as effective. I was very pleased to hear the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition say that he remembered Mr Perez threatening him with a [piña] Mr Speaker, I suppose because he is taller than Mr Perez, he remembers Mr Perez threatening him with a [piña] Those of us who were about his same height remember the [piña] (Laughter and banging on desks) and a very, very important part of our education it was too, Mr Speaker. I do not know that he would get away with it today, but that probably accounts for why kids are such a riot these days. If Lionel Perez had his way, we would all be back on the straight and narrow, whatever our ages.

Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to hear that the hon. Gentleman recognises the importance of the release of balloons on National Day. There are environmental issues that we have to consider for the future unfortunately, but I am very pleased that he has understood what that signal means.

1105 I was I think 19 years old when I was in the lobby of this place on the first National Day having been called up by Marielou Guerrero having been in a few meetings of the SDGG already, to come down early to start inflating balloons on the day that this was first done. When there was no red and white organised other than I think the Chief Minister or one of the Members of the SDGG having said on television, ‘Tomorrow is the 10th September. We will be releasing balloons. It would be good if people wore red and white’, and it was quite incredible to see the flood of red and white that emerged. We thought we might just see the girls from Westside wearing burgundy and white, but actually the whole of Gibraltar turned out with some aspect of red and white on that day, which was not a holiday, just with a red tie and a white shirt and the like.

1110 It was the then Chief Minister, Mr Bossano, who declared the holiday as the result of the enormous success of what the SDGG had done on that day and I am very pleased that we are able together to recognise that and I hope that even on the days when they have not attended the political rally at Casements, they have happily seen the balloons send the message quite where it has to be sent.

1115 Mr Speaker, all of these people are worthy of this recognition and I am delighted that the House will Honour them unanimously. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Suspension of Standing Order 19 –
Motion carried

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

‘That this House approves pursuant to Standing Order 59 the suspension of Standing Order 19, but only to the extent that at least five days, exclusive of Saturdays, Sundays and public holidays, notice is required of a motion which has been notified by the Hon. the Chief Minister on 2nd July 2014 and circulated by the Clerk on 2nd July 2014.’

1130

Mr Speaker: This is just a procedural motion. Does any Member wish to contribute?

I propose a question in the terms of the motion moved by the Chief Minister, and I have to say it should be noted it is a procedural motion because it has not been possible to give the necessary number of days. (Interjection) I put the question?

I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

First World War –
Commemoration of 100th anniversary –
Motion carried

1135

Clerk: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move the motion standing in my name which reads as follows:

‘This House:

Notes that this year marks the 100th anniversary of the outbreak of the First World War;

Recalls the sacrifice made by the United Kingdom and the British Empire, including Gibraltar towards the War effort;

Recalls that the Bay of Gibraltar was an important assembly point for naval convoys during the First World War; and Takes note that the Memorial in the Lobby of Parliament remembers the role played by some Gibraltarians during that conflict, including the Battle of Bournon Wood. These are Lieutenant S Benzecry; Leopold Bossano; Joseph Gustavino; J Briggs; Lionel Harrison; Albert Jones; Edward Oliveri; A Wallace; Michael Pitman; Daniel Francis Piri; Harry Reading; Alfred J Ruggier; Andrew Ryan; Stewart Thomas and John Undery; and Hereby resolves to honour through this motion the memory of all those members of the Armed Forces and also those civilians who gave their lives in the service of their country during the First World War. '

Mr Speaker, as hon. Members know, there will be celebrations in Gibraltar to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the outbreak of the First World War.

1145

It was proposed to the Government, and the Government has accepted, that one of the things that should happen during the course of those celebrations is that a motion of this Parliament should be read, and this is the motion that we propose for the purposes of those further commemorations, including not just Ministry of Defence aspects and not just aspects from the Government of the United Kingdom, but also an aspect of representation of the people of Gibraltar through a motion of the legislature of Gibraltar, commemorating the role that some Gibraltarians played in that war, which is called the 'Great War', and which is being commemorated this year.

1150

Mr Speaker: I now propose the question in the terms of the motion moved by the Hon. the Chief Minister.

The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, we are delighted to support this motion, as indeed we would be delighted to support any motion that remembers all those who have not only made the ultimate sacrifice for their country and for their community, in this case Gibraltar, but have also contributed in some way to that, in this case the war effort on behalf of the community and therefore contributed to the existence and the enjoyment of liberty by everybody in this House and everybody within the community.

1160

I do not know how many of these, Mr Speaker, were casualties of the First World War. I do not know the history, but there could be fallen warriors amongst them that never came back to see their families and their friends; but even warriors that do not lose their lives in a war, everybody that participates in a war no doubt comes back touched by it. It must be horrendous. A horrendous way to spend part of your life being involved in that way in a war and quite frankly liberty is such a precious, precious, precious gift, that I think that anybody that contributes to the existence of liberty, in the way that these individuals and others have contributed, deserve that recognition.

1165

I am glad, Mr Speaker, that the Hon. the Chief Minister has focused on Gibraltarians, and not just the war effort generally in the First World War. I am not suggesting for one moment that it is not worthy of remembrance, but we have got our own people who have also contributed to that war effort and in that context I also note the comments made recently by Baroness Warsi, that the United Kingdom should also recognise not only the fallen British soldiers from mainland United Kingdom and those that contributed in the two Great Wars, but also the Commonwealth as well, and those that contributed from the Commonwealth to the United Kingdom, the British war effort and the existence of liberty in the United Kingdom and indeed Europe. People who came from the far flung corners of the world that may have had absolutely no connection to Europe or indeed the war in Europe.

Mr Speaker, I always on these... not occasions, but when one comes to consider remembering people who have fought in both World Wars, I always remember the poem by Laurence Binyon, the very well-known poem by Laurence Binyon for the Fallen, and indeed it is the last line of the Ode of Remembrance from that poem, which reads, 'We will remember them'. I think that that is what we are doing today in this motion. We will remember. We will remember not only those that have given their lives for this community, but indeed those who perhaps did not give their lives, but who went through that war effort so that we could have the liberty and enjoy the liberty and the democratic values and institutions that we enjoy today. For all those reasons, we are delighted, certainly on this side of the House, to support the motion.

1180

(Banging on desks)

1185

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to speak on the motion.

The Hon. Mr Bossano.

1190

Hon. D J Bossino: No, I give way to –

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the second name on the list is a Bossano – (Laughter) not a Bossino. (Laughter and interjection)

1195 I think one of the things that is significant about those who went to fight to defend King and Country is in fact that they were Gibraltarian volunteers. Like they came from other parts of the British Empire, the Gibraltarians were volunteers and in a way is what Gibraltarians have done or the ancestors of the Gibraltarians have done, because way back in the 18th century there was the Italian Contingent that defended Gibraltar against sieges and then subsequently there was the Gibraltar Defence Force, which eventually got the recognition that it deserved as a Regiment and then as the Royal Gibraltar Regiment.

1200 What we are doing here is recognising in one particular period in our history what a group of Gibraltarians were doing when the time came to step forward to defend the British Empire in the process of defending British Gibraltar at the same time, because clearly one would not subsist without the other. Certainly, in my own family, my father had 12 brothers and sisters, which was the kind of families that existed at the time of the First World War and I do not think he lasted very long after volunteering.

1205 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am glad he has made a reference to Leopold Bossano in that because I think actually it is that particular paragraph in the motion which for me certainly is perhaps the more poignant or important one, and it is the fact that there has been such a contribution to the war effort by Gibraltarians. This is the point, and the point was made by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition when he referred to what Baroness Warsi has said recently when she launched the project called the First World War the Commonwealth Contribution, Gibraltar as part of the Commonwealth did make a contribution to the First World War. Their names are there. Their names are on the memorial set out in the lobby of the Parliament and it is in fact one, which I was mentioning it to the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister as we were walking up before this session started, that that was particularly one of the acts during Armistice Day, which we celebrate in November, which we were always very keen to attend when it was less popular to do so. Everyone would go to the Cross of Sacrifice, but he and I would always make the point of coming here and laying the wreath at the lobby of the House because it was in recognition of the sacrifice made, whether by their lives or otherwise, by the Gibraltarian contingent.

1210 The Second World War, because it is closer in time and it in fact impacted directly in some cases... some Members of this House were impacted directly by it, but at least I think for most of us perhaps the exceptions may be the younger Members of the House, the Minister for Social Services and the Minister for Tourism may not fall under this category, but I think all of us will have had parents who were actually probably born during the Second World War.

1225 In relation to that point, just by way of anecdotal reference, the Hon. the Minister for Employment will recall when about four years ago I told him, and I think I sent him the information I had come across as a result of some research I was doing for a case and I had occasion to go to the Gibraltar Archives, and Mr Beiso very kindly pointed me to the direction of a box which contained the passenger lists of the ships which took the Gibraltarian evacuees.

1230 And just to delve... or to dwell rather on the Second World War for a moment, I came across this particular document, which refers to Ship D, the Athlone Castle, which set sail on 26th July 1940. Amongst that list there is a Jaime Bossino, who at the time was two years and five months and a Mary Padiña who at the time was one, those are my parents, my mother and my father. If you go further up the list where the Bossino surname features, one comes across a Joseph Bossano, who was one year old and one month and Theresa Bossano, who I assume was the hon. Member's late mother. So had that particular vessel been torpedoed successfully, neither a Bossino, nor a Bossano would have been present in this House today.

1235 A Member: No rainy day fund.

Hon. D J Bossino: No rainy day fund.

1240 In fact that point was made by Baroness Warsi when she launched this particular project and she made a reference to the fact that we all know about the Second World War. We would all have had fathers or grandfathers... she referred to them as the brave men who would have participated in it, but it is for that reason I am quoting from a speech she says:

1245 '... I have always known something of British India's role in that conflict. But for many years I was unaware of the role their fellow countrymen played 30 years earlier. The one and a half million from modern day India, Pakistan and Bangladesh who served, fought and fell for Britain in the Great War.'

1250 In the first World War... so I think it is absolutely right, Mr Speaker, that equally as Baroness Warsi has done in the United Kingdom, that us here in Gibraltar we should recognise the very valuable contribution made by Gibraltarians in particular to the Great War and we are very happy to be supporting this motion indeed.

Mr Speaker: If there is no other contributor, I will call upon the mover, the Chief Minister, to reply.

1255 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful for everything that everybody has said about this motion and in particular for the things that the Hon. Mr Bossino said about the Second World War, although we are dealing with the First World War, but I do appreciate that it does help to put things in context.

1260 Mr Speaker, the things that Baroness Warsi has said are going to be recognised in a Service of Remembrance organised in Glasgow on 4th August, which will be presided over by Prince Charles, and to which the Government of Gibraltar has been invited in recognition of the role played by Gibraltarians in respect of the First World War. So we are delighted to see that Gibraltar is going to be included amongst those recognised for inclusion on that important day where the whole world will be remembering from Glasgow what happened during the course of the Great War.

1265 Mr Speaker, I do not think there is more to add, except to tell the Hon. Mr Bossino that some of us have parents who were born during the First World War. My father was born in 1917 and he unfortunately passed away in 2010.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question in the terms of the motion proposed by the Hon. the Chief Minister. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

ADJOURNMENT

1270 Clerk: Adjournment.

1275 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, so fair and foul the session of Parliament there is not as the one that considers the Appropriation Bill, and then goes on to consider in unanimity measures, like the ones that we have considered this morning, we have argued, we have laughed and we have worked together on Bills and not worked together on much else.

Mr Speaker, it is now my pleasure to move that the House adjourn sine die, with a wish that all Members enjoy the summer break. We will see them again in September.

1280 Mr Speaker: I now propose the question, which is that this House do now adjourn sine die.
I now put the question that this House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.)
Those against? Passed.
This House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned sine die at 12.51. p.m.

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 9.15 a.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

PRAYER
Mr Speaker

Order of the Day

Clerk:(i) Oath of Allegiance.

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

Clerk: (ii) Confirmation of Minutes – the Minutes of the last meeting of Parliament, which was held on 25th and 30th June and 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th July 2014.

5 Mr Speaker: May I sign the minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

10 Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid – the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Refurbishment of antechamber

15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, before I start the process of laying various items on the table, can I just ask the House to reflect on the fact that the House has not met since June as a result of the works which have been carried out in the antechamber, which hon. Members will no doubt want to agree with me have greatly improved that area. We had hoped to return in September, but this was not possible because of the works affecting the sophisticated audio-visual equipment that is now installed for our live feeds.

20 Mr Speaker, I know that all Members will want to join me in crediting GJBS, as main contractor, who have carried out the works to meet a challenging deadline, to say the least. All their subcontractors in doing this work have been locally based, the House will be pleased to know. The refurbishment not only consisted of the upgrading of items of furniture and restoring of some other historic features, such as the fireplace and the window timber panels, but also saw a complete overhaul of the infrastructure to cater for today's demands, especially IT, which we do hope is working this morning after one or two tests yesterday.

25 Mr Speaker, importantly – and the Minister for the Environment will be pleased to note – the energy performance of the area has been improved with the introduction of more efficient air-conditioning systems and new lights, and new speakers, apparently.

Of course, it is also worth mentioning, Mr Speaker, your own and your staff's patience for having endured the inconvenience of being moved to alternative premises for much of the period of the works – but I trust that you will now enjoy the much improved environment.

Visit of Secretary of State for Defence, Rt. Hon. Michael Fallon

30 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I should also inform the House that late yesterday the Secretary of State for Defence arrived in Gibraltar for a short visit.

I shall be absenting myself from the Chamber shortly in order to meet with the Rt. Hon. Mr Fallon and will return as soon as possible after I have concluded my meetings with him to report to the House on the outcome of such meetings.

Good wishes to the Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond

35 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, finally, before I sit down, can I also ask the House to note that one of the chairs opposite is empty. Mrs Ellul-Hammond has been unwell and is unable – as we all now know, for health reasons – to join us this morning. I am sure all Members will want to join me in wishing her well and that her speedy recovery should bring her back amongst us as soon as possible.

40 I know, Mr Speaker, that from the outside it sometimes appears that Members are constantly at each other's throats and that there is little of the milk of human kindness between us, but what is also very, very true is that although we defend our ideas and our ideology to the best of our abilities in this place, when one of us is down, she or he has the solidarity, friendship and respect of all of us across the floor of the House. I do wish that she is back in this House with us as soon as possible. (Applause)

45 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition, the Opposition would like to associate itself entirely with everything that the Hon. the Chief Minister and Leader of the House has said. It was a matter that I was going to be raising in relation to Isobel Ellul-Hammond, and I am very grateful that the Chief Minister has done so on behalf of this House.

50 As someone who – and indeed the Chief Minister – has been the subject of an unfortunate event in the past... When something like this happens to you, having the support and having the well wishes of not only people on your side but also people on the other side of the political spectrum is very comforting, is very important and shows that in a community like Gibraltar, which is a very small community, we may be politically very divided in terms of the issues of the day, but when it comes to standing shoulder to shoulder and showing compassion and empathy for people within our community, despite the political divides, that is exactly what happens, and so it should be.

55 So, Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition, I associate myself and I thank the Hon. the Leader of the House for his kind words. (Applause)

60 Mr Speaker: May I also, on my own behalf and on behalf of the Clerk and the staff of Parliament, wish the hon. Lady, Isobel Ellul-Hammond, a speedy recovery. We look forward to seeing her amongst us as soon as possible.

PAPERS TO BE LAID

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, without further ado, I now have the honour to lay on the table the Annual Accounts of the Government of Gibraltar for the year ended 31st March 2013, and the Audited Accounts of the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority for the year ended March 2014.

65 Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

Clerk: The Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

70 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the Annual Report of the Gibraltar Police Authority for the year ended 31st March 2014.

Mr Speaker: Ordered to lie.

75 Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Q472/2014
Monaco Boat Show –
Attendance

Clerk: (viii) Answers to Oral Questions.
Question 472/2014, the Hon. D J Bossino.

80 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Port state who attended the recent Monaco Boat Show, and by ‘who attended’ – I have spoken to the Hon. Minister opposite – I mean, obviously, those in his Department, as opposed to all the attendees of the Boat Show.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.
85

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the Captain of the Port, Commodore Bob Sanguinetti, represented the Gibraltar Port Authority, and Ms Diana Soussi represented the Gibraltar Maritime Administration.

I took it, on receiving the Question, that that is what he meant, and I am grateful that he did 90 communicate that to me in any case.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I know it was not in the Question, but does he have information as to the expenditure of the trip? I fully understand if he does not have the information; it was not part of the Question.
95

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, out of the nine supplementary paragraphs that I foresaw, that was not one of them. I apologise.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am in quite a relaxed mood this morning, so he need not have prepared so much!
100

Can the hon. Member give me an indication as to whether this information will be published on the Gibraltar Government website at some point? Because I think it is, in relation to many of the other Departments.

105 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the information, as is the case, will be published on the Government website, but should he not find it during the course of this month, he can of course ask me again, or write to me, and I will provide him with the information.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, this may be one of the supplementaries he has prepared for: can he advise this House whether he has information as to whether this particular trip has produced any returns in terms of economic activity for Gibraltar?

Hon. N F Costa: Five paragraphs devoted to that supplementary!

Mr Speaker, the Captain of the Port and the Maritime Administrator met with several, I thought, important persons. They met with, for example, the editor, the senior sales executive and the associate publisher of Superyacht Business, which, as the hon. Gentleman knows, is the most high-impacting yacht magazine internationally. They also met with the owners of certain yacht companies and with members of other ship registries, such as the Isle of Man Ship Registry and the British Virgin Islands. They have also met with shipping agents, such as Custer Networks, AFM Insurance Brokers, Marine and Superyachts Willis and the Boat Exclusive yachting magazine. So they did hold, over the course of those two days, a series of, I thought, quite important meetings.

In respect of what Gibraltar may hopefully receive in terms of promotion, I do understand from the Captain of the Port that Superyacht Business, Superyacht Group and Boat Exclusive will all three be featuring articles in Gibraltar in the upcoming editions.
120

125 In respect of whether any of those meetings with superyacht owners and agents will provide any specific results, the hon. Gentleman I am sure will agree with me that, given that the festival was on 25th and 26th

September, it is too soon to be able to specifically quantify, but obviously we are hopeful that it will attract business to the Gibraltar Ship Registry here in Gibraltar.

130 Hon. D J Bossino: Just one other point of detail – of course, I am hopeful that it will attract such business as the Hon. Minister refers to. In relation to the publications he refers to – Superyacht Business, and I think there were another two; I have not taken a note of that – and the features they are going to be running on Gibraltar, are those as a result of payments which his Department is making, or is it an editorial as opposed to...? In other words, is it an editorial feature, for which we do not pay; or is it an advertorial 135 feature?

Hon. N F Costa: The answer that I have, Mr Speaker, says that they will be including features on Gibraltar. It does not say whether it would be an advertorial or an editorial. Obviously, if it is an advertorial,
I would be able to edit the content, which in a way I prefer; but I am also hopeful, on behalf of Minister 140 Bossano and the entirety of the taxpayer that it is just a promotion feature which does not require the taxpayer to pay any money.

Q473/2014
Sandy Bay beach –
Replenishment cost

Clerk: Question 473, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism provide updated details of the costs of the replenishing 145 of the Sandy Bay beach?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, 150 Mr Speaker, the replenishment cost of Sandy Bay Beach was £1,441,590.

The hon. Gentleman may recall that when he asked me some time back, I estimated that the cost would be £1,490,000, so there was a little saving.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can he give an indication as to why that is the case? Obviously, any saving must be 155 welcome, but he is absolutely right: in his answer to a similar Question that I posed on 29th May, he did say it was £1.4905 million. It has now gone down slightly. Can he give an indication as to why that saving?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the absence of any arachnids, we did not have to pay for those, of course. Apart from that, that was the contract value. It just so happened that we were able to obtain the full 160 50,000 tonnes of sand for a slightly lesser amount – but we did obtain exactly what was sought.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in relation to the price of the sand for Sandy Bay, was that the cheapest option that was put to the Government at the time? Does the Hon. the Minister have that 165 information?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman perhaps will remember that, whereas we did start the process of replenishing the beach from a different source, that was cut short by actions taken at the border.
So, whereas I cannot tell him, because I do not have the information before me, whether it was the cheapest option, I sincerely doubt it, given that we had to transport the sand from I think it was the Western Sahara, 170 and we could not cross it through the border, so naturally... just thinking about it, without the information before me, I would think that it would not have been the cheapest option, no.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reason why I am asking this question is because I have had a couple of people come to see me and complain that, in actual fact, this was not the cheapest option for the Government – not because the sand was to come from Spain, but because there was a cheaper option from Morocco itself. That is why I am asking the question of the Hon. the Minister.

Could the Minister, if he does not have the information – clearly, he does not – simply perhaps make enquiries and then come back to me in relation to this, so that I could allay the fears or the concerns of those people who have come to me and made that complaint?

180 Indeed, there may be a perfectly reasonable explanation – if it is true that there were cheaper proposals put to the Government – as to why the Government did not go with the cheaper proposals for sand from Morocco and went with this particular option.

185 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, what I can tell the hon. Gentleman is that, unfortunately, it is a fact of life for me that when I receive a recommendation on anything as to whom to award a contract, those who are not successful write in to complain. Unfortunately, I must be guided by the advice that my technicians provide me with. I am not an expert and therefore I am perfectly happy to always sign off on what the advice is.

190 Let me tell him what I told the hon. Gentleman the last time I was asked the question. The contract for the regeneration of the bay was awarded following a public tender, which was concluded in March of this year, and the tender document specified the specifications for the sand but did not specify the source. Following review by the team that was considering the tenders, the contract was awarded to Van Oord, which I am told was the most economically advantageous compliant bid. It may have been that within that architecture the sand per se may have been more cheaply sourced elsewhere, but the contract was awarded 195 to the company that provided the most competitively attractive bid in compliance with the tender documentation.

I am sure that will assuage the persons who have come to see him – and if not, they can always call me.

200 Hon. D J Bossino: I overheard one of my colleagues mentioning, when he first answered the question, whether this is the total price tags – in other words, would this include the works in relation to, for example, the groynes?

205 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, sorry, the way that I read the Question was ‘the replenishing’ of the beach, so those costs only relate to the replenishing of the beach. If he wishes to know the cost of the total project, he will need to provide me with notice of that question and I will provide him with the information.

Q474/2014
Tourism Department –
Advertising expenditure

Clerk: Question 474, the Hon. D J Bossino.

210 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism provide details of the advertising expenditure in each of the Departments he has ministerial responsibility for, together with details of the publications since he took office, to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

215 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the details are as follows. In respect of the Gibraltar Port Authority: Panorama, £304.20 –

Mr Speaker: May I ask the Minister, does he propose to read out six or seven pages of figures?

220 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, I may read them, or they may be taken as read and a copy provided to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr Speaker: I think the answer should be ‘in the schedule which I am providing to the hon. Member’, because to read six or seven pages of figures... not only is it time-consuming, but it is a pointless exercise.

225 I would suggest to the Hon. Minister that he changes slightly his answer to say, ‘The information which is requested is provided in the schedule which I am now making available to all hon. Members.’

230 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, of course I will bow to any ruling that you issue to this House, and if your advice is that I should do so in that way, I shall of course do so. I have no issue with it at all, but it certainly would not be the first time that a Minister has –

Mr Speaker: I am well aware that I have not been able to prevail upon the Hon. Mr Bossano (Laughter) to change his spots – I am well aware of that, but then the Hon. Mr Costa has not been here for over 40 years!

235 Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, in that case, and bowing to your advice, I shall certainly provide –

Mr Speaker: Unless the Opposition object. If they do not object, then I think (Interjection) – 240 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in that case, I propose that I answer by saying that the answer that the hon. Gentleman has asked me for will be provided to him by way of a schedule, which the kind lady will photocopy and hand over to him.

Mr Speaker: Perhaps while that information is being photocopied, we can proceed with the next Question.

Handout follows after Question No. 475

Q475/2014
Tourism and hospitality courses –
Cost, attendees and content

245 Clerk: Question 475, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: I must say, I am surprised by the Hon. Minister, because he normally does use the practice that the Speaker has suggested to him today. I think I have given up in relation to Mr Bossano, and I ask most of the statistical questions in writing because I know what the answer is going to be, but I did not expect it from Mr Costa.

250 Can the Minister for Tourism provide details of the costs of the tourism and hospitality courses which have been offered at Bleak House, together with details of how many attended and what the precise nature of the courses entailed?

255 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, perhaps, if I may be allowed, before I answer this particular Question, just to reply to the preface of this Question – the only reason why I decided to do it in that particular way was that sometimes, when I hand over the schedule, it has been suggested to me that the public is not able to fully digest what has been passed over and I thought that given the tremendous work that has gone into marketing Gibraltar abroad by the Gibraltar Maritime Administration, the Port Authority, my Ministry etc, I thought it would give the public a flavour of what is that is done, but as I say, I was more than happy to provide you with a schedule.

260 Mr Speaker, in answer to this particular Question, the total cost of this four-day pilot programme is broken down as follows: fee to Oxford Brookes University, £8,400; course materials, £1,202.85; and food and catering, £1,298.24.

A total of eight courses were offered between Monday, 29th September and Thursday, 2nd October, with 88 spaces available in total and 75 taken up.

270 The courses on offer were titled: ‘Leadership Development’, providing the necessary skills to managers to develop their leadership capabilities; ‘Getting to know and manage Allergens’, allowing attendees to ensure full compliance with regard to allergen control; ‘Our Customers, Our Business’, providing skills to deliver real and meaningful service excellence; ‘May I Suggest?...’, breaking down the fears of upselling by offering choice in the approach to customer service; ‘In the Line of Fire’ – perhaps something more suited to this Chamber – laying down the skills to handle challenging people and situations to achieve a positive outcome; ‘Wine and Spirit Education Trust Certificate’, an introduction to the main styles of wine and product knowledge in storage and service; and finally, ‘Menu Planning and Food Presentation’, which looked at the food culture in Gibraltar and techniques to enhance menus and food presentation.

280 Hon. D J Bossino: Just to understand how this works, Mr Speaker, as I understand it, there was no requirement to employ anybody outside of the... Presumably, Oxford Brookes University provided the tutors exclusively – is that the case? There was nobody who had to be employed locally to provide that tuition?

285 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, as press release 477 and press release 544 mentioned, the courses were provided by lecturers and trainers from the university.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the detail in relation to the courses which were in fact provided. That was not, obviously, as one would have expected, set out in the press release. I am grateful for that. I take it that no formal qualifications resulted from these courses – is that correct?

290

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, actually, I will have to get back to him on that particular point. If I recall correctly from our discussions with Oxford Brookes lecturers, there was, on this occasion, a certification in terms of attendance but not on a particular grade as such. I will get back to him on that point though.

295

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am grateful.
Also, was there any involvement from businesses? I would have thought the local businesses, were there any businesses from outside Gibraltar?

300

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman rightly says, there was participation from the private sector. I have a few companies – the Caleta Hotel, the Lounge Bar, Calypso Tours, Le Bateau restaurant, the Lord Nelson, MH Bland and Pizza Hut – so there was significant uptake from private companies and not just from the Gibraltar Tourist Board.

305

Hon. D J Bossino: And, Mr Speaker, what was the nature of the involvement?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, sorry, I was referring to attendees. I thought he asked me whether there was participation from the private sector, and I said that members from those particular companies had attended as attendees to the course.

310

Hon. D J Bossino: Of course, that question was open to that interpretation in terms of involvement, and that is fine and I am grateful for the answer; but can he also say whether there was any involvement on behalf of these businesses in relation to the courses themselves – or was that also exclusively provided by the university?

315

Hon. N F Costa: That is correct, Mr Speaker. It was exclusively provided by Oxford Brookes University.

Hon. D J Bossino: Has he had any feedback from the businesses – are they happy with the course, have they suggested improvements, things like that?

320

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker. At the conclusion of the courses, the attendees were provided with questionnaires, and although I do not have a copy of it, I remember reading that the response was overwhelmingly positive from the attendees. Again, I can give him the exact figures if he so wishes.

Mr Speaker: If at any stage, having considered that lengthy answer, the hon. Member wishes to raise anything as a supplementary, I would be quite happy from him to do so.

330

Hon. S M Figueras: Perhaps, Mr Speaker, if I could just ask one of my Questions to give my hon. Friend an opportunity to review the schedule, that would be very helpful.

Q476/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
New livery

Clerk: Question 476, the Hon. S M Figueras.

335 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Can the Minister for Transport say whether the new Gibraltar Bus Company buses will be liveried in a similar fashion to the existing fleet of buses?

340 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, no. The new buses will have a new livery, which I am sure the hon. Gentleman will shortly see as the buses are deployed over the next three months.

345 The hon. Gentleman will agree with me that the new and excellent, if I may say so, livery is consistent with Gibraltar's image as a vibrant and modern destination, and will undoubtedly congratulate the Government on its impeccable taste.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, well, not necessarily.

350 Perhaps the Hon. Minister would tell the House on whose recommendation these changes were brought about.

Hon. N F Costa: In respect of the livery? Well, the designs were presented to me by the Bus Company at the Ministry. There was consultation with the relevant Ministers and it was very much a group effort.

355 I do not think the hon. Gentleman should be so sour as to suggest that he may not like the livery. I am sure that he will actually like it very much.

360 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the issue is not whether I like it or not – and having seen some snippets of the buses themselves, I have to say I do quite like them and I have no problem recognising that. That is not what is in issue in the House. My question is whether... Obviously, the answer to the question is yes, but why was it felt that a change in livery was desirable, given the fact that it would interrupt the continuity of the last 10 years of the existing bus fleet being the colours that they have been?

365 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, a clue to the answer that he asks me now by way of supplementary is in the original answer that I gave. As the hon. Gentleman knows, we are trying to take that quantum leap in terms of tourist offering and tourist hospitality and the different strands that make Gibraltar the vibrant and dynamic city it is today. Apart from the physical investment in capital works in the Upper Rock and in our beaches and so on, it is also the case that this Government has made sure that, in addition to hard cash on infrastructural projects, we have also brought additional culture – in terms of the Jazz Festival, the International Literary Festival and so on – and I think that tied in... He asks me the question and I am giving him the answer. Yes. Tied into that, I think the livery does very much tie in with everything the Government is trying to achieve in terms of the image of Gibraltar as a modern and vibrant city. I am quite sure that the livery does in fact achieve that.

375 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, could the Hon. Minister just answer the last question? I suppose the answer is – in the answers he has given to the other supplementaries – that effectively this was a decision taken at Cabinet level, and it is really as simple as it is.

380 Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, it was not a decision taken at Cabinet level. There were designs proposed to... may I call it 'the first team', which is comprised of the Bus Company, the Bus Company directors, relevant officials from traffic, and I discussed the particular livery with certain Ministers, not all of the Ministers. As a result of the discussion that flowed from that original meeting with the officials and also discussions with certain Ministers, I made a final decision on the livery. But as I said, like liveries, it was very much a fluid art.

385 Hon. S M Figueras: And of course one can imply that this was not a decision that was linked, thankfully to the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Management Plan, then?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the livery did not form part, as I recall it, of the STTPP; but I will tell you what did form part of the STTPP, and that is making transport in Gibraltar accessible – something which I 390 am sure that the hon. Gentleman opposite will very much appreciate. Not only did the teams that met take into account what would make, in effect, a beautiful bus, but we also took expert advice from my hon.

colleague's Department as to what would make the interior of a bus accessible, not just for those with reduced mobility, but those as well who may have difficulty in seeing, so that the contrast in the colours 395 makes it easier for people with visual impairment. So it was not just aesthetics, although it very much was aesthetics too, but it was also making sure that the colour schemes made the buses accessible to the entire community.

Q477/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
New diesel fleet

Clerk: Question 477, the Hon. S M Figueras.

400 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has already alluded to part of the answer to this Question a moment ago, but I will ask it anyway, for more detail.

Can the Minister for Transport say when we can expect to see the new fleet of diesel buses in operation in Gibraltar?

405 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the first vehicle should be in operation by the end of next week and the full fleet should be in operation – by that I mean operating the routes – by the end of December.

410 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful. Perhaps the Minister could provide me with information that he may not have – and if he does not, I will understand and I will give notice of the question, if he considers it necessary, at the next session, but is the whole existing bus fleet being replaced like for like, or are there additional vehicles being added to the fleet?

415 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as I mentioned during the course of the Budget debate, there are currently 18 midi-sized buses – we bought 20 midi-sized buses – and as I have also said during the course of the Budget debate, and I think I may have mentioned it during the course of a television interview, in addition to the midi-sized buses, we will also be purchasing small, but again fully accessible, vehicles for those routes that negotiate and travel through the very narrow parts of Gibraltar.

Q478/2014
Peter Sardeña –
Industrial Tribunal

420 Clerk: Question 478, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say whether, further to his answer to Question 351/2014, the decision of the Industrial Tribunal has now been received by the Government?

425 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr
Speaker, yes. The hearing of the claim has concluded and we now have received a decision from the Industrial Tribunal.

430 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Hon. Minister say what the decision of the Industrial Tribunal is vis-à-vis compensation or any other aspects flowing therefrom?

435 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, perhaps he would like to ask me specific questions on the judgment – unless he wants me to read the whole thing?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the compensation that has been awarded to Mr Sardeña?

440 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, let me just start by saying that the information is a public document. I am more than happy to go into the questions that the hon. Gentleman asks me – I have brought a specific file to answer all of them. I just start by saying that the information is a public document, but if I am told to continue to answer these questions I shall.

445 Mr Speaker: Strictly speaking, the original Question is whether a decision has been received. If the answer is yes, it does not compel the Government at this stage to state what the decision is, because that was not the question. The question was not ‘Will the Government say what is the decision of the industrial tribunal?’ So, you have answered the Question. If the Opposition ask supplementaries, it is up to the Hon.... I am prepared to allow it if, in the judgement of the Minister, he wishes to deal with that matter – with the actual decision – but he is not compelled to do so because it does not, strictly speaking, arise from the original Question.

Hon. N F Costa: Thank you, Mr Speaker. If I may just...

Mr Speaker, perhaps if I may start by answering the question of the hon. Gentleman: the compensatory award was £46,238.40 and the basic award was £5,000.

Q479/2014
School bus service –
Plans to introduce

455 Clerk: Question 479, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Transport say whether the Government is contemplating the introduction of a school bus system?

460 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, at present there are no plans to start a bus service for schools.

465 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, has the Government given any thought whatsoever to the possibility, even though there may be no plans?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, this has also been a live discussion between the Bus Company, my Ministry, the Minister for Education and the officials from the Department of Education. It has been studied and looked at in quite some detail, and after lengthy consideration and consultation the Department of Education took the view conclusively that there was no need for a dedicated bus service for schools at this juncture.

The hon. Gentleman knows that, should that view be revisited, we will be more than happy to consider it at a future point; but at this juncture, after what I think have been exhaustive discussions, there has been a decision not to provide a dedicated bus service for schools.
475

Q480/2014
Urban bicycle rental scheme –
Plans to introduce

Clerk: Question 480, the Hon. S M Figueras.

480 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Transport say whether the Government is, in the context of the evident increase in cycling in Gibraltar, contemplating investing in an urban bicycle rental scheme during this term of office?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

485 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, given the bonhomie so far, I am now somewhat loath to read the way I have written the answer, but I hope he takes it in the spirit in which I now offer it, which is to say the following. (Interjection) It's quite mild!

490 Mr Speaker, in the first place, I do not accept the premise of the Question. I would be grateful if the hon. Gentleman provides me with the data that suggests to him that there has been an increase in cycling in Gibraltar. That was the part that I was referring to as perhaps a bit terse.

Further, I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to his Question 126/2014, where I already provided him with the answer.

495 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, taken with the same dose of bonhomie as he warned me I should take it, I will tell the Hon. Minister that I have no data on which I have based this Question, merely my own experience and possibly... and I assume by making an assumption I do certain things which may be dangerous, but on the assumption that the Hon. Minister for Traffic himself is also a keen cyclist and gets around on a bicycle, I think the increase in volume of bicycles on our roads is something that is entirely inescapable.

500 It is my view, as I will express in respect of other Questions later on in this session, that an urban bicycle rental scheme within this term of office – which clearly, with the passing months, three months since we last met, becomes less and less of a possibility – is entirely necessary.

505 Whilst the Minister disagrees with the premise on the basis that he has received no data, is the Minister prepared to reconsider at any time before the conclusion of this term of office the position vis-à-vis the urban bicycle rental scheme and its viability or necessity in Gibraltar?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, again, with the same level of kindness, may I say that these questions have been asked of me and I have already answered them. I refer him to that particular Question: Question 126. If I were to read him the Hansard, we would once again be expressing exactly the same issues.

Mr Speaker: What is the date of that?

Hon. N F Costa: The date of that is February this year.

Mr Speaker: February?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes. It is over six months, Mr Speaker. I have got the answer here and I am perfectly happy to rehash the debate, but essentially what I tell him is that the hon. Gentleman will recall that it was the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition who said in this House, in answer to that particular Question, that:

520

'I should limit myself to saying that the Government is looking for alternatives, should this prove necessary, given that there are currently legal proceedings in the Supreme Court and any debate may prejudice that litigation.'

I think he can read between the lines of what it is that I am telling him.

525 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes, and I have not made enquiry in respect of the litigation, because frankly I had no hope whatsoever that, given the way these things go, that there had been much progress, if any, to report.

530 The basis of my questions, and the reason why I pursue this point eight months on from the last time I raised it, is because I see on a daily basis how more and more people are using it, and I effectively just enquired of the Minister whether he is considering today whether that decision is one that he might revisit, given what is at most anecdotal evidence of the increase in cycling in Gibraltar. I think that is fair enough in the circumstances.

I am aware of what we debated on Question 126 in February this year, but it has been eight months since, and the basis of the Question is: does the Minister consider at this stage – today, in October 2014 – whether that is something that is likely to be revisited within this term of office? If the answer is no, then the answer is no, but that is effectively the answer I am seeking to get from the Minister.

Hon. N F Costa: And what I am trying to perhaps clumsily express to the hon. Gentleman opposite is that that answer is tied into the present litigation.

540 Hon. S M Figueras: But, Mr Speaker, even if they were looking at another possibility independently of the one that is already the subject of litigation...? Are they looking for another option?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes. Mr Speaker, let me put it another way: I am firmly of the view that the Government should facilitate an urban bicycle scheme.

545 Hon. D A Feetham: He is talking about Government policy: Government policy is that Government is committed to an urban cycling scheme?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker; otherwise, we would not have taken any action and would have let the matter drop quietly. We have not done that.

Q481/2014

New bus fleet –

Definition of ‘environmentally friendly’

550 Clerk: Question 481, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport confirm that in the context of the new bus fleet, when he refers to them as – and I quote – ‘environmentally friendly’ vehicles, he means new and more modern diesel-engine buses but diesel nonetheless, and not alternative energy, hybrid or, much less, electrically powered new buses?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the facetious tone, clumsy wording and long-winded articulation of the Question aside – (Several Members: Oh!) (Laughter) There was a lot of ironical expression in the formulation of the Question, which has been allowed, and I am only replying in the way that he has asked the Question. If he does not like my sardonic expressions, he should not laden his Question with sardonicism for me.

565 I refer the hon. Gentleman to my Budget speech of 2014 and to my previous answer to Question 125/2014 and answers to his supplementary questions thereto, where I answered everything he has asked me in that particular Question.

Hon. S M Figueras: So the answer, Mr Speaker, is yes, they are just diesel-engine buses.

570 A Member: Hear, hear.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, no. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Budget speech and to answer 125/2014, where I say that they are environmentally friendly vehicles.

Q482/2014

South Mole, Detached Mole and North Mole – Industrial activity

575 Clerk: Question 482, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Government state which industrial activities are operating from the South Mole, the Detached Mole and the North Mole, stating the name of the company or public sector organisation, and which application or applications he has received for consideration at the DPC for any type of industrial activity on the sites mentioned to date?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the only occupiers of land on the South Mole are Gibdock Ltd, southern half of the Mole, as part of the dockyard lease; and the MOD, northern half part of the Mole.
585

There are no leases in respect of the Detached Mole, which is Crown Land. As confirmed by the Town Planning Department, there is an application from Vemaoil Ltd for the siting of a floating oil-storage facility on the Detached Mole.

590 The occupiers of the North Mole (Western Arm) are as follows: the Gibraltar Government, 3 North Mole Road, which is the cruise liner terminal; Nature Port Reception Facilities Ltd, 1A North Mole Road, which is the oil treatment plant; Giboil Ltd, 1B North Mole Road, which is the fuel depot; and Nature Port Reception Facilities Ltd, 1C North Mole Road, which is the company's offices and stores.

595 Clerk: Question 483/2014, the – Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Minister perhaps help and answer this supplementary: what is the Government's attitude to the Vermaoil application in relation to the North Mole? I understand that it is going through, it is an application that has been made to the DPC, but obviously the Government, as presumably holders of the land, must have an attitude, a policy in relation to it. Is it supportive or is it against it?

600

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am not entirely sure how appropriate it is that I express an opinion on a matter that is the subject of an application before the DPC, where two Government Ministers sit.

605 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not asking the hon. Gentleman to express an opinion on the application for planning. I quite understand that, first and foremost, in actual fact, he is probably not responsible for that because it is the DPC that is going to be making the decision.

I am asking about Government policy in relation to the application, bearing in mind that in relation to the use of the land... Perhaps let's focus it in that way, in relation to the use of the land for this particular purpose, bearing in mind that, as I understand it – and I could be wrong, and if I am wrong he can correct me – we are talking about Government land.

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is correct. I have stated that the Detached Mole is Crown Land, so it is Government land.

615 What I would say in answer to the question perhaps is that the Vemaspirit is currently at the Detached Mole and is supplying bunkers from there, so that does provide an indication of the Government's view, yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: Therefore, it must follow that you are effectively supportive of the use of the land for that purpose.
620

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the Vemaspirit is berthed currently at the Detached Mole. This was a request that was made by that particular company to the former Captain of the Port, which on consultation with me was agreed. It is not permanently berthed there, it is not permanently moored; it is berthed there, and from there it is providing its operation of bunkers.
625

That does not mean that the Government or Members of the Government on the DPC would take a similar view on a permanent fixture at the Detached Mole with structures that would, in effect, make it a semi-floating storage. That is not to say that it is not supportive either. All I am saying is that the attitude of the Government to date has been supportive of a particular company to provide a non-permanent facility from there. How the Government expresses that support at the DPC would be a matter for the Minister for the Environment and the Hon. the Deputy the Chief Minister.
630

Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker, with respect, it is not about the attitude of the Government in the DPC. With planning, it operates on the following basis. You can apply for planning permission to build on anybody's land. Whether you have the right to build on somebody's land depends on the landowner. In other words, there are two separate issues. There is one about planning; the other one is about consent. Therefore, if the Government were to take the view that we are not providing consent for this particular project, they can apply for as many planning permissions as they want. They would not be able to do it. So therefore there are two separate issues.
635

640 The reason why I am asking this particular question is, of course, there are plans, or there was an indication that there were going to be plans, to build as well the natural gas installations on the Detached Mole. So it is a matter of interest to us how this particular operation would actually co-exist with an operation for the siting of natural gas, bearing in mind that there are EU requirements and safety requirements about exclusion zones around a natural gas installation. That is the reason why I am asking.
645

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I entirely see why the hon. Gentleman is asking me the question, but what he is asking me is... the company acquire the Government as landlords of the Detached Mole. But that, I am afraid, is not a question for me; that is a question for the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, as 650 Minister for Lands. All I can tell him is that the attitude of the Port so far has been supportive of the company.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, presumably, no company is going to be making an application for planning permission if it has not cleared its lines with the landowner, because without the consent it just would not go ahead anyway. I would have thought – (Interjection) No, Mr Speaker, I have not said the opposite.

660 There are two separate issues here. There is the question of planning: as a matter of planning one has to apply for planning to do something. The other question is whether consent is provided by the landowner for the project to go ahead. You can actually have no consent and still have planning permission, I accept that; but of course no commercial entity in its right mind is going to be making an application for planning, and go through the expense of making an application for planning, unless there has been some preliminary discussion with the landowner, whereupon the landowner has agreed.

665 It has happened, I have to say. In my practice as a lawyer in England, I have seen it happen in situations where there has been a speculative application for planning – people get planning on a speculative basis and then they do a deal with the landowner – but I cannot see that that is what is happening here. Hence why I am surprised that the Minister who has responsibility for the Port would not be in a position – or indeed the Minister for Utilities who is also sitting here – is in a position to actually tell me whether the Government has indicated, even on an in-principle basis, that they are going to be providing consent for this particular project.

670 Mr Speaker: The Minister does not wish to add anything further?

Hon. N F Costa: No, Mr Speaker, merely to reiterate that that would be a question appropriate for the Minister for Lands, who is the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Q483/2014

Sports and Leisure Authority – Current vacancies

675 Mr Speaker: Next Question.

Clerk: Question 483, the Hon. E J Reyes.

680 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports provide details of current vacancies at the Sports and Leisure Authority, together with details of when these vacancies will be advertised?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

685 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, at present there are two vacant posts at the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, these being Pool Operative, and Deputy Chief Executive Officer.

The Pool Operative post has become vacant due to a resignation and the vacancy will be registered with the Employment and Training Board imminently.

690 The Deputy Chief Executive Officer vacancy is currently being looked into, together with the Chief Executive Officer and the union.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, but my Question was saying ‘details of when these vacancies will be advertised.’ I hear that the Minister is discussing this with the union, but does he have an indication of when these will be advertised?

695 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, whatever he wants to interpret as ‘imminently’. Usually ‘imminently’ does not take more than a couple of weeks, maybe a month. ‘Imminently’ is it should be happening any time now.

Q484/2014
Victoria Stadium –
Upgrade to UEFA category 3

Clerk: Question 484, the Hon. E J Reyes.

700

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports say if it is Government's intention to upgrade the Victoria Stadium's football facilities to approved UEFA category 3?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

705

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, no, sir, it was never the intention to upgrade to UEFA category 3.

As explained in answer to Question 224/2013, in which I stated, and I quote:

710

'We are looking in order to put Victoria Stadium into a Cat 2, which is like a minimum category of the stadium, in order to have international competitions and even looking at some areas in which the stadium can become even a Cat 3, so only in parts.'

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, my Question is because from previous answers and so on I am a little bit confused as to whether it is a short, medium or long-term intention of Government to get to UEFA category 3 approval.

715

Mr Speaker, although, strictly speaking, the Government is not necessarily answerable to what the Gibraltar Football Association says, they do however come up with publications and a double-sided colour A3 spread, leading us all to believe that the Victoria Stadium is going to be upgraded to category 3, and that that was what Government was going to do – and Government was silent on the issue, without coming out saying, 'No, that is not what is going to happen.' So the public does stand a little bit confused, and more so...

720

The Minister knows that I am very very supportive of improving and upgrading the stadium as far as possible, and we would both dearly love to see as much international football being played locally as possible, but again my understanding is that unless we attain that category 3, then other than friendly games, which by mutual consent the opposing team agrees to play on this pitch, we do not really have the facility to host a game.

725

The arrangements of having to go to Faro, which... If I may give you a personal experience, the round trip on the coach actually took me over 22 hours, Mr Speaker. In order to be able to support our team, many supporters, whom I joined, left Gibraltar at 10 o'clock in the morning on Tuesday and actually –

730

Mr Speaker: Would the hon. Member please ask a question.

Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, so the question is – can we have a more clear-cut answer? – is it the Government's intention, short, medium or long term, to actually look into the possibility and upgrade the Victoria Stadium to UEFA category 3 approved?

735

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, this was answered by the Chief Minister in the same Question that I have just stated, and I can quote him:

740

'There are different criteria for different sorts of UEFA competitions.'

As he well knows, there are competitions in which under-19s and under-17s can be played in what is the upgrade to Cat 2 and some parts being a Cat 3, so therefore not probably a full international... which is, there is no full international that can be played unless it is a Cat 3, but there are other competitions – and the Chief Minister explained that to him last time, that there are many other competitions which can be played in what we are now upgrading the stadium to be.

So the stadium cannot be a Cat 3, but there are many competitions with which UEFA... and we are working closely with the GFA and UEFA to make sure that the upgrades meet the requirements to have some other competitions – which is not the one that is played currently in Faro.

750

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Minister accept that if the Victoria Stadium were to be upgraded to a category 3 UEFA stadium, that the GFA would be able to play its home games here in Gibraltar in the absence of an alternative Cat 4 stadium, which of course we do not have?

755

Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, but the problem with that is that in order to make the Victoria Stadium into a full Cat 3, you would need a parking, for example, of 50 cars. Where do you put the 50 cars?

760 Do you put it in the MUGA area, where then you will deprive children from playing? Do you do other things that make it into a Cat 3 and therefore you deprive other people from doing their sports? I am the Minister for Sports; I am not the ‘Minister for Football’, and therefore I have got to look at the interests of... Even if I take what he is saying and we convert the Victoria Stadium into a full Cat 3 by closing down pitch no. 2, where children play leagues, and we put the car park there, then what we are doing is converting the Victoria Stadium into a Cat 3 and depriving everybody else of the use of the stadium, which is a multi-sports complex. That is the problem.

765 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, a number of supplementaries in relation to that, but I will just deal with each at a time, so that they are understood.

770 Is the Minister saying that the only thing that prevents the upgrade of the Victoria Stadium from what he described as a Cat 2.8 – which I took to mean just below a category 3, with which I agree – to a category 3 is parking facilities for 50 cars?

775 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because then it would be a 2.9, rather than a 2.8. There are other smaller issues why you cannot make it into a Cat 3. I just gave him that as an example. Right! There are other issues which, in the UEFA criteria, we cannot fulfil physically unless we do many other things to the Bayside complex to make it into a Cat 3. Therefore, what I am saying is that in the 2.8, the ‘point 8’ aspect are some parts which UEFA actually tells us to do. I will give him an example: a media centre, a doping room, facilities for officials –

Hon. D A Feetham: Those are all being done.

780 Hon. S E Linares: Exactly, and these are the ones that are being done, but in the whole list there are some which, if we did them, it would be physically impossible without affecting other sports. That is what I am trying to say. (Interjection) It would not be a 2.9 if it was just one; it is a 2.8 – and look, it could be a 2.7. If you are going to be specific that there are only two points... it is not exactly two points, because there are about a hundred... then you could say there are 20 or...

785 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, I am just trying to explore exactly what is necessary in order to upgrade the Victoria Stadium to a Cat 3 stadium, so that the GFA can play their home games here in Gibraltar, so that fans do not need to travel to Portugal in order to watch them, and indeed, for all that economic activity that is wasted outside Gibraltar can come into Gibraltar. Can I – 790 Mr Speaker: Just a moment. I am going to allow the Hon. Leader of the Opposition and any other Member to make supplementary questions arising from this issue. I am not going to allow a debate on the upgrading of Victoria Stadium to a category 3. Not a debate. He can ask questions for clarification and pursuing the matter, but I am not going to allow a debate. It is right and proper for this House to debate the whole issue of the Victoria Stadium, and any other new stadium if they wish to do so.

795 Hon. D A Feetham: I apologise if, in Mr Speaker’s judgement, I have overstepped the bounds of what is reasonable. I had not realised that I had done so.

800 Having prefixed my question in that way, he has said if we provide the 50 parking, it then goes up to a 2.9 – (Hon. S E Linares: No.) Yes, that is what he has said, and he has said that there are other little things. What other little things does the Government need to do in order to upgrade it to a category 3? Because it does appear to me that, bearing in mind all the benefits – and that is why I prefixed the question in the way that I did – to Gibraltar and to fans and to football, of having football here in Gibraltar, it is not really a massive ask to convert the Victoria Stadium into a category 3 to allow all that to actually happen.

805 I just want to explore with the hon. Gentleman what it is that is impeding the Government from taking that step and widening the scope of the contract – which is a substantial contract in itself: £2.7 million – in order to upgrade to a Cat 3, because none of the issues that he has pointed out, with respect, are big issues, as far as I can see, and they are not insurmountable.

810 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, if he does not think that a big issue is 50 parkings, then I do not know how he would solve it, because...

815 And that is only one issue. I did not say that it was two issues; there are many. There are about a hundred-odd tick boxes of different things, of which the upgrade... If I said 2.8, it was because I was thinking of two others – one being the parking, which is virtually impossible, to have 50 parkings within the Bayside complex. So that the hon. Member knows, the 50 parkings are for VIPs. The VIPs have to have 50 parkings in the Bayside complex in order... One issue.

I will give him another one, which he can then work round: the capacity has to be 4,500. You cannot put prefab or scaffolding type of stands behind the goal – UEFA will not allow that. It has to be a permanent stand.

820 If the hon. Member is saying that he is happy to put 50 parkings and put the capacity to 4,500, to the detriment of all the other sports, then he should come out clearly and say it, because that is what he is saying. He is pressing us to make the Victoria Stadium into a Cat 3, to the detriment – and we have analysed it – of all the other sports. Therefore, he should be clear and say, ‘Right, I would put the Victoria Stadium into a Cat 3 in order that people do not have to travel to Faro.’ I have travelled to Faro, I know 825 what it is to travel to Faro, so I would like the stadium here, yes, at the Europa Point; but it is the GFA that will do the Europa Point Stadium.

What I am saying to him is... and those are only two issues. There are many other little issues which UEFA require us to do in the stadium, which for me is not only physically impossible for some of them, but unacceptable, and that is what I am trying to make the hon. Member understand.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, why is it that the Government cannot use the multi-storey car park, which is just simply across the road from the Victoria Stadium, in order to provide these 50 VIP parking spaces, so that you can deal with that particular issue? That is one supplementary.

835 And the second one: if I were to demonstrate to the hon. Gentleman in correspondence that it is actually possible to upgrade the Victoria Stadium to a Cat 3 stadium with minimal disruption to other sports... If I am capable of demonstrating that to the hon. Gentleman, will the hon. Gentleman undertake to rethink the question of upgrading Victoria Stadium to a Cat 3 so that the GFA can play its home games in Gibraltar? Doesn't that seem like a reasonable suggestion to him?

840 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I do not know how he is going to do that, because in the first supplementary he is absolutely wrong. I cannot put the 50 parkings in the Devil's Tower car park; UEFA does not allow that. UEFA says that the VIP parking has to be immediately where the VIP area is, for security reasons. He can either agree or disagree with UEFA. That is UEFA's requirement, so whatever he is going to present to me already falls down the line – (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) Well, as long as 845 he is clear that he is going to take pitch number 2 of the MUGA area away.

Mr Speaker, like you said, we can have a discussion here about different issues about the Victoria Stadium becoming a Cat 3, but the issue here is that I have already explained to the hon. Member that at present it cannot be a Cat 3. Whether it will in the future – they have to decide whether it will be to the detriment of all the other sports. That is the only way you are going to put a Cat 3.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, with respect, he has not answered my question. The question was: if I can demonstrate to him that with minimal disruption to other sports the Victoria Stadium can be upgraded to a Cat 3, will the Government rethink its policy?

855 Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker, because I would not be willing to say ‘the minimum effect’ to other sports. It should be with no effect to other sports. As I said to him, I am the Minister for Sports; I am not the Minister for Football.

860 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he not accept that, in a Gibraltar that is limited in space, any building works are going to disrupt somebody somewhere at some stage? Good management of these particular issues is minimum disruption. As I understood the hon. Gentleman, his concern was that we would be depriving facilities away from other sports, but if I can demonstrate that in fact this can be done without depriving facilities away from other sports, will he undertake to revise the policy?

Hon. S E Linares: No, Mr Speaker.

870 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, then I have to ask this particular question: is it not the case that the reason why the hon. Gentleman and this Government are blocking off the alternative of upgrading Victoria Stadium to a Cat 3 is because the reality is that they are full-square behind the Europa Point Stadium and they want this community to think that there is no alternative to the Europa Point?

Several Members: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

875 Mr Speaker: I want the Minister to answer that question, but I warn him I do not want him to get involved in a debate.

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, no, sir.

Q485/2014
Gibraltar Cricket Association –
Alternative facilities

Clerk: Question 485, the Hon. E J Reyes.

880 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of the alternative facilities which will be provided to the Gibraltar Cricket Association as a result and consequence of the planned loss of Europa Sports Grounds for the playing, teaching and development of the sport?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

885 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, until a final decision is taken on the Europa Sports Ground, the Gibraltar Cricket Association will continue to use the existing facilities.

890 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister explain to me how he can reconcile what he has given in answer to supplementaries in Question 484, while saying that by being Minister for Sport and not just football he cannot take actions that deprive other sports or facilities, and yet in Question 485 he has left the door open that could lead to the result of the Gibraltar Cricket Association actually losing a full-size pitch? Can he reconcile the two different answers, please?

895 Hon. S E Linares: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is very simple. We will be providing the Cricket with a ground. That has been said publicly, so I do not know what he is actually trying to channel the question... The Question is 'alternative facilities which will be provided to the... Cricket... as a result and consequence of the planned loss' – and he is saying 'loss'. We have already said that when the Europa Sports Ground is used for something else, the Cricket by then will have another ground.

900 So, yes, I am happy to say that, until the facilities... like I said here, the final decision is taken on the Europa Sports Ground, the Cricket will continue to use the existing facilities.

905 Hon. E J Reyes: I think the Minister has given us some good news. My understanding, which I hope is correct, is that alternatives will be provided to Cricket, so that if the Europa is lost for that, there... Can I bring the Minister, as well, to say... could he not look into the possibility as well of providing alternatives for other sports, so that then the Victoria Stadium can actually be upgraded to a category 3?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I will not get into the debate of the category 3 again.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q489/2014

Prohibition of smoking in public places –
Further exemptions

Mr Speaker: Question 489, the Hon. Mr Netto.

960 Clerk: Question 489, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, does the Government have any plans to grant any further exemptions in relation to the prohibition of smoking in public places?

965 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, if I may, let me take the first opportunity I have had – the first time I have got up to speak this morning – to add my own personal best wishes to the hon. Member who is my opposite number in Health. I have, of course, kept in touch with her throughout her illness. I am glad to see that she is better, and very keen to see her fully recovered and with us in this House. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, in relation to the Question, the Answer is no, sir.

990 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Mr Speaker: No, I do not think there is any need to say in each case what the answer is. Just continue to call the Questions up to 497.

Q497/2014

Wildlife Gibraltar Ltd gull culling unit – Safety protocols for shooting rifles

Clerk: Question 497, the Hon. J J Netto.

1025 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please state what are the safety protocols used by the gull culling unit employed by Wildlife Gibraltar Ltd prior to shooting their rifles throughout Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1030 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, five persons are currently employed under the gull cull contract. The Department is not at liberty to divulge the wages of employees of private companies.

1035 The Ministry for the Environment cannot comment on the number of applicants, on how many recruits had a firearms certificate on commencement, or on whether anybody who was not employed held a firearms certificate, as it was not involved in the selection process, as is the case with all private contractors. What I can state is that an extra two persons were employed, increasing the team's complement to five. The ministry understands that both have extensive previous experience with firearms at a professional level.

1040 The gull culling team has adequate insurance cover for the gull culling unit, identical to that held since the operation began in the late 1990s. The Ministry for the Environment does not hold such details for private contractors.

The gull control unit uses semi-automatic and bolt-action rifles with .22 calibre ammunition. The contractor has a Gibraltar firearms licence, which is issued by the Royal Gibraltar Police under very strict conditions. Firearms legislation in Gibraltar is extremely stringent.

The Ministry for the Environment was not involved in the employee selection process, as is the case, again, with all private contractors.

1045 The gull control unit does not currently operate during the night time. This is mainly due to safety issues, as clear visibility is required to ensure that no members of the public are present in the areas where shooting is taking place.

1050 A number of safety procedures are in place to ensure the safety of the public and employees whilst the gull control unit is operating with rifles. These are: (1) a licence is granted by the RGP – this licence includes strict regulation of firearms and ammunition used, as well as restriction of activities that are deemed to be suitable and safe by the Royal Gibraltar Police; (2) the RGP is notified of the gull control unit's activities on a daily basis, including where the unit will be operating; (3) the gull control unit's employees wear uniforms that state that they are involved in avian control, as well as high-visibility arm bands; (4) a shooter is always accompanied by a second member of the team, who acts as a watcher to ensure that there are no members of the public in the area when a shot is taken; and (5) no shooting takes place when visibility is low.

1060 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman, in one of the answers to the Questions, said that out of the four, as I understand, two used firearms at a professional level. Can he expand what he means by that? Because, of course, there is a huge difference between the recruitment of two individuals – for example, individuals who have been within the army and have therefore, in that context, used firearms; and individuals who have specific experience in the culling of animals. Both are not the same, and therefore I want to explore with the hon. Gentleman what he means by experience at a professional level.

1065 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as I said before, my Department and I have no direct involvement in recruitment. I believe – but this is only what I have picked up – that they may have had firearms experience with the army.

1070 I would hasten to add that the other members of the team, who were recruited many years ago, did not have previous firearms experience, were trained, and then were given firearms certificates by the Royal Gibraltar Police. In fact, at the time, a number of the new employees who came without that background were trained and then achieved the firearms certificates. So that is nothing unusual, but in any case, these gentlemen, I believe – it is something that I would have to confirm – did have experience, as I mentioned earlier.

1075 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, he has confirmed that it is his understanding that they have experience within the army, and I accept that it may well be that a number of years ago things were done in a particular way, but does he not accept that there is a distinction between somebody who is trained to effectively use firearms in the context of a war theatre as individual soldiers within the army, and people who are specifically trained?

1080 Let me give the hon. Gentleman an example that has certainly been operating in my mind, because it has been brought to my attention. If you are using .22 calibre ammunition, which is effectively the type of ammunition that could potentially kill somebody, it is not only a question of really notifying the public or ensuring there is nobody in the area around where the culling takes place. For example, if you effectively use a rifle, a .22 calibre in the north face, you could potentially ricochet down to members of the population. That is the information that has come to my attention.

1085 Therefore, what I want to explore with the hon. Gentleman is the type of training and whether the hon. Gentleman realises that there is a distinction between effectively just using two individuals from the army and people who are specifically trained – and I am told, actually, that there were other applicants for this particular job who have licences, both in Spain and also in the United Kingdom, as pest control and culling of animals across the board.

1090 A Member: So there were alternatives.

1095 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, clearly the considerations about ricochet and so on form part of the training of people who are going to use rifles. I repeat: the firearms laws are very stringent in Gibraltar and nothing is done without the approval of the Royal Gibraltar Police. I can speak through personal experience, as I myself came from no firearms practice to actually holding a firearms certificate – and I happen to be a rather good shot.

1100 Therefore, the training that is acquired by these gentlemen is one which gives me great confidence in their ability. People who have been working in the gull cull unit – and three of the five have been working there for maybe 15 years or so with... I will touch wood and thank God that there has been absolutely no incident in all the many thousands of shots. Clearly, they are very good marksmen and very responsible officials.

1105 Whether there were other people with or without qualifications, I do not know. I have not got involved. I will not get involved. They may have had experience in all sorts of other things, but you never know – in a selection panel the person may not come across well, or they may have some kind of record which would be inconsistent with allowing them a current firearms certificate. I do not know; I was not involved.

1110 It is not correct for me to comment on the selection procedure of private companies contracted to the Government. Would the hon. Gentleman have asked me the question for example of employees of Sharrock Shand or Hassans, just because they work for Government?

1115 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am tempted to say that the hon. Gentleman has amply demonstrated that he is a good shot in destroying the 1999 Fishing Agreement and in the laying of the blocks; but, Mr Speaker – (Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker that is completely out of order.) It is below the belt and I apologise. It is below the belt. (Laughter and interjection) I apologise, Mr Speaker; it was below the belt.

1120 He said that these individuals who have been recruited have been issued firearms licences. Is the issue of the firearms licence before or after they have completed training – it is just that that was not clear from the answer that he has given me; and what is the length of training that these individuals get in the culling of gulls, which is actually different from just simply shooting a particular gun, which no doubt a lot of people, members of the public, can also do? The culling of animals requires very specific training and I am just trying to explore the kind of training that these individuals have received.

1125 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the specific training that these individuals have been given. I can only say that the training that has been given in the past has been one of competence and has been under proper supervision; but these particular individuals, I do not know.

1130 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, given that the hon. Gentleman is both something of a good shot and a nature environmentalist, and making due allowance for the fact that I have never been taught biology, could he just perhaps put my mind at rest on the following?

1135 Some Members of the House will recall that when I was sitting on that side of the House and we had apes culled by shooting, I was very roundly indicted by the then Opposition, now Government, for... I cannot remember if it was murder or assassination, although I am sure – (A Member: Genocide.) Yes. Again, making due allowance for the fact that I have never been taught biology, can the hon. Member explain to me, just for my own interest, why shooting a monkey is genocide and shooting a seagull is not?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think either is genocide, therefore I cannot really explain the difference between them.

1140 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Would it alter his answer if, instead of ‘genocide’ it was ‘murder’ or ‘assassination’? He must remember the debate. I ask the question in good humour because it is not earth-shatteringly important, but is there an issue – a distinction that the hon. Members make – between the animal ‘macaque monkey’ and the animal ‘seagull’ when it comes to the acceptability of culling by shooting? (Interjection)

1145 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question of culling or killing of any animal is a question which has been discussed and debated in many different fora, and obviously these are things that are sensitive – and some people will find either offensive and other people will find either acceptable.

1150 I think that the general view – and I am not saying that I can associate myself fully with what I am about to say – is that the similarity of a macaque, a monkey, as a primate, to our own species is what normally worries people when they are actually shot for wildlife-management purposes. I cannot offer more explanation than that.

1155 If you look at it very coldly, you are controlling a population of wild animals by removing them, by culling them; but I think that the general perception is that a monkey perhaps is more intelligent, more conscious, more aware and certainly shares a lot more genes with us than the yellow-legged gull. I cannot offer much more than that.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: I draw some comfort from the fact that, had he been sitting on the jury when I was standing trial in this House, indicted for murder of macaques, he would not have found me guilty then.

1160 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I think perhaps the dividing line... Let me say that I am against the taking of life of any creature, so therefore I am certainly not happy to see gulls killed – or culled; I call it ‘killed’ – but I think perhaps the dividing line is whether you belong to basically the same group. We are primates; they are primates.

1165 There is indeed now a test case going on in the United States, arguing that they have got feelings to such an extent, that are so similar to ours, that they should be protected in law as of right, similar to the rights that humans have. But of course I suppose if, instead of this debate taking place amongst primates, it were taking place in the bird species, doves might feel that killing gulls would be genocide. (Laughter)

1170 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes, Mr Speaker, indeed they might, and many other forms of animal life as well, so we have to be careful not to make the killing of any animal acceptable, because one never knows when it might stop – because the definition of ‘animals’ differ, as the hon. Member knows.

1175 I do not ask this question from any great concern. Frankly, I have never found, so long as it is done in a humane way and for good reason, I do not, in my mind, distinguish between one animal and another as to whether their culling by shooting, or I suppose by any other means, is unacceptable. They take place in both forms everywhere in the world. I have just this summer returned from a holiday in South Africa, where the culling of animals by shooting is a common phenomenon, and it is boasted about as being absolutely essential for the preservation of a healthy natural life.

1180 I just wanted to know whether there had been a slight change of focus of policy, and as the Hon. Mr Bossano has made clear, it is not an issue on which it is vital that every Member of the Government has the same view. Indeed, there may have been different views on the question when we did it in our days. I just wanted to pinpoint whether a line had been consciously drawn between monkeys and seagulls, or whether this was just repentance at my indictment.

1185 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker, I think I answered the point earlier. I think a point that has to be made is that whenever culling – or killing, correct, absolutely – is carried out, it is normally to redress a balance that has been upset by the interference of man. In South Africa, the loss of predators has meant that some species have become more common. For example, with gulls, the fact that we produce so much rubbish which is in excess of the natural food source and we have removed the predators means that the gull population increases, and therefore man is trying to rectify what, sadly, he has put wrong himself. I just thought I had to add that comment.

Mr Speaker: Does Mr Netto have any further supplementary?

1195 Hon. J J Netto: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Yes, by all means, and then I will allow Mr Reyes to come back to the previous Questions.

1200 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, my understanding is that the two particular individuals who were employed at the time of the advert and went to the interview did not have the required certificate for firearms; and as a consequence of that, they have to now undertake the training in the form of going to the Gibraltar Shooting Club and doing all the lessons there. Once they are satisfied that the training, depending on the merits of the individuals, is up to a certain standard, they will get a certificate from the Commissioner of Police. That may take... whatever it takes – whether it is three months or six months.

1205 However, my understanding also is that the one person who did not succeed in the interview is the actual person who, in fact, did have all the qualifications, did have all the certificates and did actually show the amount of work that he has done in the past, both in Britain, in Spain and in South Africa. It just seems odd, and I put it to the Minister for the Environment, whether he will look into that and actually get an explanation from Gibraltar Wildlife Ltd, as to whether what I am saying is correct; and if so, whether he will ask them to look into the matter.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will not get involved with selection processes in private companies. I would not for them, I would not for Sharrock Shand and I would not for Hassans.

1215 What I think we must consider is that we are not present at the selection board and we do not know whether that person, whoever it may be, may have had other considerations which may have made him unsuitable for other reasons – fitness, record, character. We do not know that, we cannot judge that, and I think it is unfair to carry out this discussion any further.

1220 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he not accept that there is a distinction between the analogy that he has provided – a distinction between Hassans and a distinction between Sharrock Shand, who at the end of the day are private entities who will recruit whoever they want; and Gibraltar Wildlife, which is getting a significant subsidy and moneys from the taxpayer?

1225 Therefore, there is a responsibility resting on the Hon. the Minister's shoulders to ensure that effectively things are done in a transparent way and that the right people are effectively chosen for a particular job, not only because we are interested in value for the taxpayer in terms of recruiting people who have the necessary experience, but also from a safety point of view – also ensuring that we are recruiting the right people for something which can have repercussions, not only for the gulls but for humans as well.

1230 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am sure that those other companies and many others get a lot more taxpayers' money than this particular one, and therefore I do not think that that reference is valid.

Mr Speaker, I have no reason to doubt the ability of the team that has been selected.

1235 I am quite amused at the fact that Members opposite – or some Members opposite – are taking more time out to discuss gull culling now that I am on this side of the House than when I was actually working with them on that very project. But there we are.

I do not think I can add anything further to this discussion. I do not have the information, and I think it is unfair to discuss individual applicants or otherwise in this forum.

1240 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, can I remind the Hon. the Minister that actually this particular contract was for a substantial amount of money – £207,000? That is a lot of money for the taxpayer. Will he therefore undertake, at the very least, to investigate what the Hon. the Shadow Minister for the Environment is saying, and indeed what I am saying, because we have separately both effectively received complaints about this and received information that causes us concern; otherwise we would not be raising it in this House.

1245 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think there is any need for me to carry out any further investigations. If the Members opposite have concerns, they are always free to write to me – they could have written to me before bringing it up here – and then I will reply accordingly.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Q488/2014 continued – Cultural grants – Awards in 2014-15

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Reyes.

1250 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, for giving me leave to come back to the Minister for Culture.

I refer to the schedule the Minister kindly passed in answer to Question 488.

1255 I would like to clarify, Mr Speaker, that I know in past years the Gibraltar Philharmonic Society has been given a £10,000 grant – that is the annual sponsorship that Government gives to them – and on this schedule it now comes as Gibraltar Philharmonic Orchestra with a side note that is for woodwind instruments to develop a Youth Orchestra.

For the avoidance of any doubt, can the Minister confirm that the Gibraltar Philharmonic Orchestra and the Gibraltar Philharmonic Society are both the same and one entity; or are they separate entities – and perhaps the Minister can then shed some light.

1260 Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Yes, Mr Speaker, I fully agree with the hon. Member and I will check why the word ‘Orchestra’ after the word ‘Philharmonic’ is there, because I think this is an error and it should probably say ‘Gibraltar Philharmonic Society’, of which they are doing wind instruments to develop the Youth Orchestra. I will check on that, and thank you very much.

1265 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, thank you, Mr Speaker, I shall await for the Minister, whenever he is able to verify, to inform us; and then, if need be, we could follow it up at other future sessions.
Thank you, Mr Speaker.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q498/2014

Yellow-legged gulls – Removal of nests from buildings

1270 Clerk: Question 498, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how many removals of nests of Yellow-legged gulls from homes and buildings have taken place since 1st April 2013 on a monthly basis?

1275 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 499 to 502.

Q499/2014

Yellow-legged gulls – Numbers culled since 1st April 2013

Clerk: Question 499, the Hon. J J Netto.

1280 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how many Yellow-legged gulls have been culled since 1st April 2013 on a monthly basis?

Q500/2014

Yellow-legged gulls – Numbers culled in areas designated for imported partridges

Clerk: Question 500, the Hon. J J Netto.

1285 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how many Yellow-legged gulls have been culled in areas designated for the partridges imported from Morocco since 1st April of this year on a monthly basis, in order to avoid having these partridges and their chicks eaten by the seagulls?

Q501/2014
Feral cats –
Numbers culled in areas designated for imported partridges

Clerk: Question 501, the Hon. J J Netto.

1290 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how many feral cats have been culled in areas designated for the partridges imported from Morocco, since first April of this year on a monthly basis, in order to avoid having these partridges killed as has happened to the previous indigenous Barbary partridges?

Q502/2014
Upper Rock Nature Reserve –
Measures to reduce seagulls, feral cats and rats

Clerk: Question 502, the Hon. J J Netto.

1295 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state what pest controlling measures have been in place in the Upper Rock Nature Reserve since December 2012, and what success have these had on the control of reducing seagulls, feral cats and rats in the Upper Rock Nature Reserve?

1300 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a total of 190 eggs, 219 chicks and 37 fledged – adult, sub-adult or juvenile – gulls have been removed as a result of house calls since April 2013. These have been removed from nests or in the vicinity of nests. Details of monthly totals are provided in the schedule I now hand over.

1305 A total of 4,011 Yellow-legged gulls have been culled since 1st April 2013, the majority of which have been adult birds. Details of monthly totals are provided in the schedule also going over now.

1310 Removal of Yellow-legged gulls from areas designated for partridges may not have the effect of avoiding partridge chicks being taken by gulls, for the following reasons. First, gulls are highly mobile birds. Most foraging takes place at a considerable and sometimes very great distance away from nesting areas.

Removal of gull nests from small areas would therefore not guarantee reduced predation of partridge chicks in those areas.

1315 Secondly, the aim is for the partridges to disperse and colonise as much habitat in Gibraltar as possible. Further to this, gulls are culled in all areas of Gibraltar that are deemed suitable and safe by the Royal Gibraltar Police.

1320 Mr Speaker, no instruction to cull feral cats in the areas designated for partridges have been issued by the Ministry for the Environment or the Department of the Environment since 1st April 2014. The Department of the Environment has been surveying the areas designated for the release of Barbary partridges and these are, to the best of our knowledge, suitable for release purposes.

1325 As far as the Yellow-legged gulls are concerned, culling is ongoing. Long-term data show that culling is successful in controlling the gull population in Gibraltar. Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar has taken the additional measure of providing means for the employment, as we saw earlier, of two locally based, full-time members of the gull control unit. No instructions to cull cats or rats have been issued by the Ministry or the Department.

Answer to Question 498

Monthly totals are:

April 2013	2 fledged, 18 eggs
May 2013	3 fledged, 45 chicks, 27 eggs
June 2013	53 chicks
July 2013	14 fledged
January 2014	1 fledged
February 2014	2 fledged
March 2014	2 fledged
April 2014	108 eggs
May 2014	4 fledged, 88 chicks, 37 eggs
June 2014	9 fledged, 33 chicks

The months August to December have been excluded because these lie outside the breeding period. Not all house calls result in removal of nests, eggs or chicks, due to access and safety issues. For example, over 200 house calls were attended to during Spring 2014. House calls are also attended to outside of the breeding period, as shown by the January and February records.

1330 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in the answer provided by the Hon. Minister I think he alluded to the fact that it does not necessarily follow that by culling the seagulls we are protecting the partridges. However, I put it to him that the main culprit of the reduction of partridges in Gibraltar clearly comes as a result of either seagulls or feral cats. There may be other predators, but indeed the bulk of the predators come either from seagulls or cats – is that not the case?

1335 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. What I said in my answer is specifically in areas where the partridge release is going to be – culling gulls in that particular area may not be effective, or any more effective than in any other area, because the gulls would come in from the other areas. That is the distinction.

1340 The gull culling is proceeding, as I said earlier, but is not necessarily relevant to cull them in an area where you are going to release... because they will be moving in from other areas, and also because the release area is only temporary because we are hoping that the partridges will spread throughout the whole of Gibraltar.

1345 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, for that clarification by the Hon. Minister. However, could he perhaps elucidate a bit further in his answers, in the sense that although the culling is not taking place necessarily in those particular designated areas but rather perhaps on a much wider area within the Upper Rock Nature Reserve... can he actually provide some information as to the culling that is taking place both of seagulls... and perhaps explain why no instructions have been given as to the culling of feral cats?

1350 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. As far as gulls are concerned, it is a general cull. I have given figures and it covers the whole of the area.

1355 As far as other predators are concerned, we have noticed, even before the release this year, a certain increase in the number of partridges, probably related to the clearing of more vegetation, which has opened up more habitat. Surveys are being carried out, which seem to suggest that there may be no need at this point in time to have any further involvement in the removal of potential predators.

1360 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I notice that the Hon. Minister has not replied to one component of my supplementary question, which is as to why the reason why no instruction has been given for the culling of feral cats.

1365 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, that is what I meant – because without that happening it seems that the local population was able to expand. It seemed that it was the habitat which was more of an issue. We have tackled that one; there may be no need to tackle the other. This is obviously something that is being continuously assessed.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has been taking measures in order to reduce the feral cat population – is that not the case?

1370 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: There had been measures taken in built-up areas, which led to something of a controversy some months ago, and for the moment the culling is not taking place. What is happening is that the Cat Welfare Society has been supplied with equipment by the Department and is removing cats and taking them to their premises. So that is what is happening at the moment.

Q503/2014
Electromagnetic emissions –
Risks to health

Clerk: Question 503, the Hon. J J Netto.

1375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Health and the Environment say whether the Government has had the opportunity to consider the ESG concerns over the possible risks to health due to emissions from radio-frequency radiation by the use of cell and portable phones, cell towers, mast antennae, wireless monitors and routers etc; and if so, state what the Government position is in relation to the Bioinitiative Report of 2012?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1385 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Regulatory Authority (GRA) is responsible for the management of the electromagnetic spectrum in Gibraltar. This includes compliance with electromagnetic field emissions (EMF) from transmitters as per international guidelines by an organisation known as ICNIRP. As part of the licensing process, the Authority conducts a site inspection on all mobile base station installations, and routinely audits base stations throughout Gibraltar for compliance.

1390 In relation to the Bioinitiative Report of 2012, this was raised at a presentation organised by the ESG on Tuesday, 7th October – this month. The relevant Departments are in the process of reviewing the contents of said report.

1395 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, obviously, I welcome the fact that the Government has taken the opportunity to engage with the concerns raised by the ESG, and that as a result of that, various Government Departments – presumably the Department of Education, and others indeed – will look into the matter in relation to those particular hazards.

1400 Does the Minister for Health and the Environment have a specific view as to whether those particular guidelines he referred to – the international guidelines – do actually match with the European Council in relation to the safety of these particular issues?

1405 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is an interesting question. For example, when one is talking about emission of pollutants, there are EU guidelines and other international guidelines – and my own personal guideline would be that it would be wonderful to have zero emissions, but that is obviously not practical. Therefore, whether I think that the international guidelines are absolutely correct is taking it a step too far.

1410 It is my duty, as Minister of the Government, to ensure that we keep to international regulations. It is my duty also to try and ensure that the risk to the public on anything that goes out into the atmosphere – be it gaseous emissions or be it electromagnetic radiation – is the least possible when it is established that these are harmful. We are sticking to international regulations. I have been discussing with the ESG and others, including the operators, for a number of years, and with the GRA, and we have a policy in which we try, even within the international guidelines, to minimise emissions as far as possible.

What I can say is that we are certainly complying with international regulations and we are constantly reviewing and keeping in touch with developments elsewhere to ensure the maximum safety to the people.

Nesting facilities for swallows –
Provision at old St Bernard's Hospital

Clerk: Question 504, the Hon. J J Netto.

1415 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please state whether nesting facilities for swallows will be reprovided on completion of the old St Bernard's Hospital conversion?

1420 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the simple answer is no, sir. However, I suspect that the hon. Member opposite... In fact, swallows have not been recorded nesting in Gibraltar in recent times, probably since the 1970s or early 1980s, but the Hon. Member might be referring to swifts, in which case I can add, before a supplementary is asked, that swift boxes will be provided upon completion of the project.

Q505/2014

Environment (Control of Dust) Regulation 2010 – Implementation at GOG construction sites

Clerk: Question 505, the Hon. J J Netto.

1425 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state whether all GOG construction sites are implementing the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulation 2010?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1430 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, to the knowledge of the Environmental Agency, yes, they are. As my hon. colleague across the floor will be aware, the Environmental Agency is the competent authority for dust control in all construction sites.

1435 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker, the Environmental Agency is the policing authority in these matters, but the fact is that it does not happen in all Government construction sites.

I have taken the liberty of taking some photographs from the old St Bernard's Hospital, not only yesterday but a couple of months ago, and if I can pass the photographs over to the Hon. Minister he will see that they are not complying with the legislation, the contractor on a Government project.

1440 Given that they are not complying with the legislation, does it mean that... What I would like to know is whether the particular contractor – I am not sure whether it is GJBS – has actually solicited, prior to starting the works, the necessary paperwork to be considered; and whether the Environmental Agency has given them permission to do so. If they have done so, then probably they are committing an offence under the law, so can the Minister respond to that?

1445 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not need to see the photographs. I am grateful for the Member opposite having taken the time to provide them.

1450 The fact that there is an incident of dust in an area does not mean that the regulations do not apply, or are not being applied, or will not be applied. An incident of dust in an area will alert the Environmental Agency to approach the contractor and to enter into a discussion with the contractor to ensure that the regulations are applied. In fact, it has happened in a number of different sites throughout Gibraltar – private and for Government projects – on which there have been incidents. The Environmental Agency has engaged with them and they have subsequently complied. The Environmental Agency will not allow a breach of the law, and will not breach the law in allowing a breach of the law.

1455 Therefore, I am satisfied that dust control... the Agency is on top of these things, regularly dealing with contractors. Sometimes contractors may not have taken the steps initially, but the dialogue, as I said, is entered into, and ultimately the question of dust is controlled as per the requirements of the law. So I am satisfied that this has been the case in all projects, including Government projects.

1460 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister may be satisfied, but certainly the whole neighbourhood around this particular construction site are not satisfied, because they have a situation of dust going into their own houses and they are having to clean, on a daily basis, the amount of dust emanating from the construction site. So, whilst he may be satisfied, certainly the neighbourhood is not satisfied, and the question remains whether the Environmental Agency has provided a certificate to put the dust panels on the scaffolding, or not.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am often approached with complaints – all sorts of things, actually – of dust in certain sites. This one has not come to my notice. If the neighbours are concerned – which obviously they might well be, if there are such incidents – then I will ask the Environmental Agency to look into it and ensure that we comply with the law.

1470 As I say, there will be incidents in all sites, which are then tackled, and contractors – including the ones who are working for the Government – do co-operate and take steps and go out of their way to ensure that the inconvenience to the public is minimised. I will now certainly take this up and ensure that all the proper processes are in place.

1475 Hon. J J Netto: Can I further ask the hon. Member whether he can also look at the fact of whether the contractor has been in breach of the legislation; and if so, whether they will be fined?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I will ensure that the law is enforced, but I do not think I can go into details as to what may or may not have happened in a speculative manner.

Mr Speaker: This is perhaps a convenient moment to have a short break of eight to 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 11.24 a.m. and resumed its sitting at 11.37 a.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS

Standing Order 7(1) suspended to proceed with a Government Statement

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

1485 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to move, under Standing Order 7(3), to suspend Standing Order 7(1) in order to proceed with a Government Statement.

Mr Speaker: Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

GOVERNMENT STATEMENT

Statement by the Chief Minister – Visit of Secretary of State for Defence, Rt. Hon. Michael Fallon

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have today welcomed the Rt. Hon. Michael Fallon MP, the UK Defence Secretary, to Gibraltar for a short visit.

1495 The Defence Secretary and I jointly paid tribute to all those working in support of the Ministry of Defence activities in Gibraltar and agreed that the current threats to regional and global security arising from West Africa to the Middle East underscored once again the strategic importance of a permanent joint operating base in Gibraltar, very much of the current agreed size and shape going forward. Mr Speaker, this will be very welcome news to locally employed civilians at the base, and in particular the statement by the 1500 Defence Secretary this morning in the press conference that no job losses are envisaged for there. (Applause and banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, we are announcing in a joint statement being released to the media today that the Ministry of Defence will shortly invite commercial tenders for the resurfacing of the runway at Gibraltar Airport, with the work expected to begin next summer. The airfield will remain open for civilian and military air traffic during the works, which are a tangible indication of the Ministry of Defence's long-term 1505 commitment to Gibraltar. The runway was last resurfaced in 1993.

I and the Defence Secretary also announced that we have agreed that in future – in future, but not now – the cost of replacing key elements of Defence infrastructure at the airfield would be shared equally in recognition of the strategic importance of those assets to commercial use of the airfield, and hence to 1510 Gibraltar's economy as well as to its military use.

Also on airfield issues, the Defence Secretary and I reaffirmed the joint commitment to the transfer of the Defence Fire and Rescue Services to the Government of Gibraltar, and we also took the opportunity to welcome the joint work that had already been carried out to this end and look forward to approving the 1515 transfer at the earliest opportunity. Mr Speaker, this will be very welcome news for the men of the DFRS who have previously seen the MOD blow hot and cold on this issue.

1520 Under agreements dating back to 1974, the Ministry of Defence has transferred areas of land it held for defence purposes, and which it no longer needs, to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar for it to retain or dispose of for community or commercial use. The Defence Secretary and I have welcomed the recent progress that was made on such transfers and have initiated work on a further Lands Agreement to be agreed in early 2015.

1525 This is expected to include a commitment to transfer to Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar a block of warehousing at the naval base, once key elements of the 2011 Lands Agreement have been completed. The aim is to achieve this transfer within 12 months of today's agreement in principle. It is also expected to include a commitment for the transfer of the site at Rosia Bay, previously known as Fortress Headquarters, on completion and implementation of all previous Lands Agreements, and this is likely to occur in the course of 2017. Hon. Members will know that this is an iconic site, which the whole of the community will be very happy to note will be handed over to the nation's Government shortly. In both instances, Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar will not be making any contribution to re-providing these MOD facilities.

1530 Finally, I welcome with the Defence Secretary the commitment to introduce by this Government legislation to the Parliament in the next few weeks to place the Royal Gibraltar Regiment on the same footing as its British Army counterparts, highlighting its continuing valuable contribution, both in Gibraltar and deployed on operations. Mr Fallon stated, Mr Speaker, that he expected that the Royal Gibraltar Regiment would remain at its current size and shape for the foreseeable future. (Banging on desks) With a strategic defence and security review to be held in the next 12 months, this language will be very welcome by members and family members of the Royal Gibraltar Regiment, as well as the whole community.

1535 Mr Speaker, this morning, the Defence Secretary shared with me the latest concerns and proposed actions which the COBRA committee, chaired by the Prime Minister, had discussed in relation to the Ebola outbreak in West Africa. We have agreed to continuing close contact at a political and official level on this issue of fundamental importance.

1540 Before meeting with me at 6 Convent Place, Mr Fallon was able to get out into the full extent of British Gibraltar territorial waters with the Gibraltar Squadron and observe for himself the geography which is much the subject of debate in respect of the repeated incursions by the Spanish state vessels in our waters.

1545 Finally, I want to acknowledge that in relation to the cost of the resurfacing of the runway, the hon. the backbencher, Sir Peter Caruana, has assisted me greatly on this issue when he highlighted, at the time of the transition from one administration to another, that this was an issue that the Ministry of Defence had raised with him and on which there was an element of negotiation still to go. He has been very helpful in the past months in providing access to his administration's files and providing a written record of his recollection of events, which has assisted me in my negotiations and strengthened Gibraltar's hands generally.

1550 I am also grateful for the generous assistance of my own Cabinet colleagues in respect of these negotiations. (Applause and banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1555 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Opposition certainly welcomes the Statement that the Hon. the Leader of the House has made. It is welcome on a number of fronts. It is welcomed in particular because it adds to the security and the stability of a lot of families that work in the MOD as a sector, and that is always to be welcome. It is always something that we will support – any initiative and any result that leads to the security of jobs, not only in that sector but also in other sectors.

1560 Mr Speaker, in particular I also welcome the confirmation of the transfer of the Defence Fire Service from the MOD into the Gibraltar Government. It is something that we were very much committed to when we were in Government and I am glad that it is finally happening and that it has been announced by the Government today. So, on the whole, Mr Speaker, we welcome it and it is very good news, not only for those working in the sector but also for Gibraltar generally.

Mr Speaker: Does any hon. Member of the Opposition wish to ask any question for clarification?

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q506/2014

Ebola virus –

Level of threat to Gibraltar and measures in place

Mr Speaker: We then proceed with the next Question on the agenda, which is Question 506.
The Hon. Danny Feetham.

1570

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what threat, if any, does the Government believe is posed to the population in Gibraltar by the Ebola virus, and what measures has the Government put in place in order to deal with that threat?

1575

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1580

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the outbreak of Ebola virus disease has now been active since mid-March 2014, as we clearly know from the media, in several West African countries. The disease is a viral haemorrhagic fever with high mortality, but as it spreads to humans by direct contact the risk of infection is usually limited to close contacts of the ill person, such as relatives and healthcare workers.

1585

The risk of the disease manifesting in Gibraltar is extremely small. Typically, it requires that someone who has been in direct bodily contact with an infected person travels to Gibraltar within 21 days and takes ill after arrival. This complex scenario is unlikely to be the case with casual visitors, passing ships, or asylum seekers; the greatest risk lies in the case of returning humanitarian aid and healthcare workers, which is not relevant to Gibraltar.

1590

Although European authorities and the World Health Organisation have not advised travel restrictions to or from the affected areas, the Government has put in place a number of precautions for increased vigilance at the points of entry. The Port of Gibraltar has strengthened the standard medical protocols already in place based on public health laws – such as the Quarantine Act, and the International Health Regulations which were implemented earlier this year – with specific scrutinies and measures applied to ships and passengers. Government Departments monitoring points of entry – including the Borders and Coastguard Agency, HM Customs, the Airport and the Police – have also been issued with protocols and training. The International Air Transport Association (IATA) rules will apply to all scheduled airlines entering Gibraltar.

1595

All doctors in Gibraltar have been issued with guidance designed by Public Health England to identify persons who could have the disease. This guidance has been exercised and applied strictly on three occasions, but other common illnesses, like malaria, turned out to be the causes. Nevertheless, these false positives are a necessary price to be paid for continued vigilance. I would like to add here that the guidance has been issued to private doctors as well as GHA doctors.

1600

If a case is suspected, the Gibraltar Health Authority has in place a comprehensive viral haemorrhagic fevers policy covering preparedness, disease recognition, staff protection, infection control, clinical treatment, specialist advice and waste disposal. The hospital has prepared a dedicated isolation unit with ample stocks of the recommended personal protection equipment. A remote facility for isolating, monitoring and managing the contacts is under preparation.

1605

Since early September, the infection control nurses have delivered training to over 100 GHA staff and 100 other officers.

The Director of Public Health participates in a regular teleconference with Public Health England to stay abreast of developments and guidance.

In summary, the risk of encountering a case of Ebola virus disease in Gibraltar is and remains extremely remote, but the first-level precautions are in place, facilities for swift response are ready, safe practice is being embedded in the workforce and vigilance continues to be maintained.

Mr Speaker, I do have a report on the preparedness, prepared by the Director of Public Health, which is not a formal schedule but I will make this available to Members who may be interested to read it.

1615

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am very grateful to the hon. Member for indicating he is prepared to share that information; the more information that we share – not only across the House, but indeed with members of the public – on something as important as this, the more people's concerns will be assuaged and calmed, because of course people see the images on TV every single day and the devastation that this particular illness is wreaking in West Africa.

1620

Mr Speaker, in the press release that the Hon. the Minister issued – and indeed he has quoted from it today – he said that typically the disease:

1625 'requires that someone who has been in direct bodily contact with an infected person travels to Gibraltar within 21 days and takes ill after arrival.'

Then it says:

1630 'In this complex scenario it is unlikely to be the case that casual visitors, business travellers, passing ships, medical tourists, asylum seekers or indirect contacts...'

are likely to effectively come to Gibraltar without the disease having effectively taken hold.

The Hon. the Minister again said today there is a potential risk in the case of humanitarian aid and healthcare workers, but that is not applicable to Gibraltar because, as I understand it, there are no such individuals from Gibraltar working in that field.

1635 But, Mr Speaker, has the hon. Gentleman, or the Government, or agencies on its behalf, done an actual risk assessment of where it is that there might be higher risk – and I accept that we are talking about very low risk – but higher risk, of somebody with this disease coming into Gibraltar? For example, has the Government done an assessment that indicates that perhaps – and I am just talking from common sense; I am not an expert, although I have been briefed by some experts in some of the questions that I am going to be asking the hon. Gentleman – through the ferry from Morocco to Gibraltar might be a potential higher risk than in other areas?

1640 Has that kind of risk assessment being done; and if it has, what kind of extra measures have been adopted in relation to those riskier points of entry?

1645 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, certainly all these things are constantly being considered, and there is a tremendous amount of communication between different Government Departments. The Director of Public Health certainly himself has been for months now in contact with different Government Departments.

1650 I can say that last Friday, immediately upon his return from New York, the Chief Minister chaired a meeting of the C3. All relevant agencies were present and they were able to advise the Government and the Chief Minister – and my hon. Friend, Minister Linares and I are also members of that body – and they were able to advise in respect of all the respective competences.

1655 No further action is recommended at this stage, in keeping with the protocols established by the experts at the time of the swine flu outbreak, which also saw a lot of concerns, even though swine flu is easier to spread than Ebola, fortunately.

The situation is under daily review, given Gibraltar could receive an infected person by land, sea or air, as could anywhere else in the world. Controls will likely identify easy arrivals by sea or air coming in from the most infected regions, or showing symptoms of the infection manifesting. It would be harder to detect, of course, at the land frontier if the person came in by vehicle, but all these issues are under active consideration and the Government rules out nothing in dealing with the outbreak if it is advised by experts to take a particular measure.

1665 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that answer and I hope that the hon. Gentleman does not detect – and he will not detect – any criticism from me in the handling by the Government of this particular issue. My sole purpose today is to explore what precautions have been taken, and indeed for the public to actually listen to the Minister explaining some of the questions that have certainly been put to me, so that their concerns can be alleviated, if they have any.

1670 Mr Speaker, I take it from the answer that the Hon. Minister has given me that really the authorities are treating all the entry points into Gibraltar in exactly the same way and the protocols apply to each one, and there is not any heightened scrutiny, shall we say, in relation to any particular point of entry than any other?

1675 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I can be of assistance, as the Chair of the C3 last Friday – that is not quite correct. Each entry point requires a different level of scrutiny to be applied in respect of people coming into Gibraltar. For example, at the Airport, one of the things that is being done is the monitoring from where people may have transferred on another aircraft or transited from another aircraft. If somebody were trying to transit from one of the affected areas to a flight to Gibraltar, then that would be highlighted. If somebody were to manifest with the symptoms, that is also something that is being looked out for at the Airport. So it is common at the three entry points to look for symptoms. That is something that we have our Borders and Coastguard agents, our Customs agents, and indeed our police officers, looking for in each of these areas.

1680 What the hon. Gentleman has said is that the hardest place in which to detect a symptomatic patient, or a symptomatic entrant, is the land frontier, if that person is coming in by vehicle. If somebody is coming in symptomatic at the ferry terminal, they will be as easy to spot to the trained eye of a Borders and Coastguard agent, or a Customs agent – and they have had the basic training to spot it – as they would be at 1685 the Airport or walking across the land frontier. So what we have identified as a particular risk is somebody who might come in in a vehicle, and because they are in a vehicle it is almost impossible to detect whether that person is symptomatic.

1690 If somebody is coming in through the ferry, then the protocol does involve noting whether that person – through their passport, and at the ferry there is a much deeper scrutiny of passports than there is perhaps elsewhere – whether that person has been in one of the affected areas in the recent past. All of the affected areas, as I understand it, still stamp passports, and there would therefore be an immigration signal on the document that the person had been in the infected area.

1695 So the advice that we have is that the protocols developed in respect of each of the entry points involves a risk assessment particular to the entry point, so that we understand that different things have to be done at each of the different entry points to try and detect these individuals. What we cannot discard, and what no nation can, unfortunately discard at the moment, is that somebody who is not symptomatic comes into Gibraltar and then becomes symptomatic. There is absolutely no way at the moment that it is possible to detect that, short of giving everybody who is coming to Gibraltar a test, and making them wait for the required period whilst that test verifies.

1700 I know this is not going to be a subject on which there is going to be a partisan division in Gibraltar. It is going to be a subject on which we are all going to want to achieve the same aim, and what we are going to want to do is ensure that the relevant agencies – which are Government agencies, and in effect advise the Government – have all the resources available in order to be able to do the work that they need to do. Unfortunately, there is not, at the moment, a silver bullet out there that we can buy for our agencies that they can obtain and have available to them to deal with this issue. In the swine flu epidemic it became the position that there was an antidote for the flu, and therefore the Government at the time bought a large quantity of that antidote – and in fact when the swine flu epidemic manifested in Gibraltar it was no longer an epidemic in the world. There were a couple of individuals affected by it, we had the ability to deal with them, but it was well-nigh, I think, a year or two years after this had been big news and was actually catching fire around the world.

1710 So, at the moment, the advice that we have is that it is very unlikely to manifest in Gibraltar, but that advice is based on good faith and reading all the relevant international medical and immigration information that there is available. As I have said to the House a moment ago, I have exchanged views on the subject with the Defence Secretary, who was at a meeting of COBRA yesterday dealing with the subject, and we have agreed to continue in contact with the UK authorities as they develop their own protocols to deal with the subject. The Convent is a conduit for that and has been important in ensuring that we are availed of the same up-to-date information that the Borders Agency in the United Kingdom has available to it.

1715 At this stage I think that the House will be pleased to know that the advice that the political Government has from those who are responsible for risk assessment in the C3 is that there is not much more to do at the moment because there is not a huge risk at the moment.

1725 It is also true to say, and I am happy to inform the House, that when people have sought disembarkation in Gibraltar in the past two or three weeks, who have embarked on merchantmen in the affected areas, we have either prevented disembarkation for the quarantine period, so it is clear that they are not infected with the virus, or simply said that if they are not prepared to put up with the incubation period and not prepared to put up with the test, then although we will allow embarkation of new crew men to merchant shipmen, we will not allow disembarkation.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much for that answer.

1730 As the Hon. the Chief Minister rightly points out, you can have a situation where somebody does not reflect the relevant symptoms coming into Gibraltar and then develops the symptoms later on, and that really is the difficulty.

1735 When somebody is travelling from the United Kingdom, for example – and at the Airport, that really effectively is what we are talking about – it might be very... it might be easier – not very easy, but easier – to monitor where that person has actually been traveling from, because if that person is or has been in transit from an affected area, that information is readily available.

1740 The problem with the entry via the ferry is that you are talking about people who have entered from Africa, and of course they may not have visited the affected states or affected countries but they may have come in contact with people who have visited those affected states. I just wonder whether there are any additional protocols in relation to that entry point that are over and above the protocols in relation to the Airport, for example.

1745 Of course, in this particular case, if there are going to be additional protocols, we are talking about additional questions, perhaps more frequent checking of passports, of people. I cannot for one moment... unless of course the situation were to get considerably graver, that you are going to stop every single person in a line and ask every single person a series of questions. If the situation gets worse, then it may come to that, but what additional protocols, if any, are there in relation to this particular entry point? It has been identified to me as potentially riskier – if we can call it that – than other areas.

1750 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me start at the end: I do not think it is riskier, because today, a lot of people who go to Africa and come into Gibraltar actually choose to do so by going to Algeciras or Tarifa, doing a ferry transfer there and then coming back into Gibraltar through the land frontier, simply because of the frequency of ferries. Somebody can choose, unless they have not got a British passport, to make the entry at any time of their choosing any day of the week and not have to wait for the Friday ferry and the Sunday return. That is why I am telling the hon. Gentleman that there needs to be equal scrutiny at 1755 the land frontier in respect of such persons who may have travelled to North Africa.

In respect of the ferry itself, what I told him before was that people are being subjected to very detailed passport checks, so he must not think... He said ‘more frequent’ passport checks. He must not think that at the ferry terminal people are not subjected to passport checks. They are all subjected to exhaustive passport checks – indeed, at the Airport as well. It is not just a question of more frequent checks – every passport is 1760 checked at the ferry terminal. What is happening is it is now being checked to see whether there is a stamp from one of those affected areas.

The other question of course is, as the hon. Gentleman has postulated: what happens in the case of an individual who has only been to Morocco, but in Morocco has been with somebody who has been in that area? Indeed, it does not matter whether that person has been to that area: somebody who is infected. You could have a person infected in Morocco, who has been infected in some chain from an infected area. So the question is there, as the hon. Gentleman has suggested, of questioning, and that is also happening at the ferry terminal; but not just questioning – also information. The questioning is a difficult one – ‘Have you been in contact with anybody who has manifested any of the symptoms of Ebola?’ – but of course if somebody has been in touch with somebody who does not manifest the symptoms of Ebola, then the 1770 medical advice is that there should be no risk because it should only be contagious once it is symptomatic and in various contact, which is close contact, once it is symptomatic. That is the advice at the moment.

At the Airport, you have the advantage that the flights are all from the United Kingdom. The United Kingdom is communicating to us whether somebody is transiting from those areas, but you have the added difficulty that somebody may not transit from those areas. Somebody may arrive in the United Kingdom, 1775 leave the airport – not do a transit – for a few hours or for a few days, and then wish to come to Gibraltar.
So again, there is the need for vigilance and they are looking at passports and not simply relying on the fact that we may have been told that that person has been in transit. So we are looking at everyone to ensure that this vigilance is maintained, and any hint that somebody has been in the area is picked up in the best possible way.

1780 I want to leave him with a thought that I gave him earlier: first, about the land frontier being particularly problematic because of transfers through North Africa; and second, the issue that our Port is not just the ferry.

This is where I told him that we have a strong business in bunkers and in transshipment. In other words, crew are coming onshore in Gibraltar and changing crew in Gibraltar. We have already had instances of a 1785 vessel having to remain in quarantine before it was allowed to dock for a particular period of time, and until everything was confirmed and all tests had been done and the quarantine period – in other words, a double filter had been done – they were not allowed to dock. That was uncomfortable, that caused demurrage, but we were not prepared to put the community at risk in any other way, and we have prevented people who are not prepared to put up with that wait from actually coming ashore to disembark here and then fly home 1790 from here, because they were not prepared to put up with the testing or the demurrage time.

So this is a difficult issue. There are some instances where the risk is there, and that is why the risk assessment is made, to see how best to manage the risk without, in effect, closing our borders, which I am sure is not something that hon. Members would want to see the Government doing unless we were to reach almost the stage of global meltdown, where each community, in effect, shuts itself in. Economically, what 1795 that would mean for the world would be actually quite disastrous, and we sincerely hope we are not going to reach that stage and that we can put reasonable measures in place at each of these entry points – which we already have done – to ensure that the right questions, the right checking etc, are asked; and also, if I may say so, in relation to the particular part of our community that is more likely to be traveling to North Africa, information.

1800 One of the things that the C3 has recommended, and is now happening, is that there will be information disseminated amongst our Moroccan community, our Moroccan workers community in particular, to advise them of what a symptomatic person may be reflecting, so that they can understand for themselves, if they are back home in Morocco, what they need to be looking out for and what they need to report, so that they have no fear that in coming back into Gibraltar they might be treated like a pariah and prevented entry and 1805 that actually what will happen, if they are in contact with someone, is that they will be given the medical treatment they need to ensure that they are not going to become symptomatic, and are dealt with appropriately.

1810 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes Mr Speaker, I had wanted to ask the hon. Member a supplementary on a subject that he has, in fact, just touched on a few minutes ago in that last response.

1815 First of all, might I just express my personal view that, in addition to whatever sense there might be in taking particular precautions in respect of particular risk areas at particular borders, which I imagine the Government will do there what it can, I think the Government is right in focusing on training of staff – in other words, focusing on what we would do if a case occurred in Gibraltar, rather than trying to prevent the needle from falling into the haystack in the first place, which is really for calming of public concern, but actually is probably very ineffective.

1820 I have been taken, only as a layman... I have absolutely no training on these things, except the knowledge that I acquired, as he is now acquiring, from being exposed to having to handle the issue. We talk about spotting symptoms at entry points. The reality is that the symptom, by which time you are contagious, is little more than a low temperature. Well, how do you spot, unless you measure everybody's temperature with a temperature gun, which I understand is being contemplated in some places now, how do you spot the fact, however vigilant you are, that somebody has a low temperature? It is not even a blistering temperature with sweating. You are not bleeding at the nose; all that comes much later. By the time you have only a low temperature you are already symptomatic and in a contagious state, so the idea that we can prevent the needle from falling into the haystack called Gibraltar is certainly worth doing everything that we can, and I think the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is right to spot to be more concerned about some entry points than others.

1830 But my question is this. The Hon. Chief Minister has said that the Government is looking out for people who travel from particular destinations in transit or whatever. Can the hon. Member be just a little bit clearer – he has just touched on it – about what the consequences would be if somebody did turn up at the Airport with a Sierra Leone stamp in his passport? If I went to Sierra Leone and came back with a Sierra Leone stamp, what is the Government... What is the policy? (Interjection) Yes, the temptation to – (Laughter)

1835 Alright, let me just pick an easier example for the hon. Member to grapple with, then. If some dye-in-the-wool GSLP activist, the biggest cash donor to his party coffers, personal friend of all the Ministers on the other side, were to travel to Sierra Leone, what would be the protocol? Would it just be a question of assessing the risk there and then, at the spot, by the officer on duty, or is there something... I am not for one moment suggesting that I think there should be any such thing; I am just asking what actually the Government's policy is.

1840 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is good that we have a moment of levity dealing with something quite as serious as this is.

I know that we have had, in fact, three Members of this House out in Cameroon for some time, and they were welcomed back despite that little adventure.

1845 There is a protocol in place, when you spot somebody who has been to that area, to take them aside, ask further questions and offer health cover and, if necessary, if that report goes up to the relevant health official, to detain them to carry out tests – obviously, initially at invitation, if necessary.

1850 These are not things that are going to manifest often, simply because one of the things you do, as he will know, in these situations is to say, 'Well, how often do we have, on average, visitors from Sierra Leone and from Guinea etc?' What I am trying to say to them is that actually it is more often than they might think, but it is not through the Airport usually; it is usually through the Port. It is usually when they come off ships, having embarked there as crew members. We receive a lot of people usually from further east – from the Philippines – who embark in Gibraltar, but most of the people who manifest themselves from those destinations are coming in merchant ships and they are coming to Gibraltar from the sea on the way to the Airport.

1855 So the protocols that we have in place, which I have explained to the hon. Gentleman have kicked in twice when this has manifested itself at an entry at sea, are the sorts of protocols we would put in place if somebody were to manifest in person before an immigration official, either at the land frontier – where it is, as he will know, much harder to spot – or at the Airport.

1860 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: If I may, Mr Speaker, just to add that the Director of Public Health, should he need to use them, has powers under the Quarantine Act to take any person he suspects may be a risk to health and detain him for supervision and treatment.

1865 I would also just like to add something that I did not mention earlier. There will be a simulation exercise carried out by GHA professionals within the next couple of weeks to ensure readiness. A similar one was carried out in the UK, as people may have picked up from the news media. And of course the hard work of the Director of Public Health and the infection control nurses, who are leading on this, continues in training and increasing the readiness of everybody in Gibraltar.

1870 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have got a number of supplementaries in relation to this, but there is a point that has arisen from the exchanges between the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana and the Chief Minister, and it is this. The Chief Minister gave an example of the protocols kicking in for entries via the Port, and what he said was, 'Well, look, on a previous occasion we have had to prevent people from coming onshore for a period of time beyond the incubation of the disease to make sure that those people do not have the disease.'

1875 But of course you cannot do that – or can you? – when somebody is effectively entering Gibraltar via the Airport.

I think the question that I have is: what happens if, effectively, we know that somebody is coming from those affected areas via the Airport? Because if they were coming from the Port, they would be prevented from coming into Gibraltar, as the Hon. Chief Minister has said, until the incubation period of the disease has elapsed; but it is much more difficult in relation to the Airport, unless of course you force people – and 1880 then we are into the realms of whether it is possible to force people – to effectively be tested for the disease.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think to a great extent the Hon. the Minister for Health has given the answer to that question now when he has referred to the quarantine issue.

1885 It would be very peculiar for us to receive somebody at the Airport from one of these destinations without knowing that they are coming, because the person will have transited through the United Kingdom and, as I have told the hon. Gentleman, we are told by the United Kingdom before people embark that there is a person from one of these destinations coming, and we may be able to prevent them from coming whilst they are dealt with in the UK, which is better prepared to deal with these issues at airports because they 1890 know who is coming from where.

So, if we were not to be alerted to the arrival of a person through that mechanism – which could happen, as I told the hon. Gentleman if that person did not transit through an airport in the UK but left an airport in the UK, having got off a plane from one of those places and having passed the UK protocol... So they get off the plane, they pass the UK protocol for arrivals from that area and they leave the airport – they are not 1895 in transit – and the next day, or later that day, because they wanted to go out... Let's assume they are not trying to avoid the transit alert system... they get on a plane to Gibraltar. That could happen, and therefore the person could arrive here having been in one of those places. Then the protocol kicks in that the hon. Gentleman has referred to. That person would be taken aside, health professionals would be engaged, they would be offered the test; and if the health professionals thought it was appropriate, they might be quarantined, and if the individual did not wish to assist with that period of quarantine etc, they might have 1900 to be forcibly quarantined. It may be that that is something that we get to.

We are painting pictures that I hope we will never reach because people will not manifest in this way, people will be responsible if they come from one of these areas and they will understand that the health authorities do not just want to protect the general public from this disease, they will also want to help 1905 anybody who may have been exposed to it, to ensure that they get the right treatment from the moment that they say that they may have been exposed to it. Exposure to it, in geographical terms, does not mean that they are suffering from it. Somebody can be in Sierra Leone and come back from Sierra Leone without any difficulty – they have not been exposed to a person who has it; they have therefore not contracted it, they are not going to become symptomatic and they are okay. They are tested and then we can say to a great extent – unless it decides to mutate in a different way – that the virus is not present in the individual and that is it. But those are the types of protocols that would be engaged if somebody manifested with some transit through one of those countries.

There are other situations where people might not declare that they have come from one of these places – might have been able to avoid a stamp, might have been able to avoid the UK authorities. There are many 1915 ways in which this could happen.

My biggest concern, Mr Speaker, is not the Airport. My biggest concern is the land frontier. That is the most likely place for somebody to be able to get in. They simply get in a vehicle. If they have got a European passport, they flash it as they do at most times, and we would be very hard pressed to implement a harsher system now for people to come in in vehicular traffic without ourselves causing very, very 1920 lengthy queues indeed, probably of the sort that we complain the other side politically create in a reckless and negligent fashion.

We have to be careful not to put ourselves in a position, as the Hon. Sir Peter has said, where we are simply trying to ensure that nobody comes in with any chance of having been exposed to the disease – because what we need to do is be ready to treat it if it does manifest. Given the range of estimations that I

1925 have seen, this disease is either going to be dealt with very quickly or is going to explode before it is dealt with, but all the health professionals I have spoken to and all the advice I have read suggests that when the disease 'hits' western medicine, it is likely not to result in as many deaths as one is seeing in West Africa at

1930 the moment, although we have seen deaths in Western Europe and in the United States, but all of those cases had manifested themselves a long time before treatment had actually commenced to the standards of western medicine.

1935 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that. Moving on... Although, before I move on, there is a tension here in the protocol, in the sense that the protocols for entering via the Port appear to me to be very resilient indeed – the Government is insisting on people effectively not disembarking unless the incubation period expires – whereas, of course, the protocols in the United Kingdom, the protocols they may have for entering the United Kingdom may not be as resilient as the ones via the Port. Therefore, effectively, via that route one may be allowing people – I just leave the Hon. the Chief Minister with this – to come in under less stringent protocols than via the Port, unless of course one is prepared to take the decision to effectively quarantine people coming from these particular areas at the Airport, which causes difficulties in itself. I just leave the Hon. the Chief Minister with that.

1940 Just moving on, if someone arrives in Gibraltar and develops symptoms and believes that they are developing symptoms – for whatever reason: they have been in contact, or at risk, or whatever – and it is not detected at the entry point but they develop those symptoms, what is the advice that the Government gives those people? Of course, everything that we have said today deals with protocols for the GHA dealing with the particular disease at entry points, but equally I have not heard anything – and it is important for information to be provided to the public as to what the public or a member of the public has to do in that kind of situation. It may not be as obvious as some Members or indeed listeners listening to my question believe it to be.

1950 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to let the Hon. Minister for Health deal with that question, but in relation to the first part of it, when he talked about the more stringent conditions at the Port than at the Airport, he must not get away with thinking that we have had an instance at the Airport which has been dealt with any less stringently than at the Port. What I am telling him is that we have had incidents of people traveling from those places already manifest at the Port, and that is how we have dealt with it. We have not had any manifesting itself at the Airport, but as I have told him, we would deal with it in the same way. What I cannot tell him – and this is the real concern if we are going to flag some – is that we have not had somebody come through the land frontier who has actually been exposed, and that is the issue.

1955 So that takes us neatly to the second part of his question, which is: what happens if somebody has been exposed and is in Gibraltar undetected? Take it from me, it is more likely to happen through the land frontier than anywhere else. So, what is the position in that situation? There is, to some extent, already information put out in the public domain. There was a recent statement, I think, from the GHA, from Dr Kumar, but I will allow the Hon. the Minister for Health to deal with the substance of that.

1960 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I think the question is what do you do if a member of the public feels they may have... What we must be clear about is that if you took a random sample of 100 people, you would probably have at least 10 who have some kind of temperature, for a variety of reasons. So, a member of the public who has reason to suspect that he or a relative may have the virus – and as I say, at the moment in Gibraltar that should be zero – would have to have had some contact. So everybody who has got a temperature should not now think, ‘Oh, I may have this!’ We cannot have that; but if there is a genuine reason to think that they may have come into contact and they have a concern, then they should present to the medical authorities, be it in the Primary Care Centre or in St Bernard’s Hospital, informing immediately, obviously with some kind of justification. You cannot just go, ‘Here I am, I think I’ve got Ebola,’ and you get a hundred people, assuming that, then they will be fast-tracked.

1970 As I said before, we have isolation facilities, we have all the necessary gear, and all the necessary procedures will be followed that are necessary to deal with such a case. So in that respect we are certainly ready to receive; but as I say, at the moment it should be zero.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I accept that it should be zero and I accept... Again, I do not want to alarm anybody that there is a huge risk here in Gibraltar, but the answer that the hon. Gentleman has given me does cause me some concern, having myself sat down with some experts both in emergency management and also in other areas in relation to this.

1980 The point that has been made to me is that the last thing that you want, if there is a concern that somebody has picked up this disease, is for that person to be advised to either go to the Primary Care Centre or to casualty, because the moment that that person visits the primary care centre or casualty you are then risking actually closing down the Primary Care Centre and casualty because people there will have then come into contact. All I am wanting is for the information to get out to the public, so the public know what they need to do. That is my only interest, and it has been suggested to me that the best advice is for those people to effectively remain at home, to contact the authorities from home, and you will then have a 1990 medical team, properly equipped with all the necessary equipment and safeguards to visit that individual in situ where that person is, in order to prevent a spread of the disease. I just wonder whether the Hon. the Minister agrees with that and whether he wishes to perhaps clarify the answer that he gave me originally.

1995 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is one scenario and there are many potential scenarios. This is all speculation, and what I think we must guard against is alarming the public when we realise that this is all speculative.

I did not say go and sit down in A&E; I said inform the authorities. If they are at home... The thing is there is such a wide range of possibilities. At what stage is it that you happen to have been to one of those countries? Do you have certain symptoms? What grade of symptoms do you have?

2000 What I can do, Mr Speaker, is... The Health Authority has a viral haemorrhagic fever policy, which goes to 36 pages, which covers all those areas. At the appropriate time, those parts of it would obviously... They are all available on the GHA website, or will be very shortly. I will make a copy of this available to the Member opposite. That covers all those scenarios, but what we cannot do now – well, we can do, if we have got time to go through it all – is look at all these. What I can say is that the protocols are ready. Anybody who has concerns should inform the health authorities, but as I say, it is speculation because at the moment there should be no people in that situation. If there are, then obviously we want to know.

2010 Hon. Chief Minister: There is another angle to this, Mr Speaker, which is that people who might have a light fever should not call the GHA and ask to be seen at home, because there are likely to be hundreds of those people in Gibraltar today, and if everybody who has a light fever decides that they might have Ebola and wants to have the doctor go and see them, it is just going to put us in an impossible position.

2015 Therefore, the hon. Gentleman has to remember that what he is dealing with here is not swine flu. This is not an airborne epidemic; this is an epidemic that only passes through contact. Therefore, what might have been good in that instance – and there are some things which are similar and some of the triggers that were developed by the international community and which were adopted by C3 here at the time are still triggers that we will look for as the disease develops – are not necessarily the ways that we need to treat Ebola. Therefore, people who have a light temperature, who therefore might have Ebola – are not very likely to, but might have Ebola – should nonetheless manifest at the Primary Care Centre or at A&E.

2020 If you are going to give anybody advice, Mr Speaker, you should say, ‘Please don’t touch anybody else and don’t spit on anyone, please don’t have sex with anyone to exchange body fluids, and please don’t kiss anyone,’ because this is – as I read in The Times the other day, and I therefore do not say this frivolously – this is a disease that you can catch only from people who you are likely to have seen naked or somebody who you have touched. This is the way The Times described it, because it does require intimate contact.

2025 Therefore, if you are on a plane with somebody who has Ebola, you are not going to catch Ebola unless you come into contact with them. The important thing is contact. The advice should be to avoid contact with other people if you think you have Ebola – and ‘contact’ means in any way transferring fluid to a loved one, either on their skin or otherwise, but it does not mean do not turn up at a Primary Care Centre or at an Accident and Emergency Centre.

2030 If somebody is in the later throws of Ebola, the hon. Gentleman needs to understand that they are unlikely to be able to move and therefore they are unlikely to be able to go to a Primary Care Centre or an Accident and Emergency Centre. They are only likely to be able to be seen at home, because they would then be really manifesting very severe signs of this particular disease, and it will require the health professionals to come to them because they will not be able to go anywhere.

2035 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, if I may add to that –

Mr Speaker: May I? We have a problem here. The problem that we have is that here we are, all laymen, discussing a highly important and grave matter, but we are all laymen, and we are triggering off each other, Government and Opposition, additional points – and we could be here with additional points until tomorrow. But that is not the purpose, here in Parliament.

2040 This is a very grave issue. The public require information. They are not going to get all the information perhaps that they require by watching the transmission of the proceedings of the House or from reading whatever reports there are in the newspapers. The matter goes beyond that. For instance, press conferences: the media asking the specialists the pertinent questions on the matter.

2045 What I am saying is that we cannot ventilate the matter fully here today and what is happening is, rightly, a supplementary question is asked, an answer is given by lay persons, which in itself then triggers other supplementaries. As I say, if hon. Members wish to, we can carry on, because the last thing I want is to be accused of, as Speaker, is interrupting and not allowing a proper ventilation of what is a matter of public importance. But it is up to hon. Members, really.

2050 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might be of assistance, I think that is important guidance. We have two doctors on this side of the House, but neither of them has ever dealt with Ebola before, as I understand it.

If the hon. Gentleman will allow me, the advice that is out there at the moment and what we have published is what the specialists have advised we should say at this stage. There are other things that we would say at a later stage. Should the disease manifest in a different way, there are other protocols that we would put in place. That includes communications protocols.

2055 I am quite happy, if he wishes, to deal offline with any of the concerns that he may have, but he should have the confidence that the experts who are advising the Government – who are all, I am sure he will agree, entirely and fully versed with the concerns that are manifesting themselves throughout the medical and immigration community the world over, particularly in Western Europe and North America – are giving us the advice to say the things that we have said to date. But I am quite happy to deal with any issues that he wants to continue putting to the Government, to give him the satisfaction that there is not more that should be done or said at this stage and to deal with that offline so that we do not continue to ping-pong off each other, as you rightly say, as laymen, when in fact what has been done to date is what the experts have advised.

2060 Mr Speaker: May I also add that if at any stage, for instance later on today or even tomorrow, if hon. Members were to feel that it was necessary, there are rules which would allow the matter to be debated for 35 minutes without any recourse to the rules of Question Time. That could happen tomorrow evening, if Members so wish.

2070 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, may I assist just by... If I may follow on the point that you made earlier, that none of us are experts – this is why I referred to the clinical policy which has been developed by clinicians and which, as I said, I will make available. It is a very thorough document, which shows the protocols that would be in place.

Hon. D A Feetham: I am happy to correspond with the Government, but of course it is a matter of significant public interest. I do not want to necessarily debate it. There is no debate point.

2080 Mr Speaker: What I mean by ‘debate’ is that there would be 35 minutes allowed. Three or four Members of the Opposition could rise and raise a number of issues, and a Government Minister would then attempt to answer those issues.

2085 As I say, I intend to continue to be liberal. If Members wish to continue to ask supplementaries, I am not going to stop them. No-one is going to accuse me of interfering with the right of the public to be... know on what is a very serious issue. It is up to the Members.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I have very few supplementaries, if I may be allowed to just simply plough ahead.

2090 Nobody is suggesting that anybody who has a slight sniffle should call the GHA and then be visited by several men in suits, which will scare the entire neighbourhood! Nobody is suggesting that, but it has been suggested to me that perhaps more information... and I just leave it with the Government to consider what information it releases, or more information, bearing in mind everything the Chief Minister has said about the land frontier... and it is really virtually impossible, if there is a worldwide epidemic of this, for this not to reach Gibraltar... that the public is advised as to what somebody from the public does if reasonably, based on solid foundations, that person believes that, for whatever reason, that person maybe has contracted Ebola.

2095 All the advice that I have received – and I accept I am not an expert myself – is that the advice that those people should be receiving is not to leave their houses and to basically telephone the medical authorities, and then for any protocol of visits to those people to kick in, because what you do not want is for that person to effectively be walking either from their house to the Primary Care Centre, or indeed the Accident and Emergency. Indeed, the knock-on effect in those two places could be catastrophic.

2100 But can I move on and ask the Hon. the Minister for Health whether he is satisfied that everything is in place to properly diagnose the disease, and that the safety as well of Members of the laboratory staff in conducting those diagnoses is fully protected, and that everything is in place so that this disease can be properly diagnosed at the laboratory?

2105 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, dealing with his first point, what I need to emphasise to him is that he is telling the House that all the advice that he has is as he has stated, and what I am telling the House is that all the advice that we have is as I have stated. I just wanted to be clear that this is not the Government deciding to take a different course to the one that he is suggesting. He tells us he is advised by an expert, and I am sure I know who it is that he is being advised by and I would have a lot of time for the advice that that person would tender, but what I am saying to him is that we are being advised by the medical experts on the subject and we are obviously therefore following the advice of the medical experts and not transposing our own political view on what is the clear medical advice.

2115 Mr Speaker, before I allow the Hon. the Minister for Health to deal with the next substantive point the hon. Member is making, I would simply reflect with him that the way that this issue has manifested politically in a number of different countries when Ebola has arrived there has been either in parliaments working together with government and opposition, ensuring that they do the best for the community in order to try and deal with this in the least alarmist and most positive way; or, where a government has 2120 perhaps obviously dropped the ball, in a very contentious way in order to try and score political points. I am grateful that that is not the attitude he is taking this morning, and I want to invite him to continue on that course. This is not Spain. The Government here has not created a problem that has brought Ebola into the territory. There is no need for us to have that sort of debate. We need to be working together to ensure that we best protect our community from this disease, and the only risk we have taken is to allow the three 2125 miscreants who are Members of this Parliament, who went to Africa two weeks ago, to come back. The risk seems to have been well taken – they do not seem to be manifesting anything too dangerous yet, although I never enjoy being on the wrong end of Samantha Sacramento, whether she is feeling well or not!

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question of how to deal with an Ebola, or the outbreak of any other disease, does obviously include testing and so on, and these protocols are all part of the policy and the preparation that the GHA has in place.

My last recollection on the lab in particular was a meeting held last week in which it was identified that there were a few items of equipment which could improve the way in which we were able to deal with this, and my last information is that these were on the way by courier, and once that has...It may well have 2135 arrived already, I do not have the full details, but once that is in place, my information is that we would be ready to be able to deal with this.

Hon. D A Feetham: Thank you very much, because my understanding was that at the moment we could not deal with this, but he has confirmed that we cannot at the moment but we will be dealing with it in the future.

What about the isolation ward, Mr Speaker? Where is that going to be located and how segregated, and what is the distance between that isolation ward and other wards or other areas where patients and indeed staff are located?

2145 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is relevant again to remind ourselves that we are not talking about a cold or the flu. This is not something that is airborne, so you would have to have close contact with the affected patients.

The area that has been equipped to deal with any manifestation of this disease is the area that was formerly... well, that was earmarked but never opened as a hydrotherapy pool in the extreme south-east corner of the hospital. It has an airflow which is completely independent and does not flow into anywhere else in the hospital. There is separate access, which can be both vehicular and pedestrian, from behind the hospital, and therefore there would be no contact with the body of the hospital itself. The pool area has been boarded over so that it can be used, there are already beds there and so on, and the equipment is there in preparation. I am hoping that we will never have to use it, but it has got totally separate access and it is 2150 separated from all the wards in the hospital.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is very comforting to know, because that was one of the issues that I had in mind.

2160 What about CCTV cameras in both this particular ward and also in any decontamination unit? The reason why I ask is this: the hon. Gentleman may remember that in relation to the nurse in Spain who contracted the Ebola virus, it is thought that she contracted the Ebola virus when she was taking her equipment off. A period of a week or two actually elapsed. She had gone on holiday before she was diagnosed with the Ebola virus, and one of the points that has been raised in that context is that it is important to have both the patients but also the decontamination unit under 24-hour surveillance so that 2165 somebody can go through the film, so that they do not see anything that can possibly be deemed risky. In this particular case, it is thought that this particular nurse, when she was taking off her equipment, she then touched her mouth or her eye with a gloved hand that had been treating the patient. That is thought to be important. Is that something that the hon. Gentleman is also including within these two areas?

2170 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the setting up of any CCTV cameras. Setting up CCTV cameras in the hospital can have all sorts of other considerations by way of dignity, privacy and so on, because it is not the same as having a nurse constantly looking over a person – it is something that can then be stored and you never know where it might end up.

2175 I do not have that information. I will seek it. What I can say is that the beds are located just outside a screened-off, glassed-off area, so that there would be a 24-hour-monitoring, direct visual access to the patients in question.

2180 As far as what may or may not have happened in the case of the nurse in Spain, there has been a lot of controversy, as we all know, about that, that we have picked up in the media and so on, and it does seem that it was the derobing which is the dangerous part. When you are putting this protective clothing on, there is no infection; when you are derobing, there could well be. Tragically, one learns from other people's mistakes, but we have ensured, even before this came out, that the 200 or so people who have been trained are aware of the correct derobing procedures. Sadly, we are human, and human error occurs, but we are taking every possible step to avoid that.

2185 I must add that, in the absence of the hon. Opposition Member spokesman for Health, I would like to make myself available to any Member of the Opposition who may want to stay in contact with me on developments, if they want to have any reassurance or further information as the weeks ahead hopefully pass without incident, and with, hopefully, the development of a vaccine – which some say is close and some say is not – which will be able to stop this tragic disease.

2190 We are concentrating, clearly, and for very good reason, on what would happen in Gibraltar, but we must spare a thought for all those thousands of people who are suffering in West Africa without the resources and the recourses that we fortunately have in Gibraltar.

2195 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have further questions, but it has been sufficiently ventilated and I will now deal with any more of my concerns and the concerns that have been expressed, or questions that have been expressed that have been put to me, with the Hon. the Minister directly. I thought that it was important, rather than do that – which I could have done – for at least members of the public to see that the Government has got a handle on this and that issues that may be of concern to them, certainly of concern to us, have been properly ventilated in this Parliament, which has been my concern and the purpose of my questions.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that might be a convenient moment to recess the House to 3.00 p.m.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess to this afternoon at 3.00 p.m.

The House recessed at 12.49 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.06 p.m.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q505/2014 continued – Environment (Control of Dust) Regulation 2010 – Implementation at GOG construction sites – Statement by the Minister for Health and the Environment

Mr Speaker: Arising from the photographs that the Hon. Mr Netto provided this morning, I think the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment wishes to make a statement.

5 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, thank you for allowing me to provide some more information. During the period since the Question was asked, I asked the Environmental Agency and they have searched through their records. They have no record of any complaints from neighbours or anybody else about that particular site. They are continuing to look, but they have not been able to find one. But in any case, they have deployed an officer there this afternoon, just to check that everything is in order.

10 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, first of all I am grateful for that answer, but the fact that there may be no record of complaint at the Environment Agency does not mean that the residents within the neighbourhood of the construction site are not up in arms as a result of the dust emanating from the construction site. That is the first point I would like to make.

15 The second point I would like to make, which in fact I made earlier on, was whether the contractor on the site had gone through the proper procedure to apply for a permit for providing the dust sheets in accordance with the legislation. That part of my supplementary question has not been answered. Can the Minister provide some answer on that aspect?

20 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I provided the answer, which seemed to be to the Member opposite's satisfaction this morning. I have volunteered additional information. If the neighbours are up in arms, they have not communicated it to the pertinent authorities; and if they do so now... although, as I said, an officer has been deployed. I just have to repeat what I said this morning: that these regulations will be applied to all sites. I just thought I would provide that additional information.

25 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I do not want to get side-tracked with whether there has been a registered complaint or not. That is not the fundamental issue. The fundamental issue here is whether the construction site... have done what they are supposed to do in accordance with the legislation. Have they, or have they not, because if they have not asked for the permit to be issued by the Environmental Agency, it seems to me that they have been acting against the legislation itself. That is a more pertinent question – as to whether there have been any recorded complaints by neighbours in the neighbourhood or not – and on that aspect the Minister opposite has not provided an adequate answer.

30 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I provided the answer to the Question, which was, if we will remember:

'Can the Minister for the Environment state whether all GOG construction sites are implementing the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulation 2010?'

I answered that they were, to the knowledge of the Environment Agency. That, I think, does answer that Question. If he wants more specifics on each independent and individual site, then he will have to ask for that and I will get that information, but I think to the general Question I have answered it more than adequately.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q559/2014

Employment (Bullying at Work) Act – Monitoring of implementation

Mr Speaker: Question 559.

45 Clerk: Question 559, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister state how he intends to monitor the implementation of the Employment (Bullying at Work) Act?

50 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, closely.

55 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, that adjective is not sufficient in my view. What mechanics is he going to put in place?

I refer him to the press release which appeared, and I am quoting from the Gibraltar Chronicle – I think this quote is personally attributed to him – when he says:

‘and we have given the GFSB and the Chamber of Commerce the confidence that we will monitor the implementation of the Act to ensure it is not abused in any way, and we reserve the right to tweak the law where necessary, again in consultation with all parties, should it be abused.’

But how does he intend... Which mechanics has he put in place in order to monitor the implementation of the Act?

60

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is not an issue of having to put in place any mechanics. These are claims that will have to be brought to the Industrial Tribunal, which is a public body. We are aware of what the substance of complaints that come to the Industrial Tribunal are, because the Tribunal is administered through Government officers, so if there are instances of claims of bullying coming to the Industrial Tribunal we will be following them very ‘closely’ – he does not like the word, but it is one that I intend to continue using during the course of this answer – to see whether there are any allegations by employers of abuse. Then, if there are, we will have to look into whether we believe that there is actually abuse in respect of any such case. Indeed, it may be that there are cases that do not come to the Industrial Tribunal in respect of which employers believe there may be abuse, and I have full confidence that they will be brought to my attention by the GFSB or by the Chamber.

70

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister draws an important distinction, because if he is going to closely... or the Government is going to closely monitor such claims, just simply looking at what happens in the Industrial Tribunal will not do, because there are many claims that do not get to the Industrial Tribunal. All of us who have been lawyers and have done Industrial Tribunal work will know that in actual fact sometimes it is actually far better for the employer just simply to settle it out of court before it gets to the Industrial Tribunal, because costs are not recoverable in the Industrial Tribunal.

75

Is the Government simply relying on the GFSB and the Chamber of Commerce to provide that information to the Government, or is the Government going to be a little bit more proactive in its attempts to ‘closely monitor’ – those are the words that he has used – the implementation of this Act?

80

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if claims are abusive then some of them will get to the Industrial Tribunal, even if in the process of filing claims for the purposes of seeking abusive settlements. So we will have to keep a very close eye indeed on what happens in the Industrial Tribunal. But outside it, the only people who have considered that there is the possibility that this legislation will be abused are the Chamber and the Federation of Small Businesses – nobody else has expressed that view – and if they are able to bring to the attention of the Government instances of such abuse it must be because their members make complaint of it.

If traders – or employers; they do not need to be traders – do not make complaint of abuse to their representative body, it is going to be very difficult for the Government, however closely we want to monitor this, to be able to determine whether there is abuse, short of sending every employer in Gibraltar a questionnaire once a month. We do not intend to do that. We think if there is abuse it will be something that is brought to our attention by the Chamber and by the Federation, because their members will bring it to their attention.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, actually, Mr Speaker, he makes again a point that I had in mind, which is the question of the questionnaire. It does not require a questionnaire every single month, but will the Government consider, for example, actually issuing a questionnaire perhaps once a year, or even on the first anniversary – it does not have to be every single year, but on the first anniversary of the implementation of this Act – which directly asks employers how they feel that this particular Act is working, and then perhaps again two years later, because after a year I suppose is too short a period?

Can I commend to the Chief Minister – bearing in mind that clearly his policy is to ‘closely’, in his words, monitor the implementation of this Act – can I commend that type of closer monitoring of the Act?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will take it in to consideration.

Hon. D J Bossino: And does he not, Mr Speaker, thinking about it, that the Chief Minister should rely on an analysis of the complaints which are filed in the Industrial Tribunal?

The Government may take a view that a particular or if various complaints are abusive, but that will not be the view of the complainants. Isn't it a bit late at that stage, in any event? The horse will have bolted by that stage, the complaints will have been filed, and that complainant has an entitlement to be heard in the Tribunal by a chairman. So is the Government, the state, now going to be investigating the complaints and coming to a conclusion as to whether complainants' complaints are abusive or not?

I just find it rather remarkable that the Hon. the Chief Minister should be relying on complaints filed in the Industrial Tribunal as a mechanism of monitoring – ‘closely’ monitoring, as he puts it – the workings of this Act.

Hon. Chief Minister: I know that the hon. Gentleman and I studied at different universities, but when I studied law, one of the things that I looked at was the papers of the Law Commission, an important part in the edifice of the rule of law in the United Kingdom, that does exactly what I have told the hon. Gentleman we are intending to do. In other words, it looks at claims filed and it suggests to legislators that there may be areas where legislation is open to abuse by any party in relation to, for example, personal injury claims, or in relation to, for example, separation agreements, or the absence of them. The analysis is done in respect of claims made. That does not suggest that the Government is going to get involved in cases that are live, but the Government may decide to change legislation as a result of seeing a trend of cases being brought in a particular way.

I commend to the hon. Gentleman the work of the Law Commission: if he knows it, he might not have asked the question that he has asked.

Q560/2014

Financial Secretary position – Reason why not advertised

Clerk: Question 560, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister state why the position of Financial Secretary was not advertised?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the vacancy of the post of Financial Secretary was not advertised by the previous administration when it first arose under the new Constitution. The same is true of the posts of Chief Secretary and of Chief Technical Officer.

The principle established by the former Chief Minister, which I have previously confirmed we stand by, is that these three posts are direct appointments by the Chief Minister himself, as they are in effect the heads of the three, broadly speaking, divisions of Government, namely: the administration, in the guise of the Chief Secretary; the technical, in the guise of the Chief Technical Officer; and the financial, in the case of the Financial Secretary.

The position is the same in the United Kingdom in relation to the appointment of the Cabinet Secretary.

145

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, isn't the distinction to be drawn here that this particular individual... I make no comment as to the competence of this individual, whom I know personally; I know him very well. Isn't the distinction to be made here that the appointment has been made from the private sector? Wouldn't it have been procedurally wise for the Government to have opened up the vacancy to have allowed other potential candidates from the private sector and for him to have made a decision based on a string of candidates, rather than just the individual appointment which he has made?

150

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, obviously not, because I did not do it that way – and I will make comment on the competence of the individual involved: he is a highly competent individual.

155

What has occurred on this occasion is what occurred on previous occasions, both in relation to the appointment of the Chief Technical Officer and in relation to the appointment of the Chief Secretary – namely, that the recommendations made to the Chief Minister were unanimous in respect of who should take the post. Therefore, it was not the Chief Minister's doing to select Albert Mena, but the recommendations made to the Chief Minister, both by the departing Financial Secretary and by others in the administration, as to whether Albert Mena was the right person to do the job. That had been the case in relation to Ernest Gomez, where the then Acting Chief Secretary, Mr Richard Armstrong, the previous Chief Secretary, Mr Richard Garcia, and the previous before then Chief Secretary Mr Ernest Montado, all recommended Mr Gomez as the person who should be appointed. The same was true in respect of Mr Michael Gill's replacement, who was widely recommended to me by Mr Michael Gill and others, namely Mr Hector Montado, and it was the case in this instance in respect of Mr Mena.

160

The interesting thing about this post, Mr Speaker, is that there was nobody inside the administration who was recommended for the post or who wanted to take the post, and that says a lot about succession planning in the many years that there have been since the last GSLP Government. One of the specific things that Mr Mena has been asked to do in post is to bring along and train up people who might be ready to take over from him at the end of the three-year period for which he has been appointed, because we believe this is a post that should remain within the Civil Service wherever possible, but in order to keep it within the Civil Service one has to make the effort to train people, one has to give people the resources in training, and one has to be ready to spend time in bringing people along. That had not happened before and that is why the recommendation was made to me, which I accepted, that Mr Mena should be appointed Financial Secretary, and why he is specifically tasked – as hon. Members will see from, I think, the press release at the time – specifically tasked with training somebody, or a number of people within the Service, to be in a position to take over from him.

170

175

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is the Chief Minister saying that the recommendation in relation to Mr Mena came from the current Financial Secretary? Is my understanding of his answer correct? Sorry, the previous Financial Secretary.

180

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, yes, inter alia from Dilip Dayaram Tirathdas, who was the Financial Secretary before. If I may also say to him, Mr Speaker, there has only been one instance when the Financial Secretary has been appointed from the Civil Service – he should be aware of that. It is only Mr Dayaram Tirathdas who has ever been appointed Financial Secretary from within the Civil Service. Previously, all Financial Secretaries have been appointed from outside – indeed from outside Gibraltar, usually from the National Audit Office in the United Kingdom. So this is the first time that somebody has been appointed by the Chief Minister of Gibraltar from outside the Service, but if we are looking in percentage terms, 50/50, because there was only one previous appointment by a Gibraltar Chief Minister and that was the appointment of Mr Dayaram Tirathdas by Sir Peter Caruana at the time, but previously we have had Financial Secretaries appointed from outside – not just the Civil Service, but outside Gibraltar.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, but this is the distinction I made in my first supplementary, that this is the first time that somebody from within Gibraltar, within the private sector, has been appointed by the Chief Minister.

195

In relation to that point, Mr Speaker, in the press release it says that Mr Mena is on a three-year secondment from the law firm, Hassans. Can he give more details in relation to how that secondment is working? For example, is Mr Mena being paid by the Gibraltar Government, or by Hassans?

200

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I cannot give more details at the moment, because I do not have notice of the question. I do not deal with aspects of who pays who, but I imagine that he is being paid directly by the Government of Gibraltar.

205 If he gives me notice of that question next time, I can bring all the details of the arrangement that has been entered in to.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, with the greatest respect to the Hon. the Chief Minister, the fact that Mr Mena is being employed on the basis of a three-year secondment, which has been agreed by the law firm Hassans, it would have been a natural follow-up question he should have expected from me, particularly because it actually features in the press release announcing Mr Mena's appointment.

210 Can he give other details in relation to this secondment? Quite apart that he says he needs notice as to the salary arrangements, are there other details that he can provide to this House in relation to the secondment from Hassans which would be relevant?

215 Normally, when you second as an employer – forgetting it is Hassans, forgetting it is Mr Mena; in any circumstances – there is normally something in it for the original employing party. Will Mr Mena continue to work with Hassans, or will he not? Will he divorce completely from Hassans? On issues like that, is he able to shed any light? As the Chief Minister of Gibraltar, who was the appointer, is he able to give any light in relation to those other matters?

220 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept that a question that says, 'Can the Chief Minister state why the position of Financial Secretary was not advertised?' leads to an analysis of what the terms of the secondment were. This is something that happened three months ago, and he will have realised that the Chief Minister of Gibraltar is quite busy, particularly in September and in October, to remember the details of a secondment.

225 Mr Speaker, I am not suggesting that he is not entitled to the information; I am just saying I need notice of the question.

It is very clear to me, Mr Speaker, that Mr Mena works wholly and exclusively for the Government of Gibraltar; he does not work for Hassans for the period of the secondment. I cannot provide him with further details of the secondment at this stage, but if he gives me notice of the question next time, or if he wishes to write to me, I will happily give him all the details that are available to the Government.

230 He has got a partner of Hassans sitting next to him – he might want to ask him.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, did the Hon. the Chief Minister say that this has been going on for the last three months? The announcement was made on 11th September. Just to point out to him that that is the date of the press release, which is when I found out and which is when the Gibraltarian public found out. Can he confirm since when Mr Mena has been appointed?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am on my feet with the information I needed to have in order to answer the Question he has asked. I do not have the starting date for Mr Mena; I do not have the details of the secondment. It is not that I do not want to give them to him. I am quite happy to bring them to this House and discuss them with him next time, but I do not have them with me. I cannot say whether he started on the 10th or the 12th or whether he started on the 9th or on the 30th. If he wants that information, all he needs to do is give notice of the question.

245 Why doesn't he want to give notice of the question on which he wants to have an answer? Does he simply want to ambush people into not being able to provide him the answers? Is this a memory test instead of an opportunity to provide information based on the questions that are put?

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, all I have asked is a question following on from the Hon. Chief Minister's answer. He mentioned that this has been going on – I am paraphrasing – for the last three months. It arises from the answer that the Hon. Chief Minister has given me. So what I am asking him is if it is the last three months. The press release was actually dated 11th September. When was Mr Mena appointed? Does he not have this information on such an important position within the Government, which he himself has been responsible for appointing? I just do not understand this.

255 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not have the information. I make many appointments, not just the appointments that appear in the press; I sign many documents. If what he wants to do is test my memory by trying to work out whether I remember the date on which Albert Mena was appointed, the answer is I do not remember – and in his book I am therefore, for that reason and I am sure many others, not worthy to be Chief Minister. If he wants to know, he can simply ask me the question or I will write to him. I have said three months because it feels like three months, because a Chief Minister works about 48 to 72 hours a day and September now feels like three months ago.

265 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Chief Minister mentioned in his reply that nobody wanted to do this job within the Civil Service. Is that the reason for the appointment, or is it as... Certainly that reason was not given by the Gibraltar Government – I assume he was the drafter of the press statement – when they announced Mr Mena’s appointment. The reason given was that they wanted a more commercial approach to investment planning and financial management. So is the reason that there was not anybody within the Civil Service who wanted to do the job, or is it that he himself, as the appointer, thought in his own mind that he wanted somebody with a more commercial approach to investment planning and financial management?

270 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he was much better at this in school than he is now. All of the above.

275 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state whether it is the Government’s intention not to renew Mr Mena’s appointment after the three-year stint is over?

280 Mr Speaker: Under no stretch of the imagination does that arise from the original Question. You were asking why was the position not advertised, and you are now expecting an answer on what is going to happen three years from now. Utterly out of order. Completely and utterly out of order. The hon. Member is getting carried away. Keep within the question. (Interjections) Yes, carry on.

285 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. It really arises from the answers given by the Chief Minister. It arises from the succession planning point, where he said that the intention is for Mr Mena to train up those individuals within the Civil Service to that position in the context of the civil servants not wanting to do the job. So I think it arises from answers that the Hon. the Chief Minister has given me here today. That is why I think it is a relevant question. I certainly am not getting carried away – I think I am quite relaxed.

290 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to comment in this way: I am very grateful for the hon. Gentleman’s vote of confidence – given that he thinks we are going to be in Government in three years’ time, I will consider the issue at the time. It is certainly the intention of the Government – not just of the administration, I hope, of the Government, and I hope that we shall still be the Government in three years’ time, as he seems to think – that there should be somebody trained up to be able to do the job and willing to do the job in three years’ time, as I have suggested.

295 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may I just start prefixing my question by saying that the fact that I am a partner of Hassans does not mean that I have any knowledge about this particular matter. Indeed, I stay well away from partners’ meetings and well away from anywhere where I can gain any kind of information that can possibly lead to an accusation that I know things that perhaps I ought not to know. But in any event, it is all irrelevant at the end of the day: simply because I am a partner of Hassans will not prevent me, as he knows on the Sunborn and other issues, from asking questions and holding the Government to account.

300 Mr Speaker, he mentioned the training of successors to Mr Mena: does he think that three years is enough in order to train somebody to replace Mr Mena after the three-year contract has expired?

305 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept the premise of much of what the hon. Gentleman has said in the beginning of his question, but I will just deal with the substance of it. Of course I do. I have been Chief Minister for less than three years: look at the great job I am doing, and I took over from somebody who had been here for 16.

310 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, whether he is doing a good job or not is a matter that the electorate will be asked to decide next year – and I leave it to the electorate; I am not prone to making those type of arrogant, if I could say so, comments.

315 Mr Speaker, if three years is sufficient in which to train somebody to take over, and bearing in mind that the Hon. the Chief Minister has been in post for three years and the former Financial Secretary was there during those three years, why wasn’t the opportunity taken to, in fact train somebody to take over from the former Financial Secretary during those three years?

320 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman forgets that in fact the Financial Secretary retired a year ago – in fact over a year ago – and the question was whether it might have been possible to actually train somebody in post from the time that we were elected, when we started to look at this, and it was not possible inter alia because of the problems that we found.

325 He may recall that we found that there was almost no usable cash reserve, that we had to stop spending and had found that by the end of the first financial year there was only £2 million left in the kitty – something that the Hon. Sir Peter Caruana, although he likes to pretend is a lie, confirmed during the course of the debate during the last Budget. So it was actually a very difficult time for the last Financial Secretary.

330 Now that things are back on an even keel and the Financial Secretary is going to have more time available, we think it is possible for him to train somebody in three years. I very much hope that it will be possible to do so because I am sure Mr Mena will want to get back to his practice, I am sure all of his partners at Hassans will want him back, and I am sure that the Civil Service would like to find somebody out of their ranks being in post. And given that Mr Bossino himself thinks that we are going to be there in three years' time, I do not think there is such arrogance in saying that there is a chance we will win the election.

335 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, given the amount of spending from the Government and the spending of public money as if there is no tomorrow, despite –

Mr Speaker: That has got nothing to do with it. You are now widening the whole ambit of the matter.

340 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, may I –

Mr Speaker: The hon. Member is now beginning to debate. If you are going to bring in questions of Government spending and so on, you are beginning to debate. You are not sticking to the subject matter.

345 Hon. D A Feetham: Of course I will abide by Mr Speaker's ruling and I apologise again if Mr Speaker believes that I have exceeded the bounds of what is reasonable. But Mr Speaker of course has to bear in mind that it is the Chief Minister who has introduced this question of the cash reserves; it has not been me.

350 What I was going to say was that, bearing in mind the answer he has given me about all those problems that – because the reason why he says that the Financial Secretary could not train somebody during the last three years was because of the problems that the Government encountered with cash reserves... what I am saying is that, given all those problems and given the way that the Government has been spending money and borrowing copiously in order to spend that money, wouldn't it have been a perfect opportunity, Mr Speaker, in those circumstances, to effectively train somebody in order to take over as Financial Secretary?

355 Of course, I recognise that the former Financial Secretary left, or his tenure ended, a year ago, but my understanding is that he continued in post after his contract expired, or after his formal retirement, so it would have been possible for him to have used the entirety of those three years to train somebody. It arises out of the answer that he has given me before, which was that it is possible and he hopes and he fully expects somebody to be trained in those three years by Mr Mena. If it is possible for Mr Mena to train somebody in three years, it would have also been possible for the former Financial Secretary to train somebody in three years.

360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as a soliloquy it is not bad, but I did not perceive a question – although, of course, his perception of economic reality and the economic reality that we have all lived is completely different. Therefore, I do not think Mr Dayaram has had such an easy ride as he pretends; nor has it been so difficult once we have steadied the ship and got it on an even keel.

365 My position is very clear: I think Albert Mena will be able to train somebody in three years. I am not going to be shifted in that view by anything that the hon. Gentleman has said. If there is one thing that I hope is common ground, it is that given that we are both in different stages of partnership of Hassans – one of us active, one of us not – we all know that this is a man of great competence.

370 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just one final supplementary, I hope – although I proceed with some trepidation, because on the one hand, in one answer he says that I have no confidence in him as the Chief Minister, and then on the other hand, in relation to another answer he says that I perceive that he will be there for the next three years.

375 Mr Speaker, he said that the recommendation was made by the Financial Secretary inter alia, and I think he mentioned the previous Financial Secretary's name. Can he provide the details of the other individuals who would have provided that recommendation to him – other than the Financial Secretary, obviously?

380 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is now some time ago, because this happened before the summer, but I can certainly tell him that the Financial Secretary is one of the people who I spoke to. I spoke also, of course, to the Chief Secretary, and I spoke to other members of the community who might be able to advise me informally; none who would be advising me formally – this is an issue for the Chief Minister, and the Chief Minister takes wide soundings.

385 I took very wide soundings also at the time of the replacement of Michael Gill with Hector Montado, and the replacement of Mr Armstrong, who indicated he wanted to leave, with Mr Ernest Gomez – some of them people who had been in the Service, some of them people who have not been in the Service. I cannot recall much beyond the conversations I had with Mr Dayaram himself and with other Ministers.

390 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister be willing to provide me with more specific answers to that question? He mentions ‘other members of the community’. I assume the reason why he is resisting providing me with that information is because of recollection issues, but would he be willing to provide me with that information if I gave him notice of a question, or would he still not wish to provide me with that answer for other reasons?

395 Hon. Chief Minister: No, not at all, Mr Speaker – there is no question of my not being willing to provide the answer. I would be very happy to provide the answer. I simply probably have to go back to my diary and check who I spoke to at the time that I know I was making this decision.

400 I know I certainly spoke to a number of other Ministers who have known Mr Mena, who have worked with Mr Mena – not necessarily from Hassans, but people from well outside Hassans; and Mr Dayaram, who is not at Hassans. If he simply gives me, in writing, notice by letter, or if he wishes to ask me next time, I will make sure that I am able to bring more names of those who I spoke to.

Q561/2014
Government credit cards –
Issue to civil servants

Clerk: Question 561, the Hon. D J Bossino.

405 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister provide details of which civil servants are issued with Government credit cards?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

410 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the following civil servants are issued with Jyske Bank pre-paid Visa cards for ease of payment: the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary, and the Commissioner of Police.

415 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if I transgress and if Mr Speaker thinks it does not arise out of the Question, I will give notice of it, but perhaps the Hon. the Chief Minister can assist. There are a limited number of individuals who have been provided with the use of a Government credit card, but what about individuals who, for example, are able to go to restaurants and entertain individuals in restaurants who may come from outside, for example, but then the bill is sent to No. 6 Convent Place? How does that work in his administration? Is there a group of individuals who have that facility and access to that facility, or has it got to be pre-arranged and pre-agreed with the Chief Secretary of Gibraltar?

420 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, good luck to the restaurateur: there are 4,000 public sector workers, all of whom could wave... ‘¡Mándasela a Picardo!’ if they liked. Good luck if they do! As far as I am concerned, that does not happen. If it happens on particular occasions, it must be specifically approved either previously by the Chief Secretary.

425 I know of one instance, in an administration prior to mine, when a previous Chief Secretary had told me that he had done that and that he did not usually do it but he had done it for a particular purpose. He told me the funny story of the fact that the restaurant refused to pay rates, rent, electricity or tax, and therefore he took the view that he wanted to make the point to the restaurant, when the bill came, that it would be set off against all of their liabilities.

430 But if it happens, it must be in very specific circumstances: when people are visiting from outside and consent is sought from the Chief Secretary. Otherwise, there is no general tab at restaurants in Gibraltar in which people can simply say, ‘Send the bill to Fabian.’

435 Hon. D A Feetham: Can I just say that the reason why this Question is asked is because there was an individual, who works for the Government, in a restaurant where when the bill came the individual said, ‘Please send it to No. 6 Convent Place.’ And therefore we have been told... and we just want to know whether there has been a change of policy, but I am glad that the Hon. Chief Minister confirms that there must be specific authorisation before something like that actually happens, so that obviously there is control over the expenditure of public funds.

440

Hon. Chief Minister: But not enough, Mr Speaker, because if somebody has taken him out and said that they should send the bill to No. 6 Convent Place I am very disappointed – and I am going to get to the bottom of who it was!

445

Clerk: Question 562, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I might just... If it provides comfort to the hon. Gentleman, if he gives me the details of the individual etc, I can find out for him and confirm that it must have been specifically authorised – and I would like to know.

Q562/2014

Wholly owned Government companies – Provision of full list

450

Clerk: Question 562, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister provide the House with a full list of wholly owned Government companies?

455

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, details of wholly owned Government companies are published annually in the Approved Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure in the Summary of Public Finances at page X. It is a public document.

460

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I assume therefore that page X of the Estimates will provide me with the complete list of the wholly owned Government companies and that there are no companies outside of that list currently. In other words, there have not been new companies added to the list as provided in the Estimates Book.

465

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is a list that is provided once a year and is provided in the approved... I do not think it is provided in the Estimates Book. I think this is an anomaly. In other words, I think this appears in the Approved Estimates Book, which is the book after the approval by the House. It appears just after we approve the estimates – I think it takes a few months. We usually call it the ‘Blue Book’, because it is usually blue; but it is published once a year when that is published.

470

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is he aware that it is published, because certainly what I have available to me is still the draft Estimates Book, which is the one we debated during the course of the Appropriation Bill. I had in my mind actually to call the office here to find out whether it was available, but I seem to recall that on previous occasions – and for me there have only been two previous occasions since I have been a Member of this House – the book has been made available to me by sending it to me. I have never had a need to make a telephone call to the Department here. But I am not aware that it has been published and available.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is either handed to Members by being left on their desk here when we have meetings, or it is delivered to them. I do not know whether it has been delivered to them or not. It may be in the course of publication, but it is published once a year and that is where the list is. There is usually an interval between estimate and publication – the summer usually makes up most of that interval. I cannot tell him on my feet whether we have got the latest one. I probably have one in the office.
(Interjections) Yes, Mr Speaker, here it is. (Interjection) Yes, it is. It is actually yellow this year. (Interjection) Yes, that is it. There it is. Yes, that is the page. I am just saying that this year it is not a blue book; this year it is a yellow book. But you should have it already.

Q564/2014
Gibraltar International Mint Ltd –
Government partner

Clerk: Question 564, the Hon. D J Bossino.

490 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister advise this House who the Government partners in the Gibraltar International Mint are?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the partner of the Government in Gibraltar International Mint Ltd are Gib 3000 (International) Ltd.

495

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, would the Chief Minister be kind enough to provide me with details of who the shareholders are? I can carry out a company search, but I would be grateful if he would provide me with those details across the floor of the House now. Thank you.

500 Hon. Chief Minister: Absolutely, Mr Speaker: Line Holdings Ltd, which is owned by the hon. Gentleman, by me, and by the 28 other partners of Hassans.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just trying to inject some seriousness into the question and answer session, when I asked about the investors – the question that I had been asking... I think I had asked it about five times before January of this year – the Hon. the Chief Minister then said to me, ‘Yes, the investors that I had in mind in May of 2011, when I said that I had them up my sleeve, that they were there, lined up, so that when we won the election they would be investing in Gibraltar, was a mint company,’ and he said a mint company from Austria.

510 I think what my hon. Friend is getting at is, ‘Well, who are these Austrian investors?’ It is the identity of the Austrian investors, not whether it is a Gibraltar company or whether a nominee company owns the shares of that company on trust for someone else. He did say in January of this year that it was Austrian investors, and as I understand it, what he is seeking to get to is who are those Austrian investors.

515 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I have actually said more. It is just that the Question is phrased in terms that he requires me to give the formal answer. I have said that Sonja Kohn is a lady who is in part a partner of the Government in relation to the Mint. I think she has been mentioned in Government press releases on a number of occasions, so I do not think that is an issue that is any mystery, Sonja Kohn... But I just cannot tell him, Mr Speaker, with absolute certainty today that she is the only beneficial owner of Gib 3000 (International) Ltd. I cannot tell him with certainty today because it is, as he knows, a Jewish feast, and the person who I would call to make sure that that is the case is today not available – but I am able to give him the information if he asks the question again next time.

525 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, if he can. It is the first time, I have to say, that I hear Mrs Kohn’s name mentioned publicly by the Chief Minister in the context of this particular Mint investment, and indeed it appears to have stumped hon. Members on this side. We certainly had not heard her mentioned. But if he can investigate it and see who else effectively are partners in this particular venture, apart from Sonja Kohn... But I am very grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister.

530 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as he can imagine, I have absolutely no intention of trying to stump him in anything that I do or say, but I shall certainly be happy to look at it if the hon. Gentleman puts the question himself next time.

New power station –
Final decision re location

895 Clerk: Question 618.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state whether the Government has now made a final decision on the exact location of the new power station on or around the North Mole?

900 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am going to attempt to answer in narrative all of the particular Questions that the hon. Gentleman has asked, but he will see that all the answers are in the narrative I am going to provide, which I think he will be happy to see provide a lot of information that has become available since the last time the issue was debated in the House.

905 As has been mentioned before, the cost of making the decision not to proceed with the proposed power station constitutes a penalty of €5 million, which the previous administration agreed would be payable in such circumstances. This figure includes some of the cost of the works already carried out, meaning that the actual penalty of not going ahead amounted to a net amount of just over £3 million at the rate of €1.20 to the pound.

910 Since December 2011, and due to the total lack of investment from the previous administration, the GEA has embarked on its 17-year HV network replacement and upgrading programme, as part of which 13 substations have already had their switchgear procured, solely and directly funded through the Improvement and Development Fund. I am now handing out a table with the breakdown requested in respect of these particular works.

920 As a result, one switchgear at Jumpers Bastion will need to be upgraded in the near future at an estimated cost of £852,120, and another at Orange Bastion Distribution Centre will be downrated to a substation category with the existing switchgear.

As regards the information on the generating sets, I now hand over the information requested in a separate handout.

935 The maximum power demand in 2013-14 was recorded at 35.7MW on 5th February 2014 and 34.9MW on 10th September 2014. That was probably at lunchtime, I dare say. From the handout provided, hon. Members will see that there is presently enough installed capacity to meet Gibraltar's peak demand as is and as estimated to be up to 2020.

Her Majesty's Government has opted to purchase three of the six MAN engines for gas only and three other dual-fuel gas-diesel engines, precisely because of what I have previously stated, so that the new power station will operate using natural gas with diesel only as a backup. Should there be a gas shortage, the dual-fired gas generators can produce 39.45MW and 4MW extra of heat recovery.

940 The heat recovery generators are included as part of the new power station project at a cost of £8 million and will provide an additional 4MW of electrical power, giving us a total capacity of 43.45MW with only the three dual-fired gas-diesel engines.

945 Since the commissioning and start of operations of SO Energy on 20th December 2012, there have been 83 power cuts in total, most of them very minor. A total of 43 of these power cuts have been attributed to the failure of turbines.

The reclaimed land at North Mole can be used for various activities other than the new power station. The land could in part be used to allow expansion of Port-related activities or the creation of much needed light industrial units within the area of the Port.

950 Details of the exact final locations of both the new power station and the LNG installation are being finalised by Bouygues, who were the successful company in the tender process.

We can confirm that works related to the reclamation at North Mole commenced in June 2014. All nine caissons required as part of the project have now been completed and are currently berthed awaiting placing. Enabling works in the form of the installation of marker buoys at the site are currently underway and once these works are completed dredging works will commence. It is anticipated that the reclamation will be completed in April 2015.

These reclamation works at North Mole entail what is essentially a two phase project, although this will be let in various work packages. The first phase is the construction of the perimeter of the reclamation with caissons and a small section of rock revetment, and this is then followed by the second phase, which will see the actual reclamation of land using rubble.

At present, contracts have been awarded for the construction of the perimeter of the reclamation site. These have been awarded to Casais (Gibraltar) Ltd.

The second phase of the works was recently put out to tender and is currently being assessed, and the contract for this will be awarded in due course. It is not considered appropriate to reveal the estimated total cost of the project whilst an award has not yet been made for the second phase, but a statement will however be made upon any allocation.

A new purpose-built building to house offices, workshops and welfare facilities for the engineering employees of Waterport Power Station will be erected as part of the construction of the new power station and is included in the tender price.

As a result of having a new Power Station being built at a site at the North Mole, there is a direct need to construct one distribution centre and equip two new distribution centres. The two distribution centres will be located at the Mid Harbours site, known as the Mid Harbours Distribution Centre, which is already constructed, and adjacent to Waterport Power Station, known as the Waterport Distribution Centre.

Switchgear and associated equipment for Mid Harbour are estimated to cost £1,065,150.

The estimated cost for the the Waterport Distribution Centre is £2,150,507 of which £668,000 is for the construction of the building and £1.4 million is for switchgear and equipment.

Additional cables will of course also need to be installed. The number of cables will vary from three to seven, depending on the route. The estimated cost of the cable is £1.3 million and £680,000 for necessary infrastructure.

No recurrent financial cost is forecast, however, as a result of the introduction of any new navigational controls relating to a potential undersea pipeline.

Until the risk assessments, site investigations, vapour dispersion model and general safety and other considerations are complete, issues of the exact location of the LNG installation, the position of the pipelines across the north entry of the Port, the general transportation of fuel, the type of LNG receiving terminal technology for regasification, whether low or high-pressure systems, the supply arrangements with the preferred supplier and the construction type of storage tanks and how many times they have to be replenished cannot be exactly determined.

Additionally, Mr Speaker, I can confirm that there are no plans afoot for a gas pipeline from Spain or North Africa.

I am also able to confirm that the contractor will take on site on 1st July 2015 and the works will commence shortly thereafter. The power station is estimated to be completed and fully commissioned, supplying to the distribution network, by late 2016 or early 2017.

Fourteen companies have responded to the Prior Information Notice (PIN) in respect of the supply of gas to the Government. The Method of Communication to Companies was in the Official Journal of the European Union. The Government is currently considering a number of proposals to see which could lead to concrete agreements. The notice period is, in fact, still open.

The source of the LNG will be the responsibility of the company that is successful for the storage, regasification and supply. Her Majesty's Government will obviously ensure that its fuel agreement is robust and tight enough to ensure continuous uninterrupted deliveries, as has been done to date in respect of diesel.

In the event that LNG supply delivery from all sources should fail, we are seeking to have a strategic reserve of gas, something which we do not presently enjoy in respect of diesel, and in the unlikely event that the LNG storage tanks are depleted, the new power station will indeed be able to operate on diesel. The reverse is not true today, or in respect of the plant planned by them when they were in office, and so we will therefore have more fuel resilience with this proposed power station than we do today or would have if their power station had progressed.

It is envisaged that the LNG will be transported to Gibraltar in any event by sea.

Since December 2011, the following expenditure has been incurred in relation to the consultation regarding the new power station: the evaluation of power station, £77,626; the initial assessment to determine if LNG storage could be done, £2,700; and the initial vapour dispersion model for LNG, which cost £13,305.

The UK entity HSL, which I understand is the Health and Safety Laboratory, has been engaged in assisting the Environmental Agency in assessing the proposed LNG storage plant. HSL will be requested to consider all relevant issues such as exclusion zones, spillage, type and size of storage facilities, vapour dispersion modelling, plus all other risks and hazards.

1015 In the UK, HSL is the authority involved in the successful assessment of installations under the Control of Major Accident Hazards (COMAH) provisions and the Seveso Directive. The total cost to date of that consultation has been £70,152.

Neither the UK nor the Gibraltar Environmental Agency have been involved in assessing the application of the successful bidder for the new power station.

1020 The operator of the new power station, Gibelec, has not yet submitted an application for a permit under the Pollution, Prevention and Control Regulations (PPCR) and has been made aware of the need to do so.

The cost of engaging consultants from the UK Environment Agency has to be met by the operator as provided for by the PPCR.

1025 The impact in respect of the environmental, health and safety and fire prevention measures that are in place at the South Mole, the Detached Mole and the North Mole for other activities is still to be assessed against the impact of both the new power station and the LNG project. This forms part of the current site safety investigation and other assessments that have to be carried out by the contractor.

Finally, Mr Speaker, the cost of each caisson unit for the reclamation is £430,000. These units have not been 'acquired', as they have been constructed in Gibraltar by Casais.

1030 Mr Speaker: Fifty Questions have been taken together and answered together. To assist Members of the Opposition, I propose that copies of the answers be given to them, giving them an opportunity to look at them properly so that they know what... It is impossible to keep track of answers to 50 Questions. (Interjection)

1035 Then I will allow supplementaries – give hon. Members an opportunity to read the answers carefully and allow supplementaries. What I will not do is to allow supplementaries in an hour's time or in two hours' time. Do hon. Members follow the point that I am making? I am prepared to devote time to supplementaries arising from the main answer – but now, not tomorrow or the day after. Do you understand what I am saying?

1040 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if it is of assistance to the Chair and to hon. Members, this may be a convenient moment to recess for 15 minutes, and it gives them time to have a look at –

Mr Speaker: The other thing is to go on with other Questions while photocopies are being made.

1045 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes.

Mr Speaker: Photocopies can be made and they can be circulated to hon. Members. We can carry on with a few more Questions and perhaps make a bit of progress until five, and then we can have a break. Is that agreeable?

1050 So we now call Question 619, which is also to the Chief Minister.

Hon. D A Feetham: I can ask supplementaries on my bit – I do not need any more time.

Mr Speaker: You want to ask supplementaries now?

1055 Hon. D A Feetham: I think that I can ask supplementaries on mine.

Mr Speaker: Very well.

1060 Hon. D A Feetham: It gives an opportunity for everybody else to...

Mr Speaker: Yes, very well, okay.

1065 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes, in relation to the caissons, on which the Hon. the Leader of the House kindly answered that each caisson had cost £430,000 and there are nine in total, how many of those caissons are going to be used in the first phase, as he put it, of the reclamation?

1070 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I confess I am a little thrown by his question. All nine, because the caissons are the first phase; they are the perimeter.

Hon. D A Feetham: So effectively all nine. This is not the case where the Government is going to be using only two caissons now for a smaller reclamation, and then perhaps in the future do a larger reclamation with the remainder of the caissons? That is not the position?

1075 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I sincerely do not know where he has got that from. As far as we are concerned, it is nine caissons to create...to in effect square off the top of the North Mole.

1080 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, originally, the intention was – he has made statements to this effect – for the power station to be built on the land reclamation. He then said that part of the power station was going to be built on the land reclamation and other parts of the land reclamation were going to be used for other purposes. He then made another statement, or the Government made another statement, saying that actually what is envisaged now was for the power station to be built in the area where the old wine factory was, which is further towards the Waterport housing estate.

1085 Mr Speaker, is that because the Government has post facto decided to go ahead with the land reclamation, that it has received advice that no part of the power station can actually be built on that land reclamation for, for example, foundation reasons?

1090 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, it is because there are different ways in which you can fit the power station in, depending on which is the preferred bidder. There are some of the bids which might have required the whole of the use of the reclaimed area, some of the bids which could use part of the reclaimed area and part of the other, and some time for the reclamation area earth to settle; and depending on how long it takes to settle, some part of the power station may be on it and some part may not be. But let's be clear: it may be that part of the power station does actually end up being on the reclaimed land. The final footprint, the final design, is part of what works have been contracted to provide and that is in the process of being finalised, and therefore the exact final footprint is not yet entirely determined.

1095 In terms of maximising the space, what the Government has to do is to ensure that we get the best possible configuration out of every square inch of Gibraltar, as the hon. Gentleman knows, and if you are going to have a gap here or a gap there, it makes sense in the end, once you know more or less what the size of something is going to be, to consolidate where it is going to be and not leave big gaps in any particular part of any area, because otherwise that will be wasted space. But we are literally talking about movement of in the region of 50 to 75 metres in one direction or another.

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it fair to say that, even though a decision can be made – or maybe not; I ask him to answer that as well – in relation to where to locate the power station, whether it is off the land reclamation or partly on the land reclamation, any works cannot really commence until you have received the study from Shell, because the way that the gas is going to be piped to the power station may well have an impact on the design, I suppose, and the location of the power station?

1105 I am just trying to get an idea of timelines from that, because I know that, of course, the study for Shell is not expected until about May or June of next year.

1110 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, I understand what he is saying. That is not the advice that we have. The advice that we have does not suggest that the location of the power station is in any way related to where the LNG supply is going to come from, because at the end of the day, at the power station you have a pipeline – you have a pipeline that comes from your own regasification unit rather than from Algeria, but what you have is a pipeline – and that pipeline can be made to go to wherever, within reason – obviously, because there is expense if you have to dig very far, but within reason – to wherever it is that you need it to be.

1115 Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed, Mr Speaker, the commencement of the works of the power station will be independent of this study by Shell in relation to the supply of liquid natural gas to the power station?

1120 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, because all we are looking at there is exact location, exact details. What is determined is that we can supply natural gas to the power station.

1125 Hon. D A Feetham: And can he confirm – because again there have been a number of statements in the past about the location of the natural gas installation and where that is going to be located – or can he provide information to this House as to the locations that the Government are currently looking at? We know that the Detached Mole is one of those locations. From the many statements that the Government has made it appears that that is the preferred location of the Government, but I have also seen statements from the Government saying that there might be other locations that the Government is considering. Can he give some information to this House on what are the current locations, so that we get a flavour of how and from where the liquid natural gas is going to be transported via pipeline to this particular power station?

1135 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, the suggestions are not very distant from where we have stated publicly. It is either the Detached Mole or the area of the North Mole, but as he knows, we have to be very careful with the circle of risk which emanates from one of these facilities, and therefore there may be other potential sites within the North Mole. There may be other areas within the area of the Detached Mole that could be the areas for the regasification unit. There is not much of an alternative.

1140 Hon. D A Feetham: So indeed the only locations therefore that Shell are considering for the purpose of their study and how to deal with supply issues to the new power station of liquid natural gas are really the Detached Mole or the North Mole. There are no other locations that are currently under consideration. Can he confirm that is the position?

1145 Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is the position.

1150 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does he have, bearing in mind that this particular study, for which the instructions have gone to Shell quite recently for the conduct of this particular study, that this particular study is going to be concluded by May or June of next year... when does he envisage therefore, that the commencement of the works for the liquid natural gas installation is going to start? Bearing in mind the statement that the Hon. the Chief Minister made earlier, which was that this was going to be a liquid natural gas power station with diesel back-up – although it is dual-fire, effectively the intention is to run it on liquid natural gas – the timeline in relation to the liquid natural gas installation is going to be absolutely crucial to when you have a fully running and functioning power station.

1155 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in time to provide the gas by the time the power station is commissioned.

1160 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but, Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister very confidently predicted that the power station was going to be completed – that is the answer that he gave earlier – by the end of 2016 or the beginning of 2017. That, to me, indicates that the Chief Minister has information at his disposal. He would not have given me that answer... Unless, of course, he is bluffing – and I do not attribute for one moment that he is bluffing in relation to this – he must have timelines in relation to the liquid natural gas installation, which is an absolutely critical part of the commencement of, and the completion of the power station. Therefore, he must have some timelines in relation to the liquid natural gas installation, both in terms of the start of the those works and indeed the finishing of those works.

1170 The reason why I am asking this question is very simple: I just see a power station and I see the liquid natural gas installation very much still in the planning stages, and what I want is some reassurance from the Government to the people of Gibraltar that this is something that is going to be completed as expeditiously as possible, so all the power cuts are a thing of the past and people are not inconvenienced in the way that they have been inconvenienced over the last three years.

1175 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, people have been inconvenienced for more than the past three years, because power cuts are not something that started happening in the past three years. People can have the confidence that they have a Government that is going to ensure that this issue is being dealt with, with all due expedition. In fact, within two years and 10 months of being elected we have been able to analyse the contract that they were going to enter into, we have been able to analyse what is best for Gibraltar, we have been able to run a competitive process to have a new power station in a new location and do all the analysis necessary in order to be able to reach the stage at which we are now – which, although it is still a planning stage, the hon. Gentleman will know does not mean there are not things happening in relation to building.

1185 The most essential parts of a power station are not the walls, which can go up very quickly: they are switchgear and they are engines. The engines are already in production for Gibraltar for its new power station, so that we can confidently predict that we will be ready by late 2016, early 2017, by which time we are confident that we will be able to provide gas to the location of the power station. Whether that involves some temporary facility providing gas from the new area or whether it involves the final gas facility, we are very confident that there will be gas flowing to the power station when it is ready to be commissioned. That is something that can be available even before the power station is ready to go, so that we do not have a power station sitting idle waiting for gas or having to be fired on diesel – which is the solution that they were going to provide for the community for the next 30 years, but which, as he knows, we consider to be hugely more expensive than gas and hugely more polluting than gas, and therefore also more expensive than gas again, because we would have to pay fines under the Pollution Prevention and Control mechanisms because we would not be using the best available technology and our carbon footprint would be high and we would therefore have to buy a huge amount – literally millions of pounds – of carbon credits if we were to burn diesel.

1195 So he can have the confidence that he is asking for, for the community. He can go forth and tell the community that the Chief Minister has given him the comfort that he sought: that the power station will be ready as a priority by the date that we have announced, that it is an absolute priority for this Government, that it is the best possible solution for this community for many generations, and that the fuel will be there too.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, well, turning to the distribution network, because of course the building of a power station and the building of the liquid natural gas is not the end of the story. In order for this community to be safe in the knowledge that power cuts are going to be a thing of the past, there needs to be also a new distribution network.

1205 Is he confident that by the end of 2016, beginning of 2017, there will not only be a fully functioning power station but also a renewed, up-to-date, fully functioning distribution network for Gibraltar as well?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, and neither would they if they had proceeded with their power station.

1210 He needs to understand what he is asking about. The distribution network, if we were to do it in five years or in three years, would involve none of Gibraltar's roads being traversed for that period. It involves a lot of different areas and junctions having to be literally dug up because of the way the cables were put in in the old days. This is not just an issue where I can blame the previous administration; this is an issue of how we have done electricity for the past 100 years. So a lot of our infrastructure is actually in a hole in the ground, not in a duct, and therefore it is going to take a period of time in order to be able to do this reasonably and not digging up all the roads in Gibraltar.

What we have done, and I started doing it in December 2011, was pressed the button on continuing to make the investment in respect of the new distribution network. I would not allow that to be something that was going to be delayed, and the works have continued – and the hon. Gentleman has seen the work that has already been done. There is much more work to be done in the future, but we need to understand at the moment there is a very... and again, as we were this morning with Ebola, we are to a certain extent laymen, but there is a very bad schematic available of Gibraltar's distribution network, and therefore when a contractor goes on site to develop a new building, or simply to dig up a road for another agency – for example, somebody goes to dig up the road for AquaGib – they dig and they hit a cable because there is not a good plan of where those cables are.

So we have a creaking infrastructure because it is old, we do not have it all in ducts – which we need to have in the future because then it is easier to replace if one particular cable goes bad – and we do not have the switchgears that we need to have. So the replacement of the switchgear, the replacement of the cabling, the introduction of ducts and, in effect, a new schematic – which will be available, I suppose, online for whoever it is that is an approved contractor in Gibraltar – will be the solution. That solution, we have to understand, under their plan and under our plan, takes a period of time, because otherwise all you do is collapse Gibraltar if you dig up every road at the same time.

1230

This should not be an issue of dispute between us, because this is being pursued. The difference is that we pursued it immediately without stopping for the power station contract, whilst they did very little – they have to accept, I think – for the first 12 or 16 years in respect of this, and we are going to do it all starting in respect of the new power station. In fact, it was part of their contract for the power station, but it would not have been resolved in the period of the power station works. It is work that has to necessarily continue after the power station is ready.

1240

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, no, I do not accept that we did very little, and indeed, as he has rightly pointed out... No, I do not accept that. As he has rightly pointed out, the contract for £120 million for the new power station, the GSD contract, included a new distribution network, which included dual cables all around Gibraltar, with five, effectively, distribution units at particular intervals as well around Gibraltar.

1245

But of course, I am not interested, really, in the past, Mr Speaker, even though I think the criticisms are unfair in the sense that, in the same way as it took the GSD four years of preparation and dealing with injunctions to get to the stage where it got to in 2011, it appears that it is taking the Government four years equally to prepare to a situation where it can commence the works, which are not going to be commencing until next year.

But what the people of Gibraltar really want to know, Mr Speaker, is when will the power cuts be a thing of the past. That is really what they want to know, and it appears to me that we are none the wiser as to when that is likely to happen, because we do not have any time limits as to when the distribution network will be completed.

1255 Can I ask the Hon. the Chief Minister when he envisages that there will be a new network for Gibraltar, knowing that it is difficult, because I accept that it is difficult, but what people want to know is when will those power cuts be a thing of the past – bearing in mind that he himself, or the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister, in communiqués issued from his office, has actually said that a lot of these power cuts are due to the ‘creaking’ – in their words – distribution network?

1260 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, when will the power cuts become a thing of the past? When we fix the negligence that they were responsible for the past 16 years. I know he does not want to talk about the history of this subject because it does him huge political damage.

1265 Mr Speaker, there was a report dated 2005 to the then Government, the GSD, which urged them to act now, because otherwise... In 2005 – not in 2011, not in 2010, not in 2009, 2008 or 2007, or even in 2006. In 2005, the GSD Government was told to act now – this is what the report says, from somebody who was then inside the Government – otherwise, the existing attitude of the GSD Government at the time, of praying and keeping their fingers crossed, was not an option in relation to the electricity distribution network, which was falling apart. This is an internal document of the GSD Government.

1270 Mr Speaker, we will fix the power stations and there will be no more power stations when we have dealt with that which they failed to deal with. Under their power station contract there was also not a time limit for the ending of the distribution works as he suggests that might have been dealt with in the period of the build of the power station. This takes longer, and people have to make a choice between us doing this properly, or trying to do it so quickly that we turn Gibraltar upside down and it is impossible to drive anywhere or have any transport links between any particular roads in Gibraltar – or we do this properly, in a way that ensures that we are no longer subject to praying or keeping our fingers crossed, which is the regime to which they condemned us.

1275 So every power cut today that relates to the creaking infrastructure arises from the 2005 report to the GSD – that the attitude of praying and keeping their fingers crossed had to come to an end and they had to act now – not being heeded and not acting then, because by the time we were elected their contract was still not final and they had not yet started to do the work. Mr Speaker, I think it is absolutely shameful that this community has been put into a position by the previous administration where we are suffering these power cuts as a result of the creaking distribution network that we have.

1280 In two years and 10 months we have taken massive steps forward. Immediately we were elected we gave the go-ahead for the distribution network to begin. It has been ongoing, it will be finished as soon as it can be, and we will then finally have the distribution network we deserve, no power cuts, a new power station that burns gas instead of diesel, which pollutes less, which costs less, which addresses recurrent expenditure and addresses power cuts.

1285 And Mr. Speaker if it takes us five years to do that. We were elected in December 2011, so give us the credit of 30 days – January 2012 to early 2017, late 2016, a full four or just about five years: if it takes us five years to do that, and we do not face injunctions and we do not face all of that other nonsense that the hon. Gentleman referred to, then they too could have done it in five years – and they did not, because between 2005 and 2010, if they had chosen gas, if they had gone down to North Mole and they had done everything that we have done, they might have made the right analysis and they might have delivered the solution, but they did not.

1290 The GSD condemned Gibraltar to the power cuts we are suffering today. The GSLP Liberals will release it from that condemnation and will deliver the power that a modern community like ours deserves. (Banging on desks)

1300 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, as usual, a lot of bluster from the Chief Minister, and quite frankly, a lot of exaggeration. There is nothing that this community ought to believe from the words that the Chief Minister utters. No, Mr Speaker, because he also said on 30th June, just after we had had the Budget debate, downstairs in the lobby of this House, that the difference between the £120 million that we had contracted for the building of the power station, and indeed a new office block for Gibelec and a new distribution network and new storage facilities... that the difference between £120 million and £68 million was that because somebody in the GSD had pocketed the difference.

1305 That is the kind of politics that the hon. Gentleman undertakes constantly and consistently from this House and elsewhere, and if he can shamefully – because that is shameful exaggeration and a complete and utter untruth, I must say... If he can do that in relation to that and exaggerate in that way and make that point in that way, which is absolutely shameful, then I have to say that nobody can take the points that the Hon. the Chief Minister has made seriously.

1310 Mr Speaker, the reality was, does he not accept, that in 2005 there was a report, which he is selectively quoting from: the GSD put its plans in motion in 2007; it was prevented, because of injunctions, from effectively commencing the works until 2011; the contracts were in place, the funding was in place, and indeed if the injunctions and the litigation had not prevented us from doing so, we would have commenced

1315 the works; and had he and his Government not put a stop to the GSD contract, the power station would have been built and the distribution network would have been built, or would have been in the process of being completed, and all the power cuts that we have been experiencing would have been a thing of the past; and that therefore the reality is that the large responsibility for the power cuts that we have been experiencing in Gibraltar lies at his door. Nothing to do with us, Mr Speaker?

1320 Mr Speaker: Before hon. Members get carried away any further, in the last hour 50 Questions have been asked on this matter of the power station, involving a great deal of work no doubt by the Hon. Mr Netto, and at very short notice answers have been provided, as far as I can see, to all the Questions by technical officers and other civil servants who must have devoted a great deal of time in compiling all this information. I think that that effort deserves high parliamentary standards and that we should maintain them.

1325 For the last few weeks I have been able to follow in the media the exchanges between the two sides of the House: a slanging match on who is to blame for power cuts and who did this and who did that on the power station, or did not. If hon. Members want to continue in that vein and have a debate, we can set time aside here in this House for such a debate on a motion which either the Chief Minister can bring or the Leader of the Opposition can bring; but I am not going to allow what we have achieved in the last hour to deteriorate into a further slanging match. Therefore, I will call both hon. Members to order and move on to something else.

1330 Hon. D A Feetham: I agree entirely with Mr Speaker, (Interjection) and again I apologise if I have exceeded the bounds of what is reasonable.

I was responding to political points that the Hon. the Chief Minister was making, because I had wanted to just simply concentrate on allaying the concerns of the public, and my Question –

1340 Mr Speaker: I allowed –

Hon. D A Feetham: – was about when the distribution network was going to be completed, so that people understand that beyond a certain date they can expect the power cuts to be a thing of the past. I never made any adverse points.

1345 Mr Speaker: I allowed the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition to make the point (Interjections) before intervening and pointing out as I perceived the situation to be.
Now, the Hon. Mr Netto.

1350 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, sorry with respect, I have been asked a Question by the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. He has then got up and made another point. He has accused me –

Mr Speaker: I am prepared to let the Chief Minister answer that question in the knowledge that I will not allow any further –

1355 Hon. Chief Minister: I appreciate it, Mr Speaker, but –

Mr Speaker: But I will call upon Mr Netto, because he is the original (Hon. Chief Minister: Yes, indeed.) questioner and he must have an opportunity to ask supplementaries.

1360 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said something that I did not say and attributed it to me. I did not say, downstairs in the lobby of the House or elsewhere, that somebody in the GSD had pocketed the difference. What I said was that the GSD would have had to explain where the difference was going. Their ears might have heard something else, and they might have heard something else for their own reasons. They are not to attribute to me their own malice in respect of those matters, but they will have to explain to the community – and this is a simple point and they will not be allowed to get away without explaining to the community – how they could have condemned us to a higher cost in respect of a power station than this community should be paying, and how they could have condemned us to diesel when the cost of the diesel was going to be so high, not just because diesel is more expensive than gas, but also because one has to pay fines in respect of burning diesel because of the carbon credits that they incur.

1370 Mr Speaker: the hon. Gentleman has talked about a delay between 2007 and 2011 relating to injunctions that were in place. This is an important issue. The hon. Members had the stewardship of the affairs of Gibraltar for 16 years, and in that time it is now clear, and in the public domain, that they received reports telling them that they had to act earlier in relation to power. In 2003, they received a report that told them 1375 that the Waterport Power Station, which had been commissioned in the early 1980s, was not going to be able to last until 2010. In 2005, they received a report about the creaking distribution network.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman tells us now that in 2007 they started to act. Well, what did they do between 2005 and 2007?

1380 Of course people want to know what is going to happen in respect of power generation. Of course there has been a lot of work put into providing these answers – not just by civil servants, as the Hon. Mr Speaker will know, but also by politicians, who have been working very hard to give answers to this community and to provide the narrative that I have provided. As you yourself have said, Mr Speaker, we have provided the answers to just about every single one of those 50 Questions that the hon. Member has asked, where we have been able to. What the community cannot be asked to forget – and look, it is politics, but it is also the 1385 reality and it is part of the debate, with a small ‘d’ – is that the hon. Members opposite failed to act in the period when they were elected. For the hon. Gentleman to get up and therefore say that any power cut that is being suffered today, two years and 10 months into our administration, is solely our responsibility is the cheapest way of trying to do politics and pull the wool before people’s eyes that has ever been seen in western parliamentary democracy. In fact, it is a joke: that is why he is not credible, Mr Speaker.

1390 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, Point of Order. The hon. Gentleman has said that I have misquoted him. I am going to quote exactly what he said. Mr Netto basically went up to GBC, because I asked him to. I made a note of it and Mr Netto went up and this is exactly what he said:

‘One is tempted to ask who was going to pocket the half of the extra amount that it was going to quote.’

That is what he said.

1395 Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.

Mr Speaker: I think the Hon. the Chief Minister has really clarified (Hon. Chief Minister: Exactly.) exactly what he meant, and that he was not attributing any unseemly conduct on the part of anybody.
1400 (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: On the Point of Order, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has now got himself on the hook of Hansard. He said, during the course of his question a moment ago, that I had said one thing. I clarified what I said, which is much closer to what he has actually read than to the thing he said. And so, 1405 Mr Speaker, if the Point of Order is going to get anywhere, what we need to do is adjourn the Point of Order until Hansard is available and the hon. Gentleman can see what he says that I said originally and what he now accepts that I said – and what I reflected I had said is much closer to what I actually said than what he pretended to have said.

1410 But they will have to answer to this community: where were they going to throw away the money? Where was this going to go? Where was this – (Interjection). Is it that twenty... Right where was the money... In what pocket was the money going to end up? Because £20 million is a lot of money; £60 million is a lot of money. That difference they have to account for to the community. Why did they go for a more expensive option, that was going to incur fines and that was going to make Gibraltar a polluter and a consumer of carbon credits in a huge amount? They need to explain that; they know they cannot. That is 1415 where the bluster comes from, trying to avoid that point.

Mr Speaker: Mr Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
1420 I have got a few supplementary questions whereby I would like to try and get more information from the information that the Chief Minister has already provided.

I beg your pardon for the tone of my voice, but I am actually losing my voice. I will try to do my best.

1425 The Hon. Chief Minister, in his answers, talks about the process of taking the risk assessment, the site investigations, the vapour dispersion modelling and the general safety and other issues, and then he actually goes on, in bullet points, to name which ones they are – I do not know whether he has got his own note in front of him.

1430 Basically, in that aspect of his answer that he has provided, what I would like is, if it is possible, for him to give me the information as to by when will the Government be in a position to consider those issues. In other words, by when will those issues be available to them and be in a position to consider them?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am happy to provide the hon. Gentleman with the information, once it is provided to me by the technical people who prepare the answer. I do not have that in my 1435 supplementary list of notes for today, but I am quite happy to make a note of that – because it is a defined part of my answer – get a date for him of by when that is going to be available, and write to him and provide it. I may even be able to provide it tomorrow morning when we come back.

Hon. J J Netto: I am most grateful, Mr Speaker.

1440 The next supplementary question: just a few paragraphs down from where we were just discussing now, the Chief Minister went on to say that the source of the liquid natural gas will be the responsibility of the company that is successful, and then he goes on to continue to say with the storage, gasification and the supply. Again, I would like to know whether he has an indication by when this will be so?

Hon. Chief Minister: Just to clarify, is the hon. Gentleman asking me when does he think that we will have selected the final supplier of gas?

Hon. J J Netto: Yes.

1450 Hon. Chief Minister: Right, okay. Again, there are technical considerations in all the proposals put to the Government which are subject to assessment and there is a technical process to go through, so I will get that date and let him have it.

1455 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the same applies on the following page, if he moves forward. When he talks about the UK entity, Health and Safety Laboratory (HSL), doing the things that they need to do. I would like a date for that, if it is possible.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I will provide it on the same basis, if possible.

1460 Hon. J J Netto: Again, Mr Speaker, a few paragraphs down from there, he goes on to say that the operator of the new power station, Gibelec, has not yet submitted an application for the permit under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations. Again, by when will the Government think to be in a position to be able to do so?

1465 Hon. Chief Minister: There I think I can provide a little bit more information, Mr Speaker. I think that is at the end of the final design being available to Gibelec. Gibelec can then go to the Environmental Agency under the IPPC directive.

If he wants the exact date when we currently think that will be possible, then I – (Interjection by Mr Netto) Well, I am quite happy to give him an indication, as I have with the others, when I get that from the Chief Executive and the technical people.

1470 Hon. J J Netto: There is a sentence and then there is another paragraph, and it goes on to explain what is being considered in relation to fire prevention measures in relation to the South Mole, to the Detached Mole and the North Mole. In other words, in order to look at all these activities in relation to the new power station and what current level of safety is required once the assessment has been conducted, by when he reckons this part of the exercise will be completed and the Government will be in a position to provide an answer?

1480 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, if he looks at that paragraph, the last phrase there is ‘carried out by the contractor’. That will require me to be in touch with the contractor through the technical people, so that I may not be able to give him in short order. I think the best thing is if I write to him with all of these dates that he has asked me for. I have got a note of five and I am quite happy to write and give him that detail, certainly before the next meeting of this House.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful for that, Mr Speaker.

1485 For the sake of clarification, I suppose the answer to this particular supplementary question is going to be that he is not in a position to provide me with information, because one of my earlier questions was in relation to what sort of terminal technology would be applied for the purpose of regasification for the liquid natural gas, and I was asking him the question whether the technology to be used was going to include either a low-pressure system as fuel for the power station or will include a high-pressure gas supply. I suppose that the answer probably he is going to give me now is that they are not in a position to be able to give me that answer. Is that correct?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I can tell him that both will be possible and that there are choices to be made as to which will be preferable, depending on distance of the regasification facility to the 1495 power station and different technical issues and choices to be made which are not yet finally determined; but both the choices might be available and can be applied in different circumstances.

Of course, the regasification facility may also do other things and therefore there may be other... It may be that the regasification facility provides high-pressure gas and low-pressure gas as well, depending for what purpose it is to be used. So there are a number of options on the table there, but the final choices will be made nearer the final design of both facilities.

Hon. J J Netto: Thanks, Mr Speaker.

The Chief Minister, in the answer that he provided earlier on, was talking about the Health and Safety Laboratory, which was I think the one that was going to be assisting the Environmental Agency. Just for my own satisfaction, when we are talking about the Health and Safety Laboratory in the UK, are we talking about... that this is a particular body within the UK Environment Agency, or is it a completely different entity?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister for Utilities has been dealing with them, I think specifically, but they are a 'related entity' I think is the correct way of describing them.

1510

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, may I assist? It is the Health and Safety Executive and it is an arm of the Health and Safety Executive, which is called the Health and Safety Laboratory – so they do tests and stuff, but they are basically the same entity which do all these assessments for the Environment Agency in the UK.

1515

Hon. J J Netto: I think I am getting more confused as a result of that particular answer, because if I take what the Hon. the Minister for Utilities has just said, it follows that the Health and Safety Laboratory is providing assistance to the UK Health and Safety Executive, while the answer provided by the Chief Minister was in relation to the UK Environment Agency. Are we getting our wires crossed here?

1520

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, (Interjections) the Environment Agency is a UK Government entity. It subcontracts a lot of its work to the Health and Safety Executive and the Health and Safety Laboratory. We are plugging in to that, which is a... I do not know that I can tell him it is private – I think it is public-private – but we are plugging in to that where we can buy services from them.

1525

The Environment Agency of the UK has no jurisdiction and would not be able, at UK public expense, to be involved in our work, so what we are doing is going to the semi-public-private agencies that they use, that do also sell their services, in order to buy their services for Gibraltar. But not the Environment Agency – they are constitutionally distinct from us and would not be involved.

1530

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, but there are clearly two different sets of considerations to be considered in all this process: one is environmental issues in relation to pollution and things of that kind; and then there is another kind of assessment to be done as far as health and safety is concerned.

Do I take it, for the sake of clarification, that the Health and Safety Laboratory will be providing both the environmental aspects and separately the health and safety aspects?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I see where he is going now.

The Gibraltar Environmental Agency will deal with all of the pollution aspects and has the responsibility to do that. The Health and Safety Laboratory and the Health and Safety Executive are contracted to give the risk assessment work that needs to be done and the health and safety assessment which are being done; but the pollution work is done principally by the Gibraltar Environmental Agency, that will be responsible for the IPPC permits etc when that time comes. So it is a different aspect.

The confusion, if it is being created, is because what the hon. Member has said, in order to try and assist, is that the Health and Safety Executive and the Health and Safety Laboratory are part of the wider UK Environment Agency; but as I say, they are entities from which one can buy services, and the services we are buying are risk assessment services and health and safety services, not pollution assessment services, where the Environmental Agency will either do that itself or buy in such expertise as it might usually do when assessing Waterport and OESCO and GMES.

1545

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes just a couple of points there that perhaps the Hon. Chief Minister can clarify. He referred to the heat recovery generators as being included as part of the new power station project, but then made reference as well in the page following – a third page – to the switchgear and associated equipment for Mid Harbour at £1,065,000 and then the estimated costs for WDC at £2,668,000 and £1,482,000 for other equipment. Are those costs that he set out there not included in the power station project?

1555 Hon. Chief Minister: I think, from memory, they are not; I think they are additional costs.

Hon. S M Figueras: Then my only other supplementary is: in relation to the total number of power outages that the Chief Minister helpfully set out in response to one of the Questions, he said that there were a total of 83 power outages since SO Energy provided turbines, and 43 were attributable to turbines. That is more than 50% of the outages attributable to the turbines.

1560 Two aspects to the supplementary: one is to which turbines were the outages attributable – was it to the ones that SO Energy had provided, or others; and is it in the Chief Minister’s knowledge from the technical officers that he will have been dealing with in respect of these Questions, is this proportion of outages being attributed to turbines something that is normal, or are there any particular circumstances that are attributing to this higher incident rate?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the only turbines in Gibraltar are the SO Energy turbines – everything else is engines, so there are only five turbines in Gibraltar – and the high number of outages appears to be because of manual operation of the turbines at one stage and because of sulphur content of fuel being higher than usual operations are recommended for those turbines, something which was recently determined by the operator – remember, the Government is not the operator – and they have therefore changed the fuel that they take for those turbines to ensure it is lower in sulphur content.

Hon. S M Figueras: And can the Minister say with any certainty... and I will appreciate if he cannot, because it may well be a very recent development, or at least the diagnosis of the sulphur content being an issue might be recent. Is it anticipated that, having determined that that was the cause, that the rate of outages may decline significantly?

Hon. Chief Minister: I think it is possible to say that once that was determined the number of outages has become considerably reduced.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am not quite sure whether I actually got an answer for one of the particular Questions I had. This actually dealt with whether they were in a position to know the all-in rate cost, which is quantity surveying terminology. I think engineers tend to use the copex and opex definition in relation to the transporting of the liquid natural gas to Gibraltar with storage, regasification and final distribution. Will that be still pending; and if so by when will the Government know the answer to this?

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, that is going to be the subject of the negotiation finally between the people who are bidding and the price that we get. That is going to be I think what in Spanish is called the ‘madre del Borrego’.

Mr Speaker: We will now have a recess until 5.30.

The House recessed at 5:11 p.m. and resumed at 5.34 p.m.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q619/2014

Haresh K. Budhrani QC, former Speaker of the House – Leak re tax affairs –
Commissioner of Income Tax report

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition.

1595 Clerk: Question 619, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister confirm that the report into the leak of the tax affairs of the previous Speaker of this House has now been completed?

1600 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, the Commissioner of Income Tax has finalised his report into the leak of the tax affairs of the previous Speaker of this House.

1605 The investigation has proved inconclusive and the Chief Secretary is now considering it to determine what, if any, further investigation is deemed necessary.

1610 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on previous occasions he has indicated to me that the report was actually being prepared by the Speaker of the House – sorry, by the Chief Secretary, I beg your pardon. I have asked this on a number of occasions, so just to clarify, it is a report that has been prepared by the Commissioner of Income Tax, not the Chief Secretary?

1615 Hon. Chief Minister: I think for the Chief Secretary, Mr Speaker, because it was the Chief Secretary who was investigating this and it was the Commissioner of Income Tax who was preparing the report for him – because it happened in his Department, and therefore that, I think, is the structure of what has occurred.

1620 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, again I have asked this particular question on a number of occasions in this past: will the Chief Minister undertake to make this report public, or at the very least provide Members of the Opposition with a copy of this report, bearing in mind not only that we are dealing with a criminal offence in relation to the leaking of the tax affairs of the previous Speaker, but that it involves a Member of this House?

1625 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not my report to make public, but I will certainly approach the Chief Secretary in that respect to see whether he will agree to disclose the report as it is now, or such other future report as he may be considering taking, to Members opposite. I think this a hugely important issue. It must not be underestimated. None of us would ever want to find our tax information on the front page of any newspaper.

1630 For whatever reason it happened, my own view is that I am uneasy with a report that is inconclusive and that we must try further to determine exactly what happened. As I told the House before, I do not discard... In fact, I do not think I have powers to instruct the Chief Secretary, but I do not discard seeking to persuade the Chief Secretary to involve the Royal Gibraltar Police if that is the only way to try and drive this to some conclusion.

1635 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not quite understand that answer, because if the investigation, which effectively was concluded in December of 2013... This is an answer that he has given me previously when I have asked this. The investigation itself was concluded in December of 2013. If there had been any evidence at that stage that led or pointed the finger to anybody in relation to the committal of a criminal offence, I would have expected the Chief Secretary, or anybody else within the Government, to have provided that evidence to the Police. It does appear to me to be very late in the day to be considering instructing or passing the matter on to the Gibraltar Police – unless, from the conclusion of the investigation in December of 2013 to now, there has been some further evidence that has come to light which actually throws some light in relation to the matter, but that does not appear to be the case.

1645 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is forgetting that I have told him this before. I have told him my opinion about this before, but we were waiting for the report to be prepared – and the report that has been prepared suggests that the conclusion is not pointing in any particular direction.

1650 That is why I think it may be necessary to involve the RGP – not because the report points in a direction or does not point in any other direction, but because if it has been inconclusive it may be that the RGP needs to start from scratch and they may be better able to find forensically where this leak has occurred. We are talking about a ‘leak’, Mr Speaker – we are using laymen’s terms. There must have been some information provided in breach of the Income Tax Act. That is what we are talking about. I think it was appropriate for the Income Tax Commissioner to be involved with the Chief Secretary in trying to determine it internally, but as I have said before, we should not discard the Royal Gibraltar Police becoming involved.

1655 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I accept that you cannot discard that, but what surprises me in relation to this is that we are dealing with two separate issues: we are dealing with an internal investigation by the Commissioner of Income Tax and the Chief Secretary, which produces a report internally to the Government about the question of the leak; and secondly, it is a criminal investigation by the Police.

1660 I would have thought, given the fact that quite evidently there has been a breach of the criminal law – the only issue is by whom, but there has been a breach of the criminal law, because obviously the tax affairs of the Speaker were leaked and that is a breach of the criminal law – that the Police would have been brought in at a far earlier juncture. Is he saying that actually the Police were not brought in at the beginning, 1665 when we knew there was a breach of the criminal law, and there is consideration of bringing the Police in at this juncture – which appears, with respect to the hon. Gentleman, quite a strange way of proceeding?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have told him this before and he has not told me it was a strange way of proceeding when I said it last time that I thought this was sufficiently serious that at some stage the Police might have to get involved.

1670 He needs to understand I am not Columbo; I am not the investigator here. I am allowing the process to run its course in the appropriate way. Allowing the Civil Service to be independent means allowing the Chief Secretary to run investigations which relate to the Civil Service, and it also means that if the Royal Gibraltar Police see something on the front page of a newspaper which they think they need to investigate, they do so whether or not the Chief Minister calls them in.

1675 I do not think it is appropriate for me, as Chief Minister, to be calling the Police in or not calling the Police in. What I think is appropriate is for me to give the Chief Secretary the view, when he finally has that report and discusses it with me, if it is as inconclusive as it appears to be, that he may wish to communicate with the Royal Gibraltar Police to see whether they can identify how this leak has occurred.

1680 I do not think there is anything particularly strange in that. I think it is clear that what we are trying to do is understand what has happened and we should all be on the same side – namely, working out how somebody's tax affairs ended up on the front page of a newspaper. That is the most important thing.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, obviously I agree with that, but I still believe that there are two separate aspects to this: there is the internal investigation by the Chief Secretary and criminal investigations.

We know that there has been no criminal investigation, because nobody has formally reported it to the Police or asked the Police to investigate the matter, which I would have thought should have occurred at the beginning, because otherwise what we have is the situation that the Police would have done so off their own bat, just based on the report on the front page of the Chronicle. There is no indication that that has occurred.

1690 But the report is what interests me. On a number of occasions I have said, 'Is the Government going to make it public?' At that stage, the Chief Minister said, 'Well, we don't know whether there is any evidence of pointing the finger at anybody, which might then have repercussions in terms of the disclosure of that report,' which I understood. But the report appears to indicate that the investigation is inconclusive. Therefore, in the light of that, doesn't he agree that there are no conceivable reasons why this report ought not to be disclosed to Members of the Opposition and that ultimately it is not a decision for the Chief Secretary – ultimately it is a decision for the political Government as to whether this report, a report to the Government itself, is disclosed or is not disclosed?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is not a report to the Government. It is a report to the Chief Secretary. It is a report that he has control of.

Mr Speaker, as I told him last time – he is forgetting, or neglecting to mention – the issue may be that if the Royal Gibraltar Police is to become involved, then publishing this report at this stage, before they can become involved and deal with the issue in such manner as they may consider appropriate, may not be the most appropriate thing.

1705 I know that the Chief Secretary follows the proceedings of this House assiduously. He now knows that the hon. Gentleman wants him to provide a copy of his report to him.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the Chief Secretary has known that the Leader of the Opposition and the Opposition want a copy of this report since I first started to ask the questions in I think it was June of 2013. So he certainly knows that.

Mr Speaker, what I do not want – and can I receive some assurance from the Hon. the Chief Minister in relation to this – is that this is consistently played into the long grass.

In December of 2013, he said to me, 'The investigation has concluded, but the report has yet to be finalised.'

1715 I then asked him in February, 'Is the report finalised?' and he said, 'No, the report is not yet finalised.'

I asked him in June of 2014, 'When is the report going to be finalised?' and he said, 'At the end of October the report will be finalised.'

1720 Now he is saying, 'As a consequence of that report, there may have to be – we do not know – some report to the Police,' which I would have thought would have been done anyway at the start of the investigations, that you have two parallel investigations, and we then might find us in a situation where there are going to be further delays in the disclosure of this report until after the next general election, or into the long grass.

Can he, at the very least, alleviate concerns that we may have that the Government is playing this into the long grass?

1725 Hon. Chief Minister: I can, Mr Speaker: the Government has no interest in long grass. This is a Government that, in two years and 10 months, has transformed Gibraltar. We are a very nicely trimmed lawn, in fact. We are not long grass.

1730 Long grass is to receive a report in 2003 that tells you that your engines in your power station will not make it past 2010 and do nothing about it; to receive a report in 2005 that says that your distribution network is not going to survive and that you need to be on a wing and a prayer and do nothing about it. That is long grass, because we were elected six years later and nothing had happened.

Mr Speaker, if something happened in December 2013 and I am reporting again to the House in October 2014, and there has been progress from the end of an investigation and now a report is already in place, that is not long grass.

1735 But this is not my report, Mr Speaker. I have told the hon. Gentleman I share his concerns. He should have been assuaged by that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, unfortunately I am not, because of the way that this has been played out.

1740 The Hon. the Chief Minister will recall that originally what we asked for was an investigation by this Parliament, because it involved a Member of this House. There were exchanges in this House at the time when the former Speaker made his statement, and one of the points that was made by the then Leader of the Opposition was this, if I may just remind him. He said:

‘a report which can only have been leaked either by a civil servant in the Income Tax Office, by a civil servant in the office of the Chief Minister to whom the report was sent or, for the sake of equanimity, by the Chief Minister or by somebody to whom the Chief Minister gave a copy – it cannot be anybody else: one of those four must be the source of the leak...’

1745 Of course, that remains the concern that we want to be absolutely assuaged: that nobody on the Government benches has been involved in the leaking of this report in order to effectively have the Speaker removed from office. That is the point. Indeed, quite apart from that, Mr Speaker, there are very limited potential sources of that leak.

1750 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he should not rely on the Hon. the former Leader of the House as the bible when he says there can only be four potential sources and one of them is the current Chief Minister... as being absolutely and completely the only way in which things can happen. They could have happened in myriad other ways, especially now, in the days of technology and people from very far away being able to get into anybody’s computer from anywhere else in the world. There could have been a little boy in Peking who got into the computers of the Income Tax Office and decided to leak it to the Chronicle, or whoever it was leaked to. He should know better than that.

1755 But now we know exactly what he is getting to, Mr Speaker. As usual, what he is trying to do is to impute improper motive to his political opponent – in particular to me. He has, in effect, said that what he wants to be satisfied of is that I did not leak the matter of the previous Speaker’s tax affairs. Mr Speaker, I give this community as a whole an assurance, if I have to, that it is not the current Chief Minister who is in the business of leaking anything to the newspapers – but it is absolutely, frankly, shameful that he should have the audacity to suggest that it was me.

1760 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have not suggested that the Hon. the Chief Minister as a source of the leak. What I have suggested is that there are very limited potential sources of this particular leak. We are talking about the tax information of the Speaker of the House at the time. The source of that leak could only have come from a very limited number of sources, which I have just described.

1770 Does he not agree with me that, in order to dispel any possible suggestion that anybody on the Government benches was involved in the leaking of this particular report to bring about a particular result, that the investigation had to be conducted openly and transparently? That is why we asked for a parliamentary investigation, but now I am asking... That is the reason why we need to see a copy of the report: to see exactly how the investigation was conducted and to make our own minds up as to the thoroughness of that report and that everything that ought to have been done has been done in order to make sure that the source of this leak could have been traced.

1775 Nothing that he has said today has alleviated any concerns that I may have, because of course the Police have not even been brought in. The matter has not even been reported to the Police, which I would have expected at the very outset, given the fact that this was a criminal offence from the very beginning. I would have expected a criminal investigation from the very beginning, not three years later – or two years later, I beg your pardon.

1780 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is the most disgraceful conduct by the Leader of the Opposition. He is, in effect, accusing me of committing a criminal offence, or saying that I am a suspect in the commission of a criminal offence.

Let me tell him that there are other people who may have made that leak. That leak could also have been made by the former Chief Minister, who I understand had access to a similar document. Therefore, he 1785 might like to get up and impute Sir Peter Caruana also with the potential that he might be the fifth person who might fall under suspicion.

Because of course, if it is that Sir Peter should not fall under suspicion because he was the person who appointed Haresh Budhrani as Speaker of this House, then I am exonerated in exactly the same way, Mr Speaker because you see, after the election it was I who asked Haresh Budhrani to remain as Speaker, and 1790 in fact it was I who used my Government's majority to see him approved as Speaker, having previously voted against him.

So I did not need to enter a conspiracy of the sort that the hon. Member has tried to attribute to me in order to 'get rid' of Haresh Budhrani as Speaker. All I needed to do was to ask my Great Aunt Wilma to be Speaker, and with my 10 votes in this Parliament Haresh Budhrani would not have been Speaker and my 1795 Great Aunt Wilma would have been.

Does he get it now? Does he understand that in the Machiavellian world that he lives in, in which he has spun this web where he can feel that he can make accusations against people, there was absolutely no need to do the sort of thing that he has imagined in his worst nightmare; that actually, if I wanted to get rid of Speaker Budhrani, all I needed to do was not persuade myself to appoint him?
1800

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can we set at least some finality in terms of dates for a decision by the Government as to whether this report is going to be disclosed to the Opposition or not, bearing in mind that I have been asking this question consistently and constantly, as the rules allow, for the last two years? And can he give me an indication by when he will make a definitive decision as to whether this report is going to 1805 be disclosed to Members of the Opposition or not?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he needs to go back to Hansard. He needs to see what I have said. He needs to see I have said this is not my report; it is the Chief Secretary's report. He needs to see exactly what it is that he has been asking about.

Frankly, Mr Speaker, given what he has said this afternoon, I am not going to give any further answers. I am going to reflect on what he has said and how he has said it and whether it is actually quite proper for him to come to this House and make those sorts of imputations.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he obviously does not like anybody questioning him. He obviously does not like anybody putting him under any kind of pressure at all – legitimate pressure, because it is not a point that I am just simply taking out of my sleeve – as he did with those investors in May of 2011 – now. It is something that we have raised and we raised, and flagged up at the very beginning when the Speaker made his statement to this House.

Does he not recognise that a report to the Chief Secretary, or by the Chief Secretary, is disclosable if the political Government agree to disclose it? There is nothing, there is no impediment, there is no magic to the fact that this is a report produced to the Chief Secretary. We are dealing with the leaking of the tax affairs of the Speaker of this House. It could have been any Member of this House. Therefore, there is not only the question of the underlying criminality – because that is what it was: the leaking of what are confidential tax affairs – but also a matter of concern to this House. Does he not recognise that it is his decision – not the Chief Secretary; his decision – as to whether this particular report is disclosed or not, and he cannot hide behind the Chief Secretary?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not a man who hides behind anyone. That is why I have got to where I have. I am not a man who stands in the way of people who want to disclose things that belong to them. That report belongs to the Chief Secretary. This is not a Government that tells the Chief Secretary what to do. Clearly, he was a Member of a Government where the attitude was completely different, because the suggestion coming from the hon. Gentleman is that Chief Secretaries do what Chief Ministers tell them. Well, we know what sort of Chief Minister he would be then, if he ever made it to the post, and what sort of experience he has of the person who used to do it when he was elected.
1830

He has made a very, very serious accusation today, Mr Speaker, across the despatch box. It is absolutely and utterly unfair. He has not paused to think. He has not realised that I am the one who appointed Haresh Budhrani when we were successful in winning the election in December 2011. That has infected his logic.
1835

What I am going to say to him is that I am feeling absolutely no pressure. I think he is making a complete and utter fool of himself by his line of questioning, and all he is doing is disclosing why it is that he always rubs people up the wrong way. He gets up and he accuses me of being potentially a suspect in the commission of a criminal offence and he expects me just to smile at him and say, 'Yes, Danny, I'll roll over and you can have whatever you like.' Well look, Mr Speaker he needs to wake up earlier than that to persuade me of the fact that he has made any serious point whatsoever in respect of the allegation that he has made.

1845 And I will tell him something else: the tax affairs of every Gibraltarian and resident of Gibraltar are just as important as the tax affairs of any Member of this House. That is the attitude of the Government. As far as I am concerned, there can be absolutely no other approach. Everybody is entitled to confidentiality. He obviously thinks that people in this House – or at least he is – entitled to a bit more than any other citizen. Well, he is absolutely wrong, as far as I am concerned.

1850 But what he should stop, Mr Speaker, is trying to spread as much muck as he can in order to try and sully all of us by trying to make us suspects in criminal investigations, because if he goes down that route, one day the worm might turn and say everything it knows.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if the hon. Gentleman has anything to say, he should say it openly and not make statements in key or code. I am here to listen directly and respond to anything that the Hon. Chief Minister wants to say.

I know that I rub him up the wrong way – I know that I do – but I rub the Hon. Chief Minister up the wrong way just by simply standing up and asking questions of him. He has become everything that he used to criticise in his predecessor. That is the reality. He is the 'New Dawn' Chief Minister! (Laughter) Quite frankly, I do not see the rays of sunshine shining on his Government.

1860 Is he really seriously suggesting and seriously asking the people of Gibraltar to accept as a position that a report produced by the Chief Secretary is only disclosable at the behest of the Chief Secretary, without the political Government actually taking a decision and saying, 'No, we believe that this particular report is so important that it be made public; it is so important that we show transparency and openness in relation to this particular issue that we are going to make it public.'? Quite frankly, I do not think that anybody in Gibraltar is going to believe the Chief Minister if he says that is the position.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well it must be, Mr Speaker, because he thinks everybody in Gibraltar is used to the way they used to do things or the way he would do them.

1870 He is absolutely wrong about everything he has said. He does not rub me up the wrong way every time he stands up. Most of the time he tickles my fancy and I laugh a lot because he makes such a fool of himself. Most of the time, the best that he can do is make us laugh. But there are only extremes: he either plays the fool or he makes an allegation of a criminal offence being committed. He just cannot play it straight: that is his problem.

1875 In my Government, the things the Chief Secretary is responsible for, the Chief Secretary is responsible for. Has he written to the Hon. the Chief Secretary and asked him for a copy of the report? I dare to say that he has not, Mr Speaker. In my Government, the things that people are responsible for, they take responsibility for. They are empowered, and that is what a Government should be doing with its Civil Service; not what we saw in the 16 years that they were in Government.

1880 He says I am becoming everything that I used to criticise in the hon. the now backbencher, then Leader of the House. Well, I do not know whether that makes me, in his estimation, the second greatest Gibraltarian of all time, (Laughter) which is what he used to call Mr Caruana when he was in Government, in another flight of fancy, although he now spends most of his time criticising things done 'a la Caruana'.

1885 Mr Speaker, the position is very clear; I have set it out already. He just wants to keep going and going, because I guess he does not want to get on to the other Questions and he wants to repeat the issue over and over again.

As far as the Government is concerned, the Chief Secretary's report belongs to the Chief Secretary and he can make decisions about it.

Q620/2014
HM Attorney General post –
Number of applications

Clerk: Question 620, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1890 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state how many people have applied for the post of Her Majesty's Attorney General of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1895 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I will answer this Question together with Questions 621 and 622.

Q621/2014
HM Attorney General post –
Salary

Clerk: Question 621, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1900

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister confirm that the post of Her Majesty's Attorney General for Gibraltar will continue to attract the same salary, with the usual annual increases, as it does at present?

Q622/2014
Director of Public Prosecutions –
Creation of post

Clerk: Question 622, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1905

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister please state whether the Government intends to create the post of Director of Public Prosecutions?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1910

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there are six applicants for the post of Her Majesty's Attorney General for Gibraltar. The interview process is presently on foot for this post.

Salary is as advertised in Bulletin of Circulars HRD No. 9/2014, which was advertised internally within the public service as well as publicly in Gibraltar's press and in The Times – of London, I should say.

1915

In a number of other Overseas Territories the role of Attorney General has been split to provide for a Director of Public Prosecutions that has day-to-day management of criminal prosecutions, although often under the overall supervision and constitutional purview of the Attorney General. That may be an option for the future in Gibraltar, but it is not a matter on which any decision has yet been made by Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar; nor is the Director of Public Prosecutions a post for which there is any active recruitment. The only relevant post in respect of which recruitment is currently active is the post of Attorney General.

1920

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many Gibraltarians out of the six applicants have there been?

1925

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I confess I cannot give an answer in that respect with accuracy.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I did not quite catch the answer... I do not think he has provided the answer to the Question about whether the salary is going to remain the same for the post of Her Majesty's Attorney General.

1930

Hon. Chief Minister: He needs to listen more carefully, Mr Speaker. What I said was this: salary is as advertised in Bulletin of Circulars HRD 9/2014, which was advertised internally within the public service as well as publicly in Gibraltar's press and The Times. I assume he saw the advert in the press.

1935

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government envisage to have a situation where £128,000 is paid to the Attorney General of Gibraltar for his role as Attorney General, but perhaps he may be asked to perform other functions, for which the Government pays the Attorney General something over and above the £128,000, if indeed it is the Government's intention for the Attorney General to perform roles over and above what the current Attorney General performs?

1940

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the advert I am looking at says £120,000. I do not know whether the £128,000 is with the increase given this summer, but the advert says £120,000.

I am not going to be involved in answering hypothetical questions. There is an advert with a salary, and that is what is presently being interviewed for by the Specified Appointments Commission. That is the 1945 position. I am not going to try and in any way interfere with that process, which must remain entirely neutral and independent.

1950 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I accept that there is a process and the Special Appointments Committee will then advise the Governor as to the preferred candidate, but I am trying to explore with the Hon. the Chief Minister the Government's thinking in terms of the appropriate candidates for this particular... and how far the Government is willing to go in terms of, potentially, the candidate who is chosen doing something else, other than Attorney General, over and above the traditional role of Attorney General, and if that person might then be paid something over and above the £120,000 or £128,000 for the role of Attorney General.

1955 It is an important point. I will tell you what my concern is in relation to this. An Attorney General will have security of tenure and will have security in terms of salary. His salary is £128,000. If you then have a situation – and he will know where I am going with this – where that particular candidate, the chosen candidate, is then paid say £200,000 or £300,000 over and above to perform certain other functions, then potentially that goes to the heart of the security of tenure for the Attorney General, because the Government can effectively turn, at any moment, the tap off in terms of the larger portion of the salary. That is what I am getting at. What I am getting at is the successful candidate will only be doing his or her role as Attorney General of Gibraltar and be paid £128,000 – nothing else.

1965 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know exactly what he is doing, and I know exactly what he has said about this subject to many people about this issue and how he has expressed his views in respect of particular individuals.

1970 All I am going to say is that there is a Specified Appointments Commission interview process ongoing for a job with an advertised salary, and I am not going to go anywhere near seeking to influence the decision of the people who are constitutionally required to make the recommendation to His Excellency the Governor by engaging in a debate with him to try and pull them one way or the other – which is exactly what he is trying to do.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not trying to pull anybody in one direction or another; I am trying to get, as I have in relation to other answers, other questions, a straight answer from the hon. Gentleman.

1980 He makes policy: he must know what the policy is. Is the policy that the person chosen as Attorney General simply does work traditionally done by the Attorney General; or does he leave his doors open for that person not only to do that work but to do work over and above that which the Attorney General has traditionally done – and does he also leave his doors open therefore for that person to be paid extra over and above the £128,000?

If the answer is, 'You're barking up the wrong tree completely; no, that is not on the horizon, it is not in the Government's plans,' it ought to be capable of being given a straight answer.

1985 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the problem is that my answers are always straight: it is the questions that are crooked.

The hon. Gentleman is trying to do something which is nefarious, and I am not going to fall in the trap. I am not going to fall in the trap of giving effect to the wishes that he has of trying to stymie one or other candidates.

1990 There is a process. There is a Specified Appointments Commission that is interviewing a number of candidates. They have to be constitutionally independent whilst they do that and they have to make a recommendation to His Excellency the Governor, and there is an advert –

1995 Mr Speaker: May I correct the Chief Minister? They do not make a recommendation; they advise the Governor. There is a difference between advice and recommendation. It is the same with the Public Service Commission.

Hon. Chief Minister: I take that point, and the hon. Member – 2000 Mr Speaker: The Public Service Commission advises the Governor – the Governor has to act on that advice.

Hon. Chief Minister: Advice. I appreciate, Mr Speaker, the importance of that distinction, and thank you for pointing it out, but I am not going to tread into any debate which can affect the impartiality of the SAC whilst it does the work that it is doing.

2005 To those who are informed of what is going on, what the hon. Gentleman is trying to do is absolutely clear and transparent, and those who know the conversations that he has had about this will be even more clearly of the view that what he is trying to do is to stymie a particular candidate.

Well, Mr Speaker, we take a different view. We take the view that the Specified Appointments Commission has too important a job to do. It must not in any way be interfered with – not even should there be a debate that might suggest something which could put one candidate in a stronger or less strong position.

That is why I am not going to go anywhere near the issues that the hon. Gentleman wants me to go to, for the reasons that he specifically wants me to go to; but he needs to know that this community expects more from its Leader of the Opposition than simply trying to snooker people in the way that they advance themselves for applications for jobs.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is an outrageous suggestion that somehow, because I am asking questions, that I am trying to snooker somebody's application for Attorney General. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I am asking about Government policy. It is in the gift of the Chief Minister to come clean on Government policy. All I am asking is: is it Government policy that the Attorney General of Gibraltar, whoever is chosen – I do not care who is chosen, quite frankly – is just going to be doing that job, or is there a possibility in Government policy that he or she is going to be doing something over and above that? That is all I am asking, and that should be capable...if it is a possibility, without going into whatever candidate has applied, if that is a possibility, if that is the Government thinking, he ought to be able to say to this House, 'Yes, that is a possibility,' and then defend the policy, as no doubt he will if that is the direction the Government is going.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, doesn't he understand that the process of interview and advice is presently on foot? It is happening as we speak – and he wants to have a debate about it which could somehow affect the interview process or the advice that might be given.

If he wants to know what the Government's policy is... If he were genuine for one moment, if there were one fleck of good faith about him, he would simply look at the advert. That is the Government's policy. It appeared internally in the Government and it has been advertised externally. That is the Government's policy: there was a job; there is a salary. He cannot be seriously saying to me – and he has wasted already precious minutes of this Parliament's time – that he wants to know what the Government's policy is. We advertise all sorts of jobs and he never says to me, 'Is it your policy that, in respect of this job, the salary is the advertised salary or a higher salary that you are going to negotiate?'

If he thinks for one moment that anybody on this side of the House or in the wider community is going to believe that he is doing this out of the kindness of his heart and trying to ensure that the security of tenure of the Attorney General is not affected, well then those people who might think that do not know him and they have not seen the advert and they do not see what is clear in black upon green in my copy and black upon white in just about everybody else's, as to the salary of what the Attorney General for Gibraltar will be.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, let me put it another way then. Perhaps he can answer this: will the role of the person who is chosen to fill the post of Her Majesty's Attorney General be limited to the role as set out in that particular advert and nothing else?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he has finished with the salary; now he is going to start with the role.

The role of the Attorney General, Mr Speaker, is set out in the advertisement and in the Constitution and in the Laws of Gibraltar. That will be the role of the Attorney General.

Hon. D A Feetham: And, Mr Speaker, the Government has no policy in order to extend the role of the person who has been chosen as Attorney General beyond the work description set out in that advert?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the role of the Attorney General is set out in the advert for applicants to understand and in the Constitution. There are some statutes which also set out the obligations of the Attorney General.

The Government is unable to change the role of the Attorney General, should we wish to do so, without having a new Constitution. Which part of that doesn't the apparent senior lawyer, who has been Minister for Justice, understand? Or is it that he is just being intentionally obtuse?

Q623/2014

Tunnel project –

Allocation of contract to GJBS; commencement of works

2065 Clerk: Question 507, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what posts in the Care Agency are being currently filled in an acting capacity and since when that has been so?

2070 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

Mr Speaker: Question 623.

Clerk: Sorry, 623.

2075 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government explain why the tunnel project has been allocated to GJBS without any tender, and when are the works likely to commence?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2080 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the tunnel project works were allocated to the Government's wholly owned company, GJBS, without tender by the previous administration.

The contractor is currently beginning their mobilisation and work is expected to commence on site within the next few weeks. (Banging on desks)

2085 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is, in fact, a decision that the hon. Gentleman opposite criticised at the time, was not happy about at the time and went on at great lengths in relation to the tender process. What is it that has made them take a different line now from the line that they were taking then?

2090 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, as you can imagine of somebody who has accused me of committing a criminal offence, I am not going to take anything he says at his word, and therefore I do not accept that I have ever criticised the previous administration for giving the allocation of this work to GJBS. Everything that he has said, as far as I am concerned, he has to prove.

2095 The fact is that what we did was we created a prequalification tender for the continuation of the tunnel works as one of the potential options that we allowed ourselves for the resumption of the work. So we had a tender award to our own wholly owned company and we prequalified third parties.

As a result of the decision of the court, we have made the decision that we want to continue with the wholly owned Government subsidiary and not proceed down the road of a further European tender, which would involve a further delay.

2100 Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman was asking when it had happened and now pretends to have known. It appears to me that he forgot that actually it was when he was in Government that the tender to GJBS was awarded directly.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he may think whatever he wants about my state of knowledge.

2105 The reality therefore is that the decision the Government has taken is based on the speed of the works being carried out, and that therefore he agrees that the original decision that was taken by the GSD administration, post the problems that we experienced with the original contractors in relation to the tunnel, was quite justified. Therefore he must accept that.

2110 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. His question is clear: he asks can we explain why the tunnel project has been allocated to GJBS. We did no such thing: they did, and he had forgotten that they had done it. All we have done is continue that and allow it to continue without kicking in a different process. His Question is designed to create scandal around the idea that GJBS might have got something without tender, and then asked when the works are likely to commence. He had forgotten that it happened when they were in power!

2115 Mr Speaker, he accuses people who forget the slightest detail of being unfit to do the jobs for which they are appointed, and then he goes and forgets something as important as this, which is one of what he describes as the major civil engineering works for the benefit of this community, and comes to this House and asks us why the project was allocated. We could simply have turned around and said, 'Ask Sir Peter, because it was not us who allocated it.' The Question is about allocation, and we did not make the allocation.

Does he want the list of the number of contracts that were awarded directly to GJBS, without going to tender, by them when they were in administration – himself in particular; or shall I just keep that for another day, when he is not accusing me of committing criminal offences?

2125

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, at this stage I am not accusing the Hon. the Chief Minister of anything. He really is very tetchy this afternoon, and I seem to be rubbing him up the wrong way every single time I ask a Question.

2130

The reality is that this contract was allocated. It was allocated to a company. There was a dispute that arose for a variety of reasons, which led to litigation. The previous administration allocated to GJBS the doing of certain works in relation to the tunnel, which had been left in a certain state as a consequence of that dispute with the original contractors. It could have been open to the Government to have not continued with that decision to continue with GJBS and basically award the contract to somebody else, or to have another tender. I wanted to understand what was motivating the Government decision, and what he has just said is that the decision is based on the fact that what you want to do is to effectively complete the works as quickly as possible.

2135

There is no imputation at all on the Hon. Chief Minister. He really must calm down today.

2140

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am going to give him an out, and it is going to be one which is actually one which he can perform quite quickly. He can tell it to the marines, and as they are coming next weekend he can tell them then, because they might believe him.

2145

He had simply forgotten that it was their Government that actually had given the contract to GJBS. When we were elected, GJBS were in the process of completing the tunnel project, they were estimating what it was going to cost, they were mobilising on site, and their estimate was then a very high figure, in fact. What has happened is that we have not proceeded with the project; we have told them to pause. We prequalified others, we considered what to do and we continued with the allocation that had been made by them.

2150

Does that mean that we have agreed with the allocation made by them? Well, yes, it does mean that we agreed with the allocation made by them. Is that man bites dog? No. He will know that I often come to the House and say that we are pursuing a course of action which was commenced by them. I have told him today that the appointments of Chief Secretary, Chief Technical Officer and Financial Secretary have been done in the way that was established by the Hon. the former Leader of the House. I have no problem in saying so.

2155

He had just forgotten, Mr Speaker. Why doesn't he just own up? Instead of getting up and calling me another name, saying that I am tetchy, saying that I need to calm down... All of these reactions that he tries to produce to pretend that he is calm himself and not tetchy – because what one says is what one is reflecting about oneself – just do not wash. So he needs to calm down, be less tetchy and own up; or go and tell it to the marines. They are holding a fantastic concert next weekend. I suggest he tell the whole band and see whether he finds one who will believe him.

2160

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, thank you very much for the advice on going to the marines and everything else. Apart from all the other qualities that he undoubtedly has, he is also a psychologist and a psychiatrist to boot!

2165

But does he not accept that yes, GJBS had been contracted by the GSD Government to effectively step into the breach that had been created by the mess that we had been landed in through the breach of contract, which has now been confirmed by the courts... the tribunals in the UK, the arbitration tribunal, that it was a breach of contract by the original contractor; but it could have been open to the hon. Gentleman to just simply award the contract somewhere else, or have a tender?

2170

What he has done, effectively, is just simply go with a decision that we had taken originally, which had been questioned by the hon. Member when we took it originally.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not accept that we questioned it. As I have told him, I take nothing that he says for granted or at face value. But he has to stop digging. He has to stop digging and just accept that he forgot this.

I am not just proceeding with a decision made by the previous administration to award the contract to GJBS. I have defended in Court, and spent most of the last two and a half years since we were elected defending the decision and the modus operandi of the decision-taking process of the Hon. the former Chief Minister, which is what, has enabled us to succeed.

I could have taken another attitude: I could have landed Gibraltar in it for a few million pounds, just for the sake of demonstrating that what they had done was not properly done. I did not do that. I did not even countenance it for a moment. I set out to defend the decisions of the previous Chief Minister of Gibraltar in the commercial and economic interests of this community. I took advice and I worked very hard on the 2185 issue, so I am not just agreeing with the decision to award it to GJBS: I spent many hundreds of thousands of pounds defending Sir Peter Caruana's decision to terminate the OHL contract, and in doing so have won in the High Court in London and, I am confident, will succeed in defending any appeal, and will have produced in that way the largest award of damages in favour of the Government of Gibraltar in the history of Gibraltar. That is what I have done.

2190 What the hon. Gentleman needs to do is to do a bit more research and not come here with ill-researched Questions to waste this community's time, because this Question clearly demonstrates that he had just plain forgotten.

I will tell him what this will do for his honesty: if he just owned up, he might actually start growing in stature; but at the moment, frankly, I think the community is very clear in what it thinks about him.

2195 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he is not the judge –

Mr Speaker: I am going to allow one last supplementary, then we are going to move on to the next Question because we have been over 50 minutes with a couple of Questions.

2200 Hon. D A Feetham: He is not, Mr Speaker, the judge of public opinion. Public opinion will be determined next year in the general election.

2205 But when he talks about gaffs – and I do not accept that that is so; I knew exactly what had happened post the termination of the contract in relation to the original contractor – when he talks about gaffs, well perhaps he ought to consider the gaff on GBC about people being able... should be allowed to vote at 16 because they can die for their country, when that is patently not the case and he had not done his research.

Mr Speaker: That has got nothing to do with it. It is totally irrelevant. You are now debating. You are now scoring debating points on some other issue. Please come back to earth and deal with – 2210 Hon. D A Feetham: My last supplementary, Mr Speaker.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker –

Hon. D A Feetham: I am on my feet, Mr Speaker.

2215 Hon. Chief Minister: If I may just be –

Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am on my feet.

2220 Hon. Chief Minister: If I may just intervene.

Hon. D A Feetham: I have not started my question.

Hon. Chief Minister: Will you give way?

2225 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I will not give way, because he never gives way. Well look, I will give way to him, despite the fact that he never gives way to me – but I will give way to him.

2230 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I made the mistake on television when I used that example. It has become patently obvious I was wrong about that example. When you make mistakes, you admit it. But it is not what is driving my policy. Sixteen-year-olds can vote to break up the United Kingdom and to take us out of the European Union, and I think that is the more pertinent point.

But look, if you make a mistake... I am the first one who says I am not perfect. It is a pity he thinks he is.

2235 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not think that I am perfect; I just have not made a mistake. (Interjections and laughter) I was perfectly aware that GJBS had been taking over the mess of OHL, but the decision of the Government three years later to effectively award it to GJBS appears to us to be a different decision.

2240 What does – and it arises out of an answer that he has given to the last Question that I asked – what does this Question, Mr Speaker... Does the hon. Gentleman want me to give way? Because he is talking, does he want me.

Hon. Chief Minister: No, no. I am capable to do two things at once. [Inaudible].

2245 Hon. D A Feetham: How does the Hon. the Chief Minister defend Gibraltar, take a position that does not cost any money to Gibraltar, by allocating the tender to GJBS, or not allocating the tender to GJBS, or essentially saying that the tender should not have been allocated to GJBS?

2250 The reality, the substance, as I understand it, of the case in relation to the OHL case, the original contractors in relation to the Airport, was whether they were entitled to ask for more money to effectively complete the contract – whether they were entitled to walk away, presumably, from the contract. But those are extraneous to GJBS and extraneous to any of these exchanges that we are having here.

I am the first – as I have done publicly – to actually congratulate the Government for concluding the case, which no doubt we would have brought also to a conclusion had we been in Government. There is no issue between us in relation to that.

2255 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, everything that we do right, they would also have done; everything we do wrong, they would never have fallen into the trap of doing. Well, that is the pleasure perhaps of being in Opposition: there is no responsibility for anything.

Mr Speaker, I just do not understand the question he has formulated now. It is just absolutely without head or tail.

2260 There has not been a tender. The tender was originally the one that created the award to OHL. At the end of the OHL tender, there is an allocation. There is only one allocation here: it is a GSD Government allocation to GJBS. Therefore, the question can the Government explain why... No, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentlemen is saying to fill the tunnel. He is completely wrong. The GJBS allocation from the GSD Government was to complete the tunnel works. At one stage, when we paused the works, I gave the instruction to fill the tunnel works because of airfield security. He has got that wrong as well.

2265 The allocation by the GSD Government was to complete the tunnel works. We paused on that and prequalified others to leave open the door to ourselves to go to another European tender. We decided not to, and therefore we allowed GJBS to continue. It is that simple, but he has again demonstrated he does not know what he is talking about when he has said that the GSD's allocation of the work to GJBS was for them to fill in the tunnel. That is completely wrong. That came almost a year later, under my administration for airfield security purposes.

2270 Mr Speaker, he just needs to take advice for once in his life. It is about a tunnel that we are talking. Well, in this case, he needs to stop digging, and leave it to GJBS – they will do a damn better job.

Q624/2014

Ad hoc talks –

Separate voice, vote and veto for GOG representatives

2275 Mr Speaker: Question 624.

Clerk: Question 624, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2280 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please confirm that at any ad hoc talks, whether at a technical level or otherwise, representatives of the Government of Gibraltar will have a separate voice, vote and veto over any decision taken?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

2285 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, there will be a separate voice, but there will be no votes or anything to veto, as everything will be ad referenda to respective Governments. If anything is to require a vote, our technical people would have one; but there will not be anything to vote on. There will be no need for any veto for the same reason, but all parties will of course have one.

2290 These are technical talks, not political talks. They will be akin to the technical-level discussions under the Trilateral, where officials met to try and prepare issues for the political-level talks. The work, if it can begin, will be to try to achieve consensus on matters which are, by their very nature, technical.

As we have repeatedly stated, and as the United Kingdom itself confirmed in New York last week before the 4th Committee of the United Nations, we remain firmly committed to the Trilateral Forum for Dialogue. These ad hoc talks would therefore be running parallel to that political forum when re-established.

2295 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Chief Minister accept that the technical detail is often as important as the substance and that great care must be taken that no adverse concession is made on 2300 any technical detail in talks, and that therefore it is important that nothing can be agreed on technical details without the Government of Gibraltar technical team's consent? Therefore, is it the case – my understanding of the answer that he has given – that the Government's technical team will have an effective right of veto over anything that is agreed at those technical talks.?

2305 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, these are not talks to which anybody is going with the power to agree anything for Gibraltar. These are talks – in other words, exchanges of views ad referendum to the Government and to the respective governments and authorities, and the respective governments and authorities will then take views as to things which might potentially be agreed. If one party does not want to agree them, then there will be no agreement. This is what I am trying to convey to him.

2310 Although the language of 'voice, vote and veto' is attractive – the three 'v's – it is not relevant, because we are only talking about issues that might result in a potential agreement. If the technicians talk about it, they are none of them empowered to make any concession on absolutely anything. They come back to the Government and the Government might take the view that there might be a potential for an agreement to be done on a particular technical issue, not a political issue.

2315 So there is absolutely no question of anybody having to fear anything being put past Gibraltar, because we will have more than a veto and more than a vote. In other words, if we do not agree to something, it does not progress, and the same is true for all the other parties that are present. So this is only – as I have told him before – a process that might be able to reach an agreement on something very technical by consensus. There is no question of anybody being able to do anything in those talks or make any concession in those talks, unless they had come back to the Government and the Government were prepared to do so.

2320 This is not a Government that has been known for wanting to make concessions. I know that I have often been criticised for that, but we are going to continue to steer the course that we steer.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, thank you very much for that, Mr Speaker.

2325 So, effectively, no agreements are going to be reached on anything in relation to these technical talks, and therefore what we are talking about is, just by way of example, perhaps the provision of some suggested framework for some further talks, or the provision of a framework about matters on which further talks are going to take place. Ultimately, it is the decision of the political governments as to whether something is done in that particular way, or if something is going to be discussed; but there are going to be no agreements on anything in relation to those technical talks.

2330 Hon. Chief Minister: I really cannot decipher what he has said, Mr Speaker. I prefer the way that I have expressed it and I will lie on that explanation. It is in Hansard and the hon. Gentleman can refer to it again, if he wishes.

2335 I think I have been extraordinarily clear in setting out that there is no opportunity for anybody who is going to attend such talks, if they occur, to make any concession, because the people who attend will not be empowered to make concessions. All they will be able to do is to understand technical issues put to them and refer those issues back to the Government, so that if it is possible at a technical level to agree something – and we are talking about very very technical level – then it may be possible to agree them if it does not involve any concession by any party.

2340 We are not in the business of making any concessions; we are not in the business of giving anybody else vetoes over us. We are in the business of saying, 'Let us re-establish contact, let us do it at a technical level, let us do it so that if there are things that can be in some way unblocked... let us understand the technical issues as the other side see them, let the technicians then bring that back to the Government,' and the Government will be able to make political determinations of those technical issues as appropriate.

2345 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, who sets the agenda for the technical talks? Does the Chief Minister envisage that, effectively, on the Gibraltar side, there will be a number of issues the Gibraltar side will want to discuss, and then on the Spanish side there might be further issues, and then it is for the technicians to talk about the technicalities of those talks and then refer it back to the political Government? Is that how it is going to work? I would presume that there would be some kind of agreed agenda from the Governments, before we have these particular talks, as to the areas on which the technical people will be talking about.

2350 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, those issues will have to be agreed between the three Governments, again by consensus. The issues that the technicians will be able to consider will be those that by consensus, and therefore each of us with a veto, the three parties might be able to agree.

2355 Hon. D A Feetham: And are there any particular areas that the Hon. the Chief Minister... and perhaps he might not want to discuss this across the floor, but if I ask him in private for a briefing in relation to what areas are the ones that, from the Gibraltar side, they would wish to effectively bring to the table of these technical talks, will he provide me with that information?

2360 Are we essentially talking about this, and it all boils down to this: we are talking about very low-level talks in order to attempt to build bridges that might lead to further more substantive talks in the future, and that is really in essence what we are talking about?

2365 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I have given the description that I have given on what the talks are for and about, and I have said before in the United Nations that I hope that they will serve as a catalyst to restart dialogue, so I am grateful that the indication is that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has actually read my speech. He might even have watched it live, as GBC were able to organise that for the first time – something for which I am sure the community is grateful.

2370 Mr Speaker, if he can bear to be in the presence of somebody who he has said is a suspected criminal for long enough for me to give him the information, I am quite happy to do so.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, he keeps on saying that I have said that he is a suspected criminal. I have not said anything of the sort, but of course he knows the point that I am making about the report and he can act openly and transparently by directing the Chief Secretary to disclose that report.

2375 So therefore, if my secretary phones No. 6 Convent Place to arrange for an appropriate time at which I can be briefed by the Hon. the Chief Minister in relation to the areas that the Government want to bring to the table in relation to these technical talks, that he is prepared to sit down with me in order to provide me with a briefing in relation to these technical talks?

2380 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, again he has been very clear in suggesting that it is for Chief Ministers to direct Chief Secretaries, so I think now it is becoming increasingly transparent that that is the sort of Chief Minister he would be: he would be constantly directing the Chief Secretary to do things. Bang would go, once again, the independence of the Civil Service, should he ever be elected. Well, at least he is being honest about that issue.

2385 Mr Speaker, if the marvellous Liana – whom I remember well from the time that I used to be active in practice at Hassans – were to call my office, she will of course be treated with the utmost of courtesy; and if what she asks for is an appointment for the hon. Gentleman, then there will be one provided.

2390 I have been the Chief Minister who I think has shared across the floor of the House, but sometimes in camera, the most information. He knows that I have proposed the establishment of the Chief Minister's Consultative Council, which is going to soon produce the legislation for this House to consider, and ahead of that, on Privy Council terms, I am prepared to brief him, as I have before, on these issues.

But he just seems to want to make noise and be heard to utter the words 'ad hoc' and to give us his wisdom on the subject. I guess that is why he put a Question and did not simply call me already, before putting the Question, to ask me exactly the same things in camera on the basis that he has now.

Q507/2014

Care Agency – Posts filled in an acting capacity

2395 Clerk: We now go to Question 507. The Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what posts in the Care Agency are being currently filled in an acting capacity and since when that has been so?

2400 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly

Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 508 to 511.

Q508/2014
Care Agency –
Employment contracts of less than one year

2405 Clerk: Question 508, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state how many employees working in positions within the Care Agency are doing so on contracts of less than a year, providing a breakdown by reference to position; nationality, separating British Gibraltarians and others; length of current contract and total length of time that individual has been working in a position within the Care Agency if he or she has entered into more than one contract?

Q509/2014
Care Agency –
Employment by a third party

Clerk: Question 509, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2415 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state how many employees working in positions within the Care Agency are employed by a third party corporation such as recruitment consultants, providing a breakdown by reference to position, nationality, length of current contract and length of time that individual has been working in or occupying a position within the Care Agency?

Q510/2014
Care Agency –
Stress-related sick leave

Clerk: Question 510, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2420 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many employees of the Care Agency are currently on sick leave for anxiety and stress-related conditions, together with a breakdown of how long those individuals have been on sick leave?

Q511/2014
Care Agency –
Suspensions from employment

Clerk: Question 511, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2425 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government state how many people are currently suspended from employment in the Care Agency, identifying each department and the date each person was suspended?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

2430 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, on Question 507, the posts within the Care Agency currently being filled on an acting capacity are as follows: Senior Care Worker, since June 2011; Nursing Co-ordinator, since June 2012; Deputy Nursing Co-ordinator, since June 2012; Team Leader, July 2012; Senior Care Worker, July 2012; Unit Manager, October 2012; Manager, 2012; Senior Care Worker, February 2013; Team Leader, August 2013; Senior Care Worker, August 2013; Team Leader, October 2013; Senior Care Worker, February 2014; Manager, May 2014.

2435 In relation to Question 508, the Care Agency employees working on contracts of less than a year are 92. Of these, 39 are British Gibraltarian and 53 are others. In relation to the length of the current contract, there are 90 of 11 months, one of six months, and one of one month. The total length of time that that individual 2440 has been placed in a position within the Care Agency, if he or she entered into one or more contracts, are as follows: under one year, 2; between one and two years, 31; between two and three years, 7; between three and four years, 13.

2445 For Question 509, 33 Care Agency positions are currently being filled by employees of a third party. This comprises 10 care workers, eight nursing assistants, one handyman/driver, seven nurses and seven admin. They are not employees of the Care Agency, and as such there is no contract between the Care Agency and these individuals. The Care Agency engages a third party to provide cover for a post, and it may be that that post is covered by different individuals.

2450 For Question 510, the figure is so low, Mr Speaker, that to disclose more specific details of those with this particular illness would make these individuals easily identifiable. A person's medical information is confidential, and as such I am not prepared to make public statements on the medical condition of Care Agency employees.

For Question 511, there are currently four people suspended within Social Services, with the following suspension dates: one since May 2014, one since August 2014, and two since September 2014.

2455 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, may the hon. Lady assist me with the number for Question 509, which I did not quite pick up from her answer?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the number is 33.

2460 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the answer to Question 508 and also 509 include people that are working within Mount Alvernia, the Jewish Home and the John Mackintosh Wing of the Hospital?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the Question relates to Care Agency posts and the answer that I have given is in relation to Care Agency posts as they are provided for in the Estimates Book. So, if...

2465 Yes, Mount Alvernia, you said, and John Mackintosh Wing in relation to the Jewish Home, which is relocated to John Mackintosh Wing – and what was the third one that you said, sorry? (Interjections) The Jewish Home has been relocated to John Mackintosh Wing while it undergoes refurbishment, and Mount Alvernia, because these are Care Agency posts because they appear in the Care Agency section of the Estimates Book.

2470 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that includes also Question 509, which is the Question relating to the recruitment consultants. The 33 people you are taking into account in answer to Question 509, people on short-term contracts via a recruitment consultant... that answer also takes into account the people working in Mount Alvernia, the Jewish Home and also the John Mackintosh Wing of the Hospital.

2475 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, my response initially was actually in relation to Question 509, because if you recall my answer, it very clearly says 33 Care Agency positions. A position of the Care Agency is that as reflected in the complement in the Estimates Book, and as I said, there is no distinction. The Jewish Home does not exist at present in its current location; it has been transferred to the John Mackintosh Wing.

2485 Hon. D A Feetham: Just so that I am absolutely clear... It is not my area of responsibility – it is the hon. Lady, Isobel Ellul-Hammond – although obviously I have an understanding of it, having been in Government, but not to the detail that some others may have had. But, Mr Speaker, when we talk about the Care Agency, is there anybody else who might be employed – and I will ask the question later on; I will give notice some other time – who might come within Questions 508 and 509, who may be within her responsibility overall for her Departments and who is not, strictly speaking, Care Agency but maybe somebody else, so that this answer may not be complete because it has not been asked in the comprehensive way that it might be asked? Or is, effectively, the answer, as far as employees for whom she is responsible, a comprehensive answer in relation to those employees?

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: I do not know, Mr Speaker. I find the Questions very clear and I think that the answers are very clear.

2495 In respect of Question 508, it is in relation to people who are employed by the Care Agency; so people on Care Agency contracts are people in Care Agency posts employed by the Care Agency, and those are the figures relating to those people. And for Question 509, it relates to Care Agency posts. That is the Question that is asked and that is the answer that has been provided.

I think that my answers have been very clear.

2500 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, we have 33 individuals who have been effectively placed within the Care Agency, wherever it is within the Care Agency, via a recruitment consultant, and there has been quite a lot of discontent amongst individuals who find themselves in that situation. Because of course what we are being told is that effectively what happens here is that the Government, or the Care Agency in this case, is paying the recruitment consultant £x amount and the recruitment consultant is then paying the employee the minimum wage – or something just above the minimum wage, but is making a substantial profit in relation to those employees – and that there are people who are working in these areas on very low wages and with little security of tenure. It is effectively a way in which no doubt one can keep people in employment and keep the unemployment figures down, but it is highly artificial because it really provides no long-term security for those employees.

I wonder what the hon. Lady has to say about that and what comfort the hon. Lady can provide to those individuals who obviously feel that they are being exploited in some way in being placed in this particular way.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that I understand... Well, I understand where the hon. Gentleman is trying to get, but unfortunately he is not going to get there, because the regime that we have with third-party recruitment agencies who supply labour to cover posts for the Care Agency temporarily is no different to the engagement of people by subcontractors which the Care Agency used in the past – for example, to provide domiciliary care. In fact, it is actually better, because we have negotiated the hourly rate which we pay to the subcontractors and it has been reduced significantly; so if the profit margin is what concerns him, then I can reassure him that it has actually gone down, and thankfully the minimum wage has been increased in the last three Budgets, so people's salary automatically has been increased in line with that – and we make sure of that, Mr Speaker.

So, if he is now concerned with that, then it is a shame that the Care Agency was not concerned with that when the same regime applied for domiciliary care which these Care Agency subcontracts in the same way.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, my concern actually is that, whilst there has always been an element of recruitment from recruitment consultants in the past, the present administration is really taking this much further than was the case when we were in Government, and there unfortunately is a situation where people are being effectively employed on short-term contracts, on very low wages with minimum job security. What it does is effectively keep people from the unemployment list, but it also allows the Government to have people employed within the public sector without increasing the complement within the public sector.

Can the hon. Lady at least confirm that none of these 33 are effectively occupying a vacancy, a post that is vacant, and what they are really doing is – which appears to be the answer she gave me – is filling in for somebody else or filling in on a temporary basis, rather than filling a job on a long-term basis, which would be quite unfair, quite inequitable, to have people on one-month contracts, basically renewed and renewed and renewed.

Some of them have been there for quite a number of months already and obviously feel very aggrieved about the situation – that they are being forced to sign one-month contracts and being kept, effectively, in post without that post being advertised.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: No, Mr Speaker. He seems to misunderstand. First of all, we do not use... When I refer to these third parties, they are not recruitment agencies; they are employers themselves, and the people who are deployed to the Care Agency are employees in their own right. It is just that they are not employees of the Care Agency; they are employees of the third-party provider.

What the Care Agency does is, in the event that we need short-term cover, we recruit from employees from these third-party providers, as opposed to having a bank. So, for example, if we were to have a sickness... say a short-term sickness or a long-term sickness, or a maternity-leave cover – a post for which we need cover – then we get it from this bank, as opposed to issuing someone with a short-term contract from the Care Agency. This is how these Care Agency posts are being covered.

To say that these people have short-term contracts is disingenuous, or to imply that the Government is somehow providing these people with lack of security is very misleading, Mr Speaker, because the Care Agency can use one of the agencies that it uses to place employees within the Care Agency, who one day can cover a sickness absence in Mount Alvernia and when the person returns from sick leave, then that employee, who is the employee of the third party, can then be deployed elsewhere – say, for example, in the community to provide domiciliary care. So it is completely misleading, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I will just read you, so that the hon. Lady understands – and this is not something that I am again inventing – that there are serious concerns in relation to some of these 33. I will just read her something that was sent to me. It is a communication that was sent to me by somebody who is in this situation, and it says this:

‘Many other employees and I have a huge grievance. I am working in a particular area...’ –

– I am not going to tell you where –

‘at the Care Agency. I am contacting you because in order to apply to the Care Agency you have to go through a recruitment agency, S&K Recruitment. They only give one-month contracts, which are renewed or not on a monthly basis. Most are also on a minimum wage, when the Care Agency pays S&K at a heightened rate. We have no employee rights and no job security, even though we work in the Care Agency.’

And it goes on.

That is the concern that has been expressed to me, not only in a communication that I received yesterday, but indeed before that I had seen a number of people who came to see me, expressing the grievance of this use of a recruitment agency being abused.

2565 I want to explore with the hon. Lady what Government policy is in relation to this. At least will the hon. Lady look at this and ensure that people’s positions are not abused and this does not become habitual – that you have people on one-month contracts renewed and renewed and renewed, working in these positions, so that effectively what you have is a source of cheap labour with absolutely no job security at all?

2570 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, unfortunately, the hon. Gentleman still does not appear to understand. These people are not employees of the Care Agency and the contracts are not issued by the Care Agency.

2575 Hon. D A Feetham: I understand that.

Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Then he will understand that the contracts are issued by the third-party provider that we use to refer a workforce to the Care Agency to cover short-term posts, Mr Speaker.

2580 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, surely the hon. Lady cannot absolve herself of any responsibility, simply because she says, ‘These are not employees of us; they are employees of S&K or any other recruitment consultants, who then effectively subcontract the labour, place the labour within the Care Agency,’ – because she is the main employer. All it is is a chain. The Care Agency asks the recruitment consultant, ‘Do you have people?’ and the recruitment consultant places.

2585 If this is being abused, what she cannot do, in my respectful view, is, effectively, to just simply wash her hands by saying it is S&K’s problem, it is not the Government. They are working within the Care Agency and the Government is paying S&K for those services, and S&K, or anybody else for that matter – I do not want to focus on S&K; it is just the example that was provided – are then placing those people with the Care Agency.

2590 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, I do not know how to explain this, because it appears that the hon. Member continues to miss the point.

2595 These are not posts that are being filled by Agency employees on an indefinite basis; these are posts that are being filled on a temporary basis. Because it is on a short-term basis that we require cover, then it is a matter for the employer, the third party, to issue whatever contracts the employer deems fit for those employees.

2600 Mr Speaker, for these posts it is only because we require people to cover for a short period of time. It may be that that employer may, when... If say, for example, someone is covering a maternity leave and the Care Agency member of staff returns, then the Care Agency would no longer require the temp cover. Then that temp may be sent by that employer to another organisation. This is what it is, Mr Speaker. These are temps. It is not people who are employed by the Care Agency and it is not the Care Agency that is abusing or undermining anybody. On the contrary, it is people who now have the opportunity to have employment.

2605 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does she not recognise that actually it is she who is missing the point in relation to this?

The posts that are being filled, temporary or otherwise, temporary maternity... Let’s focus on maternity because it is an example that people will understand. It is a Care Agency position that is vacant because somebody is on maternity leave. The Government, the Care Agency in this particular case, then goes to a recruitment consultant and says, ‘Do you have somebody to fill this particular post?’ and the recruitment consultant then places someone in that particular post.

2610 But surely it must be a matter of concern to the hon. Lady and to the Care Agency if effectively what is happening is that there is a huge disparity between (1) what the Government is paying that recruitment consultant and (2) what the recruitment consultant is paying the worker who is going to be placed; and also that any disparity that there may be between what the Government would actually pay for somebody to do 2615 that particular job, had the Government been recruiting that person on a temporary basis directly, and what that person is being paid, unfortunately, via the recruitment consultant.

Those are concerns that have been expressed to me, and all I want is an answer that at least indicates and allows me to go back to those people who have expressed these concerns and say to them, 'Yes, the Government is now aware of this, the Government is looking into it, and if there is an abuse of this,' – you are clearly of the view there is abuse – 'it will be dealt with.' That is all.

2620

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, given the concern the hon. Member has, I assume that, as appears to be the case in other areas, as with tunnels, he is not aware of things that were going on when he was in Government. Otherwise, he would have known that the disparity when he was in Government was that the workers were getting £5.40 – five pounds forty – and the Care Agency was being charged £14.30.

I can assure the hon. Member that that disparity has now been cut in half, and that now, of course, instead of £5.40, they are on £6.50, and that in fact the use of relief cover was an invention of the previous Government, which was predominantly being used in the Health Authority, where it got to the stage that so many jobs were being covered under the label of 'relief cover' that it got to £2½ million a year. The then

Chief Minister realised that the workforce of the Health Authority was being expanded under his nose, without his knowing it, under the cover of the relief cover, to the extent that he took it away from them three or four Budgets ago and decided he would control it directly – not in order to improve the role of the workers, but in order to stop the system being used to not simply replace existing people in the complement but to have a much larger complement.

2635

The only innovation that has taken place is because in principle the concept of the relief cover existed in some places and not in others. In the places where it did not exist there was another kind of grievance, which was that if people were working in a place and somebody was on maternity leave and somebody was sick and somebody was absent, the people left behind were not given any support and therefore they had to cope with the workload irrespective of how shorthanded they were. So the expansion that there has been –

2640 and there has been expansion – has been, in effect, to create, as the hon. Member will know, a token vote in every single head of expenditure of £1,000 where the head of department feels that the workload in a particular area cannot be simply handled. Because if somebody misses one day and is on USL then there is no need to bring somebody in, but if it is going to be longer and the people there feel that the service will suffer or the people will be having difficulty in coping, then it is at the discretion of the management as to how many people they bring in.

2645

The entity that has been mentioned as an example is the entity that was there, already doing it, in 2011. It is not a new entity. There are three or four companies that have been supplying Government with this, but this one has been the one that has been used mostly in the past and is being used mostly now. The differential, if anything, is less than it used to be, and the reason for doing it was that there was a logic to the introduction of that many years ago. We have accepted the logic of the previous Government and made it apply to all heads of department in all the votes, instead of in just one or two. That has been the change.

2650

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that in blaming the previous Government for the current state of affairs he forgot one fact that he normally throws in my direction, and that is Luis Montiel. I did not hear him mention Luis Montiel in the answer that he has given me, and I want to congratulate the Hon. the Father of the House for not mentioning and for resisting the temptation of mentioning the former Minister for Employment.

I am interested in alleviating the concerns of these individuals. Therefore, what I do then is go back to these individuals and say that the Government does not believe that there is a proper grievance that they may have in relation to the current state of affairs. That is what his long answer really amounts to.

2660

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I have not mentioned Luis Montiel because it was not his idea, as far as I can tell; but I hope before the day is over we will have an opportunity of mentioning Luis Montiel!

(Laughter)

On this occasion, I do not know why he needs to be the intermediary here, to go between us and the people concerned.

It is not something new. It is something that has been going on for a very long time. To the extent that there is more of it, there is more of it because it is an opportunity that is being given, which in the context in which I have explained it is that in the places where it did not exist before it was not that they were being employed on better conditions, it is that they were not being employed at all. That is to say the people who did not have relief cover did not employ anybody. So, if you take the relief cover away, it does not mean that most people will be able to get a job; it means they will not have a job. That was the case before, and that is the difference between before.

2675 Before, predominantly most of the relief cover, which as I have said ran to over £2 million, was in the Health Authority and got very big there, and therefore it really... When we came in, there was still some of that left there and there were people who had been there permanently for years, but the Department had never got the political or the Treasury support to increase the complement. So, in effect, if the complement said there were x posts, there were x posts on paper, in the estimates that we were voting in this House, and then there were perhaps another 10% over the x which were being shown as relief cover, when in fact they 2680 were not relieving anybody – they were actually jobs being occupied by supply workers under the previous administration: a decision taken by the management in order to get past the filter of the limit that they could spend on personal emoluments and the limit they had on money.

2685 That was happening then, but of course the people who were there understood that in fact if the Department had been working to the complement that had been voted, it was not that they would have been able to get a job, because a job did not exist. So the reality of it is that if tomorrow there is a reason for increasing the number of jobs, then when those jobs come out, the people who have been doing relief cover will probably have a better opportunity, because they will have some experience and that may stand them in good stead. But at the end of the day, if the relief cover is stopped it just means that they will be without work. It may not be an ideal job, but certainly it is a job that, as far as I am concerned, is better than being 2690 on the dole and on my list with me trying to find them work.

Mr Speaker: I think we have dealt with this question of the recruitment consultants at very, very great length and we are going to move on to the next Question.

Q512/2014
Question unallocated

Clerk: Question 512 is unallocated.

Q513/2014
Dr Giraldi Home –
Tribunal of inquiry into allegations of abuse –
Publication of report

2695 Clerk: We move now to Question 513, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please confirm whether the report from the tribunal of inquiry into the allegations of abuse at the Dr Giraldi Home will be made public?

2700 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Yes, Mr Speaker.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT AND HEALTH & SAFETY

Q545/2014
Department of Employment –
Requests for vacancies

2705 Clerk: We now move to the Questions to be answered by the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment, Health and Safety.

We start at Question 545. The Hon. D J Bossino. (Interjections)

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, asking Questions of the Hon. the Minister for Employment, I will try to be as short and crisp as possible in my Questions –

2710

Mr Speaker: And I will enjoin upon the Hon. Minister to also make his answers as short as possible in the interests of good procedure. (Laughter and interjection)

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am sure he will.

2715 It was Question 545. (A Member: Yes.)

Can the Minister for Employment confirm that requests for vacancies are not being rejected by his Department on the basis that the person who is requesting them is already in employment?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

2720

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes.

Is that short and crisp enough?

Mr Speaker: Yes. You have omitted, Mr Speaker. (Laughter)

2725

Hon. D J Bossino: Just a short supplementary. The reason why I raise this and I know that is his position. I asked it in a different way, some time ago, as to whether it was Government policy. He said no, and in fact he referred me to statistics which showed that people in employment were getting employment.

2730 The reason why I raise this is that I would ask the Hon. the Minister to check with his members of staff, because the information I am getting continues to be – and that is why I asked the Question in the first place – that people are attending, currently in employment, and saying, ‘Look, I want to see if there is anything else available to me.’ I am sure, because of the answers he has given me in the past, that he would be surprised if members of staff in his Department were telling him, ‘No, you are in employment, I will not show you the vacancies.’ But I need to tell him across the floor of the House that that is the information. It may be erroneous, but I trust that the information that is reaching me is correct and is what continues to happen.

Maybe it is an administrative issue which needs to be dealt with; but, rephrasing the Question, could I ask the Hon. the Minister to perhaps check the position that his policy is actually being carried out on the ground?

2740

Hon. J J Bossano: I think the issue is that what the Department will not do is send people who are employed to vacancies as a submission of the Department, because that is not done by any unemployment service anywhere in the world. Otherwise, it would mean there are 20,000 people working in Gibraltar, and if a vacancy comes out it is not just the four or five hundred people without work that we would send to those vacancies, but the whole of the 20,000.

2745

The rate of jobs taken up by people from the unemployment list is still under 20%. At one stage it was as low as 10%. I have not been able to even double it to 20%. So it is still the case that for 80% of the vacancies that reach us, we send people, somebody is selected, but not the person we have submitted, and that is in eight out of every 10 jobs. So I do not see how people can claim that they are being deprived of the 20% that the unemployed get.

2750

But it is certainly true that the people who can go there, see the vacancy, find out about it and do it under their own steam generally have a better chance. The reality of it is that when an employer is looking at applicants who are already working, they tend to see them as prospective better candidates than somebody who says, ‘I haven’t worked for the last five years.’ So a person who has been unemployed a long time starts at a disadvantage.

2755

Clearly, the people in the Employment Service try to persuade the employer to take on the unemployed, because that is what we have got the Unemployment Service for, but they do not do it by discriminating against the others. It is just that they will not send somebody who is working to vacancies. The information on the vacancy is available – and I will go back and check again, but I am told that when people say, ‘Well, look, I want to be sent by the Employment Service,’ the answer is, ‘No, we cannot send you.’

2760

Q546/2014

Employment and Training Board – Management structure

Clerk: Question 546, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide details of the management structure of the ETB, to include details of the roles of each of the senior positions within the ETB?

2765 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 547 and 556.

2770

Q547/2014
Labour inspectors –
Details

Clerk: Question 547, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2775 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide the names of the current labour inspectors, together with details of their positions within the Civil Service, GDC or wholly owned Government company they are employed by, as the case may be?

Q556/2014
Joanna Hernandez –
Details of post occupied and responsibilities

Clerk: Question 556, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2780 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what post within the public service does Ms Joanna Hernandez occupy and what are her responsibilities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

2785 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano):
Mr Speaker, the structure of the management of the Ministry for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety is as shown in the approved Estimates of Expenditure. The roles of the persons employed are in accordance with the duties of their grade, or that of a lower grade, depending on the workload and the availability of staff at any given time.

2790 The staff in the Department are moved around so that they are able to cover each other's role as and when required. Those currently employed in the Department, I am happy to say, accept this degree of flexibility in their roles – so as to maximise the support they give to their client base, which consists of the registered unemployed, and the assistance they provide to employers who recruit through the Employment Service – as far as the employment function of the Department is concerned.

2795 The civil servant named by the Leader of the Opposition occupies a management post within the structure of the Department as Head of the Investment Unit, and her responsibilities consist of the supervision of the staff of the unit and providing support to the business activities and other duties that she and her staff may be asked to perform in the context of the flexibility that exists in the Department.

2800 The labour inspectors comprise one HEO; two GDC Grade IVs, which are HEO equivalents; and one GDC Grade III, which is an EO equivalent.

2805 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, in relation to that last answer to Question 547, is he able to confirm that... remember the graduates which he had gazetted as labour inspectors... whether those roles have been terminated now, so that in other words the labour inspectors now, in effect, comprise and are formed of public servants, the ones he has just referred to?

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Thanks for that.

2810 Moving on, in relation to Question 546, when I was talking about the management structure, yes, he is absolutely right that the lists of SOs and SEOs etc are set out in head 24 of the Estimates of Expenditure. What I was trying to find out, in terms of... He has mentioned that people move around in this Department and they are happy with it. The Question really relates to the top echelon, the management structures. In other words, what I was interested to know... I know the Hon. the Minister for Tourism provided me with a very full and detailed – even with names – structure, or chart, of those who are employed in his 2815 Department. It was very useful to see, literally, in a chart, where they were and what their roles are. That is something that I would... Although he will refuse to provide me with names – we have had this point raised in the House before – is he able to at least provide me with something similar in relation to this 2820 Department? For example, obviously, I could see at the top of the charts the Director of Employment, but then under him there would be the relevant whatever it is – HEOs and SEOs – and what it is that they do. If that is possible?

Hon. J J Bossano: We do not have that kind of authoritarian structure.

A Member: That is the answer!

2825 Hon. D J Bossino: Oh, I see, so it is completely flexible. So the relevant SEO may be in charge, for example, of the Labour Inspectorate one day, and then another day of the Health and Safety issues, and another day inward investments. Is it as flexible as that, and not as authoritarian as the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, according to how Mr Bossano has just suggested he runs his Department?

2830 Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, I did not suggest that he was running it in an authoritarian... I said the structure was, and I am saying that...

He has quoted the wrong examples, clearly, because labour inspectors are appointed by the director and gazetted, and therefore they cannot be substituted; but they can be used for things that are not labour 2835 inspector work, and they are. The Health and Safety Inspectors are people with the necessary training and qualification to do the health inspector work, but they are not allowed not to be doing work if there is no health inspector work to do.

So the answer is that the philosophy of those who work with me, which is shared by all of us, is that we are all equals and therefore we all muck in and do the work that needs to be done. If Dr Coram is doing 2840 some work with the School of Nursing, which also comes under him, and is not available, then somebody else will be doing what he does, and if there is a need to be doing something in another Department... We work on the basis that, although where people are fitted is where the Estimates say they are, they are all interchangeable.

It does not mean that if you are in one area you cannot do anything unless you have got a specialist 2845 knowledge in a specialist area. For example, the people who do the EU programmes cannot be replaced because they are the only ones who understand exactly what the methodology is of meeting the criteria that the EU requires so that we get the money that we get for funding support for the business community and so on throughout the year. So that is more of an isolated unit, but when they need help and they are short of staff we draft people in from other places.

2850 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what does the Investment Unit that he has mentioned actually do?

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it does more than it did before, when he was in Government! (Laughter) That is something also I inherited – so, I did not invent it! (Laughter) 2855 I think what it used to do was simply give out very well produced and colourful leaflets. Now, because it has been moved from where it was – which was down in Europort – to the Employment Service, in effect it is an important element of the integrated approach where, when we are talking to people who may come for advice on, for example, EU support for opening a new business or for expanding an existing business, one of the things that they have to do in order to meet the criteria for EU funding is identify how many jobs 2860 are going to be created and the cost of each of those jobs.

Because we have got Investment, Training and Employment, the philosophy is that when we talk to investors, whether they are internal or external, we talk to them about the level of the investment, we talk about the help we can give them, we talk to them about the possibility that the unit in our Department will be able to get EU funding, and then we talk to them about their labour requirements and the skills that they 2865 may need and the extent to which we are prepared to supply trainees for an agreed period of time in order to get them to take labour from the unemployment list, as opposed to bringing people in.

So the Investment Unit is an integral part of that concept. They are the first people the business people come to. The bulk of the business people are local people who are looking at ways of expanding their business, but when we have people coming from outside it also goes there, and then from there it is 2870 expanded into making them aware of what is available in terms of support both for capital funding and for training purposes.

2875

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, an important role within the Government.

What training was provided to the manager of this particular important unit, to ensure that the person concerned obviously met the requirements to properly manage such an important unit within the Government?

Hon. J J Bossano: To my knowledge, no more training than was supplied in the 15 years previous to the person who was doing it before.

This has always been considered just to be a job in the structure of the Civil Service at that level and at that grade. There is nothing magical about it. It is not that you need to have huge training or huge knowledge to sit down with an employer and find out how many people he thinks he is going to need. The information comes from the employer, not from the person providing the service.

At the end of the day, the unit – which is a small unit, it only consists of four people, but what the unit does effectively is meet the requirements of the employer and put them in touch with the people they need to be in touch with. Rather than give them pamphlets, the unit actually contacts different Departments on their behalf in order to assist them. But the primary reason for being where it is is so that we are at the beginning of that process and with the best opportunity of getting jobs for some of the people we have got on our lists.

2890

So, really, the fundamental thing is that by giving a service to people who want to invest money in terms of people who come here, for example, to do a hotel... They first came to this unit, we looked at what they wanted to do, we helped them with the thing they wanted to do with the planning. That kind of assistance means that at the end of the day they know that when the crunch comes and the hotel is going to start then we expect that that relationship will be reflected in them accepting... what is not an obligation, because I have already told the hon. Member sitting next to him that we lose 80% of the vacancies, but where we have got that kind of relationship, we hope to be able to do better and get the first bite of the cherry to try and get some of our people in.

2895

If we have sufficient advanced notice of potential training needs, what we do now is we have developed, in terms of the relationship between that side and the employment side, a concept that every worker, every person who becomes unemployed and registered, gets an appointment within 24 hours. So everybody who registers today will already have an appointment for tomorrow with somebody who will give them an interview, help them with their CV and explain to them, 'Look, these are the vacancies we have got at the moment and these are the training possibilities that exist as a result of what we know is in the pipeline in terms of potential jobs.'

2900

In spite of that, we still, as I said, have not been able to increase... We have gone from about 10% or 11% to something like 17% or 18% of the jobs being filled from the unemployment list, but it is still not all that high.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, no, I understand that on the recruitment of employees and ensuring that people from the unemployment list are effectively taken on as part of, for example, any deal that the Government wishes to agree with an incoming investor, 'We will scratch your back,' effectively, 'but you have got to make sure that you employ our people.' I understand that has always, to a lesser or greater extent, happened. We can debate about whether it is lesser or greater now, but what concerns me is that this is a unit that has a very wide remit, from the explanation that he has provided, including ensuring that anybody who comes to Gibraltar is properly appraised of the planning laws, of the opportunities that Gibraltar offers on a very, very wide variety of fronts. That presumably was why this particular unit was traditionally with the DTI at Europort before he moved it to his Department.

2915

Therefore, does he not agree that the people running the unit... it is not as simple as just picking a civil servant from a particular Department and placing that civil servant there. That person must either have a level of background knowledge of all these requirements, or alternatively that person needs training, and that is the reason why... what kind of training? But it appears from the answer that effectively this individual running this particular unit has received no training at all – it is just she has been placed there.

Hon. J J Bossano: Neither that individual, nor the rest of the people in the unit, nor the people who have been there before, nor the people who were there before 2011... From my knowledge, the only difference, basically, in terms of what is being provided is that instead of giving leaflets, which is what I inherited when I inherited the unit... although the people who are doing it there are all doing work elsewhere in the Civil Service and the people who are doing the job now are people who have been recruited, but then they move in and out, on promotions and stuff like that.

2930

The work is administrative work, because it does not mean that we explain to them the Income Tax Act or the high net worth individual... What we do in the unit is, instead of having somebody running around from pillar to post, trying to find things out, we actually do the donkey work for them and we put them in touch with the right people in the right places, and that is an essential part of the function.

2940 The bulk of the function is then with the training and the provision of labour. This is why it is really an ancillary thing to help us be more effective in increasing employment from our perspective. The people who want to invest already know what they want. They just need to be guided, so that they do not waste time going to the wrong place for the wrong information, and that guidance is provided because that feedback of information comes into the unit from the rest of the machinery of the Government.

2945 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, do any of the individuals in this unit, or does the unit itself also deal with the question of who gets a contract in the construction industry, really mainly because we are talking about small construction contracts, allocated by direct allocation – I am not talking about those that go out to tender; by direct allocation – and then also ensure that those companies that are awarded these contracts on direct allocation also take on board a sufficient number of either unemployed or alternatively trainees from the Future Job Strategy? Is that dealt with by any of these individuals too?

2950 Hon. J J Bossano: All the contracts that we handle on the construction side are on the housing stock, and therefore that is work that is transferred to us and goes through the offices in Town Range, where I have got the people who have been relocated from the Housing Work Agency. As I have explained in the past when I have been asked questions about them, they are people who are doing the same kind of work they were doing before. They are people who are either craftsmen themselves, or former craftsmen, in technical grades. What they do, effectively, is... there is a pool of construction companies that are all on the approved contractor list, and we get three quotes from each, and then the quote is... If there is a big discrepancy in prices, normally the lowest quote gets the job; if the prices are all very close to each other, normally the work is given to the person who has got least work, so as to ensure that they do not have to lay people off and that there is continuity of work. That is not the [Inaudible] no.

Q548/2014
Trainee employees –
Details of placements

2960 Clerk: Question 548, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2965 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide details of where the trainees in each of the areas of placements set out in letters he has sent to me dated 14th January, 24th April and 3rd October 2014, have moved to? Were they employed in the private or public sectors; and if in the public sector, which Departments?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

2970 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the letters mentioned by the hon. Member in his Question provide the number of trainee employees at the end of each quarter by area of placement as at the end of December 2013, March 2014 and June 2014.

2975 On those days, they were all employed in the public sector. I have told Parliament on a number of occasions over the last three years that persons are moved across Departments to widen their experience. The information contained in the letters provides a snapshot of where they happened to be at the end of a quarter, which is what the Members opposite said was all they wanted to know when they asked me to provide the letters.

2980 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I have not done the additions, actually, in each of the quarters, so is he telling me that the totals would remain the same – is that the case – and that what we are seeing, in terms of the differences in numbers in each of the areas of activity, is on account of the movements that he has referred to? So, in other words, the totals are... It is a question of getting the calculator out and doing a quick calculation. On the face of it, it seems that the total number seems to have gone down from when he first provided me with the information. If he could assist me in relation to that, to understand fully his answer.

2990 Hon. J J Bossano: Then he is asking me about the people who are not on the letters, but the people who are missing from the letters, right. Well, the people who are missing from the letters are missing from the letters because, in fact, they have terminated their employment with ETCL – and they have terminated it because they have found work.

2995 As he knows, because I have told him before, unless they belong to the category of care and social workers, where they are being trained specifically for a vacancy that exists, the rest have found jobs by applying for other jobs. We do not monitor that, because what happens is they come back and give us a resignation, but we send them to all the vacancies as if they were unemployed – because otherwise the number would never go down and they know that there is no prospect of them being given a job in the system unless... For example, if we have got people who are police cadets... Well, even the police cadets, all that happens is that when they open vacancies now, they will have to apply and go through a selection process. The only thing is that if the Police have had them for two years as cadets, presumably it is very unlikely that they will then decide that they are not suitable, because they would have found them 3000 unsuitable previously and terminated them previously.

Other than those, like the police cadets or the care workers or nurses, or something like that, the rest are people who have found jobs by themselves or because they are given the opportunity to apply...
Notwithstanding that they are in Government Departments, we circulate to them all the vacancies that we think they might be interested in, so that the number comes down. It is coming down slowly, but it is 3005 coming down.

Hon. D J Bossino: Thank you for that.

The Hon. the Minister refers to vacancies: are these vacancies exclusively in the private sector, or is it a mixed bag of private and also public sector?
3010

Hon. J J Bossano: They are predominantly in the private sector, but the vacancies in the public sector they can apply for. For example, some of these people have applied for the Customs. If they get it, or they do not get it, the fact that they are here will make no difference, other than that they can mention that they have been in the scheme, presumably in their CV or in their interview. But when the interviews take place, 3015 clearly, if they are successful they will come back and resign from the scheme.

Hon. D J Bossino: The Hon. Minister has said that he does not monitor this, his Department does not monitor this; but if I ask a specific question in relation to that, it would be information which he would have available to answer as to where they have moved to – is that a possibility?
3020

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, the information that he asked me for was whether the people in the letters...
The people in the letters are the people in my employment. I do not monitor everybody who finds a job in Gibraltar; nor do I see a need to tell Parliament where... just because they happen to have been in this system, the bulk of which we inherited. Remember, this is now the tail-end of the old VTS. Nobody comes 3025 into here anymore, other than in the care... where there is a job.

Frankly, I would have liked to have seen this shrinking faster, but it is determined by the market and I do not influence the market. I cannot influence who gets the job or does not get the job, because it is not in my hands to do so. If I could, I would have been able to put everybody – (Interjection) I would, yes, but I can't!
3030

So the answer is we do not normally monitor it, and frankly I do not see what the issue is in having to go and search where people have gone after they have left us.

Hon. D J Bossino: One of the issues in my mind is that... I know that he had this during the course of question and answer sessions certainly when the Leader of the Opposition had this particular shadow portfolio – that when there was a concern that they would have had... I think one of the points raised... an 3035 advantage in being successful in obtaining jobs within the public sector... I think the hon. Member may recall, because these were, as he rightly pointed out, individuals who had been inherited from our scheme, the VTS scheme, and he had to allocate jobs to those who had not obtained placements in the private sector.

I recall all of that, and I suppose where I am coming from is to establish whether indeed how many have actually been subsumed in the public sector and how many in the private sector. He has indicated, using broad terms, that he thinks that the vast majority have been employed in the private sector, as opposed to the public sector, although some of them, other than those categories he has mentioned – i.e. the RGP and the care and social services – the minority of them would have been employed in the public sector. That is the type of statistical information which would be interesting to have a look at in order to monitor that.
3040

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, he asks how many have been absorbed. If I tell him tomorrow the numbers of unemployed have gone down because they have found employment, he would not use the word 'absorbed' to describe what is happening. Therefore, what I am telling him is they are not being absorbed and they have not got an advantage, because if they had had an advantage then the list would not be this 3045 long. So the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

3055 Regrettably, from my point of view, the advantage has been minuscule or non-existent, because the people who have gone... If he looks at the care and social work, that is the number that changes very little and that is the one area where there is a movement out and a movement in, because in the public sector we supply trainees for vacancies and they go through a training period which enables them to then get employment. So they get taken on as trainees, and during the training period, instead of being funded by the agency, they are funded by this programme, because they are not in the complement. They are being trained to fill vacancies in anticipation of those vacancies coming up.

3060 The rest are the ones that will only go down if people find work. I would say that 99% of the movement in the rest is private sector, and I am lucky if I have got 1% that goes into the public sector. So, in fact, it has not proved an advantage even in the concept of interviewing, because the competition is so huge.

3065 Members will recall that when we came out with the AA vacancy, we had 603 applicants. If you have got a situation now where people have got the prospect of unemployment from Barclays Bank and things like that, they are very qualified, experienced people entering the labour market, where the chance of getting a job depends on how good the competition is. Therefore we try very hard to get them into the private sector, because that is where we have got an opportunity of trying to persuade the employer. We have got a very clear concept that we will not do the same in the public sector: in the public sector they are on their own.

3070 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the reality is that if it had been up to the hon. Gentleman, many more of these individuals would have been 'absorbed' – to use my learned and hon. Friend's word – into the public sector.

3075 Indeed, in relation to the AAs, I detected from answers that he had given me when I asked the question that he would not have set some of the conditions for entry into AA – for example, the exam condition that was set at the time. Those conditions would not have been set if he had had his way, because his view at the time was, 'Well, look, an AA – you don't need to really be passing these exams to do this particular job.' I am right in characterising this in this way, am I? If he had had his way, he would have really liked to have seen more of these people employed in the public service.

3080 Hon. J J Bossano: There is a certain amount of self-interest in this, Mr Speaker. I want these people to be... This is a problem that we want to see finished, as far as I am concerned, and I want these people to have jobs. If I am able to get them into the public sector, having had them on our payroll... In some cases, some of these people have been in the public sector six or seven years; not just the three with us, but four years before that. We were clear that they had to compete, and that the only way that we can help them is by trying to persuade private sector employers to take them on, and it is not all that easy to achieve that.

3085 It is true that I felt that the idea that you would weed out candidates by giving them an exam which... I do not know where they got it from, but it was asking them questions all about the United Kingdom. I did not see what that was going to produce in terms of better-quality AAs, but I am not involved in selecting the people who enter the Civil Service, and therefore this is a matter that I cannot influence. Clearly, I would have wanted to be able to help these people, but it was not something that I could do, and therefore the list is there, still longer than I would have wanted to see it.

Wholly owned Government companies – Details of public sector employee jobs provided

Clerk: Question 549, the Hon. D J Bossino.

3095 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide details of the wholly owned Government companies which provide employee jobs in the public sector; and of the 908 employees set out in table 5.3, which wholly owned Government companies are they employed by?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

3100 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer the Question together with Question 550.

Q550/2014

Wholly owned Government companies –
Full-time employee jobs provided

Clerk: Question 550, the Hon. D J Bossino.

3105 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide details of the wholly owned Government companies which provide full-time employee jobs with how many such jobs are provided by each of those companies, broken down by the activity as set out in table 6.6? Obviously, the tables I am referring to are of the Employment Survey of 2013.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

3110 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I cannot provide a breakdown of the employers reflected in the figures in tables 5.3 and 6.6 of the Employment Survey Report 2013.

3115 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, why? Why can't he provide that information?

Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, because it is a legal requirement of the Employment Survey that the names of the employers who make the returns on the distribution of their workforce cannot be made public. All the survey forms have got that condition of confidentiality.

3120 If he is interested in the information from the source that is available to me – which is not the Employment Survey, because I cannot have access to the raw data of the Statistics Office – I can give him what information I have from employment records, which may not necessarily match exactly the other figure, because I have explained in the past that the discrepancy between the employment records and the Employment Survey is that there are time lags, in that people sometimes have been employing somebody, including the public sector – which I have been very critical of, but it still is not entirely cured – where 3125 people have been employing somebody for months and they do not submit the contract of employment, even though there is a legal requirement to do it and there are heavy fines for not doing it. Of course, if they get the form, they put down in the form that the guy is working for them, but he does not appear in the Employment Service. Alternatively, the guy is no longer there, but they have not sent the termination, so we still have him on our records. I didn't mention Montiel in that context if Members will remember!
3130 (Laughter) So, if the hon. Member wants the information that I have got in the employment records of the Department, then I can tell him what the position is as far as we are concerned.

He has already got the position as far as the training companies are concerned, because he has got another Question on that, where I have got him the numbers each month. So, excluding the training companies, the wholly owned companies that we have got registered are: Europa Incinerator Company, 3135 5 employees; Air Terminal Company, 30 employees; GibiBikes, 4; Gibraltar Bus Company, 57; Gibraltar Car Parks, 31; Gibraltar Cleansing Services, 31; Gibraltar Defence Estates, 57; Gibraltar Facilities Management, 170; Gibraltar General Support Services, 37; Gibraltar Industrial Cleaners, 38; Gibraltar Mechanical and Electrical Services, 63; JBS, 132; and GRPI, 5.

3140 The industrial classification of these companies: 'air transport and related services' is the Air Terminal Company; under 'building and construction' we have Gibraltar Defence Estates, Gibraltar General Support Services, Gibraltar Mechanical and Electrical Services, JBS and the Construction Training Company – which I have not mentioned in the list I have given before because the employee numbers come in another Question; 'insurance and real estate', GRPI; 'legal, accounts and other business services', GRAD; 'road transport', GibiBikes and the Gibraltar Bus Company; 'sanitary services', Europa Incinerator and Gibraltar 3145 Industrial Cleaners; and 'other services' are the Employment Training Company, the Car Parks Company, Gibraltar Cleansing Services and Supported Employment Company Ltd.

The number of employees are the ones that I have already given in Question 549, but I cannot provide a breakdown between full-time and part-time.

Q551/2014

Graduate scheme – Status

Clerk: Question 551, the Hon. D J Bossino.

3150

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment state whether the graduate scheme continues to function?

3155 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Yes, Mr Speaker.

3160 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, is he able to tell the House whether new recruits are being taken on – because I heard that somebody in the private sector – I put it as widely as possible – was told that the Hon. Minister was not taking any new people on in this particular scheme. So his answer may be accurate as to the fact that it is currently still functioning, but is he able to tell me whether any new people are being taken on?

3165 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member has got another Question in the Order Paper on the people coming in and going out of the company.

3170 Hon. D J Bossino: I suspect that all will be cleared up – I think that is a Written Question that I have got – in the answer to the Written Question, but is he able to assist me in providing this answer orally across the floor of the House? I would be very grateful if he did.

Hon. J J Bossano: I am able to do it, but I choose not to. Yes.

Hon. D A Feetham: And he was so cooperative today. (Laughter)

CHIEF MINISTER

Q552/2014

Aggregate public debt– Breakdown of bank debt

3175 Clerk: Question 552, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker. Can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown, by bank and amount, of that part of the aggregate public debt which comprises bank debt, as at 30th September 2014?

3180 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I will answer the Question together with Questions 553 to 555.

Q553/2014

Aggregate public debt– Breakdown of Government debentures

3185 Clerk: Question 553, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide this House with a breakdown, by debenture issue, of that part of the aggregate public debt which comprises Government debentures, as at 30th September 2014?

Q554/2014

Clerk: Question 554, the Hon. D A Feetham.

3190 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide details of the value of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures or other debt security as at 30th September 2014?

Q555/2014
Gibraltar Savings Bank –
Investment of moneys deposited

Clerk: Question 555, the Hon. D A Feetham.

3195 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide a breakdown of where and how all moneys deposited in the Gibraltar Savings Bank have been invested and the rate of return on each of these investments as at 31st March 2014, 30th April 2014, 31st May 2014 and 30th September 2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

3200 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, as at 30th September 2014, the aggregate public debt consisting of bank debt was: Barclays Bank, £150 million; and NatWest Offshore Ltd, £50 million.

Government debentures by maturity date were as follows: 2017 debentures, £67,632,800; one-month notice, £185,290,700.

3205 The value of Gibraltar Savings Bank debentures and other debt security by maturity date was: one month, £26,883,300; 2015 debentures, £44,016,100; 2016, £23,015,600; 2017, £92,599,500; 2018, £164,485,600; 2019 debentures, £72,828,900; other debentures, £8,686,047; bonds, £101,183,467; and deposit accounts, £326,678,747.

3210 The average yield in respect of the different categories of investment vehicles held by the Savings Bank for the months of March 2014, April 2014, and May 2014 was already given in answer to Question 458/2014. The comparable figures for September 2014 are as follows. On-call accounts with the Bank of England, the Crown Agents Bank and the Gibraltar Banks had an average yield of around 0.48%. The Gibraltar Banks were the Royal Bank of Scotland, Barclays Bank, National Westminster, Jyske Bank and Lloyds Bank.

3215 The floating rates notes quoted on the London Stock Exchange had an average yield of 0.99%. The floating rates notes were issued by the following: European Investment Bank, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, Neder Waterschapsbank, KfW, Republic of Finland, Dexia, Volkswagen Financial Services, GE Capital UK, Westpac Securities, Australia & New Zealand Banking Group, ASB Finance Ltd, Royal Bank of Canada, BG Energy Capital plc, Centrica plc, Daimler AG, BMW Finance and BP Capital Markets plc.

3220 Monthly income debentures had a return of 6% and preference shares in Credit Finance had an average dividend of 5.5%. As previously explained in answer to Question 458, quoted stocks and call accounts fluctuate marginally on a daily basis. These fluctuations are not significant.

3225 The Fund Statement listing its investments for the relevant months are as follows – which is what the hon. Member told me the last time he wanted and I had left out. There is a list for the month of March, April, May and September. I will read the one for March, and since there is very little difference between the March one and the other two I will make a concession and pass the other three without reading it. (Laughter)

3230 For March, we had EIB floating rate notes, where there was an investment of £20 million and a market value of £20,093,621.

The EIB floating rate, 2015: another £20 million, with a market value of £20,015,317.

The third EIB floating rate note for 2016: the bank invested £25 million in that, and the current market value in March was £25,024,820.04.

3235 The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development had an investment of £4,235,000 and a market value of £4,239,685.

Dexia Credit: £12 million invested, and a market value of £12,024,215.

Wertmanagement FRN, which are floating rate notes with a maturity date of 2014: we had £10 million in that, and the market value was £10,005,283.

The Caisse Societe FRN, 2014 as well: £10 million, and the price in the market was £10 million.

3240 KfW fixed-rate notes, 2015: £17 million, and that had a market value slightly below – £16,997,800.

Republic of Finland: £5 million nominal value; market value, £5,025,116.

Capital Bonds Government of Gibraltar: £100 million, and had a market value – because it had accumulated interest – of £104,171,270.

3245 We had £22,348,948 in the Bank of England, and the £400 million in Credit Finance shares, of which the Members are aware. The Royal Bank of Scotland call account in Gibraltar had £1,843,702; in Lloyds Bank we had £36,004,493; in the Crown Agents Bank in the UK, £164; in Barclays Bank in Gibraltar, £126,101,321; in NatWest, £32,959,889; and in Jyske Bank, £20 million.

The figures for the other months may show some changes in the amounts as between one institution and another, but there is very little difference between one month and the other.

3250 Mr Speaker, I am asking now for the information to be passed for all four months.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I could continue with my supplementaries whilst this is being sorted out.

There is just one anomaly in relation to the list, that stands out to me. In April 2014, there does not appear to be any reference to the Government debentures of £100 million that appears in... Well, it certainly appears in September 2014, but I thought that the £100 million Government debentures was actually something that had already been taken out prior to the Budget. I do not have my budget figures here, but off the top of my head I am pretty sure that the £100 million of Government debentures issued from the Government to Credit Finance was there at the Budget. Is that his understanding as well? May 3275 there be a mistake in the list in April 2014? I am pretty sure that I mentioned this in my Budget speech and I also made the point in exchanges prior to the Budget, so I do not know why it does not appear in the other two lists – certainly not in April 2014 – but it does appear in September 2014.

3280 Hon. J J Bossano: In the months of March, April and May it appears as Government of Gibraltar capital bonds, as opposed to the debenture. It changed from... the debenture pays –

Hon. D A Feetham: So the nomenclature has changed?

3285 Hon. J J Bossano: Yes. The capital bond pays the interest on the maturity date and the debenture pays the interest on a monthly basis. That is the difference.

Hon. D A Feetham: My hon. Friend, sir, Mr Figueras, is quite impressed with the word ‘nomenclature’, particularly at this time of the evening! (Interjections) Of course, the Leader of the Opposition must remain on his toes at every single moment in time, particularly when he is asking questions of the Father of the House!

3290 Mr Speaker, if I can move on to a related question to the one that I have asked about the Government debentures, in answer to a communique that I issued –

Mr Speaker: We have a problem, and that is that the recording equipment seems to have got... ‘stuck’ is the word.

3295 I was proposing to adjourn to tomorrow morning. Would the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition like to leave this matter to first thing tomorrow morning – unless Mr Bossano cannot be here tomorrow?

Hon. J J Bossano: I was hoping to go to listen to the thing that is going on on self-determination tomorrow morning, which I have got a great interest in.

3300

Hon. D A Feetham: Does the Hon. the Speaker of the House want me to continue?

A Member: A five-minute break.

3305 Hon. D A Feetham: Or a five minute break. I am just confused as to what is the plan of action. Is it a five-minute break?

3310 Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Minister for Employment has now finished with his answer to the Questions. Therefore, it was my intention at this point to adjourn to tomorrow morning – but the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is raising some other matter.

3315 Hon. D A Feetham: No, I am asking him a supplementary on the Question that he has... I am here tomorrow morning, so I do not mind asking the supplementary tomorrow; but of course I want to assist the Hon. the Father of the House because he wants to be at the self-determination symposium. I can either ask the supplementary now, and he can answer it; or alternatively, we can take a five-minute break whilst the technical problems with the recordings are sorted out.

Mr Speaker: Is it a minor hitch...? We will recess for five minutes.

3320 The House adjourned to Friday 17th October at 9:15a.m. on Thursday 16th October 2014 at 8:25p.m.

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

Questions for Oral Answer

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q557/2014

East Side project –

Expressions of interest; decision re final project

Clerk: Answers to Questions continue.

We are now going to proceed with the Deputy Chief Minister's Questions.

Question 557, the Hon. D J Bossino.

5

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister confirm how many expressions of interest there have been in the East Side projects and whether a decision has been made as to which project to proceed with; and if so, can he provide the House with details?

10

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. Seventeen expressions of interest have been received in relation to the East Side projects. They are currently under consideration.

15

Hon. D J Bossino: The obvious supplementary to that is can the Deputy Chief Minister give an indication to the House as to when he thinks he will be in a position to announce who the successful bidder is? Does he have an indication of that now?

20

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not want to give him a fixed timescale, but it is something which we need to do. It will take time, because there are 17 submissions to look at, so I think we are talking about a few months before there is any movement.

Q558/2014

Europa Point –

Update re eco-housing

Clerk: Question 558, the Hon. D A Feetham.

25

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide this House with an update as to the proposal for eco-housing in the Europa Point area which it announced last year?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr. J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. There have been no further developments in relation to this housing project since the concept proposal was announced last year.

30

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, why is it that there has been no development in this housing concept since it was announced last year?

35

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this was originally identified as part of a number of other housing projects in different parts of Gibraltar. At the time, the coach park site was being earmarked for commercial use – I think we were talking to the same developer who had been talking to them when they were in office. When it became apparent that that was not going to go ahead and that we could actually use the coach park site for residential use, then the pressure on these 35 houses really diminished, because first of all there were only 35, and secondly we could use the coach park.

40

The hon. Member will know we announced a similar scheme for North Gorge also at the same time. The North Gorge scheme has now gone out to tender and we are expecting to receive submissions from interested developers, but the reason why this project has been stalled is because we have given priority to the others.

45

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, this particular project that I have been asking about, and the housing project in the coach park area... It is like comparing apples with pears: one was much lower density, eco-friendly; the other ones are effectively the type of housing that has been constructed in the past, both by our Government and indeed by the GSLP Government from 1988 to 1996.

50

Is he saying, in the second answer that he has given me, that this eco-housing concept and the numbers have been subsumed within what is now the North Gorge project, and that therefore the Government is going ahead, effectively, with the concept but in a different site in the North Gorge? Is that the Government policy?

55

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there were two eco-housing projects announced at the same time – I think it was in August 2012 – at the DPC: one was for North Gorge and one was for the site at Europa Point. The one at North Gorge is proceeding – we have announced a tender and we are awaiting interest from developers; but the one I was referring to earlier, when I mentioned the coach park site, was more the number of flats, rather than the type.

60

Hon. D A Feetham: So, effectively, just so that I have this right, in effect what we are talking about is that the Europa Point eco-housing scheme has effectively been abandoned – I make no criticism of the Government in relation to that – and those numbers have not been subsumed within any other project that the Government has in hand.

65

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: No, except that the coach park site, with 400-odd flats, came on the scene when originally it was earmarked for something else, so effectively instead of these 35... we are having the other 400-odd. (Interjection by Hon. D A Feetham) That is true, but... That is the first one.

70

Secondly, it has not been abandoned, Mr Speaker; it has only been stalled. There are other developments happening in Europa Point. There is MOD land which is going to be released, and there is also the University project which is now happening, which was not envisaged at the time. So there have been changes also in the surrounding area, which is why this project is stalled.

75

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that, but... So the Government policy, as I understand it, is to create the same numbers – eco-housing – as it announced at the end of 2012, somewhere else; unless what he is telling me is that part of the buildings that are being constructed in respect of the University are also going to be eco-buildings, which is not something that the Hon. the Minister for Education announced.

I am just trying to get a feel for how many housing units of an eco-type the Government intends to be building – certainly, it is not going to be this term, but intends to be building in the near future.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister: There will be accommodation for the University, but that is a different issue and my colleague is dealing with that.

There are 100 units in North Gorge. That was the original proposal that went to DPC. That is a concept design the developers are now looking at. It may be we end up with more than a hundred, or we end up with less – it depends on what comes back.

EDUCATION, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

Q536/2014

Proceeds of Crime legislation –
Consultation and publication as a Command Paper

Clerk: Question 536, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice say, further to his Budget address in July this year, whether the Proceeds of Crime legislation he alluded to will be the subject of consultation as a Command Paper; and if so, can he tell us when this can be expected to take place?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, a draft of the Bill has been completed and is the subject of a consultation process with the Royal Gibraltar Police and the Attorney General's Chambers. Once the internal consultation has been completed, the draft Bill will be published as a Command Paper.
95

Hon. S M Figueras: The only obvious supplementary to that is: is there an indication of when that will happen?
100

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I would like to do this as soon as possible, but clearly it depends on the consultation process and how long that takes. I cannot see this taking too long, in terms of drafting the Bill as a Command Paper, but I would not want to put a specific time scale.

Q537/2014

Royal Gibraltar Police – Chief Superintendent role

Clerk: Question 537, the Hon. S M Figueras.
105

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice explain to this House why, in his estimation, the creation of a Chief Superintendent role at the Royal Gibraltar Police, 're-establishes a needed rank between the Commissioner of Police and the three Superintendents, thereby providing the RGP with an improved management structure'?
110

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the post of Chief Superintendent was discontinued in 1992. At that time, the rank was being phased out in the UK and it was felt appropriate and desirable to follow suit. The Force, however, retained the post of Deputy Commissioner until 2009.
115

The UK reinstated the chief superintendent rank shortly after its removal. Upon taking over his appointment as Commissioner, Edward Yome inherited a senior management structure comprising three superintendents, who would on a rotation basis assume the responsibilities of Acting Commissioner. The Commissioner rapidly identified that the gap between superintendent and Commissioner was too great and he needed to fill the void, providing greater command resilience and a more focused emphasis on strategic performance delivery. The reinstated post of Chief Superintendent fills that void. This also enables the three superintendents to focus more fully on their divisional responsibilities and improve service delivery.
120

The portfolio for the reinstated post will comprise policy formulation and oversight, internal service delivery, strategic performance management, discipline, strategic stakeholder management and deputising for the Commissioner of Police.
125

Mr Speaker, in effect, what has happened is that we used to have a situation whereby there were superintendents, a Chief Superintendent, Deputy Commissioner and Commissioner. Over time, the Chief Superintendent and Deputy Commissioner posts were lost, so there was in effect a three-rank jump between superintendent and Commissioner, and it was felt by the Commissioner that that was too great a void and one of them needed to be filled. He identified that post as being that of Chief Superintendent, which was, as I have said, a post which was reinstated in the United Kingdom.
130

Q538/2014
Fixed penalty scheme –
Progress re draft legislation

Clerk: Question 538, the Hon. S M Figueras.

135

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice say what progress has been made in relation to the preparation of draft legislation for the purposes of introducing the fixed penalty scheme which it is anticipated will be rolled out in tandem with the installation of fixed speed cameras in Gibraltar?

140

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, a first draft has been prepared and is currently the subject of an internal consultation between the Ministries of Justice and Traffic and the Royal Gibraltar Police.

145

Hon. S M Figueras: And, as if it was not obvious that I was going to ask this, is there an indication of the timeframe we are looking at in respect of the consultation?

150

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, this is something that the Government is clearly giving some priority to, and we want to roll this out as soon as possible. In fact, we have moved – as the Minister for Traffic will confirm, because his Department is also involved – in the process of the speed camera system that is going to be in place, and I understand an order for some equipment has already been placed. Therefore, there is progress on the practical side and this is the legislative side that we need to get right, to make sure, as the Question says, rolled out in tandem with that particular system. But we are actually moving on it quite swiftly.

155

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful for the answer.

The Hon. Minister says that there is a consultation ongoing between the Ministry of Justice and the RGP. Obviously, part of that will be the identification of the location of fixed speed cameras. Will there be an element of consultation with the public, or tenant associations, or any other kind of consultation to help in the determination of where best placed these cameras are?

160

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, there clearly has to be consultation. This is not something that my colleague and I are simply going to decide and say, 'Put this there' or 'put that there', but the consultation primarily is with the Royal Gibraltar Police, who deal with these matters on a daily basis. We have had that consultation. We have identified four areas in which this scheme can go. We are in the process of finally narrowing that down, so that consultation is almost reaching its final stages and we expect to see some very swift progress on this soon.

165

Q539/2014
Royal Gibraltar Police Commissioner –
Cost of new car

Clerk: Question 539, the Hon. S M Figueras.

170

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice confirm the total cost to the Royal Gibraltar Police of the Commissioner's new official car, a Mercedes Benz E Class? I think hybrid.

175

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the Commissioner's car cost £40,433.44.

As a follow-up to the last comment that the hon. Member made, where he said, 'I think it is hybrid,' it is in fact a hybrid vehicle, and I can tell the House that in the short time that the vehicle has been operating, fuel consumption has been reduced to almost half.

180

Q540/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Charter

Clerk: Question 540, the Hon. D A Feetham.

185 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when will the Government grant the Gibraltar University a charter guaranteeing its independence and befitting its status as a University?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

190 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 541 to 544.

Q541/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Investment required

Clerk: Question 541, the Hon. D A Feetham.

195 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, apart from the £10 million initial investment by the Government in the Gibraltar University, what other investment, capital or otherwise, does the Government envisage it will need to make in that venture to make it viable?

Q542/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Projected annual costs

Clerk: Question 542, the Hon. D A Feetham.

200 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the projected annual costs of the Gibraltar University over the first three years?

Q543/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Projected annual revenue

Clerk: Question 543, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the projected annual revenue of the Gibraltar University, over the first three years?

Q544/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Breakdown of costs

205 Clerk: Question 544, the Hon. E J Reyes.

210 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Education provide details, by way of breakdown, of the entire costs of the University of Gibraltar project; who is involved in the educational side of the project; details of the precise courses which are going to be made available; details of the number of staff it is expected to have, once fully functional; and what he expects the running costs of the university to be?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the various Questions posed are pretty wide-ranging and encompass quite a number of areas involving the university, so the answer is in fact quite lengthy.

There is also in the Order Paper, as hon. Members know, a Supplementary Appropriation Bill which has the exclusive purpose of appropriating funds for the University of Gibraltar. There is bound, therefore, to be an overlap between the issues which arise in the debate of that Bill and the answers to the various Questions which the Opposition pose on the university. I will, however, give them the answers to the Questions that they have raised.

It is important to state at the outset that the idea of a university in Gibraltar has been raised or considered on a number of occasions over the years by various political parties. The concept therefore is not new and is one which clearly enjoys cross-party support. The Government hopes that its plans for this university will indeed enjoy the support of the Opposition.

Last week, we announced the plans for the university. Much thought has been given to the makeup of the university. What we want to achieve is not a replica of what is available elsewhere, but to create something unique. It is not just the University of Gibraltar; it is a university for Gibraltar – a university that will serve the needs of the community and of industry, but also a university designed to become an international educational institution with a reputation for its high standards and for the quality of its research programmes in various fields. We have shown that, when Gibraltar sets its mind to something, we can become world class. We have done so in gaming, in financial services and in areas involving research – for example, the work done by the Gibraltar Museum on the Neanderthals. We can also do so on the higher education front, by bringing together and building on what we already do well.

Mr Speaker, the first issue which I would like to address on the specific Questions by the Opposition is the legal and statutory structure for the establishment of the university. This is related particularly to the Question on the charter.

Our research has shown that there is no specific model which predominates. There are, in fact, two models which are mainly used, but whichever model is used, there is one underlying theme which is fundamental to any university: that is that its academic independence has to be guaranteed, befitting its status as a university, as the Question from the Leader of the Opposition states. The Government is committed to these principles.

The two principal models, either of which will achieve the underlying objective which I have referred to, are as follows. The first is for the university to be established by Act of Parliament. In other words, the university would be a statutory body. In Gibraltar's case, that would be through an Act called the University of Gibraltar Act. Either the Act or regulations under the Act would contain all the necessary guarantees for academic independence. There would also be provision for the maintenance of standards by the university. With this Act, there may well be no need for a charter, as the Act or regulations would contain what would normally be in a charter. The other model is for an Act to provide for the establishment of any university to be authorised. In our case, this would result in a Universities Act. The University of Gibraltar would then be authorised under the powers given by the Act, and a charter could be provided with the required guarantees and provision made for the maintenance of standards. In either case, there would also have to be provisions to safeguard the framework under which the University is being established. This can be achieved by setting out – either in the Act, regulations or a charter – the objectives of the university as outlined in the plans which we have announced. The Government has not yet decided which of the two models to adopt. We have, in fact, two draft Bills and are considering which works best for Gibraltar. Ultimately, these are different ways of achieving the same result.

But none of this interferes with the preparation for the university, either from an academic perspective or from a resource or buildings perspective. An operating company known as The University of Gibraltar Ltd – or UniGib, as we have already started to call it – has already been incorporated and is the vehicle through which staff will be employed, equipment or materials procured and contractors engaged. All of that can and will proceed whilst the final decision on the legal or statutory structure is taken.

Mr Speaker, we have announced that the university will have four faculties: Health Studies and Sports Science; Business, to include specialisms in accounting and finance, law and ICT; Life and Earth Sciences with Gibraltar and Mediterranean Studies; and finally, Tourism and Hospitality.

No successful university anywhere in the world will have offered the same number or scope of courses at establishment as it offers 10, 20 or 30 years later. Every university evolves and develops over time, and the University of Gibraltar will be no different. It is, however, necessary to start somewhere, and whilst we can be and we are ambitious, we must not be overambitious at the start. The university will have four functioning faculties at the outset, with its own building or campus, containing all the facilities which one would expect in a modern university. Each of the faculties is expected to offer programmes starting in September 2015.

275 In Health Studies, we currently have 38 students carrying out foundation, undergraduate and post-graduate programmes in Nursing and Health Management. These programmes, which are validated by Kingston University, will form part of the university.

In Sports Science, we expect to have a research programme starting in September 2015.

280 The Faculty of Business is expected to offer courses which are part of the international programme of the University of London. These are courses which will be developed over time. The faculty is, however, expected to offer, in September 2015, two courses which are being developed locally. These are the Diplomas in Gibraltar Tax and in Gibraltar Law. These two courses will be invaluable, particularly for accountants and lawyers, although the courses will of course be open to others. They will provide not just local knowledge, but also a local qualification in these fields.

The Faculty of Life and Earth Sciences will offer research programmes, the precise title of which will be announced in the next few months.

285 The Faculty of Tourism and Hospitality will initially offer courses in hospitality, similar or developing from the pilot programme which my colleague already talked about earlier in this session and which started last month as part of a collaboration between the Gibraltar Tourist Board and Oxford Brookes University.

290 Mr Speaker, we have determined that it is absolutely essential that we continue to develop collaborations with other major universities, such as Kingston, London and Oxford Brookes. We will therefore be seeking to enter MOUs with a number of other universities. These MOUs could lead to collaborative programmes at post-graduate and post-doctoral levels, student exchanges and the provision of facilities by the University of Gibraltar for fieldwork to be carried out in Gibraltar in areas such as, for example, marine biology and primatology.

295 I would add that we have already seen, both before and after last week's announcement, a great deal of interest by academic bodies outside Gibraltar in collaborating with our university. I have, in fact, been overwhelmed by the manner in which everyone to whom we have spoken about our university has welcomed the idea and has been willing to participate in our programmes. Clearly, we will choose our partners wisely.

300 We have already signed an MOU with the University of Seychelles. One of the specific areas we are talking to Seychelles about is the creation of a two-centre joint Masters between the two universities in Marine Science and the Blue Economy. This is a programme which the Government is particularly excited about and which we feel could be extremely popular with local, Seychellois and, in time, international students.

305 It is important to emphasise that collaborations will not just be with foreign entities. There is a wealth of talent in Gibraltar, which we will naturally want to tap into. The university will work closely with local bodies such as the Gibraltar Museum, the Gibraltar Botanic Gardens and the Garrison Library. The expertise, assets and facilities which these bodies have will be crucial to the success of the university.

310 We have also announced that the university will include an Institute of Professional Development and Continuing Education. This will provide courses leading to professional qualifications – for example, in accounting – public and private sector continuing professional development, and courses developed to meet industry needs. I will be happy later on to give specific examples of this, if hon. Members opposite wish. The University of Seychelles has a similar institute, and we were able to see during our visit there how it operates very successfully to deliver the professional and industry needs of the community.

315 The other component of the university is the Language Centre, which is intended to deliver teaching of English as a foreign or business language. We expect that these courses will be very much in demand.

As hon. Members will appreciate, we are being ambitious in our approach, but we need to get it right. There is much to be done in the course of the next 10 months to get this off the ground. What we have presented is a blueprint for the university and what we want the university to develop into over time.

320 Mr Speaker, this leads me to financial and staffing issues. The Supplementary Appropriation Bill will allow £10 million to be provided as a grant for the university. I hope that hon. Members will understand why it is undesirable for specific breakdowns to be provided at this stage. UniGib is in the process of obtaining quotes from contractors for the refurbishment of the Europa Point site and the construction of the new facilities within that site for the university. It would, for obvious reasons, be unwise for us to state whilst this process is ongoing what we would expect the refurbishment and new build to cost. I would, however, say this: it is expected that the £10 million grant will cover not just start-up costs but also provide running costs for the first two to three years.

330 Staff will have to be engaged in a number of areas. These will include senior management, heads of faculties, lecturers, library, IT, finance, administration, campus and facilities management, as well as maintenance and support staff. We anticipate that this could result in the employment over time of up to 40 people, with further staff, such as additional lecturers or visiting professors, being engaged as required. Clearly, not all the staff will be required from the outset, but we will see recruitment over the next few months for various positions within the university.

We have already put together a project team, which is led by me. It includes the Director of Education, Joey Britto, assisted as necessary by the Senior Education Adviser, Darren Grech.

335 Dr Darren Fa was seconded to this project in January of this year and has been working full time on this since then. He will continue to be part of the project team on a full-time basis. Dr Darren Fa was, until recently, Deputy Director of the Gibraltar Museum, as well as being their Education and Research Officer and Co-Director of the Underwater Research Unit. A chartered biologist and an elected Fellow of the Linnean Society of London, he has particular experience of university-level research, having participated in 340 and jointly developed a number of international projects and studies. He has experience in the development of higher education research and continues to act as academic adviser for several Masters and PhD students from various European universities.

Kevin Pizarro of the GHA has been seconded to UniGib for two days a week. Mr Pizarro was instrumental in the setting up of the School of Health Studies at the GHA and brings with him valuable 345 experience and expertise.

Chris Riddell, the Director of Strategic Planning, Project and Business Development at my Ministry, is also part of the team and will be in charge of all aspects of the refurbishment and development of the Europa Point site.

In addition, the project team is being assisted by two consultants with extensive university experience.

350 Prof. Daniella Tilbury is the first Gibraltarian to be recognised with a Marie Curie Professorship by the European Commission. She has held multiple university leadership roles in the UK, Hong Kong and Australia, as well as having served as an adviser for newly established universities and innovative ventures in the sector. She is currently a Dean, Pro Vice-Chancellor with institutional leadership responsibilities at the University of Gloucestershire, UK. In her current post, she is responsible for strategic and financial, as 355 well as operational performance, of a key university portfolio. Prof. Tilbury has been shortlisted for a national university leadership award and is competing against the Vice-Chancellor of Manchester Metropolitan University at a ceremony to be held in early November.

The other consultant is Prof. Malcolm Jones, who was the first alumnus of Cardiff University Dental School to become Dean of the School. He was then Pro Vice-Chancellor for Health in Cardiff University, 360 overseeing strategy for all six health-related schools in the university. Concurrently, he was Pro Vice-Chancellor for Estates, leading on development of a strategic plan, which included a new med school building and a new research institute. He was a member of the Senate and Council, as well as Emeritus Professor at Cardiff University. Prof. Jones retired at the end of 2010. Following his retirement, he has assisted the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro in developing research links with some chosen European 365 universities.

Mr Speaker, this is an exciting project, which we expect will bring numerous benefits for Gibraltar. We very much hope that it will be embraced by the Opposition, and indeed by the whole community. (Banging on desks)

370 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I suppose that in the debate on the Appropriation Bill the hon. Gentleman could just simply stand and refer to the answer he has given gave a few moments ago. I remember a long answer that he gave in June of this year – I do not know whether this one takes the gold or the silver medal!

375 Mr Speaker, am I right in saying that the hon. Gentleman has answered that the £10 million – which is the concern that certainly I have; hence my Question – is envisaged to cover the running costs of the university for the first three years?... which is the question that I have asked specifically, the two supplementaries that I have asked.

380 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, what I said was that the £10 million is expected to cover not just start-up costs, but running costs for the first two to three years.

385 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, may I briefly, just to avoid any confusion in the notes I have made... The Minister mentions four faculties, and when I was making a note of these... am I right in assuming the faculties are Health Studies, as one, Sports Science, as two... No? Then perhaps can the Minister then repeat the four, so that I know clear nomenclature for future references?

390 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the first one is the Faculty of Health Studies and Sports Science, the second one is the Faculty of Business, the third one is the Faculty of Life and Earth Sciences, and the fourth one is the Faculty of Tourism and Hospitality.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes Mr Speaker, before I move on to my second supplementary, I want to say this: that it is something that the Opposition welcomes. As he rightly points out, it is something that has been considered in the past by a number of Governments. I think going back to the first GSLP Government, if I 395 recall, from 1988 to 1992, I think it was something that was being considered even then and it was something that was being considered when we were in Government. I think it is extremely worthwhile.

400 If we make any points about the public finances, it is a separate point not intended as a criticism of this particular venture. Obviously, we have our criticisms of the fact that the Government is spending money as if there is no tomorrow, and the Government said there was no money in 2011 but now is prepared to spend not only on this but on other issues. It does not detract from the fact that we are supportive of this particular venture.

405 The hon. Gentleman has mentioned a number of areas that initially the university is going to be concentrating on – educational areas, the teaching areas that they are going to be concentrating on. How long in any business plan is it envisaged that the Government will take for the university to break out perhaps into other fields? Has that been considered, or is it envisaged that we are going to be concentrating... that these are the core areas and really there is going to be very little branching out into other areas? That is really what I want to explore: the branching out, the breaking out into other areas – if that is envisaged; and what kind of timeframes are we talking about in terms of that?

410 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member made certain comments in relation to finances. Any issue related to public finances, whether it is related to this or any other thing, are best left to be debated during the Appropriation Bill, which is on the Order Paper if the hon. Member wants to make any point. I will not go into that debate at this stage. Suffice to say that the Government always considers that prudent economic management is very important. We have shown that in the past and will continue to do so, as the various Budget speeches during our time in Office have shown.

415 With regard to the core areas and the business plan, hon. Members will recall that this is something we have been looking at for a long time. We started by commissioning Prof. Tilbury to do a feasibility study for us in 2012. That has evolved through various phases into the current thinking of the Government and we have identified the faculties and areas which we think are best suited for Gibraltar and which could make this into a unique institution.

420 As I said earlier during my answer, this is something, a project, which is going to evolve and develop over time. How far and how soon is a matter which we will have to wait, but what we have done, as I said is to develop this blueprint: this is what we would like the university to look like.

425 There is a lot that can be done, beyond what we are going to start with in September 2015, in the four faculties. In Tourism and Hospitality I mentioned the pilot programme. A lot of that is vocational, as the hon. Member indicated, but there is much that can be done from the academic point of view, in terms of BScs and BAs and those sorts of areas as well. So there is much that can be developed, from within the basic structure that we are creating and within that, which we feel are areas of great interest in and for Gibraltar that can be branched out. Life and Earth Sciences can become, in theory, a huge faculty, dealing from historic matters, to environmental matters, to scientific matters and marine biology, a lot of it research based.

430 What we have done is set out the core structure as to what we envisage the university to be. In 10, 15, 20, 30 years, the university might branch out and be something different, but certainly it will not be the Government that is necessarily directing the university to say, 'You have to do this and you have to do that.' We are setting up, at establishment, that core structure with our ideas of what we would like the university to look like and develop into; and then clearly, because as I have mentioned there will be academic independence, it will be for those running the university to consider which particular courses at which particular time ought to be offered. So it is something that will be able to evolve over time.

440 If there is identified, for example, a need for a fifth faculty, for which there is demand and which would be particularly popular and fit in with the model of the university, then by all means that may happen, but that is not currently in our thinking and in our plans. We need to start with what we have said we want to do. The Institute of Professional Development and Continuing Education is going to be particularly interesting and something that is going to allow the whole community – the whole business community and the whole community as such – to be part of the university and participate in elements of the university. It is primarily what is going to bring the university to the community itself, in terms of business and industry.

445 So again, there are many, many areas in which that can be developed and expanded over time, but this will take time. We have said what we want to achieve from the outset, and then it will be a baby that will be born and will grow over time, and we hope – we expect – very successfully.

450 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in terms of the student base for the university – which ultimately, if it is going to be run as a business, is going to be the client base – presumably that is where the fees are going to come from for the university to run properly: tuition fees.

Can he give us some information as to the type of breakdown and where these students are going to be coming from? Are they mainly Gibraltarian students that the Government is envisaging will go to the university, and therefore what the Government effectively pays for these students to study in England, they 455 expect them to study here in Gibraltar; or is it overseas students? What type of breakdown and percentages? I would have expected, in a business plan, for some very considerable research to have actually gone into this and for the Government to have an idea of the type of breakdown – certainly in the first three years, which are going to be critical for the success of this university.

460 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, one of the things that we announced and that we made clear during the press conference is that this does not change at all the scholarship scheme that is run by the Department of Education. In other words, students will not be discouraged from going away to the UK. Anybody who has a place in a university in the UK for a course that would normally qualify for a mandatory scholarship – and indeed hon. Members know that we expanded that when we came into office... Those same opportunities
465 will continue to arise. So no-one will be told, ‘You cannot go to the UK; you must study in Gibraltar.’

But what we have also seen in recent history is that where facilities and courses are offered locally there is local take up, and we see that in particular... I mentioned the School of Health Studies. We have foundation, undergraduate and post-graduate courses being done in Health Studies, foundation and undergraduate in Nursing, and the post-graduate in Leadership and Management in Health Studies. There 470 are 38 students currently taking up those courses, so where there is availability then that will happen. In the School of Tourism we have seen the take-up that the hon. Member explained in terms of the pilot programme. That is something that we will want to develop and we will see quite a lot of interest from local industry.

But clearly, as the hon. Member says, over time we will want to attract international students and we see 475 the area that international students in particular will want to come to Gibraltar for is research. We have already a number of students who come to Gibraltar to carry out research – for example, in conjunction with the Gibraltar Museum. I mentioned that Dr Darren Fa supervises some of these students at Masters and PhD level, so we have already that interest, and that interest we expect to continue.

We clearly have done a lot of research in this area, but what I am not going to do is constrain what the 480 university could look like by saying this is a percentage that we... This is not about quotas. We are not setting quotas in terms of local and foreign students, but we do expect, again over time, once the university is up and running, once we develop the partnerships that we clearly have said are crucial for the university – for example, the partnerships we already have with Kingston, what we want to do with London and what is happening with Oxford Brookes, which we want to develop into a collaborative project for the university –
485 then it is not just people coming to do a University of Gibraltar course, but a course which is validated by institutions elsewhere.

Let me just give the hon. Members an example. We have had a number of meetings already with the University of London and various colleges of the University of London, including the London School of Economics, on accounting courses, which is one of the areas that we want to develop and which we have 490 already discussed with the London School of Economics. The intention is, over time... It will not be starting in September 2015, but we will be planning for what we will be offering in September 2015 going forward for people to enrol. So we could have courses being run in Gibraltar, taught in the University of Gibraltar, directed and validated by the London School of Economics, and people ending up with a University of London degree – and that, we think, is a valuable combination, and Gibraltar has much to 495 attract.

But as I said, this is something that is going to evolve and develop over time, and those who manage the university will have to put together the marketing programme in order to be able to attract the right calibre of students. And not just the right calibre of students: as I mentioned, collaborative programmes are absolutely crucial and it is important that we choose those partners wisely to be able to offer high standards 500 of academic excellence in Gibraltar, so that Gibraltar, over time, develops that reputation which we expect it to develop as a university of high standards and high academic repute.

Hon. D A Feetham: But Mr Speaker, I understand all that, and certainly we wish the Government every success and the university every success in building on any foundations and expanding the future in terms 505 of its academic curriculum and otherwise. But am I right in saying – just reading between the lines in the answer that he has given me – that in terms of the business plan... because of course in any business plan you would have thought that the main focus would have been on where we are getting the critical mass, in terms of the client base, that will allow us then to break out and expand in the future. Is that critical mass envisaged to come from local people, as opposed to foreign students; and then, of course, as other 510 universities do, they do marketing and other things in order to attract overseas students? Is the intention really to make this university successful based on local students first, and then add onto that in the future with overseas students?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the intention is to build on what we already do, and an example that I 515 gave was the School of Health Studies. The critical mass for each particular area really depends on what that faculty is and what that area is. For example, in Health Studies we already have a critical mass, in terms of 38 students doing these programmes validated by Kingston University. We expect, over time, that that programme will continue to attract local students, but will also be able to attract international students to study those nursing courses in Gibraltar with the university, in conjunction with the Gibraltar Health Authority carrying out the practical side of those particular courses.

520

In, for example, Life and Earth Sciences, a lot of what will be done will be research, and we expect that there will be some local take-up but we expect a lot of international interest in coming over and taking up research programmes within the university. So it really depends on the area.

525

The Language Centre, for example, is not intended to teach English to local people. There will be courses of different natures. As I mentioned during the press conference, more and more we are seeing English used not just as an everyday language that everybody wants to learn, but as the international language of business, and there is a huge demand for courses for professionals inclusive for English as a business language and not just a foreign language. Those will be shorter courses, which will attract, we expect, international students and international professionals for batches of two, three or four weeks at a time, for intensive courses.

530

The Institute of Professional Development – the core areas there will be with a local client base. That is intended to meet the professional and industry needs in Gibraltar, whether it is the needs of lawyers, accountants or other professionals. I mentioned how we envisage that this can work and that I can give some examples of the sort of areas that the institute...The institute is something... In fact, we have in our manifesto the idea of a commitment for a National Institute of Adult Education and also a commitment to continuing professional development, and this institute brings both of those things together.

535

When I visited the University of Seychelles, which was in fact a very successful and fruitful visit, I mentioned that they have a similar institute. It is an institute that we were developing, and quite by coincidence, when we got there they said, 'We're going to take you to another campus: it's called the Guy Morel Institute,' and precisely what they do is professional development – courses developed with the private sector and with the public sector particularly to meet industry needs. We went into one of the classrooms where a lecture was being given there and it happened to be a human resource management course. What they have done is develop a 12-week course by getting in touch with the associations that deal with human resource management within the community, and develop a 12-week course, whereby employers provide day release to their human resource managers, or human resource employees, for one day a week over 12 weeks to do a diploma in human resource management at the university – and that is something that we can do very successfully here.

545

Whether it is human resources or whether it is in conjunction with the Association of Compliance Officers – a course over that period of time, say 12 weeks, on say money-laundering and compliance issues, about what Gibraltar law is, what Gibraltar practice is, what compliance officers are expected to do in terms of the legal requirements – and do it in conjunction with the Association, and employers being prepared to release, say on one day a week over that period, so that the people within their organisation can benefit from this professional development and also a specific qualification which would be offered by the university, by the institute in particular.

550

I mention compliance just as an example – we can do it with fund management; we can do it with insurance. The insurance industry keeps growing. We get professionals here and we get local people who go into the insurance industry in Gibraltar and would benefit enormously from these sort of courses, getting some sort of diploma, professional development in the fields they are working on in Gibraltar. So throughout the whole spectrum of industry – on gaming, financial services, and tourism – the institute can be absolutely crucial for the training of our people. So that is an area where we see local interest developing over time.

555

So it depends on which area; but of course, as I mentioned, international students we think will be attracted to Gibraltar. We think there is a lot to offer in Gibraltar. The idea of coming to a location like Gibraltar and being able to study in Gibraltar and have a course which is validated by an internationally recognised university, seems to me is a win-win situation.

565

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: I will not keep the House much longer on this subject. First of all, I am very glad that the Leader of the Opposition has indicated that the Opposition would officially support this in principle. I think in principle it is a jolly good project.

570

I accept what the Hon. Minister says: that these things have got to start somewhere and evolve. That said, listening to him, I get the impression that that start – which is a place to start and I will acknowledge it... If that start is a sort of consolidation, rationalisation, reorganisation, or even with a supplement of existing local training resources and/or supply of training needs such as the ones he has just outlined, both in the private sector and indeed in the public sector... One possibility that he has not mentioned, but he could just add it to his list, is a sort of public administration school. So there is all manner of things; he is absolutely right.

That would be useful, but I would urge them not to take... to set their sights higher. I think the University of Gibraltar has potential. First of all, I welcome it because it is another institution that makes Gibraltar not look... it takes Gibraltar further along that road that successive Governments have been trying to travel and take Gibraltar in, as acquiring the institutions and the trappings of a modern, developing, evolving first world European country – and the university is such a thing.

So if it is, and I am glad that he has said that it is, the aspiration at some time in the future – and indeed I think it should be the case from the beginning – to have courses which are capable of attracting international students, I think that would be a good thing, because it has an economic value, the export of education. Malta has done this quite successfully. The export of education through the establishment of a university in Gibraltar is a potential source of direct and indirect economic activity in Gibraltar. In that context, just to follow on from what the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has said, is there at some stage... and if there is not, will the Government at some point carry out some sort of business case or business modelling to see what measure of success we might have to have before this university became more or less self-funding? Or will the Government be content to see it just as an addition to our publicly funded education infrastructure in Gibraltar, just added to the schools and the university funding, and any revenue that comes from overseas students is just a welcome contribution but not part of the business case?

My question is this: given that I am particularly interested in the sort of... I am not disinterested in the local provision – I think it is a jolly good thing, provision of local demand for such things, but given that I am particularly interested in the export side, in other words in attracting students to Gibraltar, not least because it allows... rather like the Erasmus thing is designed to do, it brings in new thinking into our student... Will the hon. Member say whether any thought has been given to the issue of residential accommodation for overseas students? Presumably there is not a residential block attached to the campus. If there is, I think that would be a jolly good thing. If there is not, you would have to consider the extent to which it might put pressure on the already difficult for locals housing rents, if students were added as a competitor to that. I am sorry – he mentioned the accommodation block just before I walked in. He had just started when I arrived. I am sorry if he has already mentioned that. Will there be an accommodation block?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is absolutely right. This is something that we want to see develop over time, not just in terms of consolidation of what we already do – for example, the School of Health Studies or the pilot programme in relation to... This is not just about bringing those together. It is about bringing those together, adding other things at the outset and then developing and branching out from that base, but having that solid base to start with, and we already have these things as a solid base.

Apart from the things that have already been done, specific areas that I mentioned that we want to see starting in 2015 are, for example, the specific diplomas in Gibraltar law and Gibraltar tax. These are not being done. These are courses that are being developed specifically for accountants and lawyers and others who want to have a knowledge in Gibraltar tax. What we find is that accountants do their professional exams, they study the tax system – usually the English tax system – and then advise on Gibraltar law, where the tax system is clearly different than the English tax system.

Gibraltar law is the same. We have lawyers going and getting professional qualifications, learning about the English legal system. Clearly, those of us who are lawyers have gone through that and are able to adapt, but having the specific knowledge of what Gibraltar law is about, in terms of learning about the Constitution; the specific legal structure in Gibraltar; the courts structure; the jurisprudence that has developed through the Gibraltar courts, which we do not get anywhere when we go off to university; the local idiosyncrasies in terms of local legislation that are particular to Gibraltar and from which jurisprudence is developed... All those things clearly need to be part of this course, and we expect that to be in place for starting in September 2015.

So it is not just about consolidation. It is about consolidation, including some research programmes – and I said we would be announcing some titles in due course on Life and Earth Sciences and in Sports Science as well – adding those at the outset, and then developing from there.

I entirely agree with the hon. Member that there is an enormous economic value in this, and we said so at the press conference: economic value in terms of employment opportunities in itself creates economic value to the community, but economic value in terms of people coming to Gibraltar and spending their money here, as well as paying the fees and funding the university. We do expect our university to have a place within the family of European universities. We should be able to benefit, for example, from the Erasmus... and the other one I think is called the Bologna process, whereby there are exchanges between European universities. That clearly takes some time. It is not something where you open the doors and automatically everybody starts exchanging students with you, but that is certainly very much in the plans.

The hon. Member specifically mentions accommodation. I had not mentioned accommodation when I referred to the answer, but with the press release that we issued we issued a number of concept drawings and one of them was specifically an accommodation block in the Europa Point area, so we already have plans for the accommodation block in the Europa Point area. We have, in fact, identified two sites in the 640 Europa Point area which are suitable for student accommodation, because we identified that if we are going to attract international students, international students will need to have somewhere to stay. Not just international students, but visiting professors and lecturers. Sometimes they come for a short period of time. You do not necessarily need, for a research programme, your lecturers and professors here all the time. Sometimes they come for a short period, do an intensive part of the course, and then let the student get on with it in terms of research.

645 So there are two areas which can be developed. The first one can be developed over two to three phases, giving us an element of flexibility, which would give... the plans are for approximately 200 student rooms in that one. And then there is another one opposite the road, again within the Europa Point campus. Let's recall that what we have had back, as the hon. Member knows, is the St Christopher's site, but the southern end of the site, starting with a car park, stone building and then a block at the bottom, which has I think nine or 10 vaults, that has been given back and that is what is going to be the core campus of the university.
650 St Christopher's School still uses the top end, which includes a large assembly hall and a number of other buildings, plus two playgrounds which they still use for reception and nursery, which the Government is in the process of re-providing as part of the Lands Agreement, and eventually that will come back and will allow for expansion within the university. So we have physical room for expansion, and one of the plots, one of the areas which is currently a playground, has been earmarked as a second plot, which can be used 655 for student accommodation in which... Again, at the press conference I showed a slide with a drawing of what that block would look like, and that is envisaged to hold in the order of 70 to 80 student rooms.

So, over time we believe that we can develop those two sites within the Europa Point campus to have almost 300 student rooms. That, I think, will be a valuable addition to the university and will do precisely what the hon. Member rightly says, which is that, for this to work successfully and have economic value, 660 we need to attract those international students.

Mr Speaker: The whole question of universities is, of course, a fascinating subject. We have had a series of very lengthy exchanges and long supplementaries followed by even longer answers from the Minister, who no doubt is full of enthusiasm and knowledge about the whole project.

665 But we have to be proportionate. Time is of the essence and I think I must ask hon. Members, if they have any other supplementaries, to make sure that they are short; and equally ask the Minister to provide short answers. Otherwise, I think we should move on. It will not be the only opportunity that Members will have to discuss the matter: there is a Bill, and no doubt in future meetings other matters will arise.

Next Question then.

FINANCIAL SERVICES AND GAMING

Q533/2014

Minister for Financial Services –
Travel costs

670 Clerk: Question 533, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Financial Services provide updated details of all his travel costs, broken down in the same manner as Table Tc4 in the Government website, beyond the information as at 8th October 2014, which ends with a trip on 16th to 17th June 2014?

675 The Hon. the Minister, in private conversations with me, has already indicated that the information is now on the website and has been for a few days, but certainly after I filed the Question – so I am grateful for that indication and I do not know whether he wants to reply formally.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

680 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Yes, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member has already said, I had communicated to the hon. Member that the information was submitted to the Statistics Department by my Ministry on 13th October and subsequently posted on the website on the 14th, the following day.

685 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that.

Is the Minister able to provide me with further particulars in respect of some of the trips he has attended? Some of them are obvious from the face of the description provided under the 'purpose of the trip' heading – for example, you have gaming meetings in London or, the last one, gaming meetings in 690 Nevada; Hedge Fund World, Asia. But others, for example, and I refer them to him... Casablanca Financial Services – I think he may have given an explanation at the last House; but London, Bermuda and Monaco are each described as ‘financial services meetings’. I suspect that the Bermuda one probably had a focus on insurance, given the nature of the jurisdiction, and indeed he may have stated the facts in press releases, but is he able to provide me with those further particulars, certainly the ones I have just referred him to?

695

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker. Some of these, the ones you have referred to – Bermuda and Hong Kong – are centred around what we call the ‘Gibraltar Days’ in each of these jurisdictions. For example, in Bermuda it was centred around a huge insurance conference which was housed in Bermuda, and so Gib day was on the perimeter of that function. In Hong Kong, there was Hedge Fund World Asia, which is a large conference there. Again, the Gib day was centred around that event, at which I spoke.

700

What we try to do in these events is to not just turn up and have meetings arranged for us – which is of course what we do – but centre them around big events, where players are brought into those jurisdictions and we can capture those people too. It was the same in South Africa. The Nevada one is the G2E conference, which is the largest US conference, and I was advised that I should at least do one US conference on gaming, so I was told that we should do G2E in Nevada, which we did. Monaco was another conference on hedge funds that I addressed at the plenary session. So they are all primarily centred around large conferences which I am advised we should be attending and speaking at, and we organise our own events on the peripheries to that. We normally spend one day at the conference, or half a day at the conference, then two days outside that – and that really is the makeup of most of these events.

705

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that reply, but is he able to provide me with the particulars?

The four examples I have provided him with refer to ‘financial services’, but what I was really looking for is whether he is able to provide which particular financial service was being concentrated on or was being marketed. I offered to him that I suspect that the one in Bermuda related to insurance, and if he could confirm that that is the case I would be grateful for that; but, for example, what financial services were being marketed in Monaco, London and Casablanca, which are the other three that I have identified under that particular description?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes Mr Speaker, of course all of these events are on our business development plan from Gibraltar Finance, which tells you 12 months in advance every single event that we are going to be attending, so all of the events that he has referred to, with the exception of Casablanca, are on that business plan. For example, Bermuda was insurance and primarily insurance-linked securities, and you will, I hope, have seen press reports of the arrival in Gibraltar of the largest provider of insurance-linked securities in the world, from Bermuda, who is now setting up and being licensed in Gibraltar – which is fantastic news. Monaco was hedge funds; it was a specific hedge fund conference. But again, the details of all these are in our business development plan, and if my friend would like to have details of any in particular, I would be absolutely delighted to pass them through to him.

720

725

With respect to Casablanca, that was slightly different. Meetings were arranged there with the stock exchange in Casablanca, with two large banks in Casablanca and two investment groups, specifically to look at what opportunities there were to link up the now licensed Stock Exchange in Gibraltar and a number of the banks that are interested in seeing how they can partner up with different Gibraltar businesses.

730

So yes, financial services focus totally.

Q534/2014

Gibraltar International Bank – Update on progress

Clerk: Question 534, the Hon. D J Bossino.

735

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Financial Services provide an update on progress in relation to the Gibraltar International Bank, and particularly when he expects it will open in the new premises?

Again, in relation to this Question there has already been notice, after I filed the Question, that a specific month has been provided as to the opening of the bank – I think it is March next year. The only information that I had when I posed the Question was that it was expected to be opening in the early part of the next year, but now we have a date. But I will allow the Minister to answer.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): If I can just say that the timing of that announcement was not prompted by the hon. Member’s Question, but very much more by the 745 announcement that he will have seen by Barclays Bank – probably the same day that he filed his Question, or the day before – of the extension of the closure of the bank until 29th May. As hon. Members will know, Barclays Bank was originally going to close at the end of this year. In discussions with them, they agreed to extend that; and in further discussions with them, as our date has drawn further away so has theirs, and I am grateful to them for having acceded to that request. So the timing of the response, or rather the release about the date, was more to ensure that people knew that before the Barclays date came – in other words, 750 29th May – there would be sufficient time for those without other alternative arrangements for their banking requirements had an option with the Gibraltar International Bank, which would open in March. That was the reason for the timing.

755 If I can just deal with the Question, to give a little bit more information, Mr Speaker, as Government has announced this week, it expects the bank to be open for business in March 2015, with the building works being completed in February 2015. Almost all of the staff have now been employed and are in the training process. IT and operational systems are on track and the board of directors are now having monthly meetings with the executive team. A huge amount of work is now being undertaken in preparation for the opening, and I am most grateful to the CEO and COO, Laurence Podesta and Derek Sene, for the professional manner in which they are driving this important project forward.

760 From press statements, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will also be aware that what we call the ‘client on-boarding’ system has already opened, where people are able to go online, make appointments and submit their administrative forms to enable their accounts to be opened once the licence has been issued and the premises are open. So it is really just trying to get as many people through the administrative process as we possibly can before the opening date in March 2015 – which is going extremely well, I am delighted to report. 765

770 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the press release states that the opening will be in early March 2015 but subject to... it talks about all pending issues, including operational matters and all the rest of it. It also makes specific reference to meeting the conditions of the licence, which has been in principle granted by the FSC.

775 Is he able to provide the House with an indication as to when the full licence will be granted? Obviously, it will be before March, one would have thought, but is he able to give me an indication as to when he expects that to be granted, especially in the circumstances which he himself has alluded to – and it is certainly in all the adverts that we have seen in the local press – where the bank is already accepting applications to open new accounts?

780 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the bank is not accepting applications to open new accounts. What we are doing is making administrative arrangements for the account process to be prepared in anticipation of the bank being opened. Obviously, once you go through that process and... If you want to call it an ‘account’... You cannot put any money in it and you cannot use it, because obviously there is no licence in place, so we call it the ‘client on-boarding’ process because we have to be careful to ensure that people understand that we are not opening an account – because we cannot yet, because we are not a bank.

785 With regard to the question as to the conditions of the licence and by when we would expect those to be satisfied, I have to say that obviously there is no question of the licence being issued until the bank is open. One of the things that the regulatory authority is required to do is to inspect the premises, ensure that everything is in situ and in place and fully functional. Primarily, the operational systems – obviously, as you can imagine – those have to be in sight and tested before the licence is granted. I would expect the licence to be granted and the conditions to be met literally in the very short period before the bank opens its doors. The majority of the conditions, with the exception of the one that it is open, I expect to be satisfied 790 long in advance. They meet on a regular basis and they are ticking through the conditions as and when they go through, as you would expect, leaving the final items – which will be operational systems tested and premises are open and functional – until the very end. But certainly all the conditions that can be met before are being met and very good progress is being made in the normal way.

795 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, just to point out that the advert does actually say that the Gibraltar International Bank will begin accepting applications to open new accounts, so I literally took it from what has been – (Interjection) Yes.

800 Is he able also just to clarify in my own mind which premises the bank will be operating from? We have got the premises by the Ince’s Hall Theatre, which I think is probably going to be the main premises, but are there not also premises where the old Lloyds Bank used to be? Can he confirm that those are going to be the two premises of the bank?

805 Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, the only premises of the bank will be Ince's House. The premises opposite have got nothing to do with Gibraltar International Bank, nothing at all; just Ince's House – 310 Main Street, I think it is.

810 Hon. D J Bossino: The premises opposite... he is referring to the ones I referred to in Main Street, which used to be the old Lloyds Bank. Is he able to give an indication as to whether there is any Government involvement in relation to that? I think we have already asked a Question in relation to that, and I thought the answer that came back was that it was going to be GIB premises – but clearly I am wrong. Can he provide any explanation in relation to that?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, my understanding is – and I am not certain of this – that that may be related to Gibraltar Savings Bank. It has got absolutely nothing to do with the Gibraltar International Bank.

Q535/2014
Gibraltar International Bank –
Equity funding

815 Clerk: Question 535, the Hon. D J Bossino.

820 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Financial Services provide details of the breakdown of expenditure in relation to the £25 million which is being estimated for 2014-15 in respect of the equity funding of the Gibraltar International Bank?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

825 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the amount of £25 million referred to in the estimates for the year 2014-15 is for the allocation of capital by Government in the Gibraltar International Bank Ltd, covering regulatory and working capital. Of this sum, the amount expended to the 30th September 2014 is £975,000, broken down as follows: staff costs, £244,000; temporary premises rental, £24,000; IT costs, £470,000; professional fees – which I have to say includes licence application fees to the Regulatory Authority – £208,000; others, £29,000.

830 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that reply, Mr Speaker. Is he able to give me an indication – (Interjection) Yes.

835 Hon. A J Isola: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I am just being reminded that I had not finished the answer. At the meeting of the board of directors held on 6th October 2014 – this may be where he was going – it was resolved to issue 4 million shares in favour of the Government of Gibraltar, worth £4 million. The remaining unissued share capital, up to a value of £25 million, would be issued before the opening of the bank in March 2015.

840 Hon. D J Bossino: It is probably an unfair question, given that it is –

Mr Speaker: In that case, don't ask it.

845 Hon. D J Bossino: No, if it is early days. I am just being kind to the hon. Member. He may think it is not unfair and he is more than capable of answering it.

Does he have an indication as to when he expects the bank will be self-financing? Again, I do admit that it is very early days, but does he have a plan as to when he expects it to be self-financing?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I have a dream, but – (Interjection by Mr Speaker) Yes, of course we have.

850 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: You know what happened to the last bank? (Laughter)

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, that is what Mr Speaker has just referred me to.

Of course we have the business plan, the cashflows, and they give estimates on the best-case and the worst-case scenario, but I do not think it would be appropriate for me to share that across the floor.

855 What I certainly am happy to say is that within a relatively short period of time I expect it to be profitable – and significantly profitable – so within a short period of time.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for the answer – so it wasn't that unfair!

Mr Speaker, can I take it from that answer that he expects that the Government itself will not need to 860 expend any more money in relation to this particular project? In other words, that the £25 million is expected to be the 'price tag', if you like, that the Government will have to expend on this particular project?

Hon. A J Isola: No, that is not the case. As the hon. Member will know, in banks the more successful 865 you are the more capital you require to invest. With the ratios that are used to calculate regulatory capital, the more money you lend the more money you are going to have to invest as capital. So I would not be surprised if, within a relatively short period of time, there was not a need to inject further capital to maintain the buffers you are required to have, because your multipliers of deposits to loans are very much regulated and controlled. Consequently, the more successful we are, the more capital we are going to have sitting in the bank. So it is really something that very much depends on how good and successful we are able to be, 870 particularly in the mortgage and the lending space.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, no... I understand that – that the more one lends, the more deposits, the more one is expected to have by way of, effectively a solvency buffer, and there are specific solvency 875 requirements and capital requirements for banks – but of course the Government must expect to also have some return in terms of the profit from the bank up to the Government; or am I wrong in relation to that?

Is the model expected to be one of, effectively, the Government injecting money – albeit into a profitable bank, but the Government is injecting money – but expects to have nothing back from the bank?
Are the profits going to be just simply reinvested in the bank, and also the money that the Government is going to be putting money in? What is the type of model that is envisaged in that regard by the 880 Government?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, the Government hopes and expects that it will receive a good return from its investment in the bank and that the shareholders of the bank will be able to receive their benefits like 885 other shareholders do.

But of course what I cannot do is pre-empt what the situation is going to be at that time. For example, if there is a requirement to inject a further £1 million of capital and the profit is £1 million, it may well be that it is reinvested. That is something that is well premature for us to be considering, but certainly the Government's intention is to make a profit and have its shareholder returns from the profit of the bank, absolutely.
890

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand that and it may well be that, although there are going to be further requirements in the future for further investment in to the capital of this bank, that part of that – or indeed perhaps the entirety of that; we do not know – is then going to come from the profits that the bank declares up to the Government, so effectively the bank becomes self-sufficient, so to speak. There is no 895 further money that is being injected by the Government; it is all done from profits of the bank up to the Government, and effectively going back into the bank.

This may be an unfair question, but does he have an idea of timescales within which the Government expects this bank to be self-sufficient in that way? It is a question that I asked the Hon. Gilbert Licudi, the Hon. the Minister for Justice and Minister for Education, in relation to the university, and he said 'Well, 900 look, the business plan envisages that within two to three years the initial £10 million is going to cover two to three years.' I would expect that the thinking there is that within two to three years that university hopefully is going to reach a level keel, where the Government is not going to have to be investing any more money. Does he have any idea about this at all?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, of course Mr Speaker. I indicated to his colleague, the Hon. Mr Bossino, that of course there is a business plan and projections with best-case and worst-case scenarios, and there are timescales attached to all of those things.

If I can just give you an example of how some of these projections can be adjusted so easily: as a result of having to do the client on-boarding, which I have just referred to earlier about the application process for 910 the opening of accounts – and again, I say that word cautiously – we have had to bring forward the employment of the 50 staff that we have. They were originally going to be taken on, the bulk, at the end of this year. As a result of our requirement to do that earlier, we have had to bring the staff further forward.
That has an impact: it is an extra cost.

Estimates are great, as you well know from your professional lives, but to what extent I can stand across 915 this House and ask you to rely on them is extremely difficult. I am happy to stick to the same timeframe. I would certainly expect the bank, within two to three years, to be profitable. I certainly expect that to happen and I would hope that it happens long before then.

Q563/2014
Hong Kong Office –
New investment from China

Mr Speaker: Next Question.

920 Clerk: Question 563, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: It reads ‘the Chief Minister’, but I assume the Hon. Minister is going to answer it.
Can the Chief Minister state what new investment has come from China since the Government opened its office in Hong Kong?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, it is widely acknowledged by the private sector that the previous Government wholly failed to make any real investment in time or resources in the promotion of Gibraltar internationally, particularly in the area of financial services – unlike many other small jurisdictions, which have been busy promoting themselves over these past years. We are, in effect, playing catch-up for the lost years, but as the private sector also acknowledges, we are taking giant strides to recover that lost ground.

The Gibraltar Hong Kong Office has already hosted, in its short time since opening, two visits from Gibraltar Finance, including one in which I participated, and will shortly be focused on shipping matters as it hosts my hon.Friend, the Hon. Mr Neil Costa, the Minister with responsibility for this area. These initiatives are crucial in delivering potential new markets to our private sector, and we are confident that these will bear fruit.

935

I am unable to detail any investment made, as business conducted during and after each of these visits will have been carried out by any of the four private sector firms, or indeed others, that joined and join our marketing initiatives.

940

The Gibraltar Hong Kong Office co-ordinated, arranged and introduced our delegations to senior partners in the major international law firms, international accountancy firms, international banks, senior regulators, fund manager administrators and influential politicians and businessmen. It also, in addition, arranged, co-ordinated and prepared the Gibraltar Day lunch in Hong Kong, which was attended by some 60 professionals in the particular funds sector and hosted by me.

945

We have a long way to go in realising our potential in the Asian markets, but I firmly believe that the opening of the Hong Kong Office is an enormous step forward – a view shared by many in the private sector. We are delighted with the work undertaken by the Hong Kong Office and hope it will continue to bring new opportunities to our community. I hope the Members opposite wish similarly.

950

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, after that – to be honest, unexpected very partisan – answer, I take it that the answer to the question as to what new investment has come is no.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, if my hon. Friend would like me to read the answer again, I am very happy to do it, but I will paraphrase it for him, just in case he missed any of the bits.

955

When you are involved in business development and promotions, I hope my learned friend will know, it takes an awful amount of time, and so for the hon. Member, after a number of months, to ask what investment has come to Gibraltar from China following the opening of the Hong Kong Office is ridiculous in the extreme.

960

As an example, as I have just mentioned in response to one of the earlier Questions, as a result of the visit that we carried out in Bermuda, and as a result of a marketing visit that we did to New York, the largest insurance-linked securities provider in the world is setting up in Gibraltar. That is only as a result of these marketing initiatives, but that has taken time – more time than he has allowed our Hong Kong Office to function and deliver what we believe it will deliver in the months ahead.

965

When I say that the Hong Kong Office arranged and co-ordinated the visits, what I am saying is that each day that we were there, for the three days that we were there – with private sector firms joining us, which you can happily verify from any of them; in fact, my learned friend’s firm, I am delighted to say, was with us in that visit – there were six or seven meetings organised with senior partners of these institutions, every single day that we were there. Unfortunately, because of flight connections and flight cancellations, we arrived at eight o’clock in the morning on the Monday, going straight into our first meeting at 10 o’clock, and carrying on for three days until we flew back at 11 o’clock at night the third day following.

I was hugely impressed by what Jason Cruz had managed to put together during that visit; hugely impressed at the quality of the people that we met and the quality of the individuals that he has come across 975 alone. There are some names that I would like to be able to throw across the floor, but I think it would be inappropriate to mention the names of individual firms that we met; but outside this Chamber I would be very happy to share them with my learned friend, so that he can have a flavour of the type and quality of people we are talking to. I firmly believe that it is only by engaging in those meetings, in those discussions and those initiatives that you will succeed in attracting business and investment to Gibraltar.

980 As I said, if I may, the people who will do the business and do the investments are the private firms, and although I have, on occasions – particularly following a visit I did with a specific private sector firm to Holland – received a very sweet thank you message a couple of weeks later, where they confirmed that as a result of that visit they had secured a huge client... These things happen, but I am not normally told, so I would not expect to know what the answer to the specific question is, as to whether business or investment has come.

985 I firmly believe that this is the only way that we will do it, and consequently we have to persevere and we have to invest in time and resources, and financially, to see the fruit of that work – there is no question.

990 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I take it from the answer that he has given and the eulogising of Mr Jason Cruz, a former GSLP activist, that the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services agrees with a payment of nearly £250,000 annually to Mr Cruz – inclusive of the private education of his children and also a housing allowance – and agrees too with the Government policy of making those payments, having made that appointment without that having gone out on advertisement and without that having gone out to competition to anybody else other than Mr Cruz.

995 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I see that there was not actually any interest in listening to the answer to the question as to how the business development of this Government is working or functioning, or indeed any comments as to how one might be able to do it better, and that the sole purpose of the Question was for the usual political tripe that we hear from Members on the opposite side of this House. (A Member: Hear, hear.)

1000 Mr Speaker, when you consider that the previous Government, and indeed to an extent we can –

Mr Speaker: You are beginning to debate now.

1005 Hon. A J Isola: I am not, Mr Speaker. I am going to answer specifically the question that he has raised – talking about whether the money is justified; I need to answer that.

Mr Speaker: But do not draw and make comparisons between what the previous Government and you... Answer what it was you were asked.

1010 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I would like a little bit of latitude to deal with the suggestion that this man is being overpaid and to put it into context and into perspective.

1015 When you consider that Gibraltar Day in London – that function that was started, and which I agree and support, by my hon. Friend, Sir Peter – that cost £150,000 for one day, I could have stood or written to you each of those years and said to you, ‘Is that value for money?’ Well, actually, I believe it was value for money, but that is for one day. So when you start talking about the quantum, I think these things need to be put into context. The question that I would have asked: is the Hong Kong office value for money? My answer to that question would have been, ‘Absolutely, yes.’

1020 As to whether he is a GSLP man or not, Jason Cruz happens to have lived in Hong Kong for 20 years, and if you would have cared to listen to my answer – and I told you specifically and I offered the names of the firms, outside this Chamber; the quality of the people that he is introducing us to, because he knows them and he has worked with them – you could not have a better introduction to the hierarchy of financial services in Hong Kong than we have obtained through Jason Cruz. So again: is the Hong Kong office value for money? Absolutely.

1025 Finally, Mr Speaker, as to the point as to whether the post was advertised, I think the hon. Member should know better than to ask this side of the House whether they advertised for positions or not, bearing in mind the record his Government had. (Banging on desk)

1030 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am the one who posed the Question, and it was a very simple one: is there any new investment? He has said, ‘No, it takes time,’ – (Interjection by Hon. D J Bossino) I am just going to deal with it. I think he said in relation to... He has just said across the floor of the House that he did not say no, and he said it could be that new investments may have arisen from the trips he has undertaken and the establishment of the office in Hong Kong, but he is unable to verify that because...

1035 That is really what I want to explore further. Does he have, or should he not consider, if he does not – clearly he does not, but should he not consider having a system in place where he is able to identify whether there have been any new investments arising from this particular initiative? It does cost money, that is a fact; and I think from a Government expenditure point of view he ought to be able to, I think, analyse whether it is value for money and whether Gibraltar plc is seeing the returns from that particular investment.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, a very fair and sensible question, if I may say so myself.

If the hon. Member looks to his right, he will see a business development manager from a law firm whom I have spent an awful lot of time with in the past, and he will be able to tell him just how difficult it is in the function of business development to evaluate how successful in real terms that system is, or that work is. It is extremely difficult.

But there are two aspects that I see to it. One of them is the raising of the profile of Gibraltar as a jurisdiction, which I believe is fundamental and we have to do. So what does that mean? That means getting to people and explaining to them what Gibraltar is all about and what you can do from here. That could take the form of trade press, trade media and interviews where that sort of work can happen. Then you have also got the direct: going to meet people, spending time with people in the major firms, banks and institutions.

1050

To put a system in place to monitor that is extremely difficult. As I mentioned earlier, we do not get the feedback from the firms individually as to whether they have been successful or not; but what we do do is, as we are now sitting to evaluate the business development plan for Gibraltar Finance for the next 12 months, of course we go back – we look at which events we thought were value for money and which were not, and we will be making some changes, absolutely. We will be seeking to identify which we thought we got real value back from and which we did not. Don't forget that that business development plan came across, or was conceived, following a whole range of meetings that I had with Gibraltar Finance and of course the Finance Centre Council and all the different members of those associations and individual member firms. We sat down with them and said, 'Which are the functions you think we should be at?' But of course what we also said at the time was, 'When we look back over the last 12 months we are going to see where you have come with us,' because that indicates whether they believe they are good events. Very easy to say, 'We think that was a fantastic event,' but if they do not come with us, how good do they really think it is? At the same time, we appreciate they cannot come to all of them. So we are going through that process now to see which of the events we believe are really good value.

But in terms of monitoring I think it is almost impossible – and we have to accept that – to get a real tick box as to which ones have produced direct business or not. That is extremely difficult to do, as I am sure his friend to the right of him will confirm to him.

1065

Hon. D J Bossino: Given that the Hon. Minister is obviously very keen with the idea of having a presence in China – well, Hong Kong is in China. We have had answers in relation to Mr Cruz. I think the intention is, in the medium term, that he will be shifted to the London Office. If and when that happens, what is the Government's intention in relation to the Hong Kong Office? I suppose once he has done that analysis he has just spoken about and he thinks it is a going concern and still a valid and profitable idea to pursue for Gibraltar plc purposes... What is the Government's intention? Is it the intention to continue to staff that office for the future?

1070

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I am not, myself, involved in the planning arrangements as to where Mr Cruz is, or is not, or will be, or indeed what the future plans for the office are; but certainly it is my hope and expectation that that office will continue and will be manned. As to who will man that, if Mr Cruz is to move, it is too early days for me to be able to honestly tell you the answer to that question.

1080

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the hon. Gentleman know what the cost of the Hong Kong Office is, apart from the moneys that are being paid to Mr Cruz for running that office – which is obviously part of what we are discussing today, which is the cost effectiveness compared to the returns of the office?

1085

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Minister does not have to answer that question. It does not arise from the original Question.

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I agree and I do not know the answer to that question.

1090

What I can tell him is that the office itself, which I have been to, is an extremely modest office which barely fits the two desks that are in there, but in a reasonable location, which we thought was more appropriate than having a bigger office somewhere else.

I cannot tell you the costs, because I am not familiar with them.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the thought does cross my mind, and I think it does arise from the Question: is it fair to say that the Government did not really have a business plan as such – in other words, 1100 did it send somebody over just to investigate that particular market and whether there was a possibility... it is a question of setting up the office and then seeing how that goes, and then assessing, as he mentioned in answer to one of my previous supplementaries, whether it is actually value for money? I suppose the question is: did the Government have a business plan before it decided to take the policy decision of opening up an office in Hong Kong?

1105 Hon. A J Isola: Yes, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Member will know, we have focused on a number of non-EU markets – which obviously include Hong Kong, including New York, South Africa and Bermuda, which are the four jurisdictions that we targeted some time back – to see how we could best promote and develop bigger and better relationships with these places. This is part of that process.

1110 I think there has been a lot of interaction with Hong Kong people and firms. You may know that there are Hong Kong interests in a number of very large firms in Gibraltar today and so, to seek to continue to develop those relationships, and links were identified quite some significant time ago – long before I did my business development plan for this year, 14 or 15 months ago. So, yes.

TRAFFIC, HOUSING AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Q514/2014 Parking – Plans for airport

Mr Speaker: We go back to Question 514, the Hon. Selwyn Figueras.

1115 Clerk: Question 514, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic say whether there are any plans in place for the additional provision of parking, whether short or long term, in the vicinity of the Airport?

1120 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government is currently considering expressions of interest submissions for the old air terminal site and the provision of parking within a future development is one of the requirements.

1125 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, what exactly is the Government doing to deal with the difficulties that people are experiencing with the absence of parking, particularly in light of the loss of the parking that was allocated to... I am not sure who it was, but what used to be the long-term Airport car park?

1130 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not clear... Could you please repeat the question? I am not clear what...

1135 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Government say what it is doing to address the concerns expressed by citizens and the difficulties that they are enduring, in particular since the loss of the long-term Airport car park that was opposite the site of the old airport?

1140 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the actual site people used to use as the long-term car park was taken over by the Bus Company. There have been people requesting similar facilities, which are not possible at the moment, but the Government is looking to see whether there is any possibility of providing some sort of longer-term parking within the area; but at present it is not possible to say anything more.

1145 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, that is a medium to however long-term solution at some point in the future, and of course the difficulties are being endured now. So there are two supplementaries. The first would be: when is he expecting that these expressions of interest will become anything like progress towards delivering a solution for the problems that people are enduring today; and secondly –

Mr Speaker: Let him answer the first one.

1150 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes.

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, proposals are actually being looked at at the moment. As to a timeframe, it is not possible for me to say.

1155 Obviously, the loss of that car park... It was a big car park and it will not be possible to provide parking for as many vehicles. What does happen at the moment is there has been a change to the way that the big car park is being operated so that people can leave their cars overnight, and that was not possible before. That is in the big car park closest to the Frontier.

1160 Hon. S M Figueras: Would the Government perhaps consider some kind of park-and-ride solution for the time being, for people who typically used to park their cars in the long-term car park to cross over into Spain on foot and leave it there for a few hours? Is this something that the Government is or could consider in respect of an interim solution?

1165 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, there is a car park presently at the Western Beach area, just close to the Frontier itself. That is available overnight and can be used as a long-term parking facility. I am not sure what the cleaning campaign is, but there is regularly cleaning – I think it is once every month at the moment. But other than that, the car park is free to be used by people for long-term parking.

1170 Hon. S M Figueras: And can the Minister say whether that facility will be of... The complaints that I have received I have received notwithstanding the fact that I am certain those who have brought the complaints to my attention are aware that that facility is available, and it strikes me that it may well be that despite the availability of that facility the situation is unsatisfactory in respect of those who have made the complaints.

1175 Will the Minister confirm that there is no end in sight, as far as he can say today, in relation to the problem of parking in the vicinity of the Airport?

1180 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no; as I said, there is parking available at Western Beach. The truth of the matter is that people who have complained to me about the loss of the longer-term parking, as you have mentioned, when they have been told that there is availability for long-term parking at Western Beach they are surprised. We have announced it. It is something which should be known, and obviously just by mentioning it today I am hoping people will become more aware of it, but once they know that it is available they say, 'Well, that is an alternative.'

1185 Hon. S M Figueras: So would the Government consider reissuing some kind of notice to let the people know? Because it appears to me that many people simply do not know that it is available.

1190 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes, that is fine, we can issue something; but it has been advertised, a press release was issued and it is something that people should know. Perhaps because of the fact that they have to drive through the old boat area is maybe something they feel they are not aware of, but most definitely there is ample parking there for people who want to park long term for the Airport.

1195 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Almost as a user I am interested in, rather than as a Member of the House. He said that one of the parking's was now, as a novelty, available overnight. Did he mean the one immediately outside the Air Terminal, or the one where the old air terminal stood, that is now a coach park? Or neither of those?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the parking at Western Beach is totally free, as opposed to having to pay. The old car park was a pay car park, the old long-term. The one that we actually use at the moment, not only has it got more parking spaces available, but it is free.

1200 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Would the hon. Member consider the possibility – I accept that you would not wish to interfere with the operation of the Air Terminal, or indeed the coach park the following morning – whether there would be scope for allowing overnight – say, cars to be away by nine o'clock in the morning, which is long before any flight arrives – the use of one of the car parks nearer the border?

1205 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, in fact, as I mentioned earlier, the larger car park, which is north of the old airport terminal and which is a pay-and-display facility, after a given hour – I think it is seven o'clock in the evening, if I am correct – can be used until the next day. I am not sure whether it is nine o'clock in the morning, but there is a relaxation of pay and display during the evenings.

1210 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: That is what I had asked. I had understood him to say that it was neither of those, but it was the one that... So the one immediately outside the terminal, the one that we might use when going to the Air Terminal, that is available overnight on a pay-and-display basis?

1215 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is the one north of the old airport terminal and east of North Front. It is the large one.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: North or west... To me the old airport terminal means... (Inaudible) He means...

1220 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it is the one where the Bureau de Change is.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Oh!

1225 Hon. Chief Minister: 'El que hace esquina.'

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Yes, yes.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, just for the avoidance of doubt, the constituents who have lodged these complaints with me – one of them is not my hon. and learned Friend, Sir Peter Caruana.

1230 I suspect this may have something to do with the lack of awareness that we have just touched upon: would the Government consider perhaps... I do not know what kind of signposting is up in the area of the access to that Western Beach parking area. Is there something that perhaps the Minister could undertake to have looked into, to see whether perhaps it could be made a little more apparent, if it is not already?

1235 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Q515/2014
Parking –
Plans for town area

Clerk: Question 515, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic say whether there are any plans to provide further parking in the town area in the short to medium term; and if so, what these plans are?

1240 After asking this Question, a statement has come out in relation to the 400 new parking's that have been painted on the site in the area of where the old Naval Ground car park was. It is not yet operational, but I have asked the Question in any event because it was posed before the press release.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1245

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government has recently opened two new car parks: one at Coaling Island and the other on the Mid-town site where the fair was held. Together they will provide in excess of 500 parking spaces. These car parks will remain in use at least until the new multi-storey car park, delivering 1,000 parking spaces, is completed next year.

1250

Hon. S M Figueras: Sorry, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister says that they have opened the two car parks, but it is not in fact the case, because certainly this morning at half past eight, when I was coming in, the car park on the site of the Mid-town area was not yet open. When is it expected that it will open?

1255

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, yes, the hon. Member is correct. The car park at Coaling Island is open now, and because of inclement weather – it was raining last week – it was not possible to paint all the lines, but its opening is imminent.

Q516/2014
Cycling safety awareness –
Plans for campaign launch

1260 Clerk: Question 516, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic say when he plans to finally launch cycling safety awareness campaigns in Gibraltar?

1265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I do not recall ever having said that the Ministry would be launching a cycling safety awareness campaign in the future.

1270 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, that was the point of the Question! (Laughter)

I was wondering whether perhaps I might well prompt the Minister into contemplating what certainly Members on this side of the House and some on that consider is a reality, i.e. the growth of cycling in Gibraltar, and that perhaps it may now be time, three years into their term of office, to contemplate, in addition to other campaigns that they have had – for example, in respect of recycling – one in relation to cycling awareness, because yes, and I pointed out to you and you just didn't have... (Interjection) Re cycling yes – yes, indeed! (Interjection) Yes, there was 'cycling' in it, but it is not the cycling of the kind I had contemplated.

1275 So, Mr Speaker, the question is: will the Government now contemplate, in the face of what certainly in my view is the inescapable reality of the increase of the use of bicycles in Gibraltar, will it contemplate a cycling safety awareness campaign – in addition to what is already done by way of cycling proficiency at a very young age, but something that is done in respect of the increased use by adults of cycling in Gibraltar?

1280 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I apologise for... I would not say 'misreading', because if I actually read the Question, it says 'Can the Minister for Traffic say when he plans to finally launch cycling safety awareness campaigns?' When you say 'finally' it is as if I have said it in the past and when am I going to finally do it.

1285 It is something which, as I mentioned before... Apart from the cycling proficiency campaign, as you rightly mention, which the RGP does – I don't know with what frequency – the Government will contemplate, if need be, some sort of campaign regarding cycling. We are extremely happy that, as the hon. Member says, that more people are using bicycles, so that is something which we are very happy about.

1290 The fact that he mentioned that we have had long enough to actually do some sort of cycling awareness campaign... Well, you had, in the previous Administration, even longer to have some sort of cycling awareness campaign done, and apart from the GibiBike scheme, which might be a good thing to recycle, as opposed to help or to encourage people to cycle, as far as I am aware was the only thing that was done on that side.

1295 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, in respect of interpretation of the English language, the Minister has found himself in hot water in the past, and I shall not revisit those particular examples but suffice to say that the Question really very clearly intimated the exasperation on this side of the House with the lack of cycling awareness campaigns launched by this Government in the three years.

1300 He also says, as if it were some kind of legitimate defence, that the Members on this side of the House who were in Government for 16 years had that much longer to launch that. However, the cycling phenomenon is one which has seen significant and recent growth, and that is the reason why this Question has been asked. (Interjection) Yes, fine. I do not have proof, I am not going to adduce any kind of evidence – I am not in court – and other Members, including the Minister himself, have acknowledged that there has been an increase in cycling in Gibraltar in recent times. (Interjection) Yes, I was going to ask a question.

Mr Speaker: Order! Order! Question.

1310 Hon. S M Figueras: Could the Minister say, can the Minister say, because, of course, a cycling awareness campaign is not just about awareness of cycling safety for the cyclist themselves, will the Minister consider a cycling awareness campaign which targets certain issues in relation to the interaction of cyclists and motorists on Gibraltar's roads – which is, at the end of the day, what causes perhaps the most significant danger to cyclists on our roads?

1315 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Q517/2014
New road to the south –
Plans for creation

Mr Speaker: Next Question.

Clerk: Question 517, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1320

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic now say whether the Government will be investing in creating what many consider a necessary and additional road south from Queensway through New Harbours?

1325

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as already stated in answer to Question 164/2014, the Government is considering the options and necessity of providing a new road to the south as part of the Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan process.

1330

Hon. S M Figueras: What a shocker!

Mr Speaker, I suspect that we will cover this again, as we have done on many occasions in the past. Is there any indication of when that phenomenal – as it must be by now, surely – Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan will see the light of day, and others beyond the Minister, because I am not certain even other Cabinet Members have seen it, will be able to see it?

1335

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, soon.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, ‘soon’ is really a very elastic term. Is he able to commit to a week, two weeks, a month, three months, on the eve of the next election in their manifesto?

1340

Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker.

Q518/2014
Parking –
Plans for pilot schemes

Clerk: Question 518, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1345

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Traffic say whether the Government is planning on launching any pilot parking schemes in Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1350

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government is considering various parking options and strategies as part of its Sustainable Traffic, Transport and Parking Plan. These will be piloted as and when deemed necessary, either in the run up to the STTP publication or afterwards.

1355

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I note with increasing concern that Members on the other side of the House find it very entertaining that the Minister for Traffic is holding the community to ransom on the basis of a plan – which has been paid for by the Taxpayer – which has been ostensibly created following the user trip survey that was also conducted here in Gibraltar and should have been ready, according to what the Minister himself has said in this House, in the first quarter of this year.

1360

Does the Minister consider that it is right and appropriate, and ultimately entertaining or a matter that is not important enough, to continue to hold the community to ransom by not publishing anything that is in that plan or giving any kind of insight, Mr Speaker, into what is contained in that plan?

Mr Speaker: The hon. Member... [Inaudible]

1365

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes, I will. Yes, of course.

Mr Speaker: It is very serious language...

Hon. S M Figueras: I will very happily, Mr Speaker.

1370

Mr Speaker: I wonder whether...

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, no-one is suggesting –

1375

Mr Speaker: I wonder whether it is proper language to use... to hold the community to ransom.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I will –

Mr Speaker: I would advise the hon. Member to be more temperate in his use of strong language.

1380

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I do not feel passionate enough about the use of that term to not be happy to retract it – which I do, if that will make it easier.

Mr Speaker: Carry on. Thank you.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

Does the Minister think it is right that, in respect of a plan where Taxpayers' money has been invested and so much effort has gone into it by so many different people, that he should be holding on to the results which ostensibly he has without revealing the detail, or at least some general ideas that have emerged from the process, for as long as he doing?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): That is a general point, and I am going to answer it on behalf of the whole Government.

Mr Speaker, one of things that we spent a lot of time arguing when we were in Opposition was that plans prepared by the Taxpayer should be published. We are going to follow up on that policy and we are going to publish our plan. The timing of that is a matter for us, and the hon. Member will have the next election campaign to go around Gibraltar telling people that we have not published things and that we have not done them – if we have not done them.

1395

What I can give the hon. Member an assurance of is that we will take our own medicine and we will publish the plans that we have had prepared from the Taxpayer – quite unlike the plan into the future of GBC, which was published in the first week after our election, after the previous Administration failed to publish it; the plan into the future of the Customs Department, which was paid for the Taxpayer and which the previous Administration failed to publish, and which we published to the unions and to members of the Customs Department – and nobody in the media seemed very interested in it, I must tell you.

1400

All of the plans that we criticised had not been published were published and all plans that we undertake at Taxpayers' expense will be published – unless there is a very good reason not to publish them, and there are some things which are internal documents to the Government, but plans like this, which are undertaken for the community, will be published.

1405

So the hon. Gentleman is, in effect, having had that assurance from me and previously from the Minister, just timing our compliance with that commitment. Well, fine; so be it. He can time us and he can ask us every month whether the time has come when we will publish. We will publish when we are ready to publish, but publish we will.

1410

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the Hon. the Chief Minister misses the point entirely of the line of questioning.

1415

My only interest in the publication of the plan is to understand what it is that this Government is planning to do vis-à-vis the traffic problem, which is, as many people tell me on a daily basis, (A Member: Hear, hear.) nothing short of a nightmare. Because frankly, since they did the Commonwealth Park and since they started work on the – and this is not to make any comment in relation to the suitability or the desirability of any of those projects – since they started work on the Commonwealth Park and on the coach park site for the new housing, it has been diabolical trying to find a parking in town area, and all they have done is gone after any flat piece of ground and thrown white paint at it to try and play the game of catch-up that they themselves have put themselves into.

1420

What I am getting to, Mr Speaker, is the fact that they do not give us any idea of what solution –

1425

Mr Speaker: Ask a question and get there.

1430 Hon. S M Figueras: The question, Mr Speaker, is: is the Government content that, in light of the very real concerns and the very real difficulties being experienced by many Gibraltarians from a wide cross-section of this community on a daily basis... are they happy to continue to keep us in the dark in relation to what solutions, if any, may be coming in the short, medium or long term, so that we know whether they have any idea of how to deal with the problem?

1435 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman wants to make a point because he thinks that there is an opportunity for political advantage, but what he needs to understand is that he is soon going to find himself in a position where there is more parking available now in the town area than there was in the time when they were in Government, and that when we finish the multi-storey car park facility that we are providing at the Naval Ground in the area of the old Regal Cinema, there will be even more and they will be denuded of an opportunity to challenge the Government even on parking.

1440 But the fascinating thing about all of this, Mr Speaker, is that I thought that the hon. Gentleman was a proponent of the 'In town without my car' campaign who wanted to see less parking, people on buses and people on bicycles! (Laughter) But now he has become the champion of the motorist. He has got to choose which side he is on: if he is on the side of the motorist, he will soon find more parking's than ever; and if he is on the side of 'In town without my car', he will find the fabulous new buses are rolling out as from this week. Either way, he has got a way to get into town but no political argument against the Government.

1445 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the party that is politically schizophrenic in this respect is the party in Government today. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks) The party in Government today pretends to be the Government of the environment. It is the party in Government today that has that environmental filter they talk about, Mr Speaker, yet all they do is build car parks, yet all they do is try and cover the gap in parking, because they are the ones who committed to building twice the number of parking spaces under the Commonwealth Park and then failed to deliver spectacularly on that manifesto commitment. They, Mr Speaker, are the ones who committed to more parking, and therefore if they are only a quarter of the way to fulfilling that commitment, they are only a quarter of the way and they are failing the community on their own schizophrenic commitment to the community.

Will this Government publish?...Will this Government give the community that is facing the difficulty that it is facing today any indication of what it is that they are planning to do to alleviate the traffic problem in Gibraltar, and in particular the school and office run?

1460 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to use mental health terms, which I think are inappropriate. (Interjections) Yes, yes, I think they are inappropriate. I know that the hon. Members will mock anything, even mental health if they have to, but I am not going to fall into that trap.

1465 Mr Speaker, I will tell you what we are doing: we are doing a serious plan that will deal with these issues, which should have been before. It is going to be published soon and you will be able to see what it provides for then.

The hon. Gentleman has gone on another soliloquy – I heard a couple yesterday from the Leader of the Opposition and I have heard one from him today – about how we are failing and have failed a manifesto commitment. But is it that he actually is the one who has a problem with the English language, as he has suggested to the Hon. Minister a moment ago? Because if he reads our manifesto it is very clear what is going to happen under Commonwealth Park, in what circumstances it is going happen and when it might not. And as a result of not providing double the number of parking's at Commonwealth Park under Commonwealth Park, he now knows that we are going to provide them... in fact even more than double the parking's that we would have provided under Commonwealth Park are going to be provided, as I have told him before, in the area of the Regal Cinema.

1475 So he needs to go away, reflect on what he has been told today, reflect on what is out there, and really come up with other issues that he might try and hit the Government on, rather than continue to try and make an attempt to go down this road, because it really is a dead-end for him.

Q519/2014
Eastern Beach car park –
Budget and final cost

Mr Speaker: Next Question.

1480 Clerk: Question 519, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Traffic say what the budget for the Eastern Beach public parking, completed in June this year, was; and how much the final cost of this parking has been to the Taxpayer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the total cost of the multi-storey car park project to the Taxpayer was £2,085,832.52.

1490

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister has not answered the aspect of the Question that asked him for what the budget was.

1495

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I will get that information for the hon. Member. I have taken it as what was the final cost to the Taxpayer of the parking itself, and that is the information I have provided. I have not got the information regarding the budget part of things – I will get that to him.

1500

Hon. S M Figueras: So he is saying that the Question, which asked what the budget for the parking was and the final cost... and he is only able to deliver the final cost? Is it because there was no budget for this project?

1505

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, if I can assist the House, this is very simple: the Eastern Beach car park was put to the three-quotes system, which is the system that Government has been using for some time now, including under the previous Administration, and therefore the quotes that came in were the budgets which were accepted and were the final costs. In other words, it was a turnkey operation, and what we were told was the budget is what has been the final cost.

Q520/2014

Eastern Beach car park – Payments to contractors and subcontractors

Clerk: Question 520, the Hon. S M Figueras.

1510

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic say which contractors and subcontractors worked on the construction of the Eastern Beach public parking facility, providing details of the payments received by each contractor and subcontractor and in respect of which services such payments have been received?

1515

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the information requested is set out in the table which I now hand over to the hon. Member.

1520 Hon. P J Balban: Due to commercial considerations, it is not possible to provide the payments made to each of these subcontractors. The value of the subcontractor's works is approximately 60% of the overall project cost.

1525 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I recognise how, in the planning stages of a project and even during a project of this kind, that to give information in relation to how much you are budgeting for it and the individual projects and how much you are expecting to pay or how much you are paying during the life of the project could be commercially sensitive – though not always, but sometimes certainly. Why is it that after the event it continues to be commercially sensitive?

1530 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has no reason not to give this information. We have been advised it is commercially sensitive. I will go back and ask and try and drill down whether it is.

1535 I see no reason why, after the works have been finished, it might not be provided, unless... What I can imagine is – but I will go back – that some of the prices that these entities give the entity that has done this car park, they might not want to disclose to others. That may be the issue, but I will go back and try and understand that.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful and I will certainly write to the Minister to request him –

Chief Minister: To No. 6.

1540 Hon. S M Figueras: It is a No. 6 problem? I will write to No. 6.

Mr Speaker, a further supplementary in relation to the schedule: the second subcontractor referred to is Zambrano: is that Zambrano, the Spanish company or Zambrano Ltd, the Gibraltar-based entity?

1545 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not aware, so if the hon. Gentleman cares to write, then I will furnish him with that information.

Hon. S M Figueras: I will add that to the letter to No. 6 when I write in relation to the split and payments made.

1550 Further along the schedule, item 5, the fifth subcontractor is General Lifts. Is that the name of the company: General Lifts?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I believe so; that is the name of the company, General Lifts.
(Interjection)

1555 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, further along the schedule, fourth from... the imaginatively named Concrete Pumping is... what is provided is a concrete pump. That is also the name of the company?

1560 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, if the schedule actually sets it down as a subcontractor, it must be the name of the subcontractor. I will pursue this – this is information that has been provided to me – when I pass this to the technical staff.

Q521/2014
Government rental homes –
Unpaid rents written off

Mr Speaker: Question 521.

Clerk: Question 521, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1565 Hon. E J Reyes: Sorry, Mr Speaker, I was waiting for the Clerk to call out the number.
Mr Speaker, further to Question W145/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of how much has been written off in respect of unpaid rents pertaining to Government rental homes so far in 2014-15?

1570 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1575 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no moneys have been written off so far in relation to 2014-15, because this is a lengthy and continuing exercise. Unfortunately, many millions have had to be written off once the exercise has been completed for the reasons already discussed, namely the fact that rents over six years due are not recoverable under the Limitation Act.

1580 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I understand that part, that after a period of limitation... but in the current financial year no-one has entered into that period, and therefore it is automatically written off. Is that what the Minister is confirming?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, that is correct.

Q522/2014
Refurbishment of Government rental homes –
Damage by rainwater ingress

Clerk: Question 522, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1585 Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of the extent of damages caused to rental homes as a result of rainwater ingress during ongoing refurbishment works during the months of September and October 2014?

1590 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1595 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, to date 16 flats have been affected by water ingress. I am advised that the immediate internal surfaces have been affected and the contractor has already undertaken effective repairs. One flat sustained damage to personal effects. These were immediately replaced by the contractor, GJBS.

Hon. E J Reyes: So the Minister is saying that in the 16 flats affected one personal effects were damaged and replaced by the contractor: what sort of damage was caused to the other 15 flats? Can I have a general picture?

1600 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the 16 flats affected were mainly minor internal ceiling damage. There were also two flats that had... in fact, there were three flats with minor sill damage. I presume that was windowsill damage.

1605 Hon. E J Reyes: And as far as the Minister is aware, none of them suffered damage where the water ingress could have caused a danger to electrical installations and so on? Is he aware of anything of that nature that could have happened?

1610 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no, the information I have received is that the damage, which has already been taken care of or is in the process of being taken care of, was minor in nature, and as I said it was minor internal ceiling damage and minor windowsill damage. The actual personal effects that were damaged were replaced and they were of a minor nature because of the water ingress.

1615 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, in the same way that the personal effects damage was repaired by the contractor or subcontractor, these sort of damages – which we are glad to hear were mainly of a minor nature... will that increase now the cost to Government in respect of the refurbishment works, or does the contractor have to assume making right what damage was caused?

1620 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not sure whether that will be an extra cost or whether the insurance of GJBS will cover the damage in that respect. I can find out.
I have just been informed that it is not at extra cost to the Government.

Q523/2014
Mid-Harbour Estate –
Details of outstanding works

Clerk: Question 523, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1625 Hon. E J Reyes: Further to the answer to Question W146/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide updated details, together with estimated completion dates, in respect of works still to be completed at Mid-Harbour Estate?

1630 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, as informed in my answer to Question W146/2014, the CCTV project at Mid-Harbour Estate has now been completed.

1635 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes Mr Speaker, I am glad to note that the CCTV is now completed.
My Question is saying is what works still have to be completed. If I can give him an example, I know the barriers at the entrance to the parking areas seem to be installed but I do not see them functional, so probably that is still an ongoing work. Can we therefore have an estimated completion date?

1640 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, no, that has also been completed. That is just pending... The barriers have been operating for quite a while now. We are actually in the process of deciding how we are going to issue fobs to the persons who live there and parking permits, so we are actually speaking to the tenants' association to see what is the best way forward in that respect, but we are quite advanced with that at the moment.

1645 Hon. E J Reyes: And does the Minister have any hopeful date by when this will be completed?

1650 Hon. P J Balban: As I said, Mr Speaker, we are at an advanced stage now of seeing how we are going to do this, in terms of the delivery of fobs to the different households. There are different options: whether we give just one fob per household or we give numerous fobs per household, or we give one permit or numerous permits. It should be quite soon now, but I cannot give him an exact date though.

Q524/2014
Refurbishment of empty homes –
Expenditure incurred

Clerk: Question 524, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1655 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide updated details in respect of all expenditure incurred since the answer to Question W147/2014 in respect of contracts awarded for making empty homes suitable for reallocation, stating to whom payments were made, how much has been paid, the number of residential homes pertaining to each payment, as well as indicating if the services contracted were for either repair works or cleaning services?

1660 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

Answer to Question 524

ALL SERVICES CONTRACTED WERE FOR REPAIRS
 NONE WERE FOR CLEANING

1665 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, if I may, as I do every single month when this Question is asked, I will mention that all services contracted were for repairs and none were for cleaning.

1670 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sorry, there are a couple there that stick out. The first one, for £11,647, seems to be more than double what the average costs of the others are. The same as just under halfway down: another one for £12,020. Given that these are substantially more than the others, does the Minister have any additional information to explain why these are much higher costs than the others?

1675 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I can only assume that there was much more work involved in repairing those flats. I do not why they are double the amount, but clearly it is because more work was involved.

Hon. E J Reyes: It does follow a bit, Mr Speaker, that the higher the costs the more work is involved. What I was getting at... Perhaps I have not explained myself properly. Is it because, in this particular case for example, one of them being doubled – unlike normal refurbishments that lead to figures of £4,000 or £5,000 as the majority is – being doubled – is it because there was major work, for example re-roofing or something like that? Does he have any particular notes, or does he simply want to look into it and then he can come back to me when his technicians have been able to furnish him with the required information?

1685 Hon. P J Balban: Yes Mr Speaker, I have the actual addresses of the flats, but the information that he is requesting I do not have available. Again, I can find out why exactly it was that these figures were higher than the average.

Q525/2014
Government rental homes –
Responsibility for repairs

Mr Speaker: Question 525, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1690 Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details in respect of rental homes assigned since the answer to Question W148/2014, indicating how many will be repaired by (a) the Housing Works Agency; (b) subcontractors; and (c) the assigned tenants themselves?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1695 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Housing Works Agency, 2; subcontractors, 10; and the assigned tenants themselves, 10.

Q526/2014
Government rental homes –
Urgent decanting of tenants

1700 Clerk: Question 526, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question W149/2014, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the date when the tenants were able to return to their home?

1705 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1710 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (P J Balban): Mr Speaker, since the answer to Question 149/2014, a total of six tenants have required urgent decanting from their homes. These are as follows: tenant 1 was decanted because of fire, they were out since 27th May 2014 and they returned to their flat on 29th May 2014, so only two days afterwards; tenant 2 was decanted because of the need for works, they were out on 28th July and they came back in on 29th September; tenant 3 once again was works related, they were decanted on 9th August 2014 and they are still out at the moment – they have still not returned to their property; tenant 4 again was works related, they were decanted on 27th August and were allowed to return home on 15th September; tenant 5 once again was also works related, they were decanted on 21st September and they returned to their house the day after, on 22nd September; and tenant 6
1715 was another unfortunate incident of fire, the tenant was decanted urgently on 22nd September and unfortunately has not been able to return as yet.

Mr Speaker: This is a lengthy schedule, purely factual. I suggest we move on to the next Question, and if anything arises the hon. Member can come back to it.

Q529/2014
Housing waiting lists –
Breakdown of applicants

Clerk: Question 529, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1745

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to the answer provided to Written Question W154/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide updated details in respect of the number of applicants on the housing waiting lists, inclusive of a breakdown for the medical and social lists?

1750 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, there are 1,111 applicants on the waiting list, inclusive of medical and social lists, as follows.

1755 On the waiting list: 1RKB, 725; 2RKB, 90; 3RKB, 157; 4RKB, 117; 5RKB, 18; 6RKB 4. A grand total of 1,111.

On the medical list we have: 1RKB, 105; 2RKB, 45; 3RKB, 48; 4RKB, 27; 5RKB, 8; 6RKB, 0. The total is 233 persons on the medical list.

On the social list we have a total of 77 families, and they are: 1RKB, 58; 2RKB, 4; 3RKB, 8; 4RKB, 7; and none for either 5RKB or 6RKB. Please note that there are applicants who are on more than one list.

1760 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, thank you for that.

Therefore, I am right in concluding from the final remark from the Minister that the 233 on the medical list and the 77 on the social could actually overlap – someone could be on both medical and social. Are those two figures included in the 1,111, or is it over and above the 1,111?

1765 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, most of these on the medical and social lists would actually be part of the 1,111, but not necessarily because you could have a person who is socially categorised and is homeless and hence would not have an application. He would just exist as one on the social list.

1770 Hon. E J Reyes: By chance, does he happen to have today in just an analysis... Would the Minister know, for example, of the 233 and 77, would the vast majority be already catered for in the 1,111, even though the numbers may vary... but the vast majority, one can take it for granted, are already included in that figure?

1775 Hon. P J Balban: Yes, Mr Speaker, most of them will be there. It is just that I said the occasional homeless person would come out as on the social list.

Q530/2014
Housing pre-list –
Number of applicants

Clerk: Question 530, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1780 Hon. E J Reyes: Further to the answer provided to Written Question 155/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of the number of applicants on the housing pre-list?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

1785 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, there are a total of 670 persons on the housing pre-list: there are 543 applicants for the 1RKB; there are 19 applicants for the 2RKB; 66 applicants for the 3RKB; 41 applicants for the 4RKB; 1 for the 5RKB; and none for the 6RKB.

1790 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, given that the Government has signified that it is their intention to do away completely with the pre-list and we still have 670 people on it, obviously some of whom – or all of whom, because the pre-list just exists for a year – have joined since their tenure in office, does the Minister have any updated details of by when he expects the pre-list to be done away with completely?

1795 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, that commitment will be carried out by the time the next election is called.

Q531/2014
Government rental homes –
Cost of evicting squatters

Mr Speaker: Next Question.

Clerk: Question 531, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1800

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing say how much expenditure has been incurred in respect of legal costs relating to the eviction of squatters from Government rental homes since the answer provided to Question W156/2014, providing a breakdown showing the number of homes involved and to whom payments were made?

1805

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, in the financial year 2014-15 there was one property, and that was Triay & Triay who represented, and the actual cost was £665; another property was once again Triay & Triay for the sum of £255; and the third property, also Triay & Triay, was £760.

1810

Q532/2014
Co-ownership housing projects –
Assignment and allocation details

Clerk: Question 532, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many houses have already been assigned or allocated in respect of Government's new co-ownership housing projects and how many still remain unsold, giving the room size composition in each case?

1815

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

1820

Answer to Question 532

Mons Calpe Mews

RKB	ALLOCATED	UNALLOCATED
4 Bed flats	20	Nil
3 Bed flats	156	Nil
2 Bed flats	146	Nil
1 Bed flats	9	Nil

Beach View Terraces

RKB	ALLOCATED	UNALLOCATED
4 Bed flats	39	Nil
3 Bed flats	308	13
2 Bed flats	126	40
1 Bed flats	21	17

Mr Speaker: It is a short schedule. I will give the hon. Member an opportunity to ask any supplementary before we terminate Question Time.

1825

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, I am going to deal with two issues.

Before, you gave me time to look at the schedule in respect of Question 528. For the time being, I am satisfied with this information, save to say if anything is arising it can wait until the next parliamentary session. So thank you, Mr Speaker, we no longer have to refer back to this one straight away.

1830 In respect of Question 532, I see that all the properties pertaining to Mons Calpe Views have been allocated, and therefore there are none remaining as unsold.

1835 In respect of Beach View Terraces, there are still some there remaining to be allocated for potential purchasers. If I take this list to be as up to date as the Minister has possibly been able to there... is it a question that there are still applicants who need to go through the process and so on, or is it because all expressions of interest have been exhausted?

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, with the resounding there were 3,000 applications, a lot of people were interested in these flats. The process is still alive and we are still going down the list of people interested. Within a couple of weeks, we should have all the properties allocated.

1840 Hon. E J Reyes: Perhaps I can take advantage, and the Minister might know this: I believe there is a cut-off date by when applications have to be filed for a person to be eligible to be called in. Can the Minister confirm that? I think the date was sometime in March. In other words, anyone coming onto any list post March is not at present being considered for... taking it in turns. Is there any truth behind that? One constituent was saying it, but I am not entirely certain of the veracity. Perhaps that applicant has got the information slightly mixed up.

1850 Hon. Chief Minister (F R Picardo): No, the deadline was for applications for the purchasing of the homes, but the list was a live list. So the applications had to be in by a particular time; but, for example, people might go off the list and people would move up the list as a result. There would be people who applied to purchase who have decided to purchase elsewhere, or people who have applied to purchase who have then decided that they wanted to stay on the list and wait a little longer for a rental home rather than purchase. But the list has continued to be dynamic for that reason. What was the deadline was for the filing of applications.

1855 It has been possible for people to file applications later in one or two instances when they have come onto the list saying they are on the list, but they are not going to be able to buy in these developments but they want to buy for future developments and they have sent in a late application. All of those applications, I think, have been accepted in the sense that they are the end of a queue of 3,000 people. Right there are going to be other projects coming, and hopefully we will be able to satisfy the demand... and a queue of 3,000 people, but obviously not all of them for the same room composition etc, so somebody may have filed a late application and wanted two bedrooms and may eventually be got to, even if there are not 3,000 flats.

1860 But the clear dynamic with which we have moved is the housing waiting list and the pre-list etc that has been announced.

1865 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker, that does shed a lot of light.

1870 In the event that once even the currently unallocated homes are hopefully sold and so on, anyone who unluckily stays out, would that person automatically be eligible and towards the top of the list of any future other project, or would a brand new list start from scratch, from zero? Does the Government have any indication at the moment, so that those who will be unlucky enough not to get one now at least have an indication that they may or not have priority in any future projects?

1875 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, priority has always been on the basis of the housing lists, so not on the basis of when people have put in applications. If we run out of people on the housing lists who wanted to purchase – and the hon. Member will know that there are people who have filed applications who are not on the housing list – then we have to work out the priority for those people, which will likely be social rather than simply who sent their application in.

1880 Of course, we are dealing with housing which is subsidised by the Taxpayer and by the community. It is not like buying in Imperial Ocean Plaza – who gets in first; this is who has the greatest social need. So we are considering how we will handle the next affordable housing schemes that we put out for sale. Obviously, we would not want people to simply have to reapply, but people might not like the next one – they might not like the location, they might not like the look of it, they might prefer to wait for the one after that – so we may have to go through all the applicants who are left after these sales are done and ask them, when we issue a new scheme, ‘Do you like the new scheme? Do you want your application to remain live for the new scheme?’ Alternatively, we simply invite people to write in again.

1885 We are considering which is the fairest and which is the best way to deal with these issues, and it is very likely that all the applicants who have written in indicating their interest will be communicated with after 1890 we have finished the sales of the remaining properties at Eastern Beach, to gauge what options they would like to be given in future schemes – whether they want to stay live for future schemes or whether they will want to consider future schemes completely afresh and withdraw their applications now and see what comes out. That communication is going to be quite fluid between GRP and the remaining 2,000-plus applicants who will not have been satisfied with the 895 flats that have been made available.

1895 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes. And just for clarification for certain applicants, Mr Speaker, those who have expressed an interest to buy but are way down on the list and have not been called up and so on, because they have expressed an interest to buy it does not mean that they lose out on a chance of being given a rental home should one become available – they will not be penalised because of that, will they?

1900 Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker. People will have to make a choice though: they either buy or rent – it is one of the two. Until they have bought, they have the option to rent; once they have bought, they cannot rent. I think that was the way it was run from 1988 to 1996 and from 1996 to 2011 and has to be run from now; otherwise, you get caught up in a vicious circle.

1905 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, I agree with you, Chief Minister; it makes sense to me. It is just that some applicants I think unnecessarily have got worried and said that because they have expressed an interest to buy and they have not been able to buy one now, they might – wrongly, I think – be of the opinion that, ‘Because I have expressed to Government a willingness to buy if a rental home becomes vacant, they are going to bypass me and keep me holding on.’ They will not lose their normal process in the normal housing allocation system?

1910 Hon. Chief Minister: No, but we would want them to buy anyway; so even though they might be allocated a home, we will still offer them the opportunity of buying a home. Many people, the hon. Gentleman will know, who are in rental homes nonetheless want to buy. Many people do not just see it as a shortcut to a home. Many people see it as an important investment in their lives, and because they have the ability to buy they do want to buy, even if a rental home becomes available and even if they are lucky enough to be able to have that rental home.

1915 The perfect scenario is you are on the list, you get a rental home, you nonetheless still get the opportunity to buy and you are in your rental home for the two years of the build, for example. That scenario is possible.

BILLS

FIRST AND SECOND READING

European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

Clerk: Order of the Day. Bills – First and Second Reading.
A Bill for an Act to amend the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004.
5 The Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 be read a first time.

10 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved

Clerk: The European Parliamentary Elections Amendment Act 2014.

15 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill is really the fruit of an initiative by the former Clerk of the Parliament, Mr Melvyn Farrell, who thought it was appropriate to suggest some updating of the European Elections Act 2004, and I am grateful to him – as I am sure the whole Parliament will be – for having approached the Government on 20 the subject.

Essentially, Mr Speaker, this is a housekeeping Bill. The highlights, really, are as follows.

In section 2, dated references to ‘Accession State’ and similar dated references are removed and reference is now made to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, instead of the EC Treaty.

In section 4, the definition to the ‘Treaty of Athens’ is omitted.

25 In Schedule 1 of the Act, a more precise definition of the 2004 Regulations is now given for the sake of greater certainty and clarity. Hon. Members will of course know that the 2004 Regulations are the UK instrument which governs much of the substance of Gibraltar’s participation in the European Parliamentary Elections.

Also, in Schedule 1, references that are specific to the 2004 European Parliamentary Elections and which are ipso facto irrelevant are expressly repealed.

Mr Speaker, the updating I referred to needs to be reflected in the canvass form for electors and that form is therefore being replaced precisely for that reason.

35 The Government is also taking the opportunity in new subparagraph (3F)(1) of Schedule 1 of the Act to allow for two additional interim publication dates of the register of Gibraltar electors for European Parliamentary Elections. This is in keeping with the change introduced in the United Kingdom and we consider it appropriate and right to introduce the same reform here. It will maximise the opportunity for enfranchisement as individuals will more easily be able to check whether they are on the register or not, and to rectify their non-inclusion in good time, should they be eligible to vote.

40 Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

45 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, very briefly, I rise just simply to echo what the Chief Minister has said. It is a house-keeping, tidying-up exercise and certainly again, from the Opposition benches, we would also like to extend our thanks to the thoroughness of the former Clerk of the House, Melvyn Farrell for his suggestions and for his work in relation to this Bill. So the Opposition will be supporting the Bill.

50 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the European Parliamentary Elections Act 2004 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

European Parliamentary Elections (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

55 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree?

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Supplementary Appropriation (2014/2015) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

60 Clerk: 2. A Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st day of March 2015.

The Hon. the Chief Minister.

65 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st March 2015 be read a first time.

70 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st day of March 2015 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Supplementary Appropriation (2014/2015) Act 2014.

Supplementary Appropriation (2014/2015) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

80 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill seeks a further appropriation in excess of that countenanced at the time of the budget debate in July.

85 The further appropriation is for the purpose of funding the University of Gibraltar, a project which we have recently brought to fruition on the terms already announced by the Hon. Minister for Education and I at a press conference last week.

The project is one which I am sure all sides of the House will agree is a great step forward for our community. Indeed, from what I heard of the debate during Question Time this morning, there is broad agreement across even the wide political divide here about the desirability of this project succeeding. It could not be otherwise, Mr Speaker, for the founding of the University of Gibraltar has been a project long 90 trailed by more than one political party in past elections.

Well, Mr Speaker, it is those dreams which we are now in the process of making a reality, taking one small step at a time. I know the Minister for Education gave a very full answer this morning, detailing aspects of how the university will work. I do not want to repeat myself this afternoon again setting out what the Minister said, and I will therefore simply refer the House to his earlier statement.

95 But Mr Speaker, if we want a university we have to fund it and that is what this Bill is about. I certainly believe we should be funding the university and I therefore commend the Bill to the House, with the caveat that any details of expected spending raised in the debate will best be replied to by the Minister for Education.

I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

105 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker the matter has been exhaustively debated in the Question and Answer session this morning, so there is very little, if anything, that I am going to be adding on behalf of the Opposition, simply to say that we will be supporting this Bill.

We very much welcome the statements made by the Hon. the Minister for Education this morning, that the £10 million that is going to be appropriated today is the effectively envisaged outlay, not only for this year, but over the next couple of years. So that deals with some perhaps lingering concerns that I may have 110 had, because of course we are concerned about how much exactly it is going to be costing in the short term and indeed, carrying on as well from the tradition of, at budget time, always voting in favour of the Bill that is presented at budget time so as not to deprive the Government of the day of the obvious opportunity to be able to fund not only its projects but the running of Government, and although we could have perhaps have taken a different view in relation to this Bill, for the reason that we support the aim and for the reason that 115 the £10 million will not only cover the initial outlay for this year, but also the expenditure for the next two to three years, we will be supporting this Appropriation Bill.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question – sorry.

120 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, this morning, when we ventilated these matters, I expressed the hope and indeed the expectation that this is a matter that would enjoy cross-party support, both from the point of view of the concept of the university and the need to fund the university. I explained that this is something, again as the Chief Minister has alluded to, that it has been at the back of the minds and in fact possibly more at the forefront in more recent 125 years, of other political parties over the years.

We are very glad to be able to bring this matter forward, to have the specific plans and to see this matter – this university which is going to be a pride of place for all Gibraltarians – taking shape. It is good and we welcome the fact that the Opposition, as hoped for by us, does in fact support the concept of the University and the funding for the university.

130 All other matters were set out extensively this morning, but I am very glad that this project, which is a much valued project for the whole community and will see enormous benefits, has indeed cross-party support.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Dr John Cortes.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I would like to just make a few comments here. I have a huge personal interest having moved in the academic world – in fact, once upon a time, I hoped I would become an academic but I finished up here instead. But I have a huge interest in the subject; I am very pleased that I have been involved with my own Department and at a personal level in working with my hon. colleague’s team in developing the natural sciences ideas. Also with the School of Health Studies, we worked very closely together.

Having a university in Gibraltar will clearly enrich our community and will serve to produce ambassadors in a wide range of subjects across the world. I would like to say that I too have noted the excitement in the circles in which I move. I had the honour of hosting a workshop on sustainability in higher education earlier on this year, with representatives from universities across the Mediterranean – both the European and the North African side of the Mediterranean – as well as organisations such as UNIP and the Mediterranean Office for Environment, Culture and Sustainability. Everyone there was extremely interested in working and excited about Gibraltar having a university.

Finally, I think that I have to place on record the congratulations to the Minister for Education and his team, who I know have been working hard in bringing this project to fruition. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute?
The Chief Minister.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well Mr Speaker, because it is an Appropriation Bill, I think some Members have thought that this is an opportunity to have a ‘state of the nation’ university debate. So enjoyable as that might be, we are taking baby steps in establishing this university and I am very grateful to the Leader of the Opposition for having indicated his support to the appropriation.

The appropriation, Mr Speaker, as we have I think already explained during the course of interviews and press statements and the things that have been said this morning in the House and I have said now, is not for £10 million to be spent between now and the end of the financial year, but it is an indication of the amount that the university will cost over a period of time.

Therefore although we are making the appropriation and seeking the appropriation it is not going to be that we are going to be spending that amount before 31st March.

I am very grateful for everything that hon. Members have said in support of this Bill for an appropriation and today is an important day in the life of the university because although we have taken steps in creating the company and in telling the public what it is that we are doing, it is when we vote the appropriation that we really are going to give life to this place of learning in our nation.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to appropriate further sums of money to the service of the year ending on 31st day of March 2015 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

With the appropriation having been carried, I think that I am allowed, as a member of the previous generation, for me this is a red letter day indeed. It is something almost undreamt of.

Clerk: The Supplementary Appropriation (2014/2015) Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Supplementary Appropriation (2014/2015) Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Public Health (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: 3. A Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to 190 move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

195 Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment No. 2) Act 2014.

Public Health (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill makes a minor amendment to the Public Health Act with the intention of inserting a new section 252(A), to allow for the introduction of regulation making powers to provide for the naming 200 and numbering of premises in Gibraltar and for the creation and administration of an official register of addresses.

Mr Speaker, there are a number of lists of addresses in Government Departments and Agencies, Parliament being one for the Register of Electors, Land Property Services, the Health Authority and so on, and it has emerged, particular in these days of GIS and wanting to have everything in an electronic format, 205 that these lists do not all coincide. Therefore it is our intention to issue regulations so that we can have an official register of addresses and we can rationalise the naming and numbering of streets and premises in Gibraltar.

It is for this very practical purpose that I commend the Bill to the House.

210 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, only to say that we will be supporting the Bill.

215 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Public Health be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Public Health (Amendment No. 2) Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Public Health (Amendment No. 2) Bill 2014 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

220 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Trustees (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

225 Clerk: No. 4. A Bill for an Act to amend the Trustees Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill for an Act to amend the Trustees Act be read a first time.

230 Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Trustees Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Trustees (Amendment) Act 2014.

Trustees (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

235 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill remedies what we consider to be an omission in the current Trustees Act, which has been brought to the Government's attention by members of the industry. In fact, it was first brought to our attention by the Chairman of the Bar Council and then we consulted members of the industry including 240 STEP, the Society of Trustees and Estate Practitioners, and they agreed with the proposal of the Chairman of the Bar Council.

In the United Kingdom, the Trustee Act contains section 61 which provides a power for a court when dealing with cases involving breach by trustees, to relieve the trustee wholly or partially from personal liability, provided that the trustee has acted honestly and reasonably.

245 This power has been part of the UK since the Judicial Trustee Act 1896. An equivalent section is contained in section 378 of the current Companies Act, which is section 477 of the new Companies Act, protecting directors in similar circumstances.

The Government is in agreement with the proposal made by the industry that this omission should be remedied and this Bill does this by means of inserting a new section 19A into the Trustees Act in the same terms as the UK provision.

250 I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

255 I now put the question which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Trustees Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Trustees (Amendment) Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Trustees (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 260 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today. (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Perpetuities and Accumulations (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

265 Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986.
The Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986 be read a first time.
270

Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986 be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Perpetuities and Accumulations (Amendment) Act 2014.

Perpetuities and Accumulations (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

275 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986 be read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this is the first of several pieces of legislation connected broadly to the private client industry that the Government will be introducing in the coming months. The impetus for this package of 280 legislation has come from the financial services industry, including the trust sector in Gibraltar, with the backing of the Gibraltar Finance Centre Council.

As a result, the Government has put in place a comprehensive action plan to engage actively, systematically and decisively to address the industry's proposals for reform, many of which have languished for some years.

285 Mr Speaker, the Bill to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986 that is before Parliament today accomplishes this in two principal objectives. Firstly, it provides for an increase from 100 to 250 years in the maximum period applicable to a disposition under the rule against perpetuities, where a perpetuity period is specified in an instrument. This increase means that interest created by the instrument would be able to vest more remotely than is the case at present.

290 I should add that the Bill is not merely prospective in achieving this reform. It will also allow for dispositions made prior to the commencement, to be amended by deed so as to take advantage of the increased perpetuity period.

Secondly, Mr Speaker, the Bill abolishes the rule against accumulations altogether for all trusts, except for charitable trusts, for which a maximum period of 21 years will now be stipulated, subject to the 295 exceptions in section 16(4). This follows the consensus in developed trust jurisdictions, that the rule restricting accumulations seldom serves any good public policy purpose in private arrangements, but to the contrary, does serve a good purpose in respect of charities, and that the latter should spend their income on charitable purposes and not retain it indefinitely.

300 Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

305 Hon. D J Bossino: No, Mr Speaker, other than to indicate that equally as we have done in relation to the amendments to the Trustees Act, we will also be supporting this Bill.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1986 be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against?
Carried.

310 Clerk: The Perpetuities and Accumulations (Amendment) Act 2014.

COMMITTEE STAGE AND THIRD READING

Perpetuities and Accumulations (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

315

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Smoke Free Environment Act 2012 and for connected purposes. The Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

320

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 and for connected purposes be read a first time.

325

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 and for connected purposes be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Act 2014.

Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved

330

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, I beg to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Smoke-Free Environment Act of 2012 and for connected purposes be read a second time.

Mr Speaker, this Bill amends the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 so as to create an exception to the general prohibition of smoking.

335

This exception permits smoking in certain parts of premises covered by a gaming operator's licence in specified circumstances and sets out that parts of the premises whereby smoking is permitted, under this provision, shall not attract the additional discount introduced in accordance with section 277B of the Public Health Act.

340

Mr Speaker, there is currently only one gaming operator's licence in operation in Gibraltar and it relates to the land-based casino in Ocean Village. As the premises is one in respect of which a licence authorising the sale by retail of alcohol for consumption on the premises has effect, the power in the Act to make an exception by means of secondary legislation cannot be used. As such, it is necessary to make the change by means of a Bill.

345

Mr Speaker, by way of background, the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 imposed a prohibition on smoking in certain enclosed places that are open to the public or used as a place of work, so as to ensure that the public have access to breathing clean air throughout Gibraltar.

350

The Act contains a number of exceptions which include: (a) designated bedrooms in a hotel, guest house, inn or hostel, being rooms set apart exclusively for sleeping accommodation, designated in writing by the person having the charge of the premises in which the room is situated as being a room in which smoking is permitted, which have a ceiling and, except for doors and windows, is completely enclosed on all sides by solid floor to ceiling walls, which have a ventilation system but does not ventilate into any other part of the premises except any other designated bedrooms, do not have any door that opens onto premises where smoking is prohibited which is not mechanically closed immediately after use and which are clearly marked as bedrooms in which smoking is permitted; (b) bedrooms or smoking rooms in care homes, 355 hospices, prisons and hospitals under the Mental Health Act with similar criteria to those for designated hotel rooms; (c) specified areas of specialist tobacconist shops, again which meet similar criteria.

The criteria included in this Bill for the designation of parts of premises covered by a gaming operator's licence go further than the requirements for similar exceptions already in existence under the Act: that part of the premises must: (1) have a ceiling and, except for doors and windows, is completely enclosed on all sides by solid floor to ceiling walls; (2) does not have a ventilation system that ventilates into any smoke-free premises; (3) does not have any door that opens onto smoke-free premises which is not mechanically closed immediately after use; and (4) be clearly marked as premises in which smoking is permitted.

360 Additionally, the part of the premises must be approved for the purposes of the section by the Minister with responsibility for Gambling, in consultation with the Minister with responsibility for Health and the Director of Public Health, and the approval is subject to conditions.

365 There are mandatory conditions which must be included in any approval and these are: (a) notwithstanding any licence which would otherwise have effect, the sale by retail of alcohol for consumption on the premises is not permitted within part of the establishment to which the approval relates; and (b) the part of the establishment to which the approval relates has a ventilation system approved for the purposes of this section by the Minister with responsibility for Gambling in consultation with the Minister with responsibility for Health and the Director of Public Health.

370 There is also the power, Mr Speaker, to add further conditions to the approval as the Minister with responsibility for Gambling deems appropriate.

I commend this Bill to the House.

375

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the principles and merits of the Bill?

380 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the Opposition will be abstaining on the proposed amendment to the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 essentially because what this amendment shows is the complete incompetence of the current Government when discussing and weighing up the pros and cons of draft legislation in the first place.

385 Back in September 2012, the Minister which was assigned by the Government to drive the current law, the Hon. Dr John Cortes, stated in his speech of the Second Reading, right at the beginning, the following words and I quote:

‘following the trend in many other countries and, indeed, a campaign led for several years in Gibraltar by several people, notably Mr Bryan Zammit, there was a feeling in the community that we should catch up with the rest of the world and introduce legislation that would make the environment within premises and public vehicles free from smoke.’

So we are entitled to ask the Minister now, having joined the rest of the world as a result of the legislation proposed then by the Minister for Health and Environment, have we now descended back to that part of the world that does not take health and environmental matters seriously?

390 Again in his speech, the Minister for Health and the Environment stated, that exceptions would only be given to performance in a play where the artistic integrity of the performance makes it appropriate for the person to smoke.

So in accordance with the new dawn of environmental standards of this Government as stated by the Minister for Health and the Environment then, quote:

‘in that we have gone the whole hog, so to speak.’

395 – grand words from a Minister who early in his tenure in Government wanted to show that he was an environmental warrior, with a radical, bold, no-nonsense approach to his responsibility as a Health and Environment Minister, one where the environment comes first and business second.

400 The Chief Minister, not content to allow his Minister to take all the credit for this crusade among the environmental lobby of the time, also wanted to cash in the votes of this group. He could not help himself, having a jibe against the GSD Opposition by accusing us of not protecting the workers in private clubs and restaurants. This was a beauty contest between the Minister for Health and the Environment and the Chief Minister, in order to ingratiate themselves for the medals to be placed on their chests for those who fought for the legislation in the first place.

405 So what has happened here, Mr Speaker? Well, let me say so in plata and not in meaningless, lawyerish gobbledegook. The Government in the form of the Minister for Gambling has had a shock by having a representative of the casino threaten him that either the Government introduces the exception to the general law applied in the existing legislation or they will pack their bags and go. These kinds of threats are not new in this industry and it happens throughout the world.

410 However, one would have thought that given the tone and manner in which the Government proceeded within existing legislation at the time, and with the health and environmental fanfare it went to make maximalist statement at the time, that they would have had the strength and conviction to tell the gaming industry where to get off. Yet this so-called environmentalist and socialist Government collapses at the first hurdle. Gone is the environmental filter. The only filter to this amendment is to be provided by the Minister for Gaming, the Hon. Albert Isola. He will be the judge to decide now whether there will be more 415 exceptions to the rule, and the Minister for Health and the Environment will simply play second fiddle to the wishes of big business.

Mr Speaker, at the committee stage of the then Bill in 2012, the Minister for Health and Environment stated in response to my colleague the Hon. Isobel Ellul-Hammond, who had then asked if there was a particular policy with regard to guidelines for future exceptions to the rules under clause 11(1), the Minister responded by saying he would have to consider the advice of the person who is qualified in this area, the 420 Director of Health. In other words, the remit and the focus for consideration when the Bill was being drafted was that this was to be a health and environmentalist approach to smoking in public places and nothing else.

I clearly remember, Mr Speaker, when I was a Government Minister I had several conversations with the Director of Health then, and he was always adamant that smoking in public places was wrong and that it should be banned. He was categorical and unequivocal. The question is whether anything has happened since December 2012 that would have changed his mind so dramatically, if indeed he has changed his 425 views now.

Clearly this is a significant humiliation for the Minister for Health and the Environment, no matter how he may wish to disguise this under the so-called collective ministerial responsibility. If he still has the moral conviction for his principle that he so vehemently professes to have, the very least he should do is to abstain in the vote, otherwise it is another step in losing the confidence of the health and environmental lobby.

Mr Speaker, in politics you cannot run with the hare and hunt with the hound. The Government cannot pretend to be environmental warriors, go preaching around the world that we are world leaders in health and environment and then capitulate at the first hurdle of business opposition.

435 This amendment brought today to Parliament is the fruit of adopting popular schemes for the purpose of getting votes and then turning their backs to those who deposited that trust for the policy they advocated at the last election. It is a mess, hanging around the necks of the Members in Government and we in the Opposition will have nothing to do with this mess.

Thank you.

440

Several Members: Hear, hear! (Banging on desks)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Very entertaining, Mr Speaker – very entertaining!

445 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, what an extraordinary statement this House has just received! To accuse the Government of incompetence and not taking health and the environment seriously, and I am sure there will be others here who will be able to defend the Government's position better than I.

But one has to wonder in the last two and a half years, the last two years and ten months, which planet 450 has the hon. Member been living in? Has he not seen what we have done? Has he not seen what we stand for? Does he not know, like the rest of Gibraltar knows, that this Government's credentials on the environment are second to none and have never been seen in Gibraltar before? Does he not know about this Government being a modern and progressive Government that gives the environment the priority that it deserves?

455 Does he not know that this Government has always accepted that it has a moral responsibility and not just a legal responsibility, (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks) because there are many directives that say exactly what we need to do? And we do these things, not because they are our legal duty, but because it is right that we should do so.

460 We have done so and we have shown so by our actions and we will continue to do so for all the time that we are in office. It is in fact a pity, Mr Speaker, that the hon. Members did not do the same when they were in office.

Several Members: Hear, hear! (Banging on desks)

465 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, what my hon. Friend, Mr Netto has said is absolutely right, (Interjection) in the sense that this has been... The Hon. the Minister who has moved this Bill and I had a debate in the press during the course of summer and the basic point that we made is that this is very clearly – and this is something which the hon. Members opposite cannot conceivably deny – that this is a shift in 470 position as stated during the course of the General Election. Indeed, it is a breach of what they said in their magna carta, their manifesto.

Their manifesto very clearly states, and I quote:

‘We will introduce a ban on smoking in enclosed public places in Gibraltar’.

Well they clearly have resiled from this and indeed possibly, possibly, the same points and the same case could have been made when the Hon. the Minister for the Environment moved a Bill which is now the Act, in its original form when it was littered with exemptions and indeed, a general enabling provision which is section 11, which gives the Minister the power to pass regulations to provide for further exemptions.

475 He is already on record in this House indeed only in this session, as saying that he intends not to make provision for further exemptions to the smoking ban. But yet here, what we have is a resilement of that position and it is very clear that that is the case. Perhaps, Mr Speaker, and as I think the Hon. Mr Netto was saying, the basis on which this amendment is being moved is in effect an economic and a business case.

480 The Hon. the Minister when he issued his press release said very clearly that it is in order to ensure the continuing viability of this one particular economic entity, the one casino in Gibraltar, and to make it, to allow it to continue to be fit for purpose. And the point that I made during the course of the debate through the press was, well surely, if there is going to be that resilement from the puritan position of principle, which is no smoking in public places, then surely the same opportunity ought to be allowed to other businesses to make the same case to the Government.

485 Why is our primary legislation being allowed to be amended in order for one particular business to continue to be viable and fit for purpose? Why is it not the case that other businesses – other restaurants for example, other bars – should not also be given the opportunity to make the same case to the Government and allow them, with all the conditions and safety requirements and all the rest of it – separate rooms, no cross ventilation, all those conditions – so long as a business can say, ‘I have the facilities to provide this service and I want to provide this facility, this service to my clientele’ – no alcohol will be sold in that section, all the rest of it, why cannot another business make the same case?

490 And clearly they have, in my view, opened the floodgates. If they are a Government which has resiled from its position of principle, then they should do so, not only in respect of one business, not only in respect of this one casino, but also they should also give the same opportunity to other businesses. That is the point that I wish to make, Mr Speaker.

495 Other than that, I understand what the Hon. the Minister says, and I give him the opportunity to correct me if I am wrong, that the section 11 procedure was not available to him – or rather to the Minister for the Environment – to make regulations because this particular premises is licensed to sell alcohol. I think that is the point he made in his delivery and if I am wrong, then I would ask him to correct me.

But I make the same point: if there are premises which are other premises, other businesses which are licensed to sell alcohol, why cannot they make the same case to the Government?

505 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, that is precisely and very eloquently and concisely the reason why the Opposition cannot support the Bill.

The Opposition would have wanted to come to this House, despite the criticisms made by the Hon. Mr Netto – well-made criticisms, political criticisms – would have wanted to come to this House and say, despite those criticisms in the volte face, the very clear U-turn that the Government has done in relation to this, the Opposition is nonetheless going to be voting in favour of this Bill.

510 But the reason why we are abstaining – not voting against, but abstaining – is because of the inherent inequity of having a situation where other businesses in Gibraltar cannot meet the same threshold, the same conditions as this particular business and be allowed exactly the same opportunity. It is a question of fairness and that is the reason we cannot support this Bill and that is the reason why we are abstaining.

515 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: And if I could just add, Mr Speaker, my small grain of thought – I was never in great, greatly in favour of the abolition of smoking in the first place, I thought it would bring problems of this sort in its wake and it has taken just a little bit longer than I imagined it would to emerge – but now that one has got used to a smoke-free regime, I suppose one should be grateful to the Hon. the Minister for the Environment for having had the courage to introduce it in the first place, because actually it does improve many environments. (Banging on desks)

520 But what I would like the hon. Member to answer – yes, the Hon. the Minister for Gambling – obviously there is an element of tension in the very drafting of this Bill. Here is an amendment to a Bill that was moved by the Environment Ministry, the amendment is moved by the Minister for Gambling because it affects gambling institution, but he still has to consult with the Minister for Health. Well, we know what the Minister for Health and Environment’s views are: he expressed them when he moved the principal Bill. So ‘consult’ means saying that you are going to do it and doing it, whatever he says. I mean, that is what consult means and that is fine, that is what consult means.

530 My point is this: can the Hon. Minister just address this point in his reply, that before the position was clear, the Government has made a policy decision with which some people may agree, others may disagree but it is a perfectly legitimate policy decision, that workers and other users of public services, or services delivered in public places, should be protected from the potential dangers and discomforts of so-called passive smoking.

535 Is the position therefore now that that policy has been modified to read ‘most but not all workers’ and ‘most but not all consumers of services delivered in public places’? Because of course the workers who work in whatever premises are subsequently given the benefit of this, they, will not enjoy the benefit of the Government’s policy to protect workers from passive smoking, and the non-smoking users of the casino in future will not – (Interjection) although for the non-smoking users, I accept it is easier to accommodate because they can do it in a smoking room and non-smoking room – they can have smoking rooms and non-smoking rooms – but for the workers, I suppose it could be done on the basis of volunteers.

540 But still, does the Government fear that this might undermine their more moral basis of the original policy, which is that the Government had decided, rightly or wrongly that this was something that all workers should benefit and all consumers should benefit?

545 Hon. Chief Minister: Well Mr Speaker, I have heard some extraordinary things in the House in the time that I have been here, but none perhaps quite as extraordinary as the ones that I have heard this afternoon from the Hon. Mr Netto.

This morning, when I was absent from the Chamber, Mr Netto told the world from, I assume, a sedentary position like he is now, on that social media that we know as Twitter, that – and I quote him –

‘Once again when we have a parliamentary session without the CM the exchanges are without hostility and respect’.

550 I think he meant ‘without hostility and with respect’, (Laughter) but I will assume that the 140 characters that Twitter affords one did not enable him to clarify that.

555 Well, Mr Speaker, I was sitting very comfortably and had not shown any measure of hostility or disrespect to anyone this afternoon, when we were subjected to what I must say was probably one of the most incredible political attacks that I have heard in the past two and a half years since I was in Opposition, Mr Speaker – because of course when we were in Opposition, we were subjected to all sorts of political attacks.

560 But this was quite something, we were just cashing in votes, we were trading jibes, we were putting ourselves up for a beauty contest. Threatening, was what the casino had done to us, that they would pack their bags and go and we were therefore so-called environmentalists, if we had allowed ourselves to have our arms twisted, and so-called socialists. Well, not a Friday afternoon without hostility and with much respect then.

565 But you see hon. Members opposite need to understand where it is that they are placed in order to be able to launch criticism of the Government. They are representatives of a political party that was in Government for 16 years – the 16 years during which the campaign led by many people, including the individual that hon. Members mentioned in order no doubt to try and curry some favour with him – and yet they did nothing about it.

So the hon. the former Chief Minister has said that he did not agree with the principle and thought it could bring problems. Fair enough, that was their policy, but they had 16 years to take a puritan road or a non-puritan road and took no road. (Interjection)

570 And then the Hon. Mr Bossino says this is all a U-turn, it is a volte face, as the Leader of the Opposition put it, because your manifesto said you would introduce a ban on smoking in public places and now you have gone on to introduce exemptions to that, and therefore that is a U-turn because your policy, if it is, that you are going to ban smoking in public places, full stop, cannot then admit of exemptions. Did I understand that point right? I think I understood it right; he is nodding his head and it was very clear.

575 Well, Mr Speaker, you see sometimes one has to be careful how one articulates one’s arguments because page 47 of the GSD manifesto for the 2011 General Election sets out their policy and it is as follows:

‘We will ban smoking in enclosed public places.’

– full stop. And then it carries on, a new sentence:

‘In private clubs the decision will be left to the members. Restaurants and bars which operate fully isolated and separately ventilated smoking rooms through which other customers do not have to pass may allow smoking in them. We will make available measures to help people stop smoking.’

580 So it is obviously perfectly compatible to say we will ban smoking in enclosed public places and yet provide for some exemptions – which appears to be what the Hon. Mr Bossino now thinks is entirely contrary to the principle of banning smoking in public places. Now they would have done it in all of those instances and we said we would not do it.

585 Now just to link what Mr Bossino has said to the questions that Sir Peter has asked, how are we going to do it? Well, the mechanisms that will have to be put in place in order to comply with the legislation will mean that there will be an enclosed place into which no worker will have to wander until after all customers and all smoking has passed. We consulted with Unite before we were prepared to approve a mechanism that allowed this.

590 Therefore workers will be not be exposed to smoke and individuals who do not wish to accompany somebody else into the smoke do not have to be exposed to the smoke. The smoking area will be very much like the sort of enclosures that one sees at an airport. They will be absolutely awful places to go into, where all you will be able to do is smoke and play on a one-armed bandit.

595 So what we have done is we have achieved the objective that we set out to achieve and continue to steer the course to ensure it is achieved for many generations to come. Children, young people, those who do not wish to be exposed to smoke, and workers who might involuntarily be exposed to smoke because they have to work and may not have a choice, will never have to be exposed to smoke.

600 The only people who will be exposed to smoke are those who want to play on a one-armed bandit whilst they smoke, and they will not have any of the appurtenances of being in a commercial establishment that one might otherwise enjoy. They will not be able to eat and drink. They will not be able to do any of that and they will have no service in there, and no worker will go in there until long after the place has closed down. When it is closed down, it will be a messy place, it will be a stinking place. I certainly will not be going in there, but we are told that there is a business case for it.

605 And because that business case, done in that way, does not defeat the primary objective, therefore we are prepared to come to this House and allow it. That is not the sort of thing that they were prepared to allow but clearly, it is within the concept of banning smoking in enclosed public places full stop. And when the hon. Member goes back to Hansard and sees what he said and how he said it, he will see how what we are saying is within what it is that he suggested. (Interjection)

610 Mr Speaker – if he wants, I will finish and then give way before I sit down – in explaining that we have done a volte face therefore, hon. Members should have spent a little bit more time trying to understand what it is that we are doing, because the type of environment that will be created and the types of places in which it falls to be created, are places where there is no chance that a young person or a child will be remotely near the opportunity to have smoke blown anywhere near them. Casinos are casinos. You could describe them, even without trying to be in any way negative about them, as a place of vice, if one considers gaming a vice.

615 So in a place of vice, where already entry is to an extent restricted, in a particular corner, in a particular place, where workers will not have to enter, where children have no chance to go, those who enter in my view, to use a legal term – some of that gobbledegook that the hon. Member has referred to earlier – those who enter will be absolute ‘volents’. They will be absolute ‘volents’. They will be volunteers – and I will give way to Sir Peter as well before I sit down – volunteers to be inhaling that smoke because they wish to be in that very tight environment which will only have one-armed bandits and other smokers in it.

620 Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to give way at this point both to the Leader of the Opposition and to Sir Peter.

625 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Well, it is very reassuring, if I can say, that the hon. Member has... I mean it would have helped if that had been explained in the presentation of the policy. It is all very well to complain that we have not given thought as to how they were going to do it, but of course since they had not explained how they were going to do it, it can hardly have been spotted. But it is nevertheless reassuring that it will be done in a way that does not expose workers, not because we would not have exposed workers, because we would not have done this, but because it does not undermine the basis of the policy when deployed in other places.

630 In that respect, I would just urge the hon. Members to be very vigilant that this does not drift into a practice where volunteers are asked for, because hon. Members know that when your livelihood is at stake, people volunteer for things that this law is designed to protect them against being forced to volunteer for, in terms of workers. That is the first point.

And the second point, if the Hon. the Chief Minister will forgive me, I will read his answer in Hansard, is whether he does not accept that the very same things that he has said, to in my mind sufficiently justify – if it is carried out in the way that he has described – these exemptions, why that might not be applied to other businesses if they can meet the same high standards of ring fencing.

640 In other words, I know he has made the point that casinos are places in which children are unlikely to be found, if there was another sort of business in which it is unlikely that children or in circumstances where children could never be found and that people who did not want to smoke did not have to go – in other words, there was a no smoking area equally, and all the sort of things that he has just said and that workers would not have to go into – would the Government then feel that a case might be made by those, and if the 645 Government does not feel, what would they say to such businessmen who then would not understand the distinction that was being made against them?

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I was going to make the last point that the Hon. Sir Peter has made, but in addition, I would ask for this clarification from the Hon. the Chief Minister: I do not know how these 650 games work. I have never gone to a casino in my life, but is what the Hon. the Chief Minister saying that under no circumstances at all will there be any members of staff in this enclosure – for example, even in the dealing of cards? So that is not applicable – nothing at all, it just applies effectively to machines, one-armed bandit and that is all?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me try and deal with the first point that the Hon. the former Chief Minister made, the volunteers. This is an issue that is very live in the debate with Unite on this issue. They pointed this issue out as well. We were keen to ensure that there was no question of people being sought to be volunteers, because in an employment situation there is potentially no such thing as a volunteer. Therefore, that is an issue that has been taken up directly with the Union and the casino and something in 660 which the Union will be very vigilant and the casino, and we will be very vigilant of as well. (Interjection) Indeed, and the licence will be issued in those terms, because what we are concerned about is that even with licences issued in those terms, there are sometimes those who will suggest that they were not even asked by their bosses to do it, but they are just trying to... So there will be a requirement that employees not be allowed in, so it is the other way round.

665 So, if I can just ask hon. Members to imagine, in order to be able to deal with the next point more effectively, the type of enclosure that they see in an airport – and it will be a glass enclosure. It will literally be a smoking pit in the casino, a fish bowl, with the glass all the way to the ceiling, with air-conditioning systems sucking out, up and down, the smoke, and only one-armed bandits in it.

That seems to be something that really you can only imagine in a casino and people need to be pretty 670 hooked on what they are doing. I query whether these sorts of places should exist, but they exist and we licence them and we are the biggest territory in the world in terms of the on-line emanation of them, but look, we cannot be looking out for everybody all the time. We are not a nanny state. So there are people who go to casinos, there are people who like to play slot machines and there are people who smoke, so we are providing that sort of environment. In my view, it is going to be a place where nobody is going to want to enter, but I am told that many people will wish to enter it, despite the smoke, despite the sucking 675 ventilation system, despite the glass, all the rest of it. So be it.

Mr Speaker, in that context, what other type of service might be offered in that way? We are not talking about going down the route hon. Members talked about going down, which was to have the smoking and non-smoking areas in restaurants. We do not believe that works. Although it was in their manifesto, we do 680 not believe that works. We do not believe that even in private clubs you can have this without exposing workers, so we are not going down that road.

So I suppose somebody might be able to make an argument that they could drop a hamburger into that sort of enclosure as if it were a sort of drive-through, smoke-through, but it is not reasonable to think that other businesses would be able to create enclosures of this sort, subject to this strict level of regulation 685 which might be able to survive without employees in them or something because you have to have delivery of a thing into there.

So we are very confident, Mr Speaker, that therefore what we are doing is designed to deal with something which we did not foresee.

If I can then take the hon. Gentleman to his final point, although we do not think that it is possible to 690 deliver any other service in this type of smoking environment, look, the door is not going to be closed because there are more things thought of in my philosophy than perhaps Horatio has thought of. So it maybe that somebody comes up with something else where you have other opportunities for employees not to be exposed to the same type of ventilation and all of those issues to be dealt with.

None of them are the ones, if I may so, with respect to the hon. Member, are the ones which are set out 695 in the paragraph of their manifesto – in other words, it is not the restaurant, it is not a sort of private club. All of those we think expose employees in a different way. This is so constrained and so designed that when people see it, if perhaps somebody has heard half of this debate and goes away thinking the GSD is right, the GSLP has done a volte face this is really terrible, when they turn up in the casino and they see this enclosure, they will think, ‘Oh no, my kids are absolutely safe. I am absolutely safe. Anybody who does not want to be exposed to smoke is absolutely safe.’

700 This is never going to be... as I think hon. Members have given away by the questions they have asked, in particular the Leader of the Opposition, that this was going to be perhaps an area of table gaming which might be a smoking area etc. This is not going to be anything like that. This is a glass cage, really of the sort where I would ask even smokers not to go into.

705 A final – yes?

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Except, Mr Speaker, that that is how they intend to implement this. What the Hon. the Chief Minister is explaining, is how the Minister intends, on this occasion and perhaps this Minister on every occasion, to exercise that discretion. But the law is not so curtailed. The law is not limited to the situations which he has described and that really is...

710 But look, to the extent that it is implemented in the way that he is describing, I do not think – (Interjections)

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that and the guiding principle here is public health, and the guidance of the Public Health Authority is that nobody should be exposed to smoke and therefore it really is designed to comply with that advice so that the way that we intend to do it is really the only way you can do it, so that only the ‘volents’ are subject to the smoke, because only they then go in there.

Mr Speaker – (Injection)

720 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, I am not making a position on the basis of public health because I would not even have offered even this degree of public health protection. We would not have done even this in terms of the prohibition.

My angle of concern is in a sense legal discrimination – in other words, that some businesses should be allowed to benefit from a certain piece of legislation, a certain regime, and others not. I think what the hon. Member has said, which I find satisfactory for the purpose is that if there are other businesses that, unbeknown to him or that he cannot now imagine, nevertheless meet the same requirements, that the Government are as open in those businesses as they will be with the criteria that they intend to apply to this business, they would be happy to apply to other businesses who can comply with the same criteria, and that certainly deals with my discrimination concerns.

Hon. Chief Minister: Thank you, I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

In fact, I would put it the other way: we will be not as open to their proposal; we will be as harsh in testing it as we have been on this occasion to ensure that there is absolutely no potential leakage or seepage, not just of smoke but of exposure to workers, etc.

735 Now, seen in that light, what I would invite the hon. Members to do, given that it appears that they had a different view of what was happening to what I have now been able to satisfy them on, to reconsider whether they do want to abstain on this or whether, given that they have the comfort that nobody is going to be exposed to smoke, that we achieve the primary objective and continue to steer the course in respect of that primary objective, that they should consider carefully whether in fact they want to abstain on this.

740 To an extent I put it to them, Mr Speaker, that the speeches that they have given are not speeches for abstention; they are speeches for voting against the measure. They did not, in my view, Mr Speaker, speak in a way that suggested that they had any reason for abstaining. Everything they said suggested that they would wish to object.

The Hon. Mr Bossino wants to say something and I will allow him to do so.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. the Chief Minister. There is one practical point which arises in my mind as to the exposure of... or rather the ability of workers to go into the enclosed area. As I understand the position, certainly the press release says that they will not be required to enter the ‘fish bowl’ – as I think the Hon. the Chief Minister has put it – and it means that if they want to they can, I suppose they are free to enter. But what about if there are circumstances when they have to go in because, I do not know, there is a fight going on, security needs to go in? You see, he scoffs but actually this is a practical situation which could arise.

750 So in other words, what I am saying is that, is it possible to have this sort of panacea that the Hon. the Chief Minister is trying to conjure up in our minds, which is that it is only very exceptional – in fact it is not exceptional circumstances; nobody can go in, he is saying, other than those who want to smoke and play the one armed bandits. So I am putting that practical situation to him and whether he can address it.

760 The other point, just to end, is in my view, Mr Speaker, I think there is a world of difference. Therefore the point that my hon. Friend has made, Mr Netto, and I made in my speech, which is that this is a climb down if you like from the position as stated in the manifesto. It still stands because there is a world of difference between what our position was in our manifesto, which the Hon. the Chief Minister has read, and theirs.

765 They did not go beyond the smoking ban without any exceptions in all public places. That was their position, full stop. There was nothing after that. (Interjection) Yes, no but then we go into the exceptions that we would have introduced – that is part of our policy. So I do not think, in all honesty, that that particular argument, although he expresses it as usual with all the confidence, can stand, to be honest, and I would encourage him – I know he will not – but I would encourage him to admit that it does not.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, well, I did not give way to allow him to make the same argument as he had made before, but I will deal with it first.

770 Mr Speaker, look, if he is saying that a blanket statement – we will ban smoking in enclosed public spaces, which is the one we have and they have – does not admit of exemptions, we have it without exemptions, they have it and then with exemptions following, then they did the volte face in the same document! In the same paragraph of their first manifesto, their 2011 manifesto, they have both things. That which he says is absolute and not admitting of exemptions and the exemptions. So is it that there is a volte face within the paragraph?

775 Look, I put it to him that there is not and that what we are doing now, although they can try... And I see politically the point that they are trying to make. This is an attempt to make hay because they think we are doing a bit of a U-turn, there is a lobby out there, and they are going to give it a go. Fine, fair enough, that is politics – but let us be clear that that is what it is, and that when people turn up in the casino to see this ‘dreadful volte face’ that we have done, they will see this pit that no right-minded individual would ever want to go into and they will say this is no volte face at all. This is the most properly thought-out policy that there could have been in order to satisfy this requirement which apparently there is, without failing to continue to steer the proper and appropriate course and achieve the objective.

780 Words describe an objective and what I am saying to the hon. Gentleman is the words in the manifesto were set out there to achieve an objective and we have achieved the objective, and we continue to achieve the objective, even persuading those who were not persuaded before. Because the Hon. the former Chief Minister has said that he was not persuaded before, but after we took the action, he is now persuaded and happy, and would have done it before, and he said so himself. So I think that is a very good way of seeing how the effect of the measure has worked.

790 And Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition wants to –

Mr Speaker: Could I ask the Hon. the Chief Minister not to give way any more? Because the whole purpose of giving way – (Laughter) No, hon. Members have got it wrong. They do not know what the rules are.

795 Whoever is holding the floor should give way in a debate – and that is what we are having here, a debate – for points of clarification, not for continuing to come up with new points or for continuing to argue the toss. It is for clarification only. In the nature of a personal statement of clarification, but not for toing and froing in the way that hon. Members have been doing this afternoon.

800 I had noted it before, but I think that this afternoon it is becoming an abuse and therefore I ask the Chief Minister to give way on this last occasion, but please no more.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well Mr Speaker, the other point that Mr Bossino made – 805 Mr Speaker: And the other point that I ought to make is that in Committee, Members have an opportunity, when considering any particular clause, to cover some of the similar ground again. So it is not that their right to speak is being curtailed, but I think we must not abuse the rules of debate.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that guidance.

810 I think the first point that Mr Bossino made was a point of clarification and I will deal with it now. I do not think the second one was, for the reasons I pointed out and if the Leader of the Opposition wants to make a point based on clarification, I will give way to him now, before I deal with the other point for Mr Bossino.

815 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, the point that I was going to be making about this is it does not alleviate the concerns of the point that I have made and the point that Mr Bossino has made, in the sense that obviously these exemptions are just limited to the gaming industry.

If what you had was a general exemption – in other words, exactly the same wording but it said, ‘If a business fulfils the following conditions – bang, bang, bang – and then has in its licence certain conditions, then they could offer effectively this service’, I think we would have supported it, despite all the other political criticisms about the fact that this is a volte face. Those are political points in the thrust of the debate, but we would have been in a position to support it.

The reality is, there is nothing here – and I would like the Chief Minister to confirm there is nothing here – that actually allows the Government – I may be wrong and maybe he can clarify that – to actually grant an exemption wider than in the gaming sector. In other words, this is not a situation where the Government is introducing a list of conditions for the granting of an exemption outside this particular gaming operator’s situation.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me deal with that point first. There is no provision for non-gaming operators to have such an exemption, but as I have said to Sir Peter, if we were to receive representations from another sector where we could be persuaded that it were possible to provide services in this way, we might be persuaded to come back and make a further amendment.

What I would say to the hon. Gentleman is, as I have said and is now on Hansard, our minds are not closed to that, but representations have not been made by any group or by anybody or by any business, that has persuaded us that this is possible, other than by the operator of a casino. A casino has a particular type of business that it does, which as I said before could be described as one of vice, etc, so it is not a general place to which many people have access. It is a very particular place and it is not a place where children can wander, etc. So we are not minded to change that, but it is now on Hansard and the hon. Members have the benefit of it on Hansard, that we are prepared to consider any other type of business that might approach us.

Now, the other point is the point made by Mr Bossino, whether there would be no circumstances in which an employee might enter such a part of the premises. Well, we have looked at everything that could happen in the context of the business. But of course what we have not done is say in the context of an emergency, no-one would be able to enter. I mean if somebody sees a person having a heart attack or what appears to be a heart attack and out of the kindness of their heart, they wish to go in there and try and pull them out or treat them, or if there is a fire and somebody wants to go in there to pull someone out – and we are not talking about a fireman, we are talking about an employee who is seeing this happen – well look, I am sure that in those circumstances somebody might enter.

But it is clear that employees are not going to be able to enter to provide service, to service machines if a machine has got stuck and money is stuck inside. There will be cameras and there will be remote monitoring of machines so that those things can be dealt with by a central cashier. The employee will not have to enter.

So I think I can satisfy the hon. Gentleman that, other than in absolute extremis in the sort of way that none of us are to touch the Mace, but if I saw that somebody was having a heart attack over there and I run to try and help them I might touch the Mace in the process of doing so, we are not supposed to cross the line here, but if somebody were having a problem here, I am sure the officer would come and try and give us first aid.

So other than in extremis, there is no circumstance in which an employee will enter that area. Therefore I think they should have the satisfaction that this Bill does not open floodgates, this Bill is actually designed to ensure that in particular circumstances, a particular type of business is able to provide this service in a way that is purposely not attractive, purposely avoids any employee having to enter there, purposely ensures that there is full ventilation of the place in which they are and that there will be no escape of smoke to the general area.

We have therefore, as I said before, in the original Bill achieved the purpose we set out to achieve and this does not in any way waiver that fact, does not in any way turn us away from that fact. In the two and a half square miles by one square mile that is our lovely land, there will be a small area, perhaps five metres by five metres, where people will be able to smoke and play a one-armed bandit – very small indeed.

But for two and a half miles by one mile, what we set out as the standard – what we the environmentalists, the socialists, the dreamers set out as the standard – remains. We steered the course and we steer her straight down the line as she goes. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Before I call the mover to reply, since there seems to be some surprise about my intervention, I am going to read out Rules of Debate 45(8):

‘A member who has spoken to a question proposed to the Parliament may again be heard, if the Speaker so permits, to explain some part of his speech which has been misunderstood; but when so speaking he shall not introduce any new matter.’

That is the Rule that applies and that Rule does not mean that any Member who holds the floor can be giving way continuously in order effectively to perpetuate a debate. That is an abuse of the Rules of Debate and that is my ruling.

875 The mover to reply. Yes?

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, just a very brief comment.

880 Clearly as Minister for Health, I would prefer no smoking anywhere by anyone. But clearly that is not realistic. I am, however, convinced that in the case of the Bill before us, with the very strict conditions and arrangements, no-one who does not want to be exposed to smoke, will be exposed to smoke. Nor will anyone who may be encouraged to smoke by seeing somebody smoking be anywhere near that area. (Banging on desks)

885 Hon. A J Isola: Yes Mr Speaker, just a couple of points. I think the major issues have been heavily debated already. I would just like to make a number of observations, Mr Speaker.

It is ironic that if anybody who would have heard the first line of the Hon. Mr Netto's speech where he said 'we will be abstaining' and then sat down and listened to the rest of it, would have been quite surprised by the ferocity of the tone, particularly in the attack on my hon. Friend, the Minister for Health and the Environment. And it is particularly surprising Mr Speaker, because he is the one individual that I have worked most with in the 18 months that I have been in Government, dealing with this specific Bill to ensure that the very protections that we are telling you about today were crafted by.

890 Therefore it just seems to me absolutely bizarre that the Hon. Mr Netto should be seeking to attack the individual who has had the most say in delivering the protective measures that this Government has come up with, to protect the very people that should not be affected by smoke that they do not wish to be affected by. That was the motive behind the original Bill and obviously the Hon. Mr Netto did not care to listen to a word I said, because I had not even finished before he trotted up and read out his prepared text which he was going to read out whatever I said, which I also find quite remarkable.

895 But if he would have cared to have listened, he would have heard me say:

'By way of background, the Smoke-Free Environment Act imposed a prohibition on smoking in certain enclosed spaces that are open to the public or used as a place of work, public places, so as to ensure that the public have access to breathing clean air throughout Gibraltar.'

900 In other words, the individual has the choice. If he wants to go to the casino and play on any of their games, he can do without having smoke in his face. That was the essence of the 2012 Act and that essence is still totally protected by the provisions of this Bill.

905 Furthermore, as we have already mentioned, now ad nauseum, the workers are also protected and when you think what is actually going to happen in this very small space, almost half a million pounds is going to be spent on ensuring that the place is enclosed, that the ventilation system that this area uses is totally separate – because that is in the legislation, if he has cared to read it, he would see it – from the area that ventilates the remainder of the premises.

910 Now, when you talk about these conditions, which leads me on to the second point, you should know that when you moved the Bill in 2012 and voted in favour of it, that you were already creating exemptions. You had exceptions already in that Bill, I assume you knew that and this is one more exception, one more exemption, which if this had been in the Bill, I am sure you would have voted in favour of it at that time. Now, I assume for political motives and to have a go at my good friend, the Minister for Health, you have chosen to act otherwise.

915 Mr Speaker, Mr Netto also said, 'I remember when I was a Minister, the Director of Health told me that smoking in public places was wrong.' Well, that is a view that all of my colleagues on this side of the House share. The difference is that they have done something about it, we have done something about it, and he never, ever did – when he had 16 years of opportunity on that side of the House to do something about it and they did not. (Several Members: Hear, hear!) (Banging on desks)

920 So to now come to this Parliament and say that the Hon. the Minister for Health, the driver of that Bill that came through so quickly in 2012, and who has worked so hard today to bring this Bill...

And let us be clear about one other point: this has not happened overnight. The application originally made was by Gala. That happened over two years ago and my hon. learned Friend the Minister for Gaming at that time was dealing with it.

925 When I was elected, it was passed to me and I carried it on. It is not as though on the whim or on the back of an envelope, we have decided to do a deal with the casino to stop them from doing what I assume the hon. Member is encouraging them to do, which is to pack their bags and go. Life is not quite that simple and decisions have to be taken which are often difficult decisions, challenging decisions. (Interjection)

Yes, of course I will.

930 Hon. D J Bossino: I know he was in full steam and I would not have wanted to, I was willing to make the point at the end of his... just before he sat down.

It is a point of clarification, yes, the Hon. Minister is absolutely right and I think I made the concession when I spoke on the Bill, that the Bill, now the Act which now he is wanting to amend did provide for exemptions. He is absolutely right. But the exemptions that we were willing to concede and therefore vote 935 in favour of are nothing of the sort that we are seeing now.

The distinction that I make is that is a business case which is being made. He said so and he has admitted during the course of his speech and also in the press releases. So that is the distinction.

The exemptions there related to private accommodation, residential accommodation, specialist 940 tobacconists and the like. In fact, the one that comes closest relates to... In other words yes, people who are in long term stay, basically where they sleep almost.

The one that comes closest is the accommodation for guests in a hotel because you could say well maybe could that have been as a result of a business case. But I do not think so. I think the common denominator in many of these things is that people are... it is basically almost like their own private accommodation where they actually sleep. So that is the distinction that I made, and I wonder if the Hon.
945 Minister would concede that that is, I think, a reasonable one to make.

Hon. A J Isola: No Mr Speaker, I am afraid I do not agree and I will explain why I do not agree.

I was making two points. The exemptions you are referring to which extend to, for example, bedrooms in a hotel. Well, workers go into a bedroom in a hotel. If you order room service and you are smoking, a 950 worker will come into that room.

So this situation is actually far, far better than the situation that you all accepted in 2012 when the Hon. Mr Netto voted in favour. So a prison, on each of the others, an inn, a hostel, there are staff involved. In this case, we have gone even further than that by ensuring that that does not happen.

So in respect of the exemption, I accept what the hon. Member has said insofar as this is concerned, the 955 2012 Act allows exceptions to be made, but not where tobacco is sold on the same premises – not the area, but the entire premises. (A Member: Alcohol.) Alcohol, I am sorry. My apologies. I am talking about smoke. Alcohol cannot be sold within the entirety of that premises, so that is why the 2012 Act actually gave even more protection by saying if it is part of a bigger establishment where there is alcohol involved, you have got to come back to Parliament.

That was the intention and that is what we are doing. So the steps that have been taken by this 960 Government in ensuring as I say after two years of discussions with the operator, who is going to invest close to half a million pounds to ensure that everyone can be as protected as they possibly can be, bearing in mind that there are smokers in there – and I do not quite have the dim view that my hon. learned the Chief Minister does, because I happen to smoke (Laughter) but this pit to which he refers, I have made my 965 damned best to make sure that it is as comfortable as it possibly can be, in case I should go there!
(Interjection)

So the extent of the protection is that if somebody does not want to have smoke in their face, which was the essence of the 2012 Act that this Parliament passed, they do not have to.

On that basis Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House. (Banging on desks)
970

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Smoke-Free Environment Act 2012 and for connected purposes be read a second time. Those in favour? (Government Members: Aye.) Those against? (Opposition Members: Abstain.) The Opposition abstain. Carried.

975 Clerk: The Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Act 2014.

Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Clauses considered and approved

1035 Clerk: The Smoke-Free Environment (Amendment) Bill 2014.
Clauses 1 and 2.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, if I may I have a letter prepared just dealing with a very minor amendment to replace ‘the Minister with responsibility for Gaming’ substituted by ‘the Minister with responsibility for Gambling’.

1040 Mr Chairman: Could I draw the attention of the hon. Member to clause 2subclause(2)small(a), the third line? It reads:

‘for consumption on the premises is not be permitted’.

1045 I think there is either – ‘is not to be permitted’ – a word missing, or ‘is not permitted’. But that does not read properly. I think there is a typographical error. In either case, the same purpose can be achieved, either by adding the word ‘to,’ ‘is not to be’ permitted, or delete ‘be’.

Hon. A J Isola: Yes Mr Chairman, if I may seek to delete the ‘be’ in the third line of clause 2subparagraph (2)(a).

Hon. J E Reyes: Likewise, Mr Chairman, perhaps, just above that on that page, where the ‘be’ is just above the ‘to’, it says:

‘the condition set out in set out in subsection (2).’ Is that...

1055 Mr Chairman: Yes, yes. There was a time when, with the Attorney General a Member of the House, he would just make a simple note of those typographical errors and they would go through the system. Now unless the Minister for Justice makes himself responsible for that, maybe and unless that happens, perhaps a small formal amendment should be moved.

Hon. J E Reyes: If I remember rightly – Mr Chairman –

1060 Mr Chairman: That takes on the responsibility of correcting typographical errors.

Hon. J E Reyes: Yes. If I remember rightly –

1065 Mr Chairman: But I think Members ought to decide whether in the case of the one that I have drawn attention to, whether the word 'to' should be added or the word 'be' deleted.

1070 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Chairman, in both cases an amendment has to be moved and passed, and then the Clerk will make sure that the final version reflects what Parliament has done.

It seems to me that we are agreed that in the case of the 'be' we just remove the 'be' in clause 2(2)(a) so that it reads:

'the sale by retail of alcohol for consumption on the premises is not permitted'.

1075 And in the previous 2, (1)(b) which says, 'the condition set out in', remove the second 'set out in' so that it reads simply:

'the condition set out in subsection (2)...'

Mr Chairman: Now the proper amendment – will the hon. Member move it, is he giving notice?

Hon. A J Isola: With pleasure, Mr Speaker.

1080 Mr Chairman: Does anybody wish to speak on the proposed amendment to clause 2. No?
All in favour? (Members: Aye.) Carried.
Clause 2 as amended stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The Long Title.

1085

Mr Chairman: Is there a clause 3? Yes, clause 3 as well, on the next page.

Clerk: Clause 3.

1090 Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Clerk: The Long Title.

Mr Chairman: Stand part of the Bill.

Questions for Oral Answer

TOURISM, COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS, PUBLIC TRANSPORT AND THE PORT

Q625/2014 Gibraltar Tourist Board – Cost of rebranding

15 Clerk: (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions. Question 625/2014, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism provide details of the cost of the rebranding of the GTB to include its web... its website? It was a heavy night last night! (Laughter)

20

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the cost of the GTB rebranding is £9,600. Included in this price is a comprehensive brand makeover. It covers guidelines and designs on: signage; vehicle livery; brochure design; website; pamphlets; stationery sets; advert examples; uniforms; name badges; press releases; exhibition stands; and souvenirs.

The cost for the rebranding of the website, including the updating of images, new layout and new copy is £31,748.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister elucidate perhaps a bit further as to why it is, if one has a look at the website, if one does a direct comparison between one and the other, the old one and the new one, all that appears to have changed is the logo. I think that is right.

Can he explain how the branding element of his Department is going to be progressing into, presumably, the near future?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is correct, we are rolling out the new identity. At this point at World Travel Market, two weeks ago now, we launched the new identity brand of the tourism site, as indeed we have launched the new Ministry logo. He will have seen that the new Government crest with the new Government branding. We have also unveiled the new Tourism logo.

As I believe I explained to the hon. Gentleman yesterday, the website is under construction and it should be ready during the course of, latest, next year, in January, and it will be launched then.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, what about the other features he talked about? I think he mentioned uniforms and matters like that. When does he expect those to be launched, if they have not already – I am not privy as to whether it has or not.

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, as I have just explained to the hon. Gentleman, this will now take a period of time. It will be required for stationery, letterhead, when new press releases are issued, brochures as being designed and being mail shot. All of this will take some time to be able to use the new images, the new logo and the new designs. But I suspect that by the end of January next year, the complete package of new logo, new designs, new imagery and new livery will be rolled out.

I suspect, however, there will be some aspect, perhaps, that may take longer but for the most part it should be done by the end of January next year.

Hon. D J Bossino. And, Mr Speaker, in relation to the company, can he advise this House which company has been appointed to do this job?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, the rebranding of the GTB and the construction of the new website as I said, to include images, the layout and the copy, is being done by Maverick.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can he advise, I think he said Maverick...? (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) Can he advise whether this...? I assume this is a local company: can he confirm whether that is the position?

And if I may, Mr Speaker, a second supplementary added on to that, can he just give me details as to whether that is the company name or simply a business name and who the beneficial owner of the company is?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that I do not have that level of detail in respect of the company. I suspect that it is a business name. I suspect that it is a UK company, but I will need to get back to him with those details.

Q626/2014
Hong Kong shipping event –
Attendance

Clerk: Question 626, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism provide details of when he will be attending Hong Kong for the shipping event announced by the Minister for Financial Services in Parliament last month, together with details of the expected costs and who will be attending with him?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

80 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will be visiting Hong Kong from 23rd to 29th November, and will be accompanied by the CEO and Captain of the Port, Commodore Bob Sanguinetti and Diana Soussi, the Gibraltar Yacht Registrar, representing the Gibraltar Maritime Administration.

85 Costs are expected to be in the region of £28,000 which covers the arrangements for meetings and a reception event being held at the Hong Kong Maritime Museum, together with flights, accommodation and other travel expenses for the Government delegation.

90 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, in line with what is, I think I detect, the policy of the Government as far as financial services is concerned, which is really to invite stakeholders to attend these events – I think I am exposing the Government policy in relation to that accurately – can he advise whether he has equally invited local stakeholders to attend with the Gibraltar Government delegation as a marketing opportunity for them?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

95 Hon. D J Bossino: Has he been taken up on the invitation?

Hon. N F Costa: Three companies have, Mr Speaker.

100 Hon. D J Bossino: Can he advise which companies or would that be commercially sensitive? I do take the point but if he is able to provide that information, I would be grateful.

105 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it is not that it is commercially sensitive; it is simply that I have not asked them whether they would feel comfortable about me advising across the floor of the House that they are attending with the Gibraltar delegation. I suspect that they do not, but before I do so, I would like, out of courtesy, to ask them first.

110 Hon. D J Bossino: And, Mr Speaker, I did pose the question in very general terms by stakeholders. Can he advise, because I think this will be of interest also to those in the legal profession like myself, who deal with Admiralty matters, whether he has extended the invitation or at least the announcement that he will be going to the Hong Kong event to, for example, those in the legal profession who deal with Admiralty matters and who may see this as an opportunity to market their wares as well?

115 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, this trip is mainly specific to Port-related matters, although we have taken also the opportunity to bring the Gibraltar Yacht Registrar, as inevitably some aspects may relate to that, but we are not attending as such as an arrest jurisdiction, although of course the subject will inevitably come up and we will have to address that. But on this occasion, it is mainly Port-related matters, but we are also taking the Gibraltar Maritime Administration as a representative of the maritime cluster.

120 Hon. D J Bossino: And, Mr Speaker, in relation to those three attendees who will be going with him, can he confirm – and I think it is implicit from the answer that he has given, but can he confirm please – whether they are all in the industry related to the Port, exclusively?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, yes.

Q627/2014
World Travel Market, London –
Cost of attendance by Gibraltar Tourist Board

125 Clerk: Question 627, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism provide details of the cost of the GTB's attendance at the World Travel Market in London?

130 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, if I may, with your indulgence, just quickly return to the last supplementary, I think it is more specific to say that they relate strictly to maritime business.

135 As I said before, it will be mainly Port-related businesses, but some aspects may relate to other maritime areas.

Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 627, the detail of the costs is as follows – Flights £2,782; Hotel £3,780.60; Subsistence £688.77; Travel Expenses £878.90; Stand £37,541; Miscellaneous Other Expenses £1,553.35; less participation fees of £9,000.

140 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I have taken a quick note of the information which he has given to me for which I am grateful. In relation to the miscellaneous expenses, can he be more particular in relation to that. It is a reasonably high sum when compared with two of the other items he has given me. It is £1,500-odd pounds. Can he give me a bit more information in relation to that?

145 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

In respect of Miscellaneous Other Expenses, £275.31 relates to the History Alive personnel that attended with us and accompanied us to the World Travel Market; the Stand catering £412.52; and Hospitality £865.52. They add up to £1,553.35.

150 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, perhaps I am asking this question from the uninitiated because I have not had the pleasure of discharging his responsibilities, and I am not personally used to doing these things, but can he advise, and can he give further particulars in relation to what he means by ‘hospitality’ precisely? I know it is perhaps getting a bit too granular but maybe he has that information and he can provide it to this House and elucidate.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I do not have a detailed breakdown what the hospitality/dinner bracket entails but essentially it means dinners, coffees, sparkling waters, whatever it is that one consumes when having a business meeting with a person you have invited to meet with you – hospitality. No alcohol.

160 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, there is another question in the Order Paper for which this supplementary may be perhaps more relevant, but can he tell me how long the delegation was there? I am assuming in that that he was there for that duration himself.

165 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the answer to that is in fact I think in the second or the other question that is coming. Yes, I was there from beginning to end. I arrived on Monday afternoon, my office and the Gibraltar House in London were already there. My first appearance at the World Travel Market was on Tuesday and of course it lasted during the week, during the course of which, as I will inform him later, we also had a UK GTA meeting.

170 So yes, these amounts cover the entirety of that week.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I am grateful. He said when he started. Did he say when he ended the trip?

175 Hon. N F Costa: Saturday, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: Sorry, just to be clear, the World Travel Market started on the Monday and ended on the Friday presumably. (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) I am grateful.

Q628/2014
World Travel Market, London – Attendees

180 Clerk: Question 628, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism state who of the GTB delegation to include those from Gibraltar who attended with the GTB delegation, attended the World Travel Market event?

185 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, aside from Mr Nicky Guerrero, Chief Executive of the Gibraltar Tourist Board and I, the Gibraltar delegation was supported by representatives from: the Sunborn Hotel; the O'Callaghan Elliott Hotel; Bland Group International; MH Bland; Parody Tours; the Gibraltar Taxi Association; and Gibraltar History Alive.

Q629/2014

World Travel Market, London –
Meetings held with Gibraltar Tourist Board

190

Clerk: Question 629, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Tourism state how many meetings were held with the GTB at the World Travel Market and which of those did he attend?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, a total of nine meetings were held with the GTB and UK entities, five of which I attended. I have purposely not included the press conference in which I announced the excellent news of the Gibraltar-Bristol flight, the subsequent interviews to the press, my meetings with locally based operators the UK GTA nor my discussions on the fringes of the UK GTA with our UK commercial partners.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, he knows that the Opposition has not been found wanting in terms of congratulating him personally and his team, who I am sure are watching, about the sterling work done in relation to the Bristol connection.

205

Mr Speaker, he says nine meetings, five of which he personally attended. Can he explain why he did not attend the other four? The reason being that he has laid a lot of store on the fact that he is very keen to ensure he says, personal contacts with those industry stakeholders. Can he explain therefore why almost 50% of those meetings which were scheduled did not have the pleasure of his attendance?

210

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, in the first place to answer the preface to his question, I have to tell him, although I did not reply by way of a press release, that I am still to meet an executive of the airline industry who has told me that the reason why they fly to Gibraltar is because we have a beautiful airport. Never has that happened and I suspect that never will it happen, that people want to fly to us because we have a glass palace, where before there used to be something smaller. So let me be clear about that.

215

Meetings at the UK GTA or indeed any other trade show are planned well in advance, so that there will be matters which I think require my personal attendance which ordinarily involves the cruise lines and the airlines and also if there is any specific marketing campaign which I think I ought to have an input. There are other matters which can be dealt with at official level, which is why members of Gibraltar House in London or the Chief Executive will be able to progress but of course, because I am not at that meeting does not mean that I am not conducting some other business elsewhere.

220

It is a moveable feast, as I have explained to him in the past, and it is a constant stream of work and it is simply just an economic allocation of existing resources of how best we divide ourselves and get the most out of the World Travel Market.

225

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, but it is simply not clear why he does not attend the meetings, as far as I am concerned. He has got nine which are scheduled for his Department, he is there in any event, so in terms of economics I just do not see, given the high level of expenditure spent in relation to this, I just do not see why he simply does not attend the meetings.

230

He has not said, 'No, I could not attend those four because I had a clash, because I had other meetings to attend'; he simply said that he took the decision, exercising his discretion, as of course he is entitled to do, to not attend. But I just need to understand more particularly why it is that those particular four meetings he decided not to attend and he presumably decided to attend – as he said earlier – he decided to allow his officials to attend on their own and not with him. He just simply has not explained that. Could he explain why he did not attend those four meetings?

235

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman clearly has repeated my answer now, in the preface to the question. I have told him that there were several meetings which I thought it was excellent for the Chief Executive to be able to deal with on his own, because there were matters that did not really engage me at a ministerial or policy level or which did not really engage the use of Government funds. I thought that the Chief Executive, being a person who has been in the tourism industry for far longer than I have been, was perfectly able to do that on his own.

245 But as I have already told him, just because I was not at that meeting, it did not mean that I was whittling my time away walking around the conference centre seeing what I could do. I was doing other things at that time.

And apart from that, I do not think that he wants to draw me on the question of expenses and costs. I really do not think he wants to do that because our costs are – in the light of what they used to spend, up to £70,000 one year – quite reasonable; and I do not think he wants to draw me either on how many meetings the former Minister for Tourism used to attend.

250 So I think he should accept my explanation that we have reasonable costs, that I think it is fair that the Chief Executive is able, along with other officials, to progress matters which either do not engage Government funds, which do not engage Government policy and where I can make better use of my time.

255 Hon. D J Bossino: No Mr Speaker, I am judging him on his own standards – on his own standards. He has said that all these wonderful things are happening under his watch, because of his personal attendance at meetings and his personal contact with stakeholders. This is why I think it is a legitimate question for this Opposition to ask, why almost 50% of those meetings, which were scheduled far in advance, were not attended by him.

260 Now, he says that he exercises that discretion based on a decision which he has that, he says, that matters were not engaging. Can he particularise as to how he comes to that decision? What criteria does he employ such that he says, ‘I will not attend that particular meeting because it does not engage or does not require attendance at a ministerial level’?

265 Hon. N F Costa: Because it does not engage Government funds, because it does not engage Government policy and because I think my time could have been spent elsewhere better in achieving other Government aims.

As I have already told him, just because I am not present at a meeting, does not mean that I am whittling my time away on anything else other than Government business. If he wants, I shall provide him with the series of e-mails that forensically will show him that even if I am not at a meeting, I am furiously working away at other things.

270 So if his concern is that taxpayers’ money are not being wasted, I can assure him that the taxpayer gets bang value for money from my time, because between the hours of eight in the morning until whenever I go to sleep, my time is spent on working.

275 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, he is very welcome to send me the e-mails. He is very welcome to send me the e-mails but it is completely, completely with respect to him, irrelevant to the question I posed.

Mr Speaker, in the press release which he issued in relation to his visit to the World Travel Market in London, he talks about discussions in very general terms with tourism industry stakeholders and partners in the UK. Who are these people?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman really does himself no favours.

285 In 2012, when I went to the World Travel Market for the first time, I specifically said, ‘This year, I have ensured that I see as many industry players as possible.’ The year after, I did the same. This year, I specifically did not say that I was going to meet as many industry players as possible, precisely because I was only attending five meetings.

Had I had what I did in previous years, when they had nine, ten or more meetings, I would have said in the press release, ‘I am using this opportunity to meet as many industry players as possible.’ I did not say that in this press release because in the other press statements, when I did do back-to-backs, I said so.

290 This time, however, I did have the wonderful opportunity for Gibraltar, for which he is grouching and carping and he does not like, that I was able to announce a new Gibraltar-Bristol route and therefore some of my time was taken with easyJet, the marketing manager, the commercial manager, with Bristol Airport and the staff there, and the press release and giving press interviews.

295 I have told him that I have purposely not included the meetings I had with UK operators on the fringes of the UK GTA. I have told him that I have purposely left out the side meetings that I have had with locally based operators. It is not that the absence of my presence in a meeting with a UK operator with the GTB meant the absence of my working for tourism during that week. What is it that he does not understand, or does he think that when I am not at a meeting with the GTB, I am somehow whittling my time away? I can assure him if it is a concern that I am somehow not giving the taxpayer absolute value for money, that I am.
300 And when I am not at a meeting with the GTB, I am working. It is not that I am at leisure.

So if he wants me that I want to announce a policy that when I go with a delegation I must attend every single meeting, if that is his advice to me, I will tell him that I shall consider his advice that I must attend every single meeting, but then of course, if I were to do that and I have not prioritised some other work which is more important during the course of those meetings, he will tell me that I should learn how to prioritise.

305

Look, as the Minister, and having planned these things at least six months in advance, and he knows that because we were able to announce a new route there was a lot of work that went into it, I think I am a little long in the tooth now, to be able to decide which meeting requires my attendance and which does not. He may decide whenever he comes here in 12 or 16 years time, that he wants to attend every single meeting. Fine, let him do so, but whilst I am the Minister for Tourism, I shall make a judicious choice. I shall exercise my discretion. I shall consider all the relevant factors that pertain to reality and I will say, 'I need to attend that meeting; I do not need to attend that meeting.'

310

It is palpable that the fact that we have been able to announce three routes whilst we have been in Government, one for Birmingham, one for Bristol and one for Tangier, (Banging on desks) that makes him now ask me whether I am attending meetings.

315

The reason why those routes have started is because of my personal involvements and having to talk to the leaders on my own with the GTB. If I thought that any of those four meetings that I was going to miss was going to mean a loss of opportunity, a loss of business, a loss of money for Gibraltar, I would have been there. Or does he think that I waste my time when I go to these meetings?

320

Mr Speaker: The hon. Members are now beginning to debate. I will allow one – I will allow the hon. Member one final supplementary? Because really, you are beginning to debate as to why the Minister did or did not attend four particular meetings and he has given explanations, but you are now debating. So I will allow him one other supplementary on this matter.

325

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, with the greatest respect to the Chair, I am certainly not debating. It is the hon. Member opposite who has repeated a defence in relation to a previous supplementary that I posed. The most recent supplementary had nothing to do with the issues he has raised in his answers. It was very specific and all I wanted was to elucidate from him further information in respect of a statement which he had contained in his press release announcing the fact that he had been to that event, the World Travel Market.

330

Mr Speaker, simply to point out that I think it is a bit rich of him to suggest that I have somehow been reticent in congratulating him in relation to the Bristol flight, he knows that there was a press release from my Party which very clearly, personally quoted from me, congratulates him and his staff for the sterling work he has done in relation to the securing of this particular flight to Bristol. So that is on record.

335

Having said that, Mr Speaker, I do not think, with the greatest respect to him, that he has given me the information I sought, which was simply which tourism industry stakeholders and partners in the UK did he visit. That is a statement in the press release and all I want is who they are, full stop. I am grateful.

340

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have already answered the question. I told him that it was an airline company and airport officials, and if he wants to know the other two it was another airline company and a media buying company.

345

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, I am glad that I left early from last night's dinner! Obviously this is the aftermath of staying late, I am afraid.

Mr Speaker, may I return to the hon. Gentleman – and I say this with the utmost respect for him, he knows that I hold him in high regard – but his rather petty answer in relation to what he referred to as the glass building, which was an obvious reference to the air terminal. Will he not be magnanimous in the same way as my hon. Friend, Mr Bossino has been magnanimous, in recognising the central role that the hon. Member has played in attracting this new route from Bristol and indeed his team – and we have congratulated both – but will he not recognise the fact that it is because we have a new terminal that actually we are able to attract – and it helps in attracting – new routes to Gibraltar? (Banging on desks)

350

That does not detract in any way, Mr Speaker, from any work that the hon. Gentleman puts in to this, either he or his team, but actually we are seeing – and I do not believe that it is a coincidence – the only figures that are actually increasing in tourism, almost across the board, is increases in passengers coming through the air terminal. The rest of the figures are down; those are up.

355

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, hand on heart, as I do every time I answer a question in this House, not ever, not once, have my team or I been told that the air terminal building is a contributing factor at all in deciding whether or not to fly to Gibraltar. I can assure the hon. Gentleman opposite that it is not true. The airport building plays no part at all as to whether a new flight starts.

360

I accept that a new airport building takes larger capacity and we are working to build the numbers, but I can assure you that during the course of my negotiations with any of the airlines, including the newest airline which is Royal Air Maroc, at no point has the Chairman, the Vice President, a marketing manager, an air route development said, 'By the way, that building, that is the reason why we are going to go to Gibraltar. If you did not have that building we would not fly to Gibraltar.' That has never been said. In fact, it never forms part of the discussion. That content of the narrative is absent, I can assure him.

Is it welcome that the airport can handle more passengers and that we are building towards increasing passengers? Absolutely. But let me also tell him that the reason why more routes are being developed in these four years, it is not a coincidence, as I will explain to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition. It is not a coincidence. But it is not a coincidence because of the reasons that he thinks. In other words, it is not because we have a magnificent crystal palace built for reasons which are completely unclear to me. It is because we have pursued implacably the philosophy of not allowing leads to cool, of chasing e-mails, of following up on phone calls, on chasing up the top industry players, of displacing ourselves on short notice to meet the people that make the decisions.

And the reason why we have – if I may have a vain glorious moment – one new route per year on average under this administration – Birmingham, Bristol and Tangier – is because we have not let matters drop and we have continued when the iron was hot, to strike.

I dare say that if the former Administration had pursued so consistently that policy, new airport or no new airport, hole in the ground or Heras fencing, they would have had more luck.

Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, nobody is suggesting that people use Gibraltar because they want to come and watch the new crystal airport – (Interjection) crystal palace exactly – airport terminal. Nobody is suggesting that. But surely there is a link between the fact that we have built a new terminal that can handle increased capacity with the ability of a Government to attract new airlines. That is the only question that I posed and that must surely follow. And it must surely follow that in fact, if we had had the old terminal with its incapacity to handle greater volumes, that the current Minister for Tourism would have been hamstrung in his ability to attract new routes to Gibraltar.

Now that must be a logical deduction from just simply looking at the facts. The facts speak for themselves.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that is to completely ignore everything that I have told him. The reason why there are more routes to Gibraltar now than there were before has nothing to do with the crystal palace, nothing at all. They come because they have every confidence in this Government to be able to pursue the leads that exist at the time.

Once a discussion starts to open a new route, this one in particular, Bristol, took two years and it could have taken longer had we not pursued the matter diligently and sometimes almost daily. And when matters go quiet and we do not receive phone calls from the airlines, when I pick up the phone or when they call me to pursue the matter, it is not 'actually having re-thought the matter, that beautiful crystal palace is so amazing, we are going to be flying there.' It never forms part of the discussion.

It only comes about because of our personal contacts and pursuing the negotiation. It has nothing to do... So the logic he ascribes that, as a result of greater capacity there are more airlines flying to Gibraltar, I tell him that had the old air terminal shed that existed still been in existence, we still would have had a new Bristol route, the Birmingham route that we started and the Tangier route that is starting next year. I am absolutely confident of that.

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. Mr Bossino have any further supplementary in the light of anything since his last one?

No, next question then.

Q630/2014

EasyJet –

Terms of agreement with Gibraltar Tourist Board

410

Clerk: Question 630, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Tourism provide details of the terms of the agreement between the Gibraltar Tourist Board and easyJet which he referred to in the context of the announcement of the new flight to Bristol?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I have answered before with similar questions of this nature, I refer specifically to Questions 826/2012 and 348/2014, all commercial discussions are commercial in confidence as part of the Government's strive to increase air connectivity.

420

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I appreciate the hon. Member's restriction in that regard, but can I press him a bit further? The reason why I pose this question is because it did not form part of the press release which announced the new route, but it did form part of an answer that he gave to Kelly Anne Turnbull, the GBC interviewer, when he was being interviewed I think in London, when he said that... The question posed was why is he so confident about this flight connection when compared to, for example, the recent and failed Marrakesh flights, and he said that the distinguishing feature is that in this case – and I am quoting from him – 'this is an agreement between the Gibraltar Tourist Board and easyJet.'

425

So subject to the restrictions which he has already alluded to, can he give me any further information in relation to what he said to the GBC interviewer?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am almost tempted to read from Hansard, given that that is almost exactly the supplementary he asked me on the last occasion.

435

Mr Speaker: Resist the temptation! (Laughter)

Hon. N F Costa: But I will not, Mr Speaker. I shall pass it to him later.

The previous Government, in 2008, reduced landing fees at the airport, which was a very welcome thing. That I agree does contribute directly to why new routes want to start to Gibraltar. The previous Government started an incentive scheme on discounts on fees and departure charges. Again, they introduced that and we have continued that policy and unlike the crystal palace, this does have a direct bearing on negotiations with airlines.

440

So as a result of that regime, the Government, the GTB in particular, has an ability to be able to discuss with any particular air operator whether they wish to obtain a discount on landing fees or on departure charges or both and that is what forms part of the discussion.

445

For the reasons that he has said before, I know that he accepts that such agreements with an airline are commercially sensitive and in confidence, but I can tell him, as I told him last time as well, that they are limited in time. So each airline will have an agreement with the Tourist Board which is limited in time and each agreement is different.

450

But of course, it is part of the commercial discussions that we have that (1) the airlines know that we accept the sensitive confidential nature of such agreements and they know that we will not disclose that either publicly or to anyone else; and (2) the Government needs to have the ability to be able to negotiate qua a new airline without reference to the other, because of course, if one airline knew what the other airline had, they may insist on obtaining the same deal or a better deal. So it is in the best interests of everyone involved, the Gibraltar taxpayer, and the airline and of course the Tourism, to obtain more passengers to fly to Gibraltar, that these remain commercially in confidence.

455

I am happy, and I have told him this before, to provide to him a copy of the incentive scheme which we provide to airlines and that will detail to him the ability that we have in terms of what we can offer an airline. But it is very defined and there is only so much room for manoeuvre.

460

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that reply and just so that I understand this, the negotiation is limited to that particular discrete issue, which is the playing around – for want of a better expression – as to where to pitch the costs of landing in Gibraltar, and I fully understand and accept the explanation he has given.

465

But when I heard what he said on television, I just wanted to know whether there was anything further beyond what he has just explained, for example – and I put it to him by way of example in terms of my thinking at the time when I watched him and heard him – which is whether there was any direct financial assistance being provided either directly by the Government, which I would doubt, or indeed by... he well knows the debates we have had in this House in relation to Credit Finance Company Limited, whether anything has come from that particular quarter. I would like him if he could, for the sake of Hansard to confirm whether my understanding is in fact correct.

470

475 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, first of all let me explain that when I made the comment in relation to the fact that this particular agreement is between an airline and the Government, it was in reply to the question of the Marrakesh flight. It was within that context that I explained that the Marrakesh operation was by a private entity and therefore it was not, as I explained then, our baby, our project. We did not negotiate with RAM. It was a private company that negotiated with RAM and then the Government supported it, but it was not a direct agreement between the GTB and a particular airline.

480 Therefore, it was within that context that I said the reason why the Tourist Board and my Ministry is confident that this route will work is because we have crunched the numbers, we have sifted the data, we have gone through the numerical analysis – as of course has easyJet.

485 As I also said in that interview – and of course I am very glad that the hon. Gentleman does follow my statements – if easyJet, after two years of discussions, is finally persuaded to fly to Gibraltar, it can only be because after two years of data crunching, they are satisfied that there will be sufficient traffic to make the route sustainable and of course profitable for them. That is the answer to the first part of the question which relates to the Marrakesh flight.

I said to him in a previous answer relating to a similar question that apart from the incentive package that we are able to negotiate with an airline, we also provide marketing funds. So there is an incentive package which is agreed with the airline and then we also agree – which was actually interestingly or ironically the meetings which I held at the World Travel Market – how we market the route.

490 So that is the extent of the contribution. An incentive which means that there is absolutely no direct cash given at all whatever, it is simply that they get discounts, and we agree with the airlines how we market the route. That is the absolute full extent of the assistance. That is it. (Interjection) Which is what I said in my first answer, to be totally fair, the policy that was started by them in 2008, which I think works quite well.

495 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, my hon. and learned Friend makes a valid point to me privately which is in relation to the Marketing Fund: he says no financial assistance, so can he explain that further. Is there money passing between the Government, put in as broad as possible terms, and any company wishing to set up an airline route to Gibraltar in relation to that specific issue which he has referred to, marketing funds, and simply, by way of clarification, I assume that ‘RAM’ means Royal Air Maroc – I assume. Just for the sake of Hansard, he maybe ought to confirm that and explain that further.

505 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, every air carrier has an incentive package and of course with some it may have already expired. But where even if an incentive package has expired because three years have gone by, or two years, whatever has been agreed, the GTB is always committed to provide marketing funds every year.

510 I do not know exactly how the Accounting Department or the GTB works that out. What I do know is that we agree the marketing package with the airline – with BA, Monarch, now with Royal Air Maroc and with EasyJet. So we sit down – well, my marketing team and the accounting team sit down and they decide ‘Right, we have so much money in terms of marketing: this is the value. How do we do it?’ and then from that amount, a package is worked out.

515 Whether that is invoiced at the beginning, during or at the end, I am not sure but it is – well, we talk about marketing funds. This is not a pseudonym. This is not something to hide something else. These are marketing funds. If we are to hold, for instance, a boutique event which we did for BA at Gibraltar House, where we invited BA’s corporate clientele to Gibraltar House so that they were able to meet the Tourist Board and the Gibraltar Government, that would be part of those marketing funds. But it is pure marketing.

520 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes and I think we probably now grasp the concept but is the Minister effectively saying that it is essentially an allocation to a marketing budget of sorts in the context of the flight itself, is that what he is getting at?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, it is a capped amount which means that in one year it could be less. It is a capped amount and it relates to a specific route.

525 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q631-632/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Details of blue and red buses

Clerk: Question 631, the Hon. S M Figueras.

530 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport provide details to this House of the weight of the blue buses currently in service with the Gibraltar Bus Company, to include the weight of the buses specifically serving the areas of the Upper Town?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

535 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I shall answer this question together with Question 632.

Clerk: Question 632, the Hon. S M Figueras.

540 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport provide details to this House of the weight of the new red buses now entering service with the Gibraltar Bus Company, as well as the weight of the vehicles it is anticipated will be servicing the Upper Town in the future?

545 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the weight of the blue buses currently in service is as follows:

550 Mass of the vehicle in use: 6,750 kilos without passengers; permissible maximum laden mass, 12,000 kilos – maximum passengers.

Buses serving the upper city area: Toyota Coaster – mass of the vehicle, 2,780 kilos without passengers; permissible maximum laden mass, 5,020 kilos – maximum passengers.

Mercedes Benz – mass of the vehicle in use, 3,570 kilos without passengers; permissible maximum laden mass, 5,350 kilos – maximum passengers.

555 Man Midi-City – mass of the vehicle in use 9,500 kilos without passengers; permissible maximum laden mass, 13,500 kilos – maximum passengers.

Government is currently conducting road tests on bus types which it considers to meet the specifications to ably negotiate the narrow road network of the upper town.

560 After this answer was drafted, Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, simply to add that just yesterday we tested a second new bus for the upper town.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, there is a Question in the Order Paper, Question 633, which probably deals with the matters that I might ask in supplementary, so it may in fact be a good idea just to proceed on to the next question.

565 Mr Speaker: You would like Question 633 to be called.

Hon. S M Figueras: Indeed, Mr Speaker, I am grateful.

Q633/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Routes of red buses

570 Clerk: Question 633, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Transport say which routes the new red buses are currently serving and if there are any not being serviced that were serviced by the original Dennis blue buses, can he say why not?

575 Clerk: Answer, the Hon the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd has deployed the new buses as and when required, replacing the old buses that were becoming unusable. Further, all routes are being serviced.

580

Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Can the Minister then – and he has alluded to it in his answer to the question on the Order Paper – confirm then that there are no issues whatsoever with the new buses in the context of the weight of the new buses and their use in particular areas in Gibraltar, namely the southern most parts of Europa Road?

585

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman I know is a transport enthusiast so I am sure that he appreciates that when the new bus fleet was brought here in 2004, the maximum permissible laden mass in fact far exceeded the allowed weight on all of our roads. And between 2004 and 2011 they did nothing to reinforce those parts of the road that required reinforcement. In fact when we came in –

590

Mr Speaker: No, no, that is totally irrelevant. Totally irrelevant. You are referring to 2004 to 2011 – totally irrelevant.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, it goes to the answer that I am going to give.

595

Mr Speaker: Get to the point.

Hon. N F Costa: Yes. The point is that as a result of certain parts of Gibraltar's roads requiring reinforcement as a result of the blue buses, we gave instructions to reinforce certain parts of Line wall Road. So for example, the Smith Dorrien Bridge and other parts of Line wall Road which have been continuously used by the buses have required reinforcements.

600

Similarly, the Technical Services Department advises me that perhaps one or two points at Europa Road may require – in which case we have also instructed, Mr Speaker, that such works be done should they be required and these studies are being conducted as we speak.

605

The preface to that, Mr Speaker, was only to explain that it was not just part of Europa Road but in fact part of the entire road network that are being currently and have been used by the buses. That was the reason, Mr Speaker.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister say then categorically that there is no concern currently as far as Government is aware in relation to the continued use of the red buses. I know the Hon. Minister suggests that he has already answered the question, but I am merely asking him to confirm because he has explained that they are aware of the issues and that there is a report being prepared in relation to specific areas of Europa Road and I am very grateful for that answer.

610

But my supplementary is a little different in that I would like him to confirm, Mr Speaker, that there is no concern about the immediate possibility of a hazard or any kind of undue risk in continuing to use the red buses in those particular areas.

615

Would the Minister be so kind as to confirm that?

Hon. N F Costa: Well, Mr Speaker, this was why I started the answer the way that I did. The point that I am making to the hon. Gentleman opposite is that the blue buses already exceeded the maximum permissible weight on our roads and they have been using our roads since 2004. So if we do have concern, it is only to the extent that we need to find out whether certain points in Europa Road, which have been serviced by those buses since 2004, now represent a greater risk because there is 1,000-kilos difference between the old and the new. But that is why we have instructed our Technical Services Department to confirm whether that is the case or not.

If it is the case that one or two points of the stretch of Europa Road in their view requires some reinforcement, we will do so in the same way that we were able to do the reinforcement at Smith Dorrien Avenue Bridge and the other parts of Line wall Road.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes, one final supplementary but dealing first with the answer that the Hon. Minister has given us, the reason why I am asking today, Mr Speaker, is because as we have been informed the new buses are a ton and a half heavier when they are in maximum use. Well, I know the details now, Mr Speaker, but it has been suggested to us by a number of concerned constituents that there was potentially an issue arising from the weight of the buses.

635

Therefore, having now confirmed that that is the case, Mr Speaker, and that the red buses are in fact, when in service with the maximum number of passengers, a whole ton and a half heavier than the blue buses which have been using our road network from 2004 to 2011, I thought it appropriate to raise the issue in the House because clearly, the concern must be slightly greater than it was perhaps when the buses were slightly lighter.

640

I would then ask, Mr Speaker, the final supplementary, when is it anticipated that the report will be conducted and a determination made as to what works if any, need to be done?

645 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, let me just tell him that some of the blue buses are still operating today so they did not stop in 2011. We came into Government in 2011, but the blue buses continued. Yes, and on that magnificent day the blue buses continued to service the existing routes and, as I have already told him, the blue buses exceeded the permissible weight by 2,500 kilos, so the concern has always been there – or should have been there certainly – before and when we were notified, one of my first meetings in fact with the Hon. the Minister for Traffic was, if that is the case we need to make reinforcements to the roads and it has been confirmed that the Line wall Road, the parts of it which in the view of the Technical Services Department were not suitable, have been upgraded to take up to 16,000 kilos. Mr Figueras may –
650 (Interjection)

In the event that the report which I have been told should take between four to six weeks it was started two weeks ago, if I recall correctly. Time is a bit of a blur – it could have been before, it could have been later. If there is a need to reinforce, then we shall move to do so in the same way that we did on the last occasion to reinforce up to 16,000 kilos.
655

Hon. D A Feetham: Now, Mr Speaker, so can he just confirm for my benefit that the red buses are not being used on Europa Road until such time as the Government conducts this study to ensure that the roads are resilient enough or those stretches of the road affected are resilient enough in order to take these red buses? So the red buses are not being used in Europa Road or in that stretch of Europa Road near I think it is the library up there, that is being affected by this.
660

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, when I received the question, I asked the bus manager on what routes the red buses were being used and he informed me that the buses were being deployed depending on the popularity of the route. As I understand it, those routes do not currently include the Upper Rock. So they are being deployed where the buses are most in use – not Europa Point.

Clerk: Question 634, the Hon. S M Figueras.

670 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport provide details to this House of the full complement of staff employed by the Gibraltar Bus Company on a month by month basis, since December 2011?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

675 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have just realised that there is a table but perhaps it would be easier if the lady usher could kindly make a photocopy rather than read the entirety of the table and perhaps the hon. Gentleman could consider and ask me supplementaries with your indulgence, later.

Q635/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Employee policies and staff handbook

Clerk: Question 635, the Hon. S M Figueras.

685 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport provide details to this House of the Gibraltar Bus Company's employee policies and, if these are detailed in a staff handbook, provide me with a copy of said staff handbook?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

690 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the former directors of the bus company did not agree a handbook with Unite. As a result the handbook is a draft document which the current manager and employees use as guidelines, but which all parties accept is the touchstone to any employment issue.

695 It should be noted that the bus company manager and I are currently in discussions with Unite to agree the contents of the handbook and to implement these. The handbook contains policies that one would ordinarily expect to be contained in an employee handbook, such as an equal opportunities policy, a health and safety policy, a training policy and other conventional employee policies.

700 I am, however, also informed that the handbook sets out the terms and conditions of employment applicable to these employees. May I just say that I am not entirely sure why it reads, 'I am, however, informed'. I have read the handbook now at least four or five times so I know that the handbook sets out the terms and conditions of employment applicable to the employees.

705 I am advised that the handbook is a private and confidential document and that therefore it is not appropriate to hand a copy to the hon. Gentleman across the floor, but I am happy to share it with him confidentially if he so wishes.

Mr Speaker: I notice that the manner in which the Answer... in fact it follows from the next Question 636, there is also statistical information covering four years. Would the Hon. Minister like to anticipate that and also make available a photocopy for convenience? It is conducive to better business.

710 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, of course, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Now, we return to Question 634, and the Minister should actually go through the answer, otherwise it will not appear in the Hansard. If it is just a case of handing over, it will not...

715 The Clerk will arrange for it to appear. Very well.
Now, does the Hon. Mr Figueras then have any supplementaries?

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I have not received the table yet.

720 Mr Speaker: You have not received it. It is on its way.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you.

725 Mr Speaker: You will be getting statistical information on two Questions, 634 and 636. Question 636 will come after you have asked the Question obviously.

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, with your indulgence I would be grateful for an opportunity to ask supplementaries on 635 before moving on if that is alright.

730 Mr Speaker: Well yes, very well.

Hon. S M Figueras: Thank you. Mr Speaker, in relation to the staff handbook, I am grateful for the Hon. Minister's offer of sharing it confidentially, an offer which I will certainly take up.

735 Can, however, the Hon. Minister say whether there has been any professional advice engaged in relation to the discussions or the preparation of the drafting of the handbook itself in anticipation of discussions with the Union and agreement of a final version of it?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I will have to check, I think the answer is yes. I think if I recall correctly – please, I ask him not to quote me, but – I think the handbook was originally drafted by Mark Isola of 740 Isolas and I am not certain whether further revisions were done by him, my in-house counsel or a further firm. But if he were to ask me either at the next session or write to me, I will provide him with the answer.

No supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: Now, does the hon. Member have the statistical information relating to Question 634?

745 Hon. S M Figueras: I do, I have just received it.

Mr Speaker: Well, look at it and if you wish to ask any supplementaries...

750 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, on reflection this is perhaps a question that would better have been asked for answer in written form. In that vein, I do not propose to ask any supplementaries myself in relation to this question. So unless any of my hon. and learned Friends have supplementaries to ask, I will propose that we move on to the next question.

Mr Speaker: Any supplementary questions?

Q636/2014

Clerk: Question 636, the Hon. S M Figueras.

760 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport provide details to this House of the number of road traffic incidents/accidents reported by the employees of the Gibraltar Bus Company, on a month-by-month basis since January 2010?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

765 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: The answer then should be, ‘The figures are...’

770 Hon. N F Costa: Yes. Mr Speaker, I hand now to the hon. Gentleman a schedule with the information that he requests.

Q637/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Cost of new buses

Clerk: Question 637, the Hon. S M Figueras.

780

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say how much the new buses are costing the taxpayer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

785

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the cost of the new MAN Caetano bus fleet is £4,790,000.

Hon. S M Figueras: And, Mr Speaker, perhaps he can just refresh my memory: is it 20 buses that make up the fleet?

790

Hon. N F Costa: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Q638/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Cost of improvements to new red buses

Clerk: Question 638, the Hon. S M Figueras.

795

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say how much cost additional to the cost of each of the buses the Gibraltar Bus Company is anticipated to incur in the making of improvements for access to rear seats and other modifications planned to improve accessibility and usability of the new fleet of red buses?

800

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the Government is not aware of any accessibility issues with the rear seats of the new buses, and therefore has no plans to make any alterations.

805

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps the Minister catches me off guard and he will correct me if I am wrong, I am happy to be corrected if that is the case. Had the Minister not publicly said that certain alterations are being looked at in terms of access to the rear of the bus, within the bus?

810

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the way that I understood the question, I am not trying to be obtuse, is that the hon. Gentleman was referring to the rear of the seats. There are no issues with the rear of the seats.

What I have said in an interview, was that we are aware of difficulty of access in respect of one part of the bus, not the rear of the bus and that we are looking at modifications to ease that part. Is that what he is referring to?

815

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes... [Inaudible]

Hon. N F Costa: There is no issue –

820

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes I will try and articulate what it is I am getting to. As I understand it, and again I may be misinformed and I am happy to be corrected, Mr Speaker. I understand that the difficulty that we are getting to is in accessing the rearmost half of the bus and in particular, the one step from the level platform which is level with the disabled access and for push chairs. The step up to the rest of the seats at the back of the bus is where we are informed there is significant difficulty in gaining access.

825

Has the Hon. Minister referred in the interview to access to this particular area of the bus and that is the issue that they are in fact planning to deal with?

830 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, by way of update, as I think I explained that in the interview, I do not remember if I did, the manufacturers were invited to Gibraltar where we met with the OT, the Care Agency and all the other related professionals who advise the Government on such matters and we have come up with a first possible solution. We are not in a position therefore yet to give him costs. We will not be able to do so until we agree on the solution.

835 As I said during the course of the interview, the reason for bringing the buses over as quickly as we had to was because the Bus Company informed me in no uncertain terms – and the hon. Gentleman and I have in fact discussed privately the state of the blue buses on previous occasions and he knows – that the blue buses by this point were having some serious difficulties; not all of them, some of them. He is aware, because I have put this in the public domain and he has asked me by way of a written question, the cost of repairing the Dennis Dart bus fleet.

840 So the decision was taken to bring as many as possible as quickly, even if the step as we asked for had not been installed.

Of course once they arrived we knew that this could well become an issue and we were informed immediately. Given however that the buses were here, we might as well thought given there is an issue let us maximise the opportunity, so we once again brought in the professionals to see how we could even further improve on what we had originally envisaged.

845 We have received a possible solution, it is currently being looked at by the professionals and we should be able to move quickly enough so that hopefully by before the end quarter of next year all of the new buses will have whatever new modification is agreed by then.

850 Hon. S M Figueras: I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for that answer.

There is an aspect of the usability of the bus fleet that we have not alighted upon yet, but which I would quite like to raise in the context of the original question and that is that certain concerns that have been raised with me directly and which have been observed on social media, in relation to the usability of the bus in a particular manoeuvre, which is at the bottom of Red Sands Road and the junction with Rosia Road when they are turning to head northbound.

855 We are informed, Mr Speaker, and perhaps the Hon. Minister is already aware of this, that there is an issue in relation to the visibility for the driver of the bus in negotiating that manoeuvre and perhaps the hon. Minister will be so kind as to let us know whether (a) he is aware of the issue; (b) whether it is in fact an issue at all and (c) if it is, what is proposed to be done to address it?

860 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in respect of the immediate supplementary that he asked me, I am informed by the Bus Company manager that has been resolved. So I am sure the hon. Gentleman will be happy about that, as certainly am I. The moment I was informed, we met to see what the issue was and I am informed reliably by the Bus Company manager that that is no longer an issue.

865 I would like to say to the hon. Gentleman, and I know that he will appreciate the answer, because again he is an enthusiast about transport and motor vehicles, that he will know that Gibraltar is not hamstrung, but Gibraltar has to abide by European Regulations. He knows that Gibraltar had to buy, at this juncture, the best available technology which was the Euro 6. He will know from his own reading that the Euro 6 and the catalytic converter are big pieces of equipment and that fitting that into a tight configuration... Remember that the buses can only be of certain length in Gibraltar because otherwise they are unable to negotiate, for example, the corner of the Supreme Court and other parts of Gibraltar. If Gibraltar had wider roads, and did not have these difficulties, we could have ordered a longer bus and therefore the configuration inside would not have been determined by the width of our roads. So that is the conditionality on which any bus negotiating those roads has to be built. And of course you need to incorporate the catalytic converter in order to reduce emissions. It is an EU Regulation which we must adhere to.

875 Our second point to make which I know the hon. Gentleman also knows, but I am also saying it for the record of Hansard, the EU mandates a certain ability and certain dimensions for people who are wheelchair bound to be able to negotiate and turn around in a bus independently.

880 Now, if you take into account those EU mandatory guidelines in respect of the ability of a person in a wheelchair to be able to turn around, if you take into account the length of the road, the configuration of the bus suddenly becomes quite a limited feast indeed and we had to work within those parameters. But again, having said that and being satisfied that a wheelchair user is perfectly able to independently manoeuvre inside the bus and turn etc and in fact it may interest the hon. Gentleman to know, that in yesterday's test we had the President of the Senior Association and also a wheelchair user in a small bus to in fact make sure that the small buses servicing the Upper Town were as accessible and as friendly as they could be.

885 The small bus also has inevitably a small step, because of course the narrowness of the Upper Rock, Upper Town streets are so narrow that it is impossible to have a bus with the best engine on a flat ground level unless of course we could make them longer, which we cannot in Gibraltar. And I now, I wish I had 890 invited him to the test because there were parts of those routes in the Upper Town which really are extremely narrow and it takes great manoeuvrability to be able to negotiate them!

895 So the configuration – what I am trying to say perhaps in a clumsy, long winded way – is mandated by certain laws that we need to adhere to, which is why we came up initially with the idea of this step. But given that we had representations in the same way as he had, we thought that there was actually a further opportunity to try to better it and we think that the solution we are studying now, which of course will be approved not just by the professionals but also the by Senior Citizen Association etc, will be the right solution.

900 And I appreciate it if the hon. Gentleman were to ask me next month whether we have been able to implement them, I will be able to give him details, not just of the configuration which we will be happy to explain to him even before, but also the cost.

Mr Speaker: I have been liberal in allowing the Minister to make this wide-ranging answer because the question of the buses is a matter of public interest. But I think we have to be conscious of the fact that this is a question about additional costs in respect of certain modifications and that we cannot discuss the whole ambit of where the buses are going to be, the different routes and the problems of all routes.

905 So I have been liberal but I think that unless the hon. Member has a specific supplementary arising, we have to make further progress and move on.

Hon. S M Figueras: No, Mr Speaker, I am entirely grateful to the Minister for a very comprehensive answer which I have found extremely helpful. I am grateful.

910 Mr Speaker: Okay. Next question.

Q639/2014
Gibraltar Bus Company –
Revenue from advertising

Clerk: Question 639, the Hon. S M Figueras.

915 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say what revenue the Government of Gibraltar has received by way of bus and related advertising by the Gibraltar Bus Company on a month by month basis, since January 2010?

920 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, revenue received by the Gibraltar Bus Company is not structured on a month-by-month basis but I can provide the figures based on revenue received by financial year.

925 April 2010 to March 2011 – £65,773.75; April 2011 to March 2012 – £43,500.75; April 2012 to March 2013 – £30,231.25; April 2013 to March 2014 – £8,473.88; April this year to date – £6,873.

The Gibraltar Bus Company currently awaits the production of audited accounts from the contracted party in order to determine what further amounts are due.

930 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister provide an explanation and I will accept from him the possibility that he may not have been made aware of the reasons why, but certainly if he has the information, could he provide more details to this House as to what the significant decline from £65,000 in the financial year 2010-11 to £8,000 effectively in the last financial year 2013-14 to what it can be attributed?

935 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am advised that there is a difference of opinion as to the amount owing, which is why the company has asked for audited accounts. I am also advised that once that figure, that difference is agreed, there should of course be substantial more revenue to the Bus Company. I personally have asked for a full report on this and requested the reasons for the outstanding amounts.

940 Hon. S M Figueras: Could he confirm just for clarification's sake that the company that has been asked for audited accounts is the current supplier of the service to the Gibraltar Bus Company, i.e. Big Publications Ltd?

945 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker.

Q640/2014

Gibraltar Bus Company –
Government contribution to advertising contractor

950 Clerk: Question 640, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say what contribution the Government has made to the contractor managing the advertising on the buses since they were awarded the contract in 2012?

955 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, as I noted to the hon. Gentleman in Question 213/2013, upon commencement of the agreement Big Publications Ltd received the sum of £15,000 to cover initial costs relating to the production and installation of the advertisements. These costs were, when I answered the question in 2013, paid back in full to the Gibraltar Bus Company Ltd.

960 Hon. S M Figueras: And for the avoidance of doubt, Mr Speaker, can the Minister say therefore that the £15,000 paid back to the bus company was as an independent transaction to the receipt of revenue by the Gibraltar Bus Company?

965 Hon. N F Costa: That is correct, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q641/2014

VemaOil –
Ship to ship bunkering at night

970 Clerk: Question 641, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Port state if VemaOil is conducting ship-to-ship bunkering at the Detached Mole during the silent hours – that is from 11.00 p.m. to 7.00 a.m. – and if so, could this practice stop so that the noise emanating from the pumping from ship to ship does not continue to stop the sleeping habits of people in the Westside of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

980 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in the first place, I do not accept, with respect, the premise of the question posed by the hon. Gentleman, that the sleeping habits of Westside residents are disturbed by the noise emanating from the pumping.

985 If, however, the hon. Gentleman has any evidence to substantiate his assertion, which I do not accept for the reasons I will develop later to him, I would be very grateful for that information.

Bunkering operations are conducted at all times of the day and therefore VemaOil does conduct ship to ship bunkering operations during silent hours. The latest report from the Environmental Agency, which recently conducted noise level readings during the silent hours, indicates that whether operating or not, the noise levels from the Vemaspirit remained at acceptable level at all times.

990 Mr Speaker, if I may add, stopping bunkering operations during silent hours would have a very negative impact on the bunkering industry in Gibraltar. It is worth noting that VemaOil's business accounts for 24% of the bunker supplied.

To further assist the hon. Gentleman, the GPA – the Port Authority – has not received any complaints that are specific to bunkering operations from the Vemaspirit, but should there be any complaints, we will 995 of course be happy to co-operate with our colleagues at the Environment Department to reduce any impact on the public.

With respect to the hon. Gentleman, I think he may be confusing the noise levels emanating from the generators of arrested vessels which have previously been held at the Detached Mole and in the Western Anchorage, but have since been repositioned further away from populated areas in the Eastern Anchorage.

1000 Although not in the Answer, Mr Speaker, it is just to say that the complaints received relate specifically to that: to the noise of generators.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, for that explanation.

1005 In relation to one of the statements made by the Hon. Minister in relation to the information I have, I had representations made to me which I am not at liberty to be able to pass on to the Government because they very clearly told me that they want to keep it in that particular way.

1010 However the Hon. Minister does confirm the fact that this particular work does occur during the silent hours and obviously to a lot of residents in that particular area of Gibraltar, the Westside of Gibraltar, no doubt it is a nuisance, despite the fact, which I take on board that the Hon. Minister does say that the Environmental Agency maintains the view that they are within acceptable levels.

Now, despite that sort of difference of view between the representation I have had and the views of the Environmental Agency, could I not perhaps ask the Minister whether he can actually look at the specific contract with the particular company involved in this particular work to see whether the work can be done during normal working hours as opposed to the silent hours?

1015 I am not a lawyer, I do not know what sort of legal issues do emerge here, but if there is a particular way that the work can be done during normal working hours as opposed to the silent hours, I suppose then we could find a win/win situation for everyone. So could I leave it to the Minister, if he could actually look into this matter?

1020 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, let me start by saying that I wish to clarify that it is not that the Environmental Agency has taken a view; the Environmental Agency has in fact conducted a test. So it is not a human being going and listening. It is actually a test which the Environmental Agency tells me are at acceptable levels in respect of the bunkering.

1025 If the Environmental Agency has said to me that during the night the bunkering sound was emitting a noise decibel level which would detrimentally impact on residents of Westside area, I would have immediately intervened and he has my personal assurance on that. And if I had not, the Hon. the Minister for the Environment certainly would have.

1030 What the tests of the Environmental Agency and what the Port Authority advises me and that certainly is a view from the Port Authority, as opposed to a test conducted by the Environmental Agency, is that the noise that emanates sometimes at night, relates to generators and the generators are of arrested vessels.

I am assured, Mr Speaker, it has nothing to do with the Vemaspirit. As I said, if it did, both the Minister for the Environment and I would have acted immediately.

1035 What we have done, when we were advised that as a result of the forensic tests the noise level emanated from the generators, the Port has repositioned these arrested vessels further away and where possible, the Eastside. In the same way that he has received representations which I totally believe because I have received representations, it was as a result of those representations that we conducted the investigation that we did and which is why we are satisfied that it is nothing to do with the Vemaspirit and everything to do with the generators.

1040 So if I thought there was an issue, I would certainly have looked at the contract but because it is not anything to do with the Vemaspirit, there is no need for me to do that, which is to answer specifically the supplementary of the hon. Gentleman.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I could ask just one more supplementary question.

1045 Can I now concentrate on this latter part which is on the vessels which have been arrested and have now been moved away as a result of the noise emanating from the generators?

Does the Minister have in mind a date when this decision took effect as to moving away the ships? Are we talking about weeks, months or more than six months perhaps? Just to have an idea basically.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): If I may assist, Mr Speaker.

1050 I held a number of meetings with the representatives of the Port and the Environmental Agency and so on. This decision is probably several months old, but that is in relation to one particular vessel which had to come back for a short period. I am not sure whether it was to shelter from heavy seas and therefore there might have been a little incident over a short period of time when it had to come back to the west. However, I have no knowledge of arrested vessels on a day-to-day basis.

1055 The thing is that arrested vessels are often not in very good condition and it is quite often that it is these vessels that have generators which are particularly noisy. But we took steps quite some time ago but if there have been any cases recently, it may have been that they have come into the Westside either to shelter from severe weather on the Eastside or perhaps for fuel or something else. But obviously I do not have the exact 1060 details here.

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q642/2014

Bunkering at Detached Mole– Monitoring air pollution levels

Clerk: Question 642, the Hon. J J Netto.

1065

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state if there is on-sight sampling of air pollution of the Detached Mole or in the Westside of Gibraltar taking place, in order to monitor the air pollution emanating from the bunkering activities and if so, please provide a statement as to the levels of pollution taking place throughout the last 12 months?

1070

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there is no on-sight sampling of air pollution on the Detached Mole. There are diffusion tubes forming part of the passive 1075 monitoring programme that monitor volatile organic compounds in the area of North Mole, Harbour Views and Queensway.

Levels recorded in the past few years have been consistently low.

1080

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may ask a supplementary question, the Hon. Minister for the Environment mentioned the fact that there are diffusion tubes recording the levels of pollution taking place and whilst accepting what the data shows is within permitted levels of pollution, can I not put to the Hon.
Minister that perhaps we ought to try and impose on the different contractors in this field better technologies in relation to the capture of toxic fumes in order to avoid even lower levels of pollution taking place, particularly in the west of Gibraltar.

1085

If my memory serves me right, I think the Hon. Minister himself alluded to this technology at his Budget speech. Perhaps this would be an opportunity for them to give us an updated statement on progress on this front.

1090

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is not exactly what the question is about, but I believe that I would need confirmation on this that bunkering operations already use vapour recovery technology.
Certainly we have not had complaints of smells associated with bunkering that there were some years ago, so I can only assume, but I would have to confirm this because I am asked about air pollution monitoring not specifically what comes out of the bunkering vessels, but I am fairly sure that there are vapour recovery systems in place but I would need notice of that question, and I would have thought that my colleague, the 1095 Minister with responsibility for the Port would provide that information.

Hon. J J Netto: I am quite happy Mr Speaker for the Hon. Minister to provide that kind of confirmation without necessarily having to put another question next month, so long as he can provide the information.

Q643-644/2014

Fishing with long lines in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters – Monitoring since January 2012

1100

Clerk: Question 643, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state if the Department of the Environment or any other official entity has kept a list of vessels and its owners with regard to fishing with 1105 long lines, since January 2012, the monitoring of fish stock caught, quantity and the sustainability of such stock in the foreseeable future in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1110 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Question 644.

Clerk: Question 644, the Hon. J J Netto.

1115 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state if the Spanish fishermen have been fishing with long lines in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters since January 2012 and if so, provide the total figure broken down by month?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1120 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, may I as a preamble to the prepared answer just say that long line fishing was not caught and not covered by the Nature Protection Act and therefore not regulated until the new regulations come into force at the beginning of next year.

1125 Mr Speaker, the fishing report as it is colloquially known, performed an assessment of marine stocks in BGTW. Anecdotal evidence has been received since then, but one of the main conservation measures delivered through the new legislation is, or will be, the collection of robust data of fish stocks which will in turn ensure truly sustainable management of this resource.

The Department has both anecdotal evidence as well as some visual observation of Spanish fishermen fishing with long lines in BGTW. The Department does not have records broken down by months.

1130 Hon. J J Netto: Could I therefore translate the answered statement given by the Hon. Minister to saying that there is no official record as to fishing with long lines by Spanish fishermen and there is no evidence in the past as to the quantity and sustainability of such stocks at the moment?

1135 In other words, what the Minister is actually saying is that as a result of the new regulations, we will start monitoring what actually has been fished with long lines and the sustainability of such stocks in the foreseeable future. Is that the correct interpretation of what the Hon. Minister has said?

1140 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, that is certainly what the regulations set out to do. Clearly the practical nature of this sort of monitoring is not simple. It is not something that can be done without a certain amount of work but certainly the intention is that there will be monitoring of this, which has not been monitored in the past, because it was absolutely not covered by any law. Therefore there was no regulation whatsoever, but that is the intention.

1145 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given that that is the intention, can I then ask the Hon. Minister as to when anyone wishing to fish with these sort of customs, with long lines, will be issued with a licence?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the requirement of the new marine regulations which were recently published makes it clear that in order to fish with long lines, as from the date when they come into effect, people will require licences.

1150 Hon. J J Netto: Will this include Spanish fishermen also fishing with long lines as well?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the law does not distinguish between nationality.

1155 Hon. J J Netto: I take it from the regulations that the permit issued will be for three years. Therefore, during the course of hopefully the next 12 months, sufficient data will be recovered in the monitoring of such stocks to be able to view and give the Department an informed view as to re-providing licences in the future.

But when does the Minister think the Department should be in a position to have sufficient scientific data to be able to know the level of licence to be issued or indeed if any licence should be issued at all?

1160 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, clearly when the data are sufficient. We are talking about a completely new area. We are talking about things, as I said earlier, which are not simple and the collection of data on fish stocks is complex at the best of times, and therefore I cannot give a date. But at least there is now an attempt to have such data, which there has never been in the past.

1165 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I obviously take on board what the Hon. Minister is saying that this is new ground and they have to do a lot of work. So in that particular way, I am quite lenient as to allowing him to make that statement.

But given that the actual regulation – and I am talking about clause 7(2) – makes it clear that:

‘permission to fish with long lines granted pursuant to this chapter shall be valid for a period of three years which may be renewable in the light of available evidence on the sustainability of marine stocks within British Gibraltar Territorial Waters’.

1170 Therefore, if licences start to be issued say from next week, for anyone that is fishing with these particular practices, either people who do it in Gibraltar or people who do it from La Linea or Algeciras or whatever, there has to be a point in time during the period of which the licence has been issued that will allow the officials to be able to gather the data and then make an informed decision as to renewing the particular licence.

1175 What I am trying to get at is a reasonable answer. I am not trying to pin him down as to it has to be 12 months or three months, but some kind of reasonable answer as to by when the fishermen are in a position, long before they have to renew the licences again, to be able to say, ‘Well, now we have got the data and now we can take the decision whether we will renew the licence or not.’ That is all I am asking.

1180 Mr Speaker: Yes but I cannot allow the hon. Member to ask a series of questions arising from the regulations which are not related to the two questions that he has asked. He cannot continue to do that.

What he can do, by all means if he wants to, is have a debate on the whole question of the fishing regulations that have recently been published by the Government. Nothing stops the hon. Member from doing that.

1185 But under the guise of these two questions, which are specific, he cannot deal with every aspect arising from those fishing regulations. He cannot do that.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I am happy to offer a comment on that, if I may.

1190 Mr Speaker: And I will allow the Hon. Minister certainly to do so. I think the point should be clear that what we cannot have now is a series of supplementaries, bringing up certain issues in those fishing regulations which are very, very detailed. We cannot have that now.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I refer specifically to the supplementary question that I have been asked. Any use of scientific data has to go through a number of processes.

1195 Firstly is the collection of the data – and the collection of the data in these situations clearly is not simple. Secondly, the analysis; and thirdly the data as analysed has to statistically be significant in order for that to be realistically and accurately used in order to inform policy.

1200 So all these variables have to fall in place. This is not easy, this is a challenge but the challenge is there. We have put this in. We want to do it in this way, but clearly in science you cannot know what the results of your analysis is going to be until you have carried out the analysis. So I cannot be more specific than that.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

1205 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have –

Mr Speaker: Yes.

1210 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes Mr Speaker, perhaps the Hon. Minister would assist me with this. When we talk about licensing in relation to long lines, what we are really talking about is the drawing up of a list of boats and those boats are then deemed to be licensed to fish with long lines, commonly known as palangres. That is the case is it not?

1215 Hon. J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have the regulations in front of me, but I believe that in the section on long lines we are talking about the boats. I believe so, but I do not have the regulations in front of me.

1220 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but what I mean is that effectively somebody will go to the hon. Gentleman’s Department and say, ‘I have got a boat. I have fished with long lines historically. I want my boat to be listed, in whatever schedule or list pursuant to the regulations, in order to be able to fish with long lines. That is effectively in a nutshell what the procedure is, is it not?’

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I repeat, I believe that is the case but I do not have the regulations in front of me. They are very extensive. My memory is still good but I do not have it but I believe that is the intention.

1225 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, bearing in mind that the hon. Gentleman in answer to an earlier question said that there were Spanish fishermen that were fishing in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters with long lines, the same procedure will apply to those Spanish fishermen. If they want to fish with long lines in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters, they will have to come to Gibraltar in order to effectively have their boat added on to the list.

1230 Or is it, Mr Speaker, that perhaps the Government envisages that some kind of arrangement with the heads of Cofradias of La Linea and Algeciras for them to provide a list of boats to the hon. Gentleman's Department?

1235 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in relation to long lines, which is what we are talking about now, the latter is not correct. The former is correct – and I am qualifying it that I am going on memory – because there will be no distinction between nationalities.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, in terms of enforcement is it the Wildlife Wardens who will be enforcing this particular piece of legislation or will it be the Police?

1240 I ask because I saw – as indeed many people in Gibraltar saw – an interview by Chief Superintendent Mifsud just before the Viewpoint programme, in which he appeared to indicate that the enforcement of the regulations was a matter for the hon. Gentleman's Department, not for the Police and that the Police would be more in an assisting role but the enforcement would be the hon. Gentleman's Department. I just wonder whether the hon. Gentleman could comment on that?

1245 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think that is a supplementary arising from this question. The only thing I will offer is that clearly the Department of Environment's officials do not have powers of arrest.

1250 Hon. D A Feetham: And, Mr Speaker, can I ask the hon. Gentleman, he would expect that this particular legislation would be enforced as against Gibraltarians in exactly the same way as they were enforced against Spanish nationals coming in to our waters, and that if there are Spanish boats coming in to our waters laying long lines without being registered and licensed in accordance with the regulations, that the Hon. Minister would expect that they be treated with the full force of the law in exactly the same way as Gibraltarian nationals fishing in these waters without a licence would be dealt with.

1255 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the law does not distinguish between nationalities.

Q645/2014

Fishing arrangements within British Gibraltar Territorial Waters – Nature Conservancy Council discussions

Clerk: Question 645, the Hon. J J Netto.

1260 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide a date since January 2012 in which the Nature Conservancy Council has met in order to discuss the fishing arrangements within British Gibraltar Territorial Waters, and provide Parliament with a statement of its deliberations and conclusions?

1265 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, as I have repeatedly stated in this House, the Nature Conservancy Council is a statutory consultee which runs independently of the Ministry and Department.

1270 I therefore do not have information as to when they meet, nor regarding their deliberations.

1275 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, with the greatest respect to the Hon. Minister, that is not entirely true because while it may be true that he does not sit when the Nature Conservancy Council is actually meeting, he certainly has his Head of Department who does sit in the Nature Conservancy Council and presumably, one would have thought that the Head of Department would make regular reports to the Minister in this field, as indeed in many other fields, in order to keep the Minister abreast of information taking place in what is an extremely important body, which is there set out to advise the Minister in matters pursuant to the environment. So that is not entirely correct.

1280 I think it is also true to say, and it is quite reasonable to say, that if we are talking about transparency on such important matters, then the Minister ought to really provide Parliament with the kind of information which I am seeking, and giving advanced notice, so that we can have proper discussions, so we can have proper debate on matters that affect Gibraltar and not try to hide away on this kind of artificial barrier that he does not sit in the meeting.

1285 Could the Hon. Minister just simply brush away the artificial barrier and provide Parliament with a decent answer?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is really incredible the Member opposite is factually incorrect. He may think that my Head of Department sits in on the Scientific Authority because that in fact is what he wanted to do when he was Minister for the Environment and the Scientific Authority was an independent scientific body and he wanted to change it completely. I believe he wanted to chair the Nature Conservancy Council and he wanted his officials to be members of the Nature Conservancy Council.

1290 I have gone down a completely different avenue precisely because I believe in independence and transparency and the Nature Conservancy Council now is made up of independent experts. No public official is a member, they run themselves independently, they meet independently, I ask them for an opinion when I need their opinion, they offer an opinion when they think that I should have one but I do not get involved in running them. I do not control it, I do not wish to control it, I think they have to have the independence of mind, to be able to debate things scientifically and to give me sound advice without any political interference.

1295 If what the Member opposite is saying that I should interfere politically in what is an independent scientific consultative body then, Mr Speaker, I am afraid that is not the kind of Minister that I am, nor is that the kind of Government that I belong to. It is absolutely incorrect and therefore I completely reject his statement. (Banging on desks)

1300 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, the hon. Minister is actually talking nonsense. (Laughter) He is actually talking nonsense because by definition, those people sitting on the Nature Conservancy Council, as he has just rightly pointed out, are scientific academic people – people who are used by the very nature of their careers, to be able to make decisions based on evidence and be able to publish it.

1305 There is nothing wrong with people who are scientists to publish that information and it would be good for democracy and it would be good for transparency and it would be good for Parliament, if such information made by scientists would be provided not just to Parliament but indeed to the whole society so that the whole society could have a proper discussion on what is an extremely important matter.

1310 I put it once again to the Minister: the Minister is simply hiding away with a lot of nonsense he is uttering, in order not to provide the information. And what brings me back to my question, is that there are particular references in the actual regulations like 12(2) which actually argue that the Minister shall, after consultation with the Nature Conservancy Council, have the power to terminate the fishing period, etc, etc.

1315 In other words, the Minister shall have consultation with the Nature Conservancy Council so he can have it. He can then say it is independent but he can have it – but Parliament cannot have it. I think, Mr Speaker, it is most unreasonable and the Minister ought to reconsider his position.

1320 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, for matters unrelated to anything that has been discussed, can I just invite the House to recess for 10 minutes to give you an opportunity to recess for 10 minutes.

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess for 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 11.10 a.m. and resumed sitting at 11.19 a.m.

1325

Clerk: We carry on with supplementary answers to Question 645.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.

1330 Mr Speaker, if the Nature Conservancy Council, as the independent body that it is, wants to publish its deliberations, it is free to do so. Mr Speaker, they are an advisory body to me. I will listen to their advice and I will I think, usually follow it, but I am free not to, and then I am answerable for those decisions. I am answerable for the decisions that I take based on the advice, whether I follow it or not. But the Nature Conservancy Council is not answerable to Parliament, nor am I answerable for the Nature Conservancy Council's deliberations and views.

1335 Therefore, I think that my statement is perfectly justified, I will remain answerable for whatever I do following consultation, but the Nature Conservancy Council cannot be held to account for the views that it holds as an independent scientific body. Well, they can be held responsible for them but they are not answerable to anybody other than themselves.

Q646/2014
Wildlife Wardens –
Offences against Nature Protection Act

Clerk: Question 646, the Hon. J J Netto

1345 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state, since the inception of the Wildlife Wardens, how many vessels have been stopped and searched, found the owners to be acting against the Nature Protection Act and have been prosecuted, broken down by nationality, nature of offence, the fine imposed and date?

1350 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, none, sir.

1355 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the powers given to the Wildlife Wardens in terms of matters of being able to search vessels, is that not being given any priority by the Department of the Environment?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Wildlife Wardens were... Well there were not Wildlife Wardens appointed; there were powers of Wildlife Wardens given to employees of the Department of the Environment. It is a slight difference, but I think it should be pointed out nonetheless.

1360 They were appointed some time ago, but their ability to go out at sea only commenced a couple of months ago on the acquisition of the vessels about which there is another question later on. At this point in time, priority is being given to getting the vessel in running order, to monitoring and gathering observations and data.

1365 The enforcement is something that they are able to do within the law, as I said they have no powers of arrest and their role will develop as time goes on. This is a very new body with very new utilities and therefore it is a role that is being developed that is not fully rolled out yet.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, given the fact that there is another question in the Order Paper which is Question 648, I might as well leave it until that question arises.

Q647/2014
Climate change –
Gibraltar's latest submission to combat

1370

Clerk: Question 647, the Hon. J J Netto.

1375 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide Parliament with the latest copy of Gibraltar's submission to combat climate change in compliance with the EU requirements for 2020?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1380 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there is no one document which can be classified as Gibraltar's submission to combat climate change. The Government is working on various fronts to this effect. If the Member opposite could clarify if he is referring to a particular report or process, I can then provide an answer.

1385 Hon. J J Netto: Perhaps Mr Speaker, if I can put it in a different way, what are the documents that the Hon. Minister is referring to?

1390 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, I think that really the onus should be on the Member opposite to tell me which documents he wants to see. I can tell him that there are various energy reports as well as the report which the Climate Change Taskforce is working on and will present to Government, which will then feed into the Revised Climate Change Programme. So there are a number of things that we are doing in relation to climate change, but without knowing specifically...

1395 The Member opposite asked for the latest copy of a submission which does not exist in the way that this has been formulated. I do not really know what submission – submission to whom? There is no such one report and therefore as I say, there are a number of areas in which we are working, but I cannot pin down from the question what he is actually referring to.

If he wants to be more specific and ask me for next time, I will be very happy to provide.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I will take this matter further by writing to the Minister.

Q648/2014

Marine research and monitoring programmes – Purchase of two vessels for Department of the Environment

1400 Clerk: Question 648, the Hon. J J Netto.

1405 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, since the purchase of the two vessels for the Department of the Environment, can the Minister for the Environment state what marine research and monitoring programmes have been conducted, or are envisaged to be conducted, in the next 12 months?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1410 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the two vessels that have been purchased by the Department of the Environment have, and will be used, in order to carry out monthly coastal monitoring and sampling.

In addition, both vessels have and will continue to be used, in relation to sub-tidal and marine ecological surveys, as well as reef surveillance conducted by the Department.

1415 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, perhaps if the Hon. Minister could provide more information in relation to this particular aspect of new work which the Minister is actually alluding to: does this involve the powers of search of vessels fishing in Gibraltar?

1420 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the question specifically refers to marine research and monitoring programmes, and I have answered on marine research and monitoring programmes.

To expand, this includes sampling of sea water for analysis. It involves monitoring, carrying out ecological surveys along the shore and reef areas. It allows the Department to carry out work in its own vessel, whereas in the past it would have to hire or borrow the use of vessels from either private entities or other Government agencies.

1425 The power to follow up possible infractions of marine regulations at sea is not a power that the vessel has, but the people on the vessel have. Those powers, as I said earlier exist, no powers of arrest and the body is developing and gathering information and planning a strategy which we need to roll out in the fullness of time.

1430 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am actually bringing back the previous question which I mentioned before and I am putting the two together. We do know from the regulations, that is clause 45, that they do have the powers of search and what I am trying to get at with my questions is, whether that power to search is being carried out.

1435 In other words now that they have the vessels at their disposal, since the time that they have had the vessel at their disposal, are they actually going out – amongst other things that they may be doing, which I take for granted – searching vessels in compliance with the Nature Protection Act? Are they doing that, yes or no?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, so far no vessel has been searched.

1440 Hon. J J Netto: Is it the intention to search vessels over the next 12 months?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: I cannot predict what may or may not happen, Mr Speaker. They have a power, they have not yet used it. Those are the facts. (Interjection) Precisely, we make the law and as I say the powers are there, they have not yet been used.

1445

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the context that we have a set of new regulations where it talks about the sustainability of fish stocks, where it talks about the power being given to the Wildlife Wardens in relation to be able to monitor and have the powers of search, is it not reasonable, given that the Government has provided both the resources and the legislation to carry it out, that it would be a priority then, amongst other things, to be able to search boats which are fishing in accordance with the Nature Protection Act? I would have thought that the answer is yes.

1450

Is it that they have no interest whatsoever or is it that the Government does not want to instruct them to do any actual search at all?

1455

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, really I am quite overwhelmed at the interest that the Member opposite has in protecting our marine life. I can only assume that these questions are trying to urge us on to increase the population of marine life in our waters and do not have some other less obvious political motive in order to just cause mischief.

1460

Mr Speaker, I have said it quite clearly, there are powers. I am not going to tell anybody, nor would anybody who has any connection to law enforcement or anything like this, tell people what you are going to do and when you are going to do it and whether or not you are going to do it.

Mr Speaker, the law is clear and we have the power to do certain things. We have not used that yet and time will tell.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the hon. Gentleman help me with this: how are the roles of the Wildlife Wardens and the Police going to be defined in the context of enforcement? Because the word enforcement encapsulates a wide series of situations.

1470

Search of a vessel: that can be classified as enforcement of the Nature Protection Act, as indeed the regulations – they have not come into operation; they come into operation next year. But how is there going to be this interplay between the Wildlife Wardens and the Police?

I ask because there is confusion out there in relation to this particular issue. You heard the interview of Chief Inspector Mifsud before the Viewpoint programme in which he was under the impression that the enforcement of the marine regulations, for example, was going to be a matter for the Wildlife Wardens and for the Environment Department. But of course they have no powers of arrest and I just wonder whether he can provide some information in relation to that?

1475

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, again I do not think this is a direct consequence and a direct supplementary, but nevertheless I will assist.

1480

This is a very new concept in Gibraltar. If we were just talking about a marine protected area anywhere else in the world, it would be much simpler, but we know the complexities of Gibraltar and the fact that we have a neighbouring state with certain views and claims as to sovereignty and so on. But it is a new concept and the interaction and the procedures are being developed. This is a relationship which is being developed and is under discussion at the moment, so I am not able at this point in time, nor do I think it would be correct for me at this point in time, to give more specific details of the interaction between the different elements.

1485

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, is it the intention of the Department to ensure that compliance with registration in accordance with the vessel's details, are actually monitored as the law says by the Wildlife Wardens?

1490

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the law says (A Member: What it is.) what it is, exactly. The intention is that whatever the law says within the capabilities of the Department, if it falls upon the Department, these things will be done. Am I going to have to now go clause by clause to say exactly what we are going to do, when we are going to do it, what priority it will have?

1495

This is a massive piece of legislation. I think frankly, it is a work of art and I must praise the work that has been carried out by the Department of the Environment, the countless sessions with all the different stakeholders in bringing this together, in working something which has been broadly acceptable by the stakeholders, as you could see on the Viewpoint programme just last week, how everybody there was praising the work of the Department.

1500

But I cannot now go clause by clause and say when we are going to do this, when we are going to do the other. Firstly, it would be an absolute waste of everybody's time and secondly, it is not something that we should publicly state. But clearly, the law is there, the intention is there and we will do our very best to do it in the interest of both marine stocks and those who enjoy exploiting it.

Q649/2014
Attack by macaque –
Investigation

Clerk: Question 649, the Hon. J J Netto.

1510 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state if an investigation has been conducted as a result of the macaque that attacked Mr Stuart Gravenell which left him with 40 stitches to his arm and if so, please provide Parliament with a copy of the said report?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, Mr Stuart Gravenell has stated that he is seeking legal action and therefore I am not in a position to comment on the matter, other than to say that a report is being prepared.

1520 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I take on board what the Hon. Minister has just said, in that Mr Gravenell is taking legal action. But could perhaps the Hon. Minister go as far as to confirm that the attack took place and that 40 stitches had to be placed on the arm of this particular gentleman as a result of the macaque attacking this particular person? Can he go as far as confirming that?

1525 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not think so. Legal action could actually dispute the facts and therefore I do not think that I should go into that area at this point in time.

Hon. J J Netto: But he can confirm the fact that a gentleman by this name actually went to the Accident and Emergency Department of the Hospital, or someone with an incident similar to the one reported in the press.

1530

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, a report is being prepared and I think I would be on dangerous ground if I were to say anything and it could prejudice the position if legal action in fact is instituted.

Q650/2014
Attacks by macaques since January 2012 –
Statistics

1535 Clerk: Question 650, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please provide Parliament with the statistics available in the A&E Department of the GHA and GOHNS as a result of attacks by macaques to persons since January 2012 on a monthly basis, by all categories, broken down by minor and major incidents?

1540

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the schedule attached, which I now hand over, refers to incidents which cannot necessarily be described as 'attacks', as some may have been occasioned by the inappropriate action of the person.

1545

It is difficult, especially in retrospect, to define these as major or minor, but in order to assist, the following will be useful. Of the incidents listed in the schedule, 14 were scratches; 69 had antibiotics prescribed; 7 required sutures; and one person was admitted.

1550

Q651-652/2014
New Marine Protection Regulations –
Reporting by fishermen to official authorities

Clerk: Question 651, the Hon. J J Netto.

1555 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how the catch of tuna prescribed in the new Marine Protection Regulations will be reported to the official authorities?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1560 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 652.

Clerk: Question 652, the Hon. J J Netto.

1565 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state how the data provided by the fishermen with regard to compliance with Marine Protection Regulation be verified by the persons responsible for the production of statistics?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

1570 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, it is a requirement of the Tuna Preservation Regulations for all catch data to be reported to the Department during open season, on each occasion that a specimen is landed in Gibraltar. Reporting forms are being finalised and will be published on the Department website ahead of the tuna season.

1575 The data will be verified by collaboration between the different sections of the Department. Monitoring will be done through spot checks at sea by the protection and enforcement team. I will also remind the hon. Member that it is an offence to falsify data with a penalty leading to the possible revocation of the licence.

Q653-654/2014
Old St Bernard's Hospital site –
Control of dust permit application; site inspection by Environmental Agency

Clerk: Question 653, the Hon. J J Netto.

1580 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, further to the answer given to Question 505/2014, can the Minister for the Environment state if GJBS submitted an application under the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulations 2010, prior to commencement of works at the old St Bernard site and if so, did the Environmental Agency issue the necessary permit?

1585 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 654.

1590 Clerk: Question 654, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state on how many occasions the Environmental Agency has visited or inspected the construction site at the old St Bernard's Hospital since commencement of work, broken down on a monthly basis?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Environment (Control of Dust) Regulations 2010 came into effect on 15th July 2010. GJBS had a comprehensive generic plan approved by the Environmental Agency and the existing Certificate No. 25/13 is valid from 17th April 2013 to 17th April 2015.

1600

The Environmental Agency has not inspected the construction site at the old St Bernard's Hospital on a monthly basis. Inspections have been carried out to the north and south wing sheltered housing and dementia centre of the old John Mackintosh wing for the issuance of Certificates of Fitness in respect of the completed works in February and July 2014.

1605

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, for that answer.

The Hon. Minister says that the necessary permit was issued, if I understood him correctly, in April 2013. Is that correct?

1610

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I would just like to rectify, I was reading a prepared text. This is not a dementia centre. It is currently being used for residents of the Jewish Home and also some sheltered housing, just to correct that.

Mr Speaker, it was valid from 17th April 2013 to 17th April 2015. This is the current one but the original one will have been issued when the law came into effect sometime in 2010.

1615

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, my understanding is that the law came into effect in 2010, the construction started I believe at the beginning of the summer 2012, so that would have been the date when the first permit might have been issued, although the Minister made reference to the second permit which he says was from April 2013 onwards.

1620

Now he may not have at his disposal in his notes there, whether one of the conditions in the permit was that in erecting the scaffold around the works for the demolition particularly that had to be carried out, it was a requirement to provide dust sheeting to avoid dust moving onto the adjoining area where residents live.

1625

Could he actually confirm whether that was a requirement or not, if he has got the information available to him there?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not have that information. What I can say is that I believe that the works at the old St Bernard site, and this is the John Mackintosh Wing, started in 2009 which was prior to the legislation coming into effect and its first Certificate of Approval, which was Certificate No. 14/11 was in fact, according to my notes, issued in February 2011. I can only assume that there was a subsequent one which covered – or that one will have covered the period to 2013, would have probably have been two years and then they are covered now by the second one.

1630

I can repeat what I said in an intervention at the last meeting, that the Agency has not received any complaints in relation to dust emissions, and has only received one complaint about the site which was in connection with noise nuisance on 14th August this year, which was dealt with. The Agency is not aware of an issue with dust, but clearly they are covered by the certificate.

1635

Hon. J J Netto: Okay, so the Agency is not aware of an issue as a result of no particular resident in the neighbourhood making a complaint but that does not deter the fact from whenever the work started there was, prior to 2009 or onwards, the fact that at the commencement of the works, as is the practice all throughout any particular contractor doing works of a similar nature, they have to, require the a permit.

1640

The Agency has to consider the nature of the works, which amongst other things in this case was demolition, which does mean a lot of dust being bandied around in the neighbouring area. So one would 1645 have assumed that that would have been uppermost in the mind of the officials when considering putting dust sheets covering the scaffolding.

Now I put it to him, to the Minister again, which he may not have information available within his notes, whether that was a requirement whenever it was the beginning of the work being carried out.

1650 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information but I would assume that if he assumes that that happened, that would have happened when the site opened in 2009 and when its first Certificate of Approval was issued in 2011, so perhaps he should be asking somebody on that side of the House.

As regards whether or not it was required at the time of any permit issued during this administration, I would have to go back and check. But I can only assume that this was...

1655 If a certificate is issued, the Environmental Agency will be satisfied that the necessary steps are being taken, otherwise they would not issue the certificate. So I can only assume that the necessary steps had been taken and have been taken, to ensure that dust is not a nuisance, and the absence of complaints from the neighbours, when we all know in Gibraltar that if there were any real issues, they would have been complaining or there would have been other ways of getting the information to the Environment Agency or to myself as Minister... There have been no complaints so I can only assume that the Agency was justified in issuing the certificate because the conditions were correct for the certificate to have been issued, which has resulted in no complaints up to date. I think, Mr Speaker.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman's juxtaposition, the question of no complaint as an attitude of the officials not necessarily in the first place analysing the nature of the work to be carried out. I am not interested in the past. (Interjection by Hon. Member Dr J E Cortes) I am not interested in the past; I am interested in the present.

1665

Now the point I am making now, given that this is an issue that has been raised last month and this particular month, has the Minister asked the Environmental Agency, with the continuation of the work as it is going on right now, whether the nature of the works to be carried out will continue –

1670

Mr Speaker: May I interrupt, the recording equipment has crashed. We need to recess for a few minutes. Hopefully for a few minutes.

The House recessed at 11.50 p.m.

Questions for Oral Answer

HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT

Q653-654/2014

Clerk: We carry on with Question 654.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, I think, Mr Speaker, I was in mid flow when we started with the problems with the microphones, so just to recap on my latest supplementary question. One of the things in the original answer that the Hon. Minister gave was that there has been no on-site visit by any of the officials of the Environmental Agency on this site.

Can I therefore ask the Hon. Minister whether a site visit can take place, because undoubtedly there is work going on and by the very nature of the work means more dust is going to be dispersed in the surrounding area, and I think it is only right and proper that this is considered, and if necessary, a variation to the permit contract is done, so that the contractor can put the dust sheets to avoid any more dust being flown around in the neighbouring area.

But can I also point out to the hon. Gentleman that the scaffolding has not got either any netting whatsoever. Now, netting by definition, as we know, is there simply to avoid any particular item of construction from a particular construction site from falling over and injuring, whether it is a worker within the site or members of the public. And we have had already an incident, which is being investigated in Governor's Meadows, which he is going to investigate and that is fine.

But surely there should be some sort of netting as well in the old site of the old St Bernard construction taking place there, with a view of putting netting to avoid any incident that may seriously injure a worker or a member of the public.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, what I said in my answer was that the Environmental Agency had not inspected the construction site on a monthly basis. When the Member opposite raised the issue in the last meeting, I immediately contacted the Environmental Agency. They confirmed that there had been no reports of dust specifically, and I believe that they visited the site subsequently, just to ensure that they did not detect a problem themselves. But what I said was that they had not gone on a monthly basis, because the Member opposite had asked for a breakdown on a monthly basis.

I think it is clear that it is the contractor's responsibility to comply with the conditions of the regulations. Obviously the Environmental Agency is the one that issues the certificate, but as I say, it is not that they have not been there at all. It is just that they have not been on a monthly basis.

Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, but unfortunately I do not want to necessarily keep asking more supplementary questions, but the latest supplementary answer just simply does not address the very reasonable request which I am making, and that is to say that by the very nature of the work being carried out at the old St Bernard site, by nature, regardless of the fact whether there are complaints by the residents or not, by the nature of the works being carried out, that will mean further dust being dispersed in the surrounding area. And what I am asking is for the Environmental Agency to consider that, the extent of the work that needs to be done with the view of perhaps putting the dust sheets. So that is one issue which I have asked.

45 The other issue which I have raised is that there is not netting on the scaffold there. Therefore can I ask that the... It is not something that the Environmental Agency; it is to do with the factory inspector. Unfortunately the Minister for Health and Safety is not here, but could I ask them that he communicate this with his colleague, so that the factory inspector can also look into the netting to avoid simply any item of construction falling over and injuring someone. I think that is a very reasonable request.

50 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member should take it as understood that any concerns that come to my notice, be they here across this House, members of the public, or when I access other sources like social media and so on, any concerns I always act upon them and I always take it very seriously. So he should take it as read that I will look into the concerns that have been expressed, whether they are justified or not. I am not in a position to say, but I never, ever hear anything which can be of concern to any of my fellow citizens and just do nothing about it.

Q655/2014
Macaques –
Preventing entering flats

55 Clerk: Question 655, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment state what plan, if any, the Government has in place to stop the rogue pack of macaques entering into the flats at Knights' Court, St Joseph's Estate and Alameda Estate?

60 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

65 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the macaque management team has members of staff working in urban areas, whose sole role at the moment is to push macaques out of urban areas back into the nature reserve. These teams are working on this task seven days a week.

70 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, that is fine to know, but given the fact that we have had in the last couple of weeks a surge of a particular group of macaques entering into the flats, which I have said, I think it will be more pertinent if the Minister actually answered the question, as to what can he tell the residents of those particular areas, as to what is being done in order to alleviate the concerns and the fear that the neighbours have in those areas.

75 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, exactly what I have just said. I find that I am having to repeat my answers almost on every occasion. The macaque management team has members of staff working in urban areas, including these areas, whose sole role at the moment, while there is this issue, is to push macaques out of urban areas back into the nature reserve. And they are working seven days a week.

80 If for this statement I have just made, you read the three sites which the Member opposite has mentioned, that answers the question: they are there seven days a week, causing as much disturbance to these animals as possible, with a certain measure of success, because the fact that they are in Alameda Estate is as a direct result of them having been pushed away from Main Street and the Trafalgar area.

It is a work in process and as I said, we are dedicating more resources than ever to this control and hopefully the situation will continue to improve.

85 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can I tie in a supplementary to some figures that the hon. Gentleman has provided in relation to Question 650?

90 If he looks at the statistics that he has provided in answer to Question 650, the hon. Gentleman will see that, in terms of incidents recorded at Accident and Emergency as a consequence of ape bites or ape incidents, in 2012 the total is 75 incidents reported to Accident and Emergency recorded at Accident and Emergency. In 2013 there is 106, which is a significant jump. And in 2014 up to September we are already at 99. So that shows an upward trend.

Now, can the hon. Gentleman provide a reason as to why there is this upward trend in incidents relating to apes and ape bites?

95 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I thank the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition for giving me the opportunity to respond. I had some supplementaries prepared when the question was asked, and with your leave, Mr Speaker, I will, as I was not given the opportunity by the Hon. Mr Netto earlier, I will respond now.

100 The causes of bites by macaques is usually as a reaction to some stimulus which is normally provided by a person who may make some kind of movement which the macaque misinterprets using their criteria of how a primate behaves. It may be that they have taken something and they are trying to get it back, so you cannot really attribute necessarily any increase or decrease and these are not I think statistically significant in any way to the macaques. You can perhaps attribute at least part of that to the human being.

105 I think that it is worth pointing out that it is known, and it is known in the scientific literature, that the incidents of macaque bites in relation to interactions between humans and macaques is in fact very low in Gibraltar, and studies which were published some years ago in the International Journal of Primatology of which I was a co-author, actually mention that in some of the Asian macaque sites, 11.4% of interactions result in bites; whereas in Gibraltar only 1.2% result in that.

110 But the Leader of the Opposition may be interested if I go back a few more years, in relation to macaque bites, because he says that in 2013 there were 104 or 106 – I have totted them up so maybe we are out by one or two; in 2012, 67. In 2000, there were 150; in 2007 there were 109; 2008, 122; 2009, 127; and the peak in fact was in 2011, when there were 156. You cannot relate it necessarily to any change in behaviour and you cannot use those statistics to prove anything because if you could, then I would have proved that there are fewer macaques now than there were before 2011 – fewer macaque bites, that is.

115 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker. And we acted upon it. There were incidents an increase in bites and incidents, and of course then there was culling, and then there was a significant criticism from the Opposition at the time because you were totally against culling. The reality is that if there is an explosion in ape population, it is then going to lead to an increased coming together with human beings, a contact with human beings that is going to lead to an increase in incidents.

120 Can I suggest – and what does he think about this – that in fact the increase in incidents from 2012-13...? And indeed there is an increase, or there is going to be an increase in 2014, because we are already at 99. We are only seven away, or five on his figures, from the 2013 figures, and there are still three months to go. That what we are seeing effectively is an increase in contact between human beings and macaques, probably because macaques are running wild in certain areas in town, and that is what is leading to an increase in the number of incidents and the number of bites. I am giving him an opportunity to answer that suggestion.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, not necessarily, as I explained before. It is not directly related to the number of contacts, there can be certain relationships but you cannot make that assumption.

130 The figures in my opinion are probably not statistically significant, I have not carried out a statistical analysis. This can be done, but I think that the majority of those bites – and sadly I do not have that information, and I do not even know whether that information is correct – that the majority of those bites are occasioned on the Upper Rock and not in the urban areas. So I am not sure that one thing follows the other.

135 In any case there are now fewer macaques in urban areas, thanks to the successful export of one particular group, and so I think that the danger is probably reduced. But I cannot, as a scientist, say that it is definite cause and effect.

I do not want to cause offence to those lawyers on my side of the House, but it would be much more comfortable for me if there were perhaps more scientists than lawyers in Parliament.

Q656-657/2014–
Marine life in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters – Damage by nets

140 Clerk: Question 656, the Hon. D A Feetham.

145 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please state whether his Department maintains any statistics on the damage done by drift and other nets to marine life in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

150 Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 657.

Clerk: Question 657, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Minister for the Environment accept that Spanish fishermen continue to enter into British Gibraltar Territorial Waters in order to fish with nets?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Health and the Environment.

Minister for Health and the Environment (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, damage to marine life can be quantified through physical damage to species or to ecosystems. There are also direct and indirect effects. The Department has some data on direct effects of damage, but these however, cannot be attributed to nets alone. Under the Southern Waters Management Plan, threats to marine ecosystems are discussed, and the Department monitors these in compliance with EU legislation.

160

And in answer to Question 657, yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer to 657.

165

I want to ask him this supplementary, but I want to first of all place it into context. It does relate to a matter within his responsibility. But I want to draw his attention to a statement issued by GONHS on 19th September 2011, just two months prior to the last general election. I do not know whether he was the co-author, or just the author of that statement or he had nothing to do with that statement, but certainly he led GONHS at the time, for a considerable period of time. And it said this: it talked about the use of illegal nets, the effect on marine animals, including dolphins; it said that Spanish fishermen had gone virtually unchallenged by the Gibraltar Authorities and then it said this, and I quote:

170

‘The situation is a veritable mess. There must be a change in the way that it is being handled. What is needed is the courage to enforce the laws of Gibraltar and Europe’.

Is the way that it is handled now any different to the way that it was handled in September of 2011, by the Government and by the Department that he is responsible? And has he had the courage to enforce the laws of Gibraltar and of Europe?

175

Mr Speaker: I am going to allow the Minister to answer that supplementary, but I am not going to allow a lengthy debate on this issue.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, as a Government Minister I make the laws; I am not a law enforcer. Do I have the courage? Yes, Mr Speaker, I think I do. I think there is a fundamental difference in that now we are actually actively involved in trying to obtain information which will inform how nature protection laws develop.

180

We have very recently published, I think, very brave regulations, very courageous regulations, which aim to protect for the future use of future generations our marine resources, including tuna, and therefore I think that we are now introducing a lot more, not just legislation, but also fact finding possibilities.

185

The strengthening of the Department of the Environment, which is now a completely different Department to the one that I inherited, the Chief Executive is now a scientist and there are more people working directly on environmental matters who are technically qualified.

190

We are setting up, we are obtaining equipment and facilities in order to inform us better. And therefore all the statements which were made by GONHS at the time will be able to at least be followed up, in the sense that we will have the information as to see how much damage has been done.

As I said in my answer and I said in my answer earlier, it is very difficult to gather these statistics, but nevertheless we are now building up gradually a system and a group of people who will be able to inform us in the future and to better be able to manage our marine resources.

195

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I note the hon. Gentleman’s answer that he is a law maker and is not involved with the enforcement of our laws. But let me read something from the 2011 GSLP manifesto, and I quote:

‘We do not believe it is right to allow illegal fishing in our waters and we will stop this immediately. We will ensure that the ban on the use of drift nets and other nets is enforced’.

Is he now accepting that, in the light of the answer that he has given me just a few moments ago, that the public were being misled by the commitment that the GSLP/Liberals gave at the last general election which I have just read?

200

205 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: No, Mr Speaker, this is a process. It is my aim and my vision to ensure that the marine resources of British Gibraltar Territorial Waters continue to develop and thrive, and it is my Department's aim to provide the habitat the scientific input and the protection that is required in order to achieve this.

210 If this takes a little bit longer and if the methods that we employ are a little bit more subtle as long as they result in what our aims and ambitions are, then I will be satisfied that we have fulfilled this and much more.

215 Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, if enforcement of the law is just purely a matter for the Police, and therefore the Government has absolutely nothing to do with a situation where the law is being flouted, either in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters or anywhere else... which I think is a curious statement, I have to say, because no government anywhere in the world will allow its laws to be flouted with impunity without stepping in and saying, 'Well, hang on a minute, law enforcement may be up to the police but this is not being enforced', and I want to do something about it.

220 Mr Speaker, therefore is he accepting that when they said in their manifesto that they would put an end to illegal fishing in our waters immediately, that they were misleading the people of Gibraltar, because quite clearly, Mr Speaker, he has already admitted that illegal fishing in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters is occurring today?

225 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do think that we are extending this into a debate, which is not directly related to – (Interjections) No, no, but nevertheless, I will comment.

Mr Speaker, the steps taken to protect and enhance marine life in British Gibraltar Territorial Waters started immediately. There may not have been the steps that clearly the Members opposite want to see with whatever intention they have. But I am convinced that already the state of marine life in Gibraltar waters is improved to the one that I inherited, and will be improved further.

Perhaps the Members opposite could do with a little bit more vision and a little less impatience.

EQUALITY, SOCIAL SERVICES AND THE ELDERLY

Q658-659/2014

Dr Giraldi Home employees –

Outcome of disciplinary hearing; bullying and harassment complaint

230

Clerk: Question 658, the Hon. J J Netto.

235 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services please state the outcome of a disciplinary hearing of an employee of the Dr Giraldi Home as a result of taking an undeclared packet of 200 cigarettes in her handbag through the Spanish Border, whilst travelling with other employees of the Home and a resident with challenging behaviour, back in February of this year?

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

240 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 659.

Clerk: Question 659, the Hon. J J Netto.

245 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services please state the outcome of a complaint of bullying and harassment made in July of this year by an employee of the Dr Giraldi Home.

Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

250 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, I am unable to comment on matters that concern specific individuals and make it possible for them to be identified.

The way that the question is framed is misleading, in that it suggests that such an allegation is true. The Care Agency is cautious not to accept allegations made against its employees without proper investigation.

255 When allegations of misconduct are made towards any employee of the Care Agency, these are dealt with in accordance with the Care Agency's internal policy and procedure, which are subject to the basic principles of employment law. The overriding principle is fairness.

260 All complaints are thoroughly investigated. In the event that the matter results in disciplinary proceedings the matter will be considered before an independent panel which will consider the evidence put before it, which includes both the evidence in support of the complaint and evidence in support of the employee against whom the allegation is made. It is not simply a one-sided account. The disciplinary panel is required to consider the available evidence put before it and be satisfied that the complaint is proved to the required standard. The outcome of the disciplinary hearing is a matter that is subject to confidentiality and as such it would be wholly improper of me to breach the duty of confidentiality that is owed.

265 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask the hon. Lady whether the investigation has now been finalised in terms of the disciplinary hearing is concerned and the particular person in question is now back at work?

270 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, as I said in my substantive answer, I am not at liberty to comment on specific instances, other than to say that we apply the rules and procedures of natural justice and of employment law and every single allegation that is made in relation to the Care Agency is thoroughly investigated. I cannot comment any further in relation to any particular matters.

275 Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I can assure the hon. Lady that the person sitting to his right and the Hon. Mr Bossano, when I was the Minister for Social Services, they used to question me at length on any allegations that were brought to their attention, and we had sessions here where the Members now in Government used to provide all sorts of details from the allegations made to them.

280 I am not asking for details of the name of the particular person. All I am saying is where there was such an incident, that a junior manager of Dr Giraldi Home actually took with her certainly one employed care worker of the Dr Giraldi Home, along with another one, who I understand was on a kind of probationary basis not by the Care Agency, but by another company, with a resident of Dr Giraldi Home who this particular person has challenging behaviour, went inside a car of the Care Agency, passed the Border into Spain and when stopped by the Guardia Civil, the Guardia Civil, when checking the particular bag of this particular junior manager found an undeclared packet of 200 cigarettes.

285 Now, it may be that the Minister does not want to answer the question. But it is a very serious allegation if a particular employee of the Care Agency has crossed into Spain with an undeclared pack of 200 cigarettes during normal working hours, and surely the Minister ought to come with a statement to state whether the evidence being investigated by the Care Agency backs up the claim made or not.

290 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member can rest assured that everything is investigated, and things are investigated thoroughly, and things are investigated properly, and nothing is swept under the carpet. So if he is going to refer to debates which occurred in previous Parliaments, he may well recall that many questions were asked, but very few answers were given. (Several Members: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

295 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: What I am saying, Mr Speaker –

A Member: By me particularly.

300 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, what I am saying on this occasion is that he can rest assured that allegations are thoroughly and properly considered and investigated, but that the Care Agency is under a duty to its employees to keep any outcome of any disciplinary matter confidential, because we have a duty to that employee.

305 I am happy to discuss the matter with the hon. Gentleman in confidence behind the Speaker's Chair, but he has now actually, Mr Speaker, made it almost impossible for me to give him any more information because all he has done is made the situation more specific than it was when he initially started to phrase the question.

310 So, Mr Speaker, there is no further information that I can give right now, not in this Parliament, without breaching my duty to the employee, other than to say that he can rest assured that if an allegation is made, any allegation no matter how serious, but obviously the more serious, the more serious that it will be taken but every single allegation is taken seriously and appropriate and proper action is taken in that regard.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am very glad that the hon. Lady has been so diligent in looking back all the answers I have given, although I doubt it very much.

315 But could the Hon. Minister tell Parliament why the particular person who has made a complaint of bullying and harassment has been unsuccessful in trying to get to have a meeting with the hon. Lady since back in August of this year? Has she been so worked up that she could not find time for this particular man?

320 Hon. Miss S J Sacramento: Mr Speaker, even though this supplementary question pretty much has nothing to do with the first one, I can tell the hon. Gentleman that he can rest assured that while I am very, very busy, extremely busy – and the staff in my office, who used to be the staff from his office can tell him that they are much, much busier now than they have ever been in their life, Mr Speaker – on this particular occasion and without at risk of identifying anybody on this particular occasion, I did see this particular gentleman immediately when he asked to see me. I think I saw him the following day or the day after, and 325 he asked to see me again. I arranged a meeting and this gentleman did not attend. The meeting was arranged at least twice after that occasion and that gentleman did not attend.

So it is not true to say that I did not see that gentleman. I see everybody who asks to see me. I do not necessarily see them within 24 hours but I see them as soon as I am available to see them, regardless of how busy I am. And I am indeed very busy.

330 A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Q660/2014
Contract workers in Social Services –
Details

Clerk: Question 660, the Hon. D A Feetham.

335 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services please state how many employees other than those referred to in answer to Question 508/2014 currently working in positions within her areas of responsibility are doing so on contracts of less than a year, providing a breakdown by reference to position nationality – separating British Gibraltarians and others – length of current contract and total length of time that individual has been working in a position for which any Minister has responsibility, if he or she 340 has entered into more than one contract?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

345 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, there are four employees working in positions on contracts of less than a year, three as care workers, and one as an RGN, a registered general nurse. Three are British Gibraltarians and one is Spanish. The four have 11-month contracts and the four are on their first contracts.

Q661/2014
Third-party workers in Social Services –
Details

Clerk: Question 661, the Hon. D A Feetham.

350 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Social Services, please state how many employees other than those referred to in answer to Question 509/2014 currently working in positions within her areas of responsibility are employed by a third-party corporation such as recruitment consultants, providing a breakdown by reference to position, nationality, length of current contract, and length of time
355 that individual has been working in, or occupying a position for which any Minister in the Government has responsibility?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

360 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): Mr Speaker, the individuals being referred to are not employees of the Care Agency and as such there is no contract between the Care Agency and them.

And the answer to this question is one, Mr Speaker.

365 To clarify, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman just said, on the last occasion I did say it was 33, since then to today there is one additional one.

Q662/2014

Dr Giraldi Home allegations made – Report by Sir Jonathan Parker

Clerk: Question 662, the Hon. D A Feetham.

370 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has the Government received a copy of the report by Sir Jonathan Parker into the allegations made in relation to the Dr Giraldi Home.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly.

375 Minister for Equality, Social Services and the Elderly (Hon. Miss S J Sacramento): No, Mr Speaker.

TRAFFIC, HOUSING AND TECHNICAL SERVICES

Q663-664/2014

Alameda Estate – Addressing parking concerns

Clerk: Question 663, the Hon. S M Figueras.

380 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Traffic provide an update to this House of the work he is doing to address the concerns raised with him by the tenants of Alameda Estate in relation to parking?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

385 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 664/2014.

Clerk: Question 664, the Hon. S M Figueras.

390 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Traffic say what contact he has had with members of the Tenants' Association of Alameda Estate in relation to concerns raised by tenants in relation to the dearth of parking in the area, and if he has indeed had contact, could he explain the nature of the contact and when this has taken place?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services.

395 Minister for Traffic, Housing and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I have had contact via correspondence with the Alameda Estate Tenants' Association on the issue of parking on two occasions, once on 19th September and then on 23rd October 2014, regarding the question of parking in the area.

400 Specifically, this was in connection with a request for information regarding the possible implementation of a residential parking scheme for the South District. Both letters were replied to on 16th October and 13th November 2014 respectively. Traffic and parking issues were also raised on three other occasions at Tenants' Association meetings regarding housing matters. These were on 7th June 2013, 25th February 2014, and 7th August 2014.

405 The concept of a residential parking scheme for the whole of the South District, which could or could not include Alameda Estate is being considered under the Government's Traffic and Parking Plan, which, as I have already publicly stated, will be the subject of a public consultation document that will be made available shortly.

410 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am sorry, did I hear correctly when the Hon. Minister said that the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan is now going to be the subject of an additional public consultation paper?

415 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, as publicly stated, the Traffic Plan now will go for another round of public consultation once the document is ready.

Hon. S M Figueras: I am sorry, Mr Speaker, at the risk of being cornered, when exactly was this publicly stated.

420 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, the last occasion when it was publicly stated, I believe, was in the programme Direct Democracy by the Chief Minister on GBC.

425 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister say whether the issue of parking at Alameda Estate is one that has been on the cards to be addressed as part of that plan from the very beginning, and I suspect I know the answer to the question obviously because I have had it about 100 times in the House. Is there an indication of when this particular issue might be addressed by the Hon. Minister specifically in the context of the concerns and difficulties being endured by tenants of Alameda Estate?

430 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, this part together with all the other issues relevant to the Traffic Plan will be... Shortly this will be made and then after the public consultation, it will all come – we are not going to be going... Certain things will be done at different times depending... So for example, the issue of residential parking is something that will be considered and whether we go forward with it or not will depend on exactly that.

435 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I did not ask a question – there is no question on the Order Paper about the Sustainable Traffic and Transport Plan because I have heard the answers often enough to know what was coming. But perhaps with the indulgence of the Chair, and if the Minister has the information available – which if, of course, he does not have I will be happy to make the subject of another question next month – this public consultation which was announced on Monday, and of which I was not aware, is there an indication of how long that consultation is expected to take?

440 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, it was actually prior to the Chief Minister's Direct Democracy, it was actually announced in the Party Political Broadcast. I actually did say that the document would be out for public consultation.

445 As to how long it will be out there available, we have not taken that decision yet. But, obviously it is not going to be there for an extremely long time. Remember, the public has already had a lot of opportunity to be able to put their views across.

450 Especially the initial parts of the plan when all stakeholders were asked, and everyone from Tenants' Associations to people who use our roads were consulted for their own opinions and views, and now that the feedback has come back from the consultants, there are obviously other things that people will appreciate to have an input in. Obviously this is not our plan; it is Gibraltar's plan, so it is important for us to seek any final comments that people may have.

455 It does not mean that people are going to say, 'I want this done', and the Government will go and do that. Obviously, we will be looking at the greater picture in context, but there will be that final opportunity for people to be able to have their final say in 'what about this, and what about that?', just to make sure that it really ticks all the boxes.

FINANCIAL SERVICES AND GAMING

Q665/2014

Finance Centre website –
Designer; costs

Clerk: Question 665, the Hon. D J Bossino.

460 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Financial Services state which entity designed the Finance Centre website launched earlier this year, together with details of its cost?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

465 Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the Finance Centre website was designed by Maverick in line with the new branding as 'Gibraltar Finance'. The design, build and implementation of the website was delivered in two phases. The cost of the first phase was £19,875.08, and the cost of the second phase was £9,600.04. The website has been hugely successful and it has recently celebrated its first anniversary – so it was not launched earlier this year, it was actually last year –
470 including, of course, its Facebook and Twitter functions. As the hon. Members will recall, this was launched at the Gibraltar Day in London in October 2013.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, Maverick I think is the same company which has done the Tourist Board websites. (Hon. A J Isola: Yes.) I think I have understood that correctly. In relation to that, is the 475 Hon. Minister in a position to tell me whether the opportunity to provide the service went out to tender?

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of the Financial Centre website, no. Maverick were already engaged in the rebranding of the Gibraltar Finance; it was previously known as the Finance Centre. At the time, the Finance Centre had commissioned some work from another supplier, which we did not believe sat 480 at all within what we were trying to achieve, and therefore we chose Maverick to continue with our website as opposed to the previous supplier.

There are not that many people in Gibraltar that can design websites. I am aware of one which is the one that was previously doing it, and consequently we went directly to Maverick, who were involved, as the hon. Member will know, in the GFA Campaign which is where they were first really introduced to working 485 in Gibraltar.

Hon. D J Bossino: Sorry, I am not sure if the Minister for Tourism answered this question when I posed it to him: is Maverick an outside company? It is not a Gibraltar company, is that the case?

490 Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, it is an international agency based in London, but I believe they have a Gibraltar vehicle with Gibraltar employees, who assist in the provision of services they provide in Gibraltar.

Hon. D J Bossino: I did ask these questions of the Minister for Tourism. He did not have that information available to him. But is he able to tell me what the name of the company is? Is this some 495 business name, and is there a limited company sitting behind that, and if so, who are the shareholders of that particular company are? Does he have any information available to him?

Hon. A J Isola: Sir, this is a very well known international brand agency working out of London with a very large number of staff. I certainly do not have the information as to who the shareholders are. I have 500 met one of the directors on one of my visits to London, when we went to meet with them to discuss these issues. But no, I have got no idea as to who the shareholders are. It is an international agency in London, very well known: if you Google it, they represent some of the best known brands in the world.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q666/2014
Gibraltar Government website –
Contracted designer

505 Clerk: Question 666, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister state which entity was contracted to design the recently launched website for the Gibraltar Government and why it has not been maintained?

510 Clerk: Answer the Hon. the Minister for Financial Services and Gaming.

Minister for Financial Services and Gaming (Hon. A J Isola): Mr Speaker, the design of the Government website was originally contracted to Elitech Lab, previously known as Elitad Ltd, who worked 515 on developing the site and its data management system. Once the rebranding of Government had been completed, Maverick and Elitech Lab jointly worked to complete the website incorporating the new branding and recommended management system. The new website will enable Departments to keep and maintain their own content updated and fit for purpose.

520 The website has not been maintained, as we were advised that the content had not been entirely reviewed and Government Departments have been given further time to review the data on the site. The amount of information on the website is enormous and we were advised that it was preferable to delay the new website until this exercise had been completed. We therefore reverted to the old website pending this exercise, which I understand is due to be completed next week. We expect it to be done shortly, at which time the new website will go live.

525

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, obviously Maverick features in relation to this particular venture as well, as I understand it. But he mentions another company I have taken a very quick note, is it Elitech Ltd he mentioned? (Hon. A J Isola: Elitech Lab.) Elitech Lab. Are they also an outside of Gibraltar company? What is the connection between Elitech Lab and Maverick, if there is any? I just need to understand it a bit better.

530

Hon. A J Isola: Elitech Lab, previously known as Elitad, have no relationship with Maverick, it is an entirely different company. They have a presence in Gibraltar and they have a presence in many other countries as well.

535

Hon. D J Bossino: Is it a Gibraltar company?

Hon. A J Isola: Yes, I believe it is. It has other companies elsewhere but there is a Gibraltar company.

540

Hon. D J Bossino: And, Mr Speaker, why was the decision to use both entities, as opposed to one, as happened in relation to the Finance Centre website, where he said that a local company had produced something it was not for some reason deemed sufficient and they went to Maverick. So why is it in this case they have decided to go for both entities instead of the one successful entity in relation to his other website which was Maverick.

545

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, in respect of this site the reason to merge the two providers was because Elitad had already started, then the rebranding came on board and they were then merged together, and the reason why they were merged together was because each one brought something extremely different. The data management system on the Government website is very different. That was provided to us by Elitad and they have consequently been involved throughout the whole process and they still are today.

550

Hon. D J Bossino: Does he have this information? Can he tell me what the cost was, or has been to date in relation to the Government website?

555

Hon. A J Isola: No, Mr Speaker, I do not have that available, but I will happily get that to him.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, whilst the schedule is making its way to the hon. Members, can I correct one matter which has come to light as a result of the information that has been provided to me for the purposes of this information for these questions?

600 In an earlier question talking about juveniles in prison, I mentioned that in 2013, and I gave that as an example, only one juvenile had been admitted to prison. The hon. Member now has details there in the schedule of the number of nights spent by juveniles in prison. Looking at that schedule that was provided to me, it was clear to me that in 2013 it could not possibly tally to one individual in one particular month, I believe there were 37 nights spent, and that could not possibly be one, and therefore it brought to mind that 605 the information I gave in March, I seem to recall, may have been incorrect, and therefore I enquired. I wish now to correct the earlier information. The number of juveniles in prison in 2013 were in fact three, rather than one as I previously stated.

And the reason for the error is that the law has changed in relation to who is and who is not a juvenile. Previously under 17s were juveniles; now as a result of the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Act which 610 came into force in November 2012, under 18s are juveniles. The information that I was given previously related to under 17-year-olds and therefore that is why I was given the information that only one... Looking at this information, this was compiled on the basis of the law as it is, which showed that in 2013 it was actually three, and that is why I am correcting that erroneous information which was given in a previous answer.

615 Mr Speaker: Are there any supplementaries arising from the information, the statistical information provided by the Hon. Minister?

Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, Mr Speaker, in relation to Question 674, which is in relation to the juveniles – and I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for the clarification that he has provided, particularly given that we are dealing with important matters here of juveniles spending time in HM Prison...

I know that it is a subject that we have touched upon in the past, and whether detention in HM Prison of juveniles is something that we, as a community, are satisfied with, and in discussions that we have had in the past there has been agreement across the floor that given the particular circumstances of the prison
625 occupancy figures, and the availability of a particular wing for the juveniles, I do want to resurrect the issue and ask the Minister whether there is in his mind, or the mind of those who advise him, a need to revisit the position in relation to the detention of juveniles?

Because at the end of the day, Mr Speaker, back in 2010 a statement was issued by the Members opposite, saying that it was shocking that a juvenile should spend two nights in prison, which is why I believe I think it is important that we keep this issue alive, and that we revisit it often.

And I would invite the Hon. Minister to provide details to this House of what assessment is ongoing, if any at all, in terms of making the determination that a detention centre is actually required, or should be something on the list of priorities for this community?

635 Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, the supplementary that the hon. Member raises is almost exactly the same as the next question in the Order Paper which is Question 675. I am happy to deal with it now or we will deal with it when... because the question in the Order Paper is about the possibility of creating a dedicated unit for the detention of juveniles, which arises, so perhaps we can answer that question, then deal with any supplementaries at that time.

CHIEF MINISTER

Q689/2014

Schengen Agreement and EU Common Customs Union – Public consultation on Gibraltar joining

640 Mr Speaker: Chief Minister's questions. The Hon. Damon Bossino. (Interjections)
Chief Minister's Questions, the first one is Question 689, the Hon. Damon Bossino.

645 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister advise this House what progress has been made following his announcement that he would carry out a public consultation as to whether Gibraltar should join the Schengen Agreement and the EU Common Customs Union and in particular what representations have been made in relation to the impact of VAT being imposed?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

650 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this work is ongoing with the Chamber of Commerce the GFSB and the EUID. Further information will soon be made public.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, there has been.. I was going to say ‘relative’ silence, but I think probably complete silence, since the Hon. the Chief Minister announced this, I think it was back in May 655 2014. I do not have The Chronicle article reporting on the announcement.

And then there was a debate between both parties in relation to the advisability of him having announced the consultation without having done the consultation prior to the announcement.

660 But in relation to that, Mr Speaker, he mentions the bodies that he is speaking to. Is anybody else, say for example in relation to the gaming industry? We have had representations from that particular sector, where they have raised concerns about VAT being imposed, for example, should there be an accession to the Customs Union. And I ask him that specific question which I would ask whether he is limited to those entities which he has referred to earlier in his answer.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is true that it appears that we had an argument about whether there 665 should have been a consultation about the consultation being held. But I do sincerely hope that we have moved on from there.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman has said that there has been either relative or absolute silence in respect of this matter. Well, I suppose that can only be the case in the context of what he hears. In other words in the context of what is made public. The context of the public debate on this subject.

670 But, as I have told him, there is a lot of work going on in the context of the relationship between the Government and the Chamber, the GFSB and the EUID developing this process.

It is true that in the gaming industry we have had questions asked about what would the Government’s intentions be in respect of VAT and, of course, what the Government is saying is that all that we intend to do is to ask questions of the industry and give the industry the information of what parameters are actually 675 relevant.

There are many people in Gibraltar who are labouring under the misapprehension that forming part of the Common Customs Union means – and the hon. Gentleman has given it away in the way that he has posed this question – the imposition of VAT.

680 It is true that those of us who learnt about VAT and European Union Law may be, if I may say so generously to all of us who are on these benches, about 20 years ago or more, might have understood the rules to be of one particular type.

The rules on VAT have developed quite considerably as the European Union has enlarged, and therefore the parameters available to any member state that is part of the Common Customs Union are much wider than they might have been many years ago. The preparation of that information in the user friendly way to put to different industries and to put different options to different industries is the work that has been 685 undertaken with the Chamber and the EUID, and the other representative organisations, and for that reason,
Mr Speaker, although there may have been public silence, that does not mean that there has not been a lot of work ongoing, in order to prepare for the consultation.

690 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Chief Minister accept – I may be wrong – but does he accept that for this to become a reality it would require consent from the Kingdom of Spain for us to effectively join Schengen and the Customs Union, whether you impose VAT or not, coming into both of those?

695 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not want to venture into territory where I give opinions on the latest version of the applicable Treaty of the European Union, but I do believe that these are matters which do require unanimity at the European Union level. And the hon. Gentleman may know that some of the things that we are talking about are things that the Kingdom of Spain has long seen as advantages that Gibraltar has had, and therefore if she has seen our non-VAT status as advantageous it is not impossible to 700 see her agreeing to us form part of the Common Customs Union. The question is whether we should ever want to take that step.

But in order to understand that, one needs to understand with the right information, what the resilience of our respective industries would be.

705 No Government of Gibraltar is going to do anything which is injurious to any of the many successful industries that we have. If I may simply point to retail, the insurance sector, the financial services sector, generally, and the gaming sectors, those would be the ones that we would certainly want to ensure can prosper in future. But it may be that there are parameters in respect of membership of the Common Customs Union which are actually more welcoming in respect of those industries, but they have to have the right information.

710 They do not need to labour under misapprehensions, and they then need an opportunity to express themselves. It may be that at the end of all of that process, having at least understood the position ourselves, we find ourselves in a situation where Spain is able to effectively veto any change we might want to make. That is also a possibility, but let's face it, Gibraltar has never looked at what its next steps should be, simply on the basis of whether Spain is likely to veto or not veto its steps.

715 Spain was very clearly going to abusively seek to prevent Gibraltar forming part of UEFA for example, and a campaign that encompassed the whole community succeeded in us now forming a very proud part of UEFA. And if I might say so, given that I am there, and no doubt across the floor of the House there is unanimity that our boys did exceedingly well in Germany last Friday.

720 A Member: Hear, hear. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, certainly 4-nil and the performance of the GFA in Germany was absolutely fantastic, and marvellous. (Interjection) Whether they played in Schengen or outside Schengen, absolutely we can all agree! (Interjections and laughter) We could all agree it was a wonderful performance. Bearing in mind that Germany beat Brazil, I think it was 7-nil in Brazil – (A Member: 7-1) or 7-1 in Brazil.

725 But Mr Speaker, has the Government also conducted an analysis of what effect it might have, which must be also paramount to any decision making process that the Government entertains in relation to this - what impact it may have to join the EU Customs Union on, for example, Government revenue for import duty? Is that something that the Government has done? Is there any impact or is it in the process of being done so that the Government cannot provide any further information in relation to it?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think what I have said in the past when dealing with this issue, is that the Government actually cannot do an exercise in respect of this potential step without data from the industry. It is possible to do a very limited exercise. It is possible, just to deal with a particular commodity, like for example tobacco, you could look at what effect the imposition of VAT and Excise Duties on tobacco sales might have, by trying to match up the price differential against other places. But you need to understand what the parameters actually are, and where people are buying tobacco from, and where they are selling it to. That is one of the particular obvious areas for consideration. You need to talk to all of the industries in order to understand the macro-economic effect of what such a step may be.

740 All I am saying, Mr Speaker, is that these decisions have been made in the past, and there has been an exercise in 1972. There have been exercises done afterwards, (Mr Speaker: 1984- 85) which have involved consideration of these things. An exercise was done under the previous administration where consideration was given to these things.

745 A similar exercise has been commenced but we believe that we cannot actually have reliable data on which to make up our own minds, or make a recommendation to the community, until we have engaged with each of these very important industries, and given them the information as to what the parameters available are, and not simply allow people to think, 'Ah well, we are going in to the Common Customs Union – that is 20% VAT on everything.' That is not the position. It may be possible that there are some areas where VAT can be rated as zero, even after we are in the Common Customs Union.

750 For example, there is a possibility – and I am just talking about issues on which the Government is in the process of taking advice and working with the Chamber and the GFSB, in order to be able to put this before the industries – there is a possibility that VAT may be rated at zero on many different sectors. On the services sector, for example, and on the advertising sector and on the gaming sector, so that each of those financial services, insurance and gaming, might not suffer any change as a result of entering into the Common Customs Union. There is such a possibility. There is a possibility alternatively of a very low rate of VAT being applicable.

760 In relation to other commodities, goods, Mr Speaker, there are areas where countries have the right to levy no VAT. There are areas where the countries have the right to levy the split of VAT from the highest level to the lowest level but not zero.

And there are some commodities, Mr Speaker, which are subject to other duties, known as the excise duties, which are in addition to VAT.

Those particular parameters all have to be looked at in order to be able to do the macro-economic exercise that we have to do.

765 And, Mr Speaker, why do we have to do it? Not because we have any particular desire to do it, but because we have to look at where we are going, we have to make sure that we are on the right road, we have to make sure that there is not a better road, and we have to make sure that we are not pushed off this road by actions outside our control – for example, what is known in shorthand as a 'Brit Exit', despite the fact Gibraltar might vote into any, will vote in any referendum in the UK, if there is a Conservative Government after 2015, but the referendum in 2017. We might be derailed, and we might need to be ready to accept other terms if we want access to the single market, and that is why we must do these exercises. But we must do them carefully, and with the right information, not based on layman's understanding of what forming part of VAT and/or the Common Customs Union and the VAT regime might be. We need to have the real advice, the up to date advice.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I know he answered the question at the very beginning in his formal reply but can he remind me please, when does he envisage that the exercise will be completed?

780

And also if I may, Mr Speaker, can he give the House the Government's view, if it has one yet? It may not dare to have one until it has carried out all the consultation, and it has more information at hand. But can he give us what the Government is thinking in terms of what aim it has in relation to where this process ought to end, in an ideal scenario?

785

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, what I said in the course of my first answer was 'soon', and I want to be in a position where the Government is able to make a determination based on facts, and that is why this is a fact-finding exercise.

I do not want to venture opinions, which might then be demonstrably wrong because the fact-finding exercise demonstrates that empirically the position is other than what the Government might think.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q690/2014

Self-Determination for Gibraltar Group – UN attendance and related expenses

790

Clerk: Question 690, the Hon. D J Bossino.

795

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister state whether the Government has made, whether directly or indirectly, any financial contribution towards the expenses incurred by the SDGG in its recent attendances at the UN and if so, details of the amounts of such contribution?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

800

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government only gives the SDGG an annual grant. I am unable to tell the House whether they have used that money for expenses incurred by them in recent attendances at the UN.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can he state what the amount of the annual grant is?

805

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is a written question from Mrs Isobel Ellul-Hammond which asks about the Head which deals with grants. I think we are all disappointed that she is not yet with us. I think we all understand she is better, but unfortunately not yet well enough to be with us, and I am sure the whole House will want to join me in hoping that she is back very soon indeed.

810

But there is a written question that deals with this issue. The answer that I am going to Mrs Ellul-Hammond in respect of that Head, is that the Government considers the information, or the breakdown, confidential in the terms that we do not want it published, but that we are very happy to share it with Members opposite.

815

Why is it confidential, Mr Speaker? There is a list there of charities that each receive different amounts from the Government, and we do not think it would make sense for every charity to see what other charities get from the Government, because that has been happening for some time, and people might suddenly think that the charity that gets the highest is now the benchmark, and that would really alter the balance.

But I am very happy to share, as I say in my answer to Mrs Ellul-Hammond – of course, also with Members opposite, not just her – that information on the basis that it is not information that would then be published for those reasons.

Hon. D J Bossino: Now, Mr Speaker, thank you for that.

Can a distinction not be made between the SDDG, which is a political group, and a charity? If the Hon. the Chief Minister agrees with me in relation to that, would that not therefore remove the strictures in terms of providing this information publicly and across the floor of the House?

825

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there are other non-partisan political entities that receive payments in respect of that Head. Can I invite the hon. Gentleman to see the list, if they accept, once I have given the answer to Mrs Ellul-Hammond that they do want to see the list, and perhaps then he can with the information he and I can talk and we can perhaps agree a way forward in respect of that Head.

830

Hon. D J Bossino: Non-political?

Hon. Chief Minister: Non-partisan political entities, yes. He will see them if they accept the information.

835

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q691-701/2014
New power station –
Details

Clerk: Question 691, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, further to the answer given to Question No. 573/2014, can the Minister for Utilities please provide the following breakdown for the remaining power outages that did not correspond to a power cut due to the engines of SoEnergy: (a) due to cable failures, not accidentally caused by contractors work; (b) due to cable failure as a result of an accident caused by contractor's work; (c) due to inclement weather; (d) due to generation faults at the former OESCO Power Station and/or the former MOD Power Station; (e) due to generation faults at Waterport Power Station; (f) due to switchgear failures, and (g) due to other reason or reasons?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 692 to 701.

850

Clerk: Question 692, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the answer provided last month by the Hon. Chief Minister in relation to the new power station and the liquid natural gas installation, can the Minister for Utilities please state when is it expected: (a) to have concluded the risk assessment, site investigations, vapour dispersion modelling, and general safety considerations, in order to know the exact location of the LNG installation, the position of pipelines across the north entry of the Port, the general transportation of fuel, type of LNG receiving terminal technology for regasification, inclusive of either low or high pressure systems, the supply arrangements with the preferred supplier, the construction type of storage tanks, and how often they will need to be replenished; and (b) by which entity and for what price?

Clerk: Question 693, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the answers provided by the Hon. Chief Minister last month in relation to the new Power Station, can the Minister for Utilities please state when the UK Health and Safety Laboratory will be providing the Government with its views in relation to all relevant issues such as exclusion zones, spillage, type and size of storage facilities vapour dispersion modelling, plus all other risks and hazard?

Clerk: Question 694, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the answer provided by the Hon. Chief Minister last month in relation to the new power station, can the Minister for Utilities please state when is it expected the contractor will have finalised the assessment of the Environmental Health and Safety and Fire Prevention measures which are in place at the South Mole, the Detached Mole and the North Mole due to any possible impact arising from the new power station and the LNG facilities to be installed?

Clerk: Question 695, the Hon. J J Netto.

880 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, further to the answer given to Question No. 575/2014, can the Minister for Utilities please state by when will the details being discussed with Bouygues be finalised so that we will be able to know the location of the new power station and the LNG installation?

Clerk: Question 696, the Hon. J J Netto.

885

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Utilities please state how much 'strategic reserve' of LNG storage is being considered by the Government, where it will be located, who will be responsible for its management and control, and how much this new facility will cost?

890 Clerk: Question 697, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the answer provided by the Hon. Chief Minister last month in relation to the new power station, can the Minister for Utilities please state when Gibelec is expected to be in a position to submit an application for a permit under the Pollution, Prevention and Control Regulations?

895

Clerk: Question 698, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Utilities confirm that despite having a new building to house the engineering facilities of the new power station, including the workshops that offices and welfare facilities has been included and that its cost further is included in the overall contract price given by the government? In addition, can the Minister confirm at what location will the management and administration staff of Gibelec, who are currently based at Waterport Power Station be moved to and what is the cost involved for providing this?

900 Clerk: Question 699, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, assuming that the new waste heat recovery system is based on a steam cycle, can the Minister for Utilities please confirm if the cost for providing the necessary pipework and infrastructure for the feed water supply required by the station's waste heat recovery steam system is included in the contract price stated, or will this have to be provided at an extra cost, and if so at what price?

910 Clerk: Question 700, the Hon. D A Feetham.

915 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what is the total cost to date of the temporary power generators imported by the Government in 2012?

Clerk: Question 701, the Hon. D A Feetham.

920 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state whether it has signed contracts for the construction of the new power station?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

925 Mr Speaker: May, I say that whilst the Chief Minister is answering these 11 questions together, some of the answers which are highly technical, and detailed, I am going to suggest that copies of the answers to all these questions should be made available to the Opposition if he agrees, which will facilitate their work. Is he agreeable?

930 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): I have absolutely no difficulty with that, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Then, please proceed.

935 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, since December 2012 there have been 40 power cuts not attributed to the SoEnergy power plant.

The causes for these are as follows: due to high voltage cable failures, two in number; due to cable failure as a result of an accident caused by contractor works, one in number.

940 Mr Speaker, can I just point out that that one and the two above are inclusive. In other words, one of the high voltage cable failures came about as a result of an accident caused by a contractor. So that is a total of two, not a total of three.

Due to inclement weather, one in number; due to the generation faults at the former OESCO Power Station and/or the former MOD Power Station, 19 in number; due to generation faults at WPS, 10 in number; due to switchgear failures, one in number; and due to any other reasons, seven in number.

945 Mr Speaker, that adds to 41 not 40, unless hon. Members bear in mind what I have told them about answer (a) and answer (b).

Mr Speaker, risk assessments, site investigations, vapour dispersion modelling, general safety and other considerations in order to know the exact location of the LNG installation, the position of pipelines across the north entry of the Port, the general transportation of fuel, type of LNG receiving terminal technology for regasification, inclusive of either low or high pressure systems, the supply arrangements with the preferred 950 supplier, the construction type of storage tanks, and how often they will need to be replenished, are ongoing, and it is expected that all will be completed by mid 2015 at the latest.

Fourteen companies responded to the Prior Information Notice (PIN) in respect of the supply of gas to the Government. Some of these will be presenting proposals to the Government and of course the price is likely to vary between them.

955 Mr Speaker, the UK's Health and Safety Laboratory (HSL) has already, and continues to be engaged by the Government through the Environmental Agency, to advise on the project. As has been the case to date, and between now and mid-2015, Gibelec, the Environment Agency, HSL and entities planning to submit a gas supply solution will be working together to ensure that all potential submissions meet all relevant health and safety criteria.

960 The finalised assessment by the contractor in respect of the Environmental, Health and Safety and Fire Prevention measures that are in place at the South Mole, the Detached Mole and the North Mole, due to any possible impact arising from the new power station and the LNG facilities to be installed, will be completed when the final design details of both the new power station and the LNG facilities are complete.

965 Details are indeed presently being discussed with Bouygues and following on from the answer to Question 2/2014 earlier this year, i.e. when the gas supply proposals are received and have been duly considered, the exact location of the new power station and the LNG installation will be known.

970 The amount of 'strategic reserve' of LNG storage, where it will be stored, and how it will be managed and controlled, will be proposed by the selected gas supplier after consultation with Gibelec, who have provided them upon request with electrical demand forecasts and fuel consumption figures of the selected technology for the new power station. It is not envisaged that there will be an extra cost for this facility as gas suppliers build in this contingency into their designs.

975 Gibelec is indeed aware of the requirements that the operator of the new power station needs to submit an application for a permit under the Pollution, Prevention and Control Regulations (PPCR). The submission will take place once all the new power station detail designs have been finalised between Gibelec and Bouygues, as is the norm with any project where a submission under PPCR is required.

I can confirm that the cost of housing the engineering employees, including the workshops, offices and welfare facilities, is included in the overall contract price provided by the Government. Furthermore, provisions have also been made to house management and administration staff currently based at Waterport Power Station, and this too is included in the overall contract price.

980 The new waste heat recovery system is indeed based on a steam cycle. The cost of all the equipment and materials associated with the heat recovery system is £8 million and is included in the stated contract price. The heat recovery system is an additional 4MW of electrical power.

985 The Government imported the 25MW SoEnergy generators in December 2012. The cost to date is as follows: For the calendar year 2013, £4,416,000; for the calendar year 2014 to date, £3,901,000 – there is a little bit extra that the gentleman can see in the figures that are being handed over.

Having awarded the tender to Bouygues in June 2014, the parties have advised they are now in contract although formal contract execution has not taken place and is envisaged to take place in the next few weeks.

At present Gibelec and Bouygues are finalising the detail design of the project.

990 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have asked this question about the total cost of the temporary power generators imported in 2012, of the Government in the past, and the figure that I was given in the past – I do not have Hansard in front of me, I did not think that it was going to be contentious – was £10 million.

Is there a reason why these two figures are less than £10 million when the Government has already answered that question earlier on in the year, telling me it was £10 million?

995 I specifically use 'what is the total cost to date of the temporary power generators?' I do not know what is being deducted from there to bring the figure down, but it does seem to me that if it was £10 million, I think it was in March of this year, it should be higher than that by today.

1000 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not know the answer to that question. I have not been referred to the hon. Gentleman having asked a similar question before. Either they are in some way including or excluding fuel costs. I will go back and ask whoever prepared the answer to look at the answer that was given last time, and how it was computed and why – if he asked exactly the same question and got a different answer that is very surprising. Is he sure that he asked about the same engines and the same contract or, that he did not ask about fuel in a different way?

1005 I will go back, Mr Speaker, if he has the question that he says he asked before, it would be very helpful in referring whoever prepares these answers to refer to both.

1010 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not know whether perhaps I did not catch the answer in his long answer, but I have asked the question whether the Government has already signed contracts for the construction of the new power station with a French company. I am not sure that he has provided an answer to that. (Interjection) If he has, I apologise, but can he just tell me whether the Government has signed contracts or not?

1015 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in the sheet that he should have got, it is the last answer given, because it is the last of all the questions being answered. The contract has not yet been signed, but the tender has been awarded, and therefore there is an element of contractual privity already between the parties. There are already expenses being incurred by the successful tenderer.

1020 The final contract signature will not happen until the next... literally days or weeks as they attach the final design to the contract and the final locations which are part of the issues that are being discussed, which will probably leave in place different options, given the different potential sitings for the gas. But I certainly anticipate it will be signed before Christmas.

1025 Hon. D A Feetham: Does the hon. Gentleman also envisage that any payments under the contract will be made this side of the end of the financial year; and that the payments are not going to be deferred until after the end of this financial year? Are there going to be any payments before the end of the financial year in relation to this particular contract?

1030 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the terms of the contract are not yet finalised and agreed, and I would rather answer that question, if the hon. Gentleman would put it, at the next meeting, by which time I certainly expect the contract will have been signed.

I can give him an indication of why I do not want to say more about price and payment behind the Speaker's Chair, where he will appreciate it is in the public interest that we each hold out just a few more days before we answer questions like that.

1035 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I may just ask one supplementary question.

1040 In relation to the information given by the Hon. Chief Minister to my first question which is Question 691, at the end of his answer due to, any power outages we are talking about, due to any other reasons, there were seven in number. I do not know whether the Hon. Chief Minister has available to himself by way of supplementary notes as to the reasons of what other specific reasons were under that general category?

1045 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do, the note I have been given is that these power outages are attributed to frequency oscillations, SCADA malfunctions, and unbalanced load pick up and shedding between power plants.

SCADA, Mr Speaker, he may know from his time with this brief is the system that allows the energy to flow into the grid. In other words, the thing that sits between the engines and the grid.

1050 Mr Speaker: The hon. Member will now have another three additional sub-headings to ask further questions, won't he? (Laughter)

Hon. J J Netto: I am most grateful, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just returning to the question that I asked: the question that I asked, it was on 29th May 2014, and I asked:

'Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister state what has been the cost so far to the taxpayer of all the temporary generators which the Government has imported since 2012?'

1055 Today I have asked:

'Please state what is the total cost to date of the temporary power generators imported by the Government in 2012?'

1060 It is in substance the same question, and the answer that he gave me then was the total cost so far of the temporary generators since 2012 until the end of April 2014 has been £10,252,000. That is the answer that he gave me last time round. Indeed, I then asked, at the next sitting of the House, whether that figure included any additional costs, the costs of importing for example the power generators and the Hon. the Minister for Public Utilities responded that there was an additional cost, but actually those were just simply, I think it was, £40,000.

But there is a discrepancy between the £10,252,000 and the answer that he has given me today.

1065 Hon. Chief Minister: Actually, Mr Speaker, I think I have made the error when I have read the answer, because I have been given two columns, one of them is headed supplementary, but actually I think it is not supplementary because I think I need to read both of the columns, and I think if he bears with me, I think that then the mathematics will then work out. So I am going to read the answer again, as I think it should have been, read as a whole.

1070 The Government imported the 25MW SoEnergy generators in December 2012. The cost to date is as follows: for the calendar year 2013, £4,416,658.99; for the calendar year 2014 to date, £3,901,119.

And then I think I should have added this – which is not supplementary, I think it is actually directly related to his question – the Government has also imported generators from Spark Energy Limited. These will substitute the SoEnergy generators which will be moved to allow for the construction of the Bouygues Plant.

1075 The cost to date is as follows, since May 2014, £4,661,385.18 out of which the monthly rental fee is £2,443,746.70. This figure includes the deposits necessary for Spark Energy Limited's move of engines.

I think that is not supplementary; I think that is actually part of the first answer. And if he then reads that together, I think the numbers make more sense.

1080 Mr Speaker: £12 million.

Any other supplementaries on these 10 or 11 questions? No.

So let me see, we therefore move to Question 702, I think.

Q702-703/2014
Sunborn Hotel –
Government payments made

1085 Clerk: Question 702, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide details of all payments made by the Government, Government-owned, or partly owned companies, public agencies and authorities, to the Sunborn Hotel since it opened, identifying what those payments were for and when they were made?

1090 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 703.

1095 Clerk: Question 703, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1100 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what payments have been made to third parties, for example law enforcement unions, or the Sunborn Hotel, by the Government or any Government-owned, or partly owned company, public agency or authority related to the use of services offered by the Sunborn Hotel by those third parties?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1105 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the total amount of expenditure invoiced to and paid by all public authorities to the Sunborn floating hotel since it started operation at the beginning of this year is £35,495.

1110 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, anybody that reads the newspapers or indeed watches the news cannot help but notice that the Government appears to be pushing quite a lot of business in the direction of the Sunborn Hotel. Is there a rationale behind this particular policy, bearing in mind that obviously pushing business in the direction of the Sunborn Hotel then means pushing it in the direction other than other hotels in Gibraltar?

1115 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, we put five-star hotel business the way of the floating hotel, because it is a five-star hotel. We continue to put a lot of business the way of the Caleta Hotel. We would have continued to put a lot of business the way of the Rock Hotel, except that they are presently undergoing a refurbishment, but as soon as it is finished the Government will put business towards that hotel as well.

1120 In fact, I understand that I am going to be seeing the finished product of the Rock Hotel very shortly during the course of the next couple of weeks, and I am very much looking forward to going back to that hotel, where we do a lot of entertaining as well. And in fact we also put a lot of business the way of the Elliott's Hotel, which is the hotel closest to my office.

So Mr Speaker, the Government has traditionally put work towards all hotels, and the hon. Gentleman should not think that we are putting work towards one particular hotel and not the others.

1125 He might have noticed, Mr Speaker, that the Literary Festival did not involve any dinners at the Sunborn Hotel, but did involve dinners at other hotels. So, what the Government is always trying to do is to ensure that it spreads itself across local businesses as fairly as possible.

It has not always been the case, Mr Speaker, but this Government tries its best.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q704-705/2014
Spanish media outlets –
Confirmation of no Government payments made

1130 Clerk: Question 704, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please confirm that no Government Minister has been involved in any arrangements whereby Radio Bahia or Samuel Fernandez have received any financial assistance whatsoever from anyone connected to Government or third parties?

1135 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister. (Laughter)

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 705.

1140 Clerk: Question 705, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1145 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please provide a list of all media outlets in Spain which have benefited from any direct or indirect payments from the Government, Government-owned or partly owned companies or agencies, authorities or bodies funded by the taxpayer?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1150 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, my answer remains the same as those of a similar nature relating to Radio Bahia or Samuel Fernandez: HM Government of Gibraltar has not provided any financial assistance to these parties.

1155 In relation to Spanish media generally, I refer the hon. Member opposite to the answer to Questions 462 and 463/2014. I continue to believe that sharing information of this nature publicly is not in the public interest of Gibraltar. I am, still however, happy to share the information with the hon. Member confidentially if he wishes.

1160 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, can I ask the Chief Minister why is there a difference in policy, and a difference in approach, and a difference in terms of transparency and openness, between his Department and the way that he answers questions in this House, and the Hon. Minister Costa, who in an answer to questions posed last month, did in fact provide the answers and figures of funding to La Verdad and other Spanish media in Spain. What is the difference? Because of course, if it is not in the interest of Gibraltar to do it now and to answer this particular question now, well it is not in the interest of Gibraltar for Minister Costa to do so. Why the difference in approach between Minister Costa and the Hon. the Chief Minister?

1165 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would have thought it was obvious: because they are two different things that are being dealt with.

Minister Costa is dealing with marketing Gibraltar. Minister Costa places adverts so that people see Gibraltar and its logo in their newspapers and come to Gibraltar.

1170 The lobbying effort is something completely different and, Mr Speaker, I put it to him that he should simply reflect on this issue, and if he likes, he and I can have a conversation about this. But what we do not want to do is provide a route map to those that might want to thwart our ability to ensure that Gibraltar's message is transmitted internationally and in Spain.

1175 Hon. D A Feetham: But, Mr Speaker, I have no difficulty – if what the Chief Minister is saying is that apart from the payments that have been disclosed by Minister Costa in relation to marketing in the tourism sector, there are no other advertisement, advertising payments that have been made to any other media in Spain, because every other payment has been made in relation to lobbying efforts, well look, I can understand the answer. I may not agree with it, or whatever, but I can understand the answer.

1180 But you see, the previous question that I asked, a number of months ago, related to advertising placed in Spanish newspapers in relation to the Airport. Now, what is the difference between providing me that kind of information and the information that Minister Costa has already provided, which is advertisements and campaigns run in the Spanish media by his Department? There is surely an inconsistency in approach there.

1185 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, there is not an inconsistency in approach. What I am telling him actually if he goes back through Question 462, and the earlier incarnations of this question that he puts, much as he puts most of the same questions every month in a different way, I am following the position established by the previous administration, which started really as far back as 2002 when we first faced this question of joint sovereignty and the campaign that led to the Lobbying Head really becoming much more important in the Estimates Book, to ensure that we can continue to do that.

1190 Mr Speaker, I do not think I am doing anything other than simply ensuring that Gibraltar can continue to effectively fight its battles in the international press, just like every other Government does.

I do not see absolutely any inconsistency with the position that the Department that goes out to sell Gibraltar, and get Gibraltar's image placed as often as possible in front of readers in an obvious way, has taken in telling the Parliament what those particular advertising campaigns may cost.

1195 There are many different instruments that the Government uses for the purposes of influence and I would rather not say more than that, Mr Speaker.

But, look given what the Chief Minister of Gibraltar is telling him, can he just reflect on pressing me further?

1200 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I have already reflected in relation to this matter, and I am afraid that his answer does not stack up. The rationale does not stack up.

1205 Question 462 I asked the Hon. the Chief Minister, 'can he please provide details of all sums paid to the Spanish media in respect of advertisement associated with the Gibraltar Airport?' Now, advertisement in relation to the Gibraltar Airport has absolutely nothing to do with any campaign, political campaign, by the Chief Minister, by Gibraltar in relation to the protection of our rights – which I would understand in the context of his answer, if that is what he was trying to protect.

1210 And in the context of that question, advertisement associated with the Gibraltar Airport, surely there cannot be any difference between that question, and the information that the Hon. Minister for Tourism has already provided in respect of advertisement in the Spanish media for campaigns in relation to his Department generally.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, he says he has reflected and come to a different conclusion. I suppose that is why we are in different parties.

1215 My reflections continue to indicate to me that I am right to offer him the information confidentially, but not across the floor of the House.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q706/2014
Gibraltar Day in London –
Total cost last month

Clerk: Question 706, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1220 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please provide details of the total cost of last month's Gibraltar Day in London?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1225 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, we are unable to provide the details requested at this time. The information requested requires that all accounts be reconciled. To date we have still not received all invoices in order for us to complete this exercise. I will, however, endeavour to provide this information in the New Year. The reconciliation of costs is usually available by late January.

Q707/2014
Europa Stadium Ltd –
Preference shares

Clerk: Question 707, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1230

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, who does the Government envisage will take up £41 million worth of preference shares in Europa Stadium Ltd?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1235

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the GFA.

1240 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, £41 million is an awful lot of money. Does the Government envisage that it will be providing, either directly or indirectly – and the term 'indirectly', the Hon. the Chief Minister should take to include, any Government-owned or partly owned companies or any public agencies or any public authorities – does the Government envisage, directly or indirectly, that it will provide some assistance to the GFA in order for this investment to be made?

1245 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, it is possible, but it is not anything that has been agreed. At the moment the issue is with the DPC and that process is not yet completed, and the GFA has many potential sources of funding. The Government is one of them but we may not be the cheapest.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, with your indulgence, perhaps if you do not mind me going back to Question 704?

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. Mr Feetham, or any other Member have a supplementary on Question 707, to do with the shares at Europa Stadium Ltd? Any other supplementary on this issue?

1255 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am trying to get my... My hon. Friend, Mr Figueras, is looking into Hansard. (Interjection) The last time that I asked – but perhaps I can ask the question, because perhaps the Chief Minister accepts that is what he told me on the previous occasion.

1260 Earlier on this year I asked whether the Government would be either directly or indirectly contributing anything towards, and assisting the GFA financially, in relation to the building of the Stadium, and from recollection the answer that the Chief Minister gave me was that the Government would not be investing, either by way of loans or otherwise helping the GFA in relation to the building of this particular Stadium.

1265 Now, does that signify that there has been a change of approach from the Government from when he answered that question earlier on this year to now, because obviously at the moment what he is saying to me is that the Government does envisage that potentially it could provide some financial assistance to the GFA, which is not my understanding of the answer that he gave me earlier on?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think the hon. Gentleman confuses a lot of concepts in the way that he poses the question.

1270 There is no such thing as an investment by way of loan. A loan is a loan and investment goes to equity. And one thing is whether the Government would fund part of this development if it were to proceed, and quite another is whether the Government might loan money to the GFA in some way, because the GFA may be receiving receipts of money in some other way, but not have that money available immediately.

Mr Speaker, I do not think that I have ever said that the Government would not consider the possibility of a loan. As I have indicated to the hon. Gentleman we are likely not to be the cheapest option available to 1275 the GFA. There have been some discussions about the possibility of a loan, but that is so far down the line, and there are so many other potential sources for the GFA to go to, which are likely to be more affordable to them in terms of lending, that it is very unlikely that they would get to us. But look, there is that possibility. I do not believe I have ever ruled that out.

I believe what I have ruled out, Mr Speaker, and I continue to rule out – I do not know whether the hon. Gentleman wants to listen to me or not, because this is important – what I have ruled out and I continue to rule out is the taxpayer funding the Stadium in any way. In other words, the taxpayer is not going to have a stake. We are not going to own it. We are not going to pay for part of it.

The possibility, although I think it is remote, is that they might ask us for some bridging finance whilst they source funds from elsewhere. And I think that is entirely consistent with what I have said previously.

1285 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, if I find the reference in Hansard, may I return to this and we can continue?

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Netto.

1290 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, thank you very much.

With your indulgence if I could go back to Question 704, the one in relation to Radio Bahia. It is a fact that Radio Bahia does have an advert inviting people to go to the Ice Rink at King's Bastion Leisure Centre, and given that it is a Government advert, whether the Government, the Chief Minister, or the Minister for Tourism or even the Minister for Sport may be aware of such an advert and where is the payment for such an advert coming from?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, that question does not arise from a question which asked about financial assistance, in my view.

1300 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, even if it does not arise, will the Chief Minister not contemplate that there is an advert which has been placed for a period of time, and therefore is receiving money from the Government, whatever sector, or quarter it may be?

1305 Mr Speaker: Is the hon. Member suggesting that that advertisement in the Leisure Centre is being paid for by Government or a Government agency?

Hon. J J Netto: What I am suggesting, given that Radio Bahia put in an advertisement within their own radio in Spain inviting people to go to the Ice Rink in the King's Bastion Leisure Centre, it follows that that must be paid in one form or another by the Government directly or indirectly. I am asking therefore whether any Member of the Government is aware of this, and from which particular part of the Government this has been paid for?

1315 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I do not think that arises from Question 704. But if there is an advert for an Ice Rink in the GSLA's facility, it is likely to be an advert paid for by the GSLA or King's Bastion Leisure Company Ltd, whatever it is called, which is the one that runs the Ice Rink.

But the question is about financial assistance, not about advertising.

1320 Mr Speaker: I have looked at the question again. It certainly does not arise because the question talks about any arrangements whereby Radio Bahia have received any finance whatsoever from anyone connected to Government – any arrangements. I do not think it strictly arises from that.

Next question.

Clerk: Question 708, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1325 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, before we carry on to Question 708, I have now had an opportunity of looking at Questions 462 and 463. None of them in my view refer to the Airport by the way, and the answer I gave is entirely consistent with the answer I have given today.

Mr Speaker: The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, made a reference to a previous question – 1330 Hon. D A Feetham: I do not understand the answer that he has given, I have not mentioned the Airport.

Mr Speaker: You did, in supplementaries.

1335 Hon. D A Feetham: Now, the Airport?

Mr Speaker: Yes, yes.

Hon. Chief Minister: You said advertising for the Airport.

1340

Hon. D A Feetham: Oh, sorry, I beg your pardon, I thought we were on the Europa Stadium. I understand.

The Question... (Interjection) 462 does actually mention advertisement in the context of the Gibraltar Airport. That is the question.

1345

Mr Speaker: I am amazed that these little boxes carry so much information –

Hon. Chief Minister: Question 463 does not mention the Airport, sorry, which is the one I have seen, and my answer relates to 463.

1350

Hon. D A Feetham: And 462 does.

Hon. Chief Minister: Question 462 does mention the Airport, yes. But my answer remains the same – because my answer was to Questions 462 and 463 together.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can we come back to the question of Europa Stadium Ltd?

In the light of the fact that he is saying that the £41 million is going to be taken up by the GFA, is it therefore envisaged that this particular company is the company, the vehicle that is going to have carriage, effectively, or indeed ownership of the land, and the development of the land in order to build a new Stadium at Europa Point, if indeed it goes ahead.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, this is the company to which the Government would grant the land at Europa, the shares of which would then be transferred to the GFA.

1365 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q708/2014
Dockyard –
Development plans

Clerk: Question 708, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1370 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, has the Government received any proposals or are there any plans to build a marina at any part of the dockyard?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1375 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government has no plans to build a marina in any part of the dockyard. The Government regularly receives proposals for the development of sites for different purposes. Since it was elected into office, two separate proposals have been submitted for the construction of a yacht marina within the area of the dockyard. Neither dealt with the issue that the dockyard is presently leased to Gibdock Ltd and is not available for any such redevelopment.

1380 Hon. D A Feetham: And, Mr Speaker, does he envisage that perhaps in the near future it will be available for such redevelopment?

Hon. Chief Minister: No, Mr Speaker, but I know why he is thinking that.

1385 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, perhaps I can tell him why we are thinking about this!

I have here a letter from the Cumberland Committee which was sent to residents of Cumberland Terraces after a meeting between himself and the Committee. It has been sent to me by somebody who has received it – 1390 Hon. Chief Minister: There are 500 suspects.

Hon. D A Feetham: – 500 suspects indeed! (Interjection) And it says this:

‘We complained about the restricted conditions of the underlease which were written to stop speculations and similar stuff, but never written to protect rights of the residents who were disillusioned and although were grateful and had seen enormous reinvestment in their homes had lost trust in the investment and might still want out.’

And then it goes on further, some of the grievances, and then it says:

‘The Chief Minister’s answer was surprising, and out of the blue, but relevant in a way, as he mentioned the Police Station was going to be moved from there. He envisaged that a luxury development would probably spring up there in that site. And he then states, “what if I told you that Gibdock is going and a luxury yacht marina will be in its place? Wouldn’t your surroundings and investment go up so much that you would not care about the underlease so much?”’

Is that a statement that he made to the Committee of Cumberland Terraces, or indeed anybody else?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, let me start at the very beginning.

The Government has had, at huge cost to the taxpayer to undertake remedial works to fix the building of Cumberland Terraces, which was done under the auspices of the previous administration, and which was shoddier than any construction we have seen before. And at huge cost to the taxpayer, we have had to go back into Cumberland Terraces, back into Nelson’s View and back into all of those developments, and spend millions of pounds to reinstate those homes to what they should have been.

1400

And that work which the Government has done, we have done with the assistance of excellent and responsible tenants, who have had to suffer years of remedial works as a result of the homes delivered to them so shabbily by the previous administration.

1405

Norman Apap is the Chairman of the Cumberland Terraces Association. He has done a particularly good job in working with the Government and its contractors to ensure that all concerns are addressed in a timely fashion. At a meeting last week, Mr Speaker, with Mr Apap, where we had the opportunity to look at the excellent progress that has been made – the millions of pounds that the taxpayer has had to spend to fix GSD negligence, and the amount still left to pay – one of the issues that Mr Apap raised with me was that, of course, they have issues now that for three or four years, they have been residents of a building site, and they have had controls on how they can sell their properties, and would the Government consider changing the underleases?

1410

The discussion related also to some of the ambient issues that people in that area suffer. The fact that they are near to a police station and sometimes have the noise that blue light operations involve late in the evening. The fact that they are next to a dockyard that however much in keeping with modern legislation one may wish to run it may sometimes cause a nuisance to those who live near it.

1415

Mr Speaker, that discussion suggested Mr Norman Apap should lead us to the possibility of being more generous in the leases available to people at Cumberland Terraces so close to a police station and a dockyard, that we might consider not having the onerous terms that are identical, or almost identical in every co-ownership estate since the concept of co-ownership commenced in 1988.

1420

And my retort to Mr Apap was, although he was very congratulatory of the work that the Government has done on behalf of all his tenants, that for example it is no secret that the Royal Gibraltar Police wish to now find premises more suitable to the growth that they have experienced, certainly in the last three years that we have been in administration, and that that may involve a move away from New Mole House, and that therefore it is very likely that New Mole House, given the aspect of the area, might be redeveloped for high-end residential purposes, which would likely be how the Government might make the most out of that land. And that, look, given the type of length of tenancy that we were talking about, who knows whether Gibdock might tomorrow convert itself into a marina?

1425

The owners of Gibdock today are an American investment fund that looks for the maximum return on its money. And that what would the Government say to those who hold underleases of the sort that are each identical from 1988 until the recent co-ownership sales, if having changed the Cumberland underlease because they were next to a dockyard and next to a police station and therefore potentially the more onerous of our residents in co-ownership, if those facilities were to change and actually become high-end facilities, where living close to them might add value rather than take away value, it was an explanation of why the Government will not agree to change the underleases that are the model that are applicable across the co-ownership estates, despite the great hardship to which the people of Cumberland Terraces and the associated estates have been put by the negligence of the previous administration in the delivery of their properties.

1430

1440 Mr Speaker: Now look, let me make one thing clear now at this stage, to the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition and to the Hon. the Chief Minister. We have had a perfectly reasonable question, ‘has the Government received any proposals or are there any plans to build a marina in any part of the dockyard?’
The Chief Minister has been answering questions for over an hour, and the temperature of the House has 1445 to make, quotes from record of a meeting. That niggles the Chief Minister to point out that it was the negligence of the GSD in their term of office not to have done this and not to have done that, which has caused problems with the people in Cumberland and now having heated themselves up, there is the danger that they are going to do what they usually do – what they usually do on a Thursday afternoon, alright? – and that is embark on a long and lengthy debate. (Interjection)

1450 Well, let me tell both of them that I am not going to allow it. So if the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition has any supplementary let him ask it, short, sharp and to the point, or else the successor to the mind of Betty Boothroyd will bring matters to a halt.

1455 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I shall endeavour to behave.

Mr Speaker: You have been behaving. That is what has been excellent.

Hon. D A Feetham: Indeed, indeed Mr Speaker, indeed –

1460 Mr Speaker: And so has the Chief Minister, (Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, he has.) but I detect signs of the temperature rising.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I assure the Speaker that my temperature is well under control.
But Mr Speaker, there has been a very lengthy answer. It has taken the Chief Minister seven minutes – 1465 Mr Speaker: A very lengthy supplementary.

Hon. D A Feetham: – seven minutes, eight minutes, to answer the supplementary that I posed, and what he really says is, ‘Well, who knows whether Gibdock is going to be leaving and a luxury marina is 1470 going to take its place?’

Therefore my supplementary is: is he therefore suggesting that the Committee members of the Cumberland Terraces were wrong when they heard the Chief Minister say, ‘What if I told you that Gibdock is going and a luxury marina will be in its place?’ That is what the Chief Minister is alleged to have said in that particular meeting. That is what has gone out to the residents of Cumberland Terraces, and I am just 1475 asking the Chief Minister, in fairness, whether that is true or it is not true, and whether the Committee are mistaken in what they say that they heard the Chief Minister say?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, if I may say so, just starting with your remarks earlier. My old Head of Chambers used to say to me that in the Grammar School, in the mornings when he arrived, one particular 1480 boy sometimes might suffer at the wrong end of a Christian Brother and when asked, ‘What’s that for? I haven’t done anything’, the Christian Brother might reply, ‘It is not for what you’ve done; it is for what you are about to do.’ So, I think both the Leader of the Opposition and I shall stand by that remark tonight.

Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman I think cannot have heard what I told him. Because what I am saying is that I gave those remarks to the Committee in explanation of why their leases would not change: because 1485 the environment which they now regard as one that has a negative effect on the value of their properties could change at any time, for reasons unrelated to the Government.

I have told him that we have received a number of proposals, two proposals to turn Gibdock into a luxury marina. But none of those have come from the owners of Gibdock or anyone who has any right or interest in that property and is entitled to redevelop it.

1490 The hon. Gentleman may know that when one is in Government, one receives a lot of proposals, and some of them come from people who simply have an idea and believe that the Government is the leaseholder of a particular area, when actually the Government has leased that property a long time ago.

It is only in explaining – and this is what I said earlier – only in explaining why we would not change the model of underlease from the existing model of underlease to a different and more positive model, or 1495 more agreeable model, of underlease for the residents of those estates, because their environment which they regard as negative and affecting them negatively could change into a positive environment, which might have a positive value on their properties.

He will know, like I do, Mr Speaker, that coming to the nuisance is not a defence against the person doing the nuisance as a maxim of the law that we studied, and that what is a nuisance in Bermondsey is not 1500 a nuisance in Belgravia or the other way round. And all of those issues are relevant to one's assessment of what a property may or not be worth in that area.

With these underleases being a 99 years in length, will Gibdock always be... or will the area know today as Gibdock always be a dockyard for those 99 years, having a negative effect on those underleases?

1505 As I put it to him, Mr Speaker, if Gibdock, or anything else were to turn in that area from being not so luxurious to being very luxurious, it would have a positive effect on the value of those properties. That is the example that I was giving the Committee. That is the example which they have translated into, I think, their hope that one day Gibdock might turn into a luxury marina.

But Mr Speaker, that is very much in the hands of the shareholders of Gibdock and at the moment, they seem to be doing very well indeed as a yard.

Hon. Sir P R Caruana: He has provoked me to rise.

Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Chief Minister think that in the very harsh criticism that he makes of the previous Government in relation to these two projects – and I deeply regret that they should be suffering from defects of the sort that he has alluded to – but in his very harsh criticism of the previous Government, 1515 does he think he is being sufficiently fair in not acknowledging the fact that these were two developments that the Government first had to take over from a developer after they had already been designed and substantially built, and then had to take over from the contractor, and that therefore these were projects that may well have had defects built in to design and construction before the Government took over responsibility for either of those two things?

1520 And perhaps more importantly, because political criticism between Governments and Opposition are to be expected and not to be taken too seriously, does he think he is doing sufficient fairness and justice to GJBS, a company that used to do work, and I believe still does excellent work for the Gibraltar Government and the Gibraltar taxpayers, and that it was they who finished the construction of those two projects, and that if there was negligent construction it was necessarily by them, and that really, both in the case of GJBS 1525 and in the case of the Government as developer, effectively after it had taken over, that defects might well have flown from problems that had already been built before either of us took over our respective positions?

Can he bring himself to accommodate either of those two facts, preferably both of them, in his assessment of the situation?

1530 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am delighted to say that now that the hon. Gentleman is not Leader of the Opposition, or Chief Minister, he takes such a more measured approach to interventions in this House.

But it is really in recalling the spirit of his attitude to the defects in Harbour Views that he repeatedly referred to in the time that he was in office, even 15½ years after he had taken over, and in alluding to that 1535 generosity of spirit of his own, that I have approached the issue of Cumberland.

Because, of course, in relation to Harbour Views, the situation was such that the Government had not the role of either the developer or contractor. The Government had provided the land at no cost because this was to be land to be used for affordable co-ownership. The developer there suffered the defects of the contractor and was able to sue to recover the costs of putting those defects right.

1540 With the Government there, three steps away from the problem, the then previous administration, the GSLP suffered considerably from the criticism of the hon. Member, who despite the recovery of the cost of repairing the defects insisted in laying the fault at the door of the previous GSLP administration. And if I may say so, may I doff my political hat to him, because he did it very successfully, and managed to persuade people that the people who made up the Government of the GSLP somehow had responsibility for the failures which happened in that estate. I have absolutely no doubt that he his ingenuity will lead him to 1545 be able carve out an argument to suggest that they might, even though they did not.

But in this instance, Mr Speaker, as he has himself so eloquently put it this afternoon, the Government here has suffered from the collapse (a) of a developer and (b) of a contractor, and then had to call upon the excellent facility that is GJBS to complete works, and in fact this Government has actually been relying on 1550 GJBS to fix the defects, because the defects are not defects just in construction – and look, the best company in the world goes through a snagging process when they hand over a building, and those are not the issue.

The issues here are the serious problems in the design that was approved, and it was approved clearly, given the absence of any co-ownership and a serious dent being made in respect of co-ownership homes 1555 being put on the market, at the time when the hon. Members were clearly under pressure to deliver those homes as soon as possible.

So the GJBS factor is the redeeming factor. They do the excellent job of completing, but to those terrible designs, which were approved by the previous contractor and developer and by the GSD administration of which he was the leader, Mr Speaker.

1560 And so, with the most generous spirit, trying to be as unlike the attitude he used to take when he was here – and I do remember him so fondly, Mr Speaker, whipping us repeatedly on the subject, in relation to the issue of Harbour Views, Mr Speaker – one cannot but visit the blame for the negligence and cost that is now being visited on the taxpayer on any other than the political leadership that he represented for the period that these projects were in the making.

1565 And I should leave him under no misapprehension, Mr Speaker, that most of the tenants feel likewise.

Mr Speaker: The relevance of the issue of Cumberland to the original question having been exhausted, does any Member have any other supplementary arising from this question? Because I think we have had enough on Cumberland – having regard to the fact that it has nothing to do really with the original question. It does not stem directly from it and I think it has been ventilated.

1570 Now, the hon. backbencher does not spend, unfortunately, a lot of time with us and he does not intervene too often. I will allow him. I think he is entitled to one final supplementary in which he can encompass any concerns.

1575 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Well, Mr Speaker, if that is going to be your ruling, for which I am very grateful, you might have saved me the trouble of sitting down and standing up again, (Laughter) and the admonition that separated my two standings up and sitting downs! But nevertheless, I am grateful to Mr Speaker for giving me the opportunity to come back with a second supplementary.

1580 And would the Hon. the Chief Minister then not accept my urgings to reconsider the harshness of his political criticism, in the context of the fact that he well knows that Ministers do not consider or approve those aspects of design which could result in construction problems? We may approve things about whether we like the look of them or whether they are more... but we do not approve. He must know that, and I accept his political attack as nothing more than a political attack, but he has to be aware that obviously we do not accept the degree of political responsibility for that. And I should distinguish... except, of course, to the extent that one is responsible at a high political level for everything that happens on one's watch, regardless of the degree of actual culpability.

1590 But would the Hon. the Chief Minister not be willing to recognise that the political attack that I do remember making on a sustained basis, against the then Government in relation to Harbour Views, was of a different nature? We were not saying to the Chief Minister or to the Minister for this or that that they were responsible for construction defects. The political attack – he will not remember it because he was not in Parliament at the time – the political attack was on the basis that warnings were being made to the Government at that time and that the Government was not paying sufficient heed to them, given that it was a co-financier and indeed, under the guaranteed purchase scheme, the potential purchaser of an unlimited number of apartments, and that the political attack was focused on the extent to which the Government could, and we obviously at the time thought should, have reacted to tell-tale signs that we were being informed about and which the Government chose not to attach importance to.

1595 Now, if that were the fact, the equivalent of that would have been that the GSD Government would know or would have known that there were problems in the construction of those two developments, did not respond to them and then the purchaser suffered difficulty. I am not inviting him to accept the factual premise of my distinction; simply to asking him to accept that such a distinction, if the factual premise were correct, would exist.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, he reminds me, and indeed no doubt those who continue to support the GSD, of why we miss him so much.

1605 Mr Speaker, first of all let me say, that I accept, something which I do not think he ever did when he held my position, but I think he does now: that all Governments act in good faith, and that all Governments have different imperatives, but all of them are seeking to act in the best interest of Gibraltar and Gibraltarians; and that some of them have things pointed out to them and they act in relation to those things in a particular way, and others have other things pointed out to them and they act in relation to those things in a particular way – always wanting to ensure that things are done right.

1610 Very often things arrive at the ears of Members in Opposition which is not actually... or the information that arrives to the ears of Members of Opposition is not always true, and when it is synthesised through the ears of Government Ministers, they may be able to point out to things which actually are true on the ground.

1615 And it is also true, Mr Speaker, I assure him – and well, he has been in Opposition, he knows that it is true – sometimes the information that reaches the Opposition is the truth and the truth just does not reach the Government, because there are so many layers of other people trying to sometimes protect politicians from those truths, for whatever reasons.

I accept all of those things. I dare say we were never able to persuade him of those things when he held this Chair.

1620 Mr Speaker, in particular, given the examples that he has relied on, the GSLP administration was even further from the construction because they were not in the saddle of developer, and I see him nodding, he accepts that point.

1625 So, look, there are faults in construction. Ministers, unless there happens to be a builder among them, and we have none on this side at the moment and they had none on their side, should not have the expertise to understand these things. We all rely on advice.

1630 Opposition points out things they hear, usually in the street and sometimes very often from disaffected entities. In other words, you might be told that the windows being fitted are not fit for purpose by the guy who did not get the contract for the windows. And the Opposition might be persuaded of something which appears to be rational and when put to the Government, it actually just turns out that the reason for the argument being put is not exactly the correct technical one.

1635 But we have a situation where at Cumberland and at Nelson's View, Mr Speaker, the Opposition was making the points in this House, and in press releases, to him in Government, about the different types of construction, the number of floors that were one type of construction and the other type of construction for the fifth floor and above, of whether the weight would be carried with tiles or whether it had to be wood, about the windows and the type of windows and what they would put up with.

1640 So, look, Mr Speaker, what happened before 1996 – and he is absolutely right I was not here before 1996, so I cannot recognise what he suggests that I recognise. But as then a member of the public, what happened before 1996 was that things were said and a political position was taken, but the result of that was that clearly the problems found their master in court, and the developer was able to recover the cost of curing defects.

And then there were defects on the repairs of the defects, which is another thing to talk about in respect of Harbour Views.

1645 Here we were pointing things out to them and they also continued, and absolutely no doubt in good faith, on the basis of technical advice, but nonetheless there are many millions of pounds which are going to have to be spent in putting things right.

1650 Mr Speaker, the final comment I would make is that it is rare for him to get up. I know that he now makes points from the position of somebody who wants to be a backbencher in this House and is not pretending to take a front bench brief, but I do sometimes miss Caruana versus Bossano, and I just wonder whether Mr Bossano might wish to make any points in relation to the position pre-1996. It has been many months since we have had one of those good old Caruana-Bossano exchanges.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q709/2014
Double Taxation Agreements – Negotiations

Clerk: Question 709, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1660 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many Double Taxation Agreements is the Government currently negotiating?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1665 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the Government is currently negotiating the text of two Double Taxation Agreements and is in discussions with a number of other countries in relation to the same.

1670 Hon. D A Feetham: Can he identify the two countries? If he cannot, is he prepared to give me the information behind the Speaker's Chair? I do not mind receiving the information either in this House or outside on this particular occasion.

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I would prefer to give him the information behind the Speaker's Chair, because those negotiations are, of course, sensitive.

I will say, Mr Speaker, that one of them is seen as really a framework agreement and that once that one is done, a lot of others will be easier to do.

1675 But I am quite happy for him to have a discussion with me about this after the close of the session.

Q710-711/2014
Allegations of bullying against Ms Joanna Hernandez –
Investigation

Clerk: Question 710, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1680 Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government confirm whether the investigation into the allegations of bullying by 35 trainees against Ms Joanna Hernandez has concluded?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1685 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 711.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that Ms Hernandez has been provided with full details of the complaints made against her?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1695 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I understand from the Chief Secretary that the investigation which is being conducted under his authority has not yet concluded. The Government considers it would be inappropriate, Mr Speaker, to comment further on anything pertaining to the investigation, given that anything said may adversely affect the fairness of the process for all parties.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I do not understand how it can affect the fairness of the process to provide me with the information that I have requested.

1700

But in relation to the second question which is whether Ms Hernandez has been notified and provided with full details of the complaints, or allegations, made against her, the reason why I am asking that is because she herself in correspondence in the press alleges that she has not been provided with details of the allegations which have been made against her, which I found surprising given the fact that this was a complaint that was made in February or March of this year, and the investigation has now been ongoing for quite a considerable period of time.

1705

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I am not going to become involved in the investigation which the Chief Secretary is carrying out, even in respect of making public statements as to whether he has given such information to x or to y.

1710

The matter is with him, he is the Head of the Civil Service, he is dealing with this issue, and – I know the hon. Gentleman makes public statements about this case all the time – I do not think it is in the interests of the people making the complaints, or the person complained of, that we should be looking at a blow by blow of what has or has not happened in relation to that investigation across the floor of the House.

1715

I think what all of us would want is that any investigation of this type be dealt with in the appropriate way by the appropriate parties and if the hon. Gentleman wants to go out and make further comment, it is a matter for him. The Government is not going to be involved in doing so.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, no, the only comment that I have made is that this investigation appears to be shrouded in mystery, and that there is a lack of transparency in relation to this particular issue. That is the only comment that I have made. I still maintain that that is so, and indeed that is reinforced by the answer that the hon. Gentleman has given me today.

We have here an investigation that is taking place, it is the first time that the Government policy on anti-bullying and its legislation is being tested, and this investigation is taking months and there is no information at all arising out of it.

1725

Now, Mr Speaker, can he at least tell me when he envisages that this investigation is going to be concluded? We are already several months into the investigation. Can he at least tell me that?

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman says that this is an investigation that is shrouded in mystery. Well, this is the investigation that I think has most been talked about in history. It is an investigation that he puts on the front pages of newspapers. The person who is the subject of the investigation engages in correspondence with him in newspapers. I fail to see which part of this investigation can adequately be described as being shrouded in mystery.

It is taking a long time, he says. Well, Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman has said, this is the first investigation dealing with anti-bullying. It may be that for that reason it is taking a long time. It may be that 1735 for that reason it is going to be quicker than any of the others. We do not know, because there are no others to compare it with.

But, Mr Speaker, it is certainly true that matters which related to, for example, unfair dismissal claims brought against the previous administration sometimes took a very long time – one of them involving a very senior member of the GHA who took Industrial Tribunal proceedings against the previous administration, and that took five years.

1740 The hon. Gentleman says to me, how long does he envisage the investigation is going to take. Well, look if he was asking me about an investigation I was conducting, I might have some opportunity of giving him some view. But this is not my investigation, and therefore, Mr Speaker, I am not able to answer that question.

1745 I have already indicated what I would have thought all of us would want, which is that the matter be dealt with as fairly as possible. We should not, in my view, be venturing into giving further opinions, or being involved in this matter in any further way.

It appears that the hon. Gentleman wants to, I assume because he wants to pretend to be making common cause with those who are making complaint or those being complained of. In respect of that person being complained of, I doubt there is much common cause from what I read on the front pages of the newspapers, so it must be the 35 that he is trying to deduct from the tally of difference between us of 200 odd votes at the last election, come to a conclusion that he is maybe one seventh of the way there if he can persuade them to vote for him.

1750 But this is a serious issue he should just allow it to run its course and then it might actually reach its conclusion sooner.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not know where the hon. Gentleman has been over the last 10 years. I do not understand on what basis he can say that this is the most talked about investigation in history, when they made this particular individual a cause célèbre when the hon. Gentleman to his left, the leader of the House, went to Spain to talk about the Dr Giraldi inquiry and which led to a Spanish programme describing the Dr Giraldi as the house of horrors, Mr Speaker –

Mr Speaker: That has nothing to do with the question. Carry on.

1765 Hon. D A Feetham: Now, Mr Speaker, can he at the very least tell me whether the report, when it is produced, in relation to this investigation, will be made public in order to allay the concerns of those who believe that the Government is fudging this particular issue, because of the individual concerned – who they turned into a cause célèbre over the last seven years since 2006/2007.

1770 Hon. Chief Minister: Well, clearly, Mr Speaker, I do not recognise any of the premise of that question. Nobody has turned anyone into a cause célèbre. In fact, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman said that Mr Bossano went to Spain to do something. Mr Bossano never went to Spain to make any comment about anything. In one particular instance, Mr Bossano was interviewed in Gibraltar about a particular issue –

1775 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): In the GSLP Office.

1780 Hon. Chief Minister: In the GSLP Office, Mr Speaker, and certainly not a place that could ever be described as Spain. (Laughter and interjection) But, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman attributes to us the ability to raise to the status of cause célèbre anything that we simply happened to be concerned about during Opposition.

Well, what about that other cause célèbre which was the case I was telling him about, which involved a very senior member of the GHA who sued in an Industrial Tribunal and that case took five years? A public forum, the Industrial Tribunal, people can go and see what happens and read a judgement. But what about the many other cases which took so long under the previous administration?

1785 Mr Speaker, look, this is an internal complaint, which has hit the headlines. Mr Speaker, it has hit the headlines in very great measure, because the hon. Gentleman keeps putting it there. But an internal complaint continues to be an internal complaint, whether it is put in the headlines or not. And he is asking me whether I will publish, or the Government will publish, a report into an investigation which we are not conducting, which is being conducted by the Chief Secretary.

1790 Well, look, my instinct – although it is not my report, Mr Speaker, and it is not a matter for me to say anything other than what I think, which is what I am going to do – my instinct is that internal reports continue to be internal reports whether the Leader of the Opposition puts them on the front pages of 1795 newspapers by his repeated reference to the person who is involved as being complained of, because of what appears to be an unhealthy obsession with this person.

Now, Mr Speaker, my own view is that it is likely that a conclusion will be known but that the report will not be made public. But that is a matter entirely for the Chief Secretary as far as I am concerned.

1800 Hon. Sir P R Caruana: Mr Speaker, may I raise a point of administrative order? And that is somebody appears to be taking Mr Speaker's comments about temperatures earlier in this afternoon's session very literally. Either that or there is an attempt being made to freeze the Opposition out of Parliament. (Laughter) In either case, could we turn the air conditioning down and the temperature up? (Interjections) Oh, you have...

1805

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, may I just reflect on the fact that that is I think a moment of common cause between Bossano, Garcia and Caruana of the sort one does not often see in this House. (Interjections and laughter)

Q712/2014

British Overseas Territories – Relationship with UK

1810 Clerk: Question 712, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, does the Government believe that the statement made by Albert Poggio at the reception to celebrate the 20th Anniversary of the founding of the United Kingdom Overseas Territories Association to the effect that 'there is still a long way to go in establishing a modern relationship between London and the Overseas Territories' is applicable to the relationship between the United Kingdom and Gibraltar?

1815

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

1820 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, can he expand on that? What else needs to happen in order to ensure that there is a modern relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom? Because, of course, his statement is at odds with statements that we have made, and that is his prerogative, but it is at odds with the statement that the United Kingdom has also made in relation to the relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom post the new constitution.

1825

Indeed I think it is also at odds with statements that the hon. Gentleman may have made in the United Nations, when he has described the relationship that Gibraltar has with the United Kingdom – although I understand that he may have made those statements because he is asking the Committee what else needs to happen in order for the Committee to decolonise Gibraltar, or for Gibraltar to be decolonised.

1830

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, the statement that Mr Poggio made is not in the nature of the statement that either the previous Chief Minister has made, or that I have made, about a modern relationship not based on colonialism, as a reflection of the constitutional position, which they might think is enough and need not go further, and some of us think could potentially go further.

1835

Mr Poggio's statement is not about that, and he has quoted Mr Poggio's statement: Mr Poggio's statement was about London and the Overseas Territories – in other words, not Gibraltar; London and the Overseas Territories, and there are different aspects to the relationship between Gibraltar and London which you could describe as modern and not needing to go any further, some as modern that could go further, some as modern that must go further, and some as not so modern and still very much in need of modernisation.

1840

In relation to London and the Overseas Territories as a collective, it is much easier to justify the statement that the relationship needs to be modernised, although I am very happy to say that I believe it is much more modern today than it was five years ago before the coalition Government, or indeed 15 years ago before the New Labour Government. And these things happen in steps.

1845

But Mr Poggio's remarks, and I know that he was – I could see exactly where he was going and where he thought he was going to catch me, Mr Poggio's remarks are not about London and Gibraltar; they are about London and the Overseas Territories as a collective.

1850 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am not trying to catch the hon. Gentleman out. (Interjection) I can assure the hon. Gentleman! This statement took me by surprise, and what I wanted to explore with the Government was well how far is it applicable – that is the question – to the relationship between the UK and Gibraltar. No-one is trying to catch anybody out.

1855 So the answer to this is effectively that yes, the relationship between the UK and Gibraltar needs further modernisation, but that that modernisation is not in a constitutional context but is more in terms of a general relationship context. Is that the answer, because I have not understood it?

1860 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, in constitutional terms, in non-constitutional terms, in decolonisation terms and in non-decolonisation terms, there is always going to be room for further modernisation.

1865 And now if he wants to go back and have the argument about whether the constitution that we have is modern and not based on colonialism, and whether that is it, and that amounts to decolonisation, or whether there is more that can be done and things can be even more modern, and even less based on colonialism – well look, that is an argument we have had on a number of occasions. But this does not reflect that, Mr Speaker.

There are many aspects to the relationship between London and Gibraltar, and the relationship between the two Governments is not the only one. There are other types of relationships between the community and the United Kingdom.

1870 Mr Speaker, one of the ones which vexes some people more than others – it does not vex me so much, but I respect the people who it genuinely vexes quite considerably – is whether each of the Overseas Territories should be able to lay a wreath at the Cenotaph on Armistice Day, Mr Speaker. That is an issue where an element of change would be very welcome by the Overseas Territories. It is really one which is representative more than of substance.

1875 The fact that the flags of the Overseas Territories now fly over the Foreign Office on the days of the National Celebrations of each of the Territories is a step in the right direction.

The flags of the Overseas Territories now fly with the flags of the Commonwealth in Parliament Square on important occasions of the Commonwealth – a step in the right direction. But those are illustrative only of the issues of substance in the relationship.

1880 Mr Speaker, whilst there is still the power to legislate over the heads of the Parliament of Gibraltar, if that is the nature of the power that is in our constitution – even that is an issue that we could hopefully debate for very long indeed – I would have thought all of us would believe that there is room for modernisation. There may be some of us who do not want that modernisation to happen, for other reasons. There may be some of us who believe there is potential modernisation that should not be pursued. But this is not an argument that we can simply have across the floor of the House, based on trying to compare the remarks that Chief Ministers have made in the United Nations about the constitution in the context of trying to get the Committee to recognise that the maximum possible level of self-government has been reached, which is I think a common endeavour, and the remark that Mr Poggio, in our view rightly, makes about the relationship generally between London and the Overseas Territories, which to a very great measure is applicable to the relationship between London and Gibraltar.

1890 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I said I was not trying to catch the hon. Gentleman out, and I am not trying to increase the temperatures in this House, but he is catching himself out.

1895 The quote from Albert Poggio, or the words attributed to him, were ‘there is a long way to go’ – ‘a long way to go in establishing a modern relationship between London and the Overseas Territories.’ Now he appears... and I ask well is that applicable to the relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom?

1900 I am going to try and simplify that. Does he agree or is it his view that there is still a long way to go in establishing a modern constitutional relationship between the United Kingdom and Gibraltar? Because he seems to have included constitutional arguments and the constitutional position in the answer that he has just given me before, when I had understood him previously that really he was not talking about the constitution; he was talking about other aspects of the relationship between the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, which I could understand if it is in that context.

1905 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I know I introduced complex arguments into my previous answer and the hon. Gentleman has therefore not been able to understand me.

Mr Speaker, the relationship between Gibraltar and the United Kingdom in constitutional terms is modern and not based on colonialism. Can it be further modernised? Yes. Do I wish to see it further modernised? Yes. Is it possible to see it even further away from colonialism? Yes. Would I like to see it further based from colonialism? Yes.

1910 We have had the argument before on a hundred occasions. I have talked about continuing to be able to salami slice different options, short of independence, which would also produce a modern constitution not based on colonialism. Does that amount to decolonisation? Completely different concept. That is the issue at the UN – probably the issue that divides us.

But, Mr Speaker, can there be further modernisation in the constitutional relationship, without getting to independence? Yes, there can.

1915 Can there be further modernisation in the relationship generally? Yes, there can.

Is there a long way? Absolutely there is. Absolutely there is.

The hon. Gentleman looks at relationships between other overseas territories of other nations and in some instances they are much more developed than the Overseas Territories' relationships with the United Kingdom. Is the relationship between the Overseas Territories and the United Kingdom and London a good one and a modern one? Yes, it is, but it could be so much more modern, so much more effective, and so much more respectful.

1920 And, Mr Speaker, I put it to him that those who have held office as Chief Minister for longer than I have would be of the same view, and would be able to give even more examples of instances where that might be of benefit.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I welcome the first part of the answer, which was that he agrees that Gibraltar and the United Kingdom have a modern, non-colonial relationship – non-colonial relationship –

1930 Hon. Chief Minister: I have not said that. I have said – and if he goes back to Hansard he will see, Mr Speaker – a modern relationship not based on colonialism.

Now, I have also specifically said that decolonisation is a separate issue (Interjection) and it is something that we deal with in the Committee of 24. But I have not said non-colonial. I have said not based on colonialism.

1935

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not see what the distinction is. It is a distinction without a difference. 'Non-colonial' and 'not based on colonialism' as far as I can see is exactly the same way, and I am not treading on the decolonisation argument, which is effectively a delisting issue, because the argument is, well, the relationship is a non-colonial relationship, it is a modern non-colonial relationship. It ought to be sufficient to delist. The decision to delist is yours. You are taking the political decision not to delist. But that does not mean that the relation is a matter of substance, is not a non-colonial.

1940

So I still welcome the Chief Minister's statement that it is a modern relationship that it is not one based on colonialism, which effectively is the position that we have had since the new constitution in 2007.

1945 But what I want to ask him is: what other steps is he taking in order to further slice the salami, as he put it, on the road to further modernisation, which is what he believes ought to take place?

Mr Speaker: He does not have to answer that question, it does not arise. If he wants to he can, but it does not arise.

1950 Hon. Chief Minister: I am very grateful, Mr Speaker, because it clearly does not arise. But –

Mr Speaker: I would welcome a debate on the issue, really. I would welcome a motion on the Agenda of this House precisely giving everybody, and surely the issue is sufficiently important, for all the Members here to participate in such a debate. Why not? Why does it have to be the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition under the guise of a particular question, on a matter which is no longer relevant – to the question, that is?

1955

Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, I think I agree with you. I think these are subjects for motions – they are important subjects about the future of our community, not just for exchanges at Question Time, although sometimes it is useful to ventilate these issues – at least the tip of these issues – at Question Time.

1960

Mr Speaker, look I believe, like I believe most people who have had the opportunity to hold my office do, that it is important that the people of Gibraltar are respected, and that their political leadership is respected, in particular in London. And that the degrees of respect with which we are held are not necessarily the degrees of respect which we are shown in which we are held.

1965

But the way that the United Kingdom deals with its Overseas Territories is not, in my view, the best example in international law of how different countries with overseas territories have resolved those issues, and have reached understandings with the people of those territories.

I would be delighted if somebody were to lay a motion on this subject. I probably am too busy to deal with other subjects but it would be a very interesting thing to explore further together as a Parliament.

1970

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q713/2014
Gibraltar Airport resurfacing work –
Costs

Clerk: Question 713, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government confirm that UK Defence Secretary Michael Fallon was mistaken when he said in a written parliamentary statement last month that the UK and Gibraltar will share equally the cost of the first resurfacing work at Gibraltar Airport next summer and such cost will be borne entirely by the UK?

1980 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Chief Minister.

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, yes, sir.

EDUCATION, TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND JUSTICE

2005 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, while I wait for that to arrive and have a review of it, I am happy to move on to the next question if it will help move things forward.

Q673/2014
Rehabilitation periods –
Progress of review

Clerk: Question 673, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2010 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice say whether he has made any progress on the review of the rehabilitation periods, as alluded to in this House he was looking into, in the context of answers he gave in relation to Question 321/2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

2015 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, when I read this question I honestly thought this was a trick question, but perhaps it was not. (Interjection) The question asked whether we had made progress on the review on rehabilitation periods.

2020 Mr Speaker, not only have we made progress on the review of the rehabilitation periods, that review has been carried out, a Bill following the review was published on 10th April 2014, the Bill came before Parliament on 30th May 2014 and it was passed on that day with the support of the Opposition.

The Criminal Procedure and Evidence (Amendment) Act 2014 which contains the new rehabilitation periods which the Opposition supported received assent on the 10th June 2014 and was published in The Gazette and came into force on 11th June 2014. (Interjection, banging on desks and laughter)

Q675/2014
Detention of juveniles –
Creation of dedicated unit

2025 Clerk: We move now to Question 675, because Question 674 has previously been answered. Question 675, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice say whether the Government is revisiting the possibility of creating a dedicated unit for the detention of juveniles?

2030

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, the position remains as stated in my reply to Question 322/2014.

Q676/2014
HM Prison –
Recruitment

2035 Clerk: Question 676, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Justice provide details to this House of anticipated recruitment, if any, at HM Prison in the coming 12 months?

2040

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, it is not possible to say with any certainty whether any prison officer will resign or retire within the next 12 months. We do however anticipate that a Principal Officer will retire during this period. This will lead to the recruitment of one prison officer, and there may of course be more if there are other retirements or resignations.

2045

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am asking the question, and I am grateful for the answer, particularly in the context of matters that may or may not arise from Question 678, and whether there are any discussions ongoing with the Prison Service in relation to any developments in that way.

2050

I suspect from the answer the Minister has given that there is nothing programmed, but could he confirm that there is no wholesale overview or any exercise of that nature being conducted in relation to staffing levels or any other issues related to HM Prison?

2055

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, that is in fact contained in the answer to Question 678, which the hon. Member has alluded to so perhaps we can just wait for that answer.

Q677-678/2014
HM Prison –
Health and safety; terms of employment

Clerk: Question 677, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Justice provide details to this House of health and safety procedures currently in place at HM Prison?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice

Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 678.

Clerk: Question 678, the Hon. S M Figueras.

2070 Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Justice say whether there are any discussions ongoing with Prison Officers in relation to their terms and conditions of employment and to the extent that he is able to, can he provide the House with a flavour of what these discussions entail?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

2075 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, Health and safety is an extensive subject that encompasses the safe, efficient and effective running of all operations and activities within the prison. To this end Prison management issues sets of instructions, policies and procedures known as Standing Orders. These cover topics that include: (1) procedures for high risk prisoners; (2) routine precautions to prevent infection from blood-borne viruses; (3) guidance for the safe use of the gymnasium and the exercise yard; (4) guidance for hospital bed watch; (5) medical reception of inmates; (6) security instructions when escorting prisoners outside the establishment; (7) cellular confinement.

2085 As part of initial training, officers attend classes on unarmed defence tactics and control and restraint. These classes ensure that the officer will know how to deal with scenarios where the use of minimum force might be required and ensure that they can do so in a safe and efficient manner, minimising the possibility of injury either to him or herself, or to the prisoner. Officers are also trained in the use of batons. In scenarios where authorisation is given for a cell extraction, officers can be further equipped with helmets, gloves, arm/leg guards and shield such as personal protective equipment. The Government is working with Unite the Union to further improve this training.

2090 As part of initial training, officers attend a course of First Aid at Work. The Prison also has a fully qualified Hospital Officer on duty seven days a week and on call at night time. This ensures that any minor accidents to officers or inmates can be seen to quickly.

2095 Prison Officers might be more susceptible to exposure of infectious diseases. To protect them, they are offered both Hepatitis 'B' and the Flu vaccinations. As a result of the Ebola crisis and in response to concerns on the possibility of receptions of Central African nationals a briefing was held between professionals from the GHA, Prison Hospital Officers and Management. Procedures and protocols were discussed and agreed.

2100 With respect to prisoner activities, two of the most popular facilities are the gymnasium and the handicraft workshop. All gym sessions are monitored by a Sports and Games Officer who ensures that all weights/machines are used in a safe manner by prisoners. Prisoners using tools in the workshop do so under direct supervision of qualified staff who ensure that they do so safely.

2105 The Prison Estate is well equipped with fire fighting equipment. Fire extinguishers are fitted throughout, and serviced regularly. All wings are additionally fitted with fire hoses. The Prison has a well designed evacuation plan and fire drills are practiced with regularity. The Fire Brigade conducts regular familiarisation visits to the Prison in order to ensure that they are familiar with the building and evacuation routes.

2110 The Chief Minister, as Minister with responsibility for Industrial Relations, has formed a working group comprising of his Private Secretary for Industrial Relations, the Prison Superintendent, Prison Officers and Unite the Union Officials, to undertake a review of terms and conditions of service, training and development, health and safety, security, and the state of infrastructure and facilities. Huge progress has already been made thanks to the professionalism and commitment from all parties involved and we expect this review to be completed by the first quarter of next year.

2115 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister say whether there is a dedicated Health and Safety Officer appointed at HM Prison?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not sure of the answer to that, whether someone has specific responsibility for health and safety. But certainly the Prison Superintendent would have overall responsibility for all health and safety aspects of the Prison.

2120 Hon. S M Figueras: Yes, for clarification's sake, Mr Speaker, I was alluding to an officer having specific responsibility for that. I am grateful for the answer in any event.

2125 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, could I ask a supplementary question to the one asked by my hon. Friend. Is the Minister aware whether there is a health and safety committee between the management and the union?

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I am not aware of a specific committee between management and the union on health and safety. That does not mean that there is not one; it is simply that I am not aware.

2130 But what the hon. Member must note is, and I have alluded to relations with the union on a couple of aspects in the answer I have given. One is in relation to training, and secondly as part of the working group which has been formed by the Chief Minister, with his Principal Secretary for Industrial Relations, and also with Unite, and one of the items clearly that is on the agenda there, apart from terms and conditions and training, is certainly health and safety. So to that extent there is that Committee and that working group that is looking at with Unite the Union all aspects of health and safety at the Prison.

2135

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q679-683/2014
University of Gibraltar –
Recruitment and advertisement

Clerk: Question 679, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2140 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when does the Government expect the recruitment process to the faculty of the University of Gibraltar to commence?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

2145 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I will answer together with Questions 680 to 683.

Clerk: Question 680, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2150 Hon. D A Feetham: Why did the Government consider that it was unnecessary to advertise the position of CEO of the University of Gibraltar?

Clerk: Question 681, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2155 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, how many extra posts does the Government envisage will be created at the point at which the Gibraltar University commences to operate as an institution of learning?

Clerk: Question 682, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2160 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what procedures it will put into place to ensure that the selection and appointment to the faculty of the University of Gibraltar will be independent of, I should say, Gibraltar Government?

Clerk: Question 683, the Hon. D A Feetham.

2165 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state whether staff employed to work in the University of Gibraltar will have Civil Service status, or what other part of the public service will employ them?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice.

2175 Minister for Education, Telecommunications and Justice (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, as I indicated in answer to Questions 540 to 544/2014, the University of Gibraltar Ltd or UniGib has already been incorporated and will be the operating vehicle through which staff will be employed. Staff will not have Civil Service status. They will be employed by the operating company. Recruitment of staff will be carried out by UniGib through its board of directors.

We are in the process of finalising the initial structure for the University. Part of this is identifying the human resource requirements. It is not possible at this stage to say the precise number of staff which will be employed when the University commences next year. However, I expect this exercise to be completed very soon and that recruitment should start early in the New Year.

No-one has yet been engaged by UniGib and therefore the company does not currently have a CEO.

2185 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just in relation to that last aspect of the answer, I may have got this wrong, but my understanding was that if somebody has not been recruited as the CEO, certainly somebody has been identified to be the CEO of the University of Gibraltar, and has effectively been identified to fill this post. So the Government has taken a decision not to advertise because it has already identified the individual. Am I right in that?

2190 Hon. G H Licudi: No, Mr Speaker, that is not the position.
The hon. Member may be alluding to a particular member of the project team that was seconded and I did announce in the press conference that Dr Darren Fa had been seconded to the University on a full-time basis from the Museum, and it was envisaged that Dr Fa will continue to be engaged through the operating company in due course, on a full-time basis in a position of leadership. But that position will not be CEO. I have seen allusions to Dr Fa as the CEO of the University of Gibraltar Ltd, but that is in fact an error. There is no current CEO, nor has the Government decided to embark on a process to identify the person as CEO.

2195 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, just for the sake of completeness in relation to this, so it is the intention of the Government or indeed the board of this particular company once it is operational to advertise for the position of CEO when that position is required to be filled in the future when the company is effectively operational or just about to become operational?

2200 Hon. G H Licudi: The first thing we have to do, Mr Speaker, is to get the structure right. Whether it will be a CEO or some other title that remains to be seen, and the board will decide on the recruitment process that will be followed.

2205 There may be individuals who are seconded or identified as being suitable for certain positions, but certainly no decision has been taken as of today in respect of a CEO or the ultimate Head of the University.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

ENTERPRISE, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT AND HEALTH & SAFETY

Q684/2014

Government policy on business start-ups – Registered companies

2210 Clerk: Question 684, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide an update of how many companies are currently registered at No. 6 Convent Place and Town Range supposedly as part of the Government's policy on start-ups?

2215 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): There are none, Mr Speaker.

2220 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I think on the last occasion that he answered a similar question, there were 13 at No. 6 and seven at Town Range. Is that because they have all found alternative corporate service providers?

2225 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the first thing to point out the to hon. Member, is that he has chosen to qualify the companies as being supposedly part of the Government policy of start-ups. Now I do not accept that there are any companies or have ever been any companies supposedly as part of the start-up. (Laughter) Either they were part of the start-up or they were not part of the start-up. So there has never been any that were supposedly part of the start-up. (Laughter)

2230 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, he knows what I am talking about, and we have a different point of view in relation to the start-up issue. Can he tell me which companies are currently registered in No. 6 Convent Place and 31 Town Range, which according to him are in pursuance of the Government's policies in relation to start-ups?

2235 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, there are none of those either. (Laughter)

2240 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, if you record that I can just go back to the question that I posed I think in my first supplementary, which is that there were 13 in No. 6 and seven registered at 31 Town Range, he will recall that I think the intention was that part of the start-up policy was to give them this facility, a registered office, but that eventually the expectation was, I think I am quoting him accurately, the expectation was that they would eventually find alternate corporate service providers. Can he confirm that all of these have now found alternative corporate service providers?

2245 Hon. J J Bossano: I can indeed confirm that, Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: And, Mr Speaker, given that there are none, can he advise this House whether the intention is to continue to provide this facility?

2250 Hon. J J Bossano: I think that I have explained it in the past, Mr Speaker, but I will explain it again, because he may have had a lapse of memory. When you get on, it happens to you. (Laughter and interjections)

2255 The policy was initiated at the time when unemployment was much higher and amongst the unemployed there were quite a number of people... well look, it was a very small number compared to the total unemployment, but there were at least a dozen people who were interested in the possibility of moving into a self-employed position, because in fact there were people who had been predominantly in the construction industry, most of their working lives but were now having difficulty in being hired by other construction companies because they were mainly in their late 40s or 50s and some near 60. So the way to help them get a foothold in the industry was to help them set up a small company of their own, and they finished up with a company with a few trainees and now they are entirely operating on their own, and they are no longer 2260 needing any assistance.

If tomorrow, we find somebody with problems of getting into activity in a self-employed capacity or as an employer with difficulty or having a background of being able to do it or being able to afford for example the fees that lawyers charge these poor people for setting up a company, then the Government will once again step in.

2265 Hon. D J Bossino: I think out of consideration for the excessive number of lawyers already competing in the market, I do not think I want to harm the legal profession any further with more competition. (Laughter)

2270 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q685/2014
Sunborn Hotel – Employees

Clerk: Question 685, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2275 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment state how many individuals are employed at the Sunborn Floating Hotel, broken down by nationality and activity and how many have had their employment terminated since the vessel started operations?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

2280 Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, there are a total of 183 individuals employed in the Sunborn Floating Hotel. Their nationalities are Australian, Belgian, British, Czechoslovakian, Dutch, Finnish, French, Gibraltar, Greek, Hungarian, Irish, Italian, Latvian, Lithuanian, Malaysian, Moroccan, Filipino, Polish, Portuguese, Romanian, Slovakian, Spanish and Turkish. The areas of employment are administrative activities, maintenance activities, and catering and hospitality services.

2285 A total of 63 individuals have had their employment terminated since the Hotel started operations.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, if I could ask the Hon. Minister for Employment, out of the 183 that he referred to as the total how many are Gibraltarians, how many are Spanish, how many are British and how many are Moroccans?

2290

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, a third are British and Gibraltarian, a third are Spanish and a third are made up of the other nationalities. There may be one or two Moroccans in that third.

2295

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, when he says a third are British, did he say British Gibraltarian or did he say British and Gibraltarians? And can he give a further breakdown between British and British Gibraltarians?

2300

Hon. J J Bossano: I think they are about equal, there may be one more British than Gibraltarians, but I think they split half and half. That split of course is not 100% accurate in the sense that it is always mentioned in the surveys. Sometimes people are classified because of their surname, which may be an English surname but they are Gibraltarian because they have been brought up and lived here all their lives.

2305

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does he have this information to hand? Does he know how many trainees are currently placed? I know they would not be employed by the Hotel but does he know how many trainees would be under the FJS scheme placed at the vessel, at the moment? I think the last time there were about three or four. Something like that.

Hon. J J Bossano: I think at the moment we have got one, who is training to be a chef, and is a Gibraltarian. And I think that the people we had before training are now taken on full-time.

Hon. D J Bossino: Following on from that particular supplementary, he will recall that I think he told me in a previous session that he had somebody from the ETB stationed there to deal with matters relating to the FJS. Is that person still on board the vessel, so to speak?

2315

Hon. J J Bossano: That is no longer the case. We had somebody there who was a Labour Inspector because at the time we identified some problems in terms of the registration of employees not being consistent with the numbers of people who were seen coming in and out of the boat. But things have now settled.

2320

Hon. D J Bossino: And how is he seeing the movement of trainees going in that direction, in terms of getting placements at the Sunborn?

2325

Hon. J J Bossano: The problem of trainees is not reluctance on the part of the employer. We register an average of eight or nine people a day in the Employment Service, and every single person is seen within 24 hours in an interview, and they are helped to produce a CV, and included in that we tell them where are the training opportunities, and where are the vacancies, which clearly changes every day.

2330

In that context we do not have much interest in training in the catering when people learn what the level of remuneration is compared to other jobs, and compared to other places with different hours of work that are more amenable from 9-to-5 jobs compared to working in a hotel where you have to work very unsocial hours, and the wages do not compare favourably, unless you happen to be at the top of a profession.

So there is not much of a demand, but if the demand were there we would be able to find hotels willing to take trainees, I think in both the Sunborn and in some of the other hotels.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q686-687/2014
Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd – Purpose; details of incorporation

2335

Clerk: Question 686, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the – well it is put to the Chief Minister – I will read it out as it is – can the Chief Minister state what the purpose of Strand Credit Finance Company is?

2340

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer the question together with Question 687, Mr Speaker.

Clerk: Question 687, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2345

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Chief Minister provide details of when Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd was first incorporated, with details of shareholding, to include details of authorised and issued share capital, directors and secretaries since the date of incorporation?

2350

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety.

Minister for Enterprise, Training, Employment and Health & Safety (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the purpose of Strand Credit Finance continues to be as stated in answer to Question 656/2013.

The details of the shareholdings and the date of incorporation continue to be the same as stated in answer to Question 665/2013.

The directors and secretaries since the date of incorporation have been as follows: Dilip Dayaram until 31st August 2014; Ernest Gomez until 30th October 2014; Albert Poggio throughout; Christine Victory Secretary throughout; and Gibraltar Investment (Directors) Ltd since 30th October 2014.

2360

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is absolutely right in his answer – he did answer the question relating to the purpose, but that was back in October 2013 where he said the purpose for incorporation is to undertake any credit finance business that may require a UK registered company, and the purpose from what he tells me now has not changed. I just wanted to find out whether in fact there had been a change.

2365

If I could ask him, because I do not think we had any supplementaries to ask of this because this may have been the session where we walked out... But can the Minister, Mr Speaker, advise what is envisaged – can he be a bit more particular and provide further details from the sort of scripted answer that he gave to the question?

2370

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, the answer that I gave him in 2013 continues to be the position today, and what was envisaged then is what continues to be envisaged today. Nothing has happened since.

2375

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, just in relation to this, because I asked the question last time round, I was trying to find this particular question in Hansard and the answer, and it does not appear in Hansard and the reason why it does not appear in Hansard is because we did not get to this question. That was the day when we asked the question about Credit Finance and where Credit Finance was investing the money, and the hon. Gentleman basically said that the Government was not prepared to provide that information. We then left Parliament and although we received the answer that he would have given, it is not in Hansard. I just wonder whether steps could be taken for that to be included in Hansard because it is not.

2380

Mr Speaker: It becomes a written answer.

2385

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, well I have not been able to find it. (Interjection) No, I think that does not come from Hansard, I think that comes from the questions that the hon. Gentleman, if I am wrong – because I have been searching – I have spent about an hour searching for this – (Interjections)

2390

Mr Speaker: May I suggest that on another occasion if the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is in that position that he cannot find something, please phone the Clerk and I am sure he will be able to clarify the matter for you.

2395

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, if it is in Hansard it is in Hansard. I could not find it in Hansard. That is why I asked my hon. Friend to come to Parliament and to ferret out the actual answer provided by the Hon. the Father of the House, because that had actually been sent to me. That had been sent to me after the session.

2400

But can I ask him this: has there been any kind of any business transacted by Credit Finance Company by Strand Credit Finance Company Ltd since the last time that we asked the question? Indeed since the incorporation of this particular company?

2400

Hon. J J Bossano: Not so far, Mr Speaker.

2405 Hon. D A Feetham: I detect in the answer that the hon. Gentleman is hopeful that some kind of business may be transacted by this particular company. Do I detect that perhaps there are ongoing discussions whereby this particular company is going to be providing the same type of loans to UK businesses, or UK investments that were made by Credit Finance for example in relation to the Sunborn here in Gibraltar?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, the only thing he can detect is that I do not know the future and in his assumptions, what he demonstrates is what a fertile imagination he has. (Laughter)

2410 Mr Speaker: I am informed both the question and the answer are in Hansard, there are no supplementaries, of course, and that is why [Inaudible]

2415 Hon. D A Feetham: It may well be that it is in the written questions and written answers. I was going through Hansard of the oral questions, oral answers because of course it was for oral answers, it is just that we never got that far. And it may well be that it is filed under the... but thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

2420 Well, Mr Speaker, in that fertile imagination that I have, surely he can give me some credit for the fact that if the Government is incorporating a company, the purpose of which is to provide the same kind of loans that is in essence the substance of the answer that he provided last year, the same type of business as Credit Finance... It is not a fertile imagination for me to ask well, is there anything in the pipeline? Is the Government planning anything in relation to this?

What has happened? Is it just simply that the Government has got cold feet after it has received all the criticism that it has received in relation to Credit Finance, and it has decided that perhaps discretion is the best part of valour, so to speak, and that it does not want to open a second front in relation to this particular company in London?

2425 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, I may be known for a lot of things in the 42 years I have been here but discretion being the better part of valour does not happen to be one of them. (Laughter)

2430 No, the answer is quite simple: it was set up because it was thought it was a good idea to have a company there that could be used if it was needed to be used. It has not – the opportunity has not arisen or the need has not arisen, and we have not made use of it. If and when it does, a decision will be taken to make it.

2435 But without him trying to read anything into it, I could give him an example. We have got a situation where we buy property, for example for medical cases in the United Kingdom, there might be a situation where because of problems or the bank insists it is impossible to raise a mortgage on a property for a patient. Well look, then we might want to do it with a UK company as opposed to a Gibraltar company. It is not happening, it is not envisaged that it is going to happen; it is just that I am trying to help him understand what might happen. (Interjections)

2440 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, yes, I think that answer is very useful.

Can he confirm that the issued share capital still stands at £100,000 because that is the answer that he gave at the time?

2445 And if I may, as well, a second connected supplementary: in answer to the second question he gave me the details of the... I cannot remember actually he may have... Did he say in relation to the shareholding that it had not changed since the answer he gave to Question 665, or did he give me a name of a company? The reason why I am asking the question is because I was unable to take a full note of it – it says Gibraltar Investments and it started with a B and I sort of lost it there.

2450 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, the shareholding has not changed, I gave him the names of the directors, which was the information that he had not asked for before and which is new.

If he wants I will repeat the directors. They are Dilip Dayaram –

Hon. D J Bossino: I have got that – 2455 Hon. J J Bossano: You have got that? Yes. The investment company is a director not a shareholder. (Interjections) As to the share capital there has been no change.

2460 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the movements of directorship I think he gave as August and October 2014, in relation to those two individuals, Mr Dayaram and Mr Gomez. I have details here of a search, the result of a search conducted on the company, which shows two terminations of appointments of directors as 6th November 2014. Can he provide any information in relation to that? They do not seem to tally unless there is some sort of filing issue – whether it tallies with the information which he has given us, whether there has been any further movement which he may not have been able to provide information on.

2465 Hon. J J Bossano: Mr Speaker, this is the information that I have been provided with by the people who are involved in the Treasury in looking after this. But, of course, if the information can be obtained by a search, then it is in the public domain and he should not be putting a question.

A Member: Hear, hear. (Interjections)

2470 Mr Speaker: Next question.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q688/2014 Naval Ground car park – Cost of construction

Clerk: Question 688, the Hon. D J Bossino.

2475 Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Deputy Chief Minister state what the cost of the construction of the car park at the Naval Ground is?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Hon. Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker, the detailed design of the coach and car park has not been completed. Consequently the cost of construction is not finalised.

Questions for Written Answer

2480 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, can I invite the House to recess for 10 – (Interjection) Well yes. (Interjection) I do not mind doing it now if you wish – if Mr Bossano stops stealing it from me. (Laughter)

2485 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to lay on the table the answers to written questions W228/2014 through to W284/2014.

And can I, Mr Speaker, invite the House to recess for 10 minutes now before we return for Bills?

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess for 10 minutes.

The House recessed at 5.30 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 5.50 p.m.

BILLS FIRST AND SECOND READING

Business Names Registration (Amendment) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

2490 Clerk: Order of the Day – Bills, First and Second Reading.
A Bill for an Act to amend the Business Names Registration Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port.

2495 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Business Names Registration Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Business Names Registration Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Business Names Registration (Amendment) Act 2014.

Business Names Registration (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

2500 Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Business Names Registration Act be read a second time.

The effect of this Bill is to end the distinction between pre- and post-1st January 2000 businesses that are registered under the Business Names Registration Act as regards the requirement to submit annual statements of particulars.

2505 Currently pre-2000 businesses do not have to file an annual statement of particulars. They are entirely exempt from this requirement. From now on, however, all registered business names will need to file a statement at least once every calendar year.

2510 The primary reason the Government has decided to remove the different treatment of pre- and post-2000 businesses is so that all businesses will be on an equal footing, irrespective of when the business name was registered. This is a simple question of fairness and abolishes the distinction of pre- and post-2000.

The practical effect of this for pre-2000 businesses is that they will need to file a statement of particulars by the end of this year.

2515 I should emphasise that Companies House wrote to each pre-2000 business on 28th July of this year. As a result every business has had sufficient time to prepare for this legislation.

I should also emphasise, Mr Speaker, three further points.

The first is that the proposed legislation will not introduce any new fees. The existing £15 fee for filing an annual statement of particulars will apply to all businesses simply by virtue of the fact that all businesses, not just post 2000 will now have to file such an annual statement.

2520 Moreover, Mr Speaker, it is equally important to note that in order to promote the formation of small businesses in Gibraltar the fee of £20 for initial registration of a business name has been kept to £20, the same level at which it has been for the past 20 years.

2525 The second is that this measure, because it will capture all businesses under the Act, will yield more complete information as to which businesses are not carrying on business. This in turn will allow the Registrar to make better decisions as to which businesses names to remove from the Register, thus freeing those names up for other businesses to use if they wish to do so.

The third is it will help Gibraltar to provide comprehensive business statistics to the OECD and the EU when this is requested or required of us by them.

2530 Finally, Mr Speaker, I want to thank my colleague responsible for Financial Services, the Hon. and Learned Mr Albert Isola, for the co-operation I received from him on this matter, as well as Companies House for the sense of initiative and their co-operation in bringing this matter to a close.

Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

2535 Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

2540 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the Opposition will be supporting the Bill, I have spoken to the Hon. Minister about this. On the face of my reading of this very short Bill, and the original Act which it intends to amend and the explanations he has given me before today's session, and also in today's session, I have no difficulty in supporting this Bill.

It seems that the effect of the amendment is eminently reasonable in terms of its practical effects, and I certainly have not received any representations against it. On that basis, Mr Speaker, simply to indicate that certainly at least the front bench will be supporting. But I am not sure whether the backbencher may have something to say in relation to this and what his views are.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Business Names Registration Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Business Names Registration (Amendment) Act 2014.

Business Names Registration (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

2550

Minister for Tourism, Commercial Affairs, Public Transport and the Port (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today, if all hon. Members agree.

2555

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

FIRST AND SECOND READING

Fire Service (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: A Bill for an Act to amend the Fire Service Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth.

2560

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire Service Act be read a first time.

2565

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire Service Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Fire Service (Amendment) Act 2014.

Fire Service (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

2570

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill now be read a second time.

Mr Speaker, the Bill does three things to the Act. One, it changes the name of the Service in order to reflect the current service given. The Brigade, as it is known in the Act, now has moved to not only Fire but also Rescue Services, such as road traffic accidents or getting people trapped out of the lift etc.

Second, it updates the description of the ranks of the Service. The description of the ranks was changed without regard to the Act and this amendment just reflects what is currently the names of the ranks.

And third there are a number of sections that refer to monetary figures. The amendment removes them and replaces them by the standard scale of fines.

I commend the Bill to the House.

2580

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of this Bill?

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, yes.

I would like to take the opportunity to associate myself with the comments that the Hon. Chief Minister made in relation to my hon. Friend who is not in the Chamber with us, Mrs I M Ellul-Hammond who has asked that I deal with this matter in her absence. I join the Chief Minister in expressing the hope that she will be able to join us in the Chamber just as soon (A Member: Hear, hear.) as her recovery is complete enough to make that return. (Banging on desks)

Mr Speaker, turning now to the Bill, this side of the House will be voting in favour of the Bill.

2590 A number of points that have been raised by my hon. Friend are that, as the Hon. Minister has just explained, this Bill amends the nomenclature throughout the Act of ‘Fire Brigade’ to ‘Fire and Rescue Service’. Perhaps the Hon. Minister could clarify if this is as a result of Sir Ken Knight, the UK Government’s Chief Fire and Rescue Adviser’s review, or whether it is for the sake of modernisation of nomenclature after nearly 40 years in order to reflect the breadth of work of our Fire Brigade, as I note the 2595 Hon. Minister has alluded to the fact that there is a much wider range of service on offer by the Fire and Rescue Service.

The Bill also brings any penalties in line with the standard scale of fines rather than stating a qualified monetary value as per the old Act. And that much is acknowledged as a desirable move.

2600 It also updates the description of the ranks in the Service, perhaps the Hon. Minister in his response could clarify if this is again in line with any recommendations that have been received as a result of the review of the Service?

2605 And two particular questions are asked and that is are the new titles for the posts of Leading Fire Control Operator and Fire Control Operator part of the definition of the new medical priority dispatch system in preparation for it to go live? And generally could the Hon. Minister explain if any of these changes are as a consequence of Sir Ken Knight’s review? Or if indeed the new Bill is a prerequisite to the implementation of the recommendations that came out of said review?

Mr Speaker, I am asked by my hon. friend to draw the attention of the hon. Minister to section 2(16)(d) which amends section 18 subsection (5) of the Act and the new proposed amendment reads as follows:

“‘Service area’ means the area of Gibraltar, other than those areas for the time being occupied by the Ministry of Defence’.

2610 Could the Hon. Minister clarify what ‘for the time being’ means – if this means the new Fire and Rescue Service may at some stage service areas occupied by the Ministry of Defence, or is this an indication that the Defence Fire Service may not now be integrated with the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service as outlined in the Government’s manifesto?

Perhaps, Mr Speaker, the Hon. Minister could clarify the queries that have been raised, and as I said at the outset of my address, this side will be happy to vote in favour of the Bill.

2615 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am going to deal just with the issue that relates to the MoD and all the other issues can be dealt with by my hon. colleague when he speaks last as the mover.

2620 Mr Speaker, the issue of the Gibraltar Defence Fire Service has developed considerably in the past three years. The issue before was a consideration simply of amalgamation with the City Fire Brigade, who have developed quite a lot since then, into amalgamating the DFRS as it is known, the Defence Fire and Rescue Service into the Government of Gibraltar, but not into the City Fire Brigade because that creates issues for both the City Fire Brigade and the DFRS in terms of promotions etc. So the current thinking is that the DFRS will go into a free standing SPV owned wholly by the Government of Gibraltar, which is the model that works successfully in relation to other parts of the infrastructure management of the MoD that passed 2625 to the Government before the election – in particular GMES, Mr Speaker, which is the company that owns the assets and operators of the old MoD Power Station, and I think the Gibraltar Laundries which took the people who worked in the MoD laundry.

2630 And so in order to de-conflict issues between the two brigades and issues of promotions etc, the first step is to give the men of the DFRS the security of employment that they can have in being employees of the Government of Gibraltar through a state-owned company, a wholly owned company, whilst not creating an amalgamation issue with the CFB. And that as I understand it is the preferred option of the men of the DFRS and the men of the CFB who could then have more time to look at when they can merge, if that is a future that makes sense for the community and for each of their services.

2635 They provide quite different services although they are able to support each other in different ways. But the training that they receive for specific things that they are required to do is quite different. So the training to get into an A320 that has turned into a fireball is different to the training to get up a tower block and a lift.

I hope that is helpful.

2640 Mr Speaker: Does any other hon. Member wish to contribute before I call upon the mover to reply?

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Thank you, Mr Speaker.

2645 The hon. Gentleman raises three points in relation to the points that the hon. Lady wants to clarify. First and foremost is the fact that this Bill, the change of the name is not necessarily in relation to the audit report, but both. It is to do with... it did come as one of the things in the audit report, but also because what we are now going to call the Gibraltar Fire and Rescue Service will be 150 years next year and this has been in the pipeline for a number of years, even before the audit report came about. So I would suggest that it is for both reasons: one is because it was intended to be done, and two because it was suggested within the report.

2650 On the second point which is whether the ranks are to do with the report, the simple answer is no. And that is because the ranks that are reflected in the Act now as in the Act of 1976 differ to the actual ranks that are existing now. So therefore the changes are reflecting, like I said in my presentation before are reflected the changes that have already happened during the years. So for example the Assistant Chief Fire Officer is no longer the Assistant Chief Fire Officer; he is now the Deputy Chief Fire Officer. The Divisional Officer: 2655 there is no Assistant Divisional Officer; there is only Divisional Officers. So the Act actually changes what has been happening through the years and now updates it. And it is therefore nothing to do with the actual report.

And on the third point which is to do with the Fire Control Officers that is an issue that is still pending, has nothing to do with the audit report, and is a thing that we need negotiating. If the hon. Gentleman looks 2660 at the Act itself, although we are changing the names to reflect what they are now, the ranks, it says the Government may by order in The Gazette amend the list of ranks, so we can either remove them if need be, but we have not taken yet a decision on how we are moving towards the Fire Control Officers, or what they are named now, Fire Control Officers. So basically we are awaiting that to happen, and once whatever happens, it will not reflect in the Act itself. So it is nothing really to do with the Act.

2665 So I have just tackled the three points that the hon. Gentleman raised and the Hon. Chief Minister tackled the MoD one.

Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Fire Service Act be 2670 read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Fire Service (Amendment) Bill 2014 –

The Gibraltar Parliament

The Parliament met at 9.15 a.m.

[MR SPEAKER: Hon. A J Canepa GMH OBE in the Chair]

[CLERK TO THE PARLIAMENT: P E Martinez Esq in attendance]

PRAYER

Mr Speaker

CONFIRMATION OF MINUTES

Clerk: (i) Oath of Allegiance. (ii) Confirmation of Minutes. The Minutes of the last meeting of Parliament which was held on 20th November, 2014.

Mr Speaker: May I sign the Minutes as correct? (Members: Aye.)

5

Mr Speaker signed the Minutes.

Clerk: (iii) Communications from the Chair; (iv) Petitions; (v) Announcements; (vi) Papers to be laid; (vii) Reports of Committees; (viii) Answers to Oral Questions. We start –

Congratulations and good wishes

10

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Excuse me. Mr Speaker, before we start with the questions, before the House starts its business, first of all I happily congratulate GBC for an excellent fundraiser yesterday which has seen them collect almost £100,000 and reflects on the generosity of this community which is exemplified throughout the year but in particular at this time... (Banging on desks)

15

Mr Speaker, I think it would churlish to start this session without congratulating you on the publication of your memoirs and your recollection of the things that happened here. I think it informs all of us and perhaps might bring some semblance of history to our debates during the course of today, given that it is no doubt fresh in our memories.

20

And note that Ms Isobel Ellul-Hammond is still not with us and wish her a very speedy recovery and return to our group.

Procedural

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, this morning the Ministers who will be answering questions will be answering in respect of the portfolios they held before the reshuffle in order to be of maximum assistance to the House, otherwise we would be dealing only with Ministers who had been holding portfolios for a week, answering questions. So I think it would be helpful to the House to have the fuller answer that can be given by the Minister who has been holding the portfolio for longest.

25

Tribute in memory of children in Peshawar, Pakistan

30 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, finally before we launch into our discussions and our debates at this time of year in particular, I think it would be remiss of the House not to want to reflect on what has happened in the Peshawar Province of Pakistan in the past 48 hours, which has seen 132 children die.

35 At this time of year in particular which is so characterised by children, I would invite the House to spend a moment in silence reflecting on that and perhaps the words of the Band Aid single that says 'And tonight thank God it is them instead of us.'

Members stood in silence.

Questions for Oral Answer

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS

Q761&763/2014 Development aid – Details

Clerk: We now start with Question 761/2014, the Hon. D J Bossino.

40 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, now that the Hon. the Chief Minister has mentioned the Speaker's Memoirs which I am reading through and finding them of great interest, I think yesterday was in fact the 40th anniversary of a demonstration which was occurring outside this House and I think it was on the day of Mr Speaker's probably 30th birthday when the Tupamaros, I think they were, threw a stone into this Chamber and almost hit Mr Isola from the Opposition benches. I think the cause of the demonstration had 45 to do with parity, I think I am right in that.

Mr Speaker, if I could pose a question formally: can the Minister for Inward Investment provide details of all EU funding provided since answering Question 359/2013 to include all applications made with details of whose applications were rejected?

50 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): I will answer this question with Question 763, Mr Speaker.

55 Clerk: Question 763, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Business Development please provide details of which entities have applied for development aid, with details of the nature of the projects and the amount of aid provided to each successful applicant since he took office?

60 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, since the answer given to Question 359/2013 there have been no applications for development aid.
65 Since May 2013, the following ERDF funds have been provided:

A J Sheriff Electrical Ltd	£147,371.23
ANS Project Management Services Ltd	£5,662.41
Astute Investments Ltd	£19,999.06
70 DC Leisure Ltd	£78,670.90
Decor Construction Ltd	£9,242.42
Everleigh Ltd	£19,040.59
Gibraltar Tourist Board	£9,932.00
Gibraltar Tourist Board	£88,842.00

75	Gibraltar Sports & Leisure Authority	£174,636.46
	Horatio Holdings Limited	£68,092.63
	Jets Diner Ltd	£19,917.57
	Roxbay Holdings Ltd	£16,103.29
	Technical Services Department	£197,237.40
80	Technical Services Department	£198,697.62
	Technical Services Department	£1,467,033.24
	The (Gibraltar) Laundry Services Ltd	£12,699.70
	The Atlantic Café Ltd	£65,283.00

85 No obligations for EU funding have been rejected since answering Question 359/2013.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does the Hon. the Minister have a total of the figures? I have very roughly calculated it and may be completely off the wall at about £2.6 million to £2.7 million, perhaps slightly higher, but am I in the right range?

90 I can do the additions later when I have got the information, particularly from Hansard or I will listen to it on the audio service provided by the parliamentary website, but I wonder if he has that information ready to hand? I do not expect him to bring out his calculator and calculate it.

95 Hon. J J Bossano: I have not got the total, but I would say it is probably higher than the figure that he suggests at first glance.

100 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, does he have an explanation – I have no idea what... I cannot think of an explanation myself – as to why it is that there is such a difference between the figure that he provided to me in answer to my original question which was posed in May 2013, which covered the period December 2011 to May 2013, and this period from May 2013 to date, which is more or less the same period?

I think the sum total of the grants given in respect of the first answer to the first question was just under £1 million, whilst this is possibly three times that or very close to that. Does he have an explanation for that?

105 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, this is demand driven, that is to say the amount of money has to be spent within a certain period of time and I think what tends to happen, and what has always happened, is that when we are getting close to the period where we would lose the money if we do not spend it, if there are not enough private sector entities in the pipeline, Government projects tend to be put in to make sure that we do not finish up having to give money back. Quite apart from losing that money, it becomes more difficult to get more money the next time if you do not spend everything they gave you the last time.

115 Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful for that, so given that explanation, Mr Speaker, was money given back shortly after I asked the question in May 2013? The thing is I do not have the exact period as to when the funding has to go out. I do not have that information, but as I said before, as at May 2013, when the period covered was in the region of a year, a year and a half, the expenditure was more or less a third of what has been expended more or less in the same period now, and I just wondered whether money was given back in the first tranche, when he was in office.

But I may be posing the question wrong because I am not aware of what the period is.

120 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, if it had happened, I would have been very angry and I do not remember being very angry, so it cannot have happened.

125 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I take this opportunity to ask the Hon. the Minister to confirm to this House, a report which appeared in the Gibraltar Chronicle on 16th December, which reported on further funding from Europe in the sum total of £9 million. It was expressed as being £1 million more than the current tranche. Can he confirm that that is what Gibraltar is receiving?

130 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I think the report that the Chronicle had was something that emanated from statements made in Brussels. We have not yet had confirmation officially of the approval of the amount. So I am not going to make a statement in Parliament on something that is based on a report in the Chronicle which is based on a report in the press in Brussels.

135 But I asked, when that report came out and I was told, 'We have not yet been told.' The Government has not yet been told that it has been given the amount that it was asking for, so the answer is I cannot tell him what the amount is because the report in the Chronicle is based on a report from the media in Brussels.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, again not being aware of how these things work in practice, presumably from the answer that he has given, there is no prior negotiation between the Gibraltar Government and the relevant EU department as to what funding Gibraltar could receive. Do you simply wait and see what is given to you? Is that a correct exposition of how these things work?

Hon. J J Bossano: The negotiation is between the United Kingdom and the EU as to what the United Kingdom gets. What we get is something out of the United Kingdom allocation, which was first obtained in fact by Robert Mor when the GSLP was in Government and it was the first time, because prior to that, the UK had argued in their own self-interest that because we did not pay VAT, we were not entitled to access EU funding, which comes from VAT. But we actually were able to challenge that interpretation which had been going on from 1972 until we were in Government after 1988, and the EU said that it was purely an internal matter as far as they were concerned.

145

For example, if Spain has a situation where Ceuta does not pay VAT, it does not mean Spain cannot use EU funds in Ceuta. So we were able to establish that it was a matter for internal negotiations other than the fact that we can only access the pool of funds that is not destined for areas of very high unemployment, for obvious reasons. So the level of funding that is available is broken down into chunks for regions based on the regional unemployment rate, and we are only eligible for the chunk that is for the place that has the least level of unemployment.

150

Therefore when we are looking at the United Kingdom, for example, there will be areas of the United Kingdom – for example at one stage, it was Northern Ireland; at another point in time it was the area around Liverpool, where unemployment was like it is in Spain for example – and they would be a category 3 and they would get a higher level of funding. We have to compete with the ones that have got the least level of funding. The negotiation is conducted by the unit that handles the distribution of these funds and it takes place predominantly with London, but our representative goes with the London team also to deal with Brussels.

155

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, which representative would that be? Presumably it is a civil servant, from within which Department? Can he answer that question?

It is actually interesting what he is saying, because the Chronicle report quotes the relevant – I do not dare pronounce... oh yes, Corina Crețu, who is the European Commissioner for Regional Policy and actually she is quoted as referring to Gibraltar's specific needs, not just the UK, but she seems to be very conscious of what Gibraltar's small businesses' needs are. It would be interesting to learn, given the explanation he has just given, what precise involvement Gibraltar has as part of the UK delegation, if I can put it in those terms, in the negotiations.

170

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I imagine what this lady said was because it was a question from the Gibraltar Chronicle. If they had had the question from the Diario de Cádiz, they would have talked about the needs of Andalucía. So it is not that we are held in such high esteem by the Commissioners of the European Union, that they are particularly conscious of our problems.

175

We have got a unit which has always been there, at least since we started, which is part of the Ministry for Enterprise and is in the budget. It is a unit that is headed by a senior executive officer and he is the one that has been doing it longest – well, I think he has been doing it from the beginning, he has been doing it all the time. Therefore he is the expert in the matter and certainly he tells me that he has not had an official confirmation of the funding. So if he does not know, then I do not think I can be expected to know.

Q762/2014
Nuffield pool site –
Update

180

Clerk: Question 762, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Inward Investment provide an update in relation to the development of the Nuffield pool site?

185

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, the Government continues to be in discussion with the successful tenderer of the Nuffield pool 190 site. However, it is still the case that the re-provision of the pool has to take place before access to the site is obtained.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, in answer to the question which I posed back in October 2013, which is 195 the second occasion I have asked questions in relation to this particular project, the Hon. the Minister for Inward Investment explained that the.. well, I will read it – and it has really progressed from that stage, which is the initial stage when he walked into office –

‘to the point that it has now in effect been awarded to him [i.e. the applicant] and he is now in the planning process.’

Can he provide me information? I am sure it is publicly available, but can he advise this House whether the planning process element of the project is now complete or whether there are things still to be done in that regard?

200

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, it is not the Government’s planning process; it is the process of the person that was successful in the tender. I do not know... He does not communicate to me how his planning processes are going, so I do not know how close he is to finishing it or not finishing it, or if there has been objections, if it is nearly over, but I know that in any event this is part of the Project Euston where we have to re-205 provide the assets that the MOD lose in one area in another area. As the Member may be aware, one of the things that was changed after 9th December 2011 was the nature of the sequence of the payments.

So for example in the Improvement and Development Fund, the reason why we have a sum of money there unspent is because that is money that has been obtained from the sale of MOD properties, which is ring fenced and can only be used as far as we are concerned for the re-provisioning needs of the MOD.
210 Otherwise, it would then mean that the money had been spent on something else and we would not then have the money to do what we are required to do in order to get the release of those sites.

So the answer is that even if the planning process was finished, until the pool is re-provided, the guy cannot get on with the job but I am not aware, because it is not something I am involved in, in how much more he has got to do to get the necessary clearance for the project.

215

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, I asked the question as a supplementary on the last occasion. I am not sure he answered it. Is the project still a hotel project? He talks about the applicant still being in the planning process but surely we must know, the Government must know what it is that he intends to do there.

220

Hon. J J Bossano: Well, I do not deal with planning, but I am not aware of any changes from what was intended. As far as I am concerned, the nature of the hotel may change but it is still a hotel and a tourist project because in fact the investor happens to be the person that brings the highest number of tourists to Gibraltar.

225 Part of the philosophy of the investment, as he has explained it to me, is that he wants to have his own hotel here because he believes he can bring more tourists and therefore, he would rather, as it were, have a vertical integration of the whole process, where he does the advertising in the United Kingdom, he organises package tours and he puts them in his own hotel here.

Q764/2014
Unemployment –
Details

230 Clerk: Question 764, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment provide details on a monthly basis of the registered unemployed since asking Question W266/2014?

235 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Economic Development and Telecommunications.

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr
Speaker, to my knowledge, eating disorders have had no effect on the level of unemployment.

240 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, yes, the hon. Member is absolutely right. I have been in error in quoting the written question number, it should have been 226 and not 266. So perhaps he could answer the question which he knows I intended to ask – but I suppose it is the season to be jolly so I will take it on board.

245 Hon. J J Bossano: Well, Mr Speaker, I have many qualities but mind reading is not amongst them. I read the questions very carefully and the numbers very closely and I try to answer what I am asked.

But if he wants to know what the answer is, if he had put the correct question and said 226 then the answer is, of course, one that he already knows because I gave him the answer to 226, which is that we continue with the policy introduced by the previous Administration of providing the figures quarterly.

250 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes and actually I could not find the... because I have asked this question on a written basis previously, and the answer came back as he has just given it verbally over the floor of the House.

But, Mr Speaker, the reason why I ask this question now orally is because the Hon. the Chief Minister made a reference to a particular figure during the course of his party political broadcast of the latest unemployment figure. It does not tally with the latest unemployment figure which I have, which is the last quarterly figure which is the latest that I can possibly ask because that represents the figure as at the latest quarter. But I think the Hon. the Chief Minister referred to a figure of something in the region of 261 or 281 as being the latest available – (Interjection) 269, as being the latest available figure.

255 I assume that figure is one which would be the last monthly figure, I can only assume that and that is why I thought I was able, given that that information has been provided to the public through a broadcast that as a Member of this Opposition I was able to ask that question quite freely in this House and the hon. Member would be able to provide it across the floor of this House.

265 Hon. J J Bossano: In fact he should not be asking the question because if it is in relation to information that has already been put in a political broadcast, then it is already in the public domain and he is not supposed to be asking questions to obtain answers which have already been put in the public domain.

But in fact as the policy was defended previously when it was questioned previously by Members who were previously on that side, the position of the Government then and the position of the Government now, which continues to be the same, is that the Government thinks that the correct policy and practice that the figures should be given on a quarterly basis because it smooths out the movement up and down.

270 Therefore it is misleading to say there is a downward trend because of one day's figure or an upward trend because of another day's figure. I think when this was first explained in Parliament by the Hon. Mr Netto as far back as 1967 – 1997 sorry! (Laughter) I am the only one that has been around that long! The argument was indeed that he use an example that there could be a vacancy for a particular job in a particular part of the private sector and an influx of people who were only there because they knew of the vacancy and they were interested in that vacancy and they were not really available in terms of being willing to look at other jobs, and when the vacancy was filled, those people would then disappear.

275 So in fact if one were to give a particular snapshot of the figure for unemployment, that snapshot changes not just on a daily basis but virtually on an hourly basis during the day. While I am talking, there will be people who are registering unemployed and there will be terms of engagement that are being inputted.

280 So the figure that was given, was given as an indication of a direction in which we are going and we hope that the final quarter figure – I cannot guarantee it, but I am hopeful that it will be – will be around the 300 mark or just under, which as the Leader of the Opposition said in his first debate with me in 2012, in his judgement would then mean really that we have got no unemployment because it is very difficult when you get to the 300 mark, clearly the people who are easiest to employ have been employed already. The ones who are more difficult to employ are the ones who are left when you start going below 300.

285 That has always been the case, it continues to be the case but we may not bring it down to 300 but that is my target for this quarter, and the figure will be available early in January.

290 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, it is not that... and I will try and formulate it in a question. May I just try and refresh his memory? It is not that I said that there is zero unemployment; it is that the unemployment, except for three years in the early 1990s... The figures started in 1990, so it is the hon. Gentlemen's Government that started with the unemployment figures. For the first three years, of course we were transitioning from an MOD economy into a private economy, the figures were oscillating around the 700 to 800 figure.

295 After that date, the figures have stayed stable always, it does not matter which Government has been in power, it has stayed stable between the 300 and the 500. That seems to indicate, not that there is zero unemployment – and I am asking whether he agrees with this analysis – but that 300 appears to be the base line in terms of unemployment that always has existed in the economy going back to 1994.

305 Hon. J J Bossano: Grammatically, zero unemployment means zero – no-one unemployed. I think that is impossible to achieve. But in fact I think that is the correct interpretation of the statistics, that it ranges between a maximum of 500 at any one given time and a minimum of 300, and the fluctuations are even bigger if you look at monthly figures, because you can have a particular month for example when there are a lot of people made redundant or a particular month when, for example, a gaming company comes in and takes on more people than would be normal. But the movement within the labour market in the time that I have been there is a movement of Gibraltarians which is quite high.

310 The movement has been in the region of 2,400 and therefore, even though the official figure is around 500, we all know that it went much higher in 2012, when we came in, because there were a lot of people not registered or people who were waiting to be put on the VTS and things like that, which he himself acknowledged when he computed the figure as being much higher. Those are no longer there. That is to say, the people who were there and recorded are now recorded as people in employment and that is why the employment survey records a much higher figure.

315 If I can quote the greatest Gibraltarian on this subject –

Hon. D A Feetham: Of our time. Of our time.

320 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Of all time – que no que cambia, para arriba, para abajo. – of all time! – of our time! Chiquillo estás más liao!

Hon. J J Bossano: He explained to us, I think it was in the budget of 2006 if my memory does not fail me – 325 Hon. Chief Minister: In condescending terms.

330 Hon. J J Bossano: – that, really, the labour force of Gibraltar could only be understood in terms of adding people in employment and people in unemployment. When I was arguing that there was hidden unemployment, his argument was well, look, we have now exhausted the labour force of Gibraltar. There are no more Gibraltarians available, other than the 300-odd that are registered and therefore, if we do not import Frontier Workers, the economy will be incapable of growing. Well look, the reality is that if he adds the unemployed for example for October and the Gibraltarians in employment in October, he will find that since 2011 on that basis, the labour force has grown, adding those two.

335 So clearly they cannot have appeared out of nowhere, they must have been somewhere but they were not being recorded in the system.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

BUSINESS, EMPLOYMENT AND SKILLS

Q714/2014

Small Business Saturdays held 2013 and 2014–
Cost to Government

Clerk: Question 714, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Small Businesses state what the full cost to the Government has been of the Small Business Saturdays held in 2013 and 2014?

465

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the cost of the Small Business Saturday held in 2013 was £7,937.59.

470

The cost of the Small Business Saturday held this year is expected to be in the region of £6,700.

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, a question I do have and I think it kind of arises from the question in the Order Paper: out of interest, is there any empirical evidence which the Government can use to assess the success of this particular venture?

475

Certainly as far as the last Business Saturday is concerned, I attended and I supported it, Main Street was heaving that day – not only locals, but also I think because it coincides I think very usefully with a national holiday in Spain, the Constitution Day I think it is and also the Inmaculada Puente – Immaculate Conception – it was also visited by our neighbours, in very large numbers I may add.

480

But is there any empirical evidence? The reason why I ask is because apparently in the UK there is. Just looking at the relevant Twitter account, they have published how much was actually made on that particular day in the UK and I just ask that question, whether he has that information or if he does not, whether it is something that can be looked into for the future.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place to concur with the statements that the hon. Gentleman has made in respect of the fact that Main Street on Small Business Saturday was in terms certainly of the number of people, the footfall and the volume up and down Main Street and the adjacent streets, in our view, very successful.

485

The statement that he refers to in respect of the UK measurement of the success of their equivalent is only an estimate. The way that I have read it, it is not actually a number crunch that is arrived at scientifically; it is more of an estimate of how they think the day has fared.

490

I do not have any hard statistics in the way that for example I would be able to give him hard statistics on the number of visitors coming to Gibraltar, hotel occupancy, overnight stays. There does not exist that research in respect of Small Business Saturday.

495

What I have asked, though, are the umbrella organisations – the GFSB and the Chamber of Commerce – to please revert to me with the assessment of their individual members, so that collectively we are able to ascertain the impact of the Small Business Saturday.

I did receive during the course of the day and after messages, not just from the GFSB but also from individual traders, who have told me that they have had the best day in the whole year. I do recall that last year as well there were some traders who said exactly the same thing.

500

So in our view it is a success. The anecdotal evidence does suggest that it does help to have the missing element which was put to me at the beginning of the term of office, which was entertainment. What brings the families down to Main Street apart from the shopping element, which is why they all attend, is also because families are able to entertain themselves with the different entertainment that we lay on.

505

But as I say, without empirical statistical data, the anecdotal evidence that I received, and I hope they will be confirmed by the GFSB and the Chamber, was that traders did extremely well on that day.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND TELECOMMUNICATIONS

Gibraltar Savings Bank –
Supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: Does the Hon. Leader of the Opposition wish to come back with supplementaries –

525 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes please.

Mr Speaker: Do so now please.

530 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. the Father of the House provide me with the total aggregate public debt comprising Government debentures, rather than the breakdown? Does he have the figure there of the aggregate public debt comprising debentures?

Minister for Economic Development, Telecommunications & the GSB (Hon. J J Bossano): Mr Speaker, I gave him two figures, which are: one month's notice £232,797,300; and of the 217 debentures which have not all been withdrawn or repaid, the last time round the hon. Member opposite acknowledged that the final figure would not be known until after the end of December. There is still £19,716,800 of that outstanding which will not be there in January.

So the total of the two is about £250 million – £251 million I think.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, yes so we have seen a reduction in the aggregate public debt comprised of Government debentures, but am I right that effectively, we will see an increase in that figure, because the Gibraltar Savings Bank will then increase the figure for Government debentures, which at the moment stands at £200 million? That will probably go up closer to £300 million by the end of January and therefore the aggregate public debt comprised of Government debentures is likely to rise significantly above this figure of £251 million, once the exercise is done that we spoke about last month.

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker, that is not correct.

The figure that he had the previous time was the Gibraltar Savings Bank had invested £100 million of Government debentures. The figure that I am giving him in the list that he has got is now £200 million. (Hon. D A Feetham: Yes.) That £200 million is part of the £232 million that is shown as public debt, so it is already there and therefore, the only thing that is likely to increase is the £19 million that is still outstanding under 2017. So what you are likely to get in January is another £20 million of debentures to repay the £19.7 million, and therefore it would still be that we have got £200 million owed to the banks and about £250 million or £260 million so it will be around the figure that we have had before, which is £450 million between debentures and the bank.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, I understand. So effectively what the Government has done is converted the Government debentures, which with the exception of the £100 million has been held by individuals, they are Government debentures issued to individuals, they have converted that into Government debentures issued to the Gibraltar Savings Bank, but the gross public debt will remain at around £450 million to £460 million.

Hon. J J Bossano: That is correct.

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries? No?

BUSINESS, EMPLOYMENT AND SKILLS

Q715/2014 continued – Recent trip to Hong Kong – Supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: Then we will come back to Question 715. Does the Hon. Mr Bossino have any supplementaries arising from the schedule?

Hon. D J Bossino: I am sure it is a question which the Hon. the Minister will have expected from me, because in the last session he said that he was quite brave to provide me with an estimate of the expected cost which he had at about £28,000. So the obvious question is can he give an explanation as to why the total cost which has been calculated by my hon. and learned Friend Mr Figueras quickly here, is slightly in excess of £40,000?

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Yes, Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is correct. The answer that I gave as an estimate was £28,000. In the first place I am advised by my officials that the original answer that I gave to him in this House last month should in fact have read £32,000 – £31,632.08. That was the estimate that was made by the officials at the time. They gave me the incorrect information, so I would like to rectify that to the hon. Gentleman for the record and the increase relates to the following. I will just walk him through it and he can make a note if he wishes, following the schedule that I gave him.

In respect of flights, the estimate would have been around £11,500. It actually came up to £12,200 so there is a slight increase there.

Hotel accommodation, the estimate was for £4,500. It came out to around £5,900' also an increase.

585 Transport was estimated at £650 and it came in at £887.71.
Food and drink for some reason was not estimated. It came in for the entire week at £1,817.33.
Miscellaneous travel was also not estimated. It came in at £51.00.
Miscellaneous – which meant expenses of the GMA, GPA, Public Liability Insurance for the reception and logistics arrangements – was also not estimated and came in at £818.
590 The venue rental was estimated at £2,500 but came in at £2,684.
Reception was estimated at £4,091.86. It came in at £4,978.
Video and photography estimated at £7,579 and came in at £800.
So there were variances... I will allow him to confer with his colleague. I have taken him through some of the estimated figures which then increased, but although I have taken him through some of the 595 breakdown; the general answer is that there was an estimate and then the actual figure incurred always increased slightly up. I think I am right in saying that yes, it was slightly increased in all of them.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps – and forgive my voice but as a representative of the community, I am dutifully enduring what is going around at this time of year.
600 From a marketing point of view, Mr Speaker, and it does not necessarily arise from the answers to the question that he has given, but could the Hon. Minister provide us with a flavour of what the objectives – if there are any specific objectives that he can allude to – were part of the process of planning for this event and what it is expected or hoped that can be generated from what is a significant investment but which, in the light of the objectives that he might offer, may in fact be considered reasonable in the event.

605 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place to say that I thought that the £40,000 – although I accept that it is not an insignificant amount – was money very well spent. It is not a delegation that has been comprised before to visit the Far East. I said to GBC that in fact in my view the Government has been missing a trick in not having had a trade delegation attend Hong Kong on shipping matters since we were 610 elected into office. It is the first time that any Government has done it and I think it is a trade delegation that should definitely attend Hong Kong annually.

I will tell him why. During the course of the four days that we were in Hong Kong, we met with 58 persons. Those 58 persons were divided into 19 round table meetings. Literally on the last day, we were 615 having our last meeting, getting changed and going off to the airport. We met what were the top companies in terms of fleet management, fleet operators, fleet owners and we learnt a lot. For example, we learnt that the Hong Kong register went from around 5 million tonnes to 91 million tonnes since 1997. Our tonnage is around 3.4 million tonnes and it continues to grow steadily every year, as the hon. Gentleman knows.

620 But clearly, there is a lot to learn from being able to transform single-digit growth into double digit growth in the space of time that the Hong Kong flag did so and there are lessons that we can learn which I have advised my hon. colleague, Minister Isola who will now be responsible for maritime affairs.

It was also staggering to me that almost every company, if not every single company that we met, in fact does business with Gibraltar. They either come here to take bunkers or they use Gibraltar for crew changes or the provision of stores, spares, some light engineering work and of course for our docking.

625 So in effect Gibraltar, due to its strategic location, has enjoyed the business of the maritime trade from the Far East since time immemorial because of our location. So I am convinced that now that they have put faces to the people that run the port and the Gibraltar maritime flag, that we will be able, in the same way that we have done with tourism, that by meeting people we have been able to increase the number of people coming to Gibraltar for the UK transport operators, increasing air routes etc, by knowing us they will know that we are now a phone call away to be able to service and to be able to attend to any of their needs.

630 I have no doubt that now that my colleague Minister Isola will carry on the work that has been started, we will be able to tap what I do really consider to be an untapped mine of business to Gibraltar in the maritime world. We have just come back so I cannot tell him whether the results of meeting 58 people are yielding or translating into immediate business, but I can definitely tell him that I am extremely confident that it shall do so. So that £40,000, I would in fact if I had to make an assessment, I would now remove 635 £40,000 of other marketing efforts and invest it in this. That is how confident I am that it is important that we continue with these trade delegations to the Far East.

Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, Mr Speaker, the last point he makes and I do thank him for the very complete answer he has given and for giving us the opportunity to hear his thoughts in relation to this particular trip, 640 but in relation to yielding business, how can that be assessed? I know that as politicians, especially when you are on that side of the House and it is your initiative, you will use all manner of adjectives to make it sound as positive as possible – and they may be true.

645 But, is there any way – and this sort of relates to the question asked in relation to small businesses – of somehow empirically assessing that? One of the thoughts that come to mind is whether you can conduct a survey by way of questionnaires asking the relevant stakeholders – they talked about at the last meeting of the House when I asked him questions in relation to this topic – asking them whether they have indeed yielded – using his word – the results arising from this trip. If not, can some thought be given to pursuing this as a possible venture?

650 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, in the first place to say that whereas there is no collection of hard statistical data on the Small Business Saturday, clearly traders will be able to tell their umbrella organisations whether on that day they did more business. So whereas as there may not be a survey laid before Parliament as to whether the Small Business Saturday had more people down Main Street, certainly we will be able to receive from the umbrella organisations, whether traders reported on that day more 655 business than usual during the course of that month, or indeed during the course of the year. So no empirical statistics but certainly there will be evidence to be able to relate to the hon. Gentleman whether Small Business Saturday was successful.

In fact, it will be easier to tell the hon. Gentleman whether the meetings that we have held in Hong Kong have yielded results. Let me for example, tell him that we met with Bomin Bunker Oil Limited which 660 he knows is a very big company; we met with Fleet Management Limited which is also a very big company; the Wallin Group, another giant of the maritime industry, so these are recognisable names. If those companies, the ships that they manage or that they operate, call at Gibraltar through the local agents for bunkers, spares, provisions, light repair work crew changes, we will register that, so it is much more scientific in this respect.

665 So during the course of – well Minister Isola will be able to during the course of the next six months, ask local agents what business if any, has arrived from the 19 companies that the delegation met. If those companies have been calling at Gibraltar which most of them have, then we will be able to compare whether as a result of those meetings, there has been an increase in traffic to Gibraltar following those meetings and then we will be able to assess that for him more scientifically than the Small Business 670 Saturday assessment.

But I am sure that my hon. and learned colleague, Minister Isola will introduce processes that will be able to collate that information with ease to be able to advise the hon. Members opposite. Yes.

Mr Speaker: Let me intervene at this moment. Look we have had what is really a question asking for 675 statistical information – the final cost of the trip, because the House already had an indication of what the costs were. I have allowed two supplementaries, one asking the Minister whether he can make an assessment and he answered that.

Then Mr Bossino comes in and asks is there some empirical basis on which that can be done and the Minister answered. Now we are going further and further departing from what was a purely statistical 680 answer.

Now, I am going to allow the Hon. Mr Isola to reply and then that is it because we are really taking the whole issue far beyond the ambit of the original question. (Interjections)

Hon. A J Isola: Mr Speaker, I think we have had a similar discussion in relation to financial services in 685 terms of how you can monitor or cost benefit the investments made in marketing, very similar to the question asked in respect to the Hong Kong visit.

As we have discussed and I think we have agreed on various occasions, it is extremely difficult to monitor it but I can tell you that the converse is that if you do not go, you certainly will not get the benefits that you will if you do go, which I accept and concede are difficult to assimilate.

690 But I can tell you that, for example, if we had not gone to Bermuda we would not have the business that we have had from Bermuda. If we had not gone to New York, we would not have had the investment that we have had from New York in respect of the ILS business. And if you talk to – there is one instance where I went on a private visit to Holland with a group at their specific request to attend a meeting, supporting them, I can tell you that three weeks after my visit I have had a call from them saying, ‘Many, many thanks, 695 we have landed a huge client as a result specifically from that visit.’ So what I do know is that if we had not gone that would not have happened.

So there are two issues for me: one is raising the profile of Gibraltar generally, telling people about the quality of what we do and our reputation and the importance we attach to it; and the second thing is directly meeting people in the sector, talking to them about what we can do and there is an awful long way to go 700 before we actually get there in terms of explaining what Gibraltar can do.

We had an accountant in Gibraltar a month ago, a senior tax adviser to one of the large accounting firms, who did not know – and he is from the UK – who did not know that you could passport financial services from Gibraltar. So in terms of what has happened over the last 20 years, my personal view is we have failed and we have an awful lot of work to do to tell people what can be done from Gibraltar.

705 So, in my view, the money is extremely well spent and it is more than that: if you talk to the private sector, they will tell you it is absolutely vital that we continue this.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q716/2014
Employment –
Goals to achieve

Clerk: Question 716, the Hon. D J Bossino.

710

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Employment state what goals he has been given to achieve by the Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister, as he told GBC following the Cabinet reshuffle?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

715

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, in addition to the general duties of the Ministry of Employment, I have specifically been entrusted with the goal of continuing the extraordinarily successful work that the great Joe Bossano has done at the Ministry of Employment.

720

It is no mean feat, Mr Speaker, to have reduced unemployment from over 1,200 to 269 as at a week last Monday.

It is no mean feat to have employed well over 681 more Gibraltarians in full-time employment in just two years of Government up to October 2013 compared to less than half of that in the whole of the 16 years of the previous administration. (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desks)

725

That means that in two years Joe Bossano did twice as much in terms of adding full-time Gibraltarians to the labour force, as all the Ministers of Employment of the Party opposite in all of the 16 years in Government. (Banging on desks) That figure will be even higher once the results of the last Employment Survey are published, which will provide the figures correct for last October. What a great record for Joe and what a dismal record for them, Mr Speaker.

730

So the Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister have set me as a goal that I should ensure that I follow the example of success set by Joe and not the examples of failure set by Employment Ministers of the Party opposite. It is certainly not going to be easy to follow in the footsteps of the true giant of Gibraltar politics but, Mr Speaker, I do relish the challenge of living up to the very high standards set by Mr Bossano at the Employment Ministry.

735

In part, Mr Speaker, I will also be working to design and implement programmes for the continuing and professional development of the public sector and to develop skills programmes of selected areas of the private sector in consultation with Gibraltar's small and medium-sized businesses. I have also been tasked with modernising the employment registration processes at the Employment and Training Board and placing all such new systems on line.

740

The Chief Minister and the Deputy Chief Minister also wish me to prioritise the legislative reform to the Industrial Tribunal which has already been commenced, but which is a work in progress at the moment that we are committed to have finalised during this lifetime of Parliament. (Banging on desks)

Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, what a depressing reply from the Hon. Minister. (Laughter) What a depressing reply – because honestly, I really had high hopes. (Laughter)

745

Mr Speaker, in the letter which I published in the Chronicle only a few days ago, I did say that I hoped that the Hon. Minister, who I know pretty well and have got to know over the last three years as a reasonable guy with an open mind would be given sufficient autonomy to rethink their flag ship policy called the Future Job Strategy, but it clearly does not seem to be the case.

750

I was going to ask him whether he could put paid to any rumours that in fact the Hon. Mr Bossano, the previous incumbent in post, was in fact still pulling the strings in that particular Department and he has confirmed by his answer that that must be the case, because I do not believe for one moment that that particular answer has not had a hand in drafting by the previous incumbent.

755

Mr Speaker, but I still ask him this, with some trepidation, whether as part of those goals or indeed his own personal goals, whether he would consider – as the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition did when he had dealt with my portfolio in a shadow capacity and I have on many, many occasions – is whether the Government could consider to shift away from the Future Job Strategy. It has been criticised by us on many occasions for the reasons which are legion and they are all on record, but also in fact by Unite, the Union and other bodies.

760

So will he consider for one moment, the possibility of shifting away from that particular policy and amending it to provide proper training and proper jobs for our youth and unemployed?

Hon. J J Bossano: No, Mr Speaker. (Laughter and banging on desks)

Mr Speaker: Any other supplementaries?

765

Hon. D J Bossino: I'm speechless! (Laughter and interjections)

A Member: Speechless!

770

Clerk: Question 717 –

A Member: Presumably the answer was no. (Laughter)

Q717-720 & 723-727/2014

Clerk: Question 717, the Hon. S M Figueras.

775

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say whether any consultants were contracted by the bus company for the purposes of assessing proposals received for the tender of the new buses to the Gibraltar Bus Company?

780

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, I will answer this Question together with Questions 718 to 720 and 723 to 727.

785

Clerk: Question 718, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Transport say whether any progress has been made identifying what works need to be carried out to Europa Road to support the weight of the new buses and what this might cost?

790

Clerk: Question 719, the Hon. S M Figueras.

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Transport provide details in this House of the full amount of advertising revenues invoiced and received by Big Publications Ltd on a yearly basis for 2012, 2013 and the year 2014 to date, for advertising on the buses broken down into the following categories namely – back of the bus advertising; side of the bus advertising; bus stop advertising and any other forms of advertising sold by Big Publications?

795

Clerk: Question 720, the Hon. S M Figueras.

800

Hon. S M Figueras: Can the Minister for Transport say how many formal complaints the bus company has received from the public about the new buses?

Clerk: Question 723, the Hon. D A Feetham.

805

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please provide details of the cost to the taxpayer of the maintenance contract for the new buses, including but not limited to the hourly rate charged by the entity undertaking the maintenance and the term of the contract?

810

Clerk: Question 724, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please state who has been awarded the contract for the maintenance to the new buses?

815

Clerk: Question 725, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Chief Minister please state the price tendered by each tenderer in respect of the contract for the new buses (a) by reference to the price per bus and (b) the overall contract price?

820

Clerk: Question 726, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Chief Minister state how many entities tendered for the contract for the supply of the new buses?

825

Clerk: Question 727, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Can the Government please state whether it has estimated the cost of reinforcing certain parts of the road system in Gibraltar in order to cope with the weight of the new buses and if so, what is the estimated cost?

830

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Mr Speaker: May I suggest that at the end of the answer, the Opposition be facilitated copies of the answer before the end of Question Time. I think it will facilitate the conduct of business in supplementaries arising from these numerous questions.

835

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, no consultants were contracted by the bus company for the purposes of assessing the tender proposals.

840

As previously mentioned in my answer to question 639/2014, all matters relating to Big Publications, including revenues invoiced and received, are the subject of an internal audit that is currently ongoing. Once this audit has been completed, the Government will be in a position to provide the relevant details.

The records of the Bus Company show that no formal complaints have been received from the public regarding the new buses. Negative comments have surfaced in local and social media.

The bus company is still negotiating the maintenance contract with Bassadone Motors in order to maximise the value for the taxpayer.

The prices tendered by unsuccessful tenderers in the procurement process is commercial in confidence and cannot be disclosed. The overall contract price of the awarded tenderer is, as I have said in a previous answer to a question, £4,790,000.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to Question 552/2013 and 125/2014. As I explained then, a total of five companies were invited to tender. Out of these five, four submitted priced bids, of which all four companies were found unsuitable for Gibraltar.

All of the vendors were then invited to participate in the negotiated procedure as provided for under Regulation 4(1) of the Procurement (Public Contract) Regulations 2012. Subsequently three tenders were received from which one did not submit a new bid. Finally, two companies were left in the final assessment.

855

In relation to the weight of the new buses, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer to Question 632/2014 where I informed him of the position in respect of reinforcing certain parts of the road system. In this respect, Golder Associates, a firm of specialised geotechnical consultants, was engaged on 4th November this year to carry out an assessment of the retaining walls which line Europa Road. The investigations are currently ongoing and results of the findings are expected this month.

860

Until the detailed investigation is concluded, it is not known whether any works might be required to strengthen the retaining walls along Europa Road.

Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for the answer.

865

In relation to Question 717 and the answer that no consultants have been taken on, I asked the question in the context of information that has been brought to my attention in relation to the appointment of a consultant and of course, that information may, in the context of the answer the Minister has given, be unrelated and it has been mistakenly related to the Bus Company. So in that respect, Mr Speaker, I will certainly seek to explore it with the Minister behind the Speaker's Chair.

870

In relation to the answer that he gave to Question 719 and the revenue generated by Big Publications Ltd, I note the answer that he gave at the last session and the one today and wonder whether perhaps the Minister can give us an indication of how long this audit will take and perhaps more helpfully tell this House whether the audited accounts requested as he alluded to in the last session of Parliament have now been received from Big Publications Ltd?

875

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, as the hon. Gentleman is aware, the Bus Company, apart from having a Bus Company manager, has a board of directors. The board of directors have instructed that an audit be 880 carried out, it is an internal investigation and they are seeing to that. As I have explained to him, the audit has not yet been completed and therefore we cannot provide him at this stage, at this stage with the relevant details.

I have not been told in my supplementary information by when we can expect... oh yes, I have – by mid-January.

885 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister say whether – and he will have seen, I suspect, the press release issued by Big Publications Ltd which stated that they had surrendered the contract in September – can the Minister say whether he was aware of that fact and if he was, why it is not a matter that was raised when we spoke last in November, of this issue in this House?

890 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, that statement was a statement that was issued by a private company. It was not issued neither did the Government or the Bus Company have any hand in writing that statement. I read it, along with the entirety of the public so I will limit myself to saying that we do not – the Bus Company, as I am advised, does not – think that the statement issued in that respect, in the respect that he has asked me specifically on when the contract was terminated, is accurate.

895 Hon. S M Figueras: Is the Minister able to say whether, given that Big Publications Ltd had actually submitted – and I quote the Hon. Minister at the time when we discussed it in the House a couple of years ago now, nearly – the most sophisticated pricing structure of all proposals at the time, including the one from the existing provider of the service – and given the sophisticated pricing structure, he is concerned that the Bus Company will not have the benefit of receiving those funds which were proposed as part of the proposal exercise?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, he tempts me to stray into the very purpose of the audit, which I will not do because it is currently ongoing.

905 But I did tell him in the last answer to his question, if memory serves, that the difficulty has arisen because there is a difference as to the amount that is owing, so that I am advised – but this is subject to the audit currently being conducted so I cannot confirm it to him with any certainty – that once the audit is completed, the amount that the bus company will receive in terms of revenue will be higher, clearly, than what the bus company has collected.

910 I am giving him an indication of what I have been advised, but to tell him anything else is to basically pre-judge or try to clairvoyantly predict what the audit result will be and I cannot do that for him because it is currently being conducted. But we have committed ourselves in this House to tell him that once the audit is complete and the results are known, we are committed to giving him the relevant details.

915 As the hon. Gentleman will know, the Bus Company has the same interests in accruing all of the revenue that is owed to it, as the hon. Gentleman has in making sure that that happens. So there is no divergence of intention on either side of the House.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can he confirm that, can the Minister confirm that Dennis Buses was one of the four unsuccessful bidders for this particular tender?

920 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am advised that the identity of the tenderers are not disclosable. It is not that I wish to be unhelpful; it is simply that I am advised that the tender bids are commercial in confidence and that I cannot disclose those to him. If I could, I would.

925 Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, let me tell him, and I will get straight down to the point and I will tell him why, the purpose of this question.

The Opposition has information that one of the tenderers was Dennis Buses and that Dennis Buses bid substantially lower for this particular contract than in fact Man Bassadone which was the successful tenderer. Therefore in those circumstances, it is a matter of public interest and it is a matter that the Opposition is entitled to scrutinise.

930 The figures that I have been provided are that the Man Bassadone buses were awarded the contract and their bid was £155,000 per bus, whereas the Dennis buses were £130,000 per bus. Now the Hon. the Minister has also said in answer to my question that out of the five – the four that submitted bids, the unsuccessful ones – all four companies were found unsuitable for Gibraltar. Well, that cannot possibly be the case if it is Dennis because Dennis are of course the suppliers of the blue buses, so that company cannot 935 possible be unsuitable for Gibraltar. It would be very surprising indeed, bearing in mind their experience, if they made a tender of buses that was unsuitable for this community.

940 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, let me correct the hon. Gentleman. The original tenderers, the buses that they tendered for testing, they were all discarded because they were not suitable for the roads of Gibraltar. That is a question of fact. They brought in the buses, they were tested, they were not suitable and they were discarded by the team that were dealing with the procurement of the buses.

Hon. D A Feetham: Including Man Bassadone?

945 Hon. N F Costa: All four original tenderers, all of those buses, had to be discarded because of the unsuitability of the bus provided for testing for the roads. So I can correct him and tell him that that was certainly the case. It is not correct what he has said, as a matter of fact.

Hon. D A Feetham: Right, so all four, including the Man Bassadone buses –

950

Hon. N F Costa: I have not said that.

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, so all of them except for the Man Bassadone buses were unsuitable – 955 Hon. N F Costa: Let me clarify, what I have said is that I am not revealing to him the identity of the companies that provided the buses for testing. What I am telling him is that of all those companies, of the four companies that provided the buses for testing, those four buses that were tested were found unsuitable.

I am not, by answering in the terms that I have, accepting that they were either Man or Dennis. I am just telling him that of the companies that provided us buses for testing, they were unsuitable.

960

Hon. D A Feetham: Well, Mr Speaker, can I ask him whether out of those four, ultimately the successful tenderer, Man Bassadone – we know that Man Bassadone was the successful tenderer ultimately – whether Man Bassadone was also one of the ones that were deemed, that were submitting buses that were unsuitable for Gibraltar in those four that he has mentioned in answer to my question.

965

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am going to re-read the answer that I gave him, because perhaps he missed this aspect of the answer.

As I explained to the hon. Gentleman, a total of five companies were invited to tender. Out of these five, four submitted priced bids, of which all four companies were found unsuitable for Gibraltar's roads.

Then I add: all of the vendors, i.e. all of the companies that provided the buses for testing, were invited to participate in the negotiated procedure under the relevant regulation. Subsequently three tenders were received from which one did not submit a new bid. In other words, by the end we were left with two buses.

975 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, is it the case, that effectively the Government has chosen, has allocated a tender which is higher to the taxpayer than a tender that it had which was lower from Dennis Buses who are the current suppliers of the blue buses?

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have already answered the question to the hon. Gentleman – (Interjection) Yes, I have in the terms that I am allowed to answer the hon. Gentleman in this House.

980

But if his question to me is whether the taxpayer did not obtain value because the award was not given to a company that perhaps bid at a less cost, let me tell him that when contracts are considered by officials, it is not always the case – certainly my experience in three years, that it is not always the case – that the company that has quoted the cheapest price gets the contract, because obviously the board will consider many other factors – many other factors. Therefore even if the award was given to a company that had a higher price, it does not mean that it was the least competitive.

985

I will give him an example. The Dennis buses in 2004 cost whatever they did and there was a maintenance contract that was meant to be £80,000 a year. He knows, because I have given the information to the hon. Gentleman, that whereas those I am sure at the time that board in particular considered that they were the best value for money because the per unit bus, the cost was however much, and because the maintenance would be so much, in fact there were certain years where the maintenance contract came up to almost £½ million.

990

I can also tell him that the Dennis buses were found to be unsuitable for Gibraltar's topography and I will explain to him why.

995

Only after four years of the buses doing the circuits, they really started to need serious maintenance work. So even if the bus of Dennis were to cost lower compared to the bus of another company, when you add in the repairs and the maintenance and the cost, which I have provided to the hon. Gentleman, in fact it is not as cheap any more.

1000 So the hon. Gentleman I am sure appreciates that the tender process is more sophisticated than just Unit A and Unit B: Unit A is £5, Unit B is £10. Unit A is cheaper, therefore it is Unit A. Because when you add the other factors that I have mentioned, not least the maintenance contract, of which he has the information, then it is not comparing apples with apples; it is comparing apples with pears.

The experience of the Dennis buses in Gibraltar had been, with all due respect to the Dennis company, not a very good one or successful to Gibraltar.

1005 Let me tell him that the only company, the only entity in Gibraltar that won when Dennis was awarded the contract, was the company that has the maintenance contract, because from £80,000 a year they all of a sudden saw themselves with £250,000 a year, over £300,000 a year, sometimes £½ million a year.

So I am sure that he appreciates what I am trying to tell him.

1010 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, but I am sure that he appreciates too, that I am entitled to scrutinise what he has said, I am entitled to scrutinise this tender and the answers that he has provided to me, and the dearth of information he has provided me, prevents me from doing that.

1015 Because of course it is my job to scrutinise whether the Government is obtaining value for money and if I am told that effectively that the Man Bassadone buses have cost per bus £155,000 per bus, whereas Dennis has bid at £130,000 per bus – and I am giving the hon. Gentleman an opportunity to rebut that, if I have got my figures wrong – then it is up to him, the onus is then on him, to provide cogent reasons why they have chosen one over the other – not surmise a Micawberism.

1020 What you are effectively doing is you are saying well, because this could happen and this could happen, but I am not interested in what could happen in hypothetical situations. What I want to do is to examine this particular tender to ensure that the Government has obtained value for money and why has Man Bassadone been awarded this particular contract when there was another bidder that was substantially cheaper?

1025 And may I add this: the information that I have been provided is that in fact this particular bid, in relation to the buses, did not include a maintenance element that there were other companies that were effectively bidding in relation to the maintenance. But look, I may be wrong in relation to that but you are not providing me with the information, so that I can properly scrutinise this.

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, the hon. Gentleman is being mischievous – yes – when he knows full well and I have already started the answer by phrasing it in terms that I am advised that the unsuccessful bids of the unsuccessful tenderers are commercial in confidence and I cannot disclose them to him.

1030 Mr Speaker: The Minister says that he is advised. (Hon. N F Costa: Yes.) Where does that advice come from?

Hon. N F Costa: From the Procurement Office.

1035 Mr Speaker, simply to add that the hon. Gentleman says I speak in hypotheticals. I am not speaking in hypotheticals. The Dennis buses were on our roads from 2004. I have given them exact figures of what the maintenance contract costs so he can add the unit cost of the bus plus the maintenance in a year and actually start working out how much it costs.

I am afraid, Mr Speaker, I cannot add anything else to the information I have already given him.

1040 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, the actual bids – £155,000 and £130,000 – one with the other, there is a substantial amount, the difference. That is exclusive of maintenance and my understanding is that in terms of the maintenance element of all this, that that is being dealt with separately and indeed, it must be dealt with separately because the answer he has given me is that this contract has been allocated but indeed in relation to the maintenance aspect, there are still ongoing negotiations with Bassadone – not with Bassadone Man, but with Bassadone in order to see whether the Government can come to terms with Bassadone in relation to the maintenance. So one is separate from the other.

1045 I am focusing on the cost of the actual buses. But let me ask him this: does he know that Dennis Buses have written to the Government complaining about the allocation of this particular tender and has the Government responded at all to Dennis Buses and the complaints that they have made?

1050 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I have not received nor been cited of any correspondence from Dennis Buses, so the answer is no, I am not aware of any correspondence from Dennis or of a complaint.

1055 But, Mr Speaker, let me also tell him that in my experience as well over the past three years when companies compete and they do not get the tender, they ordinarily almost always complain. So it will not be a surprise to me at all.

Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, Mr Speaker, but the difference of course is that you may complain but if at the end of the day yours was the substantially cheaper bid and your buses had been used successfully in Gibraltar over the last four years, then you may have cause to complain.

1060 I really do not want to get into the merits of that. I wanted to examine why one tender has been awarded over the other tender and obviously the Hon. Minister has not been able to provide me with the answer.

1065 Is he satisfied, bearing in mind the criticisms of the Dennis Buses that he has made in this House, and bearing in mind the unfortunate history – nascent history I should say, because this contract has obviously only recently been allocated and the buses are only recently on the streets – but is he satisfied given the unfortunate recent history in relation to the Man Bassadone buses, that this will be a significant improvement on the Dennis buses?

Hon. N F Costa: Yes.

1070 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, perhaps one supplementary – a supplementary, Mr Speaker, that arises from the comprehensive answers that the Hon. Minister has provided.

1075 Is the Hon. Minister able to say, and perhaps he may need notice of the question – because I do concede that I may venture a little too far into technical detail and that the Minister may need notice of the question, but could he tell this House what feature of the Man buses – or rather what features perhaps – make the Man buses so appropriate, so optimised for the topography in the way that he suggests will mean that they will be more reliable and require less maintenance moving forward?

1080 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, I am sure that I have answered this question before to him on the reasons of the engines and so on. I do not have the information before me, it is a very technical question, but the –

Mr Speaker: Could I suggest to the Hon. Minister that he investigates that, and check whether he has in fact, and then come back to the House later today and make reference to that answer and we can continue? Rather than leave the matter in the air, okay?

1085 Hon. N F Costa: Yes, Mr Speaker, thank you.

Mr Speaker: So we will now deal with Question 721.

1090

Q721/2014
Oil pollution within the port –
Marine Accident Compliance Officer's report

Clerk: Question 721, the Hon. J J Netto.

1095 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, further to the answer to Written Question 172/2014 in June of this year, can the Minister for the Environment say if the Marine Accident Compliance Officer has now completed the investigation of the oil pollution within the port and if so, please provide Parliament with a copy of his or her report?

1100 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, yes, but following the preliminary analysis of the MAICO, no full investigation was deemed necessary. As a result there is no report to publish.

The MAICO did provide me with a preliminary report.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, will the Hon. Minister please not accede to provide a copy to the Opposition of that preliminary report?

1110 Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, if I may refer the hon. Gentleman to the relevant legislation, which is the Gibraltar Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2012, it reads as follows:

‘The MAICO may at his discretion and to promulgate any lessons learnt, from time to time publish collective short reports of accidents which have not been the subject of a report submitted under Regulation 18(1)’.

which means to say a very serious marine accident.

I asked the MAICO who, as you know, is independent to the Government, although contracted by the Government to investigate accidents and to investigate on them. I did specifically ask him whether he would be publishing a report on this incident and he said to me as follows, by e-mail at 13:03 yesterday:

‘I do not consider this incident to be a major pollution incident and the company have implemented the recommendations. Therefore I do not propose to publish this report.’

1115 As the hon. Gentleman knows, I have no power to ask him to do anything.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, in the answer provided by the Hon. Minister quoting the legislation, he mentions the aspect of lessons learnt as a result of an accident. Could I ask the Hon. Minister what lessons have been learnt and what, if any, actions taken to rectify or acknowledge... implement sorry, the lessons learnt.

1120

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, what I have told the hon. Gentleman was that the MAICO may at his discretion publish reports of accidents. It is entirely a matter for him in his sole discretion, whether... Yes well, I am reading from the legislation and that is the advice of the Maritime Administrator, and I have already told him that the MAICO has told me that he does not consider the incident to be a major pollution incident and that he has no intention to publish the report.

1125

Hon. J J Netto: So do we take it therefore that there were no lessons whatsoever from a situation where there was oil pollution very close to the west side of Gibraltar and therefore nothing to implement to try and avoid a likely repetition in the near future?

1130

Hon. N F Costa: Mr Speaker, what I can tell him is that the reason why the MAICO has decided not to publish a report, apart from the fact that he says that he does not consider it to be a major pollution incident in reference to the relevant legislation, he says and I quote him:

‘and the company have implemented the recommendations.’

1135 If he wants me to advise him on those recommendations, I am happy to ask the MAICO to set those out for me and he can either ask me at the next session of the House or I can write to him. I do not have those with me but I can ask for them if he so wishes.

Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker. Quite frankly if he gets the information and just simply passes it to me we can avoid asking the question next month.

Hon. N F Costa: Thank you, Mr Speaker.
I shall so write to the hon. Gentleman.

Q722/2014
Literary Festival –
Cost to taxpayer

1145 Clerk: Question 722, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what the cost of the Literary Festival was to the Taxpayer?

1150 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Business and Employment.

Minister for Business, Employment, Skills & Training (Hon. N F Costa): Mr Speaker, the cost to the Taxpayer of the Gibunco Gibraltar International Literary Festival of this year is £251,891.

SPORTS, CULTURE, HERITAGE AND YOUTH

Q728-729/2014

Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority – Vacancies

1155

Clerk: We now move to Question 728, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1160

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, sir, can the Minister for Sports provide details of any current vacancies at the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority, together with details of when these vacancies will be advertised?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

1165

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Question 729.

Clerk: Question 729, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1170

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports provide details in respect of any vacancies which may have been filled at the Sports and Leisure Authority, since the answer to Question 483/2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

1175

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the vacancy for the Pool Operative was advertised and applicants interviewed. The successful candidate started employment for the Gibraltar Sports and Leisure Authority on 1st December 2014.

The post left vacant by the current CEO remains the same as in my answer to Question 483/2014 and just to recall, the answer stated that it was going to come out imminently.

1180

I can now report that we are looking at the whole of the structure of the GSLA and it might take more time than I said in my answer to the last question.

1185

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, would the Minister... seeing that from imminently we have now changed to looking into the whole structure – does he have any timescales that he has instructed whoever is reassessing the whole establishment of the place to adhere to?

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, I have asked how long this will take and all the indications are that it will happen slightly before the end of the financial year, because the impact would be on estimates and things that have to be done for the budget.

Q730/2014

Sea bathing facilities –
Reason closed to public

1190

Clerk: Question 730, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1195

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of all dates when the sea bathing facilities adjacent to GSLA's swimming pool have been closed to the public since its official opening, inclusive of reasons why any closures were necessary?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

1200

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the magnificent Gibraltar Bathing Pavilion, which has and will give our citizens a great deal of enjoyment and fulfils one of our manifesto commitments, was never closed to the public.

On Sunday, 21st September, access to the sea was restricted due to works being carried out to the second phase of the project.

Q731/2014
GSLA swimming pools –
Periods of closure

1205 Clerk: Question 731, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Sports and Leisure provide details of all dates when either of the GSLA's swimming pools have been closed for public use during the present financial year, inclusive of reasons why any closures were necessary?

1210 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the following are the dates when the GSLA swimming pools have been closed for public use during the present financial year, inclusive of reasons.

1215 Swimming pool – the 25 metre pool was closed on 22nd July and reopened on 22nd September. The reason, closed for summer maintenance nine days earlier than usual due to the installation of new filters and major maintenance works.

1220 Pool for the elderly, disabled and teaching – was closed three times, which were: on 14th and 15th October and reopened on 16th October; on 23rd and 24th October, reopened on 27th October; on 18th and 22nd November and reopened on 24th November. On these three occasions, closure was due to pool user incidents involving human faeces. Both pools were closed on 1st December and reopened on 2nd December. This was due to the torrential downpours; the water levels rose to the extent that the sewage water was emerging through the drains inside the changing rooms.

1225 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, the last time or the last date the Minister has provided which is on 1st December due to the heavy downpours and so on: is the Minister aware, is this a new problem that has arisen because we have changed some system or other, or is this a recurring problem that has been ongoing for some time now?

1230 Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, this is a problem that has been there for a very long time and we are now trying to deal with all the changing rooms within that pool, for the simple reason that during the time that the Gibraltar Bathing Pavilion was opened, although there are facilities of changing rooms and toilets for that place, many users were using the pool to change and use the facilities there. The complaint has always been the amount of smell that emanates from the drains. It is to do with something when it was constructed that a smell comes out from the drains and in this case, it was water that was coming out from the drains.

1235 We are currently looking at a whole maintenance programme there, which will hopefully alleviate this problem which has been there for, like he said, a number of years now.

Q732/2014
Heritage sites –
Works and costs

1240 Clerk: Question 732, the Hon. E J Reyes.

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Heritage provide details of all works, together with a breakdown of respective cost undertaken at any heritage related site, since the answer to Question 486/2014, stating by whom these works were carried out ?

1245 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, there have not been any further works or payments.

1250 I hasten to add there have not been any payments. I would think that there might be some payments coming in later on since, because this is the one they prepared for me, I am sure there will be payments coming in, but from Question 486, there have not been any payments made on any works.

1255 Hon. E J Reyes: I appreciate that, Mr Speaker: if no payments have been made, then the Minister cannot provide the information. I shall no doubt ask him again in a couple of months' time to see what Treasury have processed.

Q733/2014
Mega Concert –
Total cost

Clerk: Question 733, the Hon. D A Feetham.

1260

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, can the Government please state what was the total cost of the Mega Concert?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Sports, Culture and Youth.

1265

Minister for Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth (Hon. S E Linares): Mr Speaker, the cost of the Gibraltar Music Festival is currently at £778,867.74. This is £121,132.26 below the projected budget in the estimates of £900,000.

1270

Hon. D A Feetham: Is this figure that the Hon. Minister has provided me the final figure? Because the actual cost of the Mega Concert last year, I believe from the estimates, came in at just over £1 million. So there is a substantial difference between this figure and what it cost previously. So is this the final figure or are there still bills to come in which will then be added on to the £777,000?

1275

Hon. S E Linares: Mr Speaker, when he said last year that the expenditure was over £1 million, what he did not take into consideration was the revenue. So it might have cost, the total cost has to be balanced off from what the revenues are to the expenditure.

1280

But to answer his question specifically, we are expecting a few more invoices to come but I would not expect it to make much more difference and in fact we are even getting some more revenue which is owed coming in as well. So this is the figure as from when you asked the question, it might vary but the variation will be very, very small.

HEALTH, THE ENVIRONMENT, ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Q734/2014
Blood department, St Bernard's Hospital –
Review of staff

Clerk: Question 734, the Hon. J J Netto.

1285

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, given the complaint by service users of delays in the blood department of St Bernard's Hospital, will the Minister for Health ask for a management review of staff resources in order to expedite such delays encountered?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1290

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the GHA is looking to implement a new appointment system within the first quarter of 2015. This will address the issue of delays. Patients required for blood tests by their GPs, consultants or other clinicians will be provided with an appointment for attending the Phlebotomy Clinic on a specific date and time either at the Primary Care Centre or at St Bernard's.

1295

The current complement is one full-time senior donor carer, one full-time donor carer and one full-time phlebotomy-trained nursing assistant. This should be able to meet the service demands once the appointment system is in place.

1300

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Minister for his reply. The reason why I actually asked this question was because a couple of weeks ago, I was actually doing some shopping in Morrison and two particular ladies approached me – two ladies that go regularly to the blood department – and they were quite annoyed at the delays being encountered there. According to them, the delays were due to the fact that some member of staff had retired and that particular position had not been occupied yet. So this is the reason why they brought it to my attention and the reason why I am bringing it here to the Minister, and hence the reason why I have asked the question or framed the question that particular way in terms of management looking into it.

But it seems to indicate that that is exactly what you are doing. Well, the appointment system might help make the appointments go faster but I am not quite sure whether the management team sees a need for further recruitment there.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, no. We are satisfied with the manning levels that we have in that department. What happens is because at the moment there is not an appointment system, everybody turns up at eight o'clock and you can never tell how many people are going to turn up.

Therefore even though the nurses work extremely hard and are extremely efficient and nobody I know doubts that, they take time, because it takes time to draw blood from the patients. If you come in a little bit later than others and there are many patients on that particular occasion, then clearly you will have to wait.

This is why we are now going to be piloting an appointment system in which they actually get a time and that should be able to distribute the number of patients who are having their blood taken during the course of the morning so that they know more or less what time they are due to arrive. So I think that will make an improvement and that is what we are going to be trying out early in the New Year.

Q735/2014

Alameda Botanic Gardens – Maintenance programme

Clerk: Question 735, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, will the Minister for the Environment please say if it is the intention to do a major maintenance programme in the Alameda Botanic Gardens, in order to replace all the broken wooden batons and benches and resurface the pathways due to the amount of potholes constituting a safety hazard to visitors to the gardens?

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the management of the gardens has submitted a proposal for the paving of the pathways which the Government is studying. Benches are routinely maintained and a number of new benches have been added recently.

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, I think I need to take issue on the question of the benches because the benches I am referring to in particular, and I think it is called Grand Parade Road which is the beginning there, the batons of the benches have been broken for some time, they have certainly not been replaced in the last 12 months. That said, one would hope that it does happen obviously and the benches are up to scratch.

In relation to the pathways, will the Hon. Minister please indicate to us whether it is likely for a programme to resurface the pathways in the Alameda Gardens perhaps in this part of this financial year?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Okay, Mr Speaker. Clearly if I had been asked that question a few years ago, I could have told him which benches and how many batons may have been missing, but obviously that is not my day-to-day role now. I take the point on the benches at Grand Parade and I will enquire as to where they are in the routine programme.

Regarding the resurfacing of pathways, this is clearly a problem because of the effect of tree roots and in the years that I used to work within the gardens, we tried many different methods of resolving this. What we have received now is a proposal for resurfacing most of the main pathways of the gardens but I expect that major replacement programme would not start this financial year it would start next financial year, but there would be routine filling in of holes as has happened in the past, during the course of this financial year.

Q736/2014
Commonwealth Park – Restricted areas

1355 Clerk: Question 736, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment say when will the restricted areas closed to the public in Commonwealth Park, be re-opening?

1360 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, areas are routinely cordoned off in order to assist in the maintenance. This is totally at the discretion of the gardening staff.

1365

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, but my understanding is that there are some specific areas which have been cordoned off right from the beginning when it was first published in I think July this year. In other words there are specific areas which have been cordoned off since July or probably June July of this year and have not been reopened. When are those specific areas going to be reopened?

1370

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, this is probably the only Parliament in the world where we discuss the turfing of a few square metres of grass in a park, but I am happy to assist the Member opposite.

1375 Mr Speaker: That is purely due to the nature of our Parliament. We are a Parliament in which national affairs are discussed and also those of a municipal character.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Certainly, Mr Speaker. Alternatively, it might also be because there is very little else to pick on because we are doing such a good job. (A Member: Hear, hear.) But I accept your comment of course, Mr Speaker.

The areas we are talking about are the mounds which were particularly popular with children climbing up and rolling down and therefore they took more wear than the rest of the area. The area has been reseeded but there have been problems in relation to pigeons eating the seeds and the seedlings, which is now being addressed because the areas are covered until the grass is big enough and also the fact that whenever those areas are cordoned off, children will once again – and that is what they are there for – go up and roll on them and so on so they need to take more time than would normally be taken in an ordinary flat area of turf in order to recover.

1385

But when the grass is ready to take that, is at the discretion of the people there on the ground day to day. I have seen them recently, I often walk through there on my way between one office or the other and I suspect they will need a few more weeks yet until the root systems are firm enough to take the tread. But this as I say is something which is routine maintenance of a well-used turfed area.

1390

Hon. J J Netto: Well, Mr Speaker, first of all in relation to the first comment that the Hon. Minister made, it seems to me that he seems to suggest that highlighting this particular issue is not that important. If that is so, therefore –

1395

Mr Speaker: I have as Speaker of this Parliament dealt with the matter. I do not think the hon. questioner needs to make that further –

Hon. J J Netto: Well, the political point I was going to make –

1400

Mr Speaker: I do not think it has to be made –

Hon. J J Netto: If that is the case then his conversion from an environmentalist to a politician has been shorter than envisaged. (Laughter)

1405

But keeping on the issue, Mr Speaker, on the specific areas which have been cordoned off since June and continues to be cordoned off since June, can the hon. Minister say whether it is problems of wear and tear, despite the fact that it has been almost five or six months when nobody has been turfing on those particular areas or whether it is in fact a problem of the soil underneath the grass? The soil and the bedrock.

1410

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: The soil and the?

Hon. J J Netto: The soil and the bedrock.

1415 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Okay, Mr Speaker. I think this is the first personal attack across this House since the famous television hug!

Mr Speaker: Let us see if we can move on in the spirit of the day.

1420 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Very well, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: Considering just a week before Parliament and after an embrace from the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition, ushering in a new era, let us proceed on that basis.

1425 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker. My political abilities have been questioned but fine, that is for others to question, not for me.

1430 Mr Speaker, this is due to wear and tear. It is normal that if you step on grass and you step on it a lot, it is going to wear. I have no information that it is due to the soil, because the soil is exactly the same on the mound as it is on the rest of the park where the grass is growing in a good condition. There is no question of bedrock; there is gravel underneath. I do not think that there is another reason. I honestly think that it is due to the wear and tear on the grass.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q737/2014
Climate change –
Government Strategy to combat

1435 Clerk: Question 737, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for Climate Change provide Parliament with the Government strategy for combating climate change?

1440 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Government strategy for combatting climate changes are multi-faceted and includes a combination of both top-down and bottom-up approaches.

1445 The Department of the Environment and the recently created Climate Change Task Force, chaired by the Deputy Chief Minister, have been actively addressing key aspects of Gibraltar's strategy during the course of the year. The strategy will be elaborated further in the revised Gibraltar Climate Change Programme which is currently being redrafted by the Department of the Environment.

1450 I can nevertheless inform the hon. Member that the strategy is generally divided into four main overarching themes which include: (1) adapting to climate change by building Gibraltar's resilience; (2) facilitating the transition towards a low carbon economy; (3) improving our understanding of climate change science; and (4) raising climate change awareness and changing consumer behaviour through educational initiatives.

1455 This follows a strategic approach adopted by the United Nations Environment Programme for combatting climate change.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister indicate to the House when the Climate Change Study Report will be published?

1460 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Climate Change Task Force has been meeting virtually on a monthly basis for about a year. I said 'recently', but it is recently in relative terms. It is now close to completing its work and I would think that within the next few months we will have a document completed.

1465 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, how does the Hon. Minister see that the actual strategy, once it is finalised in the report, will be intertwined with the latest agreement as a result of the Lima Agreement reached, I think it was this last Sunday, 14th December at 1.00 a.m. in the morning in relation to the emissions that need to be obtained by 2020?

1470 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, it is interesting because depending who you hear reporting on the meeting of the parties in Lima, you get different impressions as to whether it was successful or not. The environmental lobby insists that it was not enough and other people insist that it was. I think it is a major step forward. Now we are no longer discussing whether climate change is caused by man, but how we are going to tackle it. This was certainly the impression that I got when I was fortunate enough to be at the United Nations General Assembly Conference on Climate Change.

1475 We will respond to the agreement and I would like to think that we will go beyond, because we have a potential in our small community of leading by example. It has been a tough job because clearly, climate change was not the in thing three years ago and it has been hard work to push this forward. But I am confident that we will have a robust strategy which Gibraltar can be proud of and which will be in fact, among the best in the world.

1480 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, perhaps just one more final question or supplementary question on this side. Is the Government, or rather is the Minister for the Environment, confident that Gibraltar will be able to obtain the level of emissions agreed to by 2020?

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, Mr Speaker.

1485 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q738/2014
Eco Wave Power Ltd –
Electricity provision

Clerk: Question 738, the Hon. J J Netto.

1490 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment please say if the company Eco Wave Power Ltd has started building the buoys and the necessary infrastructure in order to commence producing electricity into a grid and provide Parliament with an update on this matter?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1495 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): No, Mr Speaker, they have not. Eco Wave Power Ltd are currently involved in a tender process, I believe they are currently in Gibraltar, for the required engineering works to be done in Gibraltar.

The Department of the Environment and the Gibraltar Electricity Authority are in contact with Eco Wave Power Ltd in order to monitor progress and we expect works to commence on site next year.
1500 As I say, I believe they are currently in Gibraltar making preparations for the work to begin quite soon.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, I am grateful for that but it seems to me that when the news actually came out in the newspaper Bloomberg in relation to this particular agreement, that they were talking then about everything being in place by the end of this year and starting to produce electricity at the beginning of next year.

Could I ask the Minister why the delay or why the discrepancy between what the Minister has just said against what came out in the Bloomberg article?

1510 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, the Bloomberg article I believe was prepared by the company and therefore this may have been their perception.

Clearly when you actually start a project, you begin to realise the things that you have to go through. It had to go through the planning process which it did, there is their own tender process in sourcing the local firms that are going to be manufacturing equipment, which is clearly something that we welcome, so there are steps that need to be taken but I am not unduly worried at this stage, that these delays are going to be significant or rather that these delays mean that the project is not going to go forward.

I am confident at this point in time that they are genuine procedural delays that one comes across whenever one is embarking on any project, particularly one which is fairly new technology, certainly for Gibraltar.

1520 Hon. J J Netto: Yes, Mr Speaker, can I ask just one last supplementary question because within that article, half way through the article there is a statement that can be confusing perhaps even contradictory and it states:

‘Gibraltar plans to produce 15% of its energy from renewable sources by 2020’.

Having been thrown in the middle of the article, it gives the impression that that is going to be the only source upon which the Government is going to rely for producing these renewable sources of energy.

1525 Could the Hon. Minister perhaps clarify that this is not the be-all and end-all to the Government strategy?

1530 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes, indeed, Mr Speaker. We are developing a strategy which includes analysing other renewable sources of energy. I dare say we have already seen in a small way, the introduction of some solar that will now take off next year, and we are talking to people about other forms of marine energy and we have not discarded other forms such as the more modern wind generators which are smaller and do not create a danger for migrating birds. So we are looking at the whole range of renewable sources and we are working out a strategy and trying to work out at what rate we have to introduce these and what percentage each is likely to take.

1535 Clearly there are some pilot studies which need to continue regarding marine current speed, wind energy and so on but I can confirm that we are not putting all our eggs in Eco Wave’s basket.

Q739/2014
Macaques –
Illegal feeding

Clerk: Question 739, the Hon. J J Netto.

1540 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment say how many individuals have been fined or cautioned for the illegal enticing or feeding of macaques, contrary to the existing legislation either inside or outside the Upper Rock Nature Reserve, stating where, the date, nationality, amounts imposed, which entity imposed the fine and whether some cases are waiting to be heard in the courts?

1545 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the information requested is in the schedule that I now hand over.

Answer to Question No. 739/2014

Illegal feeding of Barbary Macaques

DATE	NATIONALITY	INSIDE URNR	AREA	FINE/CAUTION	IMPOSED BY	COURT HEARING
12/2/14	SPANISH	NO	JOHN MACK. HALL	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
14/5/14	SPANISH	YES	ST MICHAEL'S CAVE	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
16/7/14	MOROCCAN	YES	APES' DEN	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
1/9/14	BRITISH	YES	APES' DEN	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
26/9/14	BRITISH	YES	APES' DEN	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
21/9/14	PHILIPPINE	YES	TRAFALGAR CEMETERY	CAUTION	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO
7/11/14	BRITISH	NO	OUTSIDE MOUNT ALVERNIA	£500	DEPT. OF THE ENVIRONMENT	NO

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can I ask given the information provided in the schedule, there are seven individuals of which six have been cautioned. Is that a policy with regard, cautioning as opposed to imposing a fine?

1550 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, in the early stages of introducing the feeding tickets, for want of a better word, the decision was taken by the Department that we would initially deal with these matters by way of caution, warning, informing people that this was something new but that they would face the 1555 possibility of fines and after that number of months, it was decided that there was a need to step up a little bit more and that is why the first fine ticket itself was issued in November. So there was a strategy of implementing this reasonably in a step-by-step way.

1560 Hon. J J Netto: And one final supplementary question if the Hon. Minister can help me. Of the three British mentioned in the schedule, is it possible to know whether we are talking about British Gibraltarians or other British – what is in the back of my mind basically is that I am trying to find out whether it is our local people or whether they are tourists coming for the day. I do not know whether he has got the information available.

1565 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have that information but if he will remind me or get somebody to call my office, we will look it up and I am very happy to share that with him.

1570 Hon. J J Netto: The only reason is because I am trying to think whether there is a particular problem that needs to be dealt with, in the sense of it being tourists or being local, and whether we ought to create more awareness among the local population or more awareness with the tourists at a particular tourist point. That is the reason why I am asking this supplementary question.

Q740/2014

Sewage treatment plant and related works – Progress with construction

Clerk: Question 740, the Hon. J J Netto.

1575 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister of the Environment provide Parliament with an updated account of progress with regard to the construction of the sewage treatment plant and works to the other parts of the sewage system, giving a time limit for each aspect of works to commence and finish?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1580 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, with regard to the construction of the sewage treatment plant, numerous meetings have taken place between the joint venture company, namely Northumbrian Water and Modern Water and Her Majesty's Government of Gibraltar, since they were granted Preferred Bidder status.

1585 The Environmental Impact Assessment process has been initiated and the target date for completion of the plant is in 2016. Works to the other parts of the sewage system currently being carried out are: the de-silting and CCTV survey of the main sewer along Rosia Road – this is due for completion in early 2015; the de-silting and CCTV survey of the foul sewer along Main Street from the junction with Bell Lane up to King Street, due for completion in early 2015; and the last phase of the Wellington Front flood alleviation scheme, due for completion also in early next year.

1590 Hon. J J Netto: I am grateful, Mr Speaker, for that information, but can I ask the Hon. Minister in relation to the sewage treatment plant, because I did not hear when it is envisaged that works will actually begin. I mean, he has given me the process leading to commencement but not a commencement date or an approximate commencement date.

1595 When he talks about the completion being 2016, are we talking about the beginning, the middle or the end of 2016?

1600 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Mr Speaker, I do not have an initiation date. The discussions have included tweaking the technology, we are aware of the fact that we use a salt-water system which is not used in many other parts so the technology had to be tweaked and discussions I am told are almost completed and then the EIA has to be completed.

1605 So I would have said that it would be a few months before work actually starts, which would probably make the completion somewhere around the middle of 2016. But as we have seen with other projects, the exact start and finish dates, particularly the finish dates are always a little bit delicate because of things that need to procedurally take place.

Q741/2014
On-line reporting facility –
Update on progress

Clerk: Question 741, the Hon. J J Netto.

1610 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment say if the on-line reporting facility alluded by the Hon. Minister in his budget address is now operational and if so, provide a monthly account of the report submitted, broken down by categories?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1615

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, yes the reporting facility is operational. The Environmental Agency and the Government launched the on-line application Gibenviro in mid-November 2013. That is one of two; I will mention the other one in a minute.

1620

The application was advertised in the local media. Posters were also displayed in public buildings, schools and in St Bernard's Hospital and the Environmental Agency also has permanent advertising in three of its vehicles.

I have the information breakdown, unfortunately it was prepared for me as supplementary rather than as a schedule but there are not many so I will go through them and I can give the hon. Member a copy.

Only 11 reports have been submitted through this app: one of feral cats, four of litter accumulation, two of housing defects, one of smells, two related to pest control and one related to smoke and fumes.

In addition, the Department of the Environment is currently working on a separate on-line reporting tool which has not yet been published. This refers to 'FixMyStreet' and the Department is currently working on the procedural documents for each stakeholder involved in FixMyStreet.

1630

Hon. J J Netto: I believe the Hon. Minister alluded to the fact that he is going to make a copy of the information.

Hon. Dr J E Cortes: Yes.

1635

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q742/2014
Revised Environmental Action and Management Plan –
Provision to Parliament

Clerk: Question 742, the Hon. J J Netto.

1640 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide Parliament with a copy of the revised Environmental Action and Management Plan earmarked for September/October 2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1645

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, there were no plans to produce a revised version of the EAMP in September/October this year. The EAMP was updated in January 2013.

1650

There may have been confusion because having researched what I believe I said in Parliament, I am not sure whether it was at the time of my budget speech, was that there was going to be a seminar in September/October, to review where we were on the EAMP and that may have been the confusion, rather than review the document itself.

Because of other exigencies, that seminar did not take place and is now scheduled to take place either at the end of January or the beginning of February. I just offer that by way of explanation, because perhaps the way I said it may have given the impression that it was the document going to be reviewed rather than the implementation of the document.

Hon. J J Netto: So, Mr Speaker, just to be clear there is no intention to revise the existing plan and the existing plan was updated in 2013. Is that correct?

1660 Hon. Dr J E Cortes: What I said was that I did not say that there was an intention to revise it in September/October but to review progress on it. That will now happen early in the New Year. Following that discussion, there may be an update of it but I do not think I committed myself to updating it in September/October but to reviewing it. That is the distinction I am trying to make.

Q743/2014
Gibraltar Waste Management Plan –
Provision to Parliament

1665 Clerk: Question 743, the Hon. J J Netto.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide Parliament with a copy of the Gibraltar Waste Management Plan?

1670 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, the Gibraltar Waste Management Plan is available online. A copy will also be provided electronically to the hon. Member today.

1675 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q744/2014
Municipal Waste Treatment Plant –
Timeline for commencement and completion

Clerk: Question 744, the Hon. J J Netto.

1680 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, can the Minister for the Environment provide a timeline for the commencement and completion of the Municipal Waste Treatment Plant?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Health, the Environment and Energy.

1685 Minister for Health, the Environment, Energy and Climate Change (Hon. Dr J E Cortes): Mr Speaker, a precise timeline for the commencement and completion of the Municipal Waste Treatment Plant is not available at present. The plant is currently in the pre-qualifying questionnaire stage of the tender process. Invitations to tender are expected to be sent out to successful applicants shortly – I believe maybe as shortly as tomorrow – and the target date for completion is late 2015.

1690 Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q745/2014
Government rental homes –
Unpaid rents written off

Clerk: Question 745, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1695 Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, further to Question 521/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide updated details of how much has been written off in respect of unpaid rents pertaining to Government rental homes so far in the financial year 2014-15?

1700 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, no monies have been written off so far in relation to 2014-15.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q746/2014
Government rental homes –
Damage from rainwater ingress

1705

Clerk: Question 746, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1710

Hon. E J Reyes: Can Government provide details of the extent of damage caused to rental homes inclusive of locations as a result of rain water ingress during ongoing refurbishment works, since the answer provided to Question 522/2014?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

1715

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, during November and up to 15th December 2014, 32 flats have been affected by water ingress.

As in my previous answer, I am advised that the immediate internal surface and window surrounds have been affected and the contractor has already undertaken effective repairs.

1720

The damage caused inclusive of locations is as follows: Moorish Castle Estate, water penetration through the ceiling was the cause and there were six flats affected. In Laguna Estate there were seven flats affected by water penetration through the ceiling. At Laguna Estate there were also seven flats affected by water penetration through the windows. In Glacis Estate there were three flats affected through water penetration to the ceiling and a further nine flats were affected by water penetration through the windows.

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

1735

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

Q748/2014
Government rental homes –
Tenants requiring urgent decanting

Clerk: Question 748, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1740

Hon. E J Reyes: Can the Minister for Housing provide details of how many tenants required urgent decanting from their homes since the answer to Question 526/2014, indicating the reason why, the date when said decanting became necessary and the date when the tenants were able to return to their homes?

1745

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, since the answer to Question 526/2014 six persons have required decanting from their homes as follows.

Tenant 1 due to works was decanted on 15th October 2014 and returned home on 12th December 2014.

1750

Tenant 2 as a result of sewage problems, they were decanted on 17th October 2014 and were able to return to their flat on 23rd November 2014.

Tenant 3 as a result of works was decanted on 17th October 2014 and they were able to return home on 30th November 2014.

1755

Tenant 4 as a result of fire was decanted on 30th October 2014 and as yet there is no date set for their return as work is still ongoing on that flat.

Tenant 5 as a result of problems with the roof was decanted on 17th November 2014 and as yet no date has been set for their return.

Finally, tenant 6 was decanted as a result of repairs to the roof on 3rd December 2014 and once again, there is no date set for their return.

Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, thanks for the information.

The question said tenants requiring urgent decanting and obviously it is quite logical that with the sewage, the fire and the roof, it has had to happen, but the Minister on two particular occasions said that there were works. Does he have any further information as to what type of works because it should be urgent, rather than scheduled?

1765

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I do not have the specific information but when there are urgent works required and obviously the works cannot be done with the family within, then that is the reason for the decant. Now exactly what the reason was, I do not know. I am aware of on certain occasions that the works could be due to humidity and because the remedial works have required the removal of walls or having to rebuild walls. Even things like rewiring, on occasions there has been a need for rewiring flats and the need to open up trunking has meant that the tenants have had to be decanted. But I do not have the specific information that the gentleman is requesting.

1770

Hon. E J Reyes: Mr Speaker, is the Minister aware of these six urgent decanting in any way connected with the 32 flats affected for which the Minister gave us information in respect of Question 746, where I see some of them related to water penetration through ceilings, windows and so on. Are any of these six somehow or another also included in the 32 for refurbishment works?

1780

Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, once again I am not sure of the reply to the question. I would think that they are different but I would have to find out. I do not think that they are related because the timeframes for return have been quite long and I believe I did reply to the previous question that I think most of the repairs have now been done to the flats that were affected through water ingress.

1785

Hon. J J Netto: I accept, Mr Speaker, that I had not given adequate notice of that upon return to his office, should the Minister find that any of these six do coincide with the 32, would the Minister just kindly provide this information to me as and when he can and we can then move on to the next question?

1790

Hon. P J Balban: Of course, sir.

Q749/2014
Government co-ownership housing projects –
Updated details of allocations

Clerk: Question 749, the Hon. E J Reyes.

1795 Hon. E J Reyes: Further to the answer provided to Question 532/2014, can the Minister for Housing provide revised and updated details of how many houses have already been assigned or allocated in respect of Government's new co-ownership housing projects and how many still remain unsold, giving the room size composition in each case?

1800 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will now hand the hon. Member a schedule containing the information requested.

Answer to Question 749

Mons Calpe Mews

RKB	ALLOCATED	UNALLOCATED
4 Bed flats	20	Nil
3 Bed flats	156	Nil
2 Bed flats	146	Nil
1 Bed flats	9	Nil

Beach View Terraces

RKB	ALLOCATED	UNALLOCATED
4 Bed flats	39	Nil
3 Bed flats	321	Nil
2 Bed flats	166	Nil
1 Bed flats	24	14

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you for this schedule, Mr Speaker.

1805 Yes, I note that there has been further allocations and so on. Just so that I can make a note here, can the Minister tell me as up to when is this return in, because, as I have heard from some constituents that they were actually invited to GRP only earlier this week to be offered some of these as at yet unallocated homes? So is this information correct as of yesterday or as of a few days ago? I know the Minister has to collate information but whoever provided him the details should say as at when, what date.

1810 Hon. P J Balban: Mr Speaker, I am not sure of the exact date, but the GRP are still going down the pre-lists and in fact GRP have 10 appointments left before Christmas.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q750/2014
Government fleet of vehicles –
Non-polluting engines

1815 Clerk: Question 750, the Hon. J J Netto.

1820 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, further to the answer given to Written Question 182/2014, can the Minister for the Environment say if the assessment to the current Government fleet of vehicles has now been completed in order to meet their manifesto commitment to have a fleet of vehicles powered by non-polluting engines and if so, will the Minister provide Parliament with a copy of the report, coupled with the Government's action to fulfil the commitment by the time the next elections are called?

Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

1825 Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the assessment of the Government's fleet of vehicles has now been completed. The internal report is in the process of being considered so as to determine options on how best to meet the manifesto commitment given to have the transport fleet powered insofar as possible by non-polluting engines.

1830 Hon. J J Netto: Mr Speaker, will the Hon. Minister allow the Opposition to have a copy of the internal report?

Hon. P J Balban: No, Mr Speaker. We do not publish internal reports.

1835 Hon. J J Netto: But you could of course make an exception to the Government policy and thus provide the report to the Opposition. Is that a problem?

1840 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Yes, Mr Speaker, this is a report prepared internally in order to enable the Government to assess how it is going to comply with a manifesto commitment. It is a report he could have commissioned when he was in Government, it is about the same fleet of vehicles. It was not his manifesto commitment to do it so we have a manifesto commitment to deal with the fleet in a particular way and this report is an internal report of the Government so there is no question of it being disclosed to the Opposition.

Q751-753/2014
Tesla vehicle lease –
Costs

1845 Clerk: Question 751, the Hon. D A Feetham

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the term of the contract for the lease of the Tesla vehicle to the Government and what is the projected total cost to the Taxpayer of that contract?

1850 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, I will answer this question together with Questions 752 and 753/2014.

1855 Clerk: Question 752, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, what is the total amount paid by the Government to Bassadone Motors and/or any other entity in respect of the Tesla vehicle used by the Chief Minister?

1860 Clerk: Question 753, the Hon. D A Feetham.

Hon. D A Feetham: What is the cost to the Taxpayer per month for the Tesla vehicle used by the Chief Minister?

1865 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services.

1870 Minister for Transport, Traffic and Technical Services (Hon. P J Balban): Mr Speaker, the Government has entered into a financial agreement with IFC (Bassadone Motors Finance Company) whereby IFC will finance the sum of £56,594 which is outstanding after the payment of an initial deposit of €30,000 with an interest only deal of three years at a rate of 6%. This equates to a monthly interest of £282.97 per month. The deal includes an option to buy the vehicle at a price of £56,594 after three years. The monthly cost of running the vehicle is almost zero. It can cost a pound or two to charge it.

1875 Hon. S M Figueras: Mr Speaker, can the Hon. Minister say whether there has been any need to conduct any maintenance or servicing on the vehicle since it was acquired?

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I am happy to help, given that it is the vehicle that I am driven in.

1880 The vehicle is updated and serviced almost daily. It is connected by a 3G chip to the Tesla factory in California and software updates and servicing is carried out in that way which is really quite an incredible thing to see. It usually happens overnight whilst the vehicle is charging.

Other than that, there has been no need for any major overhaul of the vehicle. There may be a need to repair a small part of the door, which has not been working exactly as it should in the past week or so, but other than that, it has given a magnificent result.

1885 Hon. S M Figueras: And in terms of tyres and other moving parts on the vehicle, they clearly cannot be updated remotely. Is the Chief Minister aware of... well, actually could the Chief Minister say whether it is in fact Bassadone who will be conducting servicing as and when it is required in due course in terms of the motors themselves and whatever may need servicing in that respect?

1890 Hon. Chief Minister: Bassadone is through Tesla, Tesla the suppliers. The maintenance of the vehicle is done by Tesla itself through Bassadone in the same way as some other high-end marks do their servicing through agents. Tyres, etc I do not think are particular to the vehicle, I think it just carries Pirelli P1s or something like that, so those are available generally and the weight of the vehicle is such that it does not need changing of the tyres very often – unless I am in it, it is actually quite light. (Laughter)

1895 Hon. S M Figueras: I would warrant it might be a good idea never to give me a lift. (Laughter) Mr Speaker.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am alright Yes. Santa is fine.

1900 Mr Speaker, in relation to the arrangement with IFC. Is it the Government's intention to acquire the vehicle at the end of the term?

1905 Hon. Chief Minister: Mr Speaker, there is nothing to suggest to the Government at the moment that we should not. Hon. Members need to understand that the reason why this vehicle was not bought outright is that this was a new technology, a very tried and tested technology, by the time that we were acquiring it the vehicle was being marketed generally, but in order to ensure that we did not end up with what might have been a dead duck – and the hon. Member is a follower of Jeremy Clarkson who is not a fan of the vehicle and there are one or two reviews that suggest that it might not be as good as the American market reports suggested, that there might be an opportunity not to have to acquire it.

1910 But every indication at the moment is that the vehicle is working exactly as it needs to for the purposes of the needs of the Chief Minister of Gibraltar and therefore the present intention is to proceed with the acquisition.

1915 Hon. S M Figueras: Or indeed, Mr Speaker, as the Norwegian market would suggest because it is if not the most popular, one of the most popular vehicles there.

That notwithstanding then, Mr Speaker, is it then the case that IFC was effectively the entity taking the punt on the vehicle when it was originally acquired by the Government?

1920 Hon. Chief Minister: That is exactly right, Mr Speaker, so in the event that the Government were not to proceed, then IFC/Bassadone but it would be IFC would then take the vehicle back at the end of the three-year period and they would be the ones who would market it.

I for one would certainly have been one ready to buy it at that stage, one Tesla vehicle, black in colour, slightly used, taken care of, much weight put on the right back seat, but other than that it is in excellent working order.

1925 Mr Speaker: Next question.

1990 Mr Speaker: It is a fairly lengthy schedule, I suggest that I give an opportunity to the hon. Member to study it and while he is doing so, perhaps we can proceed with the question to the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister which is Question 773, the Hon. D J Bossino.

DEPUTY CHIEF MINISTER

Q773/2014
Single Sky initiative –
Next steps

1995 Clerk: Question 773, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Minister for Aviation state what steps are envisaged next in relation to the Single Sky initiative?

2000 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

2005 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Yes, Mr Speaker. The Government has been assured that the dossier on SES2+ will not proceed to the next stage, which is discussion with the European Parliament, until the question of the applicability to Gibraltar has been resolved. The matter therefore remains with the European Council.

2010 Hon. D J Bossino: Yes, I am grateful for the reply, Mr Speaker, but is there any further information he can share with this House as to what the expected timetable is. He says that the matter is now with the European Council. As I understand it, basically we are in the status quo as we were previously, which is that the air liberalisation measures post the Cordoba Accord will apply to Gibraltar and that the new initiative, in respect of which Spain wanted to exclude Gibraltar, is not going to be proceeding.

But can he provide any indication as to what you know, in terms of what I said before, in terms of what timetable, what the European Council's next steps are likely to be?

2015 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, this very much depends on whether the Italian Presidency wants to push this or not. At the moment the position of the UK is that the inclusion of Gibraltar is a red line. This could go to a qualified majority vote, in which case anything could happen and it would be up to the UK to try and convince the other member states to support them and support us on this particular issue.

2020 The UK assures us that the Italian Presidency will not proceed with the matter until it has been resolved. The Council has not taken a position on the Gibraltar issue which is why the text was inserted in brackets. So really it is a question of waiting to see what the Presidency chooses to do.

2025 As I said, the next stage, once the Council approves the text in its entirety, including the Gibraltar clause, then it is to have negotiations between the Council and the Parliament. That is the next stage. That is the stage that we are not proceeding – we are told that will not be proceeded to until the Gibraltar question has been cleared up in the Council itself. But it is a matter for qualified majority voting.

2030 Hon. D J Bossino: Given that it is a qualified majority vote, the Hon. the Chief Minister will no doubt recognise that therein in many respects, lies a danger, would he not agree with me? Because although the UK has taken a very robust position in relation to this, something which the Opposition obviously supports, it is within the realms of possibilities that they could be out-voted. Is that analysis, which I am making sort of on my feet now as a result of the answer that he has just given, correct?

2035 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes, Mr Speaker. That is an option. It is an option that you could go to a vote and the UK could be out voted. It is an option that we are told is not likely to happen because the Italian Presidency has now stood back on the issue. The Foreign Secretary we know called up his Italian counterpart to make the point soon afterwards, so really it is a question of waiting to see what it is that the Presidency chooses to do. Certainly the UK has made the position clear to them and we now need to wait and see what the next step will be.

2040 What we are told is that they will not proceed on to that next step which is discussion with the Parliament, until this matter has been resolved. What the UK has told us and has said publicly very clearly, is that if Gibraltar happens to be excluded from it, that legal action is an option they would consider.

2045 Hon. D A Feetham: Yes, in relation to that, just looking at exactly how robust the position the United Kingdom is in relation to this, have you been able to discuss with the United Kingdom a plan B? In other words, if there is a vote and it goes against Gibraltar, has the United Kingdom Government said to the Gibraltar Government, 'Look, in those circumstances we feel so strongly about this, that we will then take legal proceedings in the European Court of Justice in order to defend Gibraltar's position and challenge Gibraltar's exclusion'?

2050 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Yes, Mr Speaker, in the public statements that the UK has made, I think it was the UK Minister for Transport who was present in the Council meeting and in other public statements that have been made legal action has not been ruled out as an option. So what they are saying is if this happens, and if Gibraltar is excluded, then the UK is contemplating taking the issue to court.

2055 Hon. D A Feetham: I understand that there is a nuance, there is an important distinction, simply because you do not rule something out, you are not effectively ruling it in either. How confident is the Government that the United Kingdom, if we do get to the stage where it is out-voted by a qualified majority, that it really will stick to its guns and it will take legal proceedings, because effectively that is the only way in which at that stage, you can challenge Gibraltar's exclusion?

2060 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member is asking me to express an opinion on something which has not happened. Obviously I understand where he is coming from but certainly the indications that we have had throughout on aviation issues – not just in this particular one, it is the first one that has come up; there are more in the pipeline – are that for the UK this is a red line issue. We saw it from the Minister for Transport the other day in the Council and we have seen it also from the Minister for Europe and others.

2065 So for the UK this is a fundamental red line issue and they are certainly prepared to contemplate every option that is open to them.

Hon. D A Feetham: And bearing in mind that there is an election in the United Kingdom in May of next year and that that could lead to a change in Government, is this something that has also been discussed with the Labour Opposition in the United Kingdom to ascertain what its position is going to be in relation to this, which is obviously very important to Gibraltar?

2070 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: In the contacts we have had with members of different parties in the UK and indeed in the Foreign Affairs Committee Reports published recently, I think we are confident that this is a cross-party issue.

Mr Speaker: Next question.

Q774/2014
East Side project –
Projects under consideration

2080 Clerk: Question 774, the Hon. D J Bossino.

Hon. D J Bossino: Can the Deputy Chief Minister state how many projects are still being considered for the East Side project, with details of the entities which remain to be considered as well as the nature of each of those projects?

2085 Clerk: Answer, the Hon. the Deputy Chief Minister.

Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the answer was set out in a press release dated 3rd December 2014.

2090 Hon. D J Bossino: Mr Speaker, the answer I suppose to the extent of the numbers of projects which are still being considered, I think if memory serves, but of course there could have been a change since the press release was issued, was six. Now, obviously by the answers given, I must take it that it remains the same.

2095 But can he give me details of the other information which I am seeking in the question, for example the names of the entities which remain to be considered; and if he cannot give me those, then at least the nature of the projects? I do not think that was set out in the press release.

2100 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, the Government announced that we were dealing with 17 entities that expressed an interest in the East Side project. There are now six left. Those six will come in January to give presentations to the Government, in more detailed presentations, as to what it is that they propose. Some of them are for the whole plot, some of them are for only parts of the plot and when we announced or advertised for expressions of interest, that closed in August. In the advert we explained what it was we were 2105 looking at which was a marina, leisure activity, hotels, commercial and residential, both high end and affordable. So really that mix is with different entities that were put forward to the Government.

Hon. D J Bossino: I am grateful, Mr Speaker.

Is he able to give me details of the entities which remain? I do not think he has answered that formally.

2110 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, the Government would treat that information as being confidential at this stage, given the nature of the process.

2115 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, am I right in saying that the Government's preferred way ahead in relation to this is to have one bid for the entire site, rather than have a situation where you are selling off parts of the plot to different people, which will then create a situation where perhaps the whole scheme will not be harmonious in relation to one part in relation to the other?

2120 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, at the moment the Government is open to both options. If you remember the West Side reclamation, the plots were sold to different developers for different land uses and it worked quite well. So really we are open to both at this stage, either to parcelling out the plots or to selling the whole plot for development.

2125 Hon. D A Feetham: In relation to those bidders that have bid in relation to just simply part of the plot, a part of it, are those in relation to housing or are they in relation to a marina? Can he give me some information in relation to that?

I assume that it is probably going to be housing, either affordable or luxury housing, probably the latter. But if he can provide me with some information?

2130 Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, the hon. Member will forgive me for not elaborating at this stage, because if I divulge the nature of the information, I might prejudice the discussions with the different entities.

EDUCATION, JUSTICE AND INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

Q754-760/2014 continued – Students in full-time education – Supplementary questions

Mr Speaker: The Hon. Mr Reyes.

2135 Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Yes, I rise... I must record my gratitude to the Minister for Education for the comprehensive breakdown of details, it is quite complete.

2140 May I just for clarification purposes, Mr Speaker, in respect of Question No. 758, I was asking for an indication of which educational establishments any students could be receiving revision tuition in respect of any GCSE exams they had to repeat, those exams that they took at the end of the last academic year. I have figures for Bayside and Westside, there is nothing reported there in respect of the College. Am I right then in assuming in coming to the conclusion that the College does not offer any revision tuition at all to any student they have enrolled in their books to allow them to repeat any subject that they failed at last year's GCSE exams?

2145 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Yes, Mr Speaker, as I understand it, the repeat programmes are conducted by both Bayside and Westside. Hon. Members will recall that when we came into Government, there was a programme conducted by Westside but not by Bayside, and it was suggested that that was unfair. We changed that and we made it clear that Bayside itself should offer a programme, so for boys there is a programme at Bayside and for girls there is a programme at Westside. It can combine possibly with other programmes in the College, but anybody who wants to do the repeat programme for GCSEs, if it is a boy they will do it at Bayside, and if it is a girl they will do it in Westside.

2155 Hon. E J Reyes: Yes, Mr Speaker, if I recall correctly, I even praised the Minister for having brought into effect that Bayside also offered a repeat course and so on. Yes, but the way this answer has been questioned, it refers that there are 34 boys enrolled in a repeat programme at Bayside and 17 girls in a repeat programme at Westside. But my question does go a bit beyond that; my question does not say how many are enrolled in that repeat year. My question says, ‘provide details in respect of the number of students broken down by gender who are repeating subjects’.

2160 Therefore there could be a student who is undergoing three or maybe even four AS-Levels but yet the school – I know it happened in my days – is able to provide... for example, someone wishing to enter teacher training, Mr Speaker, might be interested to know it is now compulsory that you hold GCSE passes Grades A to C in English, Spanish and also a Science subject.

2165 So you could have a very able student, a very good linguist for example, but yet mathematics is not his forte. Therefore the school, College, Bayside or Westside, could actually offer that student the opportunity, otherwise the student loses out and could end up with three or four A stars at A-Level and yet is missing GCSE mathematics and is unable to follow a teacher training programme.

2170 So perhaps I have now been able to explain the wider scope for my question. I was not just seeking information on the repeat year.

Hon. G H Licudi: Mr Speaker, I understand what the hon. Member is saying. This has clearly been interpreted as meaning the repeat programme which is available in Bayside and Westside. I do not know whether there are any other students, other than those engaged in the repeat programmes who are actually repeating any subjects at all, but I will find out the information and let the hon. Member know.

Hon. E J Reyes: Thank you very much, Mr Speaker.

2180 Just to help complete my whole picture, may I on a happy note say here Mr Speaker, looking at... because it has come through a schedule I know viewers and listeners through the media may not have been able to grasp some of the details.

Mr Speaker, the girls seem to be doing far better than the boys, because there is a greater number of them proceeding onto post- GCSE education, so that could be a reflection in the future that perhaps instead of only having two female Members of this House of Parliament, we will have far greater female (A Member: Hear, hear.) (Banging on desk) representation in this House if the trends of the good work carried out by the educationalists continue.

A Member: Hear, hear.

Procedural

Mr Speaker: The House will now recess until 3.00 p.m. this afternoon.

2190 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, there is only one question for three o’clock. Is it not possible to take this question today?

Mr Speaker: There are two Bills as well.

2195 Hon. D A Feetham: But can we not do the Bills...? Mr Speaker, if the issue is going to be one question at three o’clock, I am prepared to withdraw the question and ask it again in January. We can do the two Bills which are quite short now, can’t we? They are Bills that are likely to be supported by the Opposition.

2200 Deputy Chief Minister (Hon. Dr J J Garcia): Mr Speaker, the Leader of the House wanted to take his questions at three o’clock and also the Bills at three o’clock on the basis that there was a question on the Order Paper.

If there is not going to be a question on the Order Paper, we could take the Bills now because my colleague Mr Licudi is responsible for those two Bills.

2205 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, to come back at three o’clock for one question, I will withdraw the question and if necessary ask it again in January. I do not think it really makes sense for us to come back –

2210 Mr Speaker: I can understand the point that the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition is making. My own personal preference would be to stay on and conclude the business of the House. But it could well be that the Chief Minister, who I understand is not within the precincts of Parliament at the moment, may have something that he might wish to add this afternoon.

2215 If we conclude our business now before lunch, we are effectively precluding the Chief Minister from taking part in the rest of the business of the House. I would not... I think in his absence it might not be the right thing to do. Let me put it that way.

Hon. Dr J J Garcia: Mr Speaker, may I suggest a five-minute recess?

2220 Mr Speaker: We will recess for five minutes.

The House recessed at 12.25 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 12.31 p.m.

Procedural

Mr Speaker: I am informed that the Leader of the House would wish the House to recess until this afternoon at three o'clock as he really would like to be here before the House is adjourned sine die.

So the House will recess until three o'clock this afternoon.

2225

The House recessed at 12.37 p.m. and resumed its sitting at 3.00 p.m.

Procedural – Q775/2014 withdrawn

Mr Speaker: Following the Leader of the Opposition's indication this morning that he was withdrawing Question 775, I will therefore call upon the Chief Minister to table the answers to Written Questions.

5 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, the indication that the Leader of the Opposition gave this morning was that if it prevented us from coming back this afternoon, he would withdraw his question, but we are back this afternoon and I am happy to deal with the question.

10 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, I am afraid that the Chief Minister was not here, I indicated to the Speaker that I was withdrawing the question and that is the end of the matter. It is a matter for me, it is not a matter for the Chief Minister and therefore we continue with the tabling of Written Questions.

15 Mr Speaker: Yes, I confirm that he did say that he was withdrawing the question and therefore the next business is for the Chief Minister to table the answers to Written Questions.

Hon. Chief Minister: Well, Mr Speaker, I do not think that is what he said. I actually watched that part of the debate from my office, where I was holding an important meeting which is the reason I was not here.

But I am very happy for the hon. Member to withdraw the question. In fact I think it is very wise that he should withdraw the question and I am very happy to proceed to the next item on the Order Paper.

20 But as Hansard will show, what he said this morning was not that he was withdrawing the question, just that he would withdraw it if it prevented him from coming back this afternoon.

Written Questions W285/2014 to W286/2014 tabled

Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Mr Speaker, I have the honour to table the answer to Written Questions numbered W285/2014 to W286/2014 inclusive.

Order of the Day

BILLS FIRST AND SECOND READING

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2014 – First Reading approved

25

Clerk: (ix) Order of the Day. Bills – First and Second Reading.
(1) A Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act. The Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

30 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

35 Clerk: The Crimes (Amendment) Act 2014.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Second Reading approved

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time

40 Mr Speaker, the sole purpose of this Bill is to repeal section 555(1)(b) of the Crimes Act 2011. That is because the equivalent provisions of section 555(1)(b) are now contained in the new Marine Protection Regulations 2014.

45 Members will be aware that those Regulations provide a comprehensive set of rules including governing spear fishing. This particular rule relates to spear fishing and that is an activity which is now subject to those Regulations and in respect of which a person must obtain a permit. So the equivalent provision of what we are repealing is now contained in the Marine Protection Regulations.

I wish to give notice, Mr Speaker, that there is a slight amendment to be made to the Bill at Committee. The Bill currently provides, in title and commencement in clause 1, that it comes into operation on the day of publication. As hon. Members will be aware, the Marine Protection Regulations come into effect on 1st January 2015 and what we cannot do is repeal this whilst the other one has not come into effect. Therefore I will be moving an amendment by replacing the day of publication by 1st January 2015.

50 I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

55 I now put the question, which is that the Bill for an Act to amend the Crimes Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Crimes (Amendment) Act 2014.

Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2014 – Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting

60 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi):
Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today, if all hon. Members agree.

65 Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Companies (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
First Reading approved

Clerk: (2) A Bill for an Act to amend the Companies Act.
The Hon. the Minister for Education and Justice.

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi):
70 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that a Bill for an Act to amend the Companies Act be read a first time.

Mr Speaker: I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Companies Act be read a first time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.
75

Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) Act 2014.

Companies (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Second Reading approved

Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi):
80 Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the Bill be now read a second time.

Mr Speaker, the primary purpose of this Bill is to tidy up a number of editorial errors and omissions in the Companies Act 2014. The Bill also introduces three changes that the Government has agreed to make because of representations by the financial services and company management industries, which were not made during the consultation process or command paper stage leading up to the enactment of the legislation. There is also a further change that the Government has made out of its own initiative.

85 Mr Speaker, except for clause 2(44) and clause 3, which are inter-related, the editorial errors and omissions are self-evident in the Bill.

Clause 2(44) introduces a provision to cater for the power to acquire shares of shareholders dissenting from a scheme or contract approved by a majority. This provision, which replicates in its entirety the equivalent provision – that is, section 208 of the former Companies Act – was inadvertently omitted from the current Act. Section 208 of the former Companies Act which has been kept in force in the interim period, can therefore now be repealed, which is exactly what clause 3 provides.

90 Mr Speaker, the additional changes agreed to by Government subsequent to industry representations are as follows.

In clause 2(36) the Government has agreed that schedule 9 on the definition of small and medium sized companies be amended to correspond to the qualification of a small or medium company in section 293 of the Act.

At present, schedule 9 proactively anticipates the accounting and audit threshold figures in Directive 2013/34/EU which comes into force in 2016. However, the Gibraltar Society of Accountants has recommended that the additional obligations on businesses entailed by that Directive should not be brought into force before its transposition deadline in 2016. So what we are in fact doing is reverting to the old provisions, pending the need to transpose that EU Directive in 2016.

100 Clause 2(41) introduces a filing fee of £100 for both (a) the annual filing and (b) any voluntary filings of Statements of Allotments, Redemptions or Purchase of Owned Shares for private schemes under section 189 of the Act. These new fees were agreed between the Government and the Gibraltar Funds and Investments Association.

105 Mr Speaker, the third suggestion made by industry subsequent to commencement of the Act is to repeal section 12. This is an amendment to the Bill which is not currently there, but which I will be moving at Committee and therefore I am giving notice now that I will be making this or proposing this amendment at Committee.

110 Section 12 relates to the requirements of a statement of proposed officers that would accompany the filing of an application to register a company. The Association of Trust and Company Managers (ATCOM) has very recently made representations to the Government that it prefers the procedure under the former Act, in which there was no such requirement for a statement to be filed with an application for registration, particularly as it was and is mandatory to disclose the identity of officers subsequently, including in the Annual Return.

115 Mr Speaker, after careful consideration the Government has agreed to retain the former simpler system. The repeal as I have said of section 12 will be an amendment which will be made at Committee.

120 Finally, Mr Speaker, there is a change that the Government has made at its own initiative, namely by the addition of clause 2(27). This amendment provides for the Minister to prescribe or amend by regulation fees that are payable to the Registrar.

Left as it is, it would be necessary to pass an amending Act whenever a fee is changed or a new fee needs to be introduced and it makes much more sense in the Government's view, Mr Speaker, in terms of flexibility and responsiveness to industry needs, for fees to be dealt with by Government through secondary legislation and that is in fact the practice in other areas of legislation.

125 Mr Speaker, I commend the Bill to the House.

Mr Speaker: Before I put the question, does any hon. Member wish to speak on the general principles and merits of the Bill?

130 I now put the question, which is that a Bill for an Act to amend the Companies Act be read a second time. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) Act 2014.

Companies (Amendment) Bill 2014 –
Committee Stage and Third Reading to be taken at this sitting 135 Minister for Education and Justice & International Exchange of Information (Hon. G H Licudi): Mr Speaker, I beg to give notice that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken later today if all hon. Members agree.

Mr Speaker: Do all hon. Members agree that the Committee Stage and Third Reading of the Bill be taken today? (Members: Aye.)

Mr Speaker: I now put the question which is that the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2014 and the Companies (Amendment) Bill 2014 be read a third time and passed.

195 Those in favour of the Crimes (Amendment) Bill 2014? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

ADJOURNMENT

Season's good wishes

200 Chief Minister (Hon. F R Picardo): Well, Mr Speaker, I have the honour to move that the House do now adjourn sine die and in doing so; I take the opportunity to wish every Member of the House a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

We will be back no doubt again in January. I think given an indication that Hon. Mr Speaker has given, probably on the fourth Thursday of January, because the first day of January is a Thursday and therefore it would be very early on after the holiday that we would be back. To give hon. Members on both sides an 205 opportunity to get into the run of things and for there to be more to debate, it makes sense to come back on the fourth Thursday of the month. .

Other than that, to all those here and to all those watching and listening, merry Christmas.

210 Hon. D A Feetham: Mr Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition, merry Christmas to everybody and a happy New Year – not only everybody outside this House but also in particular to members of staff that work so very hard to make sure that this Parliament runs efficiently every single month.

Mr Speaker: May I associate myself with the remarks of the Chief Minister and the Leader of the Opposition and extend to everyone a very happy Christmas and a peaceful New Year to members in the Public Gallery and those at home.

215 I now propose the question which is that the House do now adjourn sine die.

I now put the question which is that this House do now adjourn sine die. Those in favour? (Members: Aye.) Those against? Carried.

The House will now adjourn sine die.

The House adjourned at 3.20 p.m.
